SECOND NOCTURN.

CYRIL of Jerusalem was given to the study of the Holy Scriptures from a child, and so learnt therein that he became an eminent champion of the orthodox faith. He embraced the monastic institute in perpetual continency, and all hardship of living. He was ordained Priest by holy Maximus, Patriarch of Jerusalem, and undertook with eminent success the task of preaching the word of God to the faithful and of instructing the catechumens. Thus did he compose those truly wonderful Catecheses, wherein he has embraced, clearly and fully, all the teaching of the Church, and stoutly defended every one of her doctrines against the enemies of the faith. His treatment of these subjects was such that he has overthrown therein, not only the heresies which had then come into being, but, by a kind of foreknowledge, even those which were to arise in later times. Of this an instance is his contention for the real Presence of the Body and Blood of Christ in the wondrous Sacrament of the Eucharist. After the death of holy Maximus, the bishops of the province chose Cyril in his place.

Fifth Lesson.

IN his office of Bishop he had for the faith's sake, like his blessed contemporary Athanasius, to endure many wrongs and sufferings at the hands of the Arian sect. The Arians could not bear that Cyril should steadfastly withstand their heresy. They assailed him with calumnies, deposed him in a pretended council, and drove him out of his see. To escape their rage he fled to Tarsus in Cilicia, and as long as Constantius lived he bore the hardships of exile. After his death and the accession to the imperial throne of the Apostate Julian, Cyril was able to return to Jerusalem, where he set himself with burning zeal to deliver his flock from false doctrine and from sin. He was driven into exile a second time under the Emperor Valens. But when peace was restored to the Church by Theodosius the Great, and the cruelty and insolence of the Arians were restrained, Cyril was received with honour by the Emperor as one of Christ's most eminent soldiers, and was restored to his see. With what earnestness and holiness he fulfilled the duties of his exalted office was made manifest by the flourishing state of the church of Jerusalem at that time, of which a picture hath been left for us by holy Basil, who dwelt there for a while when he went to worship at the holy places.

Sixth Lesson.

TRADITION hath handed down that God Himself crowned with signs from heaven the holiness of this venerable Patriarch. Among these signs is numbered an apparition of a cross, more resplendent than the beams of the sun, which appeared at the beginning of his Patriarchate. Not only Cyril himself, but heathens and Christians alike were eye-witnesses of this marvel, and Cyril first gave thanks to God therefore in the church, and then sent news thereof by letter to the Emperor Constantius. A thing no less wonderful came to pass when the Jews were commanded by the profane Emperor Julian to attempt the restoration of the temple which had been destroyed by Titus. A great earthquake arose, and great masses of fire broke forth from the earth and consumed all the works, so that the Jews and Julian were dismayed and stayed their hand, all the which it can be proved that Cyril had foretold. A little while before his death he was present at the second Council of Constantinople; herein was condemned the heresy of Macedonius, and once more the Arian heresy. After his return to Jerusalem he died a holy death in the 69th year of his age and the 35th of his episcopate. The Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. commanded that his office and Mass should be celebrated throughout the universal Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another. And so on.

Homily by St Athanasius, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Defence of his own flight.)

It is written in the Law, (Num. xxxv. 11,) "Ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you,"—that in these cities they which were pursued to put them to death might enter and be safe. And in the latter days when He was come, even that very Word of the Father, Which had spoken aforetime unto Moses, He gave again the same commandment—"When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." And, a while afterward, He said: "When ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the Holy Place, (whoso readeth, let him understand,) then let them which be in Judæa flee unto the mountains; let him which is on the house-top not come down to take anything out of his house; neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes." (Matth. xxiv. 15-18.)

Eighth Lesson.

THE Saints, therefore, knowing these words of the Lord, have obeyed them in their lives. What the Lord hath now commanded by His Own Mouth He commanded through His Saints before that He Himself was come in the flesh, and to obey this commandment worketh in a man perfection, since whatever God commandeth is a thing which it behoveth man to do. For this cause, that very Word of God Which was made flesh for our sake thought it meet when they sought Him, (even as at this present time they are seeking us,) to hide Himself, (John viii. 59,) and, when they persecuted Him, to fly and escape from their laying in wait for Him: although when that time came which He had Himself decreed, and wherein He willed, as touching the Body, to suffer for us all, He willingly gave Himself up to His enemies.

In Lent the following is read with the Eighth to make room for the Homily of the Week-day. At Lauds in Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

Ninth Lesson.

HOLY men of God, therefore, have learnt to take ensample from their Saviour, (and the Same is and hath been the Teacher of all such, whether of old time, or in these latter days,) and know how that it is lawful to baffle their persecutors by flying from them, and by lying hid when they seek them. For since they know not the day nor the hour wherein an all-seeing God hath ordained their end, they do not daringly give themselves into the power of such as hate them, but rather, knowing it to be written, "My times are in Thy hand," (Ps. xxx. 16,) and that "the LORD killeth and maketh alive," (1 Kings ii. 6,) they "endure unto the end," (Matth. xxiv. 13,) "they wander about," as saith the Apostle, "in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, [tormented, (of whom the world is not worthy,)] they wander in deserts, [and in mountains,] and" hide "in dens and caves of the earth," (Heb. xi. 37,) until either their appointed time come, or until more plainly God, the real Appointer of times, speaketh unto them, and chaineth up the persecutors, or manifestly giveth them over into the hands of the same, as may be His Own good pleasure.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of March, were born into the better life—

In Africa, the holy martyrs Victorian, Pro-consul of Carthage, and two brethren from Aquae Regiae,[1] also two merchants, both named Frumentius, all in the persecution by the Vandals, were, (as writeth the African, Victor, Bishop [of Utica,]) on account of the steadfastness of their

Catholic confession, put to the most grievous torments under the Arian king Hunneric, and gloriously crowned, [in the year 484.]

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyr Faithful; there also holy Felix and twenty others.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy martyrs Nicon, [a Neapolitan,] and ninety-nine others. [All suffered at Taormina, in Sicily, under Decius.]

Also the holy martyrs Domitius, [a native of Phrygia,] Pelagia, Aquila, Eparchius, and Theodosia, [under Julian the Apostate.]

At Lima, [in the year 1606,] in the kingdom of Peru, holy Turibius, Archbishop of that see, by whose work the faith and discipline of the church were spread abroad in America.

At Antioch, the holy Priest Theodulus.

At Cæsarea, the holy Confessor Julian.

In Campania, the holy monk Benedict, who was shut up by the Goths in a glowing furnace, but upon the morrow was found unhurt, [in the year 550.]

At Second Vespers, Antiphon, "O right excellent," &c., and in Lent a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARCH 23.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 24th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Mark and Timothy, who were crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Antonine.

There also the holy martyr Epigmenius, a Priest, who was slain with the sword, by order of the judge Turpius, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

Likewise at Rome, the blessed martyr Pigmenius, a Priest, who was cast into the river Tiber for Christ's faith's sake, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, were born into the better life the holy martyrs Timolaus, Denis, Pausides Romulus, Alexander, another Alexander, Agapius, and another Denis, who won crowns of life by the axe, under the president Urban, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

In Morocco, were born into the better life the holy brethren Romulus and Secundus, both martyrs, who suffered for Christ's faith, [in the year 304.]

At Trent, the holy child Simeon, most cruelly murdered by the Jews, and who afterwards shone with many miracles, [in the year 1475.]

At Synnada, in Phrygia, holy Agapitus, Bishop of that see, [under Maximin 234-238.]

At Brescia, holy Latinus, Bishop of that see, [beginning of second century.]

In Syria, the holy Confessor Seleucus.

MARCH 24.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the feast of the Annunciation of the most Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God.

Upon the same 25th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Quirinus, under the Emperor Claudius. He suffered the spoiling of his goods, a foul imprisonment, and many stripes, and was at length slain with the sword, [in the year 269.] His body was cast into the Tiber, but the Christians found it on the island of Lycaonia and buried it in the cemetery of Pontianus.

Likewise at Rome, two hundred and sixty-two holy martyrs.

At Sirmium, [in Hungary,] the holy martyr Irenæus, Bishop of that see, who under the President Probus, in the time of the Emperor Maximian, was first put to grievous torments, then suffered for many days in prison, and at last was beheaded.

At Nicomedia, the holy Dula,[1] a female slave belonging to a certain soldier; she was killed in defending her chastity, and so gained the crown of martyrdom.

At Jerusalem, is commemorated the Good Thief, who confessed Christ upon the Cross, and won from Him the words "This day thou shalt be with Me in Paradise."

At Laodicea, holy Pelagius, Bishop of that see, who suffered exile and other hardships for the Catholic faith's sake, in the time of the Emperor Valens, and fell asleep in the Lord.

At Pistoja, the holy Confessors Barontius and Desiderius, [about the year 700.]

In the island of Aindre, in the river Loire, the Holy Abbat Hermeland, the glory of whose life is set forth by the fame of his miracles, [about the year 718.]

MARCH 25.

Lady Day.

The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the First Class.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

If this Feast fall on Good Friday, or Holy Saturday, it must be transferred to the Monday after Low Sunday, as to its assigned day, but without an Octave, yet to be kept with due solemnity and as a holiday, and with the Paschal rite. Should it fall on Passion Sunday it is to be kept on the day following; if in Holy, or in Easter Week, it must be transferred, as heretofore, to the Monday next after Low Sunday, unless this Monday be occupied by a primary feast of equal rite, in which case it will be kept on the next day not barred in like manner.

Note. If this Office be transferred into Paschal-time, the word "Alleluia" is added wherever here given in brackets, and also at the end of the first paragraph (just before the "Verse") and of every "Answer" in the Responsories.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. [Alleluia.]

Answer. The Lord is with Thee. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, O Mary, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. [Alleluia.]

---

[1] This has the appearance of not being a proper name, but merely the Greek doule, a female slave.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Hail, Mary, full of grace: * the Lord is with thee. [Alleluia.]

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (vii. 10.)

MOREOVER the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying: Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God either in the depth beneath or in the height above. But Ahaz said: I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. And he said: Hear ye now, ye house of David: Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore the Lord Himself shall give you a sign. Behold the Virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Emmanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat, until he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good.

First Responsory.

[1] The angel Gabriel was sent to Mary, a Virgin espoused to Joseph, to bring unto her the word of the Lord: and [2] when the Virgin saw the light she was afraid. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace from the Lord. Behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a son, and He shall be called the Son of the Highest.

Verse. The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever.

Answer. Behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a son, and He shall be called the Son of the Highest.

Second Lesson. (Isa. xi. i.)

[3] AND there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a flower shall grow out of his roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him; the Spirit of wisdom, and understanding, the Spirit of counsel and might, the Spirit of knowledge [and of godliness:] [4] and he shall be filled with the Spirit of the fear of the Lord. He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth. And he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

Second Responsory.

[5] Hail, Mary, full of grace; the Lord is with thee: the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

Verse. How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the Angel answered and said unto her,—

Answer. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

Third Lesson.

THE wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the lily. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing. The glory of Lebanon is given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon; they shall see the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart: Be strong, and fear not, behold your God will come with recompence of vengeance; God Himself will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing: for in the wilderness are waters broken out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water.

Third Responsory.

Receive, O Virgin Mary, receive the word of the Lord, which is sent thee by His Angel: thou shalt conceive, and shalt bring forth God and Man together. And thou shalt be called blessed among all women.

Verse. Thou shalt bring forth a son, and remain a maiden undefiled: thou shalt conceive and be a Mother, still Virgin unspotted.

Answer. And thou shalt be called blessed among all women.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And thou shalt be called blessed among all women. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (2nd for Christmas.)

THE Almighty and merciful God, Whose nature is goodness, Whose will is power, and Whose work is mercy, did, at the very beginning of the world, as soon as the devil's hatred had mortally poisoned us with the venom of his envy, foretell those remedies which His mercy had fore-ordained for our healing. He bade the serpent know that there was to be a Seed of the woman Who should yet bruise the swelling of his pestilential head; this Seed was none other than the Christ to come in the flesh, that God and Man in one Person, Who, being born of a Virgin, should, by His undefiled birth, damn the seducer of man.

[1] Luke i. 26, 30-33.

[2] Compare the Apocryphal "Gospel of the Nativity of Mary," ch. ix.

[3] Ch. viii. commences with the birth of Maher-shalal-hash-baz the son of Isaiah and "the Prophetess," giving occasion to a prophecy stretching to the end of ch. xii., foretelling the deliverance of Israel not only from Rezin and Pekah, but from her other enemies, and an ultimate time of blessedness and prosperity. The passage in the text is to be understood of the Messiah. (Rom. xv. 12.)

[4] Not in the Hebrew.

[5] Luke i. 28, 34, 35.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] Behold, the Virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, saith the Lord, [2] and His name shall be called Wonderful, the Mighty God.

Verse. He shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom for ever.

Answer. And His name shall be called Wonderful, the Mighty God.

Fifth Lesson.

THE devil rejoiced that by his fraud he had so deceived man as to make him lose the gifts of God, forfeit his privilege of eternal life, bring himself under the hard sentence of death, and find in his misery a certain comfort in the accomplice of his guilt; he rejoiced also that God, in His just anger, was changed towards man, whom He had made in such honour. But, dearly beloved brethren, that Unchangeable God, Whose Will cannot be divorced from His goodness, by His own secret counsel carried out in a mysterious way His original purpose of goodness, and man, who had been led into sin by the wicked craft of the devil, perished not to disappoint that gracious purpose of God.

Fifth Responsory.

There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Flower shall grow out of his roots. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. [Alleluia.]

Verse. And the Spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the Spirit of wisdom and understanding, the Spirit of counsel and might.

Answer. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN therefore, dearly beloved brethren, the fulness of that time came, which God had appointed for our Redemption, our Lord JESUS Christ entered this lower world, came down from His heavenly throne, and, while He left not that glory which He hath with the Father before the world was, was incarnate by a new order and a new birth—new, in that He Who is Invisible among His own, was made visible among us; He Who is Incomprehensible, willed to be comprehended; He Who is before the ages, began to be in time; the Lord of all shadowed the glory of His Majesty, and took upon Him the form of a servant; the Impassible God vouchsafed to become a man subject to suffering; and the Immortal laid Himself under the laws of death.

Sixth Responsory.

O Mary, how holy and how spotless is thy virginity—I am too dull to praise thee! For thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.[3]

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David: and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by [4] St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] (Bk. ii. on Luke.)

The mysteries of God are unsearchable, and it is especially declared by a Prophet, that a man can hardly know His counsels. (Wisd. ix. 13.) Nevertheless, some things have been revealed to us, and we may gather from some of the words and works of the Lord, our Saviour, that there was a special purpose of God, in the fact that she who was chosen to be the mother of the Lord was espoused to a man. Why did not the power of the Highest overshadow her before she was so espoused? Perhaps it was lest any might blasphemously say that she had conceived in fornication the Holy One.

Seventh Responsory.

Rejoice with me, all ye that love the Lord, for while I was yet a little one, I pleased the Most High. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and man. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [5] All generations shall call me blessed, since the Lord hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden.

Answer. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and man. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Lesson.

"AND the angel came in unto her." Let us learn from this Virgin how to bear ourselves, let us learn her modesty, let us learn by her devout utterance, above all let us learn by the holy mystery enacted. It is the part of a maiden to be timid, to avoid the advances of men, and to shrink from men's addresses. Would that our women would learn from the example of modesty here set before us. She upon whom the stare of men had never been fixed was alone in her chamber, and was found only by an angel. There was neither companion nor witness there, that what passed might not be debased in gossip: and the angel saluted her. The message of God to the Virgin was a mystery, which it was not lawful for the mouth of men, but only of angels, to utter. For the first time on earth the words are spoken: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee." The holy maiden heareth, and believeth. At length she saith: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord: be it unto me according to thy word." Here is an example of lowliness, here is a pattern of true devotion. At the very moment that she is told she is chosen to be the mother of the Lord she at once declareth herself His handmaid. The knowledge that she was mother of God caused in the heart of Mary only an act of humility.

[1] Isa. vii. 14.

[2] Isa. ix. 6, 7.

[3] 3 (1) Kings viii. 27.

[4] Dec. 7.

[5] Luke i. 48.

Eighth Responsory.

Rejoice, O Mary, by whose mighty hand the Church hath victory o'er her foes achieved, since thou to Gabriel's word of quickening power in lowliness hast listened, and believed—thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Blessed art thou that hast believed, for there is a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord.

Answer. Thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou, still a virgin, in thy blessed womb hast God Incarnate of thy flesh conceived, and, still of heaven, of that virginity remainest after childbirth unbereaved. [Alleluia.]

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily for the Week-day, either the first part or all three as one.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel was sent * to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph; and the virgin's name was Mary. [Alleluia.]

Second Antiphon. Hail, Mary, * full of grace, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. [Alleluia.]

Third Antiphon. Fear not, Mary, * thou hast found grace with the Lord: behold, thou shalt conceive, and bring forth a Son. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and of His kingdom there shall be no end. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Antiphon. Behold the handmaid of the Lord: * be it unto me according to thy word. [Alleluia.]

Chapter. (Isa. vii. 14.)

BEHOLD, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and His Name shall be called Emmanuel. Butter and honey shall He eat, that He may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. [Alleluia.]

Answer. The Lord is with thee. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. How shall this be, * thou Angel of God, seeing I know not a man? Hear, O Virgin Mary: the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. [Alleluia.]

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst will that Thy word should, by the message of an Angel, take flesh in the womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, that all we who do believe her to be in very deed the Mother of God, may be holpen by her prayers in Thy sight. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Lavican Way, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Castulus. He was a chamberlain of the Palace, and a receiver of the saints. He was three times hung up and interrogated, and as he remained steadfast in confessing the Lord, he was crowned with martyrdom by being thrown into a pit, and buried alive in sand.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyrs Peter, Marcian, Jovinus, Thecla, Cassian, and others.

In the Pentapolis, in Libya, the holy martyrs Theodore, Bishop [of Zaragossa, who was preaching in Pentapolis-Cyrene in North Africa,] the Deacon Irenaeus, and the Readers Serapion and Ammonius.

At Sirmium, the holy martyrs the Priest Montanus, and Maxima, [his wife,] who were drowned in the river for Christ's faith's sake.

Likewise the holy martyrs Quadratus, Theodosius, Emmanuel, and forty others.

At Alexandria, [in the year 354,] the holy martyrs Eutychius and others, who were slain with the sword for the Catholic faith, under the Arian Bishop George, in the time of the Emperor Constantius.

On the same day, [in the year 309,] holy Ludger, Bishop of Munster, who preached the gospel to the Saxons.

At Zaragossa, in Spain, [in the year 651,] the holy Confessor Braulio, Bishop of that see.

At Treves, [in the year 400,] holy Felix, [who had been] Bishop [of that see for 12 years, and had then retired to a monastery which he had built in honour of the Blessed Virgin, the martyrs of the vanguard of the Theban Legion, and several magistrates of the town of Treves, who had been martyred at the same time.]

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MARCH 26.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor and Doctor of the Church, John of Damascus, famous for holiness and teaching. He strove manfully for the honouring of the holy images, both by word and writing, against the Emperor Leo the Isaurian: wherefore the Emperor commanded that his right hand should be smitten off; whereupon he commended himself to the image of the blessed Virgin Mary, which he had defended, and forthwith he received back his hand whole and sound. Of whom mention is made upon the 6th day of May.

At Druzipara, in Pannonia, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy soldier Alexander, who after triumphing for Christ in many contendings, and working many miracles, was beheaded, and so finished his testimony.

On the same day, the holy martyrs the Senator Philetus, his wife Lydia, and his children Macedon and Theoprepis, as also the General Amphilochius, and the notary Chronides, who were all slain for confessing Christ.

In Persia, the holy martyrs Zanitas, Lazarus, Marotes, Narses, and five others, who were most cruelly slain under Sapor, King of the Persians, and so won the palm of martyrdom, [in the year 326.]

At Saltzburg, [in the year 718,] the holy Confessor Rupert, Bishop of that see, who wondrously spread the gospel among the Bavarians and Styrians.

In Egypt, the holy Hermit John, a man of great holiness, who, among other graces, was gifted with the spirit of prophecy, whereby he foretold unto the Emperor Theodosius his victory over the tyrants Maximus and Eugenius.

MARCH 27.

St John of Damascus, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who didst fill Thy blessed servant John with heavenly teaching, and wondrous strength of spirit to maintain the honouring of holy images. Grant unto us at his prayers and after his ensample to take pattern by their holy lives whose images we honour, and ever to feel the power of their help. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1. (p. 869.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

THIS John is called John of Damascus, from his native place. He was of noble birth, and studied sacred and profane letters at Constantinople, under the monk Cosmas. At what time the Emperor Leo the Isaurian was making a wicked attack upon the honouring of holy images, John, at the desire of the Roman Pontiff, Gregory III., earnestly defended both by his words and his writings, the holiness of this honour. By this he roused against him so great a hatred on the part of Leo, that that Prince, by forged letters, accused John as a traitor to the Caliph of Damascus, whom he was serving as a councillor and minister. John denied the charge, but the Caliph was deceived by it, and caused his right hand to be cut off. He called earnestly for the help of the most holy Virgin, and she manifested the innocency of her servant by reuniting his hand to his arm, as though it had never been cut off. This miracle moved John to carry out a design which he had long had in mind. He obtained from the Caliph, albeit with difficulty, leave to go away, distributed all his goods to feed the poor, and freed all his slaves, then visited as a pilgrim the holy places in Palestine, and at length withdrew, along with his teacher Cosmas, to the monastery of St Saba, between Jerusalem and the Dead Sea. There he was ordained priest.

Fifth Lesson.

AS a monk John set a bright example to all the others, especially as regarded lowliness and obedience. He sought for the lowest offices in the community, as though they were in a peculiar sense his own, and fulfilled them with the greatest care. When he was sent to Damascus to sell baskets made by himself, he welcomed the mockery and jests of the lowest classes in that city where he had before time been charged with the most honourable offices. He was so devoted to obedience that he not only started up to obey every nod of his superiors, but also never thought it right to ask the reason of any duty laid upon him, however difficult or however strange it might be. While thus living he never ceased earnestly to defend the Catholic doctrine as to the honouring of holy images. For this reason he drew upon himself the hatred and persecution of the Emperor Constantine Copronymus, as he had first done that of the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, and this all the more because he freely rebuked the arrogance of these Emperors, who must needs take in hand matters concerning the faith, and pronounce sentence upon them according to their own judgment.

Sixth Lesson.

IT is a marvel how many things John devised both for the protection of the faith, and for the encouragement of godliness, and expressed in his writings both in prose and verse. He was worthy of the high praise which was given him by the Second Council of Nice. On account of the golden streams of his eloquence, he was surnamed Chrysorrhoas, or John of the golden streams. It was not against the enemies of holy images alone that he defended the orthodox faith. He fought stoutly against the Acephali, the Monothelites, and the Theopaschites. He maintained the laws and the power of the Church. He taught with great learning the Primacy of the Prince of the Apostles, and many times calleth him the Pillar of the Churches, the unbroken rock, and the Teacher and Ruler of the world. The whole of his writings are not only steeped in learning and teaching, but have a certain savour of simple piety, especially when he is praising the Mother of God, toward whom he was filled with a special reverence and love. But the greatest praise of John is that he was the first who arranged in order a complete course of theology, and prepared the way in which holy Thomas of Aquino has so clearly dealt with the whole body of sacred doctrine.

This truly holy man, full of days and good works, fell asleep in the peace of Christ about the year of salvation 754. The supreme Pontiff, Leo XIII., established his office and Mass throughout the universal church, whereof he also gave him the title of doctor.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vi. 6.)

AT that time: It came to pass also on another Sabbath, that Jesus entered into the synagogue, and taught; and there was there a man whose right hand was withered. And so on.

Homily by St Peter Chrysologus. (Sermon 32.)

This man is a figure of all men. His healing is a type of their healing, and his soundness is a pledge of that soundness for which all have looked so long. The hand of man hath withered through the deadness of faith rather than through the drying up of the sinews, and by the fault of the conscience rather than by the weakness of the flesh. The withering up of man's hand hath been of old time, and a sickness which smote him at the very beginning of the world, and no art or benefit of man could heal that which had been blasted by the wrath of God. That hand had touched the forbidden thing, it had sought that which was unlawful when it had been stretched out to the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. It had need of Him who had made it, not to lay a plaster upon it, but to cancel the sentence which He had uttered, and to loosen by pardon that which He had bound by judgment.

(Eighth Lesson.) This man's healing is a type of the healing of all men, our perfect health is to be found in Christ, then shall our miserable hand be withered no more when there droppeth thereon the Blood of the Suffering Lord, when it is stretched forth to the Tree of Life, which is the Cross. When it gathereth the mighty fruit of His suffering, when it layeth hold upon the Tree of Salvation, when the body is so nailed thereto with the nails of the Lord that it can never return again to the tree of lust and barren enjoyment.

And He said to the man which had the withered hand, "Rise up, and stand forth in the midst." Rise up and stand forth in the midst, O Thou that dost confess thine own weakness, thou that dost call for pity from on high, thou that canst witness to the power of God; rise up and stand forth in the midst, thou that tellest of the unbelief of the Jews; the power of so many signs hath not pierced them, so many works of healing hath not beset them; let the pity shown to such misery constrain them and soften them.

(Ninth Lesson outside Lent.) "He said unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand, and he did so; and his hand was restored whole as the other." "Stretch forth thine hand"—the hand which had been blasted by a commandment is by a commandment loosed. "Stretch forth thine hand"—the punishment which had been the work of God was a sufficient testimony of Who had been the Judge Who had inflicted it, and the pardon was a proof that the Pardoner was the same. Brethren, pray that upon the synagogue only may the shadow of such an affliction fall, and that there may be in the Church no hand which is withered by greed, shrunken by avarice, paralyzed by theft, stricken by selfishness; but if such there be, let him who is so afflicted give his ear unto the Lord, and stretch forth his hand in works of godliness, let him exercise it in mercy, and set it to almsgiving. He that knoweth not how to lend unto the Lord by giving unto the poor, knoweth not how to be healed by the Lord.

In Lent, Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor John of Capistrano, of the Order of Friars Minors, illustrious for the holiness of his life, and his zeal for the propagation of the Catholic faith, who by his prayers and miracles procured the defeat of a vast army of Turks, and delivered the fortress of Belgrade from beleaguerment. Of whom mention is made upon the 23rd day of October.

Upon the same 28th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [about the year 260,] the holy martyrs Priscus, Malchus, and Alexander. During the persecution under the Emperor Valerian they were dwelling on a little plot of ground in the suburbs of the said city, and when heavenly crowns of martyrdom were then being offered, their love of God and faith in Him enkindled them to go openly to the judge, and to rebuke him for that he so raged after the blood of the godly, whereupon he forthwith commanded them to be devoured by wild beasts for Christ's name's sake.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, the holy martyrs Castor and Dorotheus.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Rogatus, Successus, and sixteen others.

At Rome, [in the year 440,] the holy Confessor Pope Sixtus III.

At Nursia, [in the year 517,] the holy Abbat Speus, a man of wondrous patience, and when he passed away out of this life all his brethren saw his soul wing its flight heavenward in a bodily shape like a dove.

At Chalons, in Gaul, the burial, [in the year 593,] of the holy Confessor Guntram, King of the Franks, who gave himself up so utterly to the things of the Spirit that he fled from the glory of the world, and gave all his goods for the churches, and the poor.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Office, and then of the Week-day.

MARCH 28.

St John of Capistrano, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who by Thy blessed servant John didst cause Thy faithful people, through the power of the most Holy Name of Jesus, to prevail against the enemies of His Cross, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, the help of the prayers of the same Thy servant that we may prevail against our ghostly enemies, and may be made worthy to receive from Thee a crown of righteousness. Through the same JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS John was born at Capistrano, in the Abruzzi. He was educated at Perugia, and became so expert in letters, both sacred and profane, that on account of his eminent knowledge of law, Ladislaus, King of Naples, set him over several cities. He was seeking in righteousness to bring the affairs of these places out of trouble into peace, when he himself was kidnapped and put in chains. From this captivity he marvellously escaped, and then professed himself a Friar Minor under the rule of Francis of Assisi. Here he went forward in the study of divinity, and had as a teacher the holy Bernardine of Sienna, of whom he was one of the most marked followers, especially in spreading abroad the honour paid to the Most Holy Name of Jesus, and to the Mother of God. The bishopric of Aquila was offered to him, but he refused it. He was chiefly known by the hardship of his self-denial, and by the writings which he published in large numbers for the reform of manners.

Fifth Lesson.

HE devoted himself without ceasing to the preaching of the Word of God, in the which work he travelled throughout nearly all Italy, and by the power of eloquence and of miracles not a few, he recalled souls almost countless into the path of salvation. Martin V. appointed him Inquisitor to stamp out the sect of the Fraticelli. Nicolas V. appointed him Inquisitor-General in Italy against Judaism and Mohammadanism, and he brought many such misbelievers to believe in Christ. He did much good work in the affairs of the Eastern Church, and at the Council of Florence, wherein he shone like a sun, he brought back the Armenians to the Catholic church. The same Pope Nicolas V., at the request of the Emperor Frederick III., sent him into Germany as Nuncio of the Apostolic See, in order that he might bring back the heretics to the Catholic faith and the minds of the princes to peace and agreement. He did a wonderful work for God's glory during the six years that he laboured in Germany and other countries, and by his teaching of the truth and the striking evidence of his miracles brought back to the bosom of the Church almost countless numbers of Hussites, Adamites, Taborites, and Jews.

Sixth Lesson.

IT was mainly at the entreaty of John that Calistus III. proclaimed a Crusade, and John hastened about through Pannonia and other provinces, where by his words and his letters he so roused the minds of princes to that holy war, that in a short while seventy thousand Christian soldiers were enrolled. It was mainly through his advice and by his power that victory was gained at Belgrade, when one hundred and twenty thousand Turks were either slain or put to flight. The news of this victory reached Rome upon the sixth day of August, and Pope Calistus thereupon consecrated that day for ever to the solemn commemoration of the transfiguration of the Lord Christ. As John lay sick unto death at Illak, many princes came to see him, and he exhorted them to protect religion. He gave up his soul in holiness to God, [upon the 23rd day of October,] in the year of salvation 1456. God confirmed his glory by many miracles after his death, and when these had been duly proved Alexander VIII. enrolled his name with those of the saints in the year 1690, and two hundred years after his canonization Leo XIII. extended his Office and Mass to the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ix. i.)

AT that time: JESUS called the twelve Apostles together and gave power and authority over all devils and to cure diseases. And so on.

Homily by St "Buona-Ventura," [Cardinal] Bishop [of Albans,] (on Luke ix.)

Apostles are so called as a mark of their authority, for this word Apostle signifieth "sent," and they were sent out to preach, as it is written, (1 Cor. i. 17,) "Christ sent me not to baptize but to preach the gospel." They were sent to preach not any small thing but a very great thing, even the Kingdom of God, whereby we may understand the teaching of the truth, as it is said, (Matth. xxi. 43,) "The Kingdom of God should be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." The Kingdom of God may also be understood to signify the grace of the Holy Ghost, as it is written, (Rom. xiv. 17,) "The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost"; as also it was said, (Luke xvii. 21,) "The Kingdom of God is within you." The Kingdom of God may also be understood to signify eternal glory, as it is said, (John iii. 5,) "Amen, I say unto thee, except a man be born again of water and of the Holy Ghost he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

Eighth Lesson.

THE Apostles were sent to preach the Kingdom of God in all these three senses, that is to say, as the true teaching, as the grace of God, and as eternal glory. In order to invest their teaching with authority He gave them the power to cure diseases, whence where it is written (2) "And He sent them to preach the Kingdom of God" it is also said "And to heal the sick." This power He gave in order to confirm the truth of their preaching, as it is written, (Mark xvi. 20,) "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following." The sign that a preacher is indeed sent forth by the Spirit of God is that they that hear him should be cured of the disease of sin. (Ninth Lesson out of Lent.) There are three manifest signs which show whether a preacher hath been sent by the Lord to preach the gospel. The first is that he should be sent by one having authority to do so, such as is a bishop, and above all the Pope, who is in the place of Peter, yea of Jesus Christ. So that he who is sent by him is sent by Christ. The second sign is a love for souls in the person who is sent, so that he seeketh mainly the honour of God and the salvation of souls. The third sign is that his hearers should bring forth fruit and should be converted. By the first sign a preacher is known as being sent by the Father, by the second he is known as being sent by the Son, by the third he is known as being sent by the Holy Ghost. Of the first sign it may be said, (Ps. xliv. 17,) "Instead of Thy Father shall be Thy children"; of the second sign it may be said, (2 Cor. iv. 5,) "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus our Lord"; of the third sign it may be said, (John xv. 16,) "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." And he who is thus sent forth can say, (Luke iv. 18,) "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because He hath anointed me to preach the gospel."

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 29th day of March, were born into the better life—

In Persia, under King Sapor, [in the year 326,] the holy martyrs Jonah and Barachisius. Jonah was pressed under a screw until his bones were broken, and cut through the middle. Barachisius was choked, by pouring boiling pitch into his mouth.

At Balbec, in the Lebanon, [in the year 362,] the holy martyr Cyril the Deacon. The savage Gentiles, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, cut open his belly, tore out his liver, and ate it.

At Nicomedia, [in the year 303,] suffered the holy martyrs Pastor, Victorinus, and their Companions.

In Africa, [about the year 461,] the holy Confessors Count Armogastes, Masculus the chief player, and Saturus, steward of the king's house, who suffered many and grievous pains and insults for confessing the truth, at the time of the Vandal persecution under the Arian King Genseric, and so finished a course of glorious contention.

In the city of Asti, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Secundus.

In the monastery of Luxeuil, [diocese of Besançon, in the year 625,] the holy Abbat Eustacius, a disciple of holy Columbanus. He was the father of nearly six hundred monks, and was famous not only for the holiness of his life, but also for miracles.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARCH 29.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 30th day of March, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Appian Way, the Blessed Tribune Quirinus, [in the year 130.] Holy Pope Alexander was committed to ward with him, and by the same he and all his house were baptized. Under the Emperor Hadrian he was brought before the Judge Aurelian, and as he remained steadfast in the faith, his tongue was cut out, he was racked, and his hands and feet off, and at last his contending was finished by the sword.

At Thessalonica, the holy martyrs Domninus, Victor, and their Companions, [perhaps under Maximianus.]

At Constantinople is made the commemoration of very many holy martyrs, Catholic communicants whom in the time of the Emperor Constantius the arch-heretic Macedonius tortured and slew in divers unheard of ways, among other things, he pinched off the nipples of the breasts of the faithful women with the lids of boxes, and seared the wound with hot iron.

At Senlis, holy Regulus, Bishop of Arles, [and of Senlis, in the year 130.]

At Orleans, in Gaul, holy Pastor, Bishop of [that see, perhaps in the year 557.]

At Syracuse, [in Sicily,] the holy Confessor Zozimus, Bishop of that see, [in the year 660.]

On Mount Sinai, holy John, Abbat [of Mount Sinai in the years 525-605,] surnamed Climacus, [which is, being interpreted, "of the ladder."[1] He was probably a native of Palestine.]

[1] As he is said to have written "The Ladder of Perfection."

At Aquino, the holy Confessor Clinius. [Native of Greece, and a monk of Monte Casino, fifth century.]

MARCH 30.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 31st day of March, were born into the better life—

At Tekoah, in Palestine, the holy Prophet Amos, who was often-times scourged by the priest Amazia, and pierced in the temples with a bar by his son Ozia. He was afterward borne back half dead into his own country, and there gave up the ghost, and is buried with his fathers, [785 B.C.]

In Africa, the holy martyrs Theodulus, Anesius, Felix, Cornelia, and their Companions.

In Persia, under King Isdegerd, the holy martyr Benjamin the Deacon. Because he would not cease from preaching the word of God, sharp reeds were forced under his nails, and a thorny stake thrust into his bowels, and so he finished his testimony, [in the year 401.]

At Rome, the holy virgin Balbina, the daughter of the blessed martyr Quirinus, she was baptized by holy Pope Alexander, and after she had overcome the world, [in the year 169,] she was buried on the Appian Way, by her father's side.

MARCH 31.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Theodora, sister of the great martyr Hermes. She suffered by order of the judge Aurelian, under the Emperor Hadrian, and is buried beside her brother upon the Salarian Way, not far from the city.

On the same day, the holy martyr Venantius, Bishop of Toledo.

In Egypt, the holy martyrs Victor and Stephen.

In Armenia, the holy martyrs Quintian and Irenæus.

At Constantinople, [about the year 830,] the holy Confessor Macarius, who died in exile, under the Emperor Leo, because of his defence of holy images.

At Grenoble, holy Hew, [born 1053, died 1132,] Bishop of that see, who passed the latter part of his life, even for many years, in the wilderness, and passed away, famous for miracles, to be ever with the Lord.

At Amiens, the holy Abbat Valery, at whose grave miracles are often-times wrought. [Monk of Luxeuil, and first Abbat of Leuconais, in the year 619.]

FEAST DAYS IN APRIL.

APRIL 1.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 2nd day of April, were born into the better life—

The holy Confessor Francis of Paola, founder of the Order of Friars Minim, [in the year 1507.] He was famous for his graces and miracles, and Leo X. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy martyr Amphian. During the persecution under the Emperor Galerius Maximian he rebuked the President Urban as he was sacrificing unto idols, and for this cause he was savagely mangled, and most cruelly tormented. His feet being wrapped in flax steeped in oil, and set on fire, and at length he was drowned in the sea, and thus did he go through fire and through water, and was brought out into a place of refreshment.

There also suffered the holy martyr Theodosia, a Virgin of Tyre, during the same persecution. When she saw the holy Confessors standing before the judgment seat, she publicly saluted them, and besought them that when they should be come unto the Lord they would remember her. For this cause the soldiers took her, and led her before Urban the President, and by his command her sides and her breasts were deeply mangled, and she was cast into the sea, [in the year 307.]

At Lyons, holy Nicetius, Bishop of that city, famous for his life and miracles, [in the year 573.]

At Como, the holy Confessor Abundius, Bishop of that see, [in the year 468.]

At Langres, holy Urban, [6th] Bishop of that see, [in the year 395.]

In Palestine, holy Mary of Egypt, commonly called the sinner, [fifth century.]

APRIL 2.

St Francis of Paola, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of one Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who exaltest the meek, and hast raised up Thy Blessed Confessor Francis even unto the glory of Thy Saints, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, for his sake, so to walk after him in lowliness of heart, that in the end we may attain, as he hath, to that great reward which Thou hast promised unto all such as be so minded. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer throughout the Office.

In Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season; or, in Lent, from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Francis was born of humble parents at Paola, a town in Calabria, [about the year of our Lord 1416.] His parents, who had long been childless, obtained him, after making a vow, by the prayers of blessed Francis. While he was yet a lad, the love of God moved him to withdraw into a desert place, where he lived for six years, hardly as to the body, but sumptuously in meditation on things heavenly. Nevertheless, when the fame of his holy life was noised abroad, and many betook themselves to him, that they might learn godliness, he was drawn out of the desert by love to his neighbour, and built a church near Paola, wherein he laid the first foundations of his Order.

Fifth Lesson.

IN his words there was a wonderful charm: he kept his virginity always inviolate: he was so great a lover of lowliness that he used to call himself the last of all, and would that his disciples should be called the Minimi, which is, being interpreted, the Least of the brethren. His raiment was coarse; he went always bare-footed; and he slept on the ground. The extreme smallness of the amount of food which he took was extraordinary. He ate only once a day, and that after sunset. Then he took only bread and water, with scarcely any of such condiment as is allowed in Lent. He bound his disciples by a fourth vow, added to those of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience, to observe the same rule of eating as himself.

Sixth Lesson.

IT was the will of God to make the holiness of His servant manifest by many miracles. The most notorious of these is that on one occasion when some seamen refused to take him over the Straits of Messina, he spread his cloak upon the sea, and crossed over on it with his companion. In the spirit of prophecy he foretold many things to come. Louis XI., King of France, held him in great worship, and bade him to his court.[1] At last, at Tours, in the ninety-first year of his age, and the 1507th of our salvation,[2] he departed hence to be ever with the Lord. His body was not buried for eleven days after his death, but it not only showed no signs of corruption but even gave forth a sweet savour. Pope Leo X. caused him to be numbered among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.) In Lent the third part is omitted or read as one with the second, and the Ninth Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds.

In Lent the Week-day is commemorated at Lauds and Second Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 3rd day of April, were born into the better life—

In England, [in the year 1253,] holy Richard, Bishop of Chichester, famous for his holiness and the glory of his miracles.

At Taormina, in Sicily, holy Pancras, Bishop of that see, who sealed with his blood the testimony of the gospel of Christ which the holy Apostle Peter had sent him thither to preach.

At Isnia, in Scythia, the holy martyrs Evagrius and Benignus.

At Thessalonica, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy Virgins Agape and Chionia, because they refused to deny Christ, they were first starved in prison, and then cast into the fire, the flame took no hold upon them, but when they had prayed to the Lord, they then gave up their souls to him, [in the year 304.]

At Tyre, the holy martyr Vulpian. During the persecution under the Emperor Maximian Galerius, he was sewn up inside a sack along with an adder and a dog, and drowned in the sea, [in the year 305.]

At the Monastery of Mecidion, on Mount Olympus, the holy Abbat Nicetas, who suffered many things under the Emperor Leo the Armenian, on account of the honouring of holy images.

In England, the holy Virgin Burgundofora, Abbess [of Farmoutier, about the year 655.][3]

At Palermo, the holy Confessor Benedict of San Fradello, of the Order of Friars Minors, who was by race a black, whence he was commonly called "the Nigger." He was famous for his signs and mighty works. He fell asleep in the Lord upon the 4th day of April, [in the year 1585.] The Supreme Pontiff Pius VII. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

Vespers of St Richard from the Chapter.

APRIL 3.

St Richard, Bishop [of Chichester,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who, for the sake of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Richard, hast made Thy Church bright with famous signs and wonders, grant unto us Thy servants to be holpen by his prayers in the way toward the glory of everlasting blessedness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Richard begins with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Francis of Paola. Prayer from his Office, and, in Lent, of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent, from Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612,) or from the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From his Confessor, R. Bocking, and Harpsfield's Church History of the Thirteenth Century.)

THIS Richard was Chancellor of Canterbury, and followed the holy archbishop Edmund to France. After the death of that Saint, Richard set himself to study theology among the Friars Preachers at Orleans, and there took Priest's Orders. He thence returned into England, and undertook the care of a parish, (which he held without other preferment,) but was, not long afterwards, first re-appointed Chancellor of Canterbury, and then elected Bishop of Chichester, but, in consequence of the King's objection to him, it was not until after two years' time that he obtained possession of his See at the bidding of the Pope.

[1] In the hope that Francis could by miracle prolong his life. The Saint could only be induced to go by the absolute commands of Sixtus IV. He arrived at Plessis-les-Tours, April 24, 1482. Alban Butler says that he effected "a perfect change" in the King's heart, before his death, which occurred, Aug. 30, 1483.

[2] Alban Butler gives a year later.

[3] Her alleged connection with England seems inexplicable except upon the ground of some accidental error.

Fifth Lesson.

ESTABLISHED over the Church of Chichester, he discharged most earnestly the duties of an holy shepherd of souls. The hardness and sternness of his own living enabled him not only to feed his people's souls with the life-giving Word, but also their bodies with needful food. He was very diligent in visiting the sick, and would bury the dead with his own hands. He often excused their debts to those who owed unto him, and when he was behoven to go to law with any man, his chief desire was to cherish charity toward his adversary, being used to say that we ought not so to seek our own rights, as to weaken that love whereunto our neighbour hath right by the command of God Himself.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Pope charged him with the duty of preaching the Crusade, and he persevered in that work until, in the midst of a journey undertaken in the cause, he died at Dover, as he had himself foretold. At the point of death he caused an image of Christ suffering to be brought to him, and commended his soul to his Redeemer, while he kissed the figured wounds. This man of God died upon the third day of April, in the year of our salvation 1253.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

In Lent the last is read along with the eighth in order to make room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Seville, in Spain, the holy Confessor Isidore, Bishop of that see, famous for his holiness and teaching, who lighted up all Spain by his zeal for the Catholic faith, and by his observance of the discipline of the Church, [in the year 639.]

At Thessalonica, under the Emperor Maximian and the President Faustinus, the holy martyrs, the Deacon Agathopodes, and the Reader Theodulos, who were drowned in the sea with stones tied round their necks, because of their confession of the Christian faith.

At Milan, the burial of the holy Confessor Ambrose, Bishop of that see, by whose labours, teaching, and miracles at the time of the Arian misbelief nearly the whole of Italy was converted to the Catholic faith, [in the year 397.] [We keep his feast upon the 7th day of December, which is that of his ordination as bishop.]

At Constantinople, the holy Monk Plato, who struggled resolutely for many years against the heretics, breakers of the holy images, [in the year 813.]

In Palestine, [in the fifth century,] the holy Hermit Zosimus, who saw to the burying of holy Mary of Egypt.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

APRIL 4.

St Isidore, Archbishop [of Seville,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of Doctors, (p. 630,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "O God, Who didst give, &c."

A Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from his Office.

At First Vespers, "O right excellent, &c.," and in Lent, a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ISIDORE, the admirable teacher, was a Spaniard by birth, being the son of Severian, governor of the Province of Carthagena. He was trained up in all godliness and learning by his holy brethren Leander, Archbishop of Seville, and Fulgentius, Bishop of Carthagena. He was well instructed in the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew letters, and he came from his masters a most eminent scholar in all human knowledge, and a pattern of all Christian graces. While yet he was very young, he attacked with such firmness the Arian heresy, which had of former times polluted the Gothic nation, who then were the chief rulers of Spain, that he was near being murdered by the heretics. After that Leander was departed this life,[1] Isidore was chosen to the See of Seville, against his own will, but at the vehement instance of King Reccared, and with the strong assent of the clergy and people. Holy Gregory the Great not only confirmed his election by his own Apostolic authority, and caused him to be adorned, as is the custom, with a Pallium sent from the body of Blessed Peter, but is also stated to have appointed him Vicar of the Apostolic See for all Spain.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he was Archbishop no tongue can tell how leal he was, how lowly, and meek, and merciful, how careful to restore the laws of Christianity and the Church, and how unwearied in establishing the same by his word and writings, yea, how brightly he shone in all graces. He was a leading promoter and spreader of monastic institutions throughout Spain. He built many monasteries He founded colleges in which, when his duty allowed him spare time for sacred study and reading, he taught the many disciples who betook themselves to him from all quarters. Among these, two of the most distinguished were the holy Bishops Ildephonsus of Toledo, and Braulio of Saragossa. He called the Council of Seville, wherein, in a most incisive and eloquent discourse, he shattered and crushed the heresy of the Acephali, by which Spain was then threatened. So great was his fame among all men for the holiness of his life and doctrine, that scarcely sixteen years after his death the whole Council of Toledo, by the acclamation of more than fifty Bishops, among whom was the holy Ildephonsus himself, declared him to be worthy to be called the excellent Teacher, the newest ornament of the Catholic Church, one whose learning would endure to the end of the world, and of worshipful memory. It was the opinion of the holy Braulio that he was not only fit to be compared to Gregory the Great, but also that he was a gift from God to Spain instead of the Apostle James.

[1] A.D. 600 or 601.

Sixth Lesson.

ISIDORE wrote Books "of Etymologies" and "on Church Offices," and likewise many others, so useful in the administration of Christian and Church Law, that the holy Pope Leo IV. felt no scruple in writing to the Bishops of Britain, that the sayings of Isidore were worthy to be kept like those of Jerome and Austin, whenever there is to be done some strange work, wherein the rules of the Canon Law are not enough defined. Many sentences from his writings may also be discovered embedded in the Canon Law of the Church itself. He presided over the Fourth Council of Toledo, the most celebrated that ever met in Spain. Before his death he had purged Spain of the Arian heresy, and publicly foretold his own dissolution and the wasting of the kingdom by the Saracens which was to come. He passed away to heaven, at Seville, where he had ruled his Church for forty years, [upon the 4th day of April,] in the year of our Lord 636. In accordance with his own commands, his body was first buried between his brother Leander and his sister Florentina, but Ferdinand I., King of Castille and Leon, bought it for a great price from Enet,[1] the Saracen, who then ruled at Seville, carried it to Leon, and there built a Church in honour of him, wherein his said body lieth, illustrious through miracles, and reverenced with great worship by the people.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. And so on.

Homily by St Isidore, Archbishop [of Seville.] (Bk. ii. to St Fulgentius on Offices, c. 5.)

Whosoever is set over the people to teach them and to catechise them in good works, him it behoveth in all things to be holy, and in nothing to be held blameworthy. For he which rebuketh another for sin, should have no dealings with sin himself. Since with what face can he rebuke them which are under him, if he which is rebuked of him be able to answer him straightway, saying: Begin by teaching thyself to do well? Verily, whosoever setteth himself to teach others to live well, him it behoveth first of all to correct his own life, so that in all things he may be able to give the same his own life for an ensample, and may provoke all to good living by his works as well as by his words. Likewise also he must needs be learned in the Scriptures, since if the life of a Bishop be holy only, then is he profitable to himself only. But if he be learned also in his teaching and discourse, he is able to edify his neighbours, both teaching such as are his own, and confounding the gainsayers, who, unless they be confounded and unmasked, are easily able to lead astray the hearts of the simple.

Eighth Lesson.

SUCH an one it behoveth, that his discourse should be pure, plain, open, very weighty, and seemly, full of sweetness and comeliness, touching often the mystery of Law, the teaching of faith, the manliness of self-control, and the training of righteousness. Such an one it behoveth to exhort all men with varying exhortation, according to the profession and way of life of each, that is to say, such an one must know what, to whom, when, and how to speak. His duty is, before all others, to read the Scriptures, to know the Canons, to copy the ensamples of the Saints, to be instant in watching, fasting, and prayer, to keep peace with his brethren, to separate himself from none of the members of Christ, to condemn no man untried, and to excommunicate no man unheard. Such an one it behoveth, as he is the first in authority, so also to be the first in lowliness, yet ever so, that, by misplaced lowliness, he suffer not nor encourage the sins of those that are under him, nor use his authority hardly and with violence, but as one that is the more careful of the flock committed unto him, as being mindful of that stricter account which he will have to give at the fearful judgment seat of Christ.

Ninth Lesson.

(In Lent this Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day, in which case what follows is either omitted or read as one with the Eighth Lesson.)

SUCH an one must have firm hold on charity, that gift which surpasseth all others, and without which all others are nothing worth. Charity is the keeper of chastity, and that keeper's home is lowly-mindedness. With all other gifts he must needs be eminent for purity, yea, his must be a mind belonging utterly to Christ, and clean and free from any fleshly defilement. But these are not all his needful gifts. Besides these, it behoveth him to undertake the care of the poor, and to do the same with zeal and likewise with prudence, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to entertain strangers, to ransom prisoners, to be the guardian of the widow and the orphan, to watch over all without ceasing, and to be heedful that his alms be neither foolish nor wasteful. In him hospitality must shine, entertaining all men with courtesy and brotherly love; for if it be the duty of all the faithful to listen to that Gospel which saith: "I was a stranger, and ye took Me in," (Matth. xxv. 35,) how much more is it the duty of Bishops, whose house it behoveth to be an home for all men?

In Lent the Week-day is commemorated at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Vannes, in Brittany, the holy Confessor Vincent, surnamed Ferrer, of the Order of Friars Preachers, who was mighty in work and in word, and brought to Christ many thousands of unbelievers, [in the year 1419.]

At Thessalonica, the holy Virgin Irene. She hid the holy books contrary to the edict of the Emperor Diocletian, and therefore suffered imprisonment, was smitten with an arrow, and burnt with fire by order of the President Dulcetius, the same judge under whom her sisters Agape and Chionia had suffered already.

In the island of Lesbos, suffered five holy martyrs.

On the same day the holy martyr Zeno, who was flayed, daubed over with pitch, and cast into the fire.

In Africa, [in the year 559 or 570,] suffered the holy martyrs who were massacred in church upon Easter day, in the persecution under the Arian king Genseric. Among them was the Reader, who was shot with an arrow through the neck, as he was in the pulpit singing the Alleluia.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

APRIL 5.

St Vincent Ferrer,[1] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of one Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to enlighten Thy Church through the worthy deeds and Gospel preaching of Thy blessed Confessor Vincent, grant unto us Thy servants grace so to order our lives after his ensample, that we, being holpen by his protection, may by Thee be ever delivered from all evil. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Isidore, Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.," and, in Lent, of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season; or, in Lent, from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Vincent was born of respectable parents, at Valencia in Spain, [upon the 23rd day of January, in the year of our Lord 1357.] Even as a child he had an heart like the heart of an old man. Considering, to the utmost of his young understanding, how fleeting is the course of this dark world, he, in the eighteenth year of his age, took the habit of a Friar in the Order of Preachers. After he had made his solemn profession, he devoted himself to sacred learning, and took the degree of Master in Divinity with much distinction. He soon after received permission from his superiors to preach the word of God, on which duty he entered with such power and success, striving against the unbelief of the Jews, and overthrowing the errors of the Saracens, that he brought an exceeding great multitude of unbelievers to believe in Christ, and turned many thousands of Christians from sin to sorrow, and from vice to virtue. He was a chosen vessel unto God to proclaim the tidings of salvation among all nations, and tribes, and tongues, crying out that the last day, that awful day of judgment, is at hand, smiting consternation into the minds of all, as many as heard him, weaning their love from a perishing world, and turning it to God.

Fifth Lesson.

WHILE Vincent wrought the Apostolic work of preaching committed to him, he lived ever as follows: Every morning he sang a solemn Mass, and every day he preached in public. He fasted every day, unless prevented by some absolute necessity. He refused to no one his holy and just advice. He never ate meat, nor wore linen. He quieted public disturbances, and negotiated the peace of kingdoms. When the seamless garment of the Church was rent by an horrid schism, he worked his every nerve to unite it again, and keep it one. He was a burning and a shining light of all virtues, walking always in lowliness and simpleness, so that he meekly welcomed and embraced them which spake evil against him and persecuted him.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Power of God confirmed his life and doctrine with many great signs and wonders. He often laid his hands upon the sick and they recovered. He cast out unclean spirits, and made the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak, and the blind to see. He cleansed the lepers, and raised the dead. After passing through many countries of Europe with exceeding profit to souls, worn out with age and disease, but still ever the same unwearied herald of the Gospel, he brought his life and his preaching together to an happy end, at Vannes in Brittany, [upon the 5th day of April,] in the year of salvation 1419. Pope Callistus III. numbered him with the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory, (p. 625.) In Lent the third part is omitted or read as one with the second, and the Ninth Lesson is either the first part, or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day.

In Lent the Week-day is commemorated at Lauds and Second Vespers.

[1] Ferrerius or Ferrarius—i.e., Smith. The name might be Englished, if not translated, Ferrers, being the same as that of the noble English family of the Comites Ferrarii or Earls Ferrars, who still have, and exercise, the right, in allusion to their name, of levying a tax of an horse-shoe on every peer of the Realm who comes for the first time within a certain distance of the Castle of Oakham, in Rutlandshire.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the blessed martyr, Pope Sixtus I., who ruled the Church, [in the years 117-127,] in the time of the Emperor Hadrian, and, under the Emperor Antoninus Pius, cheerfully welcomed the death of the body that so he might gain Christ.

In Macedonia, the holy martyrs Timothy and Diogenes, [in the year 345.]

In Persia, [at Adiabene,] an hundred and twenty holy martyrs, [about the year 344.]

At Ascalon, the holy martyrs Platonides and two others.

At Carthage, the holy martyr Marcellinus, who was slain by heretics, [in the year 413,] because he defended the Catholic faith.

At Rome, the holy Confessor, Pope Celestine [I., in the years 422-432,] who condemned Nestorius, Archbishop of Constantinople, and drave out Pelagius. It was by his authority that the holy General Council of Ephesus was held against the said Nestorius.

In Ireland, the holy Confessor Kelly, Archbishop of Armagh, [in the year 1128,] in the which see he came immediately before blessed Maleachlan.

In Denmark, holy William, Abbat [of Eskill,] famous for his life and miracles, [born 1105, died 1202.] [Of the order of Canons Regular of St Victor, Nephew of Hew, 42nd Abbat of St Germain des Près.]

In Lent, at Second Vespers, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

APRIL 6.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rouen, [in the year 1719,] the holy Confessor John Baptist de la Salle. He was foremost in the teaching of the young, the poor especially, and deserved well of both religion and civil society. He founded the Congregation of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Cyriacus and ten others.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Peleusius the Priest.

At Rome, holy Hegesippus, who came to Pope Anicetus, at Rome, [in the year 157,] very soon after the time of the Apostles, and abode there until the time of Pope Eleutherius, [and died in the year 180.] He wrote in plain words a Church history from the Passion of the Lord until his own time, to set forth the lives of those in whose footsteps he followed.

At Verona, the holy Confessor Saturninus, Bishop of that see, [in the fourth century.]

In Syria, the holy Hermit Aphraates, who defended the Catholic faith by the power of his miracles against the Arians, in the time of the Emperor Valens.

APRIL 7.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 8th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Ædesius, brother of the blessed Apphian. Under the Emperor Maximian Galerius he openly rebuked the wicked judge for condemning to the lions the virgins vowed to God, wherefore he was apprehended by the soldiers, put to most cruel torments, and drowned in the sea, for the Lord Christ's sake.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Januarius, Maxima, and Macaria.

At Carthage, the holy martyr Concessa.

On the same day are commemorated holy Herodion, Asyncritus, and Phlegon, concerning whom the blessed Apostle Paul writeth in his Epistle unto the Romans.

At Corinth, blessed Denis, Bishop of that city, who by the learning and grace which he had in the Word of God, taught by his epistles not only the people of his own city and province but also the bishops of other provinces and cities, and who had such a veneration for the Popes of Rome that he was used to have their Epistles publicly read in the Church upon the Lord's Day. He flourished in the times of the Emperors Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus.

At Tours, [in the year 494,] holy Perpetuus, Bishop of that see, a man of wonderful holiness.

At Fiorentino, in Campania, holy Redemptus, [in the year 586,] Bishop of that see, of whom mention is made by blessed Pope Gregory.

At Como, the holy Confessor Amantius, Bishop of that see, [about the year 446.]

APRIL 8.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 9th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, holy Prochorus, one of the seven first deacons. He was illustrious for his faith and miracles, and was crowned with martyrdom. [He was the 3rd of the seven deacons, and 66th of the 72 disciples. He was a nephew of St Stephen. After being with St John in Asia, he was made Bishop of Nicomedia, in Bithynia, by St Peter, and later on sent to Antioch.]

At Rome, the holy martyrs Demetrius, Concessus, Hilary, and their Companions.

At Sirmium, suffered seven holy Virgins, all martyrs, who purchased eternal life at the price of their blood.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, [in the year 362,] the holy martyr Eupsychius, who was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Julian the Apostate for casting down the shrine of Fortune.

In Africa, the holy martyrs of Massylita, [probably Fez,] upon whose birthday holy Austin made a discourse.

At Diarbekr, in Mesopotamia, [in the fifth century,] holy Acatius, Bishop of that see, who even melted down and sold the vessels of the Church to redeem captives withal.

At Rouen, the holy Confessor Hew, Bishop of that see, [in the year 730.]

In the city of Die, [in the sixth century,] holy Marcellus, Bishop thereof, who was famous for miracles.

In Judea, holy Mary of Cleophas, sister of Mary the most Holy Mother of God.

At Rome is commemorated the translation of the body of holy Monica, mother of the blessed Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] which the supreme Pontiff Martin V. caused to be brought into the city from Ostia, and honourably buried in the church of the said blessed Austin, [in the year 1430.]

At Mons, in Hainault, [in the year 686,] the blessed Waldetrude, [First Abbess of Mons and Foundress of that City,] famous for the holiness of her life and for her miracles.

APRIL 9.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of April, were born into the better life—

The prophet Ezechiel, who was put to death [570 B.C.] at Babylon by a judge of the people of Israel because he had rebuked him for worshipping idols. He was buried in the sepulchre of Shem and Arphaxad, the forefathers of Abraham, and many have been used to resort thither to pray.

At Rome, very many holy martyrs, who were baptized by holy Pope Alexander, [in the years 101-109,] while he was kept in prison. The Prefect Aurelian caused them all to be put on board an old ship and carried to the deep sea, where they were drowned, with stones tied round their necks, [in the year 116.]

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs the Priest Apollonius and five others, who were drowned in the sea in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian.

In Africa, under the Emperor Decius and the Prefect Fortunian, the holy martyrs Terence, Africanus, Pompey, and their Companions, who were beaten with rods, racked, and tormented in divers other ways, and at length beheaded, and so finished their testimony.

Upon the same day, [in the year 1012,] holy Macarius, Patriarch of Antioch, famous for his graces and miracles.

At Valladolid, in Spain, [in the year 1625,] the holy Confessor Michael de Sanctis, a Barefooted Friar of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Redemption of Captives, eminent for the innocency of his life, the wonderful depth of his penance, and his excelling love of God, his name The Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. enrolled among those of the Saints.

APRIL 10.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 461,] the holy Confessor, Pope Leo I., who on account of his eminent worthiness is called the Great. In his times was held the holy Council of Chalcedon, wherein, through his legates, he condemned Eutyches, and whereof by his authority he confirmed the decrees. He ordained many things, wrote excellently, deserved well of the holy Church of God, as a good shepherd over all the Lord's flock, and fell asleep in peace.

At Pergamos, in Asia, holy Antipas, "the faithful witness," of whom holy John doth make mention in his Revelation. Under the Emperor Domitian he was thrust into the inside of a brazen bull heated red hot, and so finished his testimony.

At Salona, in Dalmatia, the holy martyrs Domnion, Bishop [of that city, who was converted by St Peter and sent thither,] and eight soldiers.

At Gortyna, in Crete, [about the year 180,] holy Philip, Bishop of that see, very famous for his life and teaching. He governed the church committed unto him in the times of the Emperors Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus, and shielded it from the rage of the Gentiles and the wiles of the heretics.

At Nicomedia, [under Diocletian,] the holy Priest Eustorgius.

At Spoleto, [in the year 554,] the holy Confessor Isaac the monk, whose graces have been recorded by holy Pope Gregory.

At Gaza, in Palestine, under the Emperor Justinian, the holy Hermit Barsanuph.

APRIL 11.

St Leo I. (called "the Great,") Pope, Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of Doctors, (p. 630,) except the following.

Prayer at First Vespers and throughout the Office: "Hear, O Lord, we beseech Thee, the prayers, &c.," (p. 617.)

At First Vespers in Lent, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Peter i. 1, as on the Fifth Sunday after Easter, (p. 383.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LEO I. was an Etruscan who ruled the Church[1] at the time when Attila, king of the Huns, whose surname is the Scourge of God, invaded Italy, and after a siege of three years, took, sacked, and burnt Aquileia. Thence he was hurrying to Rome, on fire with anger, and his troops were already preparing to cross the Po, at the place where that river is joined by the Mincio, when he was met by Leo, moved with compassion at the thought of the ruin which hung over Italy. By his God-given eloquence, Attila was persuaded to turn back, and when he was afterwards asked by his servants why, contrary to his custom, he had so meekly yielded to the entreaties of the Bishop of Rome, he answered that he had been alarmed by a figure dressed like a Priest, which had appeared at the side of Leo while he was speaking, holding a drawn sword, and had made as though to kill the king unless he consented. And so he returned into Pannonia.

Fifth Lesson.

MEANWHILE Leo went back to Rome, where he was received with rejoicing by all men. A while later, Genseric entered the city, but Leo, by the power of his eloquence and the authority of his holy life, persuaded him to abstain from fire, insult, and slaughter. When Leo beheld how the Church was assailed by many heresies, and in dire trouble through the Nestorians and Eutychians, to purify the same and establish her in the Catholic Faith, he called the Council of Chalcedon, where, in an assembly of six hundred and thirty Bishops Nestorius was again condemned, along with Eutyches and Dioscorus; the decrees of which Council were confirmed by the authority of Leo.

[1] He was consecrated, Sept. 29, 440, a short time after his election.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER these matters, this holy Pope set himself to the restoration and building of Churches. By his advice that godly woman Demetria built the Church of St Stephen upon her farm on the Latin Road, at the third milestone from the city. He himself built another Church upon the Appian Way, which Church is called that of St Cornelius. He restored likewise many other Churches, and the holy vessels used therein. He built Clergy-houses at the three Basilicas of Peter, Paul, and Constantine.[1] He built a monastery hard by the Basilica of St Peter. He appointed for the graves of the Apostles certain keepers, whom he called the Chamberlains[2] of the said Apostles. He ordained that in the action of the Mystery[3] should be uttered the words—"An holy sacrifice, an offering without spot." He ordered that no nun should have the covering of her head blessed[4] until she had made trial of her virginity for forty years. After doing all these and other illustrious works, and after he had written much that is both godly and easy to be understood, he fell asleep in the Lord on the eleventh day of April,[5] [in the year 461.] He held the Papal See for twenty years, ten months, and twenty-eight days.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? And so on.

Homily by Pope St Leo [the Great.] (2nd on the anniversary of his own election.)

When the Lord, as we read in the Evangelist, asked His disciples: "Who did men, amid their divers speculations, believe that He, the Son of Man, was; blessed Peter answered and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And JESUS answered and said unto him: Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father, Which is in heaven: and I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it; and I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Thus therefore standeth the ordinance of the Truth, and blessed Peter, abiding still that firm rock which God hath made him, hath never lost that right to rule in the Church which God hath given unto him.

Eighth Lesson.

IN the universal Church it is Peter that doth still say every day, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and every tongue which confesseth that JESUS is Lord is taught that confession by the teaching of Peter. This is the faith that overcometh the devil and looseth the bands of his prisoners. This is the faith which maketh men free of the world and bringeth them to heaven, and the gates of hell are impotent to prevail against it. With such ramparts of salvation hath God fortified this rock, that the contagion of heresy will never be able to infect it, nor idolatry and unbelief to overcome it. This teaching it is, my dearly beloved brethren, which maketh the keeping of this Feast to-day to be our reasonable service, even the teaching which maketh you to know and honour in myself, lowly though I be, that Peter who is still entrusted with the care of all other shepherds and of all the flocks to them committed, and whose authority I have, albeit unworthy to be his heir.

Ninth Lesson.

(In Lent this Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day, in which case what follows is either omitted or read as one with the Eighth Lesson.)

WHEN, therefore, we address our exhortations to your godly ears,[6] believe ye that ye are hearing him speak whose office we are discharging. Yea, it is with his love for you that we warn you, and we preach unto you no other thing than that which he taught, entreating you that ye would gird up the loins of your mind and lead pure and sober lives in the fear of God. [7] My disciples dearly beloved, ye are to me, as the disciples of the Apostle Paul were to him, (Phil. iv. 1,) a crown and a joy, if your faith, which, in the first times of the Gospel, was spoken of throughout the whole world, (Rom. i. 8,) abide still lovely and holy. For, albeit it behoveth the whole Church which is spread throughout all the world, to be strong in righteousness, you it chiefly becometh above all other peoples to excel in worth and godliness, whose house is built upon the very crown of the Rock of the Apostle, and whom not only hath our Lord JESUS Christ, as He hath redeemed all men, but whom also His blessed Apostle Peter hath made the foremost object of his teaching.

In Lent the Week-day is commemorated at Lauds and Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 12th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Verona, the holy martyr Zeno, Bishop [of that see,] which he governed with admirable faithfulness amid the storms of persecution. He was crowned with martyrdom in the time of the Emperor Gallienus.

In Cappadocia, the holy martyr Saba the Goth, who was put to grievous torments and then drowned in the river, when Athanaric, king of the Goths, was persecuting the Christians under the Emperor Valens. At the which time, according to holy Austin, very many orthodox Goths won the crown of martyrdom.

[1] This is St Saviour's, commonly called St John Lateran.

[2] Cubicularii. More correctly "Gentlemen of the Bed-chamber."

[3] That is, in the Canon of the Mass, called the "action" in the Roman Missal.

[4] Take the solemn vows, on which occasion the veil is blessed.

[5] Alban Butler says Nov. 10.

[6] Lit. the ears of your holiness. So St Austin addresses his congregation as "your love."

[7] It must of course be remembered, as in the Eighth Lesson, so more especially in this, that St Leo addresses the Romans.

At Braga, in Portugal, [about the year 300, under Diocletian,] the holy martyr Victor. He was only as yet preparing for baptism, when he refused to worship an idol, and with great faithfulness confessed Christ JESUS, for the which cause he was put to many torments and beheaded, and so obtained baptism in his own blood.

At Fermo, in Picenum, the holy Virgin and martyr Vissia.

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, holy Pope Julius [I.], who contended stoutly for the Catholic Faith against the Arians, and after many eminent acts fell asleep in peace, [in the year 352,] famous for holiness.

At the town of Gap, the holy Confessor Constantine, Bishop [of that see, about the year 455.]

At Pavia, holy Damian, Bishop of that see, [about the years 671-710.]

At Second Vespers, in Lent, Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

APRIL 12.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Seville, in Spain, the holy martyr Hermenegild, son of Leovigild, the Arian king of the Visigoths. His misbelieving father had cast him into prison on account of his confession of the Catholic Faith, and when upon the solemn night of Easter he refused to receive Easter Communion from the Arian Bishop he caused him to be smitten with the axe, and so did this king as a martyr exchange a kingdom on earth for the kingdom of heaven, [in the year 586.]

At Pergamos, in Asia, the holy martyrs Carpus, Bishop of Thyatira, the Deacon Papylus, the excellent lady Agathonica his sister, their servant Agathodorus, and many others, who were diversely tormented, and crowned with martyrdom after blessed confessions, in the persecution under the Emperors Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus. [More likely under Decius in the year 251.]

In the same persecution there suffered at Rome the holy martyr Justin, the admirable philosopher. He had presented to the emperors aforenamed his second book in defence of our religion, and was then earnestly spreading the same by his disputations when he was accused of Christianity through the devices of Crescens the Cynic, whose infamous life and manners he had rebuked, and for a reward of his faithful speaking he received the crown of martyrdom, [in the year 167.] We keep his feast upon the 14th day of this present month.

Upon the same day, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Maximus, Quintilian, and Dadas, [at Dorostis, in Bulgaria.]

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Ursus, Bishop of that see, [in the year 396.]

APRIL 13.

St Hermenegild, Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of One Martyr, (p. 594, or 576,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Hymn.

If it happens for any reason that these Vespers are omitted, this Hymn is said at Mattins, and the Hymn for Mattins at Lauds.

O THOU who on the throne of Spain
Didst shed Nicæa's glorious light—
Whose faith waxed strong a place to gain
With them who die to win the fight;

We know thy faith unsullied stood
Alike before earth's smile and frown,
Knowing that death an higher good
That bore thee to a martyr's crown.

Lent's forty days that were thy last
Thy soul with such meek courage stored,
That thou didst leave the earthly Fast
To keep thine Easter with the Lord.

As to thy heart in worship bound
To our's Nicæa's Symbol lies;
With thee may we one day be found
Where that bright faith in knowledge dies! Amen.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst teach Thy blessed Martyr Hermenegild to choose an heavenly rather than an earthly crown, grant, we beseech Thee, that we, like him, may so pass through things temporal that we finally miss not those which are eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In Lent Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

Hymn.

A FATHER'S love, that called to sin,
Thine higher love to Christ passed by;
The glories of a crown were dim
Before thy spirit's piercing eye.

As in earth's peace so in her strife
The love of JESUS bore thee through,
Till, quickened to the higher life,
Thou hadst borne all that men can do—

All men can do!—and thou, above,
The victor's palm-branch bearest now;
O in the presence of God's love
The Church's champion still be thou!

As to thy heart in worship bound
To ours Nicæa's Symbol lies;
With thee may we one day be found
Where that bright faith in knowledge dies! Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent, from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book intituled the Dialogues, written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. iii. ch. 31.)

KING[1] Hermenegild, the son of Leovigild, King of the Visigoths, was turned from the Arian heresy to the Catholic Faith by the preaching of that most worshipful man Leander,

---

[1] "He was invested by his father with the Royal diadem and the fair principality of Bætica." Gibbon, xxxvii.

Bishop of Seville, the same who was for a long season mine own familiar friend. Then his father, being himself an Arian, strove to bring him back to that heresy, first by offering him gifts, and then seeking to awe him by threatening. And when he answered alway that, having once had knowledge of the true faith, he never could forsake it, his father was wroth, and took away his kingdom from him, and plundered him of all his goods. And when not even so could he sap the manliness of his soul, he cast him into a most strait prison, having his neck and his hands in fetters of iron. And so that young King Hermenegild began to hold in little esteem an earthly kingdom, and to long exceedingly for an heavenly. Yea, he clothed himself in sackcloths in the prison, and as he lay bound therein, he poured forth supplications to Almighty God to give him strength. There he lay bound, having suffered the loss of all things, but his suffering made him but to esteem more worthless the glory of this world, which passeth away so easily.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT when the day of the glad Passover came, at dead of night,[1] the unbelieving father sent to his son the Arian Bishop, to offer him, as the price of his favour, to receive at the hands of the said Bishop the Communion which was the result of a sacrilegious consecration. But when the Arian Bishop came into the prison, the servant of God, remembering that he was not his own but God's man, rebuked the unbeliever as he deserved, and drave him from his presence with just reproaches; for though he was weak and bound as touching this outer body, yet was he strong in the mighty castle of his soul. The Bishop, therefore, went away again to that Arian father. And when he came to Leovigild, he waxed exceeding wroth, and sent his servants to kill God's faithful witness where he lay. Which thing was done; for as soon as they came to him into the prison, they clave his head with an axe, and freed him from the dying life of this house of our tabernacle. And so they did to him all that which they that kill the body are able to do, and it was a thing which now of a long season he feared not, seeing that when they have done that, they have no more that they can do, but fearing rather Him Who, when He hath killed, hath power to cast both body and soul into hell. But God, to make manifest the glory of His servant, was pleased to work signs from heaven, for of a sudden the solemn swell of singing of Psalms was heard at that dead hour of night from round about the place where lay the body of the kingly martyr, kingly now in an higher and truer sense than the sense of earthly kingship, since he had witnessed a good confession for the truth, sealing it with his blood.

Sixth Lesson.

SOME say, too, that lights were seen there that night. Wherefore it came to pass that the body of the martyr became the rightful object of reverence to all God's faithful people. The unbelieving father, murderer of his own child, was seized with remorse, and repented him of what he had done, but he sorrowed not unto salvation. For though he knew that the Catholic faith was true, he stood in fear of his people, and deserved not to attain unto it. He fell sick, and, when he was at the point of death, he made it his duty to recommend King Reccared his surviving son to the care of the Bishop Leander, whom aforetime he had grievously persecuted, that though Reccared was now left in heresy, the Bishop might work in him by his exhortations the same change that he had worked in his brother,—which when Leovigild had said, he died. After his death, King Reccared took for his ensample not his unbelieving father but his martyred brother. He forsook the Arian heresy, and brought the whole nation of the Visigoths to believe in the true faith, so that he allowed no man in his kingdom to be an officer, who dared any longer range himself through heresy as an enemy of the Kingdom of God. Neither need we marvel that Reccared was a preacher of the faith, since he had had to his brother a martyr, for whose sake Almighty God hath holpen him to bring back so many to the bosom of their Father Who is in heaven.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Whether in or out of Paschal-time the Lessons are from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory, (p. 597.) In Lent the Third of these Lessons is omitted, or read as one with the Second, and the Ninth Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day, which is also commemorated at Lauds and Second Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy martyr Justin, the admirable philosopher. He had presented to the Emperors Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus his second book in defence of our religion, and was then earnestly spreading the same at Rome by his disputations when he was accused of Christianity through the devices of Crescens the Cynic, whose life and infamous manners he had rebuked, and for a reward of his faithful speaking he received upon this day the crown of martyrdom.

Upon the same 14th day of April, were born into the better life—

Likewise at Rome, upon the Appian Way, under the Emperor Alexander and the Prefect Almachius, the holy martyrs Tiburtius, Valerian, and Maximus. Tiburtius and Valerian had been converted to Christ by the exhortations of blessed Cicely and baptized by the holy Pope Urban, and for the confession of their faith were cudgelled and beheaded. Maximus was a chamberlain of the Prefect, and was moved to believe in Christ by beholding the steadfastness of Tiburtius and Valerian, and being confirmed in the same faith by an apparition of angels, he was lashed to death with scourges loaded with lead.

At Terni, the holy martyr Proculus, Bishop of that see, [about the year 306.]

Likewise the holy Virgins and martyrs Domnina and her Companions, [about the year 272.]

At Alexandria, [in the fifth century,] the holy martyr Thomais.

---

[1] Between Holy Saturday, the 13th, and Easter Day, the 14th of April, A.D. 586.

On the same day, the holy martyr Ardalion. He was a player, and was making a mock upon the stage of the sacred rites of the Christians, when he was converted all of a sudden, and attested his conversion not only by his words but also by his blood, [about the year 300.]

At Lyons, the holy Confessor Lambert, Bishop of that see, [in the year 688.]

At Alexandria, the holy Abbat Fronto, [in the desert of Nitria he had 70 monks,] famous for the holiness of his life, and for his miracles, [in the reign of Antonine, about the year 151.]

At Rome, [in the sixth century,] holy Abundius, watchman of the Church of St Peter.

Vespers of the following.

APRIL 14.

St Justin, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594, or 576,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who through the preaching of the Cross, which is to them that perish foolishness, didst wonderfully teach unto Thy blessed martyr Justin the excellency of the knowledge of Christ JESUS Our Lord, grant unto us at his prayers the grace to cast off all false teaching and ever to hold fast to the faith. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Hermenegild. Prayer from his Office. Then in Lent of the Week-day, and lastly in any case of the holy martyrs Tiburtius, Valerian, and Maximus. In Paschal-time the latter is taken from Lauds.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY God, for Whom holy Tiburtius, Valerian, and Maximus uplifted their testimony, grant, we beseech Thee, unto all whosoever call the same to solemn memory, grace to imitate the example of their godly courage. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lesson from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603).

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JUSTIN, the son of Priscus, was a Greek by race, but was born at Nablus in Palestine. He passed his youth in the study of letters. When he became a man he was so taken with the love of philosophy and the desire of truth that he became a student in the schools of all the philosophers and examined the teaching of them all. In them he found only deceitful wisdom and error. The light of heaven was given him, through an old man of worshipful aspect whom he knew not, and he embraced the philosophy of the true Christian faith. Henceforth he had the books of the Holy Scriptures in his hands by day and by night, and by meditating thereon the fire of God was so kindled in his soul that, himself possessing the excellency of the knowledge of Christ JESUS our Lord, he wrote many books, with all the learning which he possessed, to set forth the Christian faith and to spread it abroad.

Fifth Lesson.

AMONG the most famous of the works of Justin are his two Apologies or Defences of the Christian faith. These he brought before the Senate when the Emperors Antoninus Pius, and his sons, as also Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus, were savagely persecuting the followers of Christ, and by their means, and his vigorous disputations in favour of the same faith, he obtained a public edict from the government to stay the slaughter of the Christians. But Justin himself did not escape; he had rebuked the life and infamous manners of the Cynic Crescens, and was accused and arrested through that person's plottings. He was brought before Rusticus, the President of Rome, who asked him what were the doctrines of the Christians, whereto he answered, in the presence of many witnesses, with this good confession: "The right doctrine which we Christian men do keep with godliness is this, that we should believe that there is one God, Who is the Maker and Creator of all things, both those things which are seen and those things which bodily eyes do not see, and that we should confess the Lord JESUS Christ, the Son of God, Who was foretold of old time by the prophets, and Who will come to be the Judge of all mankind."

Sixth Lesson.

IN order to rebut the slanders of the heathen, Justin had in his first Apology given an open account of the gathering of the Christians for divine worship, and what were the holy Mysteries celebrated in these assemblies. The President therefore asked him what was the place where he and Christ's other faithful ones in the city were accustomed to meet. Justin, lest he should betray that which was holy unto God and his brethren, told only where was his own lodging, where he was used to abide and to teach his disciples, hard by the famous Church of the Shepherd, in the house of Pudens. The President then gave him the choice whether to sacrifice to the gods or to be hided with scourges over his whole body. The unconquered champion of the faith answered that he had always desired to suffer in the Name of the Lord JESUS Christ, from Whom he looked to receive a mighty reward in heaven. The President thereupon sentenced him to death, and then this excellent philosopher, giving praise to God, was first beaten and afterwards shed his blood for Christ's sake, and so received the crown of a glorious martyrdom. Some of the faithful secretly stole away his body, and buried it in a fitting place. The Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. commanded that his Office and Mass should be used throughout the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 1.)

IN the meantime, [when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, in so much that they trod one upon another,] Jesus began to say unto His disciples [first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy, for] there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople,] (on Matthew x. 26.)

["The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? Fear them not, therefore: for] there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known." It is as though He would say: It is comfort enough for you, if I, your Master and Lord, am a partaker in your reproach. But if it grieve you unto this present to hear these things, bethink you likewise that it is but a little while, and ye shall be free from that reproach. For what is it that grieveth you? is it that they call you tricksters and deceivers? Wait but a little while and all men shall call you the preservers and benefactors of the world. In a little while all the things which are dark now shall be made clear, and the falsehood of them that reproach you and your goodness shall be shown in the light. For when that which cometh to pass shall itself show that ye are preservers and benefactors, and filled with all goodness, men will regard not the words of your gainsayers but the truth. They that now speak evil of you will be found out in the slanderers, liars, and calumniators, and ye shall be seen to be brighter than the sun; time shall make you known and shall preach you with a voice louder than the voice of a trumpet, and shall bring forward all men as the witnesses of your goodness. Let not, therefore, those things which are now spoken cast you down, but rather let the hope of the good things which are to come lift you up. For the things which regard you cannot be hidden.

Eighth Lesson.

AND when He had freed them from pain, fear, and care, and set them above the reproaches of men, He spake unto them in due season concerning the freedom of preaching, "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops." It was not darkness when He uttered these words, neither was He speaking into their ear. These words were a figure; He was speaking to them alone and in a little corner of Palestine, and therefore He saith "in darkness and in the ear," as comparing this manner of speech with that boldness of speaking wherewith He was afterwards to inspire them. Preach, He saith, not in one nor two nor three cities, but throughout the whole world: go over the earth and the sea, the land that is dwelt in and the land that is not dwelt in; speak all things with great boldness to kings and to peoples, to philosophers and to rhetoricians; therefore without any subtlety, but with all freedom, He saith, "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops."

In Lent the Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day, but in Paschal-time the following (for the Holy Martyrs.)

Ninth Lesson.

VALERIAN was a Roman, of a family as noble as that of the blessed maiden Cecily, to whom he was contracted in marriage, in the reign of the Emperor Alexander Severus. At her persuasion he and his brother Tiburtius were baptized by the holy Pope Urban.[1] When it came to the knowledge of Almachius, the Prefect of the city, that they were become Christians, had given their substance to the poor, and were burying the bodies of the faithful, he sent for them and strongly rebuked them; but as they constantly confessed that Christ is God, and that the gods of the heathen are but vain images of devils, he commanded them to be beaten with rods. But, forasmuch as no blows could force them to worship the image of Jupiter, but they seemed rather to wax strong in witnessing to the truth of the faith that was in them, they were beheaded at the fourth mile-stone from the city. One of the clerks of the Prefect, named Maximus, who had led them out to die, was so moved at the sight of their courage that he himself, with many other servants of the Prefect, owned to being a Christian: they were sentenced to be scourged to death with whips loaded with lead, under the which torment, in a little while, all these, who had once been the devil's ministers, passed away as martyrs of Christ the Lord.

At Lauds, in Lent, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day, and then, in any case, of the Holy Martyrs, which in Paschal-time is taken from First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the noble ladies Basilissa and Anastasia, disciples of the Apostles. Forasmuch as they stood firm in the faith under the Emperor Nero, their tongues and feet were cut off, and they gained the crown of martyrdom by being slain with the sword.

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Maro, Eutyches, and Victorinus. They were first exiled to the island of Ponza, along with the blessed Flavia Domitilla, for confessing Christ, but were afterwards liberated in the reign of the Emperor Nerva. They converted many to the faith, and were at length put to death with divers torments by order of the Judge Valerian, in the persecution under the Emperor Trajan.

In Persia, under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyrs Maximus and Olympias. They were first hided with cudgels and scourges loaded with lead, and at length their heads were beaten with the cudgels until they gave up the ghost.

[1] Apparently an anachronism. See De Rossi in the Bolletino Archæologico, and Dom. Guéranger's "Ste Cécile."

At Fiorentino, in Campania, the holy martyr Eutychius, [at the end of the first century, possibly with some companions.]

At Myra, in Lycia, holy Crescens, who achieved martyrdom by fire.

Likewise the holy martyrs Theodore, [a Priest,] and Pausilippus, who suffered under the Emperor Hadrian, [at Heracleia, on the Sea of Marmora.]

At Second Vespers in Lent, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

APRIL 15.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 1783,] the holy Confessor Benedict Joseph Labre, illustrious for his contempt of himself, and his absolute voluntary poverty.

At Corinth, the holy martyrs Callistus and Charisius, and seven others, who were all drowned in the sea, [third century.]

At Saragossa, in Spain, the eighteen holy martyrs, Optatus, Lupercus, Successus, Martial, Urban, Julia, Quintilian, Publius, Fronto, Felix, Caecilian, Eventius, Primitivus, Apodemius, and four others who were all named Saturninus: all these were tormented and slain at one time under Dacian, President of Spain, [about the year 304.] Prudentius has celebrated their illustrious martyrdom in poetry.

Likewise at Saragossa, the holy Virgin and martyr Encratis, who, after her body had been mangled, her breasts cut off, and her liver torn out, still survived, and was kept shut up in prison until her body mortified, [in the year 303 or 304.]

In the same city, the holy martyrs Caius and Crementius, who having confessed Christ for the second time, remained firm in His faith, and drank the cup of His testimony, [after the year 303.]

There likewise, [in the sixth century,] the holy martyr Lambert.

At Palencia, holy Turibius, Bishop of Astorga, who with the help of holy Pope Leo rooted the Priscillianist heresy completely out of Spain, and fell asleep in peace, famous for miracles, [in the year 460.]

At Braga, in Portugal, [in the year 665,] holy Fructuosus, Bishop of that see.

On the same day, holy Paternus, Bishop of Avranche, [in the year 565.]

At Valenciennes, in Belgium, the holy Confessor Drogo, [in the year 1189.]

At Sienna, in Tuscany, blessed Joachim, of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, [in the year 1305.]

APRIL 16.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Stephen [Harding, third Abbat of Cîteaux, in Gaul,] who was the first to dwell in the Cistercian desert, and joyfully welcomed holy Bernard and his companions when they came to him. [He died in the year 1134.]

Upon the same 17th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Pope Anicete [in the year 175], who received the palm of martyrdom in the persecution under Marcus Aurelius Antoninus and Lucius Verus.

In Africa, the blessed martyr Mappalicus, who, [in the year 250,] was crowned, along with divers other martyrs, as it is written by holy Cyprian in his epistle to the Martyrs and Confessors.

Likewise in Africa, the holy martyrs Fortunatus and Marcian.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Peter the Deacon and Hermogenes his servant.

At Cordova, the holy martyrs Elias the Priest, and the monks Paul and Isidore, [in the year 856.]

At Vienne, [in the year 540,] holy Pantagathus, Bishop [of that see. He sat for five years and is reckoned the twentieth Bishop of the see. He was present at the Third Council of Orleans. He had been consul.]

At Tortona, the holy Confessor Innocent, Bishop [of that see, in the year 351.]

In the monastery of Chaise-Dieu, in the Diocese of Clermont, the holy Confessor Robert, the founder and first Abbat of that monastery, [in the year 1067.]

APRIL 17.

St Stephen Harding, Abbat and Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621), except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, by the gift of Whose Grace the blessed Abbat Stephen left all things, in order that he might be perfect, grant unto all them who enter upon the path of perfection according to the Gospel, that they may neither look behind them nor linger by the way, but may run without stumbling to Thee-ward, and may lay hold upon that eternal life whereunto they have been called. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made, in Lent, of the Week-day, and then in any case of St Anicete, Pope and Martyr, from the Common Office, (p. 576, or 594), with the Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c." (p. 580, or 599.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Ecclus. xxxi. &c., (p. 627).

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

STEPHEN HARDING was of noble English birth, and took the monastic habit as a young man in the monastery of Sherbourne. For the purpose of study he went first to Scotland and afterwards to Paris. After giving some attention to profane learning and deeply studying sacred letters he made a pilgrimage to Rome, and on his return thence into France he was drawn to join the blessed Fathers Robert and Alberic in the new hermitage (?) of Molesne. There he was called to share their charge, and in his grief at the decay of discipline in Molesne he bethought him to return to Werwic (?).

Fifth Lesson.

FROM Werwic (?) he was recalled by obedience to Molesne, and there wrought so effectually that when the question of reformation was started he was among the first who toiled with the utmost fervour to establish a new monastery at Citeaux. With the approbation of Hew, Bishop of Lyons and Legate of the Apostolic See, Stephen and his companions began the new monastery, and where he first became Prior under Alberic, and after his death Abbat. He was so devoted to the regular monastic observance that he kept the courts of princes at a distance from his monastery. And he was such a lover of poverty that he left to those who came after him the rule of plainness even in the church furniture.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN he was afflicted at the death of his sons without any seeming heirs, he had the joy of welcoming holy Bernard and his companions. He foretold the wondrous fruitfulness of the new Order and marvelled at its progress. Seeing his people multiplied around him, he shaped with the same laws and rules many monasteries sprung from Citeaux, the which monasteries the Supreme Pontiffs afterward confirmed and highly praised. He was most devout to the Virgin Mother of God, and placed the new colony under her patronage. He resigned his office of ruler when he was broken down with old age and hard work, and passed away to be ever with the Lord, full of good works and lowliness of spirit, upon the 28th day of March in the year 1134. The Abbats of the neighbourhood buried his body beside that of his predecessor Alberic. In the Roman Martyrology he is mentioned upon the 17th day of April, which is that of his canonization.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 629), the Ninth is read along with the Eighth, and the Ninth Lesson is in Lent the Homily of the Week-day, and out of Lent.

Ninth Lesson (of St Anicete).

THIS Anicete was a Syrian who ruled the Church in the time of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus. It was his ordinance which forbade the clergy to grow long hair. He held five December ordinations wherein he ordained seventeen Priests, four Deacons, and nine Bishops for divers sees. He lived as Pope eight years, eight months, and twenty-four days. He bore witness to his faith in Christ even unto blood, and, being crowned on the seventeenth day of April, [in the year of salvation 173,] was buried upon the Appian Way in the Cemetery which has since been called that of St Calixtus.

At Lauds, in Lent, a Commemoration is made of the Week-day, and in any case of St Anicete from the Common Office, (p. 580, or 599.)

Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 580, or 599).

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, under the Emperor Commodus and the Prefect Perennius, the blessed Senator Apollonius. A slave informed upon him as being a Christian, and he was commanded to give an account of his faith. In order to do this he wrote an admirable treatise, which he read in the Senate; but the Senate, nevertheless, ordered him to be beheaded for Christ's sake.

At Messina, the holy martyrs Eleutherius, Bishop of Illyrium, and Anthia his mother. He was famous for the holiness of his life, and for his power of working miracles. Under the Emperor Hadrian he was tortured upon a heated iron-bed, a grating, and a vessel filled with boiling oil, pitch, and rosin. These he overcame, and was thrown to the lions; but by them he was left unhurt, and in the end his throat was cut along with that of his mother.

Likewise at Messina, the holy Prefect Corebus, who was converted to the faith by holy Eleutherius, and was slain with the sword.

At Brescia, the holy martyr Calocerus, who was converted to Christ by holy Faustinus and Jovita, and under the aforesaid Emperor Hadrian by his testimony finished a glorious contention.

At Cordova, the holy martyr Perfectus the Priest, who was killed by the Moors for holding forth against the Mahomedan religion. [The place of his death, which was in the year 850, is still called the Field of Truth.]

At Milan, holy Cardinal Galdin, Bishop of that see, who gave up his soul to God on finishing a discourse against heretics, [in the year 1176. He was a Cardinal Archbishop and a Legate of the Holy See.]

At Monte Senario, in Tuscany, [in the thirteenth century,] the blessed Confessor Amadeo, one of the seven founders of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, whose feast we keep upon the 13th day of February. He was eminent for his burning love toward God.

At Second Vespers in Lent a Commemoration is made of the Week-day.

APRIL 18.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Canterbury, in England, the holy martyr Ælphege, Bishop of that see. [He had been Bishop of Winchester. He died in the year 1012.]

At Corinth, the holy martyr Timon, one of the seven first Deacons. He first dwelt as a teacher at Berea, and thence came, spreading the word of God as far as Corinth; there he is said to have been cast into the fire by the Jews and Greeks, but remained unharmed, and was crucified. [He was successively Bishop of Tyre and of Bostra. He preached in Berea, Corinth, the island of Cyprus—where he prepared the way for St Barnabas, Phœnicia, and Arabia.]

At Malathia, in Armenia, the holy martyrs Hermogenes, Caius, Expeditus, Aristonicus, Rufus, and Galata, who were all crowned upon one and the same day.

At Cancavella, in Catalonia, the holy martyr Vincent, [in the year 291.]

On the same day, [in the second century,] the holy martyrs Socrates and Denis, who were run through with lances.

At Jerusalem, the holy martyr Paphnutius.

At Antioch, in Pisidia, [in the ninth century,] holy George, Bishop of that see, who died in exile for the honouring of holy images.

At Rome, the holy Pope, Leo IX., [from the year 1049 till 1054,] illustrious for his grace and the fame of his miracles. [He is the same as St Bruno, 40th Bishop of Toul.]

In the monastery of Lobbes, holy Bishop Ursmar, [Abbat of Lobbes, in the years 644-713.]

At Florence, [in the year 396,] the holy Confessor Crescentius, disciple of the blessed Zenobius, Bishop [of that see. Among the early Bishops of the church of Florence, St Zenobius, the 5th of that see, is celebrated. He was elected about the year 376 and ministered till the year 407. He buried his sub-deacon St Crescent with his own hands. St Crescent is mentioned by St Ambrose.]

APRIL 19.

St Aelphege, Archbishop of Canterbury, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 576, or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who upon blessed Ælphege, the earnest Confessor of Thy Name, hast conferred the honour of the high Priesthood, and the palm of martyrdom, mercifully grant that his prayers for us may so avail with Thee, that we may be able to rejoice with him in everlasting joy in Thy presence.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ÆLPHEGE was born in a noble position, but as a young man he left all things for the love of Christ, and gave himself up to the service of God in the monastery of Deershurst, in the diocese of Worcester; thence in search of greater perfection he betook himself to Bath, where he shut himself up in a narrow cell, and led the life of a hermit in great hardness. The fame of his graces spread abroad from his hiding-place, and many gathered around him desiring to be ruled by him. For them he founded the monastery of Bath, and himself administered it for some years, with wondrous godliness and wisdom. After the death of blessed Ethelwald, Bishop of Winchester, there was a dissension among the clergy and monks as to whom they should choose in his place. Then holy Dunstan, Archbishop of Canterbury, being warned of God, drew Ælphege out of his monastery and set him over the church of Winchester. In this bishopric he was a bright example of all graces, but most especially of daily mortification, love of penance, and singular kindness toward the poor.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Alfric, Archbishop of Canterbury, Ælphege, at the desire of all men, was set in his place. When he was seated on the archiepiscopal throne he held synods, wherein he strove with all his might to preserve in their full force both Christian godliness and church discipline, which were in danger through the woeful state of the times; he never ceased to toil to convert sinners from the error of their ways, and offered up for them every day prayers and tears and the Victim of atonement. At that time the English people were in sore straits because of the often-invading and plundering by the Danes, and the holy Archbishop, in the wideness of his love, assuaged all the sorrows of all. Moreover, also, he preached Christ to the enemy themselves, and brought many of them to the Christian faith.

Sixth Lesson.

PRESENTLY the Danish army beleaguered Canterbury, and threatened the citizens with the last extremities. Ælphege was advised by his friends to escape from the city, but he would not desert his flock in the hour of danger. The city was taken and set on fire, and the Danes gave themselves up to a frenzy of bloodshed. The Archbishop threw himself amidst the swords of these raging savages and adjured them to stay from the slaughter of the innocent. They seized him, and when they had inflicted upon him many outrages and blows, had burnt his Cathedral church before his face, and had killed nine out of ten of the monks and citizens, they took him away with them, and kept him shut up for seven months in a foul prison. A plague broke out in the Danish army, and two thousand in a short while died thereof; the rest, in the fear of death, felt that they had drawn down upon them the anger of God, and betook themselves to Ælphege, who repaid them good for evil by healing the sick through blessed bread. They then promised him his freedom at the price of a vast sum of money which he should collect out of the endowments of the Church and of the poor. This condition the man of God refused, and with noble and unshaken soul offered them, instead of earthly gold, the gold of wisdom in the knowledge of the only true God and of JESUS Christ, Whom He had sent. The savages ran upon him, cast him to the ground, and dealt him many wounds. He was praying for their salvation with his last words, and commending his own flock to the Chief Shepherd, when his head was split open with an axe. He was thus murdered in the year 1012, upon the 19th day of April, upon the which day mention is made of him in the Roman Martyrology. God was pleased to mark his death by many and great wonders, whereby the Danes were moved to allow the people of London to bury his body in solemn state in the church of St Paul. Eleven years afterwards, in the time of King Canute, his body was found to be still incorrupt, and was taken to the church of the Saviour at Canterbury.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 578.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Sulpitius and Servilian. They were converted to the faith of Christ by the preaching and miracles of the blessed Virgin Domitilla, and were put to death by Anian, Prefect of the city, in the persecution under the Emperor Trajan, for refusing to offer sacrifice to idols.

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Victor, Zoticus, Zeno, Acindinus, Cæsareus, Severian, Chrysophor, Theonas, and Antonine, who were variously tried under the Emperor Diocletian, and attained to martyrdom, [most likely in Nicomedia.]

At Tomi, in Scythia, holy Theotimus, [Bishop of that see, about the year 409,] whose holiness and miracles were so striking that he was honoured even by the unbelieving savages.

At Embrun, in Gaul, holy Marcellinus, the first Bishop of that city, who came from Africa in consequence of a warning from God, along with his holy companions Vincent and Domninus, and by his word and the wondrous signs, for which he is famous even unto this day, brought to believe in Christ a great number of the dwellers on the Seaward Alps, [in the year 374.]

At Auxerre, [in the fifth century,] the holy Priest Marcian.

On the same day, the holy Confessor Theodore, nicknamed "Hairy" on account of the rough sackcloth garment which he wore. He is famous for many mighty works, more especially against evil spirits; and from his body there floweth an ointment whereby the sick are healed. [He was of a noble family of Constantinople. His date is not known exactly, but it was certainly after the persecution of Diocletian. He lived in a desert in Thrace, which is called after him, the Hairy Desert.]

At Monte Pulciano, [in the year 1317,] the holy Virgin Agnes, of the Order of St Dominic, famous for miracles.

APRIL 20.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of April, were born into the better life—

At Canterbury, in England, holy Anselm, Archbishop of that see, illustrious for his holiness and teaching, [in the year 1109].

In Persia, [in the year 345,] the holy martyr Simeon, Bishop of Seleucia and Ctesiphon. He was arrested by order of Sapor, King of the Persians, loaded with chains, and brought before the iniquitous judgment-seat. He refused to worship the sun, and with a free and unfaltering voice bore witness for Christ JESUS. He suffered a long while in prison along with a hundred others, whereof some were bishops, some priests, and others clergy of divers orders. He recalled to repentance Usthazanes, the king's tutor, who had fallen away from the faith, but who now bravely underwent martyrdom. On the day after, which was the anniversary of the Lord's Sufferings, all the others were slain with the sword before the eyes of Simeon, who earnestly exhorted every one of them, and at the last was himself also beheaded. There suffered, moreover, along with him his eminent Priests Abdechalas and Ananias; also Pusicius, the foreman of the king's workmen, who encouraged Ananias when he was wavering, and who was put to a very cruel death by having his tongue cut out through a hole in his neck; and after him was put to death his daughter, who was an hallowed virgin.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs, the Priest Arator, Fortunatus, Felix, Silvius, and Vitalis, who fell asleep in prison.

Also, the holy martyrs Apollo, Isacius, and Crotates, who suffered under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Antioch, [after the year 686,] the holy Bishop of that city, Anastasius of Sinai.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ANSELM was born of noble and Catholic parents, named Gundulph and Hermenberga, at Aosta, in Piedmont, [about the year of our Lord 1033.] From his tenderest years his diligence in study, and his aspirations to a more perfect state of life, gave no indistinct foreshadowing of the holiness and learning to which he afterwards attained. The heat of youth drew him for a while into the snares of the world, but he soon returned to his first courses, and, forsaking his country and his goods, betook himself [in 1060] to the monastery of Bec, under the rule of St Benedict. There he made his profession as a monk, and under the rigid discipline of Herluin, the Abbat, and the learned instruction of the profound Lanfranc, with great zeal of spirit and eager obedience to the Rule, he made such progress in learning and godliness, that he shone before all others as an ensample of holiness of life, and power of doctrine.

Fifth Lesson.

MORTIFICATION and purity were his marked characteristics, and by constant fasting all taste for food seemed to have died in him. He spent the day in the monastic work, in teaching, and in answering hard questions upon religion, and he took away from sleep during what remained to him of the night, that he might refresh his soul by thoughts of God, wherein he was alway comforted by an unceasing flow of tears. When he was chosen Prior of the monastery, he so won over, by his charity, lowliness, and wisdom, some brethren who looked ill upon him, that from enviers, as he had found them, he turned them into lovers of God and of himself likewise, with exceeding gain to the strictness of observance in that Abbey. After the death of the Abbat, [in 1078,] Anselm, though against his own will, was chosen to succeed him. In this high place the light of his learning and holiness so shone all round about, that he was reverenced not only by Kings and Bishops, but was taken up by the holy Pope Gregory VII., who, amid the great persecutions which were then trying him, wrote with words of great love to Anselm to recommend himself and the Catholic Church to his prayers.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Lanfranc, Archbishop of Canterbury, [in 1089,] Anselm, whose teacher Lanfranc had formerly been, was driven, by William II., King of England, supported by the entreaties of the clergy and people, though sorely against his own wishes to take upon him the government of that Church. Raised to that See [upon the 4th day of December, in the year 1093,] he straightway set himself to reform the corrupt manners of the people, and, first by his word and example, and then by his writings and the Councils which he held, succeeded in restoring the ancient godliness and discipline of the Church. But when the aforesaid King William tried by force and threats to seize on the rights of the Church, Anselm withstood him as beseemed a Priest, and after that he had suffered the plundering of all his goods and been sent into banishment, he betook himself to Rome to Urban II. There he was received with great worship, and won high praise for that in the Council of Bari, [in 1098,] he maintained by countless proofs from Scripture and the holy Fathers, against the error of the Greeks, that the Holy Ghost proceedeth from the Son also. When William lived no more, his brother Henry I., King of England, [in the year 1100,] called back Anselm thither, and there he fell asleep in the Lord, [upon the 21st day of April, 1109.] His is a name illustrious not for miracles only, nor for holiness, (and indeed he had a wondrous love for his Lord Who had suffered for him, and for the blessed Maiden Mother of the Same our Lord,) but also for the deep learning which he used for the defence of the Christian Religion and the good of souls. That wonderful knowledge of theology which he had, and which is shown in all the books which he wrote, seemeth to have been given him from heaven for the teaching of all writers on the same subject, who have used what is called the Scholastic method.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 631.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Appian Way the holy martyr Soter, Pope [in the years 162-170.]

At Rome likewise, the holy martyr Caius, Pope [in the years 283-295,] who was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Smyrna, holy Apelles and Lucius, who were among the earliest disciples of Christ. [Apelles is said by the Greeks to have ruled the Church of Smyrna, and Lucius that of Laodicea. They are mentioned by St Paul in the Epistle to the Romans, ch. xvi.]

Upon the same day very many holy martyrs, who were slain with the sword for Christ's Name's Sake by order of King Sapor in divers places throughout the whole kingdom of Persia, in the year following the death of Simeon, and like him upon the day upon which is made the memorial of the Passion of the Lord. In this contending for the faith [from the year 341 till 386,] there suffered the eunuch Azades, who was a favourite of the king; Milles, Bishop [of a town in Persia,] who was illustrious for his holiness and for the glory of his miracles; Acepsimas, Bishop [of Honite, in Syria,] along with James his Priest; the Priests Aithalas, [Deacon of Bathnukadra,] and Joseph, [Priest of Bethcatuba,] the Deacons Azadanes and Abd-Jesus, and very many others of the clergy; likewise also the Bishops Mareas and Bicor, along with twenty other bishops, and nearly two hundred and fifty of the clergy; likewise also very many monks, and hallowed virgins, among whom was Tarbula, the sister of holy Simeon, along with her waiting-woman, who were most cruelly slain by being bound to beams and cut through with a saw.

Also in Persia, [in the year 251,] the holy martyrs, the Priests Parmenius, Helimenas, and Chrysotelus, and the Deacons Luke and Mucius, whose triumph is recorded in the history of the sufferings of the holy martyrs Abdon and Sennen.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Leonides, who suffered under the Emperor Severus.

At Lyons, [in the year 177,] holy martyr Epipodius, who was arrested along with his colleague Alexander, in the persecution under the Emperor Antoninus Verus, and after suffering most grievous torments was beheaded.

At Sens, [in the year 541,] the holy Confessor Leo, Bishop of that see.

At Anastasiopolis, [in Galatia, in the year 613,] holy Theodore, Bishop [of that see,] famous for miracles.

At Second Vespers "O right excellent, &c.," and a Commemoration is made of the following. (All from the Common.)

Fourth Lesson.

SOTER, a countryman of Fondi in Campania, succeeded the holy martyr Anicete, [in the year 173.] It was he who ordained that nuns should not touch the sacred vessels and linen of the Altar, nor serve with the incense in the Church. He ordained likewise, that on the anniversary of the Lord's Supper, every one should receive the Body of Christ, except those who were forbidden to do so on account of grievous sin. He sat as Pope three years, eleven months, and twenty-eight days. He ordained in the month of December eighteen Priests, nine Deacons, and eleven Bishops for divers places. He was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, [in 177,] and was buried after the manner of them that had gone before him, in the Cemetery, which was afterwards called that of St Calixtus.

Fifth Lesson.

CAIUS was a Dalmatian and a kinsman of the Emperor Diocletian, [and succeeded holy Eutychian in the year 283.] It was he who ordained that the following should be the order of degrees in the Church through which all should pass before they be made Bishop: First, Doorkeeper; second, Reader; third, Exorcist; fourth, Acolyte; fifth, Subdeacon; sixth, Deacon; seventh, Priest. Caius fled from the cruelties practised by Diocletian against the Christians, and lay hid for a while in a cave, but after eight years he and his brother Gabinus won the crown of martyrdom, [upon the 21st day of April, in the year 296.] At that time he had sat in the chair of Peter twelve years, four months, and five days, and had ordained in the month of December twenty-five Priests, eight Deacons, and five Bishops. He was buried in the Cemetery of Calixtus upon the twenty-second day of April. It was Urban VIII. who renewed the memorial of him in the city, rebuilt his Church, which had been in ruins, and distinguished it by making it one of those whence the Cardinals take their titles, and of those which are called "Stations," and enriching it with the reliques of the Saint.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of April, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr George, whose illustrious martyrdom, [in the year 303,] the church of God honours among the crowns of her martyrs.

At Valence, in Gaul, the holy martyrs the Priest Felix and the Deacons Fortunatus and Achilleus. They had been sent forth to preach the Word of God by blessed Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, and had brought a great part of the city of Valence to believe in Christ, when they were cast into prison by Cornelius the general. They were long beaten, their legs were broken, they were tied to the outside of turning wheels, hung in smoke upon the rack, and at length slain with the sword, [in the year 212.]

In Prussia, [in the year 997,] the holy martyr Adalbert, Bishop of Prague, who preached the Gospel to the Poles and Hungarians.

At Milan, [in the year 423,] the holy Confessor Marolus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Toul, in Gaul, holy Gerard, Bishop of that city, [in the year 994.]

Fourth Lesson.

THE martyr George beareth among the Easterns the title of [the holy and glorious] Archmartyr,[1] [George the Triumphant.] He suffered a glorious death, for Christ's sake, in the persecution under Diocletian. When peace was given to the Church soon after, under Constantine, the memory of the martyr began to be celebrated, and churches were built under his invocation at Lydda in Palestine and at Constantinople. For thenceforth an extraordinary enthusiasm with regard to him grew up among the faithful, first in all parts of the East, and afterwards in the West. Of old time, when Christian armies had been about to fight, they have been used to call as patrons upon holy George, Maurice, and Sebastian. There had been already special honour paid in England to the holy martyr George, and the supreme Pontiff Benedict XIV. declared him the protector of the whole kingdom.

---

[1] "Magni nomine commendatus." This is inaccurate, because imperfect. The title of Megalomartyr—i.e., Great-martyr or Archmartyr—is given by the Orientals to some others as well as to George. The complete liturgical title used in the Greek service books is as given above, and the distinctive personal epithet is "tropæophoros," here rendered triumphant. This saint is one of the most popular in Christendom, but who he was, and indeed everything about him, except the fact of martyrdom, is enveloped in the greatest obscurity. The labours of the Bollandists tend to show that he was a soldier by profession, and that he is a martyr (otherwise anonymous) who was tortured to death for pulling down the edict of Diocletian against Christianity, at Nicomedia, in A.D. 303. He seems, says Alban Butler, to have been arrested on Good Friday, (April 16,) and after having been tortured for eight days, to have received his crown on the Friday following, April 23. He was the first victim of Diocletian's persecution,

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 24th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Sevis, in Switzerland, the holy martyr Faithful of Sigmaringen, of the Order of Friars Minor Capuchins. He had been sent thither to preach the Catholic faith, but was murdered by the heretics, and so attained martyrdom, [in the year 1622,] and was numbered among the holy martyrs by the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIV.

At Rome, the holy martyr Saba, a commander of troops. He was accused of visiting the Christians in prison, and freely confessed Christ in the presence of the judge. He was scorched with torches, and thrust into a vessel of boiling pitch, whence he came forth unhurt, by the which marvel seventy men were turned to Christ, who all stood fast to their confession, and were slain with the sword, when after Saba himself was drowned in the river, and so gained the crown of his testimony, [in the year 272.]

At Lyons, in Gaul, the holy martyr Alexander. In the persecution under the Emperor Antoninus Verus he was imprisoned, and afterwards lashed to such an extent that his inner parts could be seen through holes between his ribs; then he was nailed to a cross, and gave up his blessed spirit. There suffered along with him thirty-and-four others, of whom mention is made upon other days.

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Eusebius, [said to have been converted by St George,] Neon, Leontius, Longinus, and four others, who were slain with the sword after grievous torments in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

In England, [in the year 624,] the holy Bishop Mellitus, who was sent into this country by holy Gregory, and converted to the faith the East Saxons and their King. [He was the first Bishop of London, and afterwards of Canterbury.]

At Elvira, in Spain, the holy Confessor Gregory, Bishop [of that see, about the end of the fourth century.]

At Brescia, holy Honorius, Bishop of that see, [in the year 586.]

In Scotland,[1] the holy Priest and monk Egbert. A man of marvellous lowliness and self-denial, [in the year 729,] whose feast we keep upon the 27th day of this present month of April.

At Rheims, the holy Virgins Bona and Doda, [the first Abbesses of St Peter's at Rheims, in the year 673.]

At Second Vespers, Verse and Answer and Antiphon at the Song oj the Blessed Virgin as at First Vespers.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst vouchsafe to enkindle in blessed Faithful the fire of Thy Seraphim,[2] and to glorify his toil to give men a true knowledge of Thee by the palm-branch of martyrdom and by great signs and wonders, be entreated, we beseech Thee, for his sake and by his prayers, and so establish us in the knowledge and love of Thee, that we also, like him, may be found "faithful" even unto death in serving of Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

SECOND NOCTURN.

FAITHFUL was born of the respectable family of Rey in the town of Sigmaringen in Swabia, [in the year of our Lord 1577.] From his childhood he was adorned with many bright gifts of nature and grace. Intellectually distinguished, and assisted by all the advantages of education, he took at Fribourg the degrees of Philosophy and of Civil and Canon Law, and it was while engaged in these studies, that he began to strive after the height of perfection in the school of Christ, to which end he earnestly trained himself in all the exercises of godliness. He ceased not to exhort to Christian godliness, both by his words and works, the noblemen who made him their companion, and who were drawn from the chief families of divers parts of Europe.[3] While on his travels, he was careful to mortify the lusts of the flesh by frequent austerities, and so to get the command of himself, that he was never seen under any circumstances to be moved to anger. He was a zealous champion of law and justice, and when he returned into Germany, he won a most distinguished name in his profession as an advocate. After a while, however, in view of the dangers which beset him at the Bar, he determined to enter on a path safer as regarded his eternal salvation, and, in obedience to an inward call from above, he sought admission into the Seraphic Order, among the Capuchin Friars Minors, [in the year 1612.]

[1] The Martyrology says in Hibernia.

[2] Probably a sort of play upon the name of the "Seraphic Order," often given to the Franciscans.

[3] He was a travelling tutor.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER he had obtained his holy wish, he showed himself even in his noviceship a singular despiser of the world and of himself, and still more so when with great spiritual joy he had made his solemn profession to the Lord. By his observance of the Rule, he became the wonder and the example of all. He gave himself chiefly to prayer and sacred learning, but he excelled, by a remarkable grace, in the ministry of the Word, and thereby not only stirred up the Catholics to bring forth more fruit, but also drew misbelievers to the knowledge of the truth. He was set at the head of communities of Friars in divers places, and discharged the duty so laid upon him with great praise for prudence, justice, meekness, wisdom, and lowliness. He was animated by a vehement love of the strictest poverty, and cleansed the convent of whatever was not altogether needful. While he pursued himself with an healthy hatred, and most stern fastings, watchings, and scourgings, he showed to all others a love like the love of a mother for her sons. When a contagious fever made horrid ravages among the Austrian soldiers, he gave himself up with his whole soul to unwearied offices of tenderness toward the helpless sick. In allaying quarrels and relieving the temporal distress of his neighbour, he bore himself with such wisdom and zeal as to earn the name of "Father of his country."

Sixth Lesson.

HE tenderly and warmly loved the maiden Mother of God and her Rosary, and he besought God under the patronage of many of His holy servants, but especially under that of the same blessed Mother, to vouchsafe to let him offer his life and his blood together for the sake of the Catholic faith. This burning desire came upon him more and more, day by day, as he celebrated with great ardour of spirit the Holy Liturgy; and by the unexpected Providence of God it came to pass that this brave soldier of Christ was chosen President of the Missions which the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith had at that time just founded for the Grisons. He accepted this hard task with a willing and joyful heart, and discharged it with such zeal, that many heretics were turned to the orthodox faith, and great hope was engendered that the whole of that people would return to the peace of Christ and His Church. Faithful, who was gifted with the spirit of Prophecy, often foretold the great woes which afterwards came upon the Grisons, and that he himself would be murdered by the heretics. At last, on a certain 23rd of April, some of the heretics, who pretended to be converted, entreated him to come and preach the following day at the Church of a place which is called Sevis. He complied with the treacherous invitation, but, as he knew that plots were being laid against him, he had made himself ready beforehand for the last conflict. On the 24th day of April, in the year 1622, he went to Sevis, and began to preach, but his discourse was interrupted by a riot, and [on his way back,] he was [met by a party of Calvinists, and] brutally murdered. By this glorious death, which he suffered with a willing and cheerful heart, he offered to God in his own blood the first-fruits of martyrdom from the above-mentioned Congregation. God hath since glorified him by many signs and wonders, especially at Coire and Feldkirchen, where his reliques are kept with much popular veneration.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 25th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the blessed Evangelist Mark. He was the disciple and interpreter of the Apostle Peter. He wrote his Gospel at the prayer of the brethren at Rome. He took it with him and went to Egypt, where he was the first man who proclaimed Christ at Alexandria, and where he founded that Church. He was afterward arrested as a believer in Christ, bound with cords, and dragged over stones to his grievous suffering. Then he was remanded to prison, where he was comforted first by a visitation of angels and then by the Lord Himself appearing unto him, and was called unto the kingdom of heaven in the 8th year of Nero, [in the year 68.]

At Rome, the Greater Litanies, [instituted in sixth century by Pope St Gregory I., The Great,] take place at St Peter's Church.

Upon the same day, were likewise born into the better life—

At Syracuse, the holy martyrs Evodius, Hermogenes, and Kallistas. [They were brothers and sister.]

At Antioch, [in the year 479,] the holy martyr Stephen, Patriarch of that see, who suffered many things at the hands of the heretics who assailed the Council of Chalcedon, and was cast into the river Orontes, in the time of the Emperor Zeno.

There likewise, [in the second century,] the holy Deacons Philo and Agathopodes.

At Alexandria, holy Anian, Pope of that see. He was the disciple of blessed Mark, and held that Papacy next after him, and fell asleep in the Lord, famous for his graces, [about the year 86.]

At Lobes, [in the year 737,] the holy Confessor Ermin, Bishop of that see.

Vespers are of the following.

APRIL 25.

St Mark, Evangelist.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Evangelists in Paschal-time, (p. 576,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst exalt Thy blessed Evangelist Mark, by giving him grace to preach Thine

Evangel, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, ever to follow more and more what he teacheth, and ever to be shielded from all evil by his prayers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Faithful. From the Common, with Prayer from his Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ezekiel i. 1, (p. 592.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Church Writers, composed by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

MARK was the disciple and interpreter of Peter, and it was from what he had heard Peter tell, that, at the request of the brethren at Rome, he wrote the shortest of the Gospels. When Peter had heard it, he approved it, and gave it to the Church to be read, by his authority. Mark betook himself to Egypt, with the Gospel which he had compiled, and was the first man who preached Christ at Alexandria. There he founded a Church with such teaching and austerity of life, that all who followed Christ were constrained to imitate him.

Fifth Lesson.

LAST of all, Philo, that most learned Jew, observing that the first Church of Alexandria still kept the law of Moses, wrote a book concerning their manners, as if in praise of his own nation, wherein he saith that under the teaching of Mark, the Christians of Alexandria had all things in common, just as Luke telleth us was the case with all them that believed at Jerusalem. Mark died in the eighth year of Nero, and was buried at Alexandria. Anianus succeeded him.

Sixth Lesson, from St Gregory on Ezekiel, (p. 593.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory (p. 593.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the blessed Pope Cletus. He was the second who ruled the Church after the Apostle Peter, and was crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Domitian.

There also the holy martyr Pope Marcellinus, who was beheaded for Christ's faith's sake, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, along with Claudius, Cyrinus, and Antonine, at the time when the persecution was so great that seventeen thousand Christians were crowned with martyrdom within the space of one month.

At Amasea, in Pontus, [about the year 322,] the holy martyr Basil, Bishop of that see, who gained an illustrious martyrdom under the Emperor Licinius. His body was cast into the sea, but was found by Elpidiphorus on the warning of an angel, and was honourably buried.

At Braga, in Portugal, [in the first century,] the holy martyr Peter, first Bishop of that city.

At Vienne, the holy Confessor Clarence, Bishop of that see, [about the year 620.]

At Verona, holy Lucidius, Bishop of that see.

In the monastery of Centule, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor, the Priest Requier.

At Troyes, the holy virgin Exuperantia, [in the year 380.]

On this day there is a Procession followed by a special Mass, in memory of the like ceremony, whereby in the time of St Gregory, the anger of God was appeased, and a plague stayed in Rome. All persons bound to recite the Office and who are not present at the Procession, are bound to recite the Litany, after Lauds. This Procession and Litany is not transferred with the Feast of St Mark, unless April 25th were Easter Sunday, and then only to Tuesday.

In Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from their Lauds.

Note. If any of the following Feasts fall on Rogation Monday, or on the Eve of the Ascension, the Lessons of the First Nocturn are those from Scripture which are given in the Common Offices, unless proper Lessons are assigned, or the First Epistle of St Peter is to be begun. In such case, also, the third part of the Homily for the Feast is omitted or read as one with the second, and the Ninth Lesson is either the first part or the whole of the Homily for the Week-day, and the said Week-day is Commemorated at Vespers and Lauds. Note also that a Feast falling on those three days does not abolish the Litanies.

APRIL 26.

The Holy Martyrs, Popes Cletus and Marcellinus.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 576, or 602,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. On Rogation Monday from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603,) unless from 1 Peter i. 1, (see above.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CLETUS was a Roman, the son of Æmilian, of the Fifth Region of the city, and the street called Noble. He ruled the Church in the time of the Emperors Vespasian and Titus. In accordance with the precept of the Prince of the Apostles he ordained twenty-five Priests for the city. He was the first Pope who made use in his letters of the phrase "Health and Apostolic Benediction." When he had ruled the Church for twelve years, seven months, and two days, and brought it into an excellent state of order, in the reign of the Emperor Domitian, and the second persecution since the time of Nero, he was crowned with martyrdom, and buried on the Vatican mount, hard by the body of blessed Peter.

Fifth Lesson.

MARCELLINUS was a Roman; he ruled the Church from the year 296 to the year 304, during the savage persecution which was ordered by the Emperor Diocletian. He suffered through the false severity of those who blamed him as being too indulgent toward them who had fallen into idolatry, and for this reason also hath been slandered to the effect that he himself burnt incense to idols; but this blessed Pope, on account of his confession of the faith, was put to death along with three other Christians, whose names are Claudius, Cyrinus, and Antoninus. At the command of the Emperor their bodies were cast out unburied, and lay so for thirty-six days. At the end of that time St Peter appeared in a dream to Blessed Marcellus, and in obedience to his command the said Marcellus went with certain Priests and Deacons, singing hymns, and carrying lights, and buried these four bodies honourably in the Cemetery of Priscilla upon the Salarian Way. Marcellinus ruled the Church for seven years, eleven months, and twenty-three days. During this time he held two Advent ordinations, and ordained at them four Priests, and five Bishops for divers Sees.

Sixth Lesson.

From St Ambrose, &c., (p. 577, Fourth Lesson).

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from John xv. 5, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 582.)

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD, we beseech Thee that the precious testifying of Thy blessed Martyrs and Bishops Cletus and Marcellinus may profit us, and their godly prayers protect us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St George from his Office.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Priest and monk Egbert, a man of marvellous lowliness and self-denial, of whom mention has been made upon the 24th day of this present month of April.

Upon the same 27th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Anthimus, Bishop of that see, who was beheaded for confessing Christ, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and so gained the glory of martyrdom. He was followed by almost all his flock, whereof by command of the judge some were slain with the sword, some burnt in fire, and some embarked upon ships and drowned in the sea.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, the holy martyrs Castor and Stephen. [St Stephen was perhaps a Bishop.]

At Rome, blessed Pope Anastasius [I., in the year 401,] a man very rich in poverty and apostolic care, of whom St Jerome writeth that Rome deserved not long to have him, lest the head of the world should be cut off under such a Bishop, since no long while after his death Rome was taken and sacked by the Goths.

At Bologna, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Tertullian, Bishop of that see.

At Brescia, [in the fifth century,] holy Theophilus, Bishop of that see.

At Constantinople, the holy Abbat John, [of the monastery of Cathares Hegumenos,] who contended much for the honouring of holy images under the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, [in the year 813, under Leo the Armenian. Leo the Isaurian reigned from 717-741.]

At Taragona, the blessed Peter Armengal, of the Order of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Ransom for the Redemption of Captives. He suffered many things for the redemption of the faithful in Africa, and at length died a blessed death in the convent of St Mary-of-the-Meadows, [in the year 1304.]

At Lucca, in Italy, [in the year 1278,] the blessed Virgin Zita, very famous for her graces and miracles.

Vespers of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

APRIL 27.

St Egbert, Confessor.

Semi-Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Whose Spirit didst make Thy blessed servant Egbert to thirst for the salvation of his neighbour, and to send forth preachers for the work of the Gospel, turn unto Thyself, we beseech Thee, for his sake, the heart of Thy people, and enkindle in them the fire of the same Thy Spirit, that they may be steadfast in faith and faithful in work. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth, in the unity of the same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Egbert, begin with the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of SS. Cletus and Marcellinus from the Common Office with their own Prayer, and then of the Octave of St George from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture, according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

EGBERT was born in England of a noble family. He was a very intelligent lad, who inspired bright hopes, and for this reason, like many others of his countrymen, he went to Ireland, where he learned sacred letters and the monastic discipline in the monastery of Rath-maoilsidhe. It came to pass that a pestilence carried off many of his companions, and he himself fell sick thereof. He turned then to God with all his heart and besought Him for a longer life, that he might correct his slothfulness thitherto and might exercise himself more abundantly in good works, and he added thereto that he would live always as a stranger and a pilgrim outside his own country, and would give himself more to prayer and fasting. God heard his prayer, and he received the holy order of the priesthood, and adorned it by a fit manner of living, by lowliness and gentleness, by self-restraint and other virtues, by constant readiness to teach, and by goodness in distributing those things which were given to himself by rich men, so that he became a burning and shining light before the eyes of all.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER passing many years adorned with all graces, he conceived in his heart to be profitable to many, and to proclaim the Word of God to the Germans that believed not, and who are a race from whom the English spring; or, if he could not succeed in this, to go to Rome to visit the shrines of the Apostles and martyrs. But after he had been warned by God the second time, and after he had tried to take the journey and had been forced to return home, he was bidden to go to the monasteries of Columba, and to strengthen them in the teaching and tradition of the Apostles. He returned, therefore, to the place of his accustomed pilgrimage, and in silence awaited the will of the Lord. However, when he saw that God hindered him that he should not preach the Gospel unto the Gentiles, he strove to send forth holy men who should do the work of Apostles in his stead; wherefore in the year of salvation 690 there went to Maestricht upon the Rhine, under his direction, twelve Apostolic men famous for their labours and learning, of the whom holy Wildebrod was the leader and standard-bearer.

Sixth Lesson.

THESE twelve men, burning with zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, toiled in Friesland and the part thereabout, and by the grace of God working with them brought them to believe in Christ. Now when the monks in the island of Iona and the monasteries subject thereto, did not yet observe the time of Easter and the shape of the tonsure according to the Canons, there came unto them the Priest Egbert, beloved of God, and reshaped all their manner of doing and living according to the Catholic tradition. He dwelt in that island for thirteen whole years. In the year of the Incarnation of the Lord 729, Easter Day was kept upon the 24th day of April, and upon that day Egbert said Mass and thereafter fell asleep in the Lord. Wonderful, writeth the Venerable Bede, was the provision of God's goodness, that upon that same day whereon the feast was first kept according to the Catholic rule, he passed out of this world unto Heaven, whence the brethren rejoiced not only because of a sure and Catholic knowledge regarding the time of Easter, but also because of the help of their father when he was gone hence to be ever with the Lord. In the Roman Martyrology Egbert is named among the Saints upon the 24th day of April.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.) At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St George.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Paul of the Cross, founder of the congregation called that of the Cross and Passion of our Lord JESUS Christ, and of whom mention is made upon the 18th day of October, upon the which day, [in the year 1775,] he fell asleep in the Lord.

Upon the same 28th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Ravenna, the holy martyr Vitalis, father of holy Gervase and Protase. He had removed the body of blessed Ursicinus and buried it with due respect; for the which cause he was arrested by Paulinus the consular, and when they had racked him, they cast him into a deep pit and buried him alive under earth and stones, and with that testimony he passed away to be with Christ, [in the year 171.]

At Milan, the holy martyr Valeria, wife of holy Vitalis.

At Atino, holy Mark, who was ordained Bishop of that see by the blessed Apostle Peter, and was the first that preached the Gospel to the Equicoli, [inhabitants of the Campania round Rome.] He received the crown of martyrdom under the President Maximus, in the persecution under the Emperor Domitian.

At Alexandria, the holy Virgin Theodora. She would not sacrifice to idols and was sent to a brothel; but one of the brethren, named Didymus, by the favour of God changed clothes with her, and so delivered her thence. Later on, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, they were beheaded together under Eustratius the President, and so were crowned together.

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Aphrodisius, [first Bishop of Beziers,] Caralippus, Agapius, and Eusebius, [in the year 65.]

In Hungary, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyr Pollio. [He was a Reader in the church of Cibales, in the country of Valentinian. Cibales was between the rivers Save and Drave, and is now in ruins. St Pollio suffered on the same day, though at a distance of some years, as his Bishop Eusebius.]

At Brusa, in Bithynia, the holy martyr Patrick, Bishop of [that see,] Acatius, Menander, and Polyænus, [third century.]

At Tarazona, in Spain, the holy Confessor Prudentius, Bishop [of that see, before the year 846.]

At Pentina, in the Abruzzi, [in the seventh century,] holy Pamphilus, Bishop of Valva, famous for his charity to the poor and gift of miracles. He is buried at Sulmona.

Vespers of the following.

APRIL 28.

St Paul of the Cross, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who didst gift Thine holy servant Paul with great love that he might preach the mystery of Thy cross, and hast been pleased that through him a new family should grow up in Thy Church, grant unto us at his prayers that upon earth we may so call Thy sufferings to mind as worthily to gain the fruit thereof in heaven, Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of St Egbert. Prayer from his Office, then of the Octave of St George, and then of the holy martyr Vitalis, from the Common Office, (p. 576,) with the Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 580.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PAUL of the Cross was sprung of a noble family of the Danëi, at Castellazzo, hard by Alessandria, in the Province of Acqui, [in the territory of the then Republic of Genoa,] but was born at Ovada, in the same province. The holiness with which he was afterwards to shine was foreshown by a strange light which filled his mother's chamber while she was in labour, and by the remarkable help which was bestowed upon him by the great Queen of Heaven, who delivered him unhurt from certain destruction when he was fallen into a river as a lad. From the first use of reason he burnt with love for JESUS crucified, and began to spend long times in contemplating Him. He chastised his innocent flesh with watching, scourging, fasting, and all severe hardships, and on Friday he drank vinegar mingled with gall. He was seized with a desire for martyrdom, and enlisted in the army which was being raised at Venice to fight against the Turks; but in consequence of the Will of God, made known to him while he was in prayer, he left the army in order to serve in a more exalted regiment whose duty it should be to defend the Church and to toil for the eternal salvation of men. When he returned home he refused a very honourable marriage, and also the inheritance which was bequeathed to him by his father's brother, and would fain enter upon a straiter way of the cross and be clad by his own Bishop with a rough tunic. By command of the Bishop, on account of his eminent holiness of life and knowledge of the things of God, he began, even before he became a clerk, to toil in the Lord's field with great profit of souls by preaching the Word.

Fifth Lesson.

HE betook himself to Rome, and when he had there studied a regular course of theology he was ordained Priest in obedience to the command of the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIII., who also gave him permission to gather comrades around him. He withdrew to the solitude of Mount Argentaro, whither he had been already called by the Blessed Virgin, at which same time she also showed him in vision a black habit marked with the emblems of the sufferings of her Son. At Mount Argentaro, he laid the foundations of his new Congregation, which under the blessing of God grew quickly, through the labours of Paul, and attracted to it eminent men. It received the confirmation of the Apostolic See more than once, with the rules which Paul himself had received from God in prayer and the addition of a fourth vow, that, namely, to promote the blessed remembrance of the sufferings of the Lord. He founded a congregation of holy virgins also, who should dwell constantly upon the overflowing love of the Divine Bridegroom. Amid all these works his untiring love for souls caused him never to weary in the preaching of the Gospel, and he led into the path of salvation men almost countless, among whom were some of the most lost, or those who had fallen into heresy. The greatest and most wonderful power of his preaching was how he told of the sufferings of Christ, so that he himself and his hearers would alike burst into tears, and hardened hearts were cloven by repentance.

Sixth Lesson.

THE fire of the love of God burnt so in his heart that the part of his under-garment which was next thereto often presented the appearance of having been scorched, and two of his ribs seemed to be raised. He could not withhold his tears, more especially when he was saying Mass, and when he was in a state of trance, as oftentimes befell, his body was sometimes seen to be raised into the air, and his face to shine as with light from heaven. Sometimes when he was preaching a heavenly voice was heard prompting him, or his words became audible at the distance of several miles. He was eminent for the gifts of prophecy, of speaking with tongues, of reading the heart, and of power over evil spirits, over diseases, and over the inanimate elements of nature. The Supreme Pontiffs themselves regarded him as dear and venerable, but he held himself to be but an unprofitable servant, and a sinful wretch upon whom devils might well trample. He held to the bitter hardships of his life, even unto a great age, and passed to heaven from Rome, [upon the 18th day of October,] being the day which he had himself foretold, in the year 1775, after he had addressed to his disciples noble exhortations which are as the heritage of his spirit, and had been comforted by the sacraments of the Church, and by an heavenly vision. The Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. numbered his name among those of the blessed, and then, after renewed signs and wonders, among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lesson from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

The last is omitted to make room for the Ninth Lesson (of St Vitalis).

VITALIS was a soldier, and the father of the holy Martyrs Gervase and Protase. He went to Ravenna with Paulinus the judge, and there saw the physician Ursicinus led out to die, because he owned to being a believer in Christ. As the torments went on, Ursicinus seemed to waver a little, and Vitalis cried out to him, "Ursicinus! as a physician thou hast been used to heal other men's bodies, take heed lest thou let thine own soul die eternally." These words encouraged Ursicinus, and he endured bravely in his testimony even unto the end; but Paulinus was filled with fury, and caused Vitalis to be seized, tormented on the rack, and finally thrown into a pit and buried under an heap of stones.[1] When it was over, a certain priest of Apollo, who had urged on Paulinus against Vitalis, was seized by the devil, and began to cry out, "Vitalis! Vitalis! thou art Christ's Martyr, but thou makest me to burn! thou makest me to burn!" until in that phrenzy he threw himself into the river.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St George, and then of St Vitalis, from the Common Office, (p. 580,) with the Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," as yesterday at Vespers, (p. 580.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 29th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Milan, the holy martyr Peter, of the Order of Friars Preachers, who was murdered by heretics for the Catholic faith's sake, [in the year 1252.]

At Paphos, in Cyprus, holy Tychicus, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul, whom that Apostle doth in his Epistles call "a beloved brother and a faithful minister and fellow-servant in the Lord." [He was a native of the province of Asia.]

At Cirtha, in Numidia, [in the year 260,] the holy martyrs Agapius, Bishop [of Carthagena,] and Secundinus, Bishop [of Braga,] who had long been banished to that city in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, wherein the fury of the Gentiles did most seek to try the faith of the just. From having been eminent Priests they became glorious martyrs; and there suffered along with them the soldier Emilian, the holy Virgins Tartulla and Antonia, and a certain woman with her twin children.

On the same day, the seven Saints who had been robbers but were converted to Christ by holy Jason, and by martyrdom gained life everlasting, [in the year 100. They are called the robbers of Corfu. Their names are Saturninus, Jusischolus, Faustian, Januarius, Marsalius, Euphrasius, and Mammius.]

At Brescia, the holy Confessor Paulinus, Bishop of that see, [about the year 428. The Bollandists call him Paul I., and say there never was a Bishop Paulinus of Brescia.]

In the monastery of Cluny, [in the year 1109,] holy Hew, Abbat of Cluny.

In the monastery of Molesme, holy Robert, first Abbat of Cîteaux. [He was a Monk of Moûtier-la-Celle, Abbat of Saint-Michel de Tonnerre, Prior of Saint-Ayoul, and founder of Molesme and Cîteaux, [in the year 1110.]

Vespers of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

APRIL 29.

St Peter, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of Martyrs, (p. 576, or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

GRANT us grace, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, to follow with zeal conformable thereto after the pattern of that great ensample of faith, Thy blessed Martyr Peter, who, for the spreading of the same faith, did so run as to obtain the palm of martyrdom. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Peter begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Paul of the Cross from the Common Office, (p. 621,) with the Prayer from his Office, then of the Octave of St George.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Peter was born at Verona, [in the year of our Lord 1205,] of parents polluted with the Manichæan heresy, but he himself began his lifelong strife against error when he was but a little child. When he was seven years old he went to school, and was asked by his heretic uncle what he learnt there: he answered that he had learnt the Christian Creed: and neither his father nor his uncle were ever able to shake his constancy in the faith, either by cajolements or threats. When he was a young lad he went to Bologna to study, and there he was called by the Holy Ghost to an higher state of life, and entered the Order of Friars Preachers, [at fifteen years of age.]

Fifth Lesson.

HE was marked by great perfection as a Friar: so watchful was he over the purity of his body and soul, that he never felt himself defiled by a mortal sin. He chastened his body by fasting and watching, and ennobled his soul by the contemplation of the things of God. He was constantly busied in works for furthering the salvation of souls: and had a peculiar gift of grace for clearly convincing heretics. Such was his power as a preacher, that countless crowds were drawn together to hear him, and many were moved to repentance.

Sixth Lesson.

THE faith which was in him burnt so hotly, that he longed to seal his confession with his blood, and oftentimes he earnestly besought from God the grace to do so. It was but a little while before the heretics murdered him, that he foretold, in preaching, his own approaching death. While he was intrusted with the duties of the Holy Inquisition, he was returning from Como to Milan, when an ungodly ruffian assailed him and wounded him once and again in the head with a sword. Peter, to whom these blows were nearly fatal, began with his last breath to recite that Profession of the Faith, to which as a little child he had clung with such manly courage, but the murderer thrust the weapon into his side, and he passed away to receive a Martyr's palm in heaven. It was [the 6th day of April, in] the year of salvation 1252. In the following year, Innocent IV., seeing by how many miracles God had been pleased to glorify him, added his name to the sacred roll of Martyrs.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons in Paschal-time from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 578,) out of Paschal-time, from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 597.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St George.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Octave of the holy martyr George.

Upon the same 30th day of April, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 1380,] the holy Virgin Katharine of Sienna, of the order of St Dominic, famous for her life and miracles, whose name Pius II. enrolled among those of the holy virgins, and whose feast we keep upon the 5th day of May.

At Lambesa, in Numidia, the holy martyrs the Reader Marian, and the Deacon James. Marian had already triumphed over persecution by confessing Christ, under the Emperor Decius, but was arrested again along with his illustrious companion. After dire torments both were wondrously strengthened by revelations from God, and were at last beheaded, along with many others, [in the year 260.]

At Saintes, [in the first century,] the blessed martyr Eutropius, Bishop of that see, who was consecrated a Bishop by holy Clement and sent into Gaul, where he long preached, and then died a conqueror, having his head broken in for confessing Christ.

At Cordova, the holy martyrs the Priest Amator, the Monk Peter, and Lewis, [in the year 855.]

At Novara, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs the Priest Lawrence, and the boys whom he had taken as pupils.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs the Priest Aphrodisius, and thirty others.

At Ephesus, the holy martyr Maximus, who was crowned in the persecution under the Emperor Decius.

At Fermo, in Picenum, the holy Virgin and martyr Sophia.

At Naples, in Campania, [in the fifth century,] holy Severus, Bishop of that see, who, amid other wondrous works, did on an occasion raise a dead man from the grave to convict of untruthfulness the false creditor of a widow and orphans.

At Evorea, in Epirus, holy Donatus, Bishop of that see, who was distinguished for his eminent holiness in the time of the Emperor Theodosius.

At London, in England, holy Erconwald, [in the year 698,] Bishop of that see, [from the year 665 for eleven years. He was Abbat of Chertsey, and founded both that monastery and one for women at Barking, which was governed by his sister St Edilburga,] who was famous for many miracles, and whose feast we keep upon the 14th day of November.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

APRIL 30.

Octave of St George.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr (p. 576,) except the following. Prayer throughout as on the Feast.

First Vespers (same as First Vespers of the Feast) as regards St George, begin with the Chapter.

Verse and Answer and Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as on the Feast.

A Commemoration is made of St Peter Martyr. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (44th on the Saints.)

THE sick patiently suffer physicians to cut, burn, and divers ways torture them, in the hope of regaining temporal health; how much more patiently did the blessed Martyr suffer all the agony of temporal pain, in the assurance of being crowned with mercy and loving-kindness, and satisfying his desire with good things? He was willing to be crushed in the winepress, that, like a ripe grape, he might pass away into wine, and afford his beloved [JESUS] a draught of that wine of pomegranates (Cant. viii. 2,) wherewith godly minds do get so drunken that they learn how usefully to tread under foot [things temporal], and to look unwaveringly upon things eternal.

Fifth Lesson.

HE therefore who hath begun his career by disregarding the riches of the world, and keeping down the allurements of the flesh, and who in the fulness of his course hath suffered much, holding back from his sacrifice nothing for himself, hath made of himself an whole burnt-offering, and hath drunk of that precious cup, which already, as he sat at the great Feast of the Holy Scriptures, he had seen offered to him by the Master of that Feast. His death may seem as wretched a thing as they will in the eyes of the reprobate; but it is precious in His sight, Who is marvellous in His Saints.

Sixth Lesson.

HE in Whose sight his death was precious, Himself first called him to be His soldier, Himself justified him, and Himself hath glorified him; Himself sent him to the battle, and Himself gave him the victory. This kind of warfare is a very different thing to earthly warfare, wherein they are esteemed victors who obtain what it was a wickedness to desire, who rejoice in iniquity, and riot in those things which are worst. In the Christian conflict, the suffering is manifest, and the triumph unseen. It is as the Psalmist saith, in the character of a martyr: "Grant us help in trouble, for vain is the help of man: through God will we do valiantly," (Ps. lix. 13, 14,)—as though he had said: "Our victory, our glory are inward, not outward; without we are wretched, within we are lovely."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. And so on.

Homily by St Cyril, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Bk. x. Cap. 11 on John.)

It is plain that the reason why the Lord setteth Himself before us under the similitude of a vine is that we may see, with our eyes, that they which abide in Him draw from Him a power to bring forth spiritual fruit, just as the branches of the natural vine bring forth fruit by drawing sap from the vine; and that, on the other hand, such branches as separate themselves from Him, or fail in obedience to His commandments, are condemned, not only to bring forth no fruit, but also to suffer everlasting fire. For whosoever falleth away from Christ, either in faith or in love, giveth himself over to punishment, and is good for nothing but to be cast into the fire.

Eighth Lesson.

THE Lord saith that the root and foundation of that blessedness which is from above, are to keep to the dogmas and commandments of the Gospel teaching, as something given to us from heaven. To such as cheerfully keep the same, the Lord promiseth whatsoever right things they may ask. He saith: "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." It is possible that thou abide in Christ, and yet that His words abide not in thee. Double therefore is the way of keeping His commandments, namely, by faith and by love.

Ninth Lesson.

SINCE this is so, they who own Christ merely by their words, but seek not perfection by the observance of His commandments, that is to say, by love, do indeed in one way abide in Christ, but His words do not abide in them. They have not forgotten what the Gospel saith, but pleasures beguile them to cast away the grace of the Holy Ghost. Wherefore it is necessary to add unto faith works of love. He that doeth thus abideth in Christ by faith, and Christ's words abide in him,—even as it is said in the Psalms: "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee." (Ps. cxviii. 11.)

In the First Vespers of SS. Philip and James, a Commemoration is made of St George.

At Lauds, Verse and Answer and Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias as on the Feast.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of May, were born into the better life—

The blessed Apostles Philip and James. Philip brought nearly all Scythia to believe in Christ, but in the end, at the city of Hierapolis, in Asia, was fastened to a cross and stoned, and so fell asleep gloriously, [in the year 61.] James, who is written of as the brother of the Lord, and was the first Bishop of Jerusalem, was cast down from a pinnacle of the temple, whereby his legs were broken, and he was slain by a blow upon the head from a fuller's pole, and buried there not far from the temple.

In Egypt, the holy prophet Jeremiah, who was stoned by the people at Taphnis, and so there died, [590 B.C.,] and was buried. Holy Epiphanius saith that the faithful have been in use to pray at his grave and to take dust therefrom, whereby the bites of serpents are healed.

In the territory of Viviers, in Gaul, the blessed sub-Deacon Andeolus, whom holy Polycarp sent from the East along with others into Gaul to preach the Word of God. Under the Emperor Severus he was beaten with thorny clubs, and at length his head was broken into four parts with a wooden sword, and so he attained to martyrdom, [in the year 208.]

At Huesca, in Spain, the holy martyrs Orentius and Patience.

At Sedune, in Gaul, holy Sigismund, King of the Burgundians, who was drowned in a well, and so died, [in the year 524,] and was afterwards famous for miracles.

At Auxerre, [in the year 524,] the holy Confessor Amator, Bishop of that see.

At Auch, [in the fifth century,] holy Orientius, Bishop of that see.

In England, [in the year 778,] holy Asaph, Bishop of the see which is called by his name, and the holy Virgin Walburga, whose feast we keep upon the 14th day of May.

At Bergamo, the holy widow Grata.

At Forli, holy Peregrinus, of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Vespers of the following.

FEAST-DAYS IN MAY.

MAY 1.

The Holy Apostles Philip and James.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, during Paschal-time, (p. 576,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Let not your heart be troubled: * ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions. Alleluia, Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Octave of St George, all from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

If the Lessons would naturally be from the Epistle of St James, then they remain undisturbed; if not, they are from the beginning of that Epistle, as on the Fourth Sunday after Easter, (p. 378.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PHILIP was born in the town of Bethsaida, and was one of the first of the twelve Apostles who were called by the Lord Christ. Then "Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him: We have found Him of Whom Moses in the Law, and the Prophets, did write." (John i. 45.) And so he brought him to the Lord. How familiarly he was in the company of Christ, is manifest from that which is written: "There were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the Feast: the same came therefore to Philip, . . . and desired him, saying: Sir, we would see JESUS." (John xii. 20, 21.) When the Lord was in the wilderness, and was about to feed a great multitude, "He said unto Philip: Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?" (John vi. 5.) Philip, after that he had received the Holy Ghost, took Scythia, by lot, as the land wherein he was to preach the Gospel, and brought nearly all that people to believe in Christ. At the last he came to Hierapolis in Phrygia, and there, for Christ's Name's sake, he was fastened to a cross and stoned to death. The day was the first of May. The Christians of Hierapolis buried his body at that place, but it was afterwards brought to Rome and laid in the Basilica of the Twelve Apostles, beside that of the blessed Apostle James.

Fifth Lesson.

JAMES, surnamed the Just, the brother of our Lord JESUS Christ, was a Nazarite from the womb. During his whole life he never drank wine or strong drink, never ate meat, never shaved, and never took a bath. He was the only man who was allowed to go into the Holy of Holies.[1] His raiment was always linen. So continually did he kneel in prayer, that the skin of his knees became horny, like a camel's knees. After Christ was ascended, the Apostles made James Bishop of Jerusalem: and even the Prince of the Apostles gave special intelligence to him after that he was delivered from prison by an angel. (Acts xii. 17.) When in the Council of Jerusalem certain questions were mooted touching the law and circumcision, James, following the opinion of Peter, addressed a discourse to the brethren, wherein he proved the call of the Gentiles, and commanded letters to be sent to such brethren as were absent, that they might take heed not to lay upon the Gentiles the yoke of the Law of Moses. (Acts xv. 13-29.) It is of him that the Apostle Paul saith, writing to the Galatians: "Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother." (i. 19.)

Sixth Lesson.

SO great was James' holiness of life that men strove one with another to touch the hem of his garment. When he was ninety-six years old, and had most holily governed the Church of Jerusalem for thirty years, ever most constantly preaching Christ the Son of God, he laid down his life for the faith. He was first stoned, and afterward taken up on to a pinnacle of the Temple and cast down from thence. His legs were broken by the fall, and he was wellnigh dead, but he lifted up his hands towards heaven, and prayed to God for the salvation of his murderers, saying: "Lord, forgive them, for they know not what they do!" As he said this, one that stood by smote him grievously upon the head with a fuller's club, and he resigned his spirit to God. He testified in the seventh year of Nero, and was buried hard by the Temple, in the place where he had fallen. He wrote one of the Seven Epistles which are called Catholic.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xiv. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house there are many mansions. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (67*th Tract on John.*)

It behoveth us, my brethren, to have our minds more given to God-ward, if we would that those words of the Holy Gospel which have just sounded in our ears, should become a living reality for our understandings. The Lord JESUS saith: "Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God, believe also in Me." Lest, being but men, their heart should be troubled by the fear of death, He strengtheneth them, even by the reminder that He is God. He saith: "Ye believe in God, believe also in Me"—for if ye believe in God, ye must needs believe in Me. And this were not so, if Christ were not God.

Eighth Lesson.

"YE believe in God, believe also in Him Who is by nature and not by robbery equal with God, (Phil. ii. 6:) for in that He emptied Himself, He did it not by laying aside the form of God, but by taking upon Him the form of a servant. Ye fear death for this form of a servant, but let not your heart be troubled, the form of God will raise it up again." But what signifieth that which followeth? "In My Father's house there are many mansions." Was it not that they had fear on their own account, and needed for themselves to hear Him say, "Let not your heart be troubled"? Which of them trembled not when they had heard Him say to Peter, the lealest and boldest of them all, "The cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest Me"? Meetly were they troubled, for that they were about to be scattered from Him, but when they heard Him say, "In My Father's house are many mansions," they had been comforted even if He had not also said, "I go to prepare a place for you," for then they believed and knew, that, when all dangers and all trials were for ever over, they should be for ever with the Lord, with Christ and with God. Yea, though one man be stronger than another, though one be wiser than another, though one be holier than another, yet "in My Father's house are many mansions." That house is an house wherein none are strangers, but every man shall receive a mansion therein according as his work shall be.

---

[1] This is evidently a mistake. See Lev. xvi. 2, &c. &c. &c., and thence Heb. ix. 7. "Into the (Holy of Holies) went the High Priest alone once a year."

Ninth Lesson (for St Asaph).

WHEN blessed Kentigern, the first Bishop and founder of the Church of Glasgow, was driven forth by the children of iniquity out of his own country he settled upon the Elwy in Wales, and there many came unto him, and gave themselves up to his holy teaching, and he founded a famous monastery, wherein he is said to have had 995 monks, whom he divided into successive choirs so that the praise of God in his church never ceased at any hour of the day or of the night. Among these monks Asaph was eminent both because of his noble birth and the brightness of his graces, and the glory of his miracles, whereby he had been marked even from his very childhood. When blessed Kentigern was called back into his own country by King Rhuderch, he set Asaph in his own place to succeed him, not only in the administration of his monastery, but also in the bishopric. From the holiness and perfection of life with which he administered the church of Elwy it came to pass that thenceforth the name thereof was changed, and it is called the church of St Asaph even unto this day. He fell asleep in the Lord about the middle of the sixth century, and mention is made of him in the Roman Martyrology upon this 1st day of May.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Asaph from the Common Office, with the Prayer, "Hear, O Lord, &c.," (p. 617).

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Lord, show us the Father, * and it sufficeth us. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. Philip, * He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known Me? * Philip, he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. Alleluia.

Fourth Antiphon. If ye had known Me [ye should have known My Father also,] * and from henceforth ye know Him and have seen Him. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. If ye love Me, * keep My commandments. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who dost every year gladden us by the solemn memorial of Thine Apostles Philip and James, grant us grace, we beseech Thee, not only to rejoice because of their worthy deeds, but also to tread in their footsteps. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds, respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 2nd day of May, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, in the year 373, holy Athanasius, Pope of that city, most illustrious for his holiness and teaching. Nearly the whole world leagued itself together to persecute him for the Catholic Faith. He fought right stoutly against Emperors, Presidents, and Arian Bishops without number, from the time of the Emperor Constantine until that of the Emperor Valens. To escape their plots he became an outcast upon the face of the wide world, and there was nowhere left where he could hide himself in safety. He returned at last to his own church, and after many contendings and many crowns of long-suffering he passed away to be ever with the Lord, in the 46th year of his priesthood, in the time of the Emperors Valentinian and Valens.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Saturninus, Neopolus, German, and Celestine, who suffered many things, and were at last cast into prison, where they slept in the Lord.

Likewise the holy martyrs Exuperius and Zoe his wife, their children Cyriacus and Theodulus, who suffered under the Emperor Hadrian.

At Seville, the holy martyr the Deacon Felix.

Upon the same day, [in the year 489,] the holy martyr Vindemial, Bishop [of Capse, in Africa,] who strove against the Arians by his teaching and miracles, along with holy Eugenius, Bishop [of Carthage, in the year 495,] and holy Bishop Longinus, and was beheaded by order of Huneric, King [of the Vandals and Germans.]

At Avila, in Spain, in the first century, holy Secundus, Bishop of that see, concerning whom mention is made, along with six others, upon the 15th day of this present month of May.

At Florence, [in the year 1459,] holy Antonine, Bishop of that place, of the Order of Friars Preachers, famous for his holiness and teaching, whose feast we keep upon the 10th day of this present month of May.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of St Athanasius. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c." Prayer, "Hear, O Lord, &c.," as in the following Office.

MAY 2.

St Athanasius, [called the Great,] Pope[1] [of Alexandria,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Doctor, (p. 630,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. On Rogation Monday and Wednesday from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

---

[1] Although the Russians call all priests Popes, (Gr. pappas, Engl. papa,) the world in general has reserved the title to the successors of St Peter and St Mark, though the latter are also more commonly called Patriarch than the former.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE great Athanasius, the lealest soldier that the Catholic Religion hath perhaps ever had, was an Alexandrian. He was ordained Deacon by Alexander, [in the year 326,] Bishop of that city, whom he afterwards succeeded. [In 325] he had followed Alexander to the Council of Nice, where he wrestled triumphantly against the blasphemy of Arius. For this reason he was honoured with so much of their hatred by the Arians, that their vindictiveness never forsook him from that time forward. [In the year 335,] they called together a Council at Tyre, composed for the most part of Arian Bishops, where they suborned a wretched woman to charge Athanasius with having raped her when she had received him as a guest into her house.[1] Athanasius therefore came into the assembly, and with him a certain priest whose name was Timothy. This Timothy arose as though he were Athanasius, and asked her, saying: "Woman, was it I that was thy guest? was it I that raped thee?" She cried out indignantly: "Yea, thou it was that didst rape me," the which she attested with an oath, and called on the honour of the judges to punish such iniquity. Upon this discovery of her perjury, they drave the shameless woman from their presence.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Arians also accused Athanasius of having murdered the [schismatic] Bishop Arsenius. This Arsenius they kept shut up, and brought into the court a dead man's hand, which they declared had been his, and had been cut off by Athanasius to use in sorcery. But Arsenius escaped in the night, and when he appeared before all the Council whole and sound, the brazen-faced crime of the enemies of Athanasius was exposed. This appearance nevertheless they attributed to Athanasius being a warlock, and persisted still in their attack on him.[2] He was driven into exile, and banished to Treves in Gaul. Thenceforth, under authority of the Emperor Constantius, that abettor of Arians, he was hunted to and fro with unceasing persecutions. He suffered hardships which it is difficult to believe. He was sent wandering all about the Roman world. He was twice more thrust out of his See, and again restored through the authority of Pope Julius of Rome, and with the protection of the Emperor Constans, the brother of Constantius, by decrees of the Councils of Sardica and of Jerusalem. The vindictiveness of the Arians never let him alone. In his third exile so great was the danger of his life from the pursuit of their undying hatred, that he had to lie hid for five years in a dry cistern, unknown to all men, save one of his friends who brought him food.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Constantius, Julian the Apostate, who succeeded him, allowed every sort of Bishop who had been banished to return to their own Churches. Athanasius therefore returned to Alexandria, and was received with profound reverence. But it was not long before the same Arians got Julian to hunt him down again, and again it behoved him to fly. A band of soldiers were sent in pursuit of him to kill him, and as he fled up the Nile, their boat pressed hard on his. Athanasius, before they were yet in sight, had his own boat turned round, and went down the stream to meet them. As the vessels passed one another the murderers called out to ask if they knew where Athanasius was, and the servant of God himself cried to them in answer, "Ye are close to him!" whereupon they redoubled their exertions to ascend the stream, and Athanasius went peacefully down to Alexandria, and found means of concealment till the death of Julian. Yet once again he had to fly from another persecution at Alexandria, and in this his fifth and last exile he hid himself for four months in his own father's sepulchre. From all these so many and so great dangers did God deliver him, and at last he died in his own bed at Alexandria, [upon the 2nd day of May, in the year of salvation 373,] in the reign of Valens. He wrote much that is both godly and luminous in explaining the Catholic Faith, and governed the Church of Alexandria in great holiness, amid all changes of weather, for six and forty years.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another. And so on.

Homily by St Athanasius, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Defence of his own flight.)

It is written in the Law, (Num. xxxv. 11,) "Ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you,"—that in these cities they which were pursued to put them to death might enter and be safe. And in the latter days when He was come, even that very Word of the Father, Which had spoken aforetime unto Moses, He gave again the same commandment—"When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." And, a while afterward, He said: "When ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the Holy Place, (whoso readeth, let him understand,) then let them which be in Judæa flee unto the mountains; let him which is on the house-top not come down to take anything out of his house; neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes." (Matth. xxiv. 15-18.)

---

[1] "Whether this (accusation of incontinence) was ever brought is more than doubtful." Dr Newman's Arians, iv. 2.

[2] There was another charge of having broken the Altar and Chalice, and thrown the sacred books into the fire at a schismatic Church in the Mareotis. This Athanasius met by proving that there was not and never had been any Church at the place, but the Arians insisted on sending a Commission to Egypt to make investigations on the spot. This precious Commission was composed of some of the rankest heretics that even Arianism could produce, and took the chief accuser of Athanasius as their guide and host. On their report the servant of God was formally condemned of rebellion, sedition, and a tyrannical use of his episcopal power, of murder, sacrilege, and magic. Newman, iv. 2.

Eighth Lesson.

THE Saints, therefore, knowing these words of the Lord, have obeyed them in their lives. What the Lord hath now commanded by His Own Mouth He commanded through His Saints before that He Himself was come in the flesh, and to obey this commandment worketh in a man perfection, since whatever God commandeth is a thing which it behoveth man to do. For this cause, that very Word of God Which was made flesh for our sake thought it meet when they sought Him, (even as at this present time they are seeking us,) to hide Himself, (John viii. 59,) and, when they persecuted Him, to fly and escape from their laying in wait for Him: although when that time came which He had Himself decreed, and wherein He willed, as touching the Body, to suffer for us all, He willingly gave Himself up to His enemies.

Ninth Lesson.

HOLY men of God, therefore, have learnt to take ensample from their Saviour, (and the Same is and hath been the Teacher of all such, whether of old time, or in these latter days,) and know how that it is lawful to baffle their persecutors by flying from them, and by lying hid when they seek them. For since they know not the day nor the hour wherein an all-seeing God hath ordained their end, they do not daringly give themselves into the power of such as hate them, but rather, knowing it to be written, "My times are in Thy hand," (Ps. xxx. 16,) and that "the LORD killeth and maketh alive," (1 Kings ii. 6,) they "endure unto the end," (Matth. xxiv. 13,) "they wander about," as saith the Apostle, "in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, [tormented, (of whom the world is not worthy,)] they wander in deserts, [and in mountains,] and" hide "in dens and caves of the earth," (Heb. xi. 37,) until either their appointed time come, or until more plainly God, the real Appointer of times, speaketh unto them, and chaineth up the persecutors, or manifestly giveth them over into the hands of the same, as may be His Own good pleasure.

At Lauds and throughout the Office, Prayer, "Hear, O Lord, we beseech Thee, the prayers, &c.," (p. 617.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 3rd day of May is commemorated the finding at Jerusalem in the time of the Emperor Constantine of the Most Holy Cross of the Lord.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Nomentan Way, the holy martyrs Pope Alexander I., [in the year 117,] and the priests Eventius and Theodulos. Under the Emperor Hadrian and the judge Aurelian, Alexander suffered chains and imprisonment, racking, tearing with hooks, and fire, and was at length put to death by small stabs over his whole body. Eventius and Theodulos were long imprisoned, then examined under torture by fire, and at last beheaded.

At Narni, [in the year 376,] the holy Confessor Juvenal, Bishop of that see.

At Constantinople, [in the year 313,] the holy martyrs Alexander the Soldier, and Antonina the Virgin. In the persecution under the Emperor Maximian the President Festus condemned her to a brothel; Alexander awaited her there, changed clothes with her, and so enabled her to escape. For this reason they were put to the torture together, and when both had had their hands cut off, they were together cast into the fire for Christ's sake, and having so finished together their noble contending, were crowned together.

In the Thebaïd, [about the year 286,] the holy martyrs Timothy and Myra his wife. The Prefect Arian, after putting them to divers torments, ordered them to be crucified together. They hung upon the cross alive for nine days, the one strengthening the other in the faith, and so together at last finished their testimony.

At Aphrodisia, in Karia, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Diodorus and Rodopian, who were stoned to death by their fellow-citizens during the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

Upon Mount Senario, near Florence, [in the thirteenth century,] the blessed Confessors Sosthenes and Uguccio, two of the seven founders of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who departed this life upon the same day and at the same hour, as they were repeating the angelic salutation, even as had been foretold to them from heaven.

Vespers are of the following.

MAY 3.

Finding of the Holy Cross.

Double of the Second Class.

All as on ordinary Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphon, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

THE Royal Banners forward go;
The Cross shines forth in mystic glow,
Where Life for sinners death endured,
And life by death for man procured.

Where deep for us the spear was dy'd,
Life's torrent rushing from His Side,
To wash us in that precious flood
Where, mingled, Water flowed, and Blood.

Fulfilled is all that David told
In true Prophetic song of old;
"Amidst the nations, God," saith he
"Hath reigned and triumphed from the Tree."[2]

O Tree of Beauty! Tree of Light!
O Tree with Royal Purple dight!
Elect on whose triumphal breast
Those holy Limbs should find their rest!

On whose dear arms, so widely flung,
The weight of this world's ransom hung:
The price of human kind to pay,
And spoil the spoiler of his prey.

[1] Translation by the late Rev. Dr Neale. It was composed by Venantius Fortunatus, Bishop of Poictiers, (whose life extended from A.D. 530 to 609,) on occasion of the reception of certain Reliques by St Gregory of Tours and St Radegund, previously to the consecration of a Church at Poictiers. It is therefore strictly and primarily a processional hymn. (Neale's Mediæval Hymns, 1, 6.)

[2] So-called Italic for Ps. xcv. 10.

[1] Hail, Altar! Hail, O Victim, Thee
Decks now Thy Passion's Victory;
Where Life for sinners death endured,
And life by death for man procured.

To Thee, Eternal Three in One,
Let homage meet by all be done;
Whom by the Cross Thou dost restore,
Preserve and govern evermore. Amen.

Verse.[2] This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia.

Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Hail, O Cross! Brighter than all the stars! Thy name is honourable upon earth! To the eyes of men thou art exceeding lovely! Holy art thou among all things that are earthly! Thy transom made the one worthy balance whereon the price of the world was weighed! Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, Sweetest weight is hung on thee! O that every one that is here gathered this day to praise thee may find that thou art indeed salvation for him! Alleluia, Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of St Athanasius. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c." Prayer as in his Office.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ crucified is our King. * O come, let us worship Him. Alleluia.

Hymn.[3]

SING, my tongue, the glorious battle,
With completed victory rife:
And above the Cross's trophy
Tell the triumph of the strife:
How the world's Redeemer conquered
By surrendering of His life.

God his Maker, sorely grieving
That the first-made Adam fell,
When he ate the fruit of sorrow
Whose reward was death and hell,
Noted then this Tree, the ruin
Of the ancient tree to quell.[4]

For the work of our salvation
Needs would have his order so
And the multiform deceiver's
Art by art would overthrow,
And from thence[5] would bring the med'cine
Whence the insult of the foe.

Wherefore, when the sacred fulness
Of th' appointed time was come,
This world's Maker left His Father,
Sent the Heavenly Mansion from,
And proceeded, God Incarnate,
Of the Virgin's Holy Womb.

Weeps the Infant in the manger
That in Bethlehem's stable stands;
And His Limbs the Virgin Mother
Doth compose in swaddling bands,
Meetly thus in linen folding
Of her God the Feet and Hands.[6]

To the Trinity be glory
Everlasting, as is meet;
Equal to the Father, equal
To the Son, and Paraclete:
Trinal Unity, Whose praises
All created things repeat. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Antiphon. All the earth this day is making glad memorial of the finding of the Cross, whose light is streaming over every land and people. Alleluia.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia.

Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment. Alleluia.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Galatians (iii. 10.)

FOR as many as are of the works of the law, are under the curse. For it is written: "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them."[7] But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for "the just liveth by faith."[8] And the law is not of faith; but "the man that doeth them shall live in them."[9] Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; (for it is written: "Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:")[10] that the blessing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles through JESUS Christ, that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

First Responsory.

Lo! the Church, with solemn gladness, hails the day for ever glorious, when the opening earth revealeth that dread tree of mystic triumph. On whose boughs her dying Saviour shattered death and crushed the serpent. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. He the Word of God eternal, on those stately branches hanging, hath for us a new way opened.

Answer. On whose boughs her dying Saviour shattered death and crushed the serpent. Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Philippians (ii. 5.)

LET this mind be in you, which was also in Christ JESUS, Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but emptied Himself, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men, and found in fashion as a man. He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a Name which is above every name; that at the Name of JESUS every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that our Lord JESUS Christ is in the glory of God the Father.

Second Responsory.

Faithful Cross, above all other, one and only noble tree! None in foliage, none in blossom, none in fruit thy peers may be! Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, Sweetest weight is hung on thee! Alleluia.

---

[1] "These two verses were added when the Hymn was appropriated to Passiontide."

[2] Matt. xxiv. 30.

[3] Also by Venantius Fortunatus, and translated by the late Dr Neale.

[4] The Cross, as the mystic "tree of life," (Gen. ii. 9,) is here set by the poet in antithesis to the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, "whose mortal taste Brought death into the world and all our woe." The present translator has taken the liberty to substitute "tree" for "wood," as a translation of "lignum,"—as more conformable to our common phraseology, and used by Dr Neale himself in the "Royal Banners."

[5] I.e., from trees.

[6] The poem is here abruptly broken off, the rest being sung at Lauds.

[7] Deut. xxvii. 26.

[8] Hab. ii. 4.

[9] Lev. xviii. 5.

[10] Deut. xxi. 23.

Verse. Thou art higher than all cedars.

Answer. Sweetest wood, and sweetest iron, Sweetest weight is hung on thee! Alleluia.

Third Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Colossians (ii. 9.)

IN Christ dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily: and ye are complete in Him, Which is the Head of all principality and power: in Whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, which standeth not in the cutting off of the flesh of this body, but in the circumcision of Christ: buried with Him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, Who hath raised Him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath He quickened together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses: blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to His Cross: and having spoiled principalities and powers, He made a show of them, openly triumphing over them in Himself.

Third Responsory.

[1] This is that noble tree, planted in the midst of the garden; whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Even the Cross, whereof the glory is so excellent, and whereafter Helen, the mother of Constantine, did so diligently search until she found it.

Answer. Whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men. Alleluia, Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Antiphon. Lo, the Cross's happy triumph, fraught with healing of diseases, Tree whereon the True Life dying trampled down the death of all men. Alleluia.

Ps. iv. When I called upon Him, &c., (p. 116.)

Ps. v. Give ear to my words, &c., (p. 49.)

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, how excellent, &c., (p. 4.)

Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia.

Answer. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world. Alleluia.

Fourth Lesson.

AFTER that famous victory which the Emperor Constantine gained over Maxentius, [in the year 312,] on the eve of which the banner of the Cross of the Lord had been given to him from heaven, Helen, the mother of Constantine, being warned in a dream, came to Jerusalem, [in 326,] to seek for the Cross. There it was her care to cause to be overthrown the marble statue of Venus, which had stood on Calvary for about one hundred and eighty years, and which had orignally been put there to desecrate and destroy the memorial of the sufferings of the Lord Christ. The like work Helen did [at Bethlehem] by cleansing from an image of Adonis the stable where the Saviour was born, and from an idol of Jupiter, the place where He had arisen from the dead.

Fourth Responsory.

But us it behoveth to glory in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ, in Whom is our salvation, life, and resurrection, Who hath saved us and redeemed us. Alleluia.

Verse. O Lord, we worship Thy Cross, and make memorial of Thy glorious passion.

Answer. Who hath saved us and redeemed us. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN she had thus cleansed the place where the Cross had stood, Helen caused deep excavations to be made, which resulted in the discovery of three crosses, and, apart from them, the writing which had been nailed on that of the Lord. But which of the crosses had been His was unknown, and was only manifested by a miracle. Macarius, Bishop of Jerusalem, after offering solemn prayers to God, touched with each of the three a woman who was afflicted with a grievous disease. The two first had no effect, but at the touch of the third she was immediately healed.

Fifth Responsory.

The Relique true from heaven revealed, hath now the Gospel's figure sealed; as by the serpent Moses reared, so by the Cross the sick are healed. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. When the dead touch the Cross they arise, and the wonderful works of God are made manifest.

Answer. As by the serpent Moses reared, so by the Cross the sick are healed. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

HELEN, after she had found the life-giving Cross, built over the site of the Passion a Church of extraordinary splendour, wherein she deposited part of the Cross, shut up in a silver case. Another part which she gave to her son, Constantine, was laid up in the Church of the Holy Cross of Jerusalem, which he built at Rome on the site of the Sessorian Palace.[2] She also gave to her son the nails with which the Most Holy Body of JESUS Christ had been pierced. Constantine established a law abolishing the punishment of crucifixion for all time coming: and thenceforth what had hitherto been a hissing and a curse among men, began to be esteemed worshipful and glorious.

[2] The Cross and its reliques are the subject of an elaborate disquisition, pp. 45 to 163, by M. Rohault de Fleury in his learned antiquarian work, intituled Mémoire sur les Instruments de la Passion de N.-S. J. C. The total cubic volume of all the reliques of which he could hear as at present actually or even possibly existing anywhere is about 5,000,000 of French cubic millimetres; whereas a cross large enough for the execution of a man must have contained at least 180,000,000 or thereby.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] This Sign of the Cross shall be in heaven, when the Lord cometh to judgment. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. When the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, and shall begin to judge the world by fire.

Answer. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest. Alleluia, Alleluia.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Antiphon. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee, because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world. Alleluia.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee. Alleluia.

Answer. Let them sing praises to Thy Name, O Lord. Alleluia.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (iii. 1.)

AT that time: There was a man of the Pharisees named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to JESUS by night, and said unto Him: Rabbi, we know that Thou art a Teacher come from God. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] (11*th Tract on John.*)

Nicodemus was one of them which believed in the Name of JESUS, when they saw the signs and wonders which He did. So hath John given us to understand a few words before our text: "Now when He was in Jerusalem at the Passover, in the feast-day, many believed in His Name" (ii. 23.) And wherefore did they believe in His Name? John telleth us immediately: "When they saw the miracles which He did." And now, what saith he touching Nicodemus? "There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to JESUS by night, and said unto Him: Rabbi, we know that Thou art a Teacher come from God." Nicodemus therefore believed in His Name. And why did he believe? He saith: "For no man can do these miracles that Thou doest, except God be with him.

Seventh Responsory.

Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, Sweetest weight is hung on thee! Thou alone wast counted worthy this world's ransom to uphold! Alleluia.

Verse. The sign of the Cross shall be in heaven when the Lord cometh to judgment.

Answer. Thou alone wast counted worthy this world's ransom to uphold! Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

IF, then, Nicodemus was one of the many which had believed in His Name, let us seek to find in Nicodemus why "JESUS did not commit Himself unto them" (ii. 24.) "JESUS answered and said unto him: Amen, Amen, I say unto thee; except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." JESUS therefore committeth Himself unto such as be born again. Behold, Nicodemus and they that were with him believed in JESUS, but JESUS did not commit Himself unto them. // Just so are all catechumens; they believe in the Name of Christ, but JESUS hath not yet committed Himself unto them.[2] Now I trust ye will be good enough to pay attention, and understand what I am going to say. If ye ask of a Catechumen: "Dost thou believe in Christ?" he saith: "I believe," and he signeth himself with the sign of the Cross. The Cross of his Lord is marked upon his forehead, and he is not ashamed of it. Behold, he believeth in the Name of Christ. But let us ask him: "Dost thou eat the flesh of the Son of man?" and he knoweth not what we mean, for JESUS hath not yet committed Himself unto him.

Eighth Responsory.

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Alleluia.

Verse. God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.

Answer. That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson. (Of certain saints.)

ALEXANDER was a Roman, who ruled the Church during the reign of the Emperor Hadrian. He turned to Christ a great number of the Roman nobility. He ordained that nothing but bread and wine should be offered at the mystery, but that some water should be mingled with the wine, in memory of the Blood and Water Which flowed from the Side of JESUS Christ. He added to the Canon of the Mass the words: "Who, the night before He suffered." He also ordained that blessed water mingled with salt, should be kept always in Churches, and should be used in private rooms to scare away devils. He sat in the throne of Peter ten years, five months, and twenty days. He hath great renown on account of the holiness of his life, and the usefulness of his institutions. He was crowned with martyrdom, [in the year 119,] together with the Priests Eventius and Theodulus, and was buried beside the Nomentan Way, at the third mile-stone from the city, in the same place where he had been beheaded. During his Popedom he held divers Advent ordinations, and at them ordained six Priests, two Deacons, and five Bishops for divers places. The bodies of these three Martyrs, Alexander, Eventius, and Theodulus, were afterwards brought into the city, and buried in the Church of St Sabina. On this day likewise, [about the year 367,] occurred the blessed death of Juvenal, the holy Bishop of Narni, who by the holiness of his life and teaching, became the father in Christ of so many of the dwellers in that city. He fell asleep very peacefully, with great fame for miracles, and was there honourably buried.

[2] If a Ninth Lesson of the Cross is by any chance wanted, the Eighth is divided here.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. O what a work of love was that! * when Life and death died together upon the Tree. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. Save us, * O Christ the Saviour, save us through the might of Thy Cross! Thou Who didst save Peter when he was ready to sink in the sea, have mercy upon us! Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. Behold the Cross of the Lord! * fly, ye ranks of the adversary! [1] The Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, hath prevailed. Alleluia.

Fourth Antiphon. [2] But us it behoveth to glory in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ. Alleluia!

Fifth Antiphon. By Thy Cross' holy sign, JESUS, guard this soul of mine from my ghostly enemy. Alleluia.

Chapter. (Phil. ii. 5.)

BRETHREN, let this mind be in you which was also in Christ JESUS, Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but emptied Himself, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men, and found in fashion as a man.

Hymn as on Passion Sunday, (p. 317.)

Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia.

Answer. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the song of Zacharias. Thou art higher than all cedars, whereon the Life of the world hung, whereon Christ openly triumphed, and His death trampled down death for ever. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst cause that the Cross of our salvation should in most honourable wise be found again, and Who didst manifest thereby the marvellous efficacy of Thy sufferings, mercifully grant that by the Ransom which Thou didst pay upon that tree of life we may finally attain unto life eternal: Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer throughout the day.

Then the following Commemoration is made of the Saints.

Antiphon. Come forth, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, and behold the martyrs with the crowns wherewith the Lord crowned them in the day of His feasting and of His gladness. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Precious in the sight of the LORD. Alleluia.

Answer. Is the death of His Saints. Alleluia.

Let us pray.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who do keep the birthday of Thy holy servants Alexander, Eventius, Theodulus, and Juvenal, may by their prayers be delivered from all evils that presently hang over us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

PRIME.

Antiphon. O what a work, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the blessed John Fisher, Cardinal Bishop of Rochester, the blessed Thomas More, sometime Lord Chancellor of England, and many other martyrs, who won the palm of martyrdom strenuously fighting for the Catholic faith and the Primacy of Peter. Their veneration, allowed by Gregory XIII., was confirmed by a solemn decree of Leo XIII.

Upon the same the 4th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Ostia, that is the mouth of the Tiber, [in the year 387,] the holy Monica, the mother of blessed Augustine, as to whose illustrious life he hath left unto us his witness in the ninth book of his Confessions, and of whom we keep feast on the 14th day of this present month of May.

At the mines of Phæno, in Palestine, the blessed Silvanus, Bishop of Gaza, who was crowned with martyrdom, [in the year 311,] along with many of his clergy, by order of the Cæsar Gallerius Maximian, in the persecution under Diocletian.

Also thirty-nine holy martyrs condemned to the mines at the same place, who, after they had been scorched with red-hot iron and had endured other torments, were beheaded at the same time.

At Jerusalem, Cyriacus, the holy Bishop [of Ancona,] who was on pilgrimage to the holy places when he was slain, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate.

In Umbria, the holy martyr Porphyry, [under the Emperor Decius.]

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Antonia. She was put grievously to the torture, and afflicted with divers sufferings. After she had been kept in prison for two years, and when she had been hung up by one arm for three days, at last the President Priscilian caused her to be burnt for confessing the Lord.

At Lorck, in Austria, the holy martyr Florian. A stone was tied to his neck and he was cast into the river Enns by order of the President Aquilinus, under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Tarsus, the holy Virgin Pelagia, who was shut up inside a bull of heated bronze, under Diocletian, and so finished her testimony.

---

[1] Apoc. v. 5.

[2] Gal. vi. 14.

At Cologne, the holy martyr Paulinus.

At Milan, [in the year 408,] the holy Venerius, Bishop of that place, as to whose excellency holy John Chrysostom hath left unto us his witness in the epistle which he wrote unto him.

In the district of Perigueax, [in the year 720,] the holy Sacerdos, Bishop of Limoges.

At Hildesheim, in Saxony, the holy Confessor Gothard, [Bishop of that see,] and who was numbered among the Saints by Pope Innocent II.

At Auxerre, the holy deacon Curcodomus [in the third century.]

Chapter at the end.

He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and hath given Him a Name which is above every name.

TERCE.

Antiphon. Save us, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)
Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Answer. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. When the Lord cometh to judgment.
Answer. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia.
Answer. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world. Alleluia.

SEXT.

Antiphon. Behold the Cross, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

The Chapter. (Gal. vi. 14.)

But God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

Short Responsory.

We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Answer. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.
Answer. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Answer. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee. Alleluia.
Answer. Let them sing praises to Thy Name, O Lord. Alleluia.

NONE.

Antiphon. By Thy Cross, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

Short Responsory.

Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Answer. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Let them sing praises to Thy Name, O Lord.
Answer. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee. Alleluia, Alleluia.
Verse. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven. Alleluia.
Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment. Alleluia.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following:

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Jesus, our Triumphant Head, on the Cross' Transom dread the Hands of power and mercy spread That broke the prison of the dead. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

May 4.

The Blessed Martyrs John, Cardinal Bishop of Rochester, Thomas More, and their Companions.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 576,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst raise up the blessed martyrs Bishop John and his companions of all degrees to bear witness amid the English people on behalf of the true faith and of the supreme Pontificate, grant unto us, for their sake and at their prayers, that by profession of the same faith for the which they died we all may become and be one, according to the prayer of Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Romans viii. 12, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ENGLAND had once been a mother of Saints, and among them, in the earlier times, some who had witnessed a good confession for Christ, sealing it with their blood. Then the Church of that land was for a long time at peace, until in the sixteenth century she was violently troubled by the apostacy of King Henry VIII., and she became bright with martyrs, whose number and actions were no less than those of them of old time. By the tyrannous power of her princes the kingdom of England was wrenched away from the Apostolic See, from which she had originally received the faith. But very many, both men and women of all degrees, but chiefly of the clergy, were found who were willing to expose their lives to torments and death rather than break the faith which they owed to Christ and His Church. Among the most eminent of these, who were indeed, as it were, the standard-bearers of the whole army, were John Fisher, Cardinal Bishop of Rochester; Thomas More, sometime Lord High Chancellor of the kingdom; the Priest Thomas Woodhouse; Cuthbert Mayne, likewise a Priest, who was the first of the students of the seminaries who gained the crown of martyrdom; John Houghton, Prior of the London Charterhouse; John Forest, Minister Provincial of the Order of Franciscan Friars Minors; John Stone, of the Order of Hermits of St Augustine; and Edmund Campion, of the Society of Jesus.

Fifth Lesson.

THE cunning of the persecutors, in union with their cruelty, left no device untried to deprive the martyrs of their due praise and glory, under false accusations of treason. It was made treason and a capital offence not to recognise the sacred headship over the Church of England which King Henry had assumed for himself. But it was manifest to all men that it was for their faith's sake that they suffered death, because they believed and fearlessly confessed that authority of such sort had been conferred upon no others, but upon blessed Peter, and upon his successors the Bishops of Rome. For this reason the Apostolic See held them to be true martyrs in the proper sense of the word, and appointed Bishops carefully to gather their memorials, lest their memories should pass away by lapse of time. Thus did God provide that, with the help of their very persecutors, in the public records of England, not only the fame of the martyrs but the precise days and causes of their deaths should be handed down to this present age.

Sixth Lesson.

GREGORY XIII., who knew concerning the suffering of many and the cause thereof, permitted the use toward the English martyrs of certain things which are of the nature of public veneration; and indeed granted that their relics might be used for the consecration of altars, as being those of martyrs. Moreover, he permitted that at Rome, in the church of the Most Holy Trinity, belonging unto the English College, there should be set forth certain pictures not only of the earlier English martyrs, but also of those who had died for the Catholic faith and for the primacy of the Roman Pontiff, from the 85th until the 93rd year of that century. A book was published at Rome, with the approval of the same Pontiff, wherein prints of these pictures were inserted along with the figures of the older martyrs. The Supreme Pontiff, Leo XIII., when he had duly considered these authorisations of the Apostolic See and other matters conjoined therewith, held as established, and by his solemn decree confirmed, in accordance with a vote of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, the honours paid to fifty-four of these martyrs; whose names have been ascertained beyond doubt. Thereafter the same Pontiff, at the prayer of Henry Edward Manning, Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster, and of the other Bishops of England, granted that the sacred festival of these martyrs should be kept every year upon the 4th day of May.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (x. 23.)

AT that time: JESUS walked in the Temple in Solomon's Porch. Then came the Jews round about Him and said unto Him, How long dost Thou make us to doubt, and so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow,] (on the Dedication of the Church.)

["My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand."]

The wicked persecutors strove to pluck Christ's godly Confessors out of His hand. When they put them to the torture to cause them deny His faith that they might set their souls at enmity with Him, or even when their victims had conquered them by dying, they still committed their lifeless bodies to the waters to be turned into corruption, or cast them into the fire to be burned, as if they could thereby take away from Christ His power to raise them up again; but none were able to pluck them out of His hand.

Eighth Lesson.

NONE were able to pluck them out of His hand, for it is He Who strengtheneth them that fight that they may conquer; and Who crowneth them that conquer that they may reign with Him for ever and ever. And in His own good time He will give back to them that very flesh wherein they have striven, changed so that it can die no more. And by these words He rebuked the folly of them who were laying deadly snares for Himself; showing that they were fools that should think of destroying Him Who is able to give eternal life, and out of Whose hand no man shall pluck those whom He had foreknown to be His own before the world was.

Ninth Lesson.

BUT lest by thus speaking He should seem to seek His own glory, He referreth all His own power to the glory of the Father, and saith, "My Father Which gave them Me is greater than all"; that is to say, that the Only-Begotten Son is in nothing different in nature or weaker in power or later in time than Him Who begetteth Him. Above He had said of His sheep, "No man shall pluck them out of My hand," and now He saith again, "And no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hand," giving us plainly to wit that the hand, that is to say, the power, of Himself and of the Father is one and the same.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Virgin Katharine of Sienna, of the Order of St Dominic, famous for her life and miracles, whose name Pius II. enrolled among those of the holy Virgins, and of whom mention is made upon the 30th day of April.

Upon the same 5th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 1572,] the holy Pope Pius V., of the Order of Friars Preachers, who toiled mightily and happily to restore the discipline of the Church, to root out heresies, and to crush the enemies of Christianity, and who governed the Catholic Church in holiness of life and lawgiving; whose feast we keep upon the 11th day of this present month of May.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyr Crescentiana.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyr Silvanus.

At Alexandria, the holy Deacon Euthymius, who died a prisoner for Christ's sake.

At Thessalonica, the holy martyrs Irenæus, Peregrinus, and Irene, who were burnt with fire.

At Auxerre, [in the year 304,] the holy martyr, the Reader Jovinian.

At Licata, in Sicily, [about the year 1225,] the holy Priest Angelus, of the Order of Carmelite Friars, who was murdered by heretics for defending the Catholic faith.

At Jerusalem, the holy Confessor Maximus, Bishop of that city. The Cæsar Maximian Galerius plucked out one of his eyes, maimed one of his feet with hot iron, and condemned him to penal servitude in the mines.

At Edessa, in Syria, the holy Confessor Eulogius, Bishop of Edessa.

At Arles, in Gaul, [in the year 449,] holy Hilary, Bishop [of Arles,] famous for his teaching and holiness.

At Vienne, in Gaul, [about the fourth century,] holy Nicetus,[1] Bishop of that see, worshipful for his holiness.

At Bologna [about the year 540,] holy Theodore, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his worthy works.

Likewise, [about the year 550,] holy Sacerdos, Bishop of Murviedro, in Spain.

At Milan, [in the year 470,] holy Gerontius, Bishop [of that see.]

On this day is also commemorated, at Milan, the conversion of holy Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] and Doctor of the Church, to whom the truth of the Catholic faith was taught by the blessed Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan,] and whom he upon this day baptized.

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following.

MAY 5.

St Katharine of Sienna, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we which do keep the birthday of Thy blessed Virgin Katharine, and do year by year renew her memorial with solemn gladness in Thy presence, may likewise be conformed to the pattern of her saintly walk with Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Peter, Martyr. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Katharine was a maiden of Sienna, and was born of godly parents, [in the year 1347.] She took the habit of the Third Order of St Dominick. Her fasts were most severe, and the austerity of her life wonderful. It was discovered that on some occasions she took no food at all from Ash Wednesday till Ascension Day, receiving all needful strength by taking the Holy Communion. She was engaged oftentimes in a wrestling with devils, and was sorely tried by them with divers assaults: she was consumed by fevers, and suffered likewise from other diseases. Great and holy was the name of Katharine, and sick folk, and such as were vexed with evil spirits, were brought to her from all quarters. Through the Name of Christ, she had command over sickness and fever, and forced the foul spirits to leave the bodies of the tormented.

Fifth Lesson.

WHILE she dwelt at Pisa, on a certain Lord's Day, after she had received the Living Bread Which came down from heaven, she was in the spirit; and saw the Lord nailed to the Cross advancing towards her. There was a great light round about Him, and five rays of light streaming from the five marks of the Wounds in His Feet, and Hands, and Side, which smote her upon the five corresponding places in her body. When Katharine perceived this vision, she besought the Lord that no marks might become manifest upon her flesh, and straightway the five beams of light changed from the colour of blood into that of gold, and touched in the form of pure light her feet, and hands, and side. At this moment the agony which she felt was so piercing, that she believed that if God had not lessened it, she would have died. Thus the Lord in His great love for her, gave her this great grace, in a new and twofold manner, namely, that she felt all the pain of the wounds, but without there being any bloody marks to meet the gaze of men. This was the account given by the handmaiden of God to her Confessor, Raymund, and it is for this reason that when the godly wishes of the faithful lead them to make pictures of the blessed Katharine, they paint her with golden rays of light proceeding from those five places in her body which correspond to the five places wherein our Lord was wounded by the nails and spear.

Sixth Lesson.

THE learning which Katharine had was not acquired but inspired. She answered Professors of Divinity upon the very hardest questions concerning God. No one was ever in her company without going away better. She healed many hatreds, and quieted the most deadly feuds. To make peace for the Florentines, who had quarrelled with the Church, and were under an Ecclesiastical Interdict, she travelled to Avignon, [in 1376,] to see the Chief Pontiff Gregory XI. To him she showed that she had had revealed to her from heaven his secret purpose of going back to Rome, which had been known only to God and himself. It was at her persuasion, as well as by his own judgment, that the Pope did in the end return to his own See. She was much respected by this Gregory, as well as by his successor Urban VI., who even employed her in their embassies. The Bridegroom took her home, [upon the 29th day of April, in the year of salvation 1380,] when she was about thirty-three years old, after she had given almost countless proofs of extraordinary Christian graces, and manifestly displayed the gifts of Prophecy and miracles. Pope Pius II. enrolled her among the Virgin Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy [Apostle and Evangelist] John before the Latin gate at Rome. He had been brought bound from Ephesus to Rome by command of Domitian, and by the judgment of the Senate he was put into a vessel of boiling oil before the said gate, but he came out thereof cleaner and healthier than he was when he was put therein, [about the year 95.]

Upon the same the 6th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy Evodius, who, as the blessed Ignatius writeth unto the Antiochenes, was ordained the first Bishop there, by the holy Apostle Peter, and who finished his life by a glorious testimony, [in the year 62.]

At Cyrene, [in the first century,] the holy Bishop Lucius, of whom the holy [Evangelist] Luke maketh mention in the Acts of the Apostles, [and the holy Apostle Paul in his Epistle to the Romans.]

In Africa, the holy martyrs Heliodorus and Venustus, and seventy-five others.

In Cyprus, [in the fourth century,] the holy Theodotus, Bishop of Cyrinia, who suffered most grievous persecution under the Emperor Licinius, but saw the peace of the Church before he gave up his spirit to God.

At Damascus, [in the year 780,] blessed John of Damascus, famous for holiness and teaching. He strove manfully for the honouring of the holy images, both by word and writing, against the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, wherefore the Emperor commanded that his right hand should be smitten off, whereupon he commended himself to the image of the Blessed Virgin Mary which he had defended, and forthwith he received back his hand whole and sound, of whom we keep feast upon the 27th day of March.

At Charran, in Mesopotamia, the Bishop Protogenes.

In England, [in the year 718,] the holy Eadberth, Bishop of Lindisfarne, famous for teaching and godliness, [who held the see of Lindisfarne for eleven years next after holy Cuthbert.]

At Rome, the holy Virgin Benedicta, [sister of the holy widow Galla.]

At Salerno, feast is kept for the translation of the holy Apostle Matthew, whose sacred body was brought of old time out of Ethiopia into divers countries, and at last to that city, where it was buried with all honour under the church dedicated in his name.

Vespers are of the following, with Commemoration of the preceding.

MAY 6.

The Testifying of the Holy Apostle John before the Latin Gate.[1]

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Apostles in Paschal time, (p. 576,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Which seest that sins and sufferings do on every side rise up to trouble us, grant, we beseech Thee, that we may find a shield in time of need through the glorious prayers of Thy blessed Apostle and Evangelist, John. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The blessed Apostle John was cast into a vessel of boiling oil, but by the favour and protection of God, he came out unharmed. Alleluia.

Commemoration of St Katharine, "Come, Bride of Christ," &c. (p. 641.) Prayer from her Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are from Scripture according to the Season, if they happen to be taken from the Apocalypse, or from one of St John's Epistles. If not, they are:

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle John (i. 1.)

THAT Which was from the beginning, Which we have heard, Which we have seen with our eyes, Which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life, (and the Life was manifested, and we have seen It, and bear witness, and show unto you that Eternal Life, Which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us) That Which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship be with the Father, and with His Son JESUS Christ. And these things we write unto you that ye may rejoice, and that your joy may be full. This then is the message which we have heard of Him, and declare unto you: That God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all.

---

[1] The gate of Rome opening towards Latium.

First Responsory.

Very worshipful is blessed John, which leaned on the Lord's Breast at supper. To him did Christ upon the Cross commit His mother, maiden to maiden.

Verse. The Lord chose him for his clean maidenhood, and loved him more than all the rest.

Answer. To him did Christ upon the Cross commit His mother, maiden to maiden.

Second Lesson.

IF we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of JESUS Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make Him a liar, and His word is not in us.

Second Responsory.

[1] This is the disciple which testifyeth of these things, and wrote these things. And we know that his testimony is true.

Verse. He drank in the rivers of the Gospel from the Lord's Breast as from an holy fountain.

Answer. And we know that his testimony is true.

Third Lesson. (ii. 1.)

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, JESUS Christ the righteous: and He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. And hereby we do know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments. He that saith, I know Him, and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth His word, in him verily is the love of God perfected. Hereby know we that we are in Him. He that saith he abideth in Him, ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked.

Third Responsory.

This is that most blessed Evangelist and Apostle John. Who was found worthy that the Lord should honour him more than all the rest, by a special privilege of love.

Verse. [2] This is the disciple whom JESUS loved, which also leaned on the Lord's Breast at supper.

Answer. Who was found worthy that the Lord should honour him more than all the rest, by a special privilege of love.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who was found worthy that the Lord should honour him more than all the rest, by a special privilege of love.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book against Jovinian written by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i.)

THE Apostle John was one of the disciples of the Lord. There is a tradition that he was the youngest of the Apostles. He was a virgin when the Faith of Christ found him, and he hath remained a virgin for ever. This is why he was "the disciple whom JESUS loved" more than any of the others, and why he "leaned on JESUS' Breast." When Peter, who had been married, wished to ask the Lord who it was that was about to betray Him, he dared not ask for himself, but beckoned to John, that he should ask it. (John xiii. 23, 24.) After the Resurrection, when "Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that the Lord was risen, Peter and John ran both together to the sepulchre, but John did outrun Peter." (xx. 2-4.) Later on, when the Apostles were on the Sea of Galilee, in a ship, fishing, "JESUS stood on the shore, but the disciples knew not that it was JESUS," till virgin knew Virgin, and "that disciple whom JESUS loved saith unto Peter: It is the Lord." (xxi. 2-7.)

Fifth Lesson.

JOHN was both an Apostle, and an Evangelist, and a Prophet. He was an Apostle, in that he wrote to the Churches, as their Teacher. He was an Evangelist, in that he wrote one of the Gospels, the like whereto was not done by any other of the twelve Apostles, save Matthew. He was a Prophet, in that when he was in the isle of Patmos, whither he had been banished by Domitian on account of his uplifting of his testimony for the Lord, he saw there that Apocalypse which containeth such unfathomable mysteries concerning "things which shall be hereafter." (Apoc. i. 19.) Tertullian also saith that when he was at Rome, he was put into a vessel of boiling oil, but that he came out cleaner and healthier than he went in.

Sixth Lesson.

THERE is a great difference between his Gospel and the three others. Matthew beginneth to write as of a man: "The Book of the Generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham." Luke's first words of history relate to the priesthood of Zacharias: Mark commenceth with the prophecies of Malachi and Isaiah. The first hath the face of a man, with an human genealogy; the second hath the face of a calf, being a victim offered by priests; the third hath the face of a lion, even "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make His paths straight;" but the John of whom I write is like a flying eagle, (Apoc. iv. 7,) whose kingly flight beareth him up above earth-gathered clouds, an eagle that wingeth his way toward the Father Himself, and which crieth: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." (John i. 1.)

---

[1] John xxi. 24.

[2] John xxi. 20.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xx. 20.)

AT that time: Came to JESUS the mother of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshipping Him, and desiring a certain thing of Him. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Comment. on Matt. xx. Bk. 3.)

Whence had the mother of Zebedee's children gotten her idea of the Lord's kingdom? He had but just said (18-20:) "The Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles to mock, [and to scourge,] and to crucify Him." He had told His trembling disciples of the outrages that awaited Him in His Passion; and yet that mother came to Him to ask for her sons a share in the glory of His Triumph. I think it was because the Lord, after He had said all the rest, had said also: "And the third day He shall rise again." The woman supposed that after His resurrection His kingdom would immediately be established, and that that would be fulfilled at His first coming which is promised at His second. And so, with womanly haste, she forgetteth the future, and catcheth at the present.

Eighth Lesson.

IT was the mother who asked, but the Lord addressed His answer to the disciples, understanding that she had made her prayer in obedience to their wishes. "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of?" From God's written Word we gather that by this cup, He meant the Passion, touching the which we read that He said: "O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me!" (Matth. xxvi. 39.) Likewise is it written in the hundred-and-fifteenth Psalm (13): "I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the Name of the LORD," and what that life-giving cup was, the words which soon follow tell us: "Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints."

Ninth Lesson.

THE question ariseth, how the two sons of Zebedee, James namely and John, drank of the cup of contention even unto blood against sin, seeing that though we know by the Scriptures that "Herod the king killed James the brother of John with the sword," (Acts xii. 1, 2,) yet John ended his earthly life by a natural death. But if we read the Records of the Church, we shall find there told how that John, on account of his testifying to the truth, was cast into a vessel of boiling oil, and although the holy champion came out unhurt and continued his pilgrimage here for a while longer, before he received his crown from Christ's hand, being straightway banished into the isle of Patmos, yet we see that he had the soul of a martyr, and drank the same cup of martyrdom that was drunk by the three children in the burning fiery furnace, albeit the persecutor did not actually shed his blood.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Kracow, in Poland, the holy Bishop and martyr Stanislaw, slain by the wicked king Boleslaw II., [in the year 1079.]

At Tarracina, in Campania, [in the year 99,] the blessed Virgin and martyr Flavia Domitilla. She was sister's daughter to the Consul Flavius Clemens, and had been consecrated with the sacred veil by holy Clement. In the persecution under Domitian she and very many others were banished into the island of Ponza for bearing witness to Christ, and there she endured a long martyrdom. Last of all she was brought to Tarracina, where by her teaching and miracles she turned many to believe in Christ, and then finished the glorious course of her testimony by being burnt in her bed-chamber, wherein she dwelt along with her maidens Euphrosyne and Theodora. Her memory is kept upon the 12th day of May, along with that of the holy martyrs Nereus and Achilles.

[At Benevento,] the holy martyr Juvenal, [Bishop of that see.]

At Nicomedia, [under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy brethren Flavius Augustus and Augustine, martyrs.

There also, in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyr Quadratus, who was oftentimes put to the torture, and at last beheaded.

At Rome, [in the year 686,] the holy Pope and Confessor Benedict.

At York, in England, [in the year 721,] the holy John [of Beverley,] Bishop [of that see,] famous for his life and miracles, whose feast we keep upon the 25th day of October.

At Pavia, the holy Peter, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome is commemorated the translation of the body of the holy proto-martyr Stephen, which the Supreme Pontiff Pelagius brought to Rome from Constantinople, and laid in the sepulchre of the holy martyr Laurence, outside the walls, where it is held in great reverence by the godly.

At Second Vespers, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as at the First, and a Commemoration of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

MAY 7.

St Stanislaw, Bishop [of Crakow,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 576,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Stanislaw was a Pole. He was born of a noble family, [on the 26th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1030,] at [Szczepanow, in the diocese of] Crakow. His godly parents, who had been childless for thirty years, obtained him from God by prayer, and from his earliest years he gave token of the holiness of life which afterwards marked him. When he was a young man he applied himself heartily to all useful learning, and was deeply read in the sacred teaching of the Canons and of Theological science. After the death of his parents he inherited great possessions, but he sold them, and distributed the price to the poor, purposing himself to become a monk. However, by the Providence of God, Lampert, Bishop of Crakow, named him Canon of the Cathedral Church of that diocese, and Preacher in the same: and afterwards, [in 1072,] he was elected, against his own will, to succeed to Lampert's place. In this office he was a bright and shining light of all virtues that become a shepherd of souls, especially of tenderness toward the poor.

Fifth Lesson.

AT that time Boleslaw II. was King of Poland, and him Stanislaw grievously offended, because he openly rebuked him for his shameless lust. Wherefore, in a solemn Parliament of his kingdom, he made Stanislaw to be brought before him on a false accusation of having taken wrongfully a certain village, which he had bought in the name of his Church. The Bishop could not rebut this charge by documents, and the witnesses were in too great fear to speak the truth. Stanislaw therefore said that in three days he would produce before the judgment-seat one Peter, from whom he had bought the village, and who had been dead three years. His enemies laughed thereat, and closed with his proposal, and the man of God gave himself up to fasting and prayer for three days. On the day which he had promised, after he had offered up the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, he commanded Peter to rise from the grave. Peter then immediately came to life, arose, and followed Stanislaw to the King's judgment-seat, where before the King and all others, who were struck dumb with amazement, he bore witness of the sale of the village, and the honest payment of the price by the Bishop, and then again fell asleep in the Lord.

Sixth Lesson.

STANISLAW often rebuked Boleslaw, but when he found it was in vain, he at last cut him off from the communion of Christ's faithful people. Thereupon Boleslaw became frenzied with rage, and [on the 8th of May, in the year 1079,] sent soldiers to the Church to murder the holy Bishop. This they thrice essayed to do, but God was pleased that they should be held back by some unseen power. In the end, the ungodly King with his own hand cut off the head of the Priest of God as he was standing at the Altar offering up the Sacrifice without spot. His body was hewn into pieces and strewn about the fields, but the eagles strangely kept the beasts of prey off it. The Canons of the Cathedral of Crakow soon gathered together the mutilated and scattered limbs, which they were enabled to see by a lightness which overspread the sky at night; and they fitted them together, each into his place. The reliques immediately so joined themselves one to the other, that no marks of wounds remained. Moreover, God was pleased to manifest the holiness of His servant by many wonders after his death, by the which being moved, Pope Innocent IV. added his name to those of the Saints, and the Supreme Pontiff Clement VIII. gave his Feast a place in the Service Book of the Church of Rome, commanding that the memory of so glorious a Martyr should be everywhere celebrated under the Double rite.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons in Paschal-time from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, p. 578, out of Paschal-time, from Luke xxi. 9, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 606.)

Prayer throughout the day.

O GOD, for Whose glory the noble Bishop Stanislaw fell by the swords of sinful men, grant, we beseech Thee, that all whosoever ask his help, may find such answer to their petition as may profit them to the everlasting salvation of their souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is kept the feast in honour of the Manifestation of the holy Archangel Michael on Mount Gargano.

Upon the same 8th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Milan, the holy martyr Victor. He was a Moor by nation, and had been bred up a Christian from a child. He was a soldier in the Imperial Camp when he was commanded by Maximian to sacrifice to idols, but continued manfully to own the Lord. He was first heavily cudgelled, but God shielded him from pain: and then molten lead was poured upon him, but by this also he was not hurt; and so at last, being beheaded, finished the glorious course of his testimony.

At Constantinople, the holy Centurion Acathius, who in the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian was denounced as a Christian by the Tribune Firmus. He was most cruelly tortured at Perinthos, on the Black Sea, by Bibianus the judge, and was lastly condemned to death at Byzantium by the Pro-Consul Flaccinus. By the Will of God his body was afterwards carried to the shore at Squillacio in Calabria, where it is honourably buried.

At Vienna, the holy Confessor Denis, Bishop [of that see.]

At Auxerre, [toward the close of the fourth century,] the holy Helladius, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Besançon, [in the year 1174,] the holy Peter, Bishop [of Tarantaise.]

In Ireland, [about the year 700,] the holy Bishop Wiro.

Vespers are of the following.

MAY 8.

Manifestation of the holy Archangel Michael.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays except the following.

If this Feast should happen to be observed out of Paschal-time, then the word "Alleluia" is omitted, wherever it is here given in brackets [ ], the Antiphons at Mattins are as on September 29, and the Short Responsories are also said as on that day.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm, Ps. cxvi. O Praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

THEE, O Christ, the Father's Splendour
Life and virtue of the heart,
In the presence of the Angels
Sing we now with tuneful art:
Meetly in alternate chorus
Bearing our responsive part.

Thus we praise with veneration
All the armies of the sky:
Chiefly him, the warrior Primate
Of celestial chivalry:
Michael, who in princely virtue
Cast Abaddon from on high.

By whose watchful care, repelling,
King of everlasting grace!
Every ghostly adversary,
All things evil, all things base;
Grant us of Thine only goodness
In Thy paradise a place.

Laud and honour to the Father;
Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
Ever Three, and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

Verse. [2] An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. While as John was gazing upon the holy mystery, the Archangel Michael sounded his trumpet: Forgive us, O Lord our God, Which openest the book, and loosest the seals thereof. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from that Office.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Archangels. * O come let us worship Him. [Alleluia.]

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Antiphon. The sea was moved and the earth quaked, when the Archangel Michael descended from heaven. [Alleluia.]

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall dwell, &c., (p. 6.)

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (vii. 9.)

I BEHELD till the thrones were set, and the Ancient of days did sit; Whose garment was white as snow, and the Hair of His Head like the pure wool: His throne, the fiery flame; His wheels, burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before Him. Thousands of thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times hundreds of thousands stood before Him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn[3] spake: and I saw that the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to be burnt with fire.

First Responsory.[4]

THERE was silence in heaven while the dragon fought against Michael the Archangel. I heard the voice of thousands of thousands, saying: Salvation, and honour, and power unto God the Almighty. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Thousands of thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times hundreds of thousands stood before Him.

Answer. I heard the voice of thousands of thousands, saying: Salvation, and honour, and power unto God, the Almighty. [Alleluia.]

Second Lesson. (x. 4.)

AND in the four-and-twentieth day of the first month, I was by the side of the great river, which is the Tigris. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked; and, behold, a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz:[5] his body also was like the chrysolite, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire; and his arms and his lower parts at his feet like in appearance to shining brass; and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I Daniel alone saw the vision; for the men that were with me saw it not; but a great fear fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me; for my comeliness[6] was changed in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

Second Responsory.

An Angel stood at the Altar of the temple, having a golden censer in his hand; and there was given unto him much incense; and the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [7] Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee; I will worship toward Thy holy temple, and praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Answer. And the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand. [Alleluia.]

Third Lesson.

YET heard I the voice of his words; and when I heard, I fell down astounded upon my face, and my face clave unto the ground. And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands. And he said unto me: O Daniel, thou man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright; for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me: Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one-and-twenty days, but, lo! Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, and I then obtained the victory with the Kings of Persia.[1] Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days, for yet the vision is [not to be fulfilled] till [after many] days.

[6] Viz., says Gesenius, "the lively colour of my face."

[7] Ps. cxxxvii. 12.

Third Responsory.

Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, and will worship toward Thy holy temple. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord. [Alleluia.]

Verse. For Thy loving-kindness, and for Thy truth; for Thou hast glorified Thine holy Name on us.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord. [Alleluia.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

Antiphon. Archangel Michael, come to help God's people. [Alleluia.]

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Out of the Angel's hand. [Alleluia.]

Fourth Lesson.

THAT the blessed Archangel Michael hath oftentimes been seen of men is attested on the authority of the Holy Bible, and also by the ancient traditions of the Saints. For this reason such visions are held in remembrance in many places. As of old time did the Synagogue of the Jews, so now doth the Church of God venerate Michael as her watcher and defender. But during the Popedom of Gelasius I. the summit of Mount Gargano in Apulia, at whose foot lieth the town of Siponto, was the scene of an extraordinary appearance of this same Archangel Michael.

Fourth Responsory.

This is Michael, who to battle leads the armies of the skies; whosoever on him calleth blessed within his wardship lies. His a prayer whose voice availing aids from earth toward heaven to rise. [Alleluia.]

Verse. The Archangel Michael is the Vice-Roy of Paradise, and the Angels that are the dwellers therein, do hold him in worship.

Answer. Whosoever on him calleth blessed within his wardship lies. His a prayer whose voice availing aids from earth toward heaven to rise. [Alleluia.]

Fifth Lesson.

AND it came to pass on this wise. A certain man had a bull grazing with the flock upon Mount Gargano, and it strayed. And when they had sought it for a long while they found it jammed in the mouth of a cavern. Then one that stood there shot an arrow at it to slay it, but the arrow turned round and came back against him that had shot it. They therefore that saw it, and all those that heard it, were sore afraid because of that which had come to pass, so that no man dared any more to draw near to the cavern. But when they had sought counsel of the Bishop of Siponto, he answered, that it behoved to seek the interpretation from God, and proclaimed three days of fasting and prayer.

Fifth Responsory.

Where Angels lead the spirits of the blessed dead the glad procession moves with Michael at its head, to lead them into the garden of Eden. [Alleluia.]

Verse. [2] O Lord, send Thy Holy Spirit from heaven: the Spirit of wisdom and understanding.

Answer. To lead them into the garden of Eden. [Alleluia.]

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER three days the Archangel Michael gave warning to the Bishop that that place was under his protection, and that he had thus pointed out by a sign that he wished that worship should be offered to God there, with remembrance of himself and of the Angels. Then the Bishop and the citizens made haste and came to the cavern; and when they found that the form thereof was somewhat after the fashion of a Church, they began to perform the public worship of God therein: which sanctuary hath been glorified with many miracles. It was not long after these things that Pope Boniface IV. hallowed the Church of St Michael on Hadrian's Mole at Rome, on the 29th day of September, on the which day the Church also holdeth in remembrance All Angels. But this present day is hallowed in remembrance of the manifestation of the Archangel Michael.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] At that time shall Michael stand up, which standeth for your children. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time. [Alleluia.]

Verse. At that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the Book of Life.

Answer. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time. [Alleluia.]

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

---

[1] This is Gesenius' rendering of this passage in his Lexicon. The Latin, like the Hebrew, is literally "I remained with," but Gesenius takes the sense of being fully up with, &c., "Joined in battle with them, I held my own." Comp. "to stand one's ground."

[2] Cf. Wisd. ix. 17; Is. xi. 2.

[3] Dan. xii. 1.

Answer. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time. [Alleluia.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Antiphon. The Angel Michael the Archangel, he is the messenger whom God sendeth to all the souls of the righteous. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)
Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)
Ps. cii. Bless the LORD, O my soul, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. [Alleluia.]
Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name. [Alleluia.]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: Came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Com. on Matth. xviii.)

"Unless ye become as little children," saith the Lord, "ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," that is, unless by the uprooting of bodily and mental depravity, we bring our souls to the innocency of childhood. But He giveth the name of children to all such as believe by the hearing of faith. Children follow their father, love their mother, know not how to wish evil to their neighbours, are not careful for earthly riches; they insult not, they hate not, they lie not, they believe what they are told, and take for truth what they hear. Us then it behoveth to return to the simpleness of little children, for when we are well rooted therein, we shall so far bear about in ourselves an image of the sublime simpleness of the Lord JESUS.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] Be not ye afraid before the Gentiles: but in your hearts, worship ye the Lord, and fear Him; for His Angel is with you. [Alleluia.]
Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.
Verse. For His Angel is with you. [Alleluia.]

Eighth Lesson.

"WOE unto the world because of offences!" The lowliness of the Passion is an offence unto the world. Such is the state of stupidity to which man's ignorance hath reduced itself, that it turneth away from the Lord of Eternal Glory, because of the unsightliness of the Cross! And what is so certain to bring woe unto the world as to turn away from Christ? And therefore He saith: "It must needs be that offences come," because His fulfilling the lowliness of the Passion was the predestined mean whereby He was to give us eternal life.

Eighth Responsory.

The Archangel Michael came to help God's people. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous. [Alleluia.]
Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.
Answer. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous. [Alleluia.]
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous. [Alleluia.]

Ninth Lesson.

"TAKE heed that ye despise not one of these little ones that believe in Me." He hath laid on us a most meet tie to constrain us to love one another, especially such as indeed believe in the Lord. "For I say unto you that in heaven their Angels do always behold the face of My Father Which is in heaven. For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." From these words we see, first, that the Son of man saveth; secondly, that the Angels do see God; and thirdly, that the Angels of these little ones have the wardship over the prayers of the faithful. That the Angels have this wardship is taught us absolutely. The Angels therefore do every day offer to God the prayers which they which are saved do make to Him in the Name of Christ. Therefore it is dangerous for a man to despise them, seeing that these are they by whose watchful service and ministry, his wishes and requests are presented before the throne of the eternal and unseen God.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. An Angel stood at the Altar * of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]
Second Antiphon. While as the Archangel Michael fought against the dragon, * I heard voices saying: Salvation unto our God. Alleluia.
Third Antiphon. Michael Mine Archangel, * I have appointed thee for a prince over the ingathering of souls. [Alleluia.]
Fourth Antiphon. O ye Angels of the Lord, bless ye the Lord alway. [Alleluia.]
Fifth Antiphon. O ye Angels and Archangels, * O ye Thrones and Dominions, O ye Principalities and Powers, O ye mighty Ones of heaven, praise ye the Lord from the heavens! Alleluia.

Chapter. (Apoc. i. 1.)

GOD gave unto JESUS Christ to show unto His servants the things which must shortly come to pass: and He sent and signified it by His Angel unto His servant John; who bare witness of the Word of God and of the testimony of JESUS Christ, of all the things which he saw.

Hymn.[2]

CHRIST! of the holy Angels light and gladness,
Maker and Saviour of the human race,
O may we reach the world unknown to sadness,
The blessed mansions where they see Thy Face!

[1] Baruch vi. 5, 6.

[2] Translation by the Rev. W. J. Copeland.

Angel of peace, may Michael to our dwelling
Down from high Heaven in mighty calmness come,
Breathing serenest peace, wild war dispelling
With all her sorrows to the infernal gloom.

Angel of might, may Gabriel swift descending,
Far from our gates our ancient foes repel,
And his own triumphs o'er the world defending,
In temples dear to Heaven return and dwell.

Angel of health, may Raphael lighten o'er us,
To every sick-bed speed his healing flight,
In times of doubt direct the way before us,
And through life's mazes guide our steps aright.

The Virgin, harbinger of peace supernal,
Mother of Light, with all the Angelic train,
Heaven's glittering host, court of the King Eternal,
All Saints be with us, till that bliss we gain.

Be this by Thy thrice holy Godhead granted,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest;
Whose glory by the Angel host is chanted,
Whose Name by all the universe confest.
Amen.

Verse. An Angel stood at the altar of the Temple. [Alleluia.]

Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. [Alleluia.]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. There was silence in heaven while as the dragon made war, and Michael fought against him, and prevailed over him. [Alleluia.]

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast ordained and constituted the services of angels and men in a wonderful order, mercifully grant that as Thy holy angels alway do Thee service in heaven, so, by Thy appointment, they may succour and defend us on earth. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Nazianzus, in Cappadocia, the blessed Gregory, Archbishop of Constantinople, who on account of his wonderful teaching of the things of God is surnamed the Theologian, who set up again the Catholic faith at Constantinople when it had fallen, and stilled the swelling waves of heresy.

At Rome, the holy Hermes, of whom the Apostle Paul maketh mention in his Epistle to the Romans. He made a worthy offering of himself, and being made acceptable as a sacrifice to God, he departed hence to the kingdom of heaven, famous for good works.

In Persia, 310 holy martyrs.

At Cagli, on the Flaminian Way, suffered the holy Gerontius, Bishop of Cervia.

At Vendome, [in the third century,] deceased, the holy Confessor Beatus.

At Constantinople is commemorated the translation of the bodies of the holy Apostle Andrew, and of the holy Evangelist Luke, out of the Peloponnesos, and of that of Timothy, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul, out of Ephesos. The body of the holy Andrew was carried to Amalfi a long while after, and godly multitudes of the faithful there gather to do it reverence. At the grave thereof is secreted a liquid for the healing of diseases.

There is also commemorated at Rome the translation of the body of the holy Priest Jerome, Doctor of the Church, from Bethlehem of Juda into the cathedral church of St Mary-by-the-Manger, [commonly called St Mary the Greater.]

Also there is commemorated at Bari, in Apulia, the translation thither of the body of the holy Bishop Nicholas, from [his see at] Myra, a city of Lycia.

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. xii. 7.)

THERE was a great war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought, and his angels: and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

MATTINS.

The third verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. On Rogation Monday or Wednesday, from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Gregory, to whom is commonly given, on account of his extraordinary depth of sacred learning, the title of "the Divine," was a noble Cappadocian, born at Nazianzus[1] in that country, and educated at Athens along with St Basil, with whom likewise, when they had acquired knowledge in divers branches of earthly learning, he gave himself up to learn the things of God. This they did for some years in a Monastery, framing their opinions, not out of their own heads, but according to the interpretation arrived at by the wisdom and decision of the antients. They were both distinguished by power of doctrine and holiness of life; they were both called to the duty of preaching the Gospel of truth; and through the Gospel they both begat many sons unto Christ.

Fifth Lesson.

GREGORY after a while returned home. He was first made Bishop of Sasima, and afterwards administered the Church at Nazianzus. Then he was called to rule the Church of Constantinople. That city, which he found reeking with heresy, he purged, and brought again to the Catholic faith.[2] But this, which deserved for him the warmest love of all men, raised up many enemies. Among the Bishops themselves there was a great party against him, and to still their contentions, he, of his own free will, gave up his see, saying with the Prophet Jonah: "Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea: so shall the sea be calm unto you; for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you," (i. 12.) So he went his way back again to Nazianzus, and when he had seen that Eulalius was set over that Church, he gave himself up altogether to think and write concerning the things of God.

Sixth Lesson.

HE wrote much, both in prose and verse, with wonderful godliness and eloquence. According to the judgment of learned and holy men, there is nothing in his writings which anywhere strays from the line of true godliness and Catholic truth, and not a single word which any one can justly call in doubt. He was one of the latest champions of the doctrine that the Son is of one substance with the Father. No one has ever won greater praise for goodness of life, neither was any man more earnest in prayer. During the reign of the Emperor Theodosius he dwelt in the country after the manner of a monk, and unceasingly taken up with writing and reading, until, in a good old age, he laid down his earthly, to enter on an heavenly life.[3]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 631.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Antonine, Archbishop of Florence, whose birth into the better life is told upon the 2nd day of May.

Upon the same the 10th day of May, is kept at Rome, on the Latin Way, the birthday of the holy martyrs Gordian and Epimachus. Gordian was long beaten with whips loaded with lead, and at last beheaded, in the time of the Emperor Julian the Apostate, because of his confession of Christ's Name. The Christians buried his body at night upon the aforesaid Latin Way, in the same underground place whither had a little while before been brought from Alexandria the remains of the blessed martyr Epimachus, who had there suffered martyrdom for believing in Christ.

[1] Sometimes called Nazianzum. I follow Gibbon.

[2] When he first arrived, Arianism was triumphant, and he ministered to the Catholics in a private house. It was not till after two years that, on the accession of Theodosius, that great Emperor himself led Gregory to the Patriarchal throne in St Sophia.

[3] A.D. 389 or 391.

In the land of Uz is commemorated the holy prophet Job, a man of wondrous patience.

At Rome, the blessed priest and martyr Calepodius, whom the Emperor Alexander [Severus] caused to be slain with the sword, and his body to be dragged through the city and cast into the Tiber; when it had been found it was buried by Pope Callistus. Moreover, at Rome also, there were beheaded the Consul Palmatius, along with his wife and children and forty-two others of both sexes of his house; also the Senator Simplicius, with his wife and sixty-eight of his household, also Felix, with his wife Blanda. Their heads were hung up at the different gates of the city to be a terror to Christians.

Also at Rome, at the Hundred Halls, upon the Latin Way, are commemorated the holy martyrs Quartus and Quintus, whose bodies were taken to Capua.

At Lentini, in Sicily, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Alphius, Philadelphus, and Cyrinus.

At Smyrna, the holy martyr Dioscoredes.

At Bologna, [in the year 1443,] the blessed Nicholas Albergati, Bishop of that city; a Charterhouse monk, and Cardinal of the holy Roman Church, famous for his holiness and for his work as Legate of the Apostolic See. His body is buried in the Charterhouse at Florence.

At Taranto, [at the end of the seventh century,] the holy Catald, Bishop [of that city, an Irish monk,] famous for wonders.

At Milan is commemorated the finding of the bodies of the holy martyrs Nazarius and Celsus. The blessed Bishop Ambrose found the body of holy Nazarius still marked with fresh blood, and took it to the Cathedral Church of the Apostles along with the body of the blessed child Celsus, to whom Nazarius had been foster-father. In the persecution under Nero, Anolinus commanded them both together to be slain with the sword upon the 29th day of July, upon the which day is kept [at Milan] the feast of their martyrdom.

At Madrid, [in the year 1175,] the holy Isidore the husbandman, famous for wonders, whom Pope Gregory XV. enrolled in the list of the Saints along with holy Ignatius of Loyola, Francis Xavier, Teresa, and Philip Neri.

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 10.

St Antonine, Archbishop [of Florence,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

HELP us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, for the sake of Thine holy Bishop and Confessor Antonine, and so show Thyself merciful in us, Who didst show Thyself wondrous in him. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

A Commemoration is made of St Gregory Nazianzen. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c."

Then of the Holy Martyrs Gordian and Epimachus. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the First Vespers of the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 576,) and Prayer:

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who make solemn memorial of Thy blessed Martyrs Gordian and Epimachus, who are now with Thee, may continually be holpen by the prayers of the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ANTONINE was born of respectable parents at Florence, [in the year of grace 1389,] and the holiness of his after life was foreshadowed in him even as a little child. When he was sixteen years of age he entered the Order of Friars Preachers, and from that time forth he was a burning and a shining light to all the godly. He proclaimed a truceless war against idleness: after a short night's rest, he was the first to come to the service of Mattins; when they were over he spent the rest of the night in prayer, or at least in reading, or writing out books, or if sleep altogether overcame his weary body, he would rest against the wall with his head bowed down, and then shake off slumber again, and set himself anew with fresh eagerness to his sacred watch.

Fifth Lesson.

HE required of himself the most unflinching observance of the Rule of his Order, and never ate meat unless he were grievously ill. He slept upon the ground or upon bare boards. He always wore haircloth, and sometimes an iron girdle which bit into his naked skin. His virginity he kept ever undimmed by the least breath or shadow. He was so skilful in giving advice that he gained the common nickname of "Counsel Antonine." At the same time so beautifully brilliant was his lowliness, that even when he was at the head of houses and provinces of his Order, he most cheerfully undertook all the meanest services of the houses where he was. Eugenius IV. appointed him Archbishop of Florence, and he took it so ill, that it was only when awed by the threats of the Apostolic See that he obeyed, and accepted the dignity, [in the year 1446.]

Sixth Lesson.

AS Archbishop it can hardly be told how noble he was, in wisdom, in godliness, in love, in meekness, in Priestly zeal. It was wonderful to see how thoroughly he taught himself nearly all the sciences, without the help of a master. At last, after much work, and publishing many valuable books on Doctrine, he received the Holy Eucharist and was anointed, and then, clasping the image of his crucified Saviour to his heart, joyfully welcomed death, on the 2nd day of May, in the year 1459. He was remarkable for the working of miracles, both during his life and after his death, and Adrian VI. enrolled his name among those of the Saints, in the year 1523.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory (p. 616.) The last part of this Homily is omitted, or read along with the second, and the following is the Ninth Lesson. (For SS. Gordian and Epimachus.)

GORDIAN was a judge before whom, in the reign of Julian the Apostate, Januarius the Priest was brought to be condemned. Januarius instructed Gordian in the Christian faith, and himself, with his wife, and fifty-three other persons of the same household, were all baptized at Rome. On this account the Prætor sent back Januarius, and ordered Clementian the Deputy to cast Gordian into prison. Afterward he caused the same Gordian to be brought before him in chains, and when he found he could not shake him in his will to cleave to the faith, he commanded that he should first be hided with whips loaded with lead, and thereafter beheaded. His body was thrown out before the temple of Apollo for dogs to eat, but the Christians buried it at night in the catacombs upon the Latin Way, in the same vault where were already lying the remains of the blessed Martyr Epimachus. These had been brought from Alexandria, in which city Epimachus had long been imprisoned for owning Christ, and had in the end grasped the crown of his testimony by being burnt alive.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of these Holy Martyrs. Prayer as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Pope of Rome, Pius, fifth of that name, a Friar Preacher, of whom mention is made upon the 5th day of this present month of May. He toiled manfully and hopefully for the restoration of the discipline of the Church, for the extirpation of heresies, and for the defeat of the enemies of the Christian name, and ruled the Catholic Church in holiness of life and government.

Upon the same 11th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Salarian Way, the blessed Priest Anthimus. After he had done excellently well in power and preaching, he was thrown into the Tiber during the persecution under Diocletian, and thence delivered by an angel, who brought him back to his own oratory; but he was lastly beheaded, and so passed into heaven as a conqueror.

Upon the same day, the holy martyr Evellius. He was one of Nero's household, who believed on Christ on seeing the passion of the holy martyr Torpes, and was therefore beheaded.

Also at Rome, the holy martyrs Maximus, Bassus, and Fabius, who were killed upon the Salarian Way, in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Camarino, the holy martyrs Anastasius and his Companions, who were put to death under Antiochus the President, in the persecution under Decius.

At Osimo, in Picenum, the holy martyrs Sisinnius the Deacon, Diocletius, and Florence, disciples of the holy Priest Anthimus, who finished their testimony by being stoned to death, in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Varennes, [in the eighth century,] the holy martyr Gangulph.

At Vienne, [toward the end of the fifth century,] the holy Mamertus, Bishop [of that see,] who, on account of a threatening volcanic eruption, instituted in that city the solemn Rogation processions upon the three days before the Ascension of the Lord, the which custom the Universal Church hath since approved by adopting it.

At Sauvigny, [in the year 994,] deceased holy Majolus, Abbat of Cluny, whose life was illustrious for holy and worthy deeds.

At the town now called San Severino, in Picenum, the holy Confessor Illuminatus.

In the town of Grotaglia, in the Diocese of Taranto, [in the year 1716,] the holy Confessor Francis di Girolamo, of the Society of Jesus, an example of singular love and patience in seeking the salvation of souls. Pope Gregory XVI. enrolled his name with those of the Saints. His burial is commemorated with great solemnity in the church of the Professed House of his Order at Naples, where his body lieth.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 11.

St Pius V., Pope and Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of a Confessor and Bishop, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who when Thou wast pleased to break the teeth of them that hate Thy Church, and to restore again the solemn worship of Thyself, didst choose the blessed Pope Pius to work for Thee in that matter, grant that he may still be a tower of strength for us; grant that we also may be more than conquerors over all that make war upon our souls, and in the end may enter into perfect peace in Thy presence. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of St Antonine. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

[MICHAEL] Ghislieri [afterwards proclaimed Pope under the name of] Pius V., was born [on the 27th of January, in the year 1504,] at the town of Bosco in the Milanese, but his family was a noble one of Bologna. At the age of fourteen years he entered the order of Friars Preachers. He was a man marked by a wonderful long-suffering, a deep lowliness, a great hardness of living, an unwavering earnestness in prayer, and a most strong zeal for the perfect observance of the Rule of his Order, and for the greater glory of God. He gave himself to the study of Philosophy and Theology, and was so learned in both, that he discharged for many years with great reputation the duties of a Professor of those sciences. He preached publicly in many places, to the great profit of his hearers. He long did the work of Inquisitor with unflinching spirit, and preserved many cities, not without risk to his own life, from the heresy which was then creeping in everywhere.

Fifth Lesson.

PAUL IV., to whom his virtues had greatly endeared him, raised him [in 1556,] to the united Bishoprics of Nepi and Sutri, and after two years he was enrolled among the Cardinal Priests of the Roman Church. Pius IV. translated him to the Church of Mondovi in Piedmont, wherein, on his coming, he found that many corruptions had crept in. He reformed the whole of his diocese, and, after settling his affairs, returned to Rome, where his attention was called to matters of the gravest business, in determining which he used Apostolic boldness and firmness. After the death of Pius IV., the fifth Pius, to the astonishment of all men, was elected to succeed him, [on the 7th of January, 1566.] On becoming Pope he changed his way of life in no respect except as regarded his raiment. The Propagation of Religion was to him the object of unceasing care; the restoration of the Discipline of the Church, of unwearied toil; the uprooting of error, of sleepless watchfulness; the relieving the needs of the poor, of unfailing charity; the maintenance of the rights of the Apostolic See, of adamantine firmness.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Turkish Sultan Selim was bloated with many victories, and had got together an huge fleet in the Gulf of Lepanto, but Pius V. crushed him, [on the 7th of October, 1571,] not so much by force of arms as by dint of the prayers wherein he pleaded with God. At the hour that the victory was won, Pius knew it by the inward revelation of God, and stated the fact to his servants. He was busied with the preparations for a new expedition against the Turks, when he was laid down by grievous sickness. He bore most sharp sufferings with the gentlest patience, and when the end came, he received the Sacraments as is usual, and with great peace yielded his spirit to God, [on the 1st of May,] in the year of salvation 1572, and of his own age the 68th, having sat as Pope six years, three months, and twenty-four days. His body is buried in the Church of St Mary, where the Manger from Bethlehem is, and is there held in great respect by the faithful, who have obtained from God by his prayers, many evident miracles. The said miracles having been proved by a judicial investigation Pope Clement XI. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of May, are commemorated at Rome, upon the way to Ardea, the holy brethren Nereus and Achilles, both martyrs. They were eunuchs belonging to Flavia Domitilla, and first suffered a long exile with her in the island of Ponza for Christ's Name's sake. Afterwards they were laid under most grievous stripes. Lastly, when Minutius Rufus, the Consular, was striving by racking and fire to force them to offer pagan sacrifices, and they said that they had been baptized by the blessed Apostle Peter and could in no wise make offerings to idols, they were beheaded. By command of Pope Clement VIII. their sacred remains, along with those of Flavia Domitilla, were, upon the eve of this day, solemnly transferred from the Deaconry of St Hadrian to the old church which bears their names, where they had formerly lain buried, and which had now been restored.

Also at Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyr Pancras, who at fourteen years of age finished his testimony by being beheaded, in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Rome also, [in the year 304,] the holy Denis, uncle of the said blessed Pancras.

In Sicily, the holy Philip Argyrion, who was sent by the Roman Pontiff to that island, and turned a great part of it to Christ. His holiness is chiefly shown forth in the deliverance of them that are vexed with evil spirits.

At Salamis, in Cyprus, [in the year 403,] the holy Epiphanius, Bishop [of that see,] who excelled in vast learning and knowledge of the Scriptures; but was also a wonder for the holiness of his life, his zeal for the Catholic faith, his generosity to the poor, and the power of his mighty deeds.

At Constantinople, [in the eighth century,] the holy Bishop Germanus, famous for his graces and teaching. He withstood the Emperor Leo the Isaurian with great faithfulness, when that Prince published his edict against the holy images.

At Treves, [in the year 640,] the holy Modwald, Bishop [of that see.]

In the city of St Domingo de la Calzada, [in the beginning of the twelfth century,] the holy Confessor Dominic.

At Second Vespers Commemoration of the following. Prayer from their Office.

MAY 12.

The Holy Martyrs Nereus, Achilles, Virgin Domitilla, and Pancras.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 576,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, that the blessed and solemn remembrance of Thy Martyrs Nereus, Achilles, Domitilla, and Pancras, making our hearts to burn within us, may cause us to be more meet for Thy service. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

NEREUS and Achilles were brethren, eunuchs belonging to Flavia Domitilla, who were baptized by blessed Peter, along with her and her mother Plautilla. They had advised Domitilla to consecrate her virginity to God, and on this account Aurelian, to whom she was betrothed, accused them of being Christians. They nobly confessed the faith, and were banished to the island of Ponza. Then they were again put to the torture, and after being scourged, were taken to Terracina. At Terracina, Minutius Rufus tormented them with the rack and with fire, but as they constantly affirmed that having once been baptized by the blessed Apostle Peter, no torture could ever make them sacrifice to idols, they were beheaded. Auspicius, their own disciple and the tutor of Domitilla, took their bodies to Rome, where they were buried on the road to Ardea.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Virgin Flavia Domitilla was a Roman, the niece of the Emperors Titus and Domitian,[1] and was veiled by the blessed Pope Clement. Aurelian, son of the Consul Titus Aurelius, to whom she was betrothed, accused her of being a Christian, and the Emperor Domitian banished her into the island of Ponza, where she long suffered and testified in prison. At length she was taken to Terracina, where she again confessed Christ, and as she seemed ever to grow firmer, the judge, under the Emperor Trajan, caused her chamber to be set on fire, and there Domitilla, with her foster-sisters the maidens Theodora and Euphrosyne, finished the race of faith by grasping the crown of glory, on the 7th day of May. Their bodies were found whole, and were buried by the Deacon Cæsarius. This, the twelfth day of May, is that whereon the bodies of Nereus and Achilles, and that of Domitilla, were carried from the Deaconry of St Hadrian, and laid in the Church which is properly called by the name of these holy martyrs, but formerly by that of "St Peter's Bandage."[2]

Sixth Lesson.

PANCRAS was the son of a noble family of Phrygia. He came to Rome in the reign of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, being then a boy of fourteen years of age. There he was baptized by the Bishop of Rome, and brought up in the Christian faith. On this account he was soon after taken, and having constantly refused to sacrifice to the gods, he offered his neck to the executioner with manly courage, and won a glorious crown of martyrdom. The Lady Octavilla took his body by night, embalmed it with precious ointments, and buried it on the Aurelian Way.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (iv. 46.)

AT that time: There was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (28th Sermon, viz. that preached on the Birth-day and in the Church of these Holy Martyrs.)

Wherefore was it that when this nobleman besought the Lord to come down ere his child died, the Lord (albeit He healed him) would not come, and yet, when the Centurion prayed Him to heal his servant, albeit not asked to come down,[3] He went with them? He deemed not that the nobleman's son was worthy of His bodily presence, but He refused not to go to help the Centurion's servant. What is this but a rebuke to earthly pride, which maketh us to respect in men their honours and riches rather than that Divine image wherein they are created? It was not so with our Redeemer, who would not go to the son of the nobleman, but was ready to come down for the Centurion's servant, to show that to Him the things which are great among men are but of little moment, and the things which are little esteemed among men are not beneath His notice.

Eighth Lesson.

OUR pride then standeth rebuked, that pride which maketh us forget for the sake of one man that another man is a man at all. This pride, as we have said, looketh only at the surroundings of men, not at their nature, and seeth not that God is to be honoured in a man because he is a man. Lo! how the Son of God will not go unto the nobleman's son, but is ready to go and heal the servant. Of myself I know that if any one's servant were to ask me to go to him, I have a sort of pride which would say to me silently inside my heart: Go not; thou wilt lower thyself; the Papal dignity will be lightly esteemed; thy exalted station will be degraded. Behold how He Which came down from heaven, doth not deem it below Him to go to help a servant, and yet I who am of the earth earthly, shrink from being trodden on.

---

[1] The identity of this Flavia Domitilla has got confused. See Alban Butler and the Bollandists; also Gibbon.

[2] When St Peter was walking here a bandage fell off his leg.

[3] Luke vii. 3, but it is there written "beseeching Him that He would come and heal his servant." The "Lord, I am not worthy" (v. 5) seems to have been an afterthought.

Ninth Lesson.

THINK not therefore within yourselves what ye have, but what ye are. Behold, the world which I love, is a world which passeth away. Those holy servants of God, by whose grave I am standing, ennobled themselves mentally above the world at its fairest. To them was offered length of days, robust health, plenty in possessions, fruitfulness in offspring, comfort under perpetual peace: and yet while the spring-tide of life was unfolding before them, their hearts had already condemned it to an arid winter. Behold, winter in their hearts, spring in mine! Death, and pain, and barrenness occur all around me, I am attacked on all sides, and I feel very bitter, and yet the sting of fleshly lust so blindeth me, that I love the bitter feelings, I hunt after that which flees from me, and cling to that which would leave me.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Virgin Walburg, of whom mention is made upon the 1st day of May.

Upon the same 13th day of May is kept at Rome the dedication of the church of St Mary-of-the-Martyrs; this building was called the Pantheon or temple of All the gods, but the blessed Pope Boniface IV. cleansed that old temple, and consecrated it in honour of the blessed Mary, always a Virgin, and of All Martyrs, in the time of the Emperor Phocas.

On the same day, were born unto the better life—

At Constantinople, the blessed martyr Mucius, the Priest. Under the Emperor Diocletian and the Pro-Consul Laodicius, he was first tormented at Amphipolis with many pains and sufferings, on account of his confession of Christ, and afterwards brought to Byzantium, where he was beheaded.

At Heraclea, the holy martyr Glyceria of Rome, who suffered under the Emperor Antoninus and the President Sabinus.

At Alexandria are commemorated a great number of holy martyrs who were massacred by the Arians in the church of Theona, on account of the Catholic faith, [in the year 372.]

At Utrecht, holy Servatius, Bishop of the Church of Tongres. His worthiness was strikingly set forth to all by this, that when everything round about was covered with snow in the winter time, his grave was never covered therewith until a Cathedral Church was built over it by the industry of the citizens.

In Palestine, [in the year 558,] holy John, surnamed the Silent.

At Valladolid, [in the year 1456,] the holy Confessor Peter Regalati, a Friar Minor, the restorer of the regular observance in the Convents of Spain. The Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIV. enrolled his name with those of the Saints.

Vespers of the following, with Commemoration of the preceding.

MAY 13.

St Walburg, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who amid the other numberless gifts of Thy grace, dost work marvels by weak women, mercifully grant that we may feel how availing at Thy mercy-seat are the prayers of Thy blessed handmaiden Walburg, the bright ensample of whose chastity doth still shed its light upon us, and the glory of whose mighty works doth even now make us glad. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

If of the First Class, from I Cor. vii. 25, as in the Common. If not, from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WALBURG was the daughter of holy Richard, King of the English, and sister to the holy Willibald, and Wunibald. She hallowed her virginity to Christ the Bridegroom, almost from her cradle, and bravely passed by all the attractions of this world. She manifested her holiness wondrously in her own land, and with the consent of her brothers, obeyed the call of the holy martyr Boniface to come from England into Germany along with many other women vowed to God, partly that she might establish, partly that she might keep up, and partly that she might spread, the discipline of the cloister among the nuns. This she eminently did, setting an example in herself of religious conversation, of love, and of purity.

Fifth Lesson.

HER brother Willibald sent for her from Thuringia to Heidenheim to rule a monastery of nuns which had just been founded. This she did so happily that when holy Wunibald died, the monastery of men likewise was committed to her care. She discharged this office with the greatest uprightness, wisdom, and holiness, not without the grace of miracles, until she passed away to that blessedness in heaven, which had been the object of her most eager desire, upon the 25th day of February, in the year of salvation 776. Her brother, Bishop Willibald, buried her in her own monastery in Heidenheim.

Sixth Lesson.

THE holy Virgin rested in her home and her grave at Heidenheim until the time of Ockar, sixth Bishop of Eystadt, by whose authority, supported by the approval of the clergy, the reliques of this chaste maiden were carried to Eystadt in solemn procession amid crowds of all orders of men, and there laid in that place which is since called St Walburg's. However, a part of the hallowed reliques were given to the monastery of Monheim, at the entreaty of the Abbess Lioba. Many miracles forthwith began to be worked at both places. At Eystadt, especially, a clear oil, useful for divers sicknesses, oozeth from the blessed bones of Walburg, in the place of their interment.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Monica, the mother of blessed Augustine, to whose illustrious life he hath left unto us his witness in the 9th Book of his Confessions, and of whom mention is made upon the 4th day of this present month of May.

Upon the same 14th day of May, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Boniface, who suffered in the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian at Tarsus, in Cilicia, and whose body was thence brought to Rome and buried on the Latin Way.

[At Cimiez, hard by Nice,] in Gaul, the holy martyr Pontius. By his preaching and carefulness he turned the two Cæsars of the name of Philip to Christ, and himself gained the palm of martyrdom under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus.

In Syria, the holy Victor and Corona, martyrs under the Emperor Antoninus. Victor was put to divers and horrid tortures under the judge Sebastian. Corona, who was the wife of a certain soldier, was fain to cry out that he was blessed, because of the constancy in his testimony, whereupon she saw two crowns descending from heaven, the one for Victor and the other for herself, and when she had borne witness to this in the hearing of all, she was torn asunder between trees, and Victor was beheaded.

In Sardinia, [in the second century,] the holy martyrs Justa, Justina, and Henedina.

At Rome, [in the year 824,] the holy Pope Paschal I., who brought up a great number of bodies of the holy martyrs out of the Catacombs and put them in honourable places in divers churches.

At Ferentino, in Tuscany, [in the sixth century,] the holy Boniface, Bishop [of that see,] who was marked by holiness and miracles from his very boyhood, as is told by blessed Pope Gregory.

At Naples, in Campania, [in the sixth century,] holy Pomponius, Bishop [of that see.]

In Egypt, [in the year 348,] the holy Abbat Pachom, who built many monasteries in that land, and wrote down a rule for monks, at the dictation of an Angel.

At Vespers Commemoration of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 14.

St Monica, Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman, neither Martyr nor Virgin, (p. 649,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Monica, begin with the Chapter. Prayer from Lauds.

Commemoration of the preceding. Prayer from her Office.

Then of the holy Martyr Boniface, from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 580,) and the following Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who do make solemn remembrance of Thine holy Martyr, Boniface, may be holpen in Thy presence by his prayers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MONICA was twice over the mother of St Austin, for, under God, he owed to her both earth and heaven. When her husband was very old she made him a friend of JESUS Christ, and after his death she lived a widow in all purity and constantly occupied in works of mercy. Her son Austin had fallen into the heresy of the Manichæans, and for his conversion she earnestly pleaded with God for years, with strong crying and tears. She followed Austin to Milan, and tenderly and constantly besought him to confer with Ambrose the Bishop. This he consented to do, and at last, through the public sermons and private conversations of Ambrose, his eyes were opened to see the truth of the Catholic Religion, and he received baptism at the Bishop's hands, [at the Passover of the year 387.]

Fifth Lesson.

THE mother and son set out to return to their home in Africa, but after they had reached Ostia at the mouth of the Tiber, she was stricken down by a fever. One day as she lay sick, she came to herself after her mind had been long wandering, and said: "Where am I?" Then she saw who were standing by, and said: "Let your mother lie here: only, remember me at the altar of the Lord." On the ninth day this blessed lady surrendered her spirit to God. Her body was buried there at Ostia in the Church of St Aurea, but, long after, in the Popedom of Martin V., it was carried to Rome and honourably buried again in the Church of St Augustine.

Sixth Lesson. (Confessions of St Austin. Bk. ix. ch. 12.)

AUSTIN added these words after describing his mother's death: "We did not think that hers was a death which it was seemly to mark with repining, or tears, or lamentations, seeing that she died not sorrowfully, nor at all as touching her best and noblest part. This we knew, because we knew what her life had been, her faith unfeigned, her sure and certain hope. And then, nevertheless, I remembered again what Thine handmaid was used to be, her walk with Thee, how godly and holy it was, and with us so gentle and long-suffering; and that it was all gone away from me now. And I wept, over her and for her. And if any man will make it blame to me that I wept for a little while, when I saw lying dead before my eyes my mother, who had wept over me so many years, that she might see me live, I say, if any man will make it blame to me, I pray him not to sneer at me, but rather (if his charity be so great) himself to weep over my sins before Thee, Who art a Father to all them to whom Thy Christ is a Brother."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vii. 11.)

AT that time: JESUS went into a city called Nain; and His disciples went with Him, and much people. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (44th Discourse on the Words of the Lord.)

That her son was called again to life was the joy of that widowed mother; that souls of men are every day called to life is the joy of our Mother the Church. He was dead in body; they have been dead in mind. His death was outward, and was outwardly bewailed; their inward death hath been neither mourned for nor seen. But He hath sought for them, Who hath seen that they are dead, and He only hath seen that they are dead, Who hath been able to make them alive. If He had not come to raise the dead, the Apostle had not said:—"Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." (Eph. v. 14.)

Eighth Lesson.

WE find written how the Lord raised from the dead three persons visibly, but thousands invisibly. But how many they may have been whom He raised visibly, who knoweth? For all the things which He did are not written. John saith thus:—"There are also many other things which JESUS did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." (xxi. 25.) There were then, doubtless, many more raised to life, but it is not meaningless that three are recorded. For our Lord JESUS Christ hath willed that those things which He did carnally, we should understand also spiritually. He worked not miracles only for the sake of working wonders, but that His works might be at once wonderful to them that beheld, and true to them that understand them. Even as one that looketh upon a scroll right fairly written, and knoweth not how to read therein, praiseth the hand of the old scribe when he seeth the beauty of the points, but what it saith, what those points mean, he knoweth not, and praiseth by the eye, without understanding by the mind,—and as, on the other hand, he that can not only gaze on it, as can all men, but also can read it, praiseth the penmanship, and catcheth the sense likewise, which the unlearned cannot do: even so, there were some that saw the miracles which Christ did, and understood not what they meant, nor what they, as it were, hinted to such as did understand them, and these only marvelled to see them wrought. And other some there were which saw the works, and marvelled, and understood them, and profited by them. And it is as these last that we ought to be in the school of Christ.

Ninth Lesson. (For St Boniface.)

BONIFACE was a Roman citizen who had lived in sin with the noble lady Aglaé. The memory of this transgression overwhelmed him with exceeding sorrow, so that for penance he gave himself up to look for and bury the bodies of the martyrs. While he was at Tarsus, and apart from his fellow-travellers, he saw a great many persons being divers ways tormented, because they confessed to believing in Christ. He kissed their chains, and vehemently exhorted them bravely to bear their sufferings, seeing that the same their affliction which was but for a moment, was working for them an exceeding, even an eternal weight of glory. For this cause Boniface also was taken, and his flesh torn off him with iron claws. Sharp reeds also were driven between his finger-nails and the quick, and molten lead poured into his mouth. In his agony he was only heard to say: "I thank Thee, O Lord JESUS Christ, Son of God." Afterward he was dipped head foremost into a vessel of boiling pitch, and as he was drawn out unharmed, the judge in fury commanded him to be beheaded.[1] At the time it was done there was a great earthquake, whereby many unbelievers were turned to believe in the Lord Christ. The fellow-travellers of Boniface sought him the next day, and when they knew that he had undergone martyrdom, they bought his body for fifty shillings,[2] and after that they had embalmed it with spices, and wrapped it in linen, they carried it to Rome. The Lady Aglaé, who had herself with great contrition given up her life to godly works, was told by an angel what had come to pass. She therefore went forth to meet the holy body, and built a Church in the name of Boniface, wherein his said body was buried upon the fifth day of June next after that fourteenth of May whereon in the city of Tarsus in Cilicia, under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, he had passed away to heaven.

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the day.

O GOD, the Consolation of all such as be sorrowful and the salvation of all them that put their trust in Thee, Who didst mercifully regard the tears which Thy blessed handmaid and his mother Monica shed before Thee for the conversion of Austin, be again entreated for the sake both of her and of him, and make us so to weep over our own sins that Thy gracious majesty may be moved to have mercy upon us.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Boniface. Prayer from First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th day of May—

In Spain are commemorated the holy Bishops Torquatus, Ctesiphon, Secundus, Indaletius, Cæcilius, Hesychius, and Euphratius. They were ordained at Rome by the holy Apostles, and sent to preach the Word of God in Spain. They evangelised divers cities, and brought countless multitudes into the obedience of the faith of Christ, and fell asleep each in a different place in that land. Torquatus at Cadiz, Ctesiphon at Vierço, Secundus at Avila, Indaletius at Portilla, Cæcilius at Elvira, Hesychius at Gibraltar, and Euphratius at Andujar.

At Evora, in Portugal, [in the sixth century,] the holy martyr Mancius.

In the island of Chios, [in the year 251,] was born into the better life the blessed martyr Isidore, in whose church there is a well into the which he is said to have been cast, of the water whereof the sick oftentimes drink and are healed.

At Lampsacus, on the Hellespont, [in the persecution under the Emperor Decius,] suffered the holy martyrs Peter, Andrew, Paul, and Dionysia.

At Faustina, in Sardinia, the holy martyr Simplicius, Bishop [of that see,] who was thrust through with a lance, under the President Barbaros, in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, and so finished his testimony.

At Clermont, in Auvergne, [in the first century,] the holy martyrs Cassius, Victorinus, Maximus, and their Companions.

In Brabant, the holy Virgin and martyr Dympna, daughter of a King of Ireland, who was beheaded by order of her own father on account of her belief in Christ, and her holding to her virginity.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 15.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of May, was born into the better life—

At Bordeaux, in Aquitaine, the holy Confessor Simon, surnamed Stock, [for that he lived at one time in the stock of an hollow oak,] of the Order of Carmelites, who by his singular devotion toward the Virgin Mother of God won to obtain of her the sacred scapular of his Order, and, after many labours borne in the governing of the same her Order, passed away famous for miracles, to receive his everlasting reward.[1]

Upon the same 16th day of May, were likewise born into the better life—

At Gubbio, holy Ubald, Bishop [of the same city,] who was famous for miracles, and whose feast we keep upon the 22nd day of this present month of May.

In Isauria, the holy martyrs Aquilinus and Victorian.

At Auxerre, suffered the holy martyr Peregrin, first Bishop of that city, who was sent into Gaul with other clerks by blessed Pope Sixtus [II.], and, when he had finished the work of preaching the Gospel, was condemned to be beheaded, and so earned a crown of life that fadeth not away.

At Usal, in Africa, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Felix and Gennadius.

In Palestine, the passion of the holy monks who were massacred by the Saracens in the Monastery of St Saba.

In Persia, the holy martyrs Bishop Audas, seven Priests, nine Deacons, and seven Virgins, who suffered divers tortures under King Isdegerd, and so finished a glorious testimony.

At Prague, in Bohemia, [in the year 1390,] holy John of Nepomuc, Canon of the Metropolitical Cathedral Church in that city, who, when he had been vainly tried to make him violate the seal of sacramental confession, was cast into the river Moldau, and so earned the palm of martyrdom. We keep feast in his honour upon the 30th day of this present month of May.

At Amiens, in Gaul, [about the year 600,] the holy Confessor Honoré, Bishop [of that see.]

At Mans, [toward the end of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Domnolus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Mirandola, in Emilia, the holy Possidius, Bishop of Calama, in Numidia, a disciple of holy Augustine, and writer of his famous life.

At Troyes, [toward the middle of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Fidolus, [Abbat of the Isles-Aumont.]

In Ireland, [in the year 577,] the holy Brendan, Abbat [of Clonfert.]

At Frejus, the holy Virgin Maxima, who fell asleep in peace, famous for many excellences.

MAY 16.

St Simon Stock, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

LET Thy people, O Lord, who belong to Thee and to the Virgin Mother, make glad for the solemn feast day of Thy blessed servant Simon, and, as they obtain through his hands the sign of such a mighty protection, may they attain the grace of eternal predestination.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

SIMON STOCK was born of a noble family, in the county of Kent, in England. While he was still studying as a boy he was chosen for the Lord's lot. While he was still in his twelfth year he left his parents, turned away from all the things of his home and all the pomps of the world, and went into the desert, where he made his dwelling in the hollow trunk of an oak.

---

[1] The Roman Martyrology and other service books contain no mention of this Simon, and the above is accordingly extracted from the Martyrology of the Carmelites.

Thus separated from all dealings with men, the more he starved his body as regarded earthly food, the more did he banquet his soul with the contemplation of the things of heaven; and the less he conversed with men, the more communion had he with the Saints. He was so given to fasting that he drank nothing but cold water, and ate nothing but the herbs, roots, and wild fruit of the forest. God sometimes softened the hardness of his life by the service of dogs, which came to him on certain days, and brought him bread merely to refresh his hungry body. He ate alone in his tree, instant in prayer, sighing deeply, slept very seldom, and brought his flesh into subjection to his spirit by binding it with brambles and beating it with thorns.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER Simon had passed twenty years in these hardships he had a word from God that he should enter the Order of Carmelites, which was then flourishing in England, in holiness and teaching. The Superiors of his Order admired his remarkable genius, adorned with singular graces, and after he had uttered the solemn vows of the religious life, they sent him to Oxford to study Theology. There, although the humility which marked him before others made him unwilling, he was drawn by the entreaties of his own brethren and of the teachers of Oxford to take the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. He thenceforth applied his mind to the salvation of souls, and it would be hard to say what kind and abundance of fruits he yielded to the Church in that office. He wrote much concerning Christian patience, and distinguished compositions in praise of the Mother of Christ, of whom he made himself the special servant. After the death of Alanus, General of the whole Order, he was unanimously chosen at Ailesford to succeed him. To the burden of this great dignity he added watchings more frequent, tears more abundant, and haircloth more vexing. He became harder to himself, gentle towards all others, and afflicted his body by new stripes. His virginity he always preserved from the beginning.

Sixth Lesson.

GOD was pleased that the holiness of Simon's life should be publicly attested by many miracles. In the spirit of prophecy he foretold very many things to come; he cured incurable diseases; by the Sign of the Cross he turned water into wine, and so baffled the trick of the devils, who had taken away the wine prepared in the vessels when he was saying Mass. He obtained from the Supreme Pontiffs the confirmation of the rule of his Order. He besought the holy Virgin to mark, apart from all other Orders, by some special privileges this Order so confirmed, which hath the joy to call itself hers. And the Blessed Virgin herself appeared unto him, surrounded by a host of angels, holding in her hand a scapular of his Order, and said unto him, "This shall be a sign unto thee, and a privilege unto all Carmelites, that whosoever shall die a godly death in this, shall not burn for ever." He ruled the Order committed unto him with wondrous prudence and all praise, as though he were a man sent from heaven, to spread through Europe the zeal of Elias. After he had lived an hundred years he passed away from his convent at Bordeaux to be ever with the Lord, [upon the 16th May,] in the year of Christ 1265. On the third day after his burial his body, famous for miracles, in obedience to a warning from God, was exhumed and raised, and laid in a place of greater honour.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Villa Real, in the kingdom of Valencia, the holy Paschal, of the Order of Friars Minors, a man of wonderful innocency, and wonderful contrition.

At Pisa, in Tuscany, is commemorated the holy martyr Torpes. He was a great official in the house of Nero, and was one of those of whom the Apostle Paul writeth from the city of Rome unto the Philippians (iv. 22,) "All the Saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cæsar's household." But later on, at the command of Satellicus, because of his belief in Christ, he was buffeted, grievously scourged, and thrown to beasts to be devoured; but he was not hurt thereby, and finished his testimony by being beheaded, upon the 29th day of April; but his feast day is kept upon the 17th day of May on account of the translation of his body.

On the same day, the holy Virgin and martyr Restituta. In the reign of the Emperor Valerian, Proculus, the judge in Africa, caused her to be tortured in divers ways, and put into a ship with pitch and tow that she might burn on the sea, but when fire was put to it the flame turned upon them that kindled it. Restituta gave up her spirit to God in prayer, and, by the will of God, the ship containing her body came to shore in the island of Ischia, near Naples, where her remains were received with great worship by the Christians. In after-days the Emperor Constantine the Great caused a church to be built in her honour at Naples.

At Noyon, [in the reign of the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Heradius, Paul, and Aquilinus, along with two others.

At Chalcedon, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyrs Solochan, and the soldiers, his Companions.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Adrion, Victor, and Basilla.

At Würzburg, [in the year 1045,] the holy Confessor Bruno, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 17.

St Paschal Baylon, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, who didst glorify Thy blessed Confessor Paschal through a wonderful love for the sacred mysteries of Thy Body and Blood, grant even unto us also, like him, to taste the inward fatness of Thy Supper, O Jesus, our Lord and God: Who liveth and reigneth with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Ubald. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PASCHAL Baylon was the son of poor and godly parents, in the town of Torre Hermosa, and Diocese of Sagunta in Aragon, [in the year of our Lord 1540.] From his childhood he gave indications of a holy life. He was naturally of a good disposition, and very wishful to learn about heavenly things. His boyhood and youth he passed in the occupation of a shepherd. This way of life pleased him well, because he thought it one useful and fitted to nourish lowliness and keep innocency. He ate little, and was instant in prayer. He had great weight and favour with his fellows and neighbours, whose quarrels he healed, corrected their mistakes, enlightened their ignorance, and roused them from idleness. They all greatly honoured and loved him, as though he were their father and teacher, and even then many called him "Beato," that is "the Blessed."

Fifth Lesson.

In a world which was to him "a dry land, where no water is" (Ps. lxii. 3,) Paschal grew up a lily of the vallies, "planted in the House of the Lord" (Ps. xci. 14,) whose strange sweetness spread all around. When he took upon him an harder life, by entering the Institute of barefooted Grey Friars, of the strict Observance, "he rejoiced as a strong man to run a race" (Ps. xviii. 6,) and gave himself up altogether to serve the Lord, thinking by day and by night only how he might attain more and more to have that mind in him which was also in Christ Jesus (Phil. ii. 5.) And so it came to pass in a little while, that his very elders set him before them for their model, as a pattern of a man seeking to be perfect in the path of the Seraphic Order. Paschal himself held the lowly place of a lay brother, and deemed himself "the off-scouring of all things" (1 Cor. iv. 13.) He took most cheerfully, and discharged with the greatest humility and patience, the hardest and meanest work of the house, as though such were his peculiar right. His flesh would sometimes rebel against his spirit, but he broke it under the yoke of mortification, and brought it into subjection. Day by day the spirit of self-denial waxed stronger in him, and "forgetting those things which were behind, he reached forth unto those things which were before" (Phil. iii. 13.)

Sixth Lesson.

To the Virgin Mother of God he had vowed himself when he was but a little lad, and he paid her every day the services of a son, and trusted her as a mother. It is hard to tell how intense was the love which bound him to the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist, a love which seemed literally stronger than death, for when his dead body was found lying on the bier, its eyes opened and shut twice when the Sacred Host was lifted up, to the amazement of all that were there. When he was among heretics, he suffered much and grievously at their hands for plainly and openly telling the truth touching this Sacrament: they often sought after him to murder him, but by the singular Providence of God he was delivered from those wicked men. When he was at prayer he often became utterly insensible, and his soul fainted away with the love of God. During these trances it was believed that he received directly from heaven that knowledge which he had, and which enabled him, although a man altogether rough and unlettered, to answer the hardest questions upon the mysteries of the faith, and even to write some books. At last, full of good works, he joyfully passed away to be ever with the Lord, at the hour foretold by himself, on the Feast of Pentecost, the 17th day of May, in the year of salvation 1592, on which day also he had been born fifty-two years before. Illustrious for the graces above mentioned, and for the miracles which he worked both during his life and after his death, he was named Blessed by Pope Paul V., and Alexander VIII. enrolled him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Camarino, in the neighbourhood of Ancona, the holy martyr Venantius, who, at fifteen years of age, under Decius the Emperor and Antiochus the President, along with ten others, finished the course of a glorious contention by being beheaded.

In Egypt, the holy Reader Dioscorus, upon whom the President practised many and divers tortures, so that he had his nails dug out, and his sides scarified with lamps, but a sudden light from heaven terrified the tormentors so that they fell down; lastly, he was roasted with hot plates of metal, and so finished his testimony.

At Spoleto, the holy Felix, Bishop [of Spello,] who gained the palm of martyrdom, under the Emperor Maximian.

In Egypt, the holy Potamion, Bishop [of Heraclea,] who was first a Confessor of the faith under the Emperor Maximian Gallerius, and afterwards crowned with martyrdom, under the Emperor Constantius and the Arian President Philagrius.

At Ancyra, in Galatia, the holy martyrs Theodotus, and the Virgins Thecusa his aunt, Alexandra, Claudia, Faina, Euphrasia, Matrona, and Julitta, who were sentenced by the President to the stews, but were preserved by the power of God; whereupon stones were tied to their necks and they were sunk in a swamp.

Theodotus gathered their remains and buried them honourably, whereupon he was arrested by the President and savagely mangled, and at length received the crown of his testimony by being stricken with the sword.

At Upsala, in Sweden, [in the year 1161,] the holy martyr Eric, King of that land.

At Rome, [in the year 1587,] the holy Confessor Felix of Cantalicio, of the Order of Friars Minors Capuchins, who was remarkable for his Gospel simplicity and charity, and whom the Supreme Pontiff Clement XI. numbered among the Saints.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 18.

St Venantius, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 576 or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, in Whose sight this day is holy, because Thy blessed Martyr Venantius did become more than conqueror thereon, graciously hear the prayers of Thy people, and grant that all who reverence his right worthy loyalty to Thee, may be like him in godly endurance. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

If the following Hymn be not said, the first four verses are prefixed to the Hymn at Mattins.

Hymn.[1]

VENANTIUS, Martyr of the Lord,
And glory of his native home,
Sings triumph, in his glad reward,
O'er judge and headsmen overcome.

A boy, yet tried in dungeon fast
By cruel stripes and fetters rude,
And lengthened hunger, he is cast
To raging lions as their food.

Yet the fierce lions injure not
The guiltless victim whom they meet;
Their hunger and their rage forgot,
They crouch to lick the martyr's feet.

Men hang him downwards from a height,
And make him breathe smoke's stifling fumes,
While that a kindred cresset's light
His scorching sides and breast consumes.

Praise to the Father and the Son,
And, Holy Spirit, unto Thee;
And by Thy martyr's prayers be won
For us those joys that aye shall be.
Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Paschál Baylon. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

Hymn.[1]

CHRIST'S noble soldier scouts as fraud
Those idols by the heathen sought,
And, wounded with the love of God,
Of life imperilled recketh not.

They bind him with harsh thongs in hate,
And headlong from a cliff they send,
Till thorns his visage lacerate,
And stones his mangled body rend.

While the Saint's limbs they rack and toss,
The torturers grow faint with thirst,
Venantius signs the Holy Cross,
And from the rock forth waters burst.

And as that warrior most brave
Drink to his foes gave from the stone,
So pour, O Lord, Thy grace's wave
In dews refreshing on Thine own.

Praise to the Father and the Son,
And, Holy Spirit, unto Thee,
And by Thy martyr's prayers be won
For us those joys that aye shall be.
Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

VENANTIUS was a lad of Camerino [in the neighbourhood of Ancona,] who at fifteen years of age was accused of Christianity before Antiochus, Præfect of Camerino under the Emperor Decius. Venantius therefore appeared before Antiochus at the gate of the city, and when the Præfect had striven with him for a long while, by promises and threats, he commanded him to be scourged and thrown into irons, but an Angel loosed his bonds. He was afterwards scarified with lamps, and hung head downwards in smoke. Anastasius the trumpeter was amazed at his hardiness under suffering, and when it appeared to him that the Martyr was a second time loosed by an Angel, and was walking in white raiment on the smoke, he believed in Christ, and was baptized, with all his house, by the blessed Priest Porphyry, and a little while after they both together earned the palm of martyrdom.

Fifth Lesson.

NOW Venantius stood before the Præfect, and when he had again vainly tempted him to give up his faith in Christ, he cast him into prison, and sent unto him Attalus the crier. Attalus told him how that he also had been a Christian, but had denied that name, seeing it was a foolish faith which made Christians to throw away things present for a groundless hope of things to come. But Christ's brave champion, well knowing the wiles of our subtle enemy, drave the devil's servant from his presence. When he appeared again before the Præfect, his teeth and jaws were broken, and so mangled he was cast out upon a dunghill. But thence also an Angel delivered him, and he stood again before the judge. And there while Venantius was yet speaking, the judge fell from off the judgment-seat, and when he had cried with a loud voice, "Venantius his God is true, take away our gods," he died.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN they told the President of it, he commanded Venantius to be straightway thrown to the lions. But the beasts were not wild to him, and lay down at his feet. And meanwhile he taught the Christian faith to the people. So they took him away from thence and cast him once more into prison. The next day Porphyry came to the President, and told him how that he had seen in a vision of the night Venantius sprinkling certain ones with water, and they that were sprinkled shone with a marvellous light, and the President himself hidden in deep darkness. Then the President was moved to great anger and commanded forthwith to behead Porphyry. As for Venantius, he bade them drag him about in rough places, full of briars and thistles, until the evening. When it was over, he was left half dead, but in the morning he stood for the last time before the President, who commanded to cast him down from a steep rock. It pleased God that this should not kill him, and he was haled again through rough places for about a mile. There the soldiers were athirst, and Venantius, by the sign of the Cross, made waters to flow from a stone in a gulley hard by. This is that stone whereon also he left the imprint of his knees, and which can be seen to this day in his Church. By this wonder many were moved to believe in Christ; and the President commanded them all, and Venantius with them, to be beheaded in the same place where they were.[1] When it was done there were great lightnings and earthquakes, so that the President fled, but he could not fly from the judgment of God, and but a few days thereafter he died a most shameful death. Meanwhile the Christians took the bodies of Venantius and the others, and buried them in an honourable place, wherein they lie to this day, under the Church at Camerino which is dedicated to Venantius.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 578,) or else from Luke xiv. 26, with that of St Gregory, (p. 597,) according as this day is kept within or without Paschal-tide.

LAUDS.

Hymn.[2]

WHILST, banishing the gloom of night,
The morning star tells day is near,
Venantius bids us think aright
Of blessed joys in glory clear.

For he dispelled the mists of sin,
And all the Stygian dark abhorred,
And taught his countrymen to win
That light of truth which is the Lord.

He with the laver's hallowed wave
His native land hath purified,
And those the font as soldiers gave,
Rose to the stars as martyrs tried.

Now, where the Angels' bliss he shares,
That we may from all sin be freed,
Let him unite with us in prayers,
As we for grace enlightening plead.

Praise to the Father and the Son,
And, Holy Spirit, unto Thee;
And by Thy martyr's prayers be won
For us those joys that aye shall be.
Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Dunstan, Archbishop of Canterbury.

On the same 19th day of May, were born into the better life—

Holy Peter Morone, who was a hermit when he was created Supreme Pontiff, and was called Celestine V. He resigned the Papacy and led a religious life in solitude, and so, famous for graces and wonders, passed away, [in the year 1296,] to be for ever with the Lord. His feast we keep upon the 21st day of this same month of May.

At Rome, the holy Virgin Pudentiana, who, after countless contendings, after worshipfully burying many martyrs, and after distributing all her goods to feed the poor for Christ's sake, at length passed from earth to heaven.

There also the holy Senator Pudens, the father of the said virgin. He put on Christ in baptism by the ministry of the Apostles, and kept his robe in innocency undefiled till he received the crown of life.

At Rome also, upon the Appian Way, the holy eunuchs Calocerus and Parthenius. Calocerus was master of the bed-chamber to the wife of the Emperor Decius, and Parthenius was one of the chief officers of the court, and Decius slew them both because they would not sacrifice to idols.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Philoter, son of the Pro-Consul Pacian, who suffered much under the Emperor Diocletian, and received the crown of martyrdom.

There also six holy Virgin martyrs, of whom the chiefest was Cyriaca, who boldly rebuked Maximian for his wickedness, and therefore was most direfully rent and torn, and at last burnt with fire.

In Brittany, [in the year 1303,] the holy Priest and Confessor Ives, who for the love of Christ pled the cause of orphans, widows, and the poor.

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 19.

St Dunstan, Archbishop [of Canterbury,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who hast made Thy blessed Bishop Dunstan to inherit a kingdom in heaven, grant unto us, for his glorious sake, to inherit everlasting joy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers, as regards St Dunstan, begin with the Chapter, and a Commemoration is made of St Venantius and of St Pudentiana.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From his Life by Osbern. Anglia Sacra, xi. 99.)

THIS Dunstan was born of a noble family. He was expelled from the King's court through the efforts of his enemies, whereupon he bade farewell to the world. He betook himself to Glastonbury, as there were then no monks there, and got together some, of whom he was made Abbat. He was a great favourite of the Kings Edmund and Edred, but peculiarly obnoxious to Edwy, because he used to rebuke him for his perverse doings, and oppose his wishes. In consequence of this line of conduct, the king took proceedings against him, from which he was obliged to abscond, and he went and lived abroad at Ghent, in Flanders.

[1] A.D. 250.

[2] Translation by the Rev. Dr Littledale.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the reign of Edgar he was called home again, with great popular applause, and soon afterwards promoted to the Archbishoprick of Canterbury. He was excessively severe in using Church discipline, and never spared one who had erred. He ejected all the married clergy from their Churches, and put in regular monks in their places, and he forced the King himself to do penance for seven years for sins which he had committed.

Sixth Lesson.

DUNSTAN'S strictness caused him to be regarded with fear by many, but all admired him as a Saint, so that he got among the lower classes the name of being a good Archbishop. After the death of the Kings Edgar and Edward, he put the crown on Etheldred, the next heir, to whom he is said to have foretold an unhappy reign, and no cessation from trouble. He died full of days, and was buried in his own Church, towards the end of the tenth century.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary (p. 619.)

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Maiden Pudentiana.)

THE maiden Pudentiana was the orphan daughter of Pudens the Roman Senator. She was a Christian of eminent godliness. She with her sister Praxedes distributed to the poor the money which they obtained by the sale of their inheritance. She gave herself continually to fasting and prayer. By her care the whole of the household, being ninety-six persons, were baptized by Pope Pius I. Whereas the Emperor Antonine had forbidden the Christians to offer sacrifice in public, Pope Pius used to meet with them in Pudentiana's house, to celebrate the holy rites. She was a gracious hostess to them, and ministered to them in such things as are needful for the body. She thus busied herself in works of Christian godliness until she passed from this present life to a better. She was buried in her father's sepulchre in the cemetery of Priscilla on the Salarian Way upon the 19th day of May.[1]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Pudentiana, and at Vespers of St Bernardine of Sienna.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 20th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Aquila, in the Abruzzi, holy Bernardine of Sienna, of the Order of Friars Minors, who enlightened Italy both by word and ensample.

At Rome, on the Salarian Way, the holy Virgin Basilla. She was of the blood of kings and illustriously betrothed, but rejected her spouse, whereupon he accused her of being a Christian, and the Emperor Gallienus ordered that she should either take him back or perish by the sword. She answered that the King of kings was her Bridegroom, and the sword was accordingly passed through her.

At Nimes, in Gaul, the holy martyr Baudelius. He was apprehended and would not sacrifice, and so remaining inmovable amidst stripes and torments, grasped the palm of martyrdom by a death precious in the sight of the Lord.

At Edessa, in Syria, the holy martyrs Thalalæus, Asterius, Alexander, and their Companions, who suffered under the Emperor Numerian.

In the Thebaïd, the holy martyr Aquila, who was lacerated with combs, for Christ's sake.

At Bourges, in Gaul, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Austregisilus, [Bishop of that see.]

At Brescia, [early in the seventh century,] the holy Anastasius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, [in the eight century,] the holy Theodore, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome, the holy Plautilla, a woman of Consular rank and mother of the blessed Flavia Domitilla. She was baptized by the holy Apostle Peter, and after being eminent for excellency, fell asleep in peace.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

MAY 20.

St Bernardine of Sienna, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Bernardine was born of the noble family of the Albizeschi, in the Republic of Sienna, [on the 8th of September, in the year 1380.] His saintliness began to manifest itself from his earliest years. He was well brought up by a godly father and mother, and even when he was being taught the first rudiments of worldly learning, he used to give up his play-time to occupy himself with devout works, being much drawn to fasting, prayer, and the devotion to the most Blessed Virgin. He abounded likewise in tenderness for the poor. As time went on, that he might the more entirely do these things, it was his will to enroll himself among those who work in the Hospital of Blessed Mary, called "of the Ladder," at Sienna. There, during the raging of an horrible distemper, he laboured with marvellous charity and great bodily suffering, in serving the sick. In bodily presence he was a very goodly person, but, with all his other virtues, he kept ever so holy a guard over his purity, that it soon came to pass that no one, however shameless, dared to say an unseemly word in his presence.

---

[1] About A.D. 160.

Fifth Lesson.

HE suffered a severe sickness, and when, after bearing it with the utmost patience, he recovered his health, he began to think of embracing some institute of the religious life. To make his way sure, he built a little hut in the outskirts of the city, where he hid himself and led a life of hardships of all kinds, continuing instant in prayer to God that He would be pleased to make clear to him what path he should follow. And so it came to pass by God's will that he chose the Order of Blessed Francis. In that Order he shone a bright instance of lowliness, long-suffering, and every other grace of a religious man. When the superior of his convent saw this, and had already considered what his teaching and knowledge of sacred learning were, he laid on Bernardine the duty of preaching. This the Saint humbly accepted, and finding that his usefulness was much impaired by his having a shrill, harsh voice, he betook him to implore the help of God, Who was pleased, not without a miracle, to free him from this drawback.

Sixth Lesson.

THOSE were times fruitful in vices and crimes; and the bloody civil wars which raged in Italy confounded all things Divine and human. Bernardine went through the cities and towns, and, in the Name of Jesus, that Name which he ever bore upon his lips and in his heart, he prevailed in great measure by his word and example, in setting up falling godliness and morality. Illustrious cities demanded him from the Pope as their Bishop, but this was an honour which his unconquerable humility caused him always steadily to refuse. At last the man of God, after untold labours, the working of many and great miracles, and the writing of godly and learned books, in the 67th year of his age, at Aquila in the Abruzzi, rested in a blessed death, [upon the 20th day of May 1444.] As the fame of new signs and wonders increased day by day, Pope Nicholas V., in the sixth year after his death, added his name to the roll of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD JESUS, Which didst give unto Thy blessed Confessor Bernardine the grace to love Thy Holy Name exceeding well, be entreated, we beseech Thee, for his sake and by his prayers, and mercifully pour into our hearts also the Spirit of Thy love. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Peter Morone, who was a hermit when he was created Supreme Pontiff, and was called Celestine V. He resigned the Papacy and led a religious life in solitude, and so, famous for graces and wonders, passed away to be for ever with the Lord. Of him mention is made upon the 19th of this same month of May.

Upon the same 21st day of May, were born into the better life—

In Morocco, the holy Deacons Timothy, Polius, and Eutychius, who spread the Word of God in that country, and won the crown of martyrdom together.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyrs Polyeuctus, Victorius, and Donatus.

At Cordova, [in the persecution under the Emperor Decius,] the holy martyr Secundinus.

Upon the same day, [at Nicomedia, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Synesius and Theopompus.

At Cæsarea Philippi, [likewise in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy Nicostratus and Antiochus, along with other soldiers, all martyrs.

On the same day, the holy Valens, Bishop [of Pampeluna,] who was murdered along with three lads.

At Alexandria, are commemorated the holy martyrs Secundus the Priest, and others, whom George, the Arian Bishop under the Emperor Constantius, savagely ordered to be slain during the Whitsuntide holidays.

Also the holy Bishops [Ammonius, Muus, Gaïus, Philon, Heres, Pliny, Psinosiris, Palemon, Agathon, Anagamphon, Mark, another Ammonius, another Mark, Dracontius, Adelphius, and Athenodorus,] and the Priests [Hierax and Dioscorus,] who all were banished by the Arians, and so won a place with holy Confessors.

At Nice, in Gaul, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Hospitius, remarkable for the grace of self-denial, and for the spirit of prophecy.

Vespers are of the following.

MAY 21.

St Peter Celestine, Pope of Rome, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst exalt Thy blessed servant Peter Celestine even to the honour of the chief Bishoprick, and didst teach him to love better to be lowly, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, after his ensample, so lightly to esteem all things earthly, that in the end we, even as he hath done, may happily attain unto those good things which Thou hast promised unto the humble and meek. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Bernardine. Prayer as in his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Peter, who is called Peter Celestine, because when he became Pope he did so under the title of Celestine V., was the son of respectable Catholic parents, and was born at Isernia in Apulia, [about the year of grace 1221.] He was hardly entered on boyhood, when he withdrew into a desert, in order to keep his soul safe from the snares of the world. In solitude he fed his mind with heavenly meditation, and brought his body into subjection, even by wearing an iron chain next to his bare flesh. He founded, under the Rule of St Benedict, that congregation which was afterwards known as the Celestine. His light, as of a candle set upon a candlestick, could not be kept hidden, and after the Church of Rome had for a long while been widowed of a shepherd, he was chosen without his knowledge and in his absence, to fill the chair of Peter. The news of his election filled himself with as great amazement, as it did all others with sudden joy. When, however, he was seated in the exalted place of the Papal dignity, he found that the many cares by which he was beset made it wellnigh impossible for him to give himself to his accustomed meditations; [after four months,] of his own free will he resigned the burden and the honour together [on the 13th day of December, 1294]; and, while he sought to return to his old way of life, [on the 19th day of May, 1296,] he fell asleep in the Lord.[1] How precious his death was in His sight was gloriously manifested by a Cross which appeared shining in the air before the door of the cell. He was illustrious for miracles both during his life and after his death, and when these had been duly investigated, Clement V., in the eleventh year after his departure hence, enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons from St Gregory the Great, "The simplicity of the righteous," and "The wisdom of the righteous," (p. 628.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 592.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Ubald, Bishop of Gubbio, who was famous for miracles, and of whom mention is made upon the 16th day of this same month of May.

Upon the same 22nd day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Faustinus, Timothy, and Venustus.

In Africa, [at the beginning of the third century,] the holy martyrs Castus and Æmilius, who finished their testimony by the suffering of fire; of them blessed Cyprian writeth that in the first skirmish they were conquered, but in the second battle the Lord made them conquerors, that they who had first yielded to the flames might become stronger than the flames.

In Corsica, [in the fifth century,] the holy Virgin [martyr] Julia, who endured the Cross, and so was crowned.

At Comana, in Pontus, the holy martyr Basiliscus, who obtained the glory of martyrdom under the Emperor Maximian and the President Agrippa. He was shod with iron boots pierced with fiery nails, and suffered many other things likewise, before his head was cut off and he was cast into the river.

In Spain, the holy Virgin martyr Quiteria.

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Marcian, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Auxerre, the blessed Abbat Romanus, who ministered to holy Benedict when he was in the cave, and afterwards went into Gaul, where he built a monastery, and fell asleep in the Lord, leaving many heirs of his holiness.

At Aquino, [in the twelfth century,] the holy Confessor Fulco.

At Pistoja, in Tuscany, [also in the twelfth century,] the blessed Attho, monk of the Order of Valombrosa, [who became Bishop of Pistoja.]

At Auxerre, [in the fifth century,] the holy Virgin Helen.

At Cassia, in Umbria, [in the year 1456,] the blessed Rita, a widow, a nun of the Order of Austin Hermits, who, after having been married in the world, loved only the Eternal Bridegroom Christ.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. He was the chief Bishop, &c.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

MAY 22.

St Ubald, Bishop [of Gubbio,] Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer.

GRACIOUSLY help us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, and at the petition of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Ubald, stretch forth the right hand of Thy mercy to shield us against all the fiery darts of the wicked one. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The same Prayer throughout the Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Ubald was born of a noble family at Gubbio in Umbria, and well established in godliness and learning from his earliest years. When he was a young man, it was often proposed to him to marry, but he never abandoned his determination to preserve his virginity. After that he was ordained Priest he divided his inheritance among the poor and

[1] The reader must not suppose from the above narrative that St Peter Celestine was allowed to end his days in peaceful retirement. The cruel persecution to which he was subjected, and under which he sank, is related briefly, and in the way least unfavourable to Boniface VIII., in Alban Butler, vol. v., May 19., But see also Rohrbacher, Histoire de l'Église. Vol. 19.

Churches, and embraced the Institute of Canons Regular of St Austin. This Institute he brought to Gubbio, and for some time led therein a most holy life. When the fame of his saintliness had got noised abroad, Pope Honorius II. set him, contrary to his own wishes, over the Church of Gubbio, and he was honoured with consecration as Bishop by the hands of the said Pope himself, [in the year of our Lord 1129.]

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Ubald came to live as Bishop in Gubbio, he changed his way of life in no wise from that which he had led before, but his virtues began to be more eminent because his word and ensample were now more able to benefit his neighbours, to whom the shepherd of their souls was a pattern, not by outward showing only, but from his heart. He ate little, dressed simply, and slept upon a hard and very poor bed. He "always bore in the body the dying of the Lord JESUS," (2 Cor. iv. 10,) while he daily fed his soul in unceasing and earnest prayer. Hence he acquired such wonderful meekness, that when he was most grievously wronged and insulted he not only took it patiently, but, by a strange impulse of love for them, embraced his persecutors with every proof of affection.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR the space of two years before Ubald passed away from this present life, he was tried as gold in the furnace, by grievous bodily weakness, and, day after day, amid the sharpest sufferings, he never ceased patiently to give God thanks. He rested in peace on the sacred day of Pentecost, [in the year 1160,] having for many years governed with great praise the Church which had been entrusted to him, and glorious for good works and miracles. Pope Celestine III. numbered him with the Saints. His strength is most chiefly shown in the casting out of evil spirits. His body hath remained without corruption for all these ages, and is reverenced greatly in his native town by Christ's faithful people. To them he hath more than once shown himself good at need.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Confessor John de' Rossi, famous for his patience and charity in preaching the Gospel to the poor.

At Langres, in Gaul, [in the third century,] the holy Desiderius, Bishop [of that see.] When he saw how the army of the Vandals were harrying his flock he went to plead for them with the Vandal king, who forthwith commanded his throat to be cut upon the spot; and he cheerfully stretched out his neck for the sake of his sheep, and with the stroke of the sword passed away to be with Christ. There suffered along with him many others of his people, who are all buried in the same city.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Epitacius the Bishop, and Basil.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Quintian, Lucius, and Julian, who suffered in the persecution under the Vandals, and so obtained crowns that fade not away.

In Cappadocia are commemorated those holy martyrs who, in the persecution under Maximian Galerius, were slain by having their thighs broken; also they who, in Mesopotamia, were hung head downwards, and so finished their testimony by being choked with smoke and consumed by slow fire.

In the country of Lyons, the holy Desiderius, Bishop of Vienne, who was stoned to death by order of King Theodoric, and so obtained the crown of martyrdom.

At Synnada, [in the ninth century,] the holy Michael, Bishop [of that see.] On the same day the holy Mercurial, Bishop [of Forli.]

At Naples, in Campania, [in the third century,] the holy Euphebius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Nursia, the holy monks Eutychius and Florence, of whom mention is made by blessed Pope Gregory the Great.

Vespers are of the following.

MAY 23.

St John Baptist de' Rossi, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst beautify Thine holy Confessor John Baptist with the graces of love and long-suffering in preaching Thy Gospel unto the poor, grant, we beseech Thee, unto us who honour his godly and worthy life the grace to follow after the ensample of his good works. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Ubald. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN BAPTIST de' Rossi was born of a respectable family at Voltaggio, in the diocese of Genoa, [on the 22nd February 1698,] and, as a child, was the wonder of all on account of his gentleness and godliness. At thirteen years of age the good providence of God sent him to Rome, where he was destined afterwards to do the work of an Apostle. As a student at the Roman College he was distinguished both for his talents and his goodness. He was very anxious that his comrades should attend regularly the meetings of the guild of the Blessed Virgin, should minister to the sick in hospitals, and should be diverted from objectionable recreations by harmless amusements; at the same time he stirred up the more sluggish by his words on heavenly things, and from that time got the surname of Apostle. He fell seriously ill on account of his severe treatment of his own body, and was therefore obliged to relax somewhat the earnestness of his studies. This he was accustomed to say was God's dealing with him that he might not be puffed up with knowledge, and so seek his own rather than those things which are JESUS Christ's. After joining the clergy he went through the sacred training in the College of St Thomas, where he went from strength to strength, and then with deep joy of soul received the Priesthood. He so chose the Lord to be his own inheritance, that he bound himself by a special vow not to accept any church benefice, even if it were offered him quite unsolicited, unless he were compelled to do so by obedience.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER he became a Priest, he devoted himself entirely to the spiritual health of his neighbours, which had been his care from his youth up. By the ministry of the Word, with wonderful gentleness he stirred up to the love of good alike ecclesiastics, holy virgins, citizens, prisoners, and the whole lowest class of the population. He spent several hours every day in hearing the confessions of the illiterate, and visited in their homes or in hospitals the sick, and especially the consumptive, of whom he spoke as his own. He hurried about the city, and took part in countless good works, but was especially careful in visiting the hospital of St Galla, to help in every way he could the poor, whom he held as a special object of affection. From his fifteenth year he was joined to a body of Priests whose special work was preaching to the poor, with them he learnt his apostleship, and he arranged and disseminated their labours. The same pity caused him to spend his modest substance in relieving the necessities of the needy. He left behind him abiding fruits of his unwearied zeal for the instruction of servants, wanderers, and the illiterate classes for the holy celebration of Easter, an home of refuge for the safe keeping of the lost women who wander through the city by night, but above all the earnestness for the salvation of souls aroused among the clergy.

Sixth Lesson.

THE brightness of his love of God shone forth in his face while he was officiating, and he could not speak of His goodness without tears. He was forced, out of obedience, to accept a Canon's stall in the collegiate church of St Mary in Cosmedine, and during the psalmody he seemed to become entranced. He was very careful as to the sacred ceremonies, sought the beauty of the house of God, and freely contributed of his means to that object. He communicated to others his own love towards the Mother of God, and he promoted her worship in his own church, where he instituted a daily sermon in her honour, in addition to her Office.[1] He sought to fill himself with the spirit of Philip Neri, and while he was devout towards all the dwellers in heaven, he promoted increased honour for the princes of the Apostles; he was constant in prayer and in every good work, and rich in gifts of grace. At length in the hospital called that of the Most Holy Trinity, whither he had withdrawn to live along with the Priests, broken down by work, he reached the end of life, and when he had received the sacraments of the Church, and again exhorted to works of charity and to the care of the poor, he died in the Lord's kiss upon the 23rd day of May, in the year of Christ 1764, and of his own age the sixty-sixth. God was pleased to mark by miracles so remarkable an example of priestly grace, and when these had been duly proved, the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX., upon the 13th day of May, in the year 1860, ascribed to him the honours paid to the blessed in heaven. As new signs still distinguished him, Leo XIII., upon the 8th day of December, in the year 1881, enrolled him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory the Great, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled "Help of Christians."

Upon the same 24th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy Manahen, foster-brother of Herod the Tetrarch, a teacher and prophet under the grace of the New Testament, who sleepeth in that city.

Also, the blessed Johanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, of whom maketh mention the Evangelist Luke.

At Porto, the holy martyr Vincent.

At Brescia, the holy martyr Afra, who suffered under the Emperor Hadrian.

At Nantes, in Brittany, the blessed brothers Donatian and Rogatian, both martyrs. They were cast into prison, under the Emperor Diocletian, because of the steadfastness of their faith, hung on the rack and mangled, then pierced through with a spear, and in the end beheaded.

In Istria, the holy martyrs Zoellus, Servilius, Felix, Silvanus, and Diocles, [in the third century.]

Upon the same day, [in Egypt, in the persecution under Antoninus,] the holy martyrs Miletius, a captain in the army, and two hundred and fifty-two of his comrades, who finished their testimony by divers sorts of death.

Also the holy martyrs Susannah, Marciana, and Palladia, wives of three of the aforesaid soldiers, who were slain, together with their little children.

At Milan, the holy martyr Robustian.

In Morocco, in Africa, [in the year 1636,] blessed John de Prado, of the strictest observance of the bare-footed Friars Minors. For the preaching of the Gospel he manfully endured bonds, imprisonment, stripes, and many other torments, and finished his testimony for Christ by fire.

At the monastery of Lerins, [in the fifth century,] the holy Priest Vincent, distinguished for his teaching and holiness.

At Bologna is commemorated the translation of the holy Confessor Dominic, in the time of Pope Gregory IX.

Vespers are of the following.

---

[1] Psalmodie. It is assumed that what is meant is the daily public performance of her Little Office in addition to the Church Office.

MAY 24.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled "Help of Christians."

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for her Festivals, (p. 633,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY and merciful God, Who hast in marvellous wise appointed the most Blessed Virgin Mary to be an everlasting help for the succour of Thy Christian people, mercifully grant that we striving under her protection in life may attain victory over our malignant adversary in death. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

Hymn.[1]

OFTTIMES, when hemm'd around by hostile arms,
The Christian people lay all sore dismay'd,
Faith's eye hath traced the Virgin gliding down,
To lend her loving aid.

So speak the monuments of olden time,
And shrines that bright with votive spoils appear;
So speak the Festivals in her sweet praise,
Returning year by year.

Now for new mercies a new song ascends,
While with our Lady's ensigns all unfurl'd,
Rome in procession long high triumph holds,
And with great Rome the world.

Oh, happy day! on which Saint Peter's throne
Receives the Faith's great Ruler back again;
Returning from his banishment, in peace
O'er Christendom to reign.

Ye youths and maidens, priests and people all!
Pour out your grateful hearts on this glad day,
Striving with all your strength, to Heaven's high Queen
Her well-earn'd praise to pay.

Virgin of Virgins! JESU's Mother blest!
Add yet another mercy to the past;
And help our Pastor all his flock to lead
Safe into Heaven at last.

To Thee, great Trinity, be endless praise,
Blessing, and majesty, and glory due;
To Thee may we our hearts and voices raise,
All the long ages through.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Behold, Mary was our hope, unto whom we fled, to help and deliver us; and she came to our succour. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of St John Baptist de' Rossi. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Prov. viii. 12, as in the Common, (p. 635.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On the Twelve Stars.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, one man and one woman have much harmed us, but, thanks be to God, by one Man and one woman, all hath been restored unto us, and that, not without a plentiful increase of graces. Verily, Christ is enough, and verily "our sufficiency is of Him" (2 Cor. iii. 5,) but for us "it is not good that the man should be alone," (Gen. ii. 18.) It was more meet that a woman as well as a man should appear in the matter of our redemption. And thus the woman "blessed among women" is not seen idle, but a place is found for her in the work of reconciliation. We must needs have a medium between us and the Mediator Christ, neither can we have one more useful than Mary. Eve was a cruel medium, through which the venomous serpent infected her husband with its poison, but Mary is a trustworthy medium which offereth the healthful antidote for that poison both to men and to women. The one ministered to the work of seduction, the other to that of the atonement. The one smuggled in the fall, the other brought in the Redemption. Why should weak man tremble to come to Mary? There is nothing stern, nothing dreadful about her; she is all sweetness, offering, to all, milk and wool. Consider well the whole course of the Gospel history, and if thou find in Mary any such thing as harshness, or hardness, and even the least sign of loss of temper, trust her not again, and fear to come unto her.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT if thou find her to be altogether as indeed she is, full of a mother's tenderness and grace, full of gentleness and mercy, give thanks unto Him Who, in the vast abundance of His goodness, hath given thee such a spokeswoman in whom thou canst not but trust. In fine, through the boundlessness of her charity she hath made herself all things to all men, (1 Cor. ix. 22,) "A debtor both to the wise and to the unwise," (Rom. i. 14.) She opened to all the bosom of her mercy, that of her fulness all may receive; the captive, ransom; the sick, health; the sorrowful, comfort; the sinful, pardon; the righteous, grace; even angels, gladness. She is not one who inquireth what we have deserved, but is to all most easy to be entreated and most merciful; in the wideness of her love she hath pity upon the needs of all. She is the woman of whom God promised of old time that she should bruise with her foot of power the head of the old serpent. For her heel he lay in wait, but vainly. For she by herself hath crushed the depravity of every heresy. They that lay in wait for her have been crushed, they that assailed her have been trampled down, they that maligned her have been silenced, and all generations called her blessed. If by the moon we are to understand the Church, we have her office of advocate clearly set forth, where it is said, "A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet." (Apoc. xii. 1.) Let us embrace the blessed feet of Mary, casting ourselves down in most earnest entreaty before her. Let us take hold upon her, and not let her go until she bless us; for she is able.

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

Sixth Lesson. (From History.)

CHRISTENDOM hath oftentimes had marvellous experience how present an help is the Mother of God for scattering her foes. Thus it was that the most holy Pope Pius V., after the famous victory which the Christians gained over the Sultan of Turkey in the battle of Lepanto, ordered that in the Litany of Loretto this Queen of heaven should be styled, among other titles, "Help of Christians." But one of the most remarkable and indeed truly miraculous instances was that of Pius VII., Bishop of Rome. He was dragged from his Apostolic See by the plots and arms of wicked men, and for five years was kept in close confinement, mainly at Savona, being almost utterly cut off from all means whereby he could govern the Church, a feature without a precedent in any previous persecution. When it was least expected, he was replaced upon the Papal throne, with universal approbation, and as it were by the hands of the whole world. The same thing happened to him a second time, when another storm arose, and he left the City and went in company with the Sacred College of Cardinals to the Riviera. Then, by an outpouring of God's mercy, the storm, which had threatened darkly, ceased, and he returned to Rome amid fresh rejoicing of the nations. But before leaving the North of Italy he carried out an old intention which his captivity had prevented him from realising, and, amid solemn pomp, placed with his own hands a crown of gold upon the famous image at Savona which depicts the Mother of God under the title of Mother of Mercy. The wonderful turns in his affairs the same Pope Pius VII., having had personal experience of everything, ascribed to the intercession of the most holy Mother of God, whose mighty aid he had himself unceasingly implored, and had urged all Christ's faithful people to implore. He therefore appointed a solemn Feast to be kept for ever in honour of the Virgin Mother, styled "Help of Christians," upon the 24th day of May, being that of his own happy return to the City of Rome, and he approved for this occasion a special office that the memorial, as well as the thanksgiving for such great mercies might remain in all time distinct.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 27.)

AT that time: As JESUS spake unto the multitudes, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice and said unto Him: Blessed is the womb that bare Thee. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (For Sept. 8.)

Consider, O man, the counsel of God; recognise its wisdom and its goodness. He Who was about to water the whole floor with dew from heaven, began by drenching the fleece. He who was about to redeem all mankind, poured the price of redemption upon Mary. Consider deeper with what feelings He hath willed that we should honour Mary, He Who hath given unto her a fulness of all good; so that if we have any hope, any grace, any salvation, we know that it runneth over from her abundance "who goeth up, overflowing with delights." (Cant. viii. 5.) With all our hearts, then, with all our deepest affections and longings, let us honour Mary, since this is the will of Him Who hath been pleased that it should be through Mary that we should have all things. I say that such is His will—for our sakes.

In the Seventh Responsory insert the Alleluia, and say, "May all that are asking thine holy help feel the might of thine assistance."

Eighth Lesson.

[GOD] doth in all things anticipate our needs, cheer our terrors, rouse our faith, nerve our hope, put away our fears, strengthen our cowardice. Thou art awe-struck even by hearing the voice of the Father, thou art ashamed to approach Him, and wouldst fain hide thyself among the trees of the garden. Lo! He hath given thee JESUS for a Mediator, a Mediator Who will be heard on account of His reverent submission, (Heb. v. 7,) for the Father loveth the Son. (John iii. 35.) But perchance thou shrinkest before the Divine Majesty in Him also, since albeit He be made Man, He remaineth still God. Wouldst thou have an advocate with Him likewise? Have recourse to Mary. There is nothing in Mary but pure humanity—pure, not only in the sense of being free from any kind of contamination, but in that of being pure and simple human nature and nothing more. And I have no hesitation in saying that she also will be heard on account of her reverent submission. The Son will indeed hear the mother, and the Father will hear the Son.

In the Eighth Responsory say the "Alleluia."

Ninth Lesson.

MY little children, this is the sinners' ladder to heaven, this is my chiefest trust, this is the whole reason of the hope that is in me.[1] For why? Can her Son thrust her away, or endure that she should be thrust away? Can He either not hear, or not Himself be heard? Plainly He cannot. The Angel giveth her this joyful assurance: "Thou hast found grace with God." She will always find grace with God, and grace is all that we need, since by grace are we saved. (Eph. ii. 8.) What else do we want, my brethren? Let us seek grace, and let us seek it through Mary, for he that seeketh, findeth, and cannot be disappointed of his hope. Let us seek grace, but let it be grace with God, for among men "favour is deceitful." (Prov. xxxi. 30.) Let others seek for merits, but let us seek to find grace. For why? Is it not the work of grace that we are here? Of a truth, "it is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed." (Lam. iii. 22.)

LAUDS.

Hymn.[1]

MOTHER of our Lord and Saviour!
First in beauty as in power!
Glory of the Christian nations!
Ready help in trouble's hour!

Though the gates of Hell against us
With profoundest fury rage;
Though the ancient Foe assault us,
And his fiercest battle wage;

Nought can hurt the pure in spirit,
Who upon thine aid rely;
At thy hand secure of gaining
Strength and mercy from on high.

Safe beneath thy mighty shelter,—
Though a thousand hosts combine,
All must fall or flee before us,
Scatter'd by an arm divine.

Firm as once on holy Sion,
David's tower rear'd its height;
With a glorious rampart girded,
And with glistening armour bright;

So th' Almighty's Virgin Mother
Stands in strength for evermore;
From Satanic hosts defending
All who her defence implore.

Through the long unending ages,
Blessed Trinity, to Thee!
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit!
Praise and perfect glory be. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. To thee we cried, O holy Mother of God, and by thee the Lord's help reached us. Alleluia.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy Confessor Aldhelm, Bishop of Sherborne.

On the same 25th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Salerno, the blessed Pope Gregory VII., a right stout champion and defender of the freedom of the Church, whose feast we keep upon the 28th day of this same month of May.

At Florence, the holy Virgin, Mary Magdalene de' Pazzi, of the Order of Carmelites, famous for her holy life, whose feast we keep upon the 3rd day of June.

At Rome, upon the Nomentan Way, the blessed martyr, Pope Urban I., who by his exhortation and teaching turned to the faith of Christ many who suffered martyrdom therefore, among whom were Tiburtius and Valerian. He himself also suffered many things for the Church of God in the persecution under the Emperor Alexander Severus, and at length, being beheaded, was crowned with martyrdom.

At Dorostorum, in Bulgaria, the holy martyrs Pasicrates, Valention, and two others, who were all crowned together.

At Milan, holy Bishop Denis. He was banished into Cappadocia by the Arian Emperor Constantius for the Catholic faith's sake, and so there gave up his spirit to God with a near approach to martyrdom. His sacred body was sent to Milan to blessed Bishop Ambrose by Bishop Aurelius, prompted to that godly act, as is said, by holy Basil the Great.

At Rome, the holy Pope Boniface IV., who consecrated the Pantheon as the Church of the Blessed Virgin Mary and All holy Martyrs.

At Florence, [in the fifth century,] holy Zenobius, Bishop of that city, distinguished for the holiness of his life and the fame of his wondrous works.

In the country of Troyes, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Leo.

At Assisi, in Umbria, is commemorated the translation of the holy Confessor Francis, in the time of Pope Gregory IX.

Also at Veroli, in Latium, the translation of holy Mary, [mother] of James, whose sacred body is honoured by many works of power.

SECOND VESPERS.

Hymn as at the First.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. "O holy Mary, &c.," (p. 633,) ending "May all that are asking thine holy help feel the might of thine assistance."

A Commemoration is made of the following Prayer from his Office, and of St Urban.

MAY 25.

(The Feast of St Gregory VII. is kept on May 28.)

St Aldhelm, Bishop [of Sherborne,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who, upon this day, didst raise Thy blessed Bishop Aldhelm to eternal blessedness in heaven, grant, for his sake, and at his prayers, that Thy mercy may bring us also thither. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made oj the First Vespers of St Urban, Bishop[2] and Martyr. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 576 or 594).

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY God, of Whose blessed Martyr and Bishop Urban we do make solemn memorial, grant, we beseech Thee, that we may be holpen of his prayers in Thy presence. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] "Papæ," but Dom Gueranger has shown in his "Vie de Ste. Cécile" that the Bishop here meant cannot have been the Pope Urban.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From his Life by William of Malmesbury. Anglia Sacra, xi. 1.)

ALDHELM, who was a Saxon of Royal blood, took the habit of a monk in the Monastery at Malmesbury. He resorted again and again to Canterbury to sit at the feet of the Abbat Hadrian, and so advanced under his instruction, that not only himself became famous as a teacher, but was also the first Englishman who ventured on publishing books. According to the testimony of Bede, he was a man of wide and varied learning, a brilliant speaker, and wonderfully well read both in Ecclesiastical and worldly writers.

Fifth Lesson.

HE read often, and prayed constantly, so that, (to use his own expression,) while he read, he seemed to hear God speaking to him, and while he prayed, himself to speak to God there present. He was indifferent to hunger, and careless about money, stopped inside his monastery, and proclaimed an unceasing war against idleness and desire. However, when a Church Synod had discussed the corrupt doctrines of the British Christians, and had come to the unanimous conclusion that it was better to lead the schismatics by reason than to drive them by force, Aldhelm took upon himself the task of confuting their errors. This he did by writing a book, which was the mean of leading back many of the wanderers into the bosom of the Universal Church.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Hedda, Bishop of the West-Saxons, Aldhelm was induced, against his own wishes, to accept the See of Sherborne. When he entered on this sphere of duty, he already felt that the end of his life was near, and, to make the best of what time remained, he preached day and night, visited about his diœcese, and practised fasting, and the like, as much as in the prime of his life. He died four years after becoming a Bishop, in the year of our Lord's Incarnation 709, and was buried in the Church of St Michael the Archangel, at Malmesbury.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

Ninth Lesson. (For St Urban, Bishop and Martyr.

THIS Urban was a Roman, who, in the reign of the Emperor Alexander Severus, by his teaching and holy life, brought many to believe in Christ. Among others was Valerian, the husband of the blessed Cecily, and Tiburtius, the brother of Valerian, both of whom afterwards bravely underwent martyrdom. It was Urban[1] who wrote the following words concerning the property of the Church: "Those things which His faithful ones make offering of unto the Lord, must never be turned to any other use than those of the Church, or of our Christian brethren, or of the poor. They are the free-will offerings of faithful believers, the trespass offerings of sinners, and the inheritance of the poor." He sat in the chair of Peter six years, seven months, and four days, and being crowned with martyrdom, was buried in the cemetery of Prætextatus, on the 25th day of May. He held five ordinations in December, wherein he ordained nine Priests, five Deacons, and eight Bishops for divers places.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Urban. Prayer as yesterday evening.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy Augustine, first Archbishop of Canterbury, called Apostle of England. He was sent hither, along with others, by the blessed Pope Gregory. He preached the Gospel of Christ to the English people. He fell asleep in the Lord at Canterbury, glorious for his graces and wondrous works.

On the same 26th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, holy Philip Neri, founder of the Congregation of the Oratory, famous for his virginity, his gift of prophecy, and his wondrous works.

Also at Rome, the holy Pope and martyr Eleutherius, who led many noble Romans to believe in Christ, and who sent into Britain holy Dyfan and Ffagan, who baptized Lleurwg, Prince [of Morganwg,] along with his wife and nearly all his people. We keep his feast upon the 29th day of this present month of May.

Also at Rome, the holy Priest Simitrius, and twenty-two others, who suffered martyrdom under the Emperor Antoninus Pius.

At Athens, the blessed Quadratus, a disciple of the Apostles. During the persecution under Hadrian the Church was scattered in great fear, but he gathered it together again by his faith and labour, and gave unto it a book very useful for the defending of the Christian religion, and worthy of the teaching of the Apostles.

At Vienne, in Dauphiny, the holy Zachary, Bishop [of that see,] who suffered martyrdom under Trajan.

In Africa, the holy martyr Quadratus, on whose feast-day holy Austin [of Hippo] preached a sermon.

At Todi, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Felicissimus, Heraclius, and Paulinus.

In the country of Auxerre, [in the second century,] the holy Priscus and a vast multitude of Christ's faithful people suffered martyrdom.[2]

Vespers are of the following.

[1] That is, Pope Urban. The two have got confused together. Urban I. sat A.D. 223-230.

[2] The Petits Bollandistes add here: At Quito, [in Peru, in the year 1645,] the blessed Virgin, Mary Anne of Jesus de Paredes y Flores, who is surnamed the Lily of Quito.

MAY 26.

St Augustine, Archbishop of Canterbury, Confessor, Apostle of England.

Double of the First Class, with an Octave.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst give blessed Augustine to the English people, to be their first teacher, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, that as we do proclaim his praise on earth, so we may feel his prayers in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from I Tim. iii. 1, &c., as in the Common Office, (p. 612).

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede, i. 23, et seq.)

AUGUSTINE, the first Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Apostle of the English, was sent into England by blessed Gregory, and came thither in the year 597. At that time there was in Kent a most mighty king named Ethelbert, whose power reached even to the Humber. When this King had heard wherefore the holy man was come, he received him kindly, and bade him and his companions, who were all monks, to come to his own capital city of Canterbury; being struck with astonishment at the perfect blamelessness of their lives, and the power of the heavenly doctrine which they preached, and which God confirmed with signs following.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY drew nigh to the city in solemn procession, singing the Litany, and bearing before them for their standard a silver cross and a picture of the Lord our Saviour painted on a panel. Hard by the city, upon the east side, there was a Church builded of old time in honour of St Martin, and wherein the Queen, who was a Christian, was used to pray. There they first began to meet together, to sing, to pray, to celebrate Masses, to preach, and to baptize, until the King was turned to the faith, and the most part of his people were led by his example, (but not his authority,) to take the name of Christian, for he had learnt from his teachers and his own soul's physicians, that men are to be drawn, and not driven to heaven. And now Augustine, being ordained Archbishop of the English and of Britain, lest he should leave untravailed any part of the Lord's vineyard, asked from the Apostolic See a new band of labourers, Mellitus, Justus, Paulinus, and Rufinian.

Sixth Lesson.

BY them Gregory sent hallowed vessels, Altar-cloths, Church vestments, and also reliques of the holy Apostles and Martyrs. He instructed them to turn the temples of the idols into places of Christian worship, by sprinkling them with hallowed water, building altars in them, and putting reliques therein. The Britons who, nearly an hundred and fifty years before, had been thrust into the uttermost parts of the island, had some Bishops, whom Augustine vehemently urged to lay aside their error concerning the keeping of Easter, and to labour along with him for the conversion of the English, but they left it all to him. He toiled much for the saving of souls. He was illustrious for miracles, but more illustrious for his life. He made Mellitus Bishop of London, and Justus Bishop of Rochester, and named Lawrence to succeed himself at Canterbury, and then finished his work in peace, and passed away to that life which is a life of perfect blessedness, upon the 26th day of May, [in the year of our Lord 604,] in the reign of Ethelbert.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Bede the Venerable, Confessor and Doctor of the Church, very famous for his holiness and learning.

Upon the same 27th day of May, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Pope John I., who was sent for to Ravenna by Theodoric, the Arian King of Italy, and there cast into prison on account of his orthodox faith, where he suffered long, and at length died.

At Dorostorum, in Bulgaria, the blessed Julius, a retired Roman soldier, who was arrested in the time of the Emperor Alexander Severus, and brought before the President Maximus, in whose presence he denounced the idols, and steadfastly confessed the Name of Christ, and so was put to death.

At Sora, the holy Virgin and martyr Restituta. She fought the fight of faith under the Emperor Aurelian and the pro-Consul Agathius. She conquered the attacks of devils, the cajolery of her kinsfolk, and the cruelty of the tormentors. At last she was beheaded, along with other Christians, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

[At Thelus,] in Artois, [in the seventh century,] the holy martyr Ranulph.

At Orange, in Gaul, [in the first century,] holy Eutropius, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his graces and wondrous works.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration of the following. Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, "O right excellent teacher, &c.," (p. 621.) Prayer from his Office.

During the Octave, when the Office is not of St Augustine, he is commemorated every day at Vespers and Lauds, except on a Double of the First Class, when he is not commemorated at all, or of the Second, when he is so only at the Second Vespers.

MAY 27.

St Bede the Venerable, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who dost enlighten thy Church by the learning of blessed Bede Thy Confessor and our teacher, mercifully grant unto Thy servants ever to be enlightened by his wisdom and holpen for his sake. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Common of Doctors, (p. 630.)

Fourth Lesson.

BEDE, a priest, was born at Jarrow, on the borders of England and Scotland. At the age of seven years he was placed under the care of holy Benedict Biscop, Abbat of Wearmouth, to be educated. Thereafter he became a monk, and so ordered his life that, whilst he should devote himself wholly to the study of the sciences and of doctrine, he might in nothing relax the discipline of his Order. There was no branch of learning in which he was not most thoroughly versed, but his chief care was the study of Holy Scriptures; and that he might the better understand them he acquired a knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew tongues. When he was thirty years of age he was ordained priest at the command of his Abbat, and immediately, on the advice of Acca, Bishop of Hexham, undertook the work of expounding the Sacred Books. In his interpretations he so strictly adhered to the teaching of the holy Fathers that he would advance nothing which was not approved by their judgment, nay, had the warrant of their very words. He ever hated sloth, and by habitually passing from reading to prayer, and in turn from prayer to reading, he so inflamed his soul that often amid his reading and teaching he was bathed in tears. Lest also his mind should be distracted by the cares of transitory things, he never would take the office of Abbat when it was offered to him.

Fifth Lesson.

THE name of Bede soon became so famous for learning and piety that St Sergius the Pope thought of calling him to Rome, where, certainly, he might have helped to solve the very difficult questions which had then arisen concerning sacred things. He wrote many books for the bettering of the lives of the faithful, and defending and extending of the faith. By those he gained everywhere such a reputation that the holy martyr Bishop Boniface styled him a "Light of the Church"; Lanfranc called him "The Teacher of the English," and the Council of Aix-la-Chapelle "The Admirable Doctor." But as his writings were publicly read in the churches during his life, and as it was not allowable to call him already a saint, they named him "The Venerable," a title which in all times after has remained peculiarly his. The power of his teaching was the greater also, in that it was attested by a holy life and the graces of religious observance. In this way, by his earnestness and example, his disciples, who were many and distinguished, were made eminent, not only in letters and the sciences, but in personal holiness.

Sixth Lesson.

BROKEN at length by age and labour, he was seized by a grievous illness. Though he suffered under it for more than seven weeks, he ceased not from his prayers and his interpreting of the Scriptures; for at that time he was turning the Gospel of John into English for the use of his people. But when, on the Eve of the Ascension, he perceived that death was coming upon him, he desired to be fortified with the last sacraments of the Church: then, after he had embraced his companions, and was laid on a piece of sackcloth on the ground, he repeated the words, "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost," and fell asleep in the Lord. His body, very sweet,—as it is related, breathing sweet odour,—was buried in the monastery of Jarrow, and afterwards was translated to Durham with the relics of St Cuthbert. Bede, who was already a Doctor among the Benedictines, and in other religious Orders, and venerated in certain dioceses, was declared by Pope Leo XIII., after consulting with the Congregation of Sacred Rites, to be a Doctor of the universal Church; and the Mass and Office for Doctors was ordered to be recited by all on his feast-day.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (cap. v. v. 13.)

AT that time JESUS said to His disciples: "Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted?" And so on.

Homily of the Venerable Bede, Priest.

The Gospel saith, "Ye are the salt of the earth." In these words the earth signifies human nature, and the salt signifies wisdom. Salt, verily, by its nature renders the earth unfruitful. Hence we read of cities, which in the anger of their victors were sown with salt. And hereto agreeth the teaching of the Apostle that by the salt of wisdom the lust of this world is restrained in the earth of human flesh, lest the foulness of vice should sprout up. But what if the salt shall have lost its savour? That is to say—If you, by whom the people are to be seasoned, are, on account of fear of persecution, or terror, you should lose the kingdom of heaven, placed outside the Church, there is no doubt that you will incur the taunts of the enemy.

"Ye are the light of the world"; that is to say—You, because ye are enlightened by the true light, ought to be the light of them who are in the world. "A city set on an hill cannot be hid"; that is to say—The Apostles' teaching, founded upon Christ; in other words, the Church built upon Christ, out of many nations, in the unity of the faith, and bound together with the cement of love; to those who enter it, a place of safety; to those who go up to it, toilsome; the guardian of those who dwell in it, and excluding every enemy.

Eighth Lesson.

"NEITHER doth any man light a candle and put it under a bushel; but upon a candlestick." So he who puts the light under the bushel is he who for his own temporal ends would hide and tamper with the light of doctrine; but upon the candlestick he places it who follows the ministry of God in order that the teaching of the truth may be accounted a greater thing than the service of the body. In another aspect, the Saviour lighted the candle when He filled our mortal body with the flame of the God-head; and He placed it on a candlestick, that is the Church; for He fixed the faith of His incarnation upon our foreheads. Which light cannot be placed under a bushel; that is to say, it cannot be included within the measures of the law, nor in Judea alone, but has lightened the whole earth.

Ninth Lesson. (For St John I., Pope and Martyr.)[1]

POPE John I. was a Tuscan, who ruled the Church during the reign of the Emperor Justinian. He went to Constantinople to get help from Justinian in the troubles which the heretic King Theodoric was then causing in Italy. It pleased the Lord to mark this journey with wonders. A certain nobleman at Corinth lent to the Pope for his journey a very quiet horse on which his own wife was used to ride. But when the horse was returned to his owner he was found become so vicious, that by his restiveness and plunging he was always throwing off his mistress, as though he were not content to carry the lady after having carried the Vicar of JESUS Christ. When the nobleman and his wife found the beast to be thus worthless, they gave him for a present to the Pope. But a thing much more marvellous was that when the Pope, accompanied by the Emperor, and under the gaze of an immense multitude of people, who had come forth with Justinian to do him honour, was at the entering in of the Golden Gate of Constantinople, he gave sight to a blind man. Even the Emperor fell at his feet to show him respect. When he had arranged his business with Justinian he returned into Italy, and forthwith sent out a letter to all the Bishops of Italy, bidding them hallow for Catholic worship the churches of the Arians, and adding these words: "We Ourselves when We were at Constantinople on some matters pertaining to the Catholic Religion and others pertaining to the King Theodoric, hallowed as Catholic all their Churches which We were able to find in those parts." Theodoric took this rule very ill, and, having enticed John by fraud to come to Ravenna, he cast him into prison, wherein, in a few days, he died of filth and hunger. He had sat in the chair of Peter two years, nine months, and fourteen days, within which time he had ordained fifteen Bishops. A little while afterward Theodoric also died. St Gregory writeth that a certain hermit saw him between Pope John and Symmachus the Patrician, whom he had likewise slain, going down into the fiery crater of Lipari, as though they who had been his victims were become the judges of his punishment. The body of John was carried from Ravenna to Rome, and there buried in the Church of St Peter.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Augustine, and of St John I. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 580.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the blessed Pope Gregory VII., a right stout champion and defender of the freedom of the Church, of whom mention is made upon the 25th day of this present month of May.

Upon the same 28th day of May, were born into the better life—

In Sardinia, the holy martyrs Æmilius, Felix, Prium, and Lucian, who contended for Christ, and were crowned.

At Chartres, in Gaul, the holy martyr Caraunus, who received martyrdom by being beheaded, under the Emperor Domitian.

At Corinth, the holy martyr Helconides. She was first tried with many torments, under the President Perennius, in the time of the Emperor Gordian; then was tortured again under the next President Justinus, but was delivered by an Angel. At length her breasts were cut off and she was thrown to wild beasts, and tried with fire, and thereafter finished her testimony by being beheaded.

Also the holy martyrs Crescens, Dioscorides, Paul, and Helladius.

At Tekoah, in Palestine, the holy martyrs, monks, who were massacred by the Saracens in the time of the Emperor Theodosius the Younger. Their sacred remains were gathered together by the country-folk, who treated them with great reverence.

---

[1] There may be some doubt whether the present form of the legend of St John I. will survive the next revision of the Breviary; however, these marvels are taken from St Gregory's Dialogues—St John reigned A.D. 525-526.

At Paris, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Germanus, Bishop [of that see.] How saintly he was, how worthy, with what wondrous works he shone, hath been written by Fortunatus, Bishop [of Poitiers.]

At Milan, [in the fifth century,] the holy Senator, Bishop [of that see,] very famous for his graces and learning.

At Urgel, in Spain, [in the sixth century,] the holy Justus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Florence, [in the year 1002,] the holy Confessor Podius, Bishop [of that see.]

SECOND VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Office.

Then of the Octave of St Augustine.

MAY 28.

St Gregory VII., Pope and Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, the might of all them which put their trust in Thee, Who to keep Thy Church free, didst make Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Gregory strong to wrestle and to suffer, grant unto us, following his example, and holpen by his prayers, that with us as with him, if they fight against us, they shall not prevail against us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

HILDEBRAND, who reigned as Pope under the name of Gregory VII., was born at Saona in Tuscany. By his teaching, by his holiness, and by his graces of all kinds, he was a noble light of the Church, whose brightness hath shone throughout all lands. There is a story to the effect that when he was a little child without any schooling, he was playing at the feet of a carpenter who was planing wood, and that God guided his hand to arrange the shavings which fell into the form of letters, making the inspired words of David, "He shall have dominion from sea to sea," (Ps. lxxi. 8,) a fore-shadowing, as it were, of that wide lordship over the earth which was afterwards his. He was taken to Rome, and brought up under the shelter of St Peter. As a young man he bitterly sorrowed over the oppression of the freedom of the Church by the laity, and over the corruption of the clergy themselves. He took the habit of a monk in the Abbey of Clugny, which was then in all the glory of the severest observance of the Rule of St Benedict. There he served God's majesty with such warmth of earnestness that the saintly fathers of the convent chose him to be their Prior. But the Providence of God had greater things in store for him, whereby to make him a source of health to many, and he was brought away from Clugny. He was first elected Abbat of the monastery of St Paul-without-the-walls at Rome, and afterwards created a Cardinal of the Roman Church. Under the Popes Leo IX., Victor II., Stephen IX., Nicolas II., and Alexander II., he discharged great offices of trust, and the duties of a Legate, and Blessed Peter Damian, speaking of him at this time, calleth him a man of most holy and honest thoughts. When Pope Victor II. sent him as his Legate into France, he, by a miracle, forced the Bishop of Lyons, who was befouled by the pollution of simony, to acknowledge his sin; in the Council of Tours he wrung from Berenger[1] a second abjuration of his heresy; and he prevailed against the schism of Cadolaus,[2] and strangled it.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Alexander II., Hildebrand, against his own will and to his own grief, was, on the 22nd day of April, in the year of Christ 1073, chosen Pope by one common consent of all. Reigning as Gregory VII., "he was as the sun shining upon the Temple of the Most High." (Ecclus. l. 7.) Mighty both in word and deed, he toiled for the restoration of Ecclesiastical discipline, for the spread of the Faith, for the defence of the freedom of the Church, for the suppression of error and corruption, so that since the time of the Apostles there is said never to have been a Pope who bore more labour and trouble for the sake of God's Church, or contended more manfully for her liberties. He purged divers provinces of the pollution of simony. Like a brave soldier he withstood without dread the unrighteous contendings of the Emperor Henry IV., against whom he shrank not from setting himself as a wall of defence for the house of Israël. And when the said Henry fell into the depths of sin he cut him off from the communion of the faithful, and from his kingdom, and loosed the nations that were subject to him from their sworn allegiance.

Sixth Lesson.

WHILE he was celebrating solemn Mass, godly men saw a dove descend from heaven, perch upon his right shoulder, and spread out its wings so as to veil his head, a testimony that it was not by reasonings of man's wisdom, but by the teachings of the Holy Ghost, that he was guided in his rule over the Church. When the armies of the infamous Henry encompassed Rome, and hedged her in on every side, a great fire which the enemy had raised became extinct, when Gregory made the sign of the Cross towards it. The Norman Duke, Robert Guiscard, at length delivered Gregory from the hand of Henry, and he departed from Rome, first to the Abbey of Monte Cassino, and thence onward to Salerno, to dedicate the Church of St Matthew the Apostle at that place. While he was preaching to the people there, on a certain day he was smitten with grievous pains, and fell into a sickness whereof he foresaw that he should never be healed. As he lay on his death-bed, Gregory's last words were: "I have loved righteousness and hated iniquity, and therefore I am dying in exile." He was a man really holy, a visitor of sin, and a most leal soldier of the Church. It is past reckoning how many sufferings he manfully bore, and how much he wisely ordained in many Councils, which he gathered together in Rome. He had been Pope twelve years, when, [on the 25th day of May,] in the year of salvation 1085, he went hence to be ever with the Lord. Both during his life and after his death he was marked by signs and wonders not a few. His holy body was honourably buried in the Cathedral Church of Salerno.

[1] Archdeacon of Angers; the first heretic who denied the Real Presence.

[2] Bishop of Parma; he got himself set up as an Anti-pope, by the title of "Honorius II."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Augustine.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy martyr Eleutherius, Pope of Rome, who led many noble Romans to believe in Christ, and who sent into Britain holy Dyfan and Ffagan, who baptized Lleurwg, Prince [of Morganwg,] along with his wife and nearly all his people. Mention is made of him upon the 26th day of this present month of May.

On the same 29th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyr Restitutus.

At Iconium, a city of Isauria, the holy martyrs Conon and his son aged twelve years. Under the Emperor Aurelian they suffered with great firmness from being basted with oil upon a grating over live coals, stretching upon the rack and fire, and at length gave up the ghost as their hands were being pounded with a wooden mallet.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Sisinius, Martyrius, and Alexander, who are stated by Paulinus, in his life of holy Ambrose, to have gained the crown of martyrdom in the parts of Val-d'Anagna, under the persecution of the heathen in the time of the Emperor Honorius.

At Cæsarea Philippi, the holy martyrs Theodosia, mother of the holy martyr Procopius, and twelve other noble matrons, who were beheaded in the persecution under Diocletian.

In Umbria, suffered one thousand five hundred and twenty-five holy martyrs.

At Treves, the blessed Confessor Maximin, Bishop [of that city,] who honourably welcomed the holy Bishop Athanasius when he was in exile from the persecution of the Arians.

At Verona, [in the fourth century,] the holy Maximus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Arci, in Latium, the holy Confessor Eleutherius.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 29.

St Eleutherius, Pope of Rome, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office of One Martyr, (p. 576, or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Mercifully consider our weakness, &c.," (p. 580.)

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Eleutherius, these begin with the Chapter.

Commemoration of St Gregory VII., with Prayer from his Office, and of the Octave of St Augustine.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ELEUTHERIUS was a Greek by race, and was born at Nicopolis, a city of Epirus. His father's name was Abundius. He was a Priest of the holy Roman Church. In the year of our Lord 179, during the reign of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Augustus, after the death of Soter, he was chosen Bishop of Rome by the votes of all the clergy. He discharged the duties of this office excellently, and with all praise, for fifteen years and twenty-three days. He held three ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained twelve Priests, eight Deacons, and fifteen Bishops for divers places.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was consulted by the church of Lyons by letter concerning certain questions. The bearer of these letters was that most learned Irenæus. Him he hospitably welcomed, and to him he opened the traditions of the Apostles which the Church of Rome had kept pure. He condemned the superstitious dry-meat system[1] of the Montanists. He laid down excellent rules as to the right form of church sentences. When Marcion and Valentine had oftentimes relapsed he cast them out of the Church.

Sixth Lesson.

IN his days the Church enjoyed the utmost peace, and he brought many even of the chiefest of Rome to believe in Christ. He received letters by messengers from Lleurwg, Prince of the Britons [of Morganwg,] praying him for ministers of the Word of God, and he sent unto him Ffagan and Dyfan, Priests of the Roman Church, through whose hands the Prince himself, with his whole household and nearly all his subjects, were born again in the sacred washing of regeneration. At length, when he had done all these things and others for the worship of God, Eleutherius died a holy death upon the 28th day of May, [in the year of our Lord 192,] in the reign of the Emperor Commodus, and was buried upon the Vatican Mount.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 578.) At Lauds Commemoration of the Octave of St Augustine.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of holy John of Nepomuc, Canon of the metropolitical Cathedral Church of Prague, in Bohemia, who, when he had been vainly tried, to make him violate the seal of sacramental confession, was cast into the river Moldau, and so earned the palm of martyrdom; of whom mention is made upon the 16th day of May.

Upon this same 30th day of May, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyr Pope Felix, who was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Aurelian.

At Torre, in Sardinia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Hadrian,] the holy martyrs Gabinus and Crispulus.

At Antioch, [in the fourth century,] holy Sycus and Palatinus, who suffered many torments for Christ's Name's sake.

At Ravenna, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Exuperantius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, [in the seventh century,] the holy Anastasius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy Basil and Emmelia his wife, father and mother of holy Basil the Great. In the time of the Emperor Galerius Maximian they were banished, and dwelt in the wilderness in Pontus; but they fell asleep in peace after the persecution was over, leaving their children inheritors of their goodness.

At Seville, in Spain, [in the year 1252,] holy Ferdinand III., King of Castille and Leon, who on account of his excelling graces was surnamed the Saint. Illustrious for his zeal in the propagation of the faith, after conquering the Moors, he left an earthly kingdom to inherit in blessedness a kingdom eternal in heaven.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 30.

St John of Nepomuc, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Martyr (p. 576, or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who through the unconquerable Sacramental silence of Thy blessed servant John hast adorned Thy Church with the crown of yet another martyrdom, grant unto us, at his prayers and after his ensample, the grace to bridle well our tongues, and to be ready to lose the whole world rather than our own souls. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St John, these begin with the Chapter.

Commemoration of St Eleutherius, of the Octave of St Augustine, and of St Felix I., Pope and Martyr.[1] The Commemoration of St Felix is taken from Lauds, and the Prayer is, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 580.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS John was born at Nepomuc, from which his name is taken, a little town of Bohemia [some leagues from Prague, about the year of our Lord, 1330.] His father and mother were well stricken in years. At the hour of his birth fire appeared blazing over the house. As a child he fell grievously ill, but completely recovered, through the help of the Blessed Virgin, to whom his father and mother believed that they originally owed him. These signs from heaven were followed by a godly education aided by a quick wit, and he passed his boyhood amid holy and earnest exercises, esteeming it his enjoyment to go to Church and to serve Priests at the Altar. He went to study letters first at Staaze, and then more advanced learning at Prague, where he took the degree of Master in Philosophy and of Doctor in Divinity and Canon Law. Being ordained Priest, and fitted by the science of the Saints to labour for the gain of souls, he gave himself up entirely to the ministry of the word of God. His eloquence and holiness brought forth abundant fruits in the destruction of vice and the recall of wanderers into the path that leadeth unto life, and he was appointed a Canon of the Metropolitan Church of Prague. Soon afterwards he was named Court Preacher by King Wenceslaus IV., and discharged this office with such success, that the King acted largely on his advice, and held him in great respect. But the servant of God firmly and constantly refused the higher honours offered him by his Sovereign, and which would have taken him away from the preaching of the Divine Word.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was appointed Royal Almoner, and the Queen Jane made him her Confessor. When King Wenceslaus fell away from his good life and resolutions, and plunged into sin, he took in bad part the remonstrances and warnings of his godly wife, and dared to ask from John a disclosure of the things which the Queen had confided to him in the tribunal of Sacramental Penance. But the servant of God remained unshaken, first under blandishments and then under torture and a miserable imprisonment, in refusing to gratify the King's base curiosity. But the laws neither of God nor of man could withhold the insane mind of Wenceslaus from his infamous idea, and the champion of Christ openly foretold to the people that his own last conflict was at hand, and the afflictions which would thereafter befall the kingdom. He went presently to Buntzel, and, in front of the antient image of the Blessed Virgin which is there honoured, prayed earnestly for strength from heaven to fight a good fight. He returned thence on the evening before Ascension Day [1383,] and the King chancing to look out at a window and see him pass, sent for him and furiously demanded his compliance, with the threat of having him drowned if he was obstinate. John remained perfectly unmoved. That night, therefore, he was thrown into the River Muldaw, where it runs through Prague, and so gained the glorious crown of martyrdom.

[1] This, and the case of St Petronilla on the next day, are examples of the application of the Pie ix. 8.

Sixth Lesson.

THE sacrilegious murder was committed secretly, but a great sign from God made it public, and, with it, the glory of the martyr. As the lifeless corpse was borne along by the stream, lights appeared, floating and moving over the waters. The next morning therefore the Canons, nothing fearing the anger of the King, took the body from the sand and carried it in solemn procession to the Metropolitan Church, and there gave it burial. The memory of this victorious Priest became constantly more illustrious by miracles and by the veneration paid it by the faithful, especially such as are slandered. After more than three hundred years, when his remains, which had lain all the while under ground, were judicially examined, the tongue was found incorrupt and fresh, and when, after six years more, it was shown to the judges appointed by the Apostolic See, it suddenly swelled again to its full size, and changed in colour from dark to bright red. These and other signs being duly certified, the supreme Pontiff Benedict XIII., upon the 19th day of March, in the year of salvation 1729, inscribed in the list of the holy martyrs the name of this first champion of the inviolability of sacramental confession, whose secrecy he sealed with his blood.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons (even in Paschal-time) from Matth. x. 26, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 601.) The last part is either omitted or read as one with the second in order to make room for the following.

Ninth Lesson. (For St Felix I., Pope and Martyr.)

POPE Felix I. was a Roman who ruled the Church in the days of the Emperor Aurelian. His father's name was Constantius. His is the ordinance which commands that Mass should be celebrated on the monuments and graves of martyrs. He held two December ordinations, wherein he ordained nine Priests, five Deacons, and five Bishops for divers places. Having finished his testimony he was buried upon the Aurelian Way, in the Church which he had himself built and dedicated. He lived as Pope two years, four months, and twenty-nine days.[1]

At Lauds, Commemorations of the Octave of St Augustine, and of St Felix I. The latter is taken from the First Vespers. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 580.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 31st day of May, were born into the better life—

At Brescia, the holy Virgin Angela Merici, Foundress of the religious Sisters of St Ursula, to have for their principal work the leading of young maidens in the ways of the Lord. Of her mention is made upon the 27th day of January.

At Rome, the holy Virgin Petronilla, daughter of the blessed Apostle Peter. She looked down upon an offer of marriage from the noble Flaccus, and took three days to consider the matter, the which time she spent in fasting and prayer, and upon the third day, immediately after receiving the Sacrament of Christ, she gave up the ghost.

At Aquileia, the holy brothers Cantius and Cantian, and their sister Cantianilla, all martyrs of the noble family of the Anicii, who, along with their schoolmaster Protus, were beheaded under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian on account of their firmness in the Christian faith.

At Torre, in Sardinia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Hadrian,] the holy martyr Cresentian.

At Comana, in Pontus, the holy soldier Hermias. He was delivered by God's help from countless and savage tortures, under the Emperor Antoninus. He converted his executioner to Christ, and made him a sharer in the crown of his own martyrdom, but he himself was the first to grasp it, by being beheaded.

At Verona, [in the sixth century,] the holy Lupicinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome, the holy Deacon Paschasius, a Confessor of whom doth make mention the blessed Pope Gregory [the Great.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

MAY 31.

St Angela Merici, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Whose will it hath been to use blessed Angela as a mean whereby to make a new fellowship of virgins to grow and flourish in Thy Church, grant unto us, at her prayers, so angelically to live, that we may freely lay aside all earthly things, and worthily enter upon the enjoyment of those things which are eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

[1] Reigned A.D. 269-274.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Angela, these begin with the Chapter.

Commemorations are made of the Octave of St Augustine, and of St Petronilla, Virgin not Martyr. The latter is taken from Lauds.

Prayer. Graciously hear us, &c., (p. 645.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ANGELA Merici was born of godly parents at Decenzano on the western shore of the Lake of Garda, in the diocese of Verona and territory of Venice, [on the 21st day of March, about the year of grace 1474.] From her earliest years she carefully guarded the lily of her virginity, with the intention of keeping it for ever unbroken. She had no taste for women's finery, and purposely marred the exceeding comeliness of her body and her sightly hair, as seeking to appear beautiful only in the eyes of Him Who is the Lover of souls. At ten years of age she lost both her father and mother, and thereafter, being fain to take upon her a life of greater hardness, she essayed to retire into a desert place apart, but this her uncle forbade her to do, and she learnt how to practise at home what she was not allowed to attempt in the wilderness. She often used hair-cloth and scourging; never ate flesh-meat, except when she was sick; drank wine only on the Feast-days of Christmas and Easter; and many a day took nothing at all. She was instant in prayer. What little sleep she took, she took lying on the ground. The devil strove to beguile her, appearing under the form of an angel of light, but she quickly detected him and put him to flight. At length she added to the glory of virginity that poverty which is commended in the Gospel; she gave up all that she had, and adopted the dress and rule of the Third Order of St Francis.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE left undone no service of kindness which she was able to do to her neighbours. If there remained anything over of the food which was given in alms to herself, she gave that to the poor. She cheerfully waited upon the sick. She journeyed about, with a great reputation for holiness, comforting the afflicted, asking forgiveness for the guilty, reconciling the angry, and recalling the wicked from evil. Her only hunger was for the bread of Angels, and she took the Same right often, and then arose in her vehemence of love bearing her towards God, which oftentimes made her beside herself. She made a pilgrimage, with intense feeling, to the Holy Places in Palestine, during which journey she lost her sight at Canea in Crete on her way out, and recovered it at the same place on her way home. In this journey also, God saved her from being made prisoner by the unbelievers and from shipwreck. She went to Rome [in 1525,] at once to pray at the immovable Rock of the Church, and to gain the abundant pardons of the Jubilee. Pope Clement VII. conversed with her, was edified by her holiness, and highly commended her; neither would he let her leave Rome, until he knew that God was calling her elsewhere.

Sixth Lesson.

SHE went back to Brescia, and there hired an house near the Church of St Afra, in which house, in obedience to a vision and command from heaven, she founded a new Order of religious women, constituted under certain rules and holy regulations of life. This Order she put under the name and patronage of St Ursula, the fearless leader of maidens. When Angela was near to death, she foretold that this Order will never cease. She was well-nigh three score and ten years of age, and full of good works, when, in the [night between the] 27th [and the 28th days] of January, in the year 1540, she winged her flight heavenward. Her dead body lay unburied thirty days, supple and life-like. It was laid at last in the Church of St Afra, where sleep so many more of God's holy children. Divers miracles forthwith began to be worked at her grave. The fame of these being noised about, she began to be commonly called Blessed, and that not only at Brescia and Decenzano; and pictures of her were put over Altars. Not many years afterward, holy Charles Borromeo said openly at Brescia, that she was one whose name the Apostolic See might well enroll among those of holy virgins. The reverence which had of a long time been shown to her memory was approved by the local Ordinaries, confirmed by divers Papal Indults, and solemnly ratified and established by decree of Pope Clement XIII. As she continued famous for new and proved miracles, Pope Pius VII., at the solemn canonization held in the Vatican Basilica, upon the 24th day of May, in the year 1807, added her name to the list of holy maids.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.) At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Petronilla, taken from First Vespers. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Juventius.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the year 308,] the blessed martyr Pamphilus, the Priest. He was a man wonderful for his holiness, his teaching, and his goodness towards the poor. In the persecution under the Emperor Galerius Maximian, he was first tortured for Christ's faith's sake, under the President Urban, and cast into prison; then under Fermilian he was called back again to suffer, and then along with others finished his testimony. There then suffered also the Deacon Valens, Paul, and nine others whose memory is celebrated upon other days.

At Autun, [in the year 273,] holy Reverian, Bishop [of that see,] the Priest Paul, and ten others, who were crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Aurelian.

In Cappadocia, the holy martyr Thespesius, who, after being tortured, was beheaded under the Emperor Alexander Severus and the Prefect Simplicius.

In Egypt, the holy martyrs, the sergeant Ischyrion, and five other soldiers, who were put to divers kinds of death, under the Emperor Diocletian, for believing in Christ; also the holy martyr Firmus, who, in the persecution under Maximian, was terribly scourged, bruised with stones, and at last beheaded.

At Perugia, the holy soldiers Felin and Gratinian, who were diversly tormented under the Emperor Decius, and by a glorious death obtained the palm of martyrdom.

At Bologna, the holy martyr Proculus, who suffered under the Emperor Maximian.

At Amelia, the holy martyr Secundus, who was thrown into the Tiber, under the Emperor Diocletian, and so finished his testimony.

At Città-di-Castello, in Umbria, the holy Roman soldier Crescentian, who was crowned with martyrdom under the same Emperor Diocletian.

In Umbria also, [in the year 400,] the holy Priest Fortunatus, famous for graces and wonders.

At the Monastery of Lerins, [in the year 430,] the holy Abbat Caprasius.

At Treves, [in the year 1035,] the holy monk Simeon, who was enrolled among the Saints by Pope Benedict IX.

At Bourgos, in Spain, [in the year 1037,] in the Monastery of Ogna, the holy Benedictine Abbat Enecon, illustrious for his holiness and the fame of his miracles.

At Vespers a Commemoration of the Octave of St Augustine.

FEAST-DAYS IN JUNE.

On the first day on which Nine Lessons are not read is recited the Office of the Dead.

JUNE 1.

Seventh Day within the Octave of St Augustine.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Maximus, "Our Blessed Father Augustine, &c.," (p. 619.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 1.)

AT that time: the Lord appointed other seventy-two also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place, whither He Himself would come. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Sermon 42 on the Saints.)

The Lord Himself had a bag and entrusted the same to Judas. He endured the thief; but I am fain to learn from my Lord, and I ask: Lord, Thou didst endure the thief, but whence hadst Thou that which he was able to steal? I am a poor, weak creature, and Thou commandest me not to carry a purse; Thou didst carry a bag, and it gave an opportunity to rob Thee; if Thou hadst had no bag, he would not have had what to steal. What canst Thou say unto me but this: Understand what it is that thou hearest, "carry no purse." What is a purse? it is money shut up, that is to say, wisdom hidden. Shut not up your wisdom in yourselves. Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Thou shouldest be a fountain, not a bag, a source to give forth, not a receptacle to keep close.

Eighth Lesson.

"SALUTE no man by the way." This may be taken as a simple command, as also He hath bidden us to be speedy in executing His precepts. But there is also another interpretation which I consider the more probable, and which toucheth me more closely, and with me all other stewards, and you also that be hearers. [1] He that saluteth speaketh of health, for this is how they of old time were used to begin their letters, "A to B wisheth health." What therefore mean these words, "Salute no man by the way"? He that saluteth in the way, wisheth health as accident ariseth. I see that ye have caught my meaning, but I am not done yet, for ye have not all caught it, and since we are talking about the way, let us walk as though we were in the way, and ye that be quick, wait for them that be slow, and so all walk together.

Ninth Lesson.

WHAT did I say? He that saluteth in the way wisheth health as accident ariseth; he is not going to him whom he saluteth; he is busy about something else, when the occasion of salutation cometh across him; he is walking with some other object, when this meeteth him. But thou, if thou preachest, do it, not by accident, but out of love. There are men, therefore, who preach the Gospel, as it were by accident, now and then, while they are about their own business. It is of these that the Apostle saith with groaning, "All seek their own, not the things which are JESUS Christ's (Phil. ii. 21.) These salute indeed, that is, they speak health, they preach the Gospel, but to do so is not their main intent; they do it only as it were by accident.

[1] What follows is almost impossible to translate, as it turns upon the Latin words Saluto and Salus; one clause has had to be omitted.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the Octave of holy Augustine, 1st Archbishop of Canterbury, and Apostle of England.

Upon the same 2nd day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Marcellinus the Priest, and Peter the Exorcist. They were teaching the faith to many in prison in the time of Diocletian, when Serenus the judge, after putting them to terrible bonds and many torments, caused them to be beheaded at the place which was then called the Black Wood, but the name of which was afterwards changed in honour of the Saints, and called the White Wood. Their bodies were buried in the crypt, hard by the body of holy Tibertius, and holy Pope Damasus in after-days decorated their grave with a set of verses.

In Campania, the holy martyr Elmo, Patriarch [of Antioch.] Under the Emperor Diocletian he was first hided with scourges laden with lead, then heavily beaten with cudgels, after which rosin, sulphur, lead, pitch, wax, and oil were poured over him, but he still appeared unharmed. Thereafter at Formi, under Maximian, he was tortured again with divers and most cruel sufferings; but God preserved him to strengthen others, until at length, famous for his testimony, he fell asleep in a holy death at the call of the Lord. His body was afterwards taken to Gaeta.

At Lyons, the holy martyrs Photinus the Bishop, Sanctus the Deacon, Vetius, Epagathus, Maturus, Ponticus, Biblides, Attalus, Alexander, and Blandina, with many others, whose mighty and constant contendings, in the time of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus and Lucius Verus, are written in the Epistle of the Church of Lyons to the Churches of Asia and Phrygia; among these the holy Blandina, weaker by sex, frailer in body, lower in social position, underwent contendings more long and more sharp, and remaining still inflexible, was slain by the sword, and so followed the others whom she had exhorted to victory.

At Rome, [in the year 657,] the holy Confessor Pope Eugenius I.

At Trani, in Apulia, [in the year 1094,] the holy Confessor Nicholas Peregrini, whose wonderful works were published in a Council at Rome under Pope Urban II.

Vespers of the following.

JUNE 2.

Octave of St Augustine.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

At first Vespers a Commemoration of SS. Marcellinus, Peter, and Elmo, from the Common Office for Many Martyrs.

Prayer. "O God, Who year by year," &c., (p. 580.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Part 2, Pastoral i., 2, 10.)

THE life of a bishop ought to be so much higher than the life of his people as is that of a shepherd than that of his sheep. It behoveth him carefully to consider how high are the calls upon him in comparison of whom the people are called sheep. It behoveth him, therefore, to be pure in thought, eminent in works, wise in silence, useful in word, by sympathy every man's neighbour, in contemplation more rapt than any, by lowliness the fellow-worker of such as do well, by zeal for righteousness the opponent of evil in such as do ill, not suffering the care of those things that be outward to take away from the care of those things that be inward, nor neglecting to see to those that be outward because he hath care for those that be inward.

Fifth Lesson.

WE must consider also that when he that is chosen a Bishop taketh on him the care of the people, he cometh unto them as a physician unto a sick man. If therefore his own works be still disordered, with what face shall he go to heal the suffering while his own unhealed wounds are manifest? He ought in all his ways to set an example of good living, showing himself one who hath died to all fleshly passions and liveth in the spirit, who setteth little store by it that things should go well with him in this world, and is not afraid that they should go ill, whose only eagerness is for the things that be inward; one whose spirit is under the control of his will, and that, not altogether through weakness of body, so that it kicketh not much; one who is not drawn to desire other men's goods, but freely disperseth his own.

Sixth Lesson.

WHENCE the very office of a Bishop is called a good work where it is said: "If a man desire the office of a Bishop he desireth a good work," (1 Tim. iii. 1.) He therefore is a witness against himself, that he desireth not the office of a Bishop, who desireth to be a Bishop, not that he may be a minister of good works, but for the sake of honour and dignity. A man indeed doth not only not desire the sacred office of a Bishop at all, but doth not even know what it is, if what he gaspeth for is the position of power, if the subjection of others unto him be a secret banquet to his inmost thoughts, if it is his delight to hear himself praised, if his heart swell at the idea of his rank and if he revelleth in wealth and comfort. What he seeketh is gain in this world, and that under the mask of the very dignity whereby all gain in this world ought to have been put away.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 1.)

AT that time: The Lord appointed other seventy-two also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place, whither

He Himself would come. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (Comment. on Luke.)

No man doubteth that the twelve Apostles were the beginning and foreshowing of Bishops; and we ought to know that these seventy-two were in the same way the presentment of ordinary Priests, that is to say, of the second order of the Priesthood. Albeit we know from the writings of the Apostles that in the first times of the Church the words Priest and Bishop were applied indifferently, whereof Priest doth indicate the ripening of wisdom and the other the toil of a shepherd. It is well said that seventy-two were sent; either because the Gospel was to be preached to that number of races in the world, the Apostles being sent to the twelve tribes of Israël, and these to the outer nations; or because the number of the preachers was in itself a declaration that the whole world was to be enlightened by the Gospel of the Most High and Undivided Trinity.

Eighth Lesson.

THE sun doth thrice in seventy-two hours cause his glorious circuit to shine upon the world; and the Lord hath called Himself the Day, and His Apostles the hours, where He saith, "Are there not twelve hours in the day? if any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not." (John xi. 9.) And in the Psalms it is said: "Proclaim aloud that His salvation is day from day"[1]—that is, Light of Light, Very God of Very God. Moreover in many places of the Holy Scriptures the mystery of the Trinity is set forth under the figure of three days, markedly where it is said that the Lord arose again from the dead upon the third day. So also in the Old Testament; when the people were come unto Mount Sinai, it was upon the third day that they received the Law, and again, it was "after three days" that they passed over the river Jordan, that river which is a type of the grace of Baptism. (Josh. i. 11, iii. 1.)

Ninth Lesson. (Of the Holy Martyrs.)

THIS Peter was an exorcist, whom, in the reign of the Emperor Diocletian, Serenus the Judge cast into prison at Rome because he confessed the Christian faith. He there set free Paulina, the daughter of Artemius, the keeper of the prison, from an evil spirit which tormented her. Upon this, Artemius and his wife and all their house, with their neighbours who had run together to see the strange thing, would fain be made friends with JESUS Christ. Peter therefore brought them to Marcellinus, the Priest, who baptized them all. When Serenus heard of it, he called Peter and Marcellinus before him, and sharply rebuked them, adding to his bitter words threats and terrors, unless they would deny Christ. Marcellinus answered him with Christian boldness, whereupon he caused him to be buffeted, separated him from Peter and shut him up naked in a prison strewn with broken glass, without either food or light. Peter also he straitly confined. But when both of them were found to wax faithfuller and braver in their bonds, they were beheaded, unshaken in their testimony, and confessing JESUS Christ gloriously by their blood. Elmo was a Bishop in Campania who, [in the year 303,] in the reign of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian was beaten with clubs and whips loaded with lead, and afterwards anointed with melted pitch, sulphur, and lead, and boiling resin, wax, and oil. From all this he came forth whole and sound; which wonder turned many to believe in Christ. He was remanded again to prison, and straitly bound in heavy iron fetters. But from these he was wondrously delivered by an angel. At last, at Formi, Maximian caused him to be subjected to divers torments, and in the end being clad in a coat of red-hot brass the power of God made him to be more than conqueror in this thing also, and to grasp the palm-branch of a glorious testimony, whereby he strengthened many in the faith and turned many to it.

At Lauds, a Commemoration is made of SS. Marcellinus, Peter, and Elmo, from the Common Office for Many Martyrs. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Virgin Mary Magdalene de' Pazzi, of the Order of Carmelites, famous for her holy life, of whom mention is made upon the 25th day of the month of May.

Upon the same 3rd day of June, were born into the better life—

At Arezzo, in Tuscany, the holy brethren Pergentinus and Laurentinus, both martyrs. They were boys, who, in the persecution under Decius, after bearing horrid torments and showing forth great works of power, were slain by the sword under the President Tiburtius.

At Constantinople, the holy martyr Lucillian and his four sons, Claud, Hypatius, Paul, and Denis. Lucillian, before he became a Christian, had been a priest of idols. All the five, after they had been put to various tortures, were cast into a furnace, but rain put out the fire, and they all escaped unhurt. Then Lucillian was crucified, and the children were beheaded, and so under Silvanus the President they finished their testimony.

At the same place, the holy Virgin and martyr Paula, who was arrested while she was gathering up the blood of the aforesaid martyrs. She was beaten with rods, and cast into the fire, but was delivered, and at last beheaded at the same place where the holy Lucillian had been crucified.

At Cordova, in Spain, the blessed monk Isaac, who [in the year 851] was slain with the sword, [by the Moslims,] for Christ's faith's sake.

At Carthage, the holy Priest Cæcilius, who brought holy Cyprian to believe in Christ.

In the country of Orleans, [in the year 565,] the holy Confessor Liphard the Priest.

---

[1] "Bene nuntiate diem de die salutare ejus," probably meant for Ps. xcv. 2, which however runs in the present Latin: "Annuntiate de die in diem salutare ejus," "show forth His salvation from day to day."

At Lucca, in Tuscany, [in the year 1051,] the holy Confessor Davin, [the Armenian pilgrim.]

At Paris, the holy Queen Clotilde, at whose entreaties her husband, King Clovis, accepted the faith of Christ.

At Anagni, the holy Virgin Oliva.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 3.

St Mary Magdalene de' Pazzi, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who lovest virginity, and Who didst make Thy blessed Virgin Mary Magdalen a-fire with the love of Thyself, and rich with Thy heavenly gifts, grant unto us, who honour her memory by a yearly Feast, the grace to copy the ensample of her purity and of her tenderness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Mary Magdalene begin with the Chapter.

Commemoration of the Second Vespers of the Octave Day of St Augustine.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Mary Magdalen[1] was born of the noble Florentine family of the Pazzi, [on the 2nd day of April, in the year of Christ 1566.] She was hardly out of her cradle when she set her feet in the path of perfection. At ten years of age she made a vow of perpetual virginity, and [at fifteen] took the habit of the Order of Mount Carmel, in the convent of Saint Mary of the Angels. In that sisterhood she was in all ways a pattern to all. She was pure to that degree, that she did not even know of the existence of anything which can hurt modesty. For the space of five years, by the command of God, she lived upon nothing but bread and water, the Lord's Day only excepted, in which she used the food which is taken in Lent. She chastised her body with hair-cloth, scourging, cold, hunger, watching, nakedness, and all manner of hardships.

Fifth Lesson.

THE love of God was so hot within her, that she was sometimes fain to bathe her breast with cold water to allay the agitation. She was oftentimes rapt in the spirit, and that most marvellously, for whole days at a time, during which trances she saw things hidden and heavenly, and was enlightened of God with great gifts. But after all these things she had a stern tussling with the prince of the darkness of this world, while God allowed her spirit to remain dry, deserted, abandoned by all, and tormented with divers temptations. And all that while she remained an ensample of unconquered patience and the deepest lowly-mindedness.

Sixth Lesson.

SHE was very remarkable for her tender love toward her neighbours. Sometimes she went whole nights without sleep, while she was working for the service of the sisters, or waiting upon the sick. She sometimes healed sores even by licking them. That there should be unbelievers and sinners perishing caused her bitter weeping, and she offered herself to God to suffer for their conversion whatsoever He chose. For many years, therefore, before her death, her mighty charity towards others, made her freely to give up that heavenly joy of spirit, wherewith she had once so overflowed. She had often in her mouth the words: "To suffer, not to die." At length, in the forty-second year of her age, on the 25th day of May, in the year 1607, after a long and grievous sickness, the Bridegroom came, and she entered with Him into the marriage-chamber. Clement IX., finding that God had glorified her by many miracles, both during her life and after her death, enrolled her name among those of the Holy Virgins. Her body, up to the present day, has never shown the least sign of corruption.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Agnone, in the Abruzzi, holy Confessor Francis, of the noble Neapolitan family of Caracciolo, founder of the congregation of Regular Clerks Minors. He was a burning and a shining light of love towards God and his neighbour, and intense earnestness in spreading abroad the worship of the Holy Eucharist. His body lieth at Naples, and is held in great veneration. Pius VII. added his name to the list of those of the Saints.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Aretius and Dacian.

At Sisseg, in Illyricum, [in the year 304,] holy Quirinus, Bishop [of that see.] Prudentius writeth of him that, under the President Galerius, for Christ's faith's sake, a millstone was tied about his neck and he was cast into the river, but the millstone swam, and he was a long time exhorting the Christians who stood by not to be scared at the sight of his execution, nor to be shaken in the faith, and then obtained from God the glory of martyrdom, and so was allowed to sink.

At Brescia, under the Emperor Nero, the holy martyr Clateus, Bishop [of that see.]

In Hungary, the holy martyrs Rutilus and his companions.

At Arras, the holy Virgin and martyr Saturnina.

At Tivoli, the holy martyr Quirinus.

At Constantinople, [in the fourth century,] the holy Metrophanes, Archbishop [of that see,] an eminent Confessor.

---

[1] This is her name in religion; her baptismal name was Katharine.

At Milevitanus, in Numidia, holy Optatus, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his teaching and holiness.

At Verona, holy Alexander, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 4.

St Francis Caracciolo, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst raise up Thy blessed servant Francis to found a new Order in Thy Church, and didst ennoble him through earnestness in prayer and love of penance, grant unto us after his ensample so to pray without ceasing and to bring our bodies into subjection, that in the end we, like him, may worthily attain unto Thy heavenly glory. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Francis, whose worldly name was Ascanius, was one of the noble family of Caracciolo. He was born in the town of Santa Maria della Villa, in the Abruzzi, [on the 13th day of October, in the year of grace 1563.] From his earliest years he showed great marks of godliness. When he was a young man he had a severe illness, and on his recovery determined to serve God only, and bade farewell to the world. He betook himself to Naples, where he was ordained Priest, enrolled himself in a devout guild, and gave himself up altogether to seek after God, and to gain souls for Him, in which work he showed himself an unwearied comforter to such prisoners as were condemned to death. It came to pass that those two great servants of God, John Austin Adorno and Fabricius Caracciolo, wrote a letter to a certain person, wherein they exhorted him to found a new religious Institute. This letter came by a mistake to be delivered to Francis Caracciolo. The newness of the idea and the strange ways of God's Providence took possession of his mind, and he joyfully added himself to their company. They withdrew themselves to the wilderness of the Camaldolese hermits [near Naples,] and there concerted the Rule of the New Order. Thence they went together to Rome, and obtained the confirmation of their work from Sixtus V., who was pleased that they should be called The Lesser Clerks Regular, since they add to the three accustomed vows [of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience,] a fourth, binding themselves not to seek preferment in the Church.

Fifth Lesson.

ASCANIUS Caracciolo, moved by a special love and devotion he had to the holy Francis of Assisi, took, when he made his solemn profession, the name of Francis. After two years, John Adorno departed this life, and Francis, against his own will, was made Head of the Order. In this office he shone a burning light of grace. Devoted to the prosperity of the Institute, he earnestly sought the blessing of God upon it, by constant prayer, by tears, and by stern treatment of his own body. In this work, he thrice travelled into Spain in the guise of a pilgrim, and begging his bread from door to door. In these his journeys he suffered very great hardships, and was most wonderfully holpen of the Almighty, especially one while when he was on shipboard and the ship nigh to perish, but for the work of his prayers. He toiled hard in those countries to attain his wishes, but through the widespread fame of his holy life, and the noble generosity of the Most Catholic Kings Philip II. and Philip III., he overcame with his brave perseverance the opposition of all that withstood him, and founded several houses of his Order. This he was able to do in Italy also.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was a great pattern of lowliness, so that when he came to Rome he betook himself to an almshouse, and chose a leper for his familiar friend. Paul V. offered him divers honours in the Church, but he firmly refused them all. He preserved his purity unspotted, and when certain shameless women set themselves to attack his chastity, he took the occasion to gain over their souls for Christ. Toward God's great mystery of the Eucharist he was drawn with passionate tenderness, and would pass almost whole nights without sleep, simply adoring It. This godly custom he established in his Order, to be kept up therein for ever, the peculiar mark thereof. He was a great encourager of the worship of the Maiden Mother of God. He was hot with strong love for his neighbour. He was gifted with prophecy, and the discerning of spirits. In the forty-fourth year of his age he was continuing long in prayer in the Holy House of Loretto, when it was made known to him that the end of his earthly life was at hand. He straightway took his way to the Abruzzi, and was there seized with illness while he was with the disciples of St Philip Neri, in the town of Agnone. He received with great devotion the Sacraments of the Church, and then, upon the 4th day of June, being the Eve of the Feast of the Body of Christ, in the year 1608, he very peacefully fell asleep in the Lord. His sacred body was carried to Naples, and there honourably buried in the Church of St Mary the Greater, where he had laid the first foundations of his Order. As he became distinguished for miracles Pope Clement XIV. enrolled his name, with solemn pomp, among those of the Blessed, and Pope Pius VII., in the year 1807, finding his mighty works continue, added it to the list of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of June, were born into the better life—

Holy Boniface, Archbishop of Maintz. He came from England to Rome, and was sent by Gregory II. into Germany to preach the faith of Christ to those nations, and he earned the title of Apostle of the Germans by turning a vast multitude, more especially of Frieslanders, to the religion of Christ. At last he, along with Eoban and some other servants of God in Friesland, received martyrdom by the sword at the hand of raging heathens.

In Egypt, the holy martyrs Martian, Nicanor, Apollonius, and others, who finished an illustrious testimony, in the persecution under Galerius Maximian.

At Perugia, the holy martyrs Florence, Julian, Cyriacus, Marcellinus, and Faustinus, who were beheaded in the persecution under Decius.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy Zenais, Cyria, Valeria, and Marcia, who with rejoicing attained unto martyrdom through many torments.

At Tyre, the holy Priest Dorotheus. He suffered much under Diocletian, but survived till the time of Julian, in whose reign, and the hundred and seventh year of his own age, he crowned his venerable years with the glory of martyrdom.

At Cordova, in Spain, the holy lad Sancho, who was brought up in the Royal Court, but in the persecution under the Arabs for Christ's faith's sake accepted martyrdom without shrinking.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 5.

St Boniface, Archbishop [of Maintz,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 576 or 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to make the zeal of Thy blessed Martyr and Bishop Boniface the mean whereby Thou didst cause many peoples to know Thy Name, mercifully grant unto us who solemnly keep holiday for his memory, to be feelingly holpen by the succour of his protection. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers, as regards St Boniface, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Francis Caracciolo. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WINFRID, afterwards called Boniface, was an Englishman, and born in England, towards the end of the seventh century. From his very childhood, he turned away from the world, and set his heart upon becoming a monk. His father tried in vain to turn him from his wishes by the beguilements of the world, and he entered a Monastery, where the Blessed Wolphard instructed him in all godliness and divers kinds of learning. At the age of twenty-nine years he was ordained Priest, and became an unwearied preacher of the Word of God, wherein he had a gift which he used with great gain of souls. Nevertheless, his great desire was to spread the kingdom of Christ, and he continually bewailed the vast number of savages who were plunged in the darkness of ignorance and were the servants of the devil. This zealous love of souls increased in him in intensity day by day, till nothing would serve him, but, having implored the blessing of God by tears and prayers, and obtained authority from the head of his monastery, to set forth for the coast of Germany.

Fifth Lesson.

HE set sail from England with two companions [in the year 716] and reached the town of Dorestadt in Friesland. A great war being then raging between Radbod, King of the Frieslanders and Charles Martel, Winfrid preached the Gospel in vain. He went back to England, and betook himself again to his Monastery, whereof he was, against his own will, chosen to be the head. After two years he obtained the consent of the Bishop of Winchester to resign his office, and [in 719] went to Rome, to seek an Apostolic commission to preach to the heathen. When he arrived at the city he was courteously welcomed by Gregory II., who changed his name from Winfrid to Boniface. He departed thence to Germany, and preached Christ to the tribes in Thuringia and Saxony. Radbod, King of Friesland, who bitterly hated the Christian name, being dead, Boniface went a second time among the Frieslanders, and there, with his comrade St Willibrord, preached the Gospel for three years with so much fruit, that the idols were hewn down, and countless churches arose to the true God.

Sixth Lesson.

ST Willibrord urged upon him to take the office of a Bishop, but he deferred to seek it, that he might the more instantly toil for the salvation of the unbelievers. Advancing into Germany he reclaimed thousands of the Hessians from devil-worship. Pope Gregory sent for him to Rome, [whither he came in 723,] and after hearing a noble profession of his faith, consecrated him a Bishop. He again returned to Germany, and thoroughly purged Hesse and Thuringia from all remains of idolatry. On account of such great works Gregory III. advanced Boniface to the dignity of an Archbishop, and on the occasion of a third journey to Rome, [in 738,] he was invested by the Sovereign Pontiff with the powers of Legate of the Apostolic See. As such, he founded [the] four Bishopricks [of Erfurt, Paderborn, Wurtzburg, and Eichstädt], and held divers Synods, among which is especially to be remembered that of Lessines, held in Belgium, in the diocese of Cambrai, wherein he made his strongest endeavours to spread the Faith among the Belgians. By Pope Zacharias, he was named Archbishop of Maintz, and by command of the same Pope, he anointed Pepin to be King of the Franks. After the death of St Willibrord, he undertook the government of the Church of Utrecht, at first through Eoban; but he afterwards was released from the care of the Church of Maintz and established his see at Utrecht. The Frieslanders having again fallen back into idolatry, he once more betook himself to preach the Gospel among them, and while he was busied in this duty, he grasped the crown of martyrdom, being murdered by some ungodly savages, along with his fellow-Bishop Eoban, and many others, in a bloody massacre near the River Born, [on the 5th day of June, in the year of our Lord 755, and of his own age the 75th.] In accordance with the wish expressed by himself during life the body of St Boniface was carried to Maintz, and buried in the monastery of Fulda, of which he had been the founder, and where God has gloriously honoured it by the working of many signs and wonders. Pope Pius IX. ordered the Office and Mass in his memory to be used throughout the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS, seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain, and, when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon.)

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." What fools then be they that seek God with their outward eyes, since it is in the heart that He is seen, as it is written elsewhere: "In simplicity of heart seek Him." (Wisd. i. 1.) A simple heart is a pure heart. And even as we cannot see this earthly light, unless the eyes be open, so cannot God be seen, unless that be open which alone can perceive Him.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." The perfection of peace is the absence of contrariety, and the peacemakers are called the children of God because they offer no contrariety against the will of God. As beseemeth children, they have their Father's likeness.

Eighth Lesson.

THEY are peacemakers in themselves, who order all the movements of their own mind in obedience to reason, that is, to their intellect and soul, and so doing, and taming the lusts of the flesh, become a kingdom for God. In such kingdom all things are so ordered, that the chiefest and noblest part of man ruleth without contention over those lower things which we have in common with beasts. And just in the same way, must that nobler part of man, that is to say, intellect and reason, needs be put in subjection to what is above it, namely, Truth, the Only-begotten Son of God. He only can rule well who hath learnt to obey. And this ordering is that peace which is given on earth to men of good will; this is the life of whomsoever is thoroughly and perfectly wise.

Ninth Lesson.

FROM this most peaceful and most orderly kingdom is cast forth the prince of this world, whose rule is over the contentious and disorderly. When once this peace hath been proclaimed and established within, whatsoever wars he that is without can raise, can but heap more glory upon that glory which is according to God, for nothing of the castle will yield before him, but the yielding of his own engines will witness how strong be its ramparts. And therefore cometh next: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of June, were born into the better life—

Holy Norbert, Archbishop of Magdeburg, founder of the Order of the Premonstratensian Canons Regular.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the blessed Philip, who was one of the first seven Deacons. He was illustrious for signs and wonders. He turned Samaria to believe in Christ, and baptized the eunuch of Candace, Queen of the Ethiopians. He fell asleep at last at Cæsarea. Three of his virgin daughters, who were prophetesses, lie buried beside him. His fourth daughter died at Ephesus, full of the Holy Ghost.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Artemius, with Candida his wife and Paulina his daughter. This Artemius was brought to believe in Christ by the preaching and miracles of the holy Exorcist Peter, and was baptised with all his house by the holy Priest Marcellinus. He was first hided with scourges loaded with lead by order of Serenus the Judge, and afterwards beheaded; his wife and daughters were thrown into a vault, and buried in stones and rubbish.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, twenty holy martyrs, who in the time of Diocletian and Maximian, under Simplicius the Judge, by divers torments glorified God in their bodies.

At Noyon, in Gaul, [in the year 290,] the holy martyrs Amantius, Alexander, and their companions.

At Fiesole, in Tuscany, [in the year 839,] the holy martyr Alexander, Bishop [of that see, drowned in a torrent by his enemies.]

At Milan, deceased, [in the year 518,] the holy Confessor Eustorgius, second of that name, Bishop [of that see.]

At Verona, holy John, Bishop [of that see, in the fourth century.]

At Besançon, in Gaul, [in the year 699,] holy Claud, Archbishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 6.

St Norbert, Archbishop [of Magdeburg,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Norbert a notable preacher of Thy Word, and wast pleased to make Thy Church thereby fruitful in a new family of sons, grant, we beseech Thee, unto us, that we being holpen by Thee for his sake, may have strength to do those worthy deeds whereunto his words and works alike do move us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers, as regards St Norbert, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Boniface. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

NORBERT, born [in the year 1080] of parents of the highest rank, thoroughly educated in his youth in worldly knowledge, and a member of the Imperial court, turned his back upon the glory of the world, and chose rather to enlist himself as a soldier of the Church. Being ordained Priest, he laid aside all soft and showy raiment, clad himself in a coat of skins, and made the preaching of the Word of God the one object of his life. He had the right to rich revenues of the Church; but these he renounced: and to an ample fortune from his father; but this he gave to the poor. He ate only once a day, and that in the evening, and then his meal was of the fare of Lent. His life was one of singular hardness, and he was used even in the depth of winter to go out with bare feet and ragged garments. Hence came that mighty power of his words and deeds, whereby he was enabled to turn countless heretics to the true faith, sinners to repentance, and enemies to peace and brotherly love.

Fifth Lesson.

BEING one while at Laon, the Bishop besought him not to leave his diocese, and he therefore made choice of a wilderness at the place called Prémontré, whither he withdrew himself with thirteen disciples, and thus founded the Order of the Præmonstratensian Canons, whereof he, by the will of God, received the Rule, in a vision, from St Austin. When, however, the fame of his holy life became every day more and more noised abroad, and great numbers sought to become his disciples, and the Order had been approved by Honorius II., and other Popes, many more monasteries were built by him, and the Institute wonderfully extended.

Sixth Lesson.

BEING called to Antwerp, he there gave the death-blow to the shameful heresy of Tanchelin. He was remarkable for the spirit of prophecy and for the gift of miracles. He was created (albeit he would rather not have had it so) Archbishop of Magdeburg, and as such he was a strong upholder of the discipline of the Church, especially contending against the marriage of the clergy. At a Council held at Rheims he was a great help to Innocent II., and went with some other Bishops to Rome, where they stamped out the schism of Peter Leoni. It was at last at Magdeburg that this man of God, full of good works and of the Holy Ghost, fell asleep in the Lord, on the 6th day of June, in the year of salvation 1134.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the seventh day of June, were born into the better life—

At Constantinople, the holy Paul, Archbishop of that city. He was oftentimes thrust out by the Arians because of the Catholic faith, and brought back again by the holy Roman Pontiff, Julius I. At length he was banished by the Arian Emperor Constantius to Cucusus, a little town in Cappadocia, where he was cruelly strangled by Arian plotters, and so passed into the kingdom of heaven. His body was brought to Constantinople with great reverence [thirty years later,] in the time of the Emperor Theodosius.

In Egypt, the holy martyr Licarion, who was mangled, beaten with red-hot iron rods, and suffered other dreadful torments before he was smitten with the sword, and so finished his testimony.

At Cordova, the holy Monks Peter, Wallabond, Sabinian, Wistremund, Habentius, and Jeremiah, of whom Peter was a Priest and Wallabond a Deacon, martyrs [under the Muslims.]

In England, the holy Abbat Robert,[1] of the Cistercian Order.

---

[1] It seems very strange, and almost like an accident, that while the Proper Offices of England contain so many names more obscure, this Robert, one of the most eminent English Saints, is omitted, and this is still more strange because his day is blank in the Kalendar.

For the use of any one who may wish to say his Office it is here given from those proper to the Cistercian Order.

On June 6 the Martyrology begins as follows, the notice of St Robert at the end being omitted:—

At Newminster, in England, the holy Robert, of the Cistercian Order, the first Abbat and founder of that minster. He was a man of angel-like purity, and famous for many wonders. The blessed Cistercian Hermit Godrich, who was his Confessor, saw his soul borne into heaven in the form of a mass of fire.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621.) The Office would be double, and therefore on June 6 the Vespers would be of St

JUNE 7.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 8th day of June, were born into the better life—

At York, in England, [in the year 1154,] the holy Confessor William, Archbishop [of that see,] who among other wonders which were wrought at his grave did raise three dead men to life, and who was written in the list of the Saints by Pope Honorius III.

At Aix, in Gaul, holy Maximin, first Bishop of that city, who is said by tradition to have been one of the disciples of the Lord.

On the same day, [under Decius,] the holy martyr Calliope, who for Christ's faith's sake had her breasts cut off, and her flesh burnt, was rolled upon broken pots, and at last beheaded, and so received the palm of martyrdom.

At Soissons, in Gaul, holy Medard, bishop of Noyon, whose precious life and death, [in the year 545,] are attested by glorious miracles.

At Rouen, also in Gaul, holy Gildard, Bishop [of that see,] third brother of the aforesaid Medard. They were both born upon the same day, both consecrated bishops upon the same day, upon the same day they both died, and to heaven they went together.

At Sens, [in the year 515,] holy Heraclius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Metz, [in the year 696,] holy Clodulph, Bishop [of that see.]

In Picenum, [in the sixth century,] the holy Severinus, Bishop of Septempeda, [now called, from him, San Severino.]

In Sardinia, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Sallustian.

At Camerino, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Victorinus.

JUNE 8.

St William, [Archbishop of York,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Robert, from the Chapter inclusive, with a Commemoration of St Norbert.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD our God, through the prayers of the blessed Abbat Robert make Thy people to rejoice earnestly before Thee, for this is happiness full and everlasting, that we should serve Thee, from Whom cometh down every good and perfect gift. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Mattins, in the First Nocturn, Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ROBERT was born at York, in England. As a boy he avoided games, and applied his mind to study. He was ordained a Priest, and made Rector of a church, but the longing for solitude caused him to take the habit of St Benedict. From the desire for stricter observance he afterwards went to the monastery of Fountains, of the Cistercian Order, and after long trial the Abbat Riccaried set him over Newminster. He watched with such thought and carefulness for the salvation of the flock committed to his charge, that one while he heard a voice from heaven saying unto him that God had heard his prayers and that the names of his monks were written in the Book of Life. He was not content with the accustomed Office, and in addition he repeated the whole Book of Psalms every day. He restrained his appetite with the utmost severity, and was used more especially in Lent to live upon nothing but bread and water. This hardness towards himself he coupled with tenderness to the poor, to whom he caused to be given whatsoever he denied to himself. On one occasion he ordered a salver to be given to the needy, and an angel in the form of a poor man took it, and forthwith vanished away; but he afterwards brought it back, and set it before the holy Abbat without himself appearing.

Fifth Lesson.

MANY things were revealed to him by God. One while a ship at a distance was lost, but Robert knew it, and commanded brethren to go to bury the dead bodies of the mariners when they were washed up upon the sea-shore. He had a marvellous power over evil spirits. One time when a devil was about to stir up a great rebellion he forbade him, and commanded him to go to waste places, and never to hurt men again. One night this holy Father saw a devil standing in the entrance of the choir, and watching the behaviour of the brethren, that perchance he might find some fault among them. But the man of God began earnestly to pray for the salvation of his brethren, and to admonish each of them of his duty, so that at length he compelled the enemy to go away in wrath. One time he saw Satan himself laughing in the choir of the lay brethren, and dragging a novice thence with a rope. In the morning this novice ran away; he joined a band of robbers, and a little while after he perished miserably.

Sixth Lesson.

BLESSED Robert, as one of the household of St Bernard, received from him as a gift a girdle, whereby, for the sake of them both, many sick folk have received good. After he had spoken much concerning the things of God, with Godrich the Hermit, a very holy man, and was wondrously enkindled with the love of God, Robert died an holy death upon the 7th day of June in the year 1159. The aforesaid Godrich saw his soul in flashing whiteness borne into heaven among angels. Many wonders were wrought at his intercession. One that was born dumb from his mother's womb, had long besought with many tears the help of St Thomas of Canterbury, when that holy martyr appeared to him, and bade him go to the grave of the blessed Abbat Robert, where he

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the York Missal.)

O GOD, Who dost gladden us by the works and prayers of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop, William; mercifully grant that we who seek good by him, may obtain bounty from Thy grace; through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Capgrave and Papebroch.)

BLESSED William was of very noble birth, being the son of Earl Hubert by Emma, sister of King Stephen, and won the highest character even as a lad. Growing in grace as he grew in years, he was appointed treasurer of York, in the which office he so bore himself as to be universally looked on as the common father of the poor. He set greater prize by nothing than by stripping himself, the more easily to help the need of the struggling.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Archbishop Turstin, William was elected to follow him, but as a few of the Chapter dissented, holy Bernard denounced the election to the Apostolic See as uncanonical, and it was declared null by Pope Eugenius III. This affair caused no vexation to the holy man, but on the other hand gave him that occasion of exercising lowliness and serving God freely, of which he was most fain.

Sixth Lesson.

HE fled therefore from the pomps of the world, and withdrew himself into a solitary place, that he might watch over his own salvation obtained the gift of speech which he sought.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto Jesus, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee; what shall we have therefore? And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat of Clairvaux. (On the talk of Simon with Jesus.)

An hundredfold, saith the Lord unto Peter, shall every one such receive, and shall inherit everlasting life. Here, O ye sons of Adam, ye have "promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." (1 Tim. iv. 8.) That "the mouth of them that speak lies may be stopped." (Ps. lxii. 12.) And "they be ashamed which transgress without cause." (Ps. xxiv. 4.) And do not they transgress without a cause who could serve God not only more fruitfully but more pleasantly, not only more healthily but more happily, than they serve the world? The Lord answereth Peter as to that which was to come, for he could have no doubts as to that which he actually felt, nor any need to ask thereupon. He said not, What have we? but, What shall we have? Doth any doubt that the promise of the hundredfold hath to do with the time that now is? this is shown by the very sequence of the words wherein it is said: first, that we shall receive an hundredfold, and then that we shall inherit everlasting life.

Eighth Lesson.

NEVERTHELESS, lest any room should be left for stiff-neckedness, I refer you to the Gospel according to Mark, (x. 29, 30,) where the same promise is written down at greater length. The Lord saith, "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sister, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for My sake, and the Gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time;" but to the greater marvel of the natural man, which "receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned," (1 Cor. ii. 14,) the Lord doth add "with persecutions." Perchance if the natural man had heard that an hundredfold was promised now in this time, he might have thought that there was signified an hundredfold of the things of time; but these words "with persecutions" do cut off such a dream as this, for what comfort is there upon earth which persecution upon earth doth not take away? What reward upon earth did the holy martyrs receive with their persecutions, when the very dust of the earth whereof were made their own blessed bodies was given over into the hands of wicked men?

Ninth Lesson.

"WE know that all things work together for good to them that love God." (Rom. viii. 28.) And how doth he not inherit all things to whom all things work together for good, and how doth he not receive an hundredfold of all things, who is filled with the Holy Ghost, who hath Christ in his heart, unless indeed it be that the indwelling of the Spirit, the Comforter, and the presence of Christ is far more than an hundredfold? "O how great," saith the Psalmist, "how great is Thy goodness, O Lord, which Thou hast laid up for them that fear Thee, which Thou hast wrought for them that trust in Thee." (Ps. xxx. 20, 21.) Thou seest how this holy soul doth cry out at the memory of that abounding sweetness, how he doth repeat himself. O how great, he crieth, is the multitude! This hundredfold, therefore, is the adoption of sons; it is liberty; it is the first-fruits of the Spirit; it is the gladness of love; it is the glory of conscience; it is the "kingdom of God which is within us, and which is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Rom. xiv. 17)—joy which we have not in the hope of glory only, but in tribulations also.

Vespers will be of the following, from the Chapter inclusive, with a Commemoration of St Robert.

without being troubled by outward things. However, when his adversaries were dead, he was again elected Archbishop, and this time unanimously, and was confirmed by Pope Anastasius. He had not long taken possession of his See, when he fell sick and passed away from this life, upon the 8th day of June, in the year of man's salvation 1154, full of days, and glorious in the sight of God for almsgiving, watching, fasting, and good works.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of June, were born into the better life—

Upon the Celian Mount of Rome, the holy Martyrs Primus and Felician, who suffered under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian. These glorious martyrs had led a long life together, and had suffered divers and dreadful torments sometimes together, and sometimes apart. At length they brought their happy fight to a close, being beheaded under Promotus, President of Mentana.

At Agen, in Gaul, [in the third century,] suffered the holy martyr Vincent the Levite.

At Antioch, [in the year 304,] the holy Virgin martyr Pelagia, whom holy Ambrose and John Chrysostom do greatly praise.

At Syracuse, [in the year 594,] holy Maximian, Bishop [of that see,] of whom holy Pope Gregory the Great doth oftentimes make mention.

At Andria, in Apulia, [in the twelfth century,] holy Richard, the first Bishop of that city, famous for wondrous works.

In Scotland, [in the year 597,] holy Colum,[1] Priest and Confessor, [founder and first Abbat of Iona.]

At Edessa, in Syria, [in the fourth century,] the holy monk Julian, whose illustrious acts are written by the holy Deacon Ephraim.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Holy martyrs, Primus and Felician.

JUNE 9.

The Holy Martyrs Primus and Felician.

Simple.

All from the Common Office for a Simple Feast of Many Martyrs, (p. 582 or 611,) except the following Prayer and Lessons.

Prayer throughout the Office.

MAKE us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, ever heartily to rejoice over Thine holy martyrs Primus and Felician, and grant to us at their prayer the gift of Thy safe-keeping. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Second Lesson.

PRIMUS and Felician were two brothers who were accused of Christianity during the persecution by Diocletian and Maximian, and thrown into irons, which an angel broke, and so freed their limbs. In the presence of the Prætor they most earnestly clave to the profession of their faith, and were immediately parted one from the other. Felician's was the steadfastness which was first tried in divers ways. They, however, that strove to argue him into sin, when they found that words availed nothing, fastened his hands and feet to a post, and left him to hang there three days without food or drink. On the fourth day the Prætor called Primus before him, and said to him: "Seest thou how much thy brother is wiser than thou? He hath obeyed the Emperors, and they have made him honourable. Thou hast only to follow his ensample to be made partaker of his honours and favours."

Third Lesson.

PRIMUS answered him: "What hath befallen my brother I know, for an angel hath told me. God grant that, seeing I have the same will that he hath, I may not be divided from him in uplifting of testimony." These words raised the wrath of the Prætor, and to the torments which he had already inflicted on Primus, he added this also, that he had boiling lead put into his mouth, compelling his brother Felician to be present and see it done. After that, he had them led into the theatre and two lions let loose upon them, in the presence of about twelve thousand people who were gathered together to see the show. The lions only fawned upon the knees of the Saints, making friends with them with motions of their heads and tails. This exhibition turned five hundred persons and their households to Christ. The Prætor, then, moved beyond all endurance by what had passed, caused Primus and Felician to be beheaded.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of June, were born into the better life—

In Scotland, the holy Queen Margaret, famous for her love for the poor and her voluntary poverty.

At Rome, upon the Salarian Way, the blessed Getulius, a man of great eminence and learning, and his Companions Cerealis, Amantius, and Primitivus. At the command of the Emperor Hadrian they were tortured by Licinius the Consular; first hided, then thrust into prison, lastly committed to the flames, but as the fire would nowise hurt them, their heads were beaten in with clubs, and so they finished their testimony. Sympharosa, the wife of blessed Getulius, gathered their bodies together and honourably buried them in a sand-pit upon her own farm.

Also at Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, holy Basilides, Tripodes, Mandales, and twenty other martyrs, who suffered under the Emperor Aurelian and Plato, the Prefect of the city.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Zacharia.

In the dominions of Prusias, in Bithynia, [in the fourth century,] holy Timothy, Bishop [there,] martyr under Julian the Apostate.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Crispulus and Restitutus.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Aresius, Rogatus, and fifteen others.

At Cologne, the holy martyr the Abbat Maurinus.

At Petra, in Arabia, the holy Asterius, Bishop [of that see,] who, for the Catholic faith's sake, suffered many things of the Arians, and by the Emperor Constantius was banished into Africa and died a glorious Confessor.

---

[1] Funnily enough, the name is altered into the masculine form, like that of the discoverer of America.

At Naples, in Campania, the holy martyr Maximus, Bishop [of that see,] who was banished by the same Emperor Constantius for his unshaken confession of the Nicene faith, and there died worn out by suffering.

At Auxerre, [early in the sixth century,] holy Censurius Bishop [of that see.]

JUNE 10.

St Margaret, Queen of Scots, Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Martyr nor Virgin, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make Margaret, that blessed Queen, wonderful for tender love toward the poor, grant that her intercession and ensample may be effectual to gain for our hearts a thorough love toward Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MARGARET, Queen of Scots, was most noble by birth, uniting in herself, from her father the blood of the Kings of England and from her mother the blood of the Cæsars, but her greatest nobleness was in her brave Christian life. She was born in Hungary, where her father was then an exile, [in the year 1046,] and had passed a religious childhood, when her uncle Edward, the holy King of England, recalled him to his own royal home, and she came to England with him [in 1054.] A few years after, upon the ruin of her family,[1] she was escaping from England by sea, when the violence of the weather, or, to speak more truly, the Providence of God, caused that the ship should take refuge upon the coast of Scotland. There her extraordinary graces of mind and body so attracted King Malcolm III., that by the advice of his mother, he took her to wife [in 1070,] and of Scotland she deserved exceedingly well for the thirty years of her reign, by the holiness of her life and the abundance of her works of mercy.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the midst of kingly dainties, she afflicted her body with hardships and watching, using to spend great part of the night in earnest prayer. Besides other fasts which she imposed upon herself, it was her custom to observe one of forty days before Christmas, concerning which fast she was so rigid, that she would not relax it even under sharp suffering. She took great delight in the public worship of God, and founded or renewed a great number of Churches and convents, which she enriched at great cost with sacred furniture. Her healthy example drew the King her husband to habits of sobriety, and to imitate her in her good works. To all her children she had the happiness of giving a godly education, and several of them, like her mother Agatha and her sister Christina, led notable holy lives. The happiness of the whole kingdom was the object for which she constantly strove, and she successfully rooted out all the vices which had stealthily crept in, and established among the people a standard of living worthy of Christians.

Sixth Lesson.

THE most remarkable feature of her life was the tenderness of her charity toward her neighbour, especially the needy. Of these she would not only order whole flocks to be relieved, but was accustomed to give dinner to three hundred of them every day, treating them with the tenderness of a mother, and waiting upon them on her knees like a maidservant. She held it one of the privileges of her rank to wash their feet with her own Royal hands, and to dress their sores, which latter she would even kiss. To meet the expenses of her charities she sold not only her queenly raiment and her precious jewels, but more than once exhausted her funds entirely. Purified by grievous suffering, which she bore with marvellous patience during an illness of six months, she resigned her soul into the hands of Him Who had created it, upon the 10th day of June,[2] [1093.] At the moment of death, the bystanders saw her poor worn face, pale and disfigured by continual suffering, flush again with a beauty to which it had long been unused. After her death she became illustrious on account of great signs and wonders. With the approval of Clement X., she was chosen Patroness of Scotland, and her memory is held in profound reverence throughout the whole earth.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of June, were born into the better life—

The holy Apostle Barnabas. He was a Cypriot by birth, was by the disciples ordained an Apostle to the Gentiles along with Paul, and went through many countries with him doing that work of preaching the Gospel which had been laid upon them. In the end he went home to Cyprus, where he crowned the dignity of the Apostolate with the glory of martyrdom. Through a revelation from himself his body was discovered in the time of the Emperor Zeno, having with it a copy of the Gospel according to Matthew written with his own hand.

[1] By the conquest of England by William I. in 1066.

[2] This is a most singular inaccuracy. There can be no doubt that she died upon Nov. 16, upon which day her Feast was anciently kept in Scotland. She had another on June 19, in memory of the translation of her relics in 1250. The present Office was inserted in the Roman Kalendar by Innocent XII. in 1693, at the request of James VII., and June 10 is the Birth-day of the "Chevalier St George."

At Aquileia, the holy brethren Felix and Fortunatus, both martyrs. In the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian they were hung upon the rack, and lighted lamps put to their sides, but these were extinguished by the power of God. Boiling oil was poured into their bellies, and at last, forasmuch as they still stood firm in confessing Christ, they were beheaded.

At Bologna, [in the year 1267,] the holy Confessor Parisius, a monk of the Order of Camaldoli.

At Rome is commemorated the translation of the body of holy Gregory of Nazianzus. This sacred body had been brought to Rome from Constantinople and had lain for a long time in the church of the Mother of God at the Campus Martius, when the Supreme Pontiff Gregory XIII., [in the year 1580,] removed it with great pomp to the chapel which he had splendidly decorated in the Basilica of St Peter, and there laid it under the altar with due honour.

Vespers are of the following.

JUNE 11.

St Barnabas, Apostle.

Greater double.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 576 or 583,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who dost gladden us by the worthy deeds and availing prayers of Thy Blessed Apostle Barnabas, mercifully grant unto us who seek through him Thy manifold gifts, by the tenderness of Thy mercy effectually to obtain the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Margaret. Prayer from her Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (xiii. 43.)

NOW when the Synagogue was dismissed, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas; who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God. And the next Sabbath Day came almost the whole city together, to hear the word of God. But when the Jews saw the multitudes they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, blaspheming. Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold and said: It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you, but, seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us: I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

Second Lesson.

AND when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord; and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region. But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts. But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium. And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost.

Third Lesson. (xiv. 1.)

AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the Synagogue of the Jews, and so spake that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed. But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil-affected against the brethren. Much time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, Which gave testimony unto the word of His grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

SECOND NOCTURN.[1]

Fourth Lesson.

JOSES, who by the Apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, the Son of Consolation,) a Levite and of the country of Cyprus, having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the Apostles' feet. (Acts iv. 36, 37.) When Paul, after his conversion, was come to Jerusalem, the disciples were all afraid of him, but Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles. (ix. 26, 27.) When tidings that a great number believed and turned unto the Lord at Antioch came unto the ears of the Church which was at Jerusalem, they sent forth Barnabas that he should go as far as Antioch. Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord. For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith, and much people was added unto the Lord. (xi. 21-24.)

Fifth Lesson.

THEN departed Barnabas to Tarsus for to seek Paul, and, when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass that a whole year they assembled themselves with the Church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch. And there stood up one of them, named Agabus, and signified, by the Spirit, that there should be great dearth throughout all the world—which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar. Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea, which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Paul. (xi. 25-30.) And Barnabas and Paul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ministry, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark. (xii. 25.)

---

[1] The Lessons in this Nocturn consist almost entirely of a string of passages from the Acts of the Apostles. In the Latin these passages are given in a somewhat mutilated and disjointed manner, like quotations from memory; in translating I have thought it best to give them nearly in their original form, as they are to be found in the Bible itself.

Sixth Lesson.

NOW there were in the Church that was at Antioch, certain Prophets and teachers; and, as Paul and Barnabas, together with them, ministered to the Lord and fasted, the Holy Ghost said: Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away. So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus; (xiii. 1-4;) in the which island, and in many other cities and countries, they journeyed about, preaching the Gospel with great gain to them that heard them. Nevertheless, at last, Paul and Barnabas departed asunder one from the other. And so Barnabas took Mark and sailed unto Cyprus, (xv. 39,) once more. And there it was that upon a certain 11th of June, in or about the seventh year of the reign of Nero, Barnabas crowned the dignity of the Apostolate with the glory of martyrdom. During the reign of the Emperor Zeno, his body was found in its grave in Cyprus; on his breast lay a copy of the Gospel according to Matthew, written by the hand of Barnabas himself.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 16.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] 34*th on Matthew.*

When the Lord had cleared the minds of His disciples of all care, and had armed them by showing forth His mighty works, had estranged them from all business of this world, and freed them from all anxiety touching the things of time, moulding them into a frame of iron-like, nay, diamond-like, hardness, then at length He told them of the contendings against the which they were afterward to wrestle. By this foretelling of things to come they were much holpen. First, they learnt the power of His fore-knowledge. Then, they were guarded against all suspicion that these great sorrows flowed from faultiness in their Master. Again, the future sufferers were made safe from all trouble of being taken unawares. Lastly, seeing that they heard these things at a time nigh to His own suffering, they were not over troubled.

Eighth Lesson.

AND now, that they may understand how that this is a new kind of warfare, and an unaccustomed manner of contending, when He sendeth them forth unarmed, "providing neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in their purses; nor scrip for their journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves," (x. 9, 10,) left to the hospitality of whosoever would receive them, He maketh not here an end to His discourse, but, in manifestation of His unspeakable power, He biddeth them, so going, to show forth the meekness of sheep, seeing they were about going unto wolves — neither simply unto wolves, but in the very midst of wolves. Neither is it only the meekness of sheep which He biddeth them have, but also the harmlessness of doves, that He might so much the more gloriously display His power, when the sheep overcame the wolves. These are the sheep which albeit they abide in the midst of wolves, and are mangled by many a bite, not only are not destroyed, but do gradually make the wolves change their nature, and become sheep themselves.

Ninth Lesson.

BEYOND all doubt it is a greater and more marvellous thing to change the minds of enemies, and to turn their thoughts round, than to kill them; more especially when the work is to be done by only twelve sheep, and the whole world is full of the wolves. Shame then upon us, whose deeds are so contrary, and who rather run like wolves upon our enemies. For so long as we are sheep we conquer, yea, though a thousand wolves be gathered round about us, we overcome, and are the conquerors: but if we become wolves ourselves, then are we conquered. For then doth the Shepherd's help forsake us, Who feedeth not wolves but sheep.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Salamanca, in Spain, the holy Confessor John of San Fagondez, of the Order of Hermits of St Augustine, famous for his zeal for the faith, the holiness of his life, and his wonderful works.

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy soldiers Basilides, Cyrinus, Nabor, and Nazarius, all martyrs, who were thrust into prison under Aurelius the Prefect, in the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian, because of their Christian profession, and after they had been torn with armed scourges, were beheaded.

At Nice, in Bithynia, the holy martyr Antonina, who in the same persecution was, by the order of Priscillian the President, beaten with clubs, hung upon the rack, torn in the sides, burnt with fire, and at last slain with the sword.

In Thrace, [in the fourth century,] holy Olympius, Bishop [of Enos,] who was thrust out of his see by the Arians and died a Confessor.

At Rome, in the Vatican Basilica, [in the year 816,] the holy Pope Leo VI., whose eyes and tongue were torn out by wicked men, [in the year 799,] but wonderfully given back to him by God.

In Cilicia, holy Amphion, Bishop [of Nicomedia,] who was an eminent Confessor in the time of the Emperor Galerius Maximian.

In Egypt, [toward the beginning of the fifth century,] the holy Hermit Onuphrius, who lived in the great desert for sixty years and passed to heaven illustrious for great, mighty and worthy deeds; his famous acts were written by the Abbat Paphnutius.

In the Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of St John of San Fagondez, and of the Holy martyrs Basilides, Cyrinus, Nabor, and Nazarius. Prayers from next day's Lauds.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN [Gonzalez] was born, the offspring of a noble race, at San Fagondez in Spain, [on Midsummer Day in the year of grace 1430.] His father and mother after long childlessness, obtained him from God by prayers and good works. From his earliest years he gave clear signs of his after holiness of life. He was used to climb up upon an high place to preach to the other little boys, and to exhort them to be good and to worship God, and he made it his work to reconcile their quarrels. While he was still at home he was given in charge to the monks of the Order of Saint Benedict, at the village of San Fagondez, to teach him his first lessons. While he was thus busied, his father obtained for him the benefice of the Parish, but no persuasions could induce him to keep this preferment. He became one of the household of the Bishop of Burgos, and that Prelate, seeing his uprightness, took him into his counsels, ordained him Priest, and made him a Canon, heaping upon him many kindnesses. However, that he might serve God the more quietly, he left the Bishop's Palace, resigned all his Church income, and betook him to a certain Chapel wherein he celebrated the Holy Liturgy every day, and oftentimes preached concerning the things of God, with great profit to all that heard him.

Fifth Lesson.

HE went later to Salamanca to study, and there being taken into the celebrated College of St Bartholomew, he did his priestly office, so that he was at once constant to the studies he desired and busy with sermons. Here he had a severe illness, and vowed to take up a sterner way of living. In fulfilment of this vow, he gave to an half-naked beggar the better of the two garments which were all that he had, and then went to a Convent of the friars of St Austin, which was then in the richest bloom of rigid discipline. Being admitted therein, he surpassed the most advanced in obedience, lowliness, watchings, and prayer. At the time that he had charge of the table, one keg of wine abundantly sufficed in his hands for all the friars, throughout an whole year. After his year of noviceship, he undertook the duty of preacher at the command of his Superior. At that time, owing to bloody feuds, all things human and divine at Salamanca were in such utter confusion, that murders were committed almost every hour, and the streets and squares, and the very churches, flowed with the blood of all classes, especially of the nobility.

Sixth Lesson.

IT was John, who by public preaching and private conversations, softened the hearts of the citizens so that the town was restored to peace. He grievously offended one of the nobles by rebuking him for his cruelty toward his vassals. This man sent two knights to murder him on the road. They had already come nigh him when God sent a terror upon them, so that they and their horses stood still, until they cast themselves down before the feet of the Saint, imploring his forgiveness for their sin. The Prince himself, also, smitten with a sudden dread, despaired of his salvation, till he had sent for John, who, finding him repent of his deed, restored him to soundness. Some quarrelsome men, likewise, who were fain to give him a cudgelling, found their arms stiffen, nor would their strength come back till they had asked his pardon for their wickedness. Oftentimes when he was celebrating the Holy Liturgy, the Presence of the Lord Christ became sensibly manifest to him, and he drank in things heavenly from their Divine Well-head Himself. Oftentimes also he could see the secrets of men's hearts, and foretell strange things to come. He raised from the dead his own niece, aged seven years. He foretold the day of his own death, and prepared himself by receiving most devoutly the Sacraments of the Church, [and then fell asleep in the Lord, upon the 11th day of June, in the year 1475.] God glorified him by many miracles, both before and after his death. These being duly proved, Alexander VIII. numbered him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the second, in order to leave room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

BASILIDES, Cyrinus, Nabor, and Nazarius were Roman soldiers, of illustrious birth, and distinguished gallantry. Having embraced the Christian Religion, and being found publishing that Christ was the Son of God, they were arrested by Aurelius, Præfect of Rome under the Emperor Diocletian. As they despised his orders to sacrifice to the gods, they were committed to prison. While they were at prayer there, a brilliant light broke forth before the eyes of all that were there, and shone in all the prison. Marcellinus the keeper of the prison and many others were moved by this heavenly glory to believe in the Lord Christ. Basilides, Cyrinus, Nabor, and Nazarius were afterwards discharged out of the prison. However, in the reign of the Emperor Maximian, when they set light by his commands also, and had ever in their mouth that there is but one Christ, one God, and one Lord, they were tormented with whips loaded with metal, and again cast into chains. Thence, on the seventh day, they were brought out, and set before the Emperor, and there still persisted in mocking at the foolish idols, and declaring that JESUS Christ is God. They were accordingly condemned to death and beheaded. Their bodies were given to wild beasts to eat, but, as the creatures would not touch them, the Christians took them, and buried them honourably.

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, the Author of peace and Lover of concord, Who didst wonderfully adorn Thy blessed Confessor John with the grace of making peace between them that were at war, grant unto us for his sake and by his prayers, to be so solidly established in the love of Thyself, that no trials whatsoever may be able to part us from Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs.

Prayer.

BRIGHTEN over us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, this solemn Birthday-keeping for Thine own holy martyrs, Basilides, Cyrinus, Nabor, and Nazarius, and grant that the same love of Thee which hath brought them for ever and ever, such things as exceed all that we can either ask or think, may grow up in us also by the fruits of our earnest petition. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Padua, the holy Confessor Anthony of Portugal, of the Order of Friars Minor, famous for his life, miracles, and preaching.

At Rome, upon the Ardeatine Way, the holy Virgin martyr Felicula. She would not marry Flaccus nor sacrifice to idols, and was therefore handed over to a certain judge who, forasmuch as she remained steadfast in confessing Christ, starved her in the dark, then had her racked until she died, and thereafter threw her body into a sewer. The holy Nicomedes buried her beside the same Way.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Fortunatus and Lucian.

At Byblos, in Palestine, the holy Virgin martyr Aquilina, aged twelve years. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian and the judge Valusian, she was buffeted and beaten for her confession of the faith, and stabbed with heated awls, and lastly smitten with the sword, and so hallowed maidenhood by martyrdom.

In the Abruzzi, the holy martyr Peregrine, Bishop [of Amiternum,] who for the Catholic faith's sake was drowned by the Lombards in the river Aterno.

At Cordova, the holy monk and priest Fandilas, who [in the year 853] suffered martyrdom for Christ's sake by being beheaded in the persecution by the Arabs.

In Cyprus, [in the fourth century,] holy Triphyllius, Bishop [of Nicosia.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

First Vespers begin (as regards St Anthony) at the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, make Thy Church to be glad at the solemn memorial of Thy blessed Confessor Anthony, causing her ever to be strong through Thy ghostly succour, and fitting her to relish blessedness at Thy right hand for evermore. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

[FERDINAND de Bullones, afterwards called] Anthony, was born of decent parents at Lisbon in Portugal, [on the Feast of the Assumption, in the year of grace 1195.] They gave him a godly training, and while he was still a young man, he joined an Institute of Canons Regular. However, when the bodies of the five holy martyred Friars Minor, who had just suffered in Morocco for Christ's sake, were brought to Coïmbra, the desire to be himself a martyr took a strong hold upon him, and [in 1220] he left the Canons Regular and became a Franciscan. The same yearning led him to attempt to go among the Saracens, but he fell sick on the way, and, being obliged to turn back, the ship in which he had embarked for Spain was driven by stress of weather to Sicily.

Fifth Lesson.

FROM Sicily he came to Assisi to attend the General Chapter of his Order, and thence withdrew himself to the Hermitage of Monte Paolo near Bologna, where he gave himself up for a long while to consideration of the things of God, to fastings, and to watchings. Being afterwards ordained Priest and sent to preach the Gospel, his wisdom and fluency were very marked, and drew on him such admiration of men, that the Pope, once hearing him preach, called him "The Ark of the Covenant."[1] One of his chief points was to expend all his strength in attacking heresies, whence he gained the name of the "Heretics' everlasting Hammer."

---

[1] Probably a somewhat cumbrous compliment, constructed on 2 Cor. iii. 3.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was the first of his Order who, on account of his excellent gift of teaching, publicly lectured at Bologna on the interpretation of Holy Scripture, and directed the studies of his brethren. He travelled through many provinces. The year before his death he came to Padua, where he left some remarkable records of his holy life. After having undergone much toil for the glory of God, full of good works and miracles, he fell asleep in the Lord upon the 13th day of June, in the year of salvation 1231. Pope Gregory IX. enrolled his name among those of the Holy Confessors.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Basil, styled "the Great," Archbishop of Cæsarea, in Pontus, [Confessor and Doctor of the Church, of whom mention is made upon the 1st day of January, and on the 14th day of June, of his ordination to his see of Cæsarea.] In the time of the Emperor Valens he shone as a marvellous light, illustrious for teaching and wisdom, and shining with all graces, and defended the Church with wonderful firmness against the Arians and Macedonians.

Upon the same 14th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Samaria, in Palestine, [in the sixth century before Christ,] the holy Prophet Elisha. Holy Jerome writeth that the devils shrink from his grave, where also resteth the Prophet Obadiah.

At Syracuse, the holy Marcian, Bishop [of that see,] who was ordained Bishop by the blessed Apostle Peter. After he had preached the Gospel he was slain by the Jews.

At Soissons, the holy martyrs Valerius and Rufinus, who after suffering divers torments were beheaded by order of the President Rictiovarus in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Cordova, [in the persecution by the Muslims,] the holy martyrs Anastasius a Priest, Felix a monk, and Digna a Virgin.

At Constantinople, [in the year 846,] holy Methodius, Archbishop [of that see.]

At Vienne, [in Gaul, in the seventh century,] holy Ætherius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rodez, [in Gaul, in the sixth century,] holy Quinctian, Bishop [first of that see and afterward of Clermont.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 14.

St Basil the Great, Archbishop [of Cæsarea-in-Pontus,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Basil, these begin at the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. "O right excellent Teacher, &c.," (p. 612.)

Prayer. "Hear, O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

A Commemoration is made of St Anthony of Padua. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Basil was a noble Cappadocian[1] who studied earthly learning at Athens, in company with Gregory of Nazianzus, to whom he was united in a warm and tender friendship. He afterwards studied things sacred in a monastery, where he quickly attained an eminent degree of excellence in doctrine and life, whereby he gained to himself the surname of "the Great." He was called to Pontus to preach the Gospel of Christ JESUS, and brought back into the way of salvation that country which before had been wandering astray from the rules of Christian discipline. He was shortly united as coadjutor to Eusebius, Bishop of Cæsarea, for the edification of that city, and afterwards became his successor in the see. One of his greatest labours was to maintain that the Son is of one Substance with the Father, and when the Emperor Valens, moved to wrath against him, was willling to send him into exile, he so bent him by dint of the miracles which he worked that he forced him to forego his intention.

Fifth Lesson.

THE chair upon which Valens sat down, in order to sign the decreee of Basil's ejectment from the city, broke down under him, and three pens which he took one after the other to sign the edict of banishment, all would not write; and when nevertheless he remained firm to write the ungodly order, his right hand shook. Valens was so frightened at these omens, that he tore the paper in two. During the night which was allowed to Basil to make up his mind, Valens' wife had a severe stomach-ache, and their only son was taken seriously ill. These things alarmed Valens so much that he acknowledged his wickedness, and sent for Basil, during whose visit the child began to get better. However, when Valens sent for some heretics to see it, it presently died.

Sixth Lesson.

THE abstinence and self-control of Basil were truly wonderful. He was content to wear nothing but one single garment. In observance of fasting he was most earnest, and so instant in prayer, that he would oftentimes pass the whole night therein. His virginity he kept always unsullied. He built monasteries, wherein he so adapted the institution of monasticism, that he exquisitely united for the inmates the advantages of the contemplative and of the active life. He was the author of many learned writings, and, according to the witness of Gregory of Nazianzus, no one hath ever composed more faithful and edifying explanations of the books of the Holy Scripture. He died upon the 1st day of January, [in the year of our Lord 379,] at which time so essentially spiritual was his life, that his body showed nothing but skin and bones.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiv. 26.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes: If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple. And so on.

Homily by St Basil, Archbishop [of Cæsarea.] (Paraphrase of his Rule.)

This is perfect self-renunciation, when we attain to indifference as regards our own lives, and wring from death himself the confession that our trust is not in our own strength. The first step toward this crown of abnegation is to estrange ourselves from outward things, such as property, public reputation, habits of life, and affection for things unnecessary, whereof the immediate disciples of our Holy Lord have left us a fine example—James, for instance, and John, who left their father Zebedee and the boats which were their only means of getting their daily bread—or Matthew, who got up from the receipt of custom, and straightway followed the Lord.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT what need have we for our own arguments, or for the examples of holy men to confirm what we say, when we are able to cite the very words of the Lord Himself, and by them to move any earnest soul that loveth God? Such were they unto whom He plainly and unhesitatingly declared:—"Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple." And again, in another place, when He had said: "If thou wilt be perfect, go, and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor"—the completion of the sentence was, "And come and follow Me." (Matth. xix. 19.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c.

Ninth Lesson.

THIS then, as we have taught, is self-renunciation—to unlock the chains of this earthly life, which passeth away, and to set oneself free from the business of men, and so to make ourselves lither and meeter to enter on that path which leadeth to God, and let our reason be more unhampered to gain and to use those things which are far more precious than gold or precious stones. (Ps. xviii. 11.) In short, it is to have our heart in heaven and not on earth, so as to be able to say: "Our conversation is in heaven." (Phil. iii. 20.) And (which is the great thing) this is the first step towards the attaining to be like Christ, who, "though he was rich, yet for" our "sakes He became poor." (2 Cor. viii. 9.)

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow we keep the feast of St Philip Neri, of whom mention is made in the Martyrology for May 26.

Upon the same 15th day of June, were born into the better life—

At the river Silaro, in Lucania, the holy martyrs Vitus, Modestus, and Crescentia, who were brought thither from Sicily under the Emperor Diocletian; there by the power of God they overcame boiling lead and wild beasts, and finished the course of their glorious fight by being broken alive upon a block.

At Dorostorum, in Mysia, the holy soldier Hesychius, who was arrested along with blessed Julius, and was crowned with martyrdom after him, under the President Maximus.

At Cordova, in Spain [in the persecution under the Muslims,] the holy martyr Benildes.

At Zephyrium, in Cilicia, the holy martyr Dulas, who under the President Maximus was for Christ's Name's sake beaten with rods, laid upon a gridiron and smeared with burning oil, and suffered other things also, and so as a conqueror grasped the palm of martyrdom.

At Palmyra, in Syria, the holy sisters Libya and Leonis, and Eutropia, a damsel of twelve years of age, who through divers torments attained unto the crown of martyrdom.

At Valenciennes, [in the year 686,] the holy Landalin, Abbat [of Crespin.]

At Clermont, [in the year 472,] the holy Confessor Abraham, [Abbat of St Cirgues,] illustrious for his holiness and wonderful works.

At Valais, [in the year 1008,] the holy Confessor Bernard of Menthon.

At Pibrac, in the Diocese of Toulouse, the holy Virgin Germaine Cousin, a shepherdess, who lived poor and lowly, and after many woes, borne with the greatest long-suffering, passed away to the Divine Bridegroom, [in the year 1601.] After her death she became famous for many miracles, and the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. enrolled her name among those of the holy Virgins.

Vespers are of the following, [i.e., of St Philip,] from the Chapter inclusive.

JUNE 15.

St Philip Neri, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast exalted Thy blessed Confessor Philip and made him glorious with the glory wherewith Thou glorifiest Thine holy ones, mercifully grant that his solemn memorial may not only gladden us, but also, by Thy grace, stir us up to follow after his good ensample. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as far as St Philip is concerned, begin with the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

A Commemoration is made of St Basil. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.," (p. 612.) Also of the Holy Martyrs Vitus, Modestus, and Crescentia. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the First Vespers of the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602.)

Prayer.

O LORD, we pray Thee to grant unto Thy Church through the prayers of Thine Holy Martyrs Vitus, Modestus, and Crescentia, to mind not high things, but in all lowliness to do ever such things as be pleasing in Thy sight, looking down upon all such things as be corrupt, and working ever in love unfeigned such things as be righteous. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PHILIP Neri[1] was born of godly and respectable parents at Florence, [on the 23rd day of July, in the year of grace 1515.] From his earliest childhood he gave signs of the holiness of life which he afterwards attained. As a young man he gave up the rich inheritance which would have come to him from his uncle, and went to Rome, where, in the study of philosophy and theology, he gave himself altogether to Christ. His self-control was such that he sometimes fasted from all food for three days at a time. He was instant in watching and prayer, and during the frequent pilgrimages which he made to the seven churches of Rome, it was his custom to remain all night in prayer to God in the Catacomb of Kallistus. [On the 23rd of May, 1551,] he became a Priest in obedience to the advice of his Confessor, and afterwards made the salvation of souls the one object of his existence; he heard confessions with unwearied tenderness until his dying day, and became the spiritual father in Christ of many sons, whom it was his beloved work to feed day by day upon the Word of God, upon the often receiving of the Sacraments, upon instant prayer, and upon other godly works: to the which end he founded the Congregation of the Oratory.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was full of the love of God, and his heart was so hot therewith, that it became straitened in its place, and the Lord was pleased to ease him by [the gristle which joined] the fourth and fifth ribs [on his left side] breaking, and so allowing more play to the internal organs. Sometimes, when he was saying Mass, or more intent than usual in prayer, he was seen to be raised off the ground, and become, in a strange manner, all shining. He was ever ready to succour the poor and needy with kindly services, in which works God was pleased to make him meet once to give alms to an Angel, and again, when once by night he was carrying bread to the hungry, and was fallen into a pit, an Angel drew him out unhurt. He longed to be lowly, and always shrank from honours, and from dignities in the Church, whereof several of the highest were divers times offered to him, but he always firmly refused them.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was illustrious for the gift of prophecy, and had a marked and very wonderful power of reading the thoughts of men's souls. He ever kept his own virginity undefiled, and could distinguish those that were pure-minded by a sort of sweet savour, and the unclean, on the contrary, by a kind of stench. He sometimes appeared in double to persons at a distance, and brought them help when they were in peril. He healed many that were sick and dying. He also raised one dead man to life. He was honoured by seeing several times heavenly spirits, and likewise the Virgin Mother of God herself. He saw the souls of divers persons, radiant with glory, ascend to heaven. In the year of salvation 1595 the Feast of the Body of Christ fell upon the 25th day of May. Philip, on that day, said Mass with extraordinary gladness of spirit, and performed the other religious works of the day, and after the hour of midnight, at the time he had himself foretold, he fell asleep in the Lord, in the eighty-second year of his life. Gregory XV., finding that God had glorified him by many miracles, enrolled his name among those of the saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) The last part is omitted, or read as one with the second, in order to make room for the following.

Ninth Lesson (for SS. Vitus, Modestus, and Crescentia).

THIS Vitus was a child who was baptized without his father's knowledge. When his father had found it out, he used his best endeavours to dissuade his son from the Christian religion, but as he found him persistent in it, he handed him over to Valerian the judge to be whipped. But as he still remained as unshaken as before, he was given back to his father. But while his father was turning over in his mind to what severe discipline to subject him, Vitus, being warned by an Angel, fled out of the country, in company with his foster-parents Modestus and Crescentia. In his new home he gained great praise for holiness, so that the fame of it came to Diocletian, which Emperor sent for him to deliver his own child which was vexed with a devil. Him Vitus delivered, but when the Emperor found that with all his great gifts he could not bring him to worship the gods, he had the ingratitude to cast him and Modestus and Crescentia into prison, binding them in fetters. But when they were found in their prison more faithful than ever to their confession, the Emperor commanded them to be thrown into a great vessel full of melted lead, resin, and pitch. Therein these three, like the three Holy Children in the burning fiery furnace, sang praise to God; and upon that they were haled forth and cast to a lion, but he lay down before them, and licked their feet. Then the Emperor, being filled with fury, more especially because he saw that the multitude that looked on were stirred up at the miracle, commanded Vitus, Modestus, and Crescentia to be stretched upon a block and their limbs crushed, and their bones rent one from the other. While as they were dying there came great thunderings, and lightnings, and earthquakes, so that temples of the gods fell down, and many men were killed. As for that which remained of the Martyrs, the noble lady Florence took it, and embalmed it with spices, and honourably buried it.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Besançon, in Gaul, the holy martyrs Ferreolus a Priest and Ferrutio a Deacon, who were sent forth by the blessed Irenæus, Bishop [of Lyons,] to preach the Word of God, whereafter they were divers ways tormented and then beheaded under Claudius the judge.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Quiricus and his mother Julitta. Quiricus was a little boy of three years old; when his mother was horribly scourged before the President Alexander, he vehemently wept and lamented her, whereupon he was killed by being dashed against the steps of the judgment-seat. Julitta, after horrid stripes and grievous torments, was beheaded, and so finished her testimony.

At Maintz, the holy martyrs Aureus and his sister Justina, and the others who were at Communion in the Church when they were massacred by the Huns, who were wasting Germany, [in the year 451.]

At Limasol, in Cyprus, holy Tycho, Bishop [of that see,] in the time of the Emperor Theodosius the younger.

At Lyons, [in the year 551,] the blessed Aurelian, Bishop of Arles.

At Nantes, in Brittany, [in the year 310,] the holy Confessor Similian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Misna, in Germany, [in the year 1106,] holy Benno, Bishop [of that see.]

At the village of La Louvesc, in the Diocese of Vienne, in Dauphiny, [in the year 1640,] the holy Confessor John Francis Regis, of the Society of Jesus, a man of wonderful love and long-suffering in seeking the salvation of souls, whom Pope Clement XII. added to the list of the Saints.

In Brabant, [in the year 1246,] the holy Virgin Lutgard.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of three Holy Martyrs. Prayer as at First Vespers. At Second Vespers the first verse of the Hymn is altered.

JUNE 16.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of June, were born into the better life—

In England, the holy Abbat Botolph.

At Rome, two hundred and sixty-two holy martyrs, who were slain for Christ's faith's sake in the persecution under Diocletian, and were buried at Cucumber Hill, upon the old Salarian Way.

At Tarracina, the holy soldier Montanus, who, after many torments, received the crown of martyrdom under Hadrian the Emperor and Leontius the Consular.

At Venafro, the holy martyrs Nicander and Marcian, who were beheaded in the persecution under Maximian.

At Chalcedon, the holy martyrs Manuel, Sabel, and Ishmael. They were envoys who had been sent by the King of Persia to Julian the Apostate to treat for peace. Julian commanded them to worship idols, and, forasmuch as they steadfastly refused so to do, he caused them to be slain with the sword.

At Apollonia, in Macedonia, the holy martyrs Isaurus a Deacon, Innocent, Felix, Jeremiah, and Peregrine, Athenians, who were in divers ways tormented and then beheaded, under the Tribune Tripontius.

At Amelia, in Umbria, [in the sixth century,] the holy Himerius, Bishop [of that see,] whose body was taken to Cremona, [five hundred years later.]

At Berry, [also in the sixth century,] holy Gundulph, Bishop [of that see.]

At Orleans, [in the year 530,] the holy Priest and Confessor Avitus.

In Phrygia, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Hypatius.

Also, [in the year 1160,] the holy Hermit Bessarion.

At Pisa, in Tuscany, [in the year 1160,] the holy Confessor Rainerius.

JUNE 17.

St Botolph, Abbat.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "O Lord, we beseech Thee that the prayers, &c.," (p. 629.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

AMONG the godly men who consecrated themselves to the monastic life in England during the seventh century were the brothers Botolph and Adolph, who were very highly esteemed, less on account of their birth, although this was noble, than on account of their remarkable graces. They went to Belgium to seek increase in godliness, and forasmuch as grace is at home everywhere, and is honoured wherever it is found, even among strangers, Adolph was there made Archbishop of Utrecht. Botolph returned to his native land with letters of introduction to Ethelmund, King of the South Saxons, from his two sisters, who had consecrated themselves to Christ in Belgium, and with the help of that Prince he founded a monastery in the county of Lincoln, not far from the town of Lindorum, where he governed the brethren.

Fifth Lesson.

BOTOLPH discharged his office of Abbat with great holiness, and is celebrated on account of miracles wrought both during his life and after his death. When his monastery was destroyed by the irruptions of the Danes, holy Ethelwold, Bishop of Winchester, took his relics partly to the minster of Ely, and partly to that of Thorne. At this day there is a fair town in the aforesaid county of Lincoln which is called after St Botolph, and there are many old churches throughout the provinces of England dedicated under his invocation. Holy Botolph died upon the 17th day of June, in the year of Christ 655.

Sixth Lesson.

Lesson from St Gregory, "The simplicity of the righteous, &c.," (p. 628.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Ardeatine Way, the holy brothers Mark and Marcellian, both martyrs, who were tried under Fabian the judge, in the persecution under Diocletian. They were fastened to a stake and sharp nails driven through their feet, and forasmuch as they ceased not to praise Christ, spears were thrust through their sides, and thus they passed unto the kingdom of heaven with the glory of martyrdom.

At Malaga, in Spain, the holy martyrs Cyriacus and Paula the Virgin, who were stoned to death.

At Tripoli, in Phœnicia, the holy soldier Leontius, who through sharp torments attained unto the crown of martyrdom, under the President Hadrian, along with Hypatius the Tribune and Theodulus, whom he had turned to Christ.

Upon the same day, [at Nicomedia,] the holy martyr Etherius, who in the persecution under Diocletian, after suffering fire and other torments, was slain with the sword.

At Alexandria suffered the holy Virgin Marina.

At Bordeaux, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Amandus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Sacca, in Sicily, [likewise in the fifth century,] the holy Hermit Calogerus, whose holiness is chiefly manifested in delivering them that are vexed with evil spirits.

At Schœnaug, [in the year 1165,] the holy Virgin Elizabeth, famous for her straightness in observing the monastic life.

At Vespers, Commemoration of the following. Prayer from their Office.

JUNE 18.

The Holy Martyrs Mark and Marcellian.

Simple.

All from the Common Office for a Simple Feast of Many Martyrs, (p. 611,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY God, grant, we beseech Thee, that we who do keep the Birth-day of Thine Holy Martyrs Mark and Marcellian, may through their prayers be delivered from all evils which do presently hang over us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

First and Second Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Second Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood indeed, &c., (p. 607.)

Third Lesson.

MARK and Marcellian were two brothers, Romans, who were arrested by Duke Fabian for believing in Christ, and fastened to a beam, to which their feet were nailed. The Judge said to them: "Wretched creatures, do think for a moment, and free yourselves from such suffering." But they answered him: "We have never enjoyed any dinner so much as we do what we are now undergoing here for JESUS Christ's sake. We have got ourselves a little fast to His love now. Would that He would let us suffer this as long as we are clad in this corruptible body." Still suffering, they for a day and a night sang the praises of God continually, and in the end were thrust through with darts, and so attained the glory of Martyrdom.[1] Their bodies are buried upon the Way to Ardea.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Florence, the holy Virgin Juliana de' Falconieri, foundress of the Sisters of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Clement XII. enrolled among those of Holy Virgins.

At Milan, [in the first century,] the holy brethren Gervase and Protase, both martyrs. By command of Astasius the judge, Gervase was beaten to death with scourges loaded with lead, and Protase first beaten with cudgels and then beheaded. Blessed Ambrose, by the revelation of the Lord, found their bodies sprinkled with blood and as incorrupt as though they had suffered only that very day; while they were being moved a blind man received his sight by touching the bier, and many who were vexed by evil spirits were set free.

At Ravenna, [likewise in the first century,] the holy martyr Ursicinus, who underwent many torments under the judge Paulinus, and, forasmuch as he remained still unshaken in confessing the Lord, was beheaded, and so finished his testimony.

At Sozopolis, the holy martyr Zosimus, who, after sharp torments under the President Domitian in the persecution of Trajan, was beheaded, and so passed away triumphantly to be for ever with the Lord.

At Arezzo, in Tuscany, the holy martyrs Gaudentius, Bishop [of that see,] and the Deacon Culmatius, who were slain by the raging heathen in the time of the Emperor Valentinian.

[1] A.D. 286.

On the same day, [in a year near the beginning of the eleventh century,] the holy martyr Boniface, a disciple of the blessed Romwald. He was sent by the Roman Pontiff to preach the Gospel in Russia. He passed unharmed through fire, and baptized the King and his people, but was murdered in fury by the king's brother, and so received that crown of martyrdom which he had desired.

At Ravenna, the holy hermit Romwald, father of the Camaldolese monks, who restored the life of hermits in Italy when it had fallen away, and marvellously spread it about, whose feast is kept upon the 7th day of February.

JUNE 19.

St Juliana de' Falconieri, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Hymn.[1]

TO be the Lamb's celestial bride
Is Juliana's one desire;
For this she quits her father's home
And leads the sacred virgin choir.

By day, by night she mourns her Spouse
Nailed to the Cross, with ceaseless tears,
Till in herself, through very grief,
The image of that Spouse appears.

Like Him, all wounds, she kneels transfixed
Before the Virgin Mother's shrine;
And still the more she weeps, the more
Mounts up the flame of love divine.

That love so deep the Lord repaid
His handmaid on her dying bed;
When with the Food of heavenly life
By miracle her soul He fed.

All glory, O Creator Sire,
O sole-begotten Son divine,
And co-eternal Paraclete,
One only Lord and God, be Thine.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who, when Thy blessed hand-maiden Juliana was lying sick unto death wast pleased in wondrous wise to comfort her with the Precious Body of Thy Son, be Thou entreated for the same Thy servant's sake, and grant unto us also the same Comfort in our last agony, that we may go in the strength of that Meat unto our very Fatherland, which is in heaven. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JULIANA was a daughter of the noble family of the Falconieri,[2] and was born in the year 1270. Her father was the same who at his own costs so splendidly built from the foundations the Church of Our Lady of the Annunciation as it now standeth at Florence. Her mother's name was Reguardata. They were both well stricken in years, and, until the birth of Juliana, had been childless. From her very cradle she gave tokens of the holiness of life to which she afterwards attained. And from the murmuring of her baby lips was caught the sweet sound of the names of JESUS and Mary. As she entered on her girlhood, she delivered herself up entirely to the pursuit of Christian godliness, and so excellently shone therein, that her uncle, the Blessed Alexius, scrupled not to tell her mother that she had given birth to an Angel rather than to a woman. So modest was her carriage, and so clean her soul from the lightest speck of indiscretion, that she never in her whole life stared a man in the face, and that the very mention of sin made her shiver, and when the story of a grievous crime was told her, she dropped down nearly fainting. Before she had finished her fifteenth year, she renounced her inheritance, although a rich one, and all prospect of an earthly marriage, and made to God a vow of virginity, before holy Philip Benizi, from whom she was the first to receive the religious habit of what are called the "mantled"[3] nuns.

Fifth Lesson.

MANY young women of noble families followed the example of Juliana, and even her own mother put herself for instruction under her daughter. Thus in a little while their number increased, and she became the foundress of the Order of Mantled nuns, to whom she gave a rule of life full of wisdom and godliness. Holy Philip Benizi, having thorough knowledge of her excellence, chose her above all living to whom at his death to leave the care not of the women only but of the whole of the Order of the Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, of which he had been the propagator and director. Juliana, who deemed ever lowly of herself, even when she was the mistress of the others, ministered to her sisters in the meanest offices of the work of the house. She passed whole days in incessant prayer, and was often rapt in spirit, and the remainder of her time she toiled to make peace among the citizens, who were at variance together, to recall transgressors from the ways of iniquity, and to nurse the sick, to cure whom she would sometimes even use her tongue to remove the matter that ran from their sores. It was her custom to afflict her own body with whips, knotted cords, iron girdles, watching, and sleeping upon the ground. Upon Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, she ate very sparingly some unpalatable food, upon Fridays she took nothing except the Bread of Angels, and upon Saturdays, besides the Holy Communion, only bread and water.

Sixth Lesson.

THE self-inflicted hardships of her life brought upon her a disease of the stomach, whereby, when she was seventy years of age, she was brought to the point of death. She bore the daily sufferings of her illness with a smiling face and a brave heart. The only thing of which she was heard to complain was that, her stomach being so weak that she could not keep down any food, she was withheld by reverence for the Sacrament from drawing near to the Lord's Table. Finding herself in these straits she begged the Priest to bring the Bread of God, and as she dared not take It into her mouth, to put It as near as possible to her heart. The Priest did as she wished, and, to the amazement of all present, the Divine Bread at once disappeared from sight, and at the same instant a smile of joyous peace crossed the face of Juliana, and she gave up the ghost.[1] All were confounded until the virgin body was being laid out after death in the accustomed manner. Then there was found upon the left side of the bosom a mark like the stamp of a seal, reproducing the form of the Sacred Host, the mould of which was one of those that bear a figure of Christ crucified. The noise of this and other wonders got for Juliana a reverence not only from Florence, but from all parts of the Christian world, which so increased through the course of four hundred years, that Pope Benedict XIII. commanded an office in her honour to be said by the whole Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and Clement XII., a munificent Protector of the same Order, finding new signs and wonders shedding lustre upon her memory every day, numbered her among Holy Virgins.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Gervase and Protase.)

GERVASE and Protase were the sons of Vitalis and Valeria, both of whom testified even unto death for the Lord Christ's sake, the father at Ravenna, and the mother at Milan. After the victory of their parents, Gervase and Protase gave all the inheritance to the poor, and set free their slaves. This act of theirs stirred up against them a savage hatred on the part of the heathen priests, and when the Count Astasius was about setting forth to war, they believed they had got a good occasion for the destruction of the two godly brethren. They persuaded Astasius that their gods had revealed to them that he had no chance of conquering in the war, unless he had first made Gervase and Protase to deny Christ and to offer sacrifice to the gods. Being commanded so to do, they flatly refused, and Astasius then ordered Gervase to be lashed until he died between the stripes, and Protase to be cudgelled and beheaded. A servant of Christ named Philip took away their dead bodies by stealth, and buried them in his own house, and, in after times, St Ambrose, being warned of God, found them, and bestowed them in an hallowed and honourable place. They suffered at Milan upon the 19th day of June.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of June were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Pope Silverius. He refused to restore the [Eutychian] heretic Anthimus, who had been deposed [from the Patriarchate of Constantinople] by his predecessor, Pope Agapitus, and in consequence of this, through a plot of the wicked Empress Theodora, was exiled by Bellisarius to the island of Ponza, where he died for the Catholic faith, broken down by sufferings and hardships, [in the year 538.]

At Rome, the holy Novatus, son of the blessed Senator Pudens and brother of the holy Priest Timothy, and of Christ's holy Virgins Pudentiana and Praxedes, who were taught in the faith by the Apostles. Their house was turned into a church, and called that of St Pastor, [in the second century.]

At Tomi, in Pontus, the holy martyrs Paul and Cyriacus.

At Petra, in Palestine, the holy Macarius, Bishop [of that see,] who suffered many things of the Arians, and was exiled to Africa, where he fell asleep in the Lord, [in the fourth century.]

At Seville, in Spain, [in the year 630,] the holy Virgin Florentina, sister of the holy Leander, Bishop [of Seville,] and holy Isidore, Bishop [of Seville.]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Gervase and Protase. Prayer as last evening. And in Second Vespers a Commemoration of the following. Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness, &c.," (p. 599.)

Hymn as at First Vespers.

JUNE 20.

St Silverius, Pope and Martyr.

Simple.

All from the Common Office for a Simple Feast of a Bishop and Martyr, except the following. Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

First Lesson from Scripture according to the Season.

Second Lesson.

THIS Silverius was a native of Campania, and succeeded Agapitus in the Papacy [in the year 536.] His orthodoxy and holiness shone brightest in his onslaughts upon heretics, and he showed admirable firmness in upholding a sentence by Agapitus. Agapitus had deposed Anthimus from the Patriarchate of Constantinople for defending the heresy of Eutyches; and Silverius would never allow of his restoration, although the Empress Theodora repeatedly asked him to do so.

Second Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast prevented him, &c., (p. 598.)

---

[1] June 19, 1340.

Third Lesson.

THE woman was enraged at him on this account, and ordered Bellisarius to send Silverius into exile. He was accordingly banished to the island of Ponza, whence he is said to have written these words to Bishop Amator: "I am fed upon the bread of tribulation and the water of affliction, but nevertheless I have not given up, and I will not give up, doing my duty." But sickness and the hardships of his exile soon broke his strength, and he fell asleep in the Lord upon the 20th day of June [in the year of grace 538.] Many miracles shed a lustre upon his grave. He ruled the Church for more than three years, and ordained in the month of December thirteen Priests, five Deacons, and nineteen Bishops for divers Sees.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 1591,] holy Aloysius Gonzaga, of the Society of Jesus, illustrious for his contempt of earthly rank, and for the innocency of his life.

Also at Rome, the holy Virgin Demetria, who was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Julian the Apostate.

At Syracuse, in Sicily, the holy martyrs Rufinus and Marcia.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Cyriacus and Appolinus.

At Maintz, the holy martyr Alban, who after long toil and stern contending for Christ's faith was made worthy of the crown of life.

On the same day, holy Eusebius of Samosata. In the time of the Arian Emperor Constantius he used to visit the Churches of God, disguised as a soldier, to confirm them in the Catholic faith. Under Valens he was banished into Thrace. After peace was restored to the Church in the time of Theodosius he was called back from exile, and was visiting the churches again when an Arian woman dropped a tile upon him from a height which cracked his skull, and so he died a martyr at last, [in the year 380.]

At Iconium, in Lycaonia, the holy martyr Terence, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, [in the year 216,] the holy Confessor Urciscenus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Tongres, holy Martin, Bishop [of that see.]

At Evreux, the holy Abbat Leufroi, [about the year 738.]

JUNE 21.

St Aloysius Gonzaga, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, the Giver of all heavenly gifts, Who in the Angel-lad Aloysius didst join strange innocency with strange penance, be entreated for his sake and by his prayers, and grant unto us who have not followed him in his innocency the grace to imitate him in his penance. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ALOYSIUS, eldest son of Ferdinand Gonzaga, Marquess of Castiglione, was so hurriedly baptized on account of danger that he seemed to be born to heaven almost before he was born to earth,[1] and he so faithfully kept that his first grace that he seemed to have been confirmed therein. From his first use of reason, which he employed to offer himself to God, he led a life more holy day by day. At Florence, when he was nine years old, he made a vow of perpetual virginity before the Altar of the Blessed Virgin, upon whom he always looked as in the place of a mother to him, and by a remarkable mercy from God, he kept this vow wholly and without the slightest impure temptation, either of mind or body, during his whole life. As for any other uprisings of the soul, he began at that age to check them so sternly, that he was never more pricked by even their earliest movements. His senses, and especially his eye-sight, he so mortified, that he never once looked upon the face of Mary of Austria, whom, when he was for several years one of the Pages of honour of the King of Spain, he saluted almost every day; and he even denied himself in part, the pleasure of looking on the face of his own mother. He might indeed have been justly called a fleshless man, or an infleshed angel.

Fifth Lesson.

TO this fettering of the senses he added torture of the body. He kept three days as fasts in every week, and that mostly upon a little bread and water. But indeed he as it were fasted every day, for he hardly ever took so much as an ounce weight of food at breakfast. Often also, even thrice in one day, he would lash himself to flowing of blood with cords, or prick himself with spiked chains. He sometimes used a dog-whip, instead of a scourge, and the rowels of spurs instead of hair-cloth. He privately filled his soft bed with pieces of broken plates, that he might find it easier to wake to pray. He passed great part of the night, clad only in a shirt even in the depth of winter, kneeling on the ground, or lying flat on his face when too weak and weary to remain upright, busied with heavenly thoughts. Sometimes he would keep himself thus for three, four, or five hours, until he had spent at least one without any movement of body or any wandering of mind. Such perseverance obtained for him the reward of being able to keep his understanding quite concentrated in prayer without distraction, as though rapt in God in an unbroken extasy. Desiring to give himself up to Him alone, he overcame, after a strong opposition for three years, the objections of his father, procured the transfer to his brother of his right to the Marquessate, and [on the 25th of November, 1585,] joined at Rome the Society of JESUS, to which he had been called by a voice from heaven when he was at Madrid.

[1] Matre parturiente et periculo ingravescente, infantulus baptizatus est in membro quodam quod de vulvâ fuerat extrusum, toto fere corpore in maternis visceribus adhuc incluso. March 9, 1568.

Sixth Lesson.

IN his very Noviciate he began to be held a master of all godliness. His obedience to even the most trifling rules was absolutely exact, his indifference to the world extraordinary, and his hatred of self implacable. His love of God was so keen that it gradually undermined his bodily strength. Being commanded to give his mind some rest from thinking unceasingly of God, he struggled vainly to distract himself from Him Who met him everywhere. From tender love toward his neighbour, he joyfully ministered to the sick in the public hospitals, [during the great distemper at Rome in 1591,] and in the exercise of this charity he caught a deadly disease. This sickness slowly wore him away, and soon after he had entered on the 24th year of his age, upon the 21st day of June, a day which he had himself foretold, after entreating that he might be scourged, and laid upon the ground to die, he passed away to heaven. What the glory is which he there enjoyeth holy Mary Magdalen de' Pazzi was enabled, by the revelation of God, to behold, and she declared that it was such as she had hardly believed existed even in heaven, and that his holiness and love were so great that she should call him an unknown martyr of charity. On earth God glorified him by many great miracles. These being duly proved, Benedict XIII. inserted the name of this angel-lad in the Kalendar of the Saints, and commended him to all young scholars both as a pattern of innocency and purity, and as a patron.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 29.)

AT that time: JESUS answered and said unto the Sadducees: Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God; for in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (Bk. on Virginity.)

This I say, that virginity is good. And in this I agree likewise, that it is better than marriage. And I will even add, that it is as much more excellent than marriage, as heaven is more noble than earth, or Angels than men, and indeed, if I must say more, even more so. For if Angels neither marry nor are given in marriage, at least, they are not creatures of flesh and blood, they dwell not upon earth, they are exposed to no restless troublings of desire or lust, they need neither meat nor drink, they are not such that sweet sound, or soft song, or the delight of beauty can charm them; there is nothing of this sort to take hold on them and draw them away.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT the human nature which striveth its utmost to follow them, is not so exalted as that of these blessed intelligences. How? Angels marry not nor are given in marriage; neither doth a virgin. Angels stand ever before God, and serve Him; and so doth a virgin. But if a virgin, still weighed down with this body, and unable, like the Angels, to ascend to heaven, doth make it his one great comfort here to be holy in body and in spirit, and to open his heart for a home for the King of heaven—dost thou not see wherein a virgin is higher than an Angel? The excellence of virginity in men over virginity in Angels lieth in this, that it maketh them which are yet earth-dwellers and body-burdened equal to intelligences unshackled by bodies.

Ninth Lesson.

IN what respect, I ask, differed Elijah, Elisha, and John, those great lovers of virginity, from Angels? In nothing, except that their faithfulness was exercised in a dying body. For the rest, if we look carefully, their minds were no otherwise than those of the blessed spirits, and their crown of glory is this that they attained the same honour under conditions less favourable. For consider of what manliness, of what superiority of reason over feeling they must have been possessed, to enable them bravely to fight their way, earth-dwellers and dying creatures as they were, to the bright summit of grace which was theirs.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of June, were born into the better life—

At Verulam, in Britain, the holy martyr Alban, who in the time of Diocletian gave himself up for a clerk whom he had received as a guest, and was beheaded, [in the year 303,] after being scourged and sharply tormented. One of the soldiers who led him to execution was turned to Christ upon the way and was made worthy to be baptised in his own blood.

At Nola, a city of Campania, the blessed Confessor Paulinus, Bishop of that city, [in the year 431,] who, whereas he was a very noble and wealthy person, became for Christ's sake poor and lowly, and then in addition gave himself up for a slave in order to redeem a widow's son whom the Vandals had carried off as a prisoner to Africa when they wasted Campania. He was illustrious, not only on account of his learning and of the abounding holiness of his life, but also on account of his power against evil spirits. His praises have been set forth in their writings with great force by holy Ambrose, Jerome, Austin, and Gregory [the Great.] His body has been brought to Rome, and lieth in honour along with the body of the holy Apostle Bartholomew in the church of that Apostle in the island in the Tiber.

At Mount Ararat, ten thousand holy martyrs, who were crucified in the second century.

At Samaria, one thousand four hundred and eighty holy martyrs, who suffered under Chosroes, King of the Persians.

At Rome is commemorated the translation of the holy Consular Flavius Clemens, martyr, who was put to death for Christ's faith's sake by the Emperor Domitian. His body was found in the church of holy Pope Clement, and there solemnly reburied.

On the same day, holy Niceas, Bishop of Romacium, famous for his teaching and holy life.

At Naples, in Campania, holy John, Bishop [of that see,] whom blessed Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, called unto the kingdom of heaven, [in the year 853.]

In the monastery at Cluny, the holy Virgin Consortia, [in the year 570.]

At Rome, [in the year 1276,] the blessed Pope Innocent V., who, with gentleness and wisdom, toiled for the upholding of the Church, and for the liberty and unity of Christians. His veneration having been represented to Pope Leo XIII., that Pontiff approved and confirmed it.

Vespers are of the following.

JUNE 22.

St Alban, [the first] Martyr [of Britain.]

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Extracted from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, in Whose sight this day is holy, because Thy blessed servant Alban did thereon lift up his last testimony, we beseech Thee to grant that as his feast doth every year make us glad, so his help may ever make us strong. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers Commemorations are made (1) of St Aloysius (Prayer from his Office) and (2) of St Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, Confessor, from the Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) with the Prayer "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede's Church History, Bk. i. ch. 17.)

ALBAN was still a heathen when the decrees of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian set the storm raging against the Christians, and he gave a certain clergyman refuge in his house. As he saw this person intent on prayer and watching by day and night, suddenly the grace of God moved him to seek to copy that ensample of faith and godliness. He was gradually taught by the precious exhortations of his guest; he cast away the darkness of idolatry, and became a Christian with his whole heart.

Fifth Lesson.

UPON a time the persecutors came to the house to search for this clergyman, and Alban, to save his guest and teacher, wrapped himself in the other's great cloak, and allowed the soldiers to take him; who bound him with thongs and led him unto the judge. When the judge found out the trick that had been played upon him, he commanded God's holy Confessor to be smitten by the tormentors, and when he found that he could not overcome him by the torture, nor beguile him from the practice of the Christian faith, he ordered him to be beheaded.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Alban came to the top of the hill which was hard by, the executioner, who was to behead him, was seized with terror from God, cast away his sword, and threw himself at the feet of the Saint, himself desiring rather to die with the martyr or for the martyr. Alban therefore was beheaded there, and received that crown of life which God hath promised unto them that love Him; and along with him was beheaded that soldier who refused to strike God's witness, and of whom we know that, although he was not washed in the water of baptism, he was purified in the laver of his own blood, and was made worthy to enter into the kingdom of heaven. Alban suffered hard by Verulam upon the 22nd day of June.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 597,) the Ninth Lesson is omitted, and in its place is read the following.

Ninth Lesson. (For St Paulinus of Nola.)

PAULINUS, Bishop of Nola, [was born at Bordeaux in the year 353. He] was learned in refined knowledge, and in the Holy Scriptures, and was the author of many elegant and polished poems and discourses. The trait in him which is most celebrated, is his charity. [In 410,] when the Goths ravaged Campania, [where he had a large property,] he spent the whole of his substance, without leaving to himself even the necessaries of life, in feeding the destitute and ransoming the captives. At this time, as writeth St Austin, from having been a man of great wealth, he of his own free will made himself an absolute beggar, but a most glorious Saint, and when the Barbarians took him prisoner, he said to God: "Lord, let them not torture me for the sake of my gold and silver, for Thou knowest whither it is all gone." When the Vandals afterwards harried the same country, a widow came to him, beseeching him that he would ransom her son, and, because he had spent all in works of mercy, he gave himself up to slavery in her son's stead. As a slave he was carried over to Africa, where his owner, who was the King's son-in-law, gave him his garden to keep. But when, through the gift of prophecy, he foretold to his master the King's death, and the King himself in a dream beheld Paulinus sitting between two judges, and wresting the whip out of his hands, his greatness was acknowledged and he was honourably set at large, all his fellow-citizens who were also his fellow-prisoners being freely gifted to him. He went back to Nola to be Bishop there, and by his word and example to stir up all men to Christian godliness. In the midst of his work he was stricken down by a pain in the side, and the chamber where he lay, being shaken by an earthquake, he presently resigned his soul to God, [in the year 431.]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Paulinus, Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of the holy Baptist John.

Upon the same 23rd day of June, were born into the better life—

In England, the holy Queen and Virgin Etheldreda, who passed away to be with the Lord, illustrious for holiness and miracles; whose body was found incorrupt eleven years after her death, [in the year 679.]

At Rome, the holy Priest John, who was beheaded, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, in front of the image of the sun upon the old Salarian Way. His body was buried by the blessed Priest Concordius, hard by the martyrs' burial-place.

Likewise at Rome, under the Emperor Valerian, the holy Virgin and martyr Agrippina, whose body was taken to Sicily and is distinguished for many miracles.

At Sutri, in Tuscany, the holy Priest Felix, whose mouth the Prefect Turcius ordered to be pounded with a stone until he died.

At Nicomedia are commemorated very many holy martyrs who, in the time of Diocletian, wandered in deserts and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth, and for Christ's Name's sake underwent martyrdom with joy.

At Philadelphia, in Arabia, the holy martyr Zeno and Zenas his slave. When Zeno was bound Zenas kissed his chains, and besought him to be pleased to have him for a sharer in his torments, whereupon the soldiers took him, and he and his master received the same crown of martyrdom together, [in the year 304.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from her Office.

JUNE 23.

Midsummer Eve. Eve of the Birth of the holy Baptist John. St Etheldreda, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who year by year dost cause us to rejoice, as upon this day in the feast of thy blessed handmaiden Etheldreda, mercifully grant us help for her sake, the bright example of whose chastity doth still shed its light upon us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ETHELDREDA, daughter of Anna, King of the East Angles, was given in marriage, first, to the Prince of the Gervii in the South, and after his death to Egfrid, King of the Northumbrians. After she had lived with him for twelve years she still remained a virgin. She obtained from the King by constant entreaty permission to leave the cares of the world and to serve King Christ, and entered the monastery of Ebba, father's sister to the said King Egfrid, where she took the veil as a nun. After a year she became Abbess of Ely, where she was a mother to the virgins vowed to God, by her example and her admonition not less than by her unfailing love.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE wore nothing but woollen clothes, and never took hot baths. She seldom ate more than once in the day. She suffered from a tumour in the breast and a pain in the neck, and seven years after she had the office of Abbess she resigned her soul to God, on the 23rd day of June, in the year of Christ 679. She is mentioned with honour in the Roman Martyrology. She was succeeded by her sister Sexburg. Sixteen years after her death her body was found entirely incorrupt, and was then brought inside the church, where it was held in great veneration by the faithful.

Sixth Lesson.

Lesson from St Ambrose, "This day, (p. 643.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644,) the last Lesson is omitted.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 5.)

THERE was, in the days of Herod the King of Judæa, a certain Priest named Zacharias, of the course of Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. i. on Luke.)

The Divine Scriptures teach us that we are behoven to praise the lives, not only of those concerning whom we are to speak honourably, but the lives also of their fathers, so as to show that that which we will praise in our subjects was in them a gift inherited from the bright purity of the source from which they came. What other meaning can the holy Evangelist have had in this place but to glorify St John the Baptist, as well for having been the offspring of such parents, as for his miracles, his life, his gifts, and his sufferings? So likewise is praise ascribed to Hannah, the mother of Samuel; so also did Isaac draw from his parents that noble godliness which he in his turn bequeathed to his children. Thus it is told not only that Zacharias was a Priest, but a Priest of the course of Abia, that is to say, of a family noble among the noblest. "And his wife was of the daughters of Aaron." Thus we see that the noble blood of St John was inherited not only from parents, but from an ancient ancestry, not illustrious indeed by worldly power, but worshipful for the tradition of a sacred succession. Such were the forefathers whom it well became the Forerunner of the Christ to have, that it might manifestly fall to his lot, not as a sudden gift, but as an heir-loom, to preach belief in the coming of the Lord. "And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameless." What do they make of this text who, to take them some consolation for their own sins, hold that man cannot exist without oftentimes sinning, and quote to that end that which is written in Job: "Not one is clean, even though his life on the earth be but one day?" To such we must reply by asking them first to tell us what they mean by a man without sin—whether it be one who hath never sinned, or one who hath ceased to sin. If they mean by a man without sin one who hath never sinned, I myself agree in their position, "for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." (Rom. iii. 23.) But if they mean to deny that he who hath reformed his old crooked ways, and changed his life for a new one, on purpose to avoid sin, cannot avoid sin, I am not able to subscribe to their opinion while I read that "Christ loved the Church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." (Eph. v. 25-27.)

At Lauds a Commemoration of the Eve. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Week-day.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Lord, unto this Thy family the grace to walk alway in the path of salvation, that they, obediently following the exhortation of the blessed Forerunner John, may at the last attain safely unto Him Whom John heralded, even Thy Son our Lord JESUS Christ, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the birthday of the holy Baptist John, the Forerunner of the Lord, the son of Zacharias and Elizabeth, who was filled with the Holy Ghost while yet he was in his mother's womb.

Upon the same 24th day of June is made the commemoration of the very many holy martyrs at Rome who were falsely accused by the Emperor Nero of having set the city on fire, and were by him ordered to be put to death in many divers and most cruel ways. Some were sewn up in the skins of wild beasts and put to be torn by dogs, some were crucified, some were burnt as torches to give light by night; these were all disciples of the Apostles, and the first martyrs whom the Church of Rome, a field fruitful in martyrs, sent to be with the Lord, even before the slaying of the Apostles themselves.

There also the holy martyrs Faustus and twenty-three others.

At Satala, in Armenia, the holy brethren Orentius, Eros, Pharnacius, Firminus, Firmus, Cyriacus, and Longinus, all soldiers and all martyrs. Because they were Christians the Emperor Maximian expelled them from the army, separated them from one another, and sent them to divers places, where in sorrow and suffering they fell asleep in the Lord, [about the year 306.]

In the village of Créteil, in the country near Paris, the holy martyrs Agoard and Agilbert, with others, both men and women, who cannot be counted.

At Autun, the holy Confessor Simplicius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Lobbes, the holy Theodulf, Bishop [of that see.]

At Style, in Calabria, holy John, surnamed Therestus, famous for his praise as a monk, and for his holy life.

If the following day should be the Feast of Corpus Christi, that of St John is transferred to June 25, any other Feast being moved on for the purpose beyond the Octave, if not a Double of the First or Second Class, and if so, to the next day not occupied by a Double. But if the Feast displaced be not that of a Doctor, and not above the rank of a Double, its office will be altogether omitted.

JUNE 24.

Midsummer Day.

The Birthday of St John the Baptist.

Double of the First Class, with an Octave.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.[1]

First Antiphon. He shall go before Him * in the spirit and power of Elias, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

Second Antiphon. His name is John. * He shall drink neither wine nor strong drink, and many shall rejoice at his birth.

Third Antiphon. Elizabeth was barren and well stricken in years, * but from her womb was born John the Fore-runner of the Lord.

Fourth Antiphon. The child shall be great * in the sight of the Lord, for His hand is with him.

Fifth Antiphon. The child shall be called a Nazarite. * He shall drink neither wine nor strong drink, neither shall he eat any unclean thing, even from his mother's womb.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Chapter and Prayer from the following Lauds.

---

[1] Antiphons from Luke i. 17, 63, 13, 14, 7, 15, 66; Judges xiii. 4 5, 7.

Hymn.[1]

GREATEST of Prophets, messenger appointed
Paths for thy Lord and Saviour to prepare,
O for a tongue unsoiled, thy praise and wonders
Meet to declare!

From highest heaven Gabriel descending,
Gave to thy father promise of thy birth,
Gave thee thy name, and for thy life predicted
Deeds of great worth.

Yet did that father falter at the promise;
Dumb was he struck for doubting of the same,
Till at thy birth his voice, again returning,
Uttered thy name.

Pent in the closet of the womb, thy Saviour
Thou didst adore within His chamber shrined;
Thus did each parent in their unborn offspring
Mysteries find.

Praise we our God, Who dwelleth in the highest,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest;
And may He grant us while on earth, forgiveness,
In heaven rest. Amen.

Verse.[2] There was a man sent from God.
Answer. Whose name was John.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin.[3] When Zacharias went into the Temple of the Lord, the Angel Gabriel appeared unto him, standing on the right side of the altar of incense.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord He is the King of His Fore-runner. * O come, let us worship Him!

Hymn.[4]

WHILE yet a child thou dwelledst in the desert,
Turmoil of cities leaving far away,
Lest into paths of idle conversation
Thy tongue should stray.

Ruggèd thy raiment from the camel taken,
Leathern the girdle round thy body bound,
Painful thy food, the locust and wild honey
Scantily found.

Prophets before thee presaging the future
Sang in dim strains the Day-star that should be,
Thou with thine eyes the world's august Redeemer
Hadst grace to see.

Through the wide world none greater born of woman
E'er has been seen than thou, most holy Saint,
Who didst baptize the King that came to wash us
From sin's foul taint.

Praise we our God, Who dwelleth in the highest,
Father and Son and Spirit ever blest,
And may He give us while on earth forgiveness—
In heaven rest. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee, * and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. The LORD said unto me: Thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee; * fear not; and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen rage, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. Be not afraid of their faces; * for I am with thee, saith the LORD.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. There was a man sent from God—
Answer. Whose name was John.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Book of Jeremiah the Prophet (i. 1.)

THE words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the Priests that were in Anathoth, in the Land of Benjamin: to whom the word of the LORD came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign. It came also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month. Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying: Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee; and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.

First Responsory.

[5] There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.
Verse. John was in the wilderness, preaching the baptism of repentance.
Answer. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

Second Lesson.

THEN said I: Ah! Lord GOD! Behold, I cannot speak, for I am a child! But the LORD said unto me: Say not, I am a child: for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee; and whatsoever I command thee, thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces, for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD. Then the LORD put forth His hand, and touched my mouth; and the LORD said unto me: Behold, I have put My words in thy mouth. See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out and to pull down, and to destroy and to throw down, and to build, and to plant.

Second Responsory.

Elizabeth, the wife of Zacharias, was the mother of a mighty man, even of John the Baptist, the Fore-runner of the Lord, who made straight in the desert an highway for the Lord.[6]
Verse. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.
Answer. Who made straight in the desert an highway for the Lord.

Third Lesson. (17.)

THOU therefore gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak unto them all that I command thee. Be not dismayed at their faces, for I will make thee not to fear their faces. For, behold, I have made thee this day a defenced city, and iron pillar, and brazen walls against the whole land, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the Priests thereof, and against the people of the land. And they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee.

Third Responsory.

Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee; and I ordained thee a Prophet unto the nations.

Verse. [1] A man beloved of God and men, he was had in honour.

Answer. And I ordained thee a Prophet unto the nations.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I ordained thee a Prophet unto the nations.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Lord put forth His hand, and touched my mouth, * and the Lord ordained me a Prophet unto the nations.

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Second Antiphon. Behold, I have put My words in thy mouth; * see, I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms.

Ps. v. Give ear to my words, &c., (p. 49.)

Third Antiphon. [2] The Lord hath called me from the womb; * from the bowels of my mother hath He made mention of my name.

Ps. viii. O Lord, our Lord, &c., (p. 4.)

Verse. [3] Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater—

Answer. Than John the Baptist.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (20*th on the Saints.*)

BESIDES the most holy Birthday of the Lord, we find celebrated in the Gospel the birth of only one other, namely, that of the blessed Baptist, John. As regardeth all others among God's holy and chosen ones we know that that day is observed whereon, with their work finished, and the world conquered and finally trampled down, they were born from this into a better life, even one of everlasting blessedness. In others is honoured the crowning of the struggle on their last day of dying life, but in John is honoured the first day; in him the very beginning is found hallowed. And the reason of this is, without doubt, because he was sent from God to bear witness to the coming of the Light, lest when It came It might take the darkness by surprise, and the darkness might not comprehend It. Now, John was a figure of the Old Testament, and showed in his own person a typical embodiment of the Law; and therefore John heralded beforehand the coming of the Saviour, even as the Law was our schoolmaster to bring us to the grace of Christ. (Gal. iii. 24.)

Fourth Responsory.

The Angel of the Lord was sent down unto Zacharias, saying: Thou shalt beget a son in thine old age; and his name shall be called John the Baptist.

Verse. The child shall be great in the sight of the Lord; for His hand is with him.

Answer. And his name shall be called John the Baptist.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT as touching this, that he prophesied while yet in the hidden depths of his mother's womb, and while himself lightless bore testimony to the truth, we are to understand it as a figure how that while himself wrapped round with the veil and carnal ordinances of the letter, he by the spirit preached unto the world a Redeemer, and testified that Jesus is our Lord even while for himself, working under the law, the birth of the new dispensation was still in the womb of the future, and not come to day. The Jews were "estranged from the womb," that is from the Law, that womb heavy with the Christ That was to be; they "went astray from the belly, speaking lies," (Ps. lvii. 4;) and therefore John "came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe." (John i. 7.)

Fifth Responsory.

This is the well-beloved Fore-runner, a burning and a shining light [4] before the Lord. For even this is John, who made straight in the desert an highway for our God. [5] This also is he which bare witness, saying: Behold the Lamb of God! And his light lightened the minds of men.

Verse. He shall go before Him in the spirit and power of Elias.

Answer. For even this is John, who made straight in the desert an highway for our God. This also is he which bare witness, saying: Behold the Lamb of God! And his light lightened the minds of men.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT as for this, that "when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples" (Matth. xi. 2)—this is the Law sending to the Gospel. For John here was a figure of the Law, imprisoned in ignorance, lying in the dark, and in a hidden place, and he was fettered through Jewish misunderstanding within the bonds of the letter. But of him was it said, as is written in the Blessed Evangelist (John v. 35:) "He was a burning and a shining light"—that is to say, that, when the whole world was wrapt in the night of ignorance, this Saint was kindled by the fire of the Holy Ghost, to show before men the light of salvation, and at the hour of the thickest darkness of sin, appeared like a bright morning star to herald the rising of that Sun so right gloriously radiant, the Son of righteousuess, Christ our Lord. And this is why John said of himself: "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord." (John i. 15.)

[2] Isa. xlix. 1.

[3] Matth. xi. 11.

[4] John v. 35.

John i. 15, 29.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] They made signs to his father, how he would have him called; and he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying: His name is John.

Verse. The mouth of Zacharias was opened, and he prophesied, saying:

Answer. His name is John.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. His name is John.

THIRD NOCTURN.[2]

First Antiphon. The Lord hath made my mouth * like a sharp sword; in the shadow of His hand hath He hid me.

Ps. xiv. LORD, Who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Second Antiphon. And now, saith the LORD That formed me from the womb * to be His servant: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be My salvation unto the end of the earth.

Ps. xx. The king shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. Kings shall see, and princes shall arise, and worship the Lord thy God, Who hath chosen thee.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. Elizabeth, the wife of Zacharias, was the mother of a mighty man—

Answer. Even of John the Baptist, the Fore-runner of the Lord.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 57.)

ELIZABETH'S full time came that she should be delivered, and she brought forth a son. And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her, and they rejoiced with her. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. ii. Comm. on Luke i.)

Elizabeth's full time came that she should be delivered, and she brought forth a son. And her neighbours rejoiced with her. The birth of a Saint is a joy for many, for it is a good to all. Righteousness is an help to all, and therefore when a righteous man is born it is an heralding of his life, which is still to come, that the helpful excellency of his future should be hailed by the, as it were, prophetic joy of the neighbours. It is well that we should be told concerning the prophet, while he was yet in the womb, that we may know how that Mary was there; but we hear nothing of his childhood, because we know that it was safe and strong through the nearness of the Lord, Himself then in that womb which was free from the sorrows of pregnancy. And therefore we read in the Gospel nothing touching him save his coming, the annunciation thereof to his father, the leap which he gave in the womb, and his crying in the wilderness.

Seventh Responsory.

The Fore-runner of the Lord cometh, to whom He Himself bare witness, saying: Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist.

Verse. [3] A Prophet? Yea, and much more than a Prophet. This is he of whom the Saviour saith:

Answer. Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist.

Eighth Lesson.

IT was not for him to feel childishness, who beyond all use of nature or of his age, when as yet he lay in his mother's womb, leapt at once "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." (Eph. iv. 13.) It is strange how that the Holy Evangelist hath judged meet to tell us that they thought to call the child Zacharias, after the name of his father, that thou mayest notice that the mother would have none of the names whereby their kindred were called, but only that name which the Holy Ghost had dictated, and which the Angel had told before unto Zacharias. The dumb man had certainly not been able to tell his wife by what name to call the child, and Elizabeth must needs have learnt by revelation what she could not have heard from her husband.

Eighth Responsory.

The Angel Gabriel appeared unto Zacharias, and said: Thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John; and many shall rejoice at his birth.

Verse. For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink.

Answer. And many shall rejoice at his birth.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And many shall rejoice at his birth.

Ninth Lesson.

"HIS name is John"—that is, it is not for us to choose a name now for him to whom God hath given a name already. He hath a name, which we know, but it is not one of our choosing. To receive a name from God is one of the honours of the Saints. Thus was it that Jacob's name was no more called Jacob but Israël, because he saw God face to face. (Gen. xxxii. 28.) Thus was it that our Lord JESUS was named before He was born, with a name not given by an Angel, but by the Father. Thou seest that Angels tell that which they have been bidden to tell, not matters of their own choosing. Nor oughtest thou to wonder that Elizabeth named a name which she had not heard, since it had been revealed to her by the same Holy Ghost Who had commanded the Angel to tell it.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

Fifth Antiphon. Thou, child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest; * for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare His ways.

Chapter. (Isa. xlix. 1.)

LISTEN, O isles, unto me, and hearken, ye people, from far: The LORD hath called me from the womb—from the bowels of my mother hath He made mention of my name.

Hymn.[1]

O BLESSED Saint of high renown and honour,
Called in thy mother's womb, by God ordained,
Mightiest Martyr, dweller in the desert,
Virgin unstained.

Saints with their crowns shall glitter, some with increase
Thirtyfold, some with double wreaths shall shine,
Yet shall no other diadem of glory
Glitter like thine.

Come thou again, the crooked highways straighten,
Break the hard rocks that in our bosoms rest,
Meet for our Lord, Who ever cometh onward
With footsteps blest.

Praise we our God, Who dwelleth in the highest,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest;
And may He grant us, while on earth, forgiveness,
In heaven rest. Amen.

Verse. The child shall be great in the sight of the Lord—

Answer. For His hand is with him.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. And the mouth of Zacharias was opened, * and he prophesied, saying: Blessed be the Lord God of Israël.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast made this day to be honourable in our eyes because of the Birth of the blessed John, graciously quicken Thy people with spiritual joy, and order the minds of all the faithful in the way of everlasting salvation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 25th day of June, were born into the better life—

In the country of Golet, near Nusco, the holy Confessor William, father of the hermits of Monte Vergine.

At Berœa, holy Sosipater, disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul.

At Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Lucy, with twenty-two others.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Gallican. This was a man of Consular rank, who had received the honour of a triumph and was a personal friend of the Emperor Constantine. He was converted to the faith of Christ by holy John and Paul. After his conversion he withdrew to Ostia with holy Hilarinus, when he gave himself entirely to the service of strangers and the sick. This got noised abroad in all the world so that people came from all parts to see a man who had been a patrician and a consul washing the feet of the poor, laying the table, pouring water on the guests' hands, ministering carefully to the sick, and performing other offices of mercy. He was turned out of Ostia under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and went to Alexandria. There the judge Raucian would needs have him sacrifice, and forasmuch as he would not, caused him to be beheaded, and so he became Christ's martyr.

At Sibapolis, in Syria, the holy Virgin and martyr Febronia; on account of her steadfastness in faith and chastity during the persecution under Diocletian, the judge Lysimachus ordered her to be first beaten with rods and tormented upon the rack, then torn with combs and burnt with fire; afterwards her teeth were hammered out and her breasts cut off, and then she was beheaded, and so passed away to her Divine Bridegroom prepared with all these sufferings as a bride adorned for her husband.

At Besançon, in Gaul, the holy martyr Antidius, Bishop of Besançon, who for Christ's faith's sake was slain by the Vandals.

At Reggio, holy Prosper of Aquitaine, Bishop of that city, famous for his learning and godliness, who stoutly contended for the Catholic faith against the Pelagians.

At Turin, the holy Confessor Maximus, Bishop of Turin, very famous for his teaching and holiness.

In Holland, the holy Confessor Adelbert, the disciple of holy Willibrord, Archbishop [of Utrecht.]

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast given unto us Thy Saints to be an ensample and an help unto our weakness in following the path that leadeth unto life, grant unto us in such wise to honour the worthy deeds of the blessed Abbat William, that we may thereby both gain his prayers, and tread in his footsteps. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS William was born of noble parents at Vercelli in Lombardy. He was but little over fourteen years of age, when, impelled by a strange earnestness for holiness, he undertook a pilgrimage to Compostella, to the far-famed Church of St James. This journey he made clad in a single garment, wearing an iron girdle wound two-fold round his body, and with bare feet. He accomplished his object under the severest hardships of cold and heat, hunger and thirst, and at the great danger of his life. After his return to Italy, he undertook a new pilgrimage, this time to the Holy Sepulchre of the Lord. But in the way of fulfilling this, there arose divers and most grievous obstacles, whereby the hand of God drew the lad to the higher and holier life of a monk. He dwelt in the town of Monte Solicolo for two years, which he passed in constant prayer, watching, sleeping upon the ground, and fasting. At the end of this time, the power of God made him the mean to restore a blind man to sight. The fame of this miracle became so noised abroad, that William could no longer remain unknown. His thoughts turned again towards Jerusalem, and he again entered cheerfully on the journey.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was again hindered by a vision from God, and remained among the Italians to be more useful, and to bring forth more fruit than he would have done among strangers. With extraordinary speed, he built a monastery upon the summit of Monte Vergiliano, ever since named Monte Vergine, [between Nola and Benevento.] Thither he called around him, as his comrades, devout men, and schooled them into a way of life most closely following the commands and counsels of the Gospel, in great part by a rule taken from the constitutions of Blessed Benedict, and supplemented by his own words, and the example of his own holy life.

Sixth Lesson.

AS other monasteries were raised, the holy life of William became more known day by day, and brought men to him from all quarters, drawn by the sweet savour of his godliness, and the fame of his miracles. At his prayers the dumb spake, the deaf heard, the withered were strengthened, and they that suffered under divers and incurable diseases received health. He turned water into wine, and openly worked many other miracles. Among all these things it must be told that a wretched woman sought him to lure him to impurity, but he raked hot embers out upon the floor and cast himself down upon them, and wallowed among them, and escaped unhurt. When this thing came to the knowledge of Roger I., King of Naples, it roused in him the highest reverence for the man of God. At the last, after foretelling his own death to the King and to others, and full of good works and miracles, he fell asleep in the Lord, in the year of salvation 1142.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.)

Lauds Prayer throughout the Office. A Commemoration is made of the Octave of the Birth of St John taken from the Lauds of his feast.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Celian Mount, the holy brethren John and Paul, both martyrs. John was provost of the household, and Paul chief steward of the Virgin Constantia, daughter of the Emperor Constantine. Under the Emperor Julian the Apostate they both received the palm of martyrdom by the sword.

At Trent, [about the year 400,] the holy Vigilius, Bishop [of that see,] who, because he was striving to stamp out utterly the last remains of idolatry, was stoned by savage men, and so compassed martyrdom for Christ's Name's sake.

At Cordova, in Spain, [in the tenth century,] the holy child Pelagius, who crowned his confession of the faith with a glorious martyrdom, by being torn to pieces with iron pincers, by order of Abdu-'l-Rahman, King of the Saracens.

At Valenciennes, [at the beginning of the ninth century,] the holy martyrs Salvius, Bishop of Angoulême, and Superius. Also the commemoration of the holy Anthelm, Bishop of Bellay, [in the year 1178.]

At Poitou, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest and Confessor Maxentius, who was famous for miracles.

At Thessalonica, [likewise in the sixth century,] the holy Hermit David.

On the same day, [in the sixth century also,] the holy Virgin Perseveranda.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

JUNE 26.

The Holy Martyrs John and Paul.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

If these are entirely of SS. John and Paul, the Antiphons are taken from Lauds. Usually, as concerns SS. John and Paul, they begin with the Chapter.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin.[1] The righteous stand in the Presence of the Lord, and are not divided the one from the other; they drank of the Lord's Cup, and they are called Friends of God.

Prayer from Lauds.

A Commemoration is made of St William of Monte Vergine, (Prayer from his Office,) and of the Birth of St John, taken from his Second Vespers.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603.)

First Responsory.

[2] These are two men full of mercy, who stand in the presence of the Lord, the Lord of the whole earth.

Verse. These are two olive trees, and two candlesticks, giving light in the presence of the Lord.

Answer. The Lord of the whole earth.

Second Responsory.

I saw men standing together clad in shining raiment; and the Angel of the Lord spake unto me, saying: These men are holy, for they are the friends of God.

Verse. And I beheld a mighty Angel of God, flying through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, and saying:

Answer. These men are holy, for they are the friends of God.

Third and remaining Responsories from the Common Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN and Paul were two Roman brethren, the godly and trustworthy servants of Constantia, daughter of Constantine. At her death they spent in feeding Christ's poor the property which she left them. Julian the Apostate asked them to enter his household, but they bravely answered that they would not be servants to one who had run away from the service of JESUS Christ. Julian gave them ten days to consider on their choice, whether, at the end of that time, they would cleave to him, and sacrifice to Jupiter, or most surely die.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS interval they spent in distributing to poor creatures all that remained of their goods, that they might be quite free to depart hence to the Lord, and so succoured many by whom they have long since been received into everlasting habitations. On the tenth day Terentian, Præfect of the Prætorian Cohort, was sent to them, bringing with him the image of Jupiter. He explained to them the command of the Emperor, that they should worship the said image or die. They were engaged in prayer, but answered him that for their loyalty to Christ, Whom their understanding acknowledged and their mouths confessed to be God, they felt no hesitation in choosing to suffer death.

[2] Quaintly adapted from Zech. iv. and Apoc. xi. 3, &c.

Sixth Lesson.

TERENTIAN, to avoid the uproar, which might have been caused by their public execution, caused their heads to be cut off at home where they then were. They lifted up their last earthly testimony upon the 26th day of June, [in the year of our Lord 362.] They were privately buried, and a story set about that they had been sent into exile. The fact of their death was made generally known by the unclean spirits by whom the bodies of many were tormented, and among others that of Terentian's own son, who was possessed with a devil, and delivered by being brought to the grave of the Martyrs. By this miracle he was led to believe in Christ, and so likewise was his father Terentian, who is said to have been the writer of the life of these blessed Martyrs.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 1, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 610.)

Eighth Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood, &c., (p. 607.)

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Paul and John * aid unto Julian: We worship One God, Who hath made heaven and earth.

Second Antiphon. Paul and John * said unto Terentian: If thy Lord be Julian, keep thou at peace with him, but as for us, we have no other Lord but the Lord JESUS Christ.

Third Antiphon. John and Paul, * when they had heard the tyrannous command of Julian, began to disperse abroad their goods among the poor.

Fourth Antiphon. O ye holy Spirits and Souls of the righteous, bless ye the Lord. Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. John and Paul * said unto Gallican: Make thy vow unto the God of heaven, and thou shalt be yet a greater conqueror than ever thou hast been heretofore.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. These are the holy ones, who for the love of Christ, recked nothing of the threats of men. In the kingdom of heaven the holy martyrs are filled with joy in the company of Angels. O how precious in the sight of the Lord was the death of these His saints! And now they stand day and night in His presence: and are not divided the one from the other.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY God, fill us, we beseech Thee, with the twofold gladness which doth flow down upon this bright day from the glory of Thy blessed servants John and Paul, whom one faith and one suffering made to be brothers indeed. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Birth of St John Baptist, taken from the Lauds of the Feast.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 27th day of June, were born into the better life—

In Galatia, holy Crescens, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul. He made a journey into Gaul, where by the word of his preaching he brought many to believe in Christ. Then he returned home, where he was specially appointed Bishop till the end of his life. He strengthened the Galatians in the work of the Lord, and at last finished his testimony under Trajan.

At Cordova, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Zoilus and nineteen others.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy martyr Anectus. In the persecution under Diocletian he exhorted others to martyrdom, and by his prayers caused the idols to fall down; wherefore the President Urban caused him to be beaten by ten soldiers, and his hands and feet, and lastly his head, cut off, and so he received the crown of martyrdom.

At Constantinople, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest Samson, the harbourer of the poor.

In the country of Tours, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest and Confessor John.

At Waradin, in Hungary, [in the year 1095,] holy King Ladislaw, who is famous for eminent miracles even unto the present day.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin.[1] These are two olive trees, and two candlesticks, giving light in the presence of the Lord; these have power to shut heaven with clouds, and have power again to open the gates thereof, for their tongues are become keys of heaven.

Commemoration of the Birth of St John, from Second Vespers of the Feast.

JUNE 27.

Fourth Day within the Octave of the Birth of St John the Baptist.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Basil the Great, Archbishop [of Cæsarea-in-Pontus.] (Hom. ii. on Ps. xxviii.)

"THE voice of the LORD is upon the waters." What voice is this? What are these waters? Let us take that which is here said as a prophecy. Thou rememberest how that "this is the record of John, when the Jews [sent Priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed and denied not, but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that Prophet? And he answered, No. Then] said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. [What sayest thou of thyself?] He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness." (John i. 19-23; Isa. xl. 3, 4.) Therefore, John is the "voice of the LORD." "This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send My messenger before Thy face" (Luke vii. 27) "to make ready a people prepared for the Lord" (i. 17.) This "voice upon the waters" was heard upon those of Jordan, wherein he baptized, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (iii. 3.) Nor was this voice heard upon the waters of Jordan only, but "also, in Enon near to Salim, because there was much water there." (John iii. 23.)

---

[1] Apoc. xi. 4, 6.

Fifth Lesson.

"THE voice of the LORD upon the waters," then, is John upon baptism. Then also "the God of glory thundereth." For [when "JESUS came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptised of John in Jordan . . . .] there came a voice from heaven, saying, This is My Beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased." (Mark i. 9, 11.) Then also was it true that "The Lord is upon many waters" when He was pleased "to come [from Galilee to Jordan] unto John, to be baptised of him . . . . . . to fulfil all righteousness" (Matth. iii. 13, 15,) "which is of the law." (Rom. x. 5.) "The voice of the LORD is powerful"—powerful to heal the weaknesses of the people through the baptism of repentance, baptizing through John with water unto repentance. (Matth. iii. 11.) "The voice of the LORD is powerful," which saith "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," (2,) and "Bring forth fruits meet for repentance." (8.)

Sixth Lesson.

"THE voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars." This may well be said of him who, being sent as a messenger before the face of the Lord, to make ready for Him a prepared people, made the crooked places straight, by breaking down and treading flat the haughty growths of ungodliness that had lifted themselves up to block out the acknowledgment of God. He by whom every valley was exalted, and every mountain and hill was made low, the same was he who broke the cedars, and made straight in the desert an highway for our God, by laying low in repentance the hearts that were haughty, and proud, and lifted up. The Lord availing Himself of that preparation, smote down at His coming every power that withstood Him, which are spoken of under a similitude as the cedars of Lebanon. For the Lord "must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet," (1 Cor. xv. 25,) and trodden down these cedars.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 57.)

ELIZABETH'S full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son. And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her. And so on.

From the Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. ii. on Luke i.)

"And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied." Behold how good is God, and how ready to forgive sinners! Not only doth He give back that which He hath taken away, but He addeth moreover such and such things, more than either we ask or think. He that had hitherto been dumb, now speaketh prophecy. But the greatest grace of God is in this, that he which had denied, now maketh profession. Therefore let no man despair, nay, though he well knoweth what have been his past sins, let him never give up hope of a reward from God. If thou knowest how to amend thy crooked ways, God knoweth how to turn away the judgments of His anger.

Eighth Lesson.

"AND thou, child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest." How gracefully, while as he prophesieth of the Lord, he turneth his address to the Prophet, making mention of this great mercy of the Lord along with the others, lest, while he openly gave thanks for his own benefits, he should seem to keep the silence of unthankfulness regarding those which he knew had been given to his boy. But some will perhaps deem it his folly that he addressed his discourse to a babe of eight days old. Verily, if we call to mind that John heard the voice of Mary's salutation when he was in his mother's womb, we shall understand how much rather he could hear the voice of his father now when he was born.

Ninth Lesson.

ZACHARIAS knew well that a Prophet hath ears which open under the influence of the Spirit of God, instead of that of advancing age. He that had sense to leap in the womb for joy, wanted not understanding. At the same time remark unto how many Zacharias prophesied, and though both he and his wife were filled with the Holy Ghost, yet all things are done in due order, and the woman studieth rather to learn the things of God than to teach them.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul.

Upon the same 28th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Pope Leo II.

At Lyons, in Gaul, the holy martyr Irenæus, Bishop [of that city.] He was, as holy Jerome writeth, a disciple of the blessed Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, and hardly removed from the times of the Apostles. He strove much against heretics both by word and by writing, and was crowned with a glorious martyrdom, along with nearly all the [faithful] people of his city, in the persecution under Severus.

In Alexandria, in the same persecution under Severus, the holy martyrs Plutarch, Serenus, Heraclides, (who was still under preparation for baptism,) Heron, (a recent convert), another Serenus, Rhais, (who also was being prepared for baptism,) Potamiena, and her mother Marcella. Of these the most famous is the Virgin Potamiena. She first endured extraordinary contendings for her virginity, and then suffered terrible and unheard-of torments for her faith, and at the last was burnt, along with her mother.

On the same day, the holy martyr Papius, who, in the persecution under Diocletian, was scourged and put into a vessel filled with boiling oil and fat, and suffered other horrid torments, before he was crowned by being beheaded.

At Utrecht, the holy martyr Bishop Benignus.

At Cordova, the holy martyr, the monk Argymirus, who was slain for Christ's faith's sake, in the persecution by the Arabs, [in the ninth century.]

At Rome, the holy Pope and Confessor Paul I.

Vespers are of the following.

JUNE 28.

St Leo II., Pope and Confessor.

Semi-double.

Should this day be a Sunday, the Office of the Sunday is said with a Commemoration of St Leo in First Vespers and Lauds; and the Ninth Lesson will be an historical one, formed of the three for St Leo. On the Saturday on which is said the Office of St John, the Ninth Lesson is from the Homily of the Vigil of the Apostles; a Commemoration of the same being made at Lauds only.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make the blessed Pope Leo to work deeds worthy of Thy Saints, mercifully grant that we who do keep glad holiday in his memory, may steadfastly follow after the ensample of his life. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Birth of St John, from his Second Vespers.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

POPE Leo II. was a Sicilian. He was learned in sacred and worldly letters in the Greek and Latin tongues, and was moreover an excellent musician. He re-arranged and improved the music of the sacred hymns and Psalms used in the Church. He approved the acts of the sixth general Council, which was held at Constantinople, under the Presidency of the Legates of the Apostolic See, in the presence of the Emperor Constantine [the Bearded,] the Patriarchs of Constantinople and Antioch, and one hundred and seventy Bishops. Leo also translated the decrees of the Council from Greek into Latin.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was in this Council that Cyrus, Sergius, and Pyrrhus were condemned for teaching that there is in Christ only one Will and one Working. Leo broke the pride of the Archbishops of Ravenna, who had puffed themselves up under the power of the Exarchs to set at naught the power of the Apostolic See. Wherefore he decreed that the elections of the clergy of Ravenna should be nothing worth, until they had been confirmed by the authority of the Bishop of Rome.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was a very father to the poor. Not by money only, but by his work, his labours, and his advice he relieved the poverty and loneliness of widows and orphans. He was leading all to live holy and godly lives, not by mere preaching, but by his own life, when he fell asleep in the Lord, having sat as Pope nine months and twenty-seven days.[1] He was buried in the Church of St Peter upon the 28th day of June. In the month of June he held one ordination whereat he ordained nine Priests, three Deacons, and twenty-three Bishops for divers places.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.) The Third is omitted or read as one with the Second to make room for the Ninth Lesson.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Eve of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xxi. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS saith to Simon Peter: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these? And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (123*rd Tract on John.*)

Thrice had Peter denied his Lord and thrice in reparation did he confess Him, lest fear should have had more service of his tongue than love, or the dread of death be found to have drawn out more words than the Presence of the Life. If to deny the Shepherd have been the outcome of fear, let the feeding of the Lord's flock be a token of love. Such as feed Christ's sheep with the mind that the sheep are their own rather than Christ's, do prove against themselves that they love not Christ, but, contrariwise, they do their work from the lust of glory, or lordship, or gain, not from love of obedience, and helpfulness, and doing God's pleasure.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Birth of St John.

Then, of the Eve of the Holy Apostles; Antiphon, and Verse and Answer of the Week-day, and this

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY God, we pray Thee mercifully to grant unto us peace from all trouble, unto whom Thou hast given a sure foundation upon the rock of Thine Apostle's confession. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy

[1] The dates seem uncertain. Alban Butler says he reigned a year and seven months, and died May 23, 683; the Petits Bollandistes, vii. 418, give ten months and seventeen days, July 4 as the date of his death, and June 28 (a year after?) as that of his burial at St Peter's.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 29th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Apostles Peter and Paul. They suffered under the Emperor Nero upon the same day of the same year. Peter was crucified in the city with his head downwards, and is buried at the Vatican beside the Triumphal Way, surrounded by the veneration of the whole world. Paul was beheaded with the sword, and buried beside the Ostian Way, surrounded by the same honour.

At Argenten, in Gaul, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Marcellus, who was beheaded for Christ's faith's sake, along with a soldier named Anastasius.

At Genoa, [in the sixth century,] holy Syrus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Narni, holy Cassius, Bishop of that city; of him holy Gregory hath on record that hardly any day of his life passed wherein he did not offer up unto God Almighty the offerings of atonement; and therewith his life accorded well, for he gave away in charity all that he possessed, and at the hour of the sacrifice he wept abundantly. It was his use to come to Rome every year for the birthday of the Apostles, and upon that day, when he had celebrated solemn Mass, and had given unto all the Body of the Lord and the Peace, he passed away to be ever with the Lord.

In Cyprus, holy Mary, the mother of John whose surname was Mark.

In the country of Sens, [in the third century,] the holy Virgin Benedicta.

Vespers are of the following.

JUNE 29.

Feast of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul.

Double of the First Class, with an Octave.

Whatever is not specially given or referred to here is as in the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[1]

IT is no earthly summer's ray
That sheds this golden brightness round,
Crowning with heavenly light the day
The Princes of the Church were crowned.

The blessed Seer to whom was given
The hearts of men to teach and school,
And he who keeps the key of heaven
For those on earth that own his rule.

Fathers of mighty Rome, whose word
Shall pass the doom of life or death,
By humble cross and bleeding sword
Well have they won their laurel wreath.

O happy Rome, made holy now
By these two Martyrs' glorious blood,
Earth's best and fairest cities bow,
By thy superior claims subdued.

For thou alone art worth them all,
City of Martyrs! Thou alone
Canst cheer our pilgrim hearts, and call
The Saviour's sheep to Peter's throne.

All honour, power, and praise be given
To Him Who reigns in bliss on high,
For endless, endless years in heaven,
One only God in Trinity. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee are given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

No Commemoration is made.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (iii. 1.)

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.[2] And a certain man, lame from his mother's womb, was carried; whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple, which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple. Who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms. And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said: Look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

First Responsory.

Simon Peter, before I called thee out of the ship, I knew thee, and appointed thee for a captain over My people. And I have given unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. And I have given unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Second Lesson.

THEN Peter said: Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee; In the Name of JESUS Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and soles received strength. And he, leaping up, stood and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. And all the people saw him walking, and praising God. And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple, and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. Dr Faber. Hymn by Elpidia, the wife of Boëtius.

[2] I.e., None.

Second Responsory.

[1] Simon Peter, if thou lovest Me, feed My sheep. Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. I will lay down my life for Thy sake.

Verse. [2] If I should die with Thee, I will not deny Thee.

Answer. I will lay down my life for Thy sake.

Third Lesson.

AND as the lame man held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering. And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people: Ye men of Israël, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or strength we had made this man to walk? The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified His Son JESUS, Whom ye delivered up, and denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go. But ye denied the Holy One, and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Author of life, Whom God hath raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses. And His Name, through faith in His Name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

Third Responsory.

Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo the Great. (First for the Birthday of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, in the joy of all the holy Feast-days the whole world is partaker. There is but one love of God, and whatsoever is solemnly called to memory, if it hath been done for the salvation of all, must needs be worth the honour of a joyful memorial at the hands of all. Nevertheless, this feast which we are keeping to-day, besides that world-wide worship which it doth of right get throughout all the earth, doth deserve from this city of ours an outburst of gladness altogether special and our own. In this place it was that the two chiefest of the Apostles did so right gloriously finish their race. And upon this day whereon they lifted up that their last testimony, let it be in this place that the memory thereof receiveth the chiefest of jubilant celebrations. O Rome! these twain are the men who brought the light of the Gospel of Christ to shine upon thee! These are they by whom thou, from being the teacher of lies, wast turned into a learner of the truth.

Fourth Responsory.

[3] Lord, if it be Thou, bid me come unto Thee on the water! And JESUS stretched forth His Hand, and caught him, and said unto him: O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

Verse. But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and, beginning to sink, he cried, saying: Lord, save me!

Answer. And JESUS stretched forth His Hand, and caught him, and said unto him: O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

Fifth Lesson.

THESE twain be thy fathers, these be in good sooth thy shepherds, these twain be they who laid for thee, as touching the kingdom of heaven, better and happier foundations, than did they that first planned thine earthly ramparts, wherefrom he that gave thee thy name took occasion to pollute thee with a brother's blood.[4] These are they who have set on thine head this thy glorious crown, that thou art become an holy nation, a chosen people, a city both Priestly and Kingly, whom the Sacred Throne of blessed Peter hath exalted till thou art become the Lady of the world, unto whom the world-wide love for God hath conceded a broader lordship than is the possession of any mere earthly empire. Thou wast once waxen great by victories, until thy power was spread haughtily over land and sea, but thy power was narrower then which the toils of war had won for thee, than that thou now hast which hath been laid at thy feet by the peace of Christ.

Fifth Responsory.

[5] Arise, O Peter! Cast thy garment about thee, gird thee with strength for the saving of the nations. The chains are fallen off from thine hands.

Verse. The Angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side and raised him up, saying: Arise up quickly.

Answer. The chains are fallen off from thine hands.

Sixth Lesson.

IT well suited for the doing of the work which God had decreed that the multitude of kingdoms should be bound together under one rule, and that so the universal preaching of the Gospel should find easier entry into all peoples, since all were governed by the empire of one city. But this city, knowing not Him, Who had been pleased to make her great, used her lordship over almost all nations to make herself the minister of all their falsehoods; and seemed to herself exceeding godly because there was no false god whom she rejected. But the tighter that Satan had bound her, the more wondrous was the work of Christ in setting her free.

[4] This alludes to the very doubtful story that when Romulus made the first ramparts of Rome, Remus laughed at them for being small, and jumped over the ditch, which so provoked Romulus that he killed him.

[5] Acts xii. 7, 8.

Sixth Responsory.

Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee hath God given all the kingdoms of the world. Therefore unto thee hath He given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Answer. Therefore unto thee hath He given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And therefore unto thee hath He given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of man, am? And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iii. Comment. on Matth. xvi.)

"Who do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" This question is well put, for they who speak of Him as the Son of man are men, while they that know of Him that He is God are called not men but gods.

"And they said: Some say that Thou art John the Baptist, some, Elias"—I marvel that some commentators have thought it worth their while to search into the origin of each of these blunders, and to engage in a discussion of weary length as to why some thought that our Lord JESUS Christ was John the Baptist, "some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the Prophets." Their blunders concerning Elias and Jeremias were but of a piece with Herod's concerning John the Baptist: "It is John, whom I beheaded—he is risen from the dead—and therefore mighty works do show forth themselves in him." (Mark vi. 16, 14.)

Seventh Responsory.

[1] Peter, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Verse. Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father Which is in heaven.

Answer. And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Eighth Lesson.

"BUT who say ye that I am?" Mark, discreet reader, from the context, that a distinction is here drawn between the Apostles and mere men. The Apostles are called gods. "Who," asketh the Lord, "do men say that I am?" but, on the other hand, "who say ye that I am?" They being but men deal in human speculations, but ye that are gods, who be ye persuaded that I am? And then Peter, as the representative of all the Apostles, uttered the testimony: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." He calleth God "living," to mark the difference between Him and all other that be called gods, and who are indeed dead.

Eighth Responsory.

JESUS asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of man, am? Peter answered and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church.

Verse. Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father Which is in heaven.

Answer. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I say also unto thee that thou art "Peter," and upon this "Rock" I will build My Church.

Ninth Lesson.

"AND JESUS answered and said unto him: Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona."

The Apostle having testified of the Lord, the Lord in turn testifieth of the Apostle. Peter had said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"—and he received, in return for that his testimony to the truth, the words: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona." Why, "blessed"? "For flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father." What flesh and blood could not reveal, the grace of the Holy Ghost had revealed. Meet for him therefore, because of his confession, is his name, as the name of one who hath revelation from the Holy Ghost, and therefore is called His son. Bar-jona is, being interpreted, "The-son-of-the-Dove."

PETER, blest Shepherd! hearken to our cry,
And with a word unloose our guilty chain,
Thou! who hast power to ope the gates on high
To men below, and power to shut them fast again.

Lead us, great teacher Paul, in wisdom's ways,
And lift our hearts with thine to Heaven's high throne;
Till Faith beholds the clear meridian blaze,
And, sun-like, in the soul reigns Charity alone.

Praise, blessing, majesty, through endless days,
Be to the Trinity Eternal given;
Who in Pure Unity, profoundly sways
Eternally all things alike in earth and heaven. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven, saith the Lord to Simon Peter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst hallow this day by the Testifying of Thine Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, grant unto Thy Church, whose foundations Thou wast pleased to lay by their hands, the grace always in all things to remain faithful to their teaching. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we make commemoration of the holy Apostle Paul.

Upon the same 30th day of June, were born into the better life—

At Limoges, in Gaul, [in the first century,] holy Martial, first Bishop [of that see,] and the two Priests Alpinian and Austriclinian, whose lives shone brightly with the fame of miracles.

On the same day, [at Talca, in Spain,] the holy [martyrs, the] Priest Caius and the Sub-Deacon Leo.

At Alexandria, under the Emperor Severus, the holy martyr Bisilides. He led the holy Virgin Potamiœna to execution, and while doing so, protected her from the insults of some lewd man, and he received a reward from her for this reverential service. Three days afterwards she appeared to him and put a crown upon his head, by the which vision she not only turned him to Christ, but also by her prayers, while he fought his short fight, she made him a glorious martyr.

At Rome, holy Lucina, a disciple of the Apostles, who contributed of her goods to the necessities of the Saints, visited the Christians who were kept bound in prison, and ministered to the burial of the martyrs, beside whom she was buried in a vault which she made for herself.

Also at Rome, [in the fourth century,] the holy Virgin Æmiliana.

At Viviers, the holy Priest and Confessor Ostian.

Chapter at the end. (Acts xii. 11.)

AND when Peter was come to himself, he said: Now I know of a surety that the Lord hath sent His Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

Chapter from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. This is the day whereon Simon Peter went up upon the gibbet of the cross—Alleluia—this day did he, that holdeth the keys of the kingdom, depart hence with joy to be with Christ: this day did the Apostle Paul, the light of the whole world, bow his head, and for Christ's name's sake receive the crown of his testimony. Alleluia.

No Commemoration is made.

In Churches dedicated to St Paul the above Vespers are not said, but, instead, the First Vespers of his Commemoration, as immediately follow.

JUNE 30.

Commemoration of the Holy Apostle Paul.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except what is otherwise given here.

FIRST VESPERS.

These are said only in Churches dedicated to St Paul.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, Prayer, and Commemoration of St Peter from Lauds.

Psalms as on Sunday, except the last, which is Ps. cxvi., "O praise the Lord, all ye nations, &c.," (p. 105.)

Hymn.[2]

LEAD us, great teacher Paul, in wisdom's ways,
And lift our hearts with thine to Heaven's high throne;
Till Faith beholds the clear meridian blaze,
And, sun-like, in the soul reigns Charity alone.

Praise, blessing, majesty, through endless days,
Be to the Trinity Eternal given;
Who in Pure Unity profoundly sways
Eternally all things alike in earth and heaven. Amen.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Holy Apostle Paul, Preacher of the truth, and teacher of the Gentiles, pray for us to God, Who hath chosen thee.

A Commemoration is made of St Peter, which is taken from Lauds.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of His Apostles. * O come, let us worship Him.

Hymn, "Lead us, &c.," as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [1] He That wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles, and they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Second Antiphon. [2] I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day, as a righteous Judge.

Third Antiphon. [3] To me to live is Christ, and to die is gain: God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord JESUS Christ.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (xiii. 1.)

NOW there were in the Church that was at Antioch certain Prophets and Teachers, as Barnabas and Simeon, that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Menahen, which had been foster-brother to Herod the Tetrarch, and Saul. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said: Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands upon them, they sent them away. So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia: and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

First Responsory.

He That wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles, and they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Verse. [4] The grace of God which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but His grace abideth ever in me.

Answer. And they perceived the grace that was given unto me of the Lord Christ.

Second Lesson.

AND when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the Synagogues of the Jews. And they had also John to their minister. And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos, they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus, which was with the Pro-consul Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God. But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the Pro-consul from the faith.

Second Responsory.

[5] I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.

Verse. I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.

Answer. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.

Third Lesson.

THEN Saul, who is also called Paul, filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him, and said: O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand. Then the Pro-consul, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord. Now, when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia. And John, departing from them, returned to Jerusalem.

Third Responsory.

[5] There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Verse. I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.

Answer. Which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, to preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Second Antiphon. Paul is made one of the chiefest among the Saints, and a chosen vessel; verily he is worthy to be glorified, for he was made worthy to sit upon one of the twelve thrones.

Third Antiphon. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] touching Grace and Free-will. (Ch. vi.)

THE Apostle Paul was a man, who, when we first hear of him, had not only no merits, but a great many demerits. That man received the grace of God, Who returneth good for evil, and let us see in what sort of language, when the hour of his last sufferings was at hand, he wrote to Timothy. He saith: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." (2 Tim. iii. 6.) Here he counteth his merits, whereon a crown was immediately to follow, just as grace had followed immediately on his demerits. Listen to what cometh next: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day." Unto whom would the Lord give a crown as a righteous Judge, if He had not first given grace, as a merciful Father? And how would that crown be a crown of righteousness, if there had not first come grace which justifieth the ungodly? How could a reward have been earned unless the power to earn had first been given unearned?

[1] Gal. ii. 8, 9. [2] 2 Tim. i. 12; iv. 8. [3] Phil. i. 21; Gal. vi. 14.

[4] 1 Cor. xv. 10.

[5] 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8; i. 12

Fourth Responsory.

O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, to preach the Gospel throughout the whole world; through whom all nations have known the grace of God.

Verse. Pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee.

Answer. Through whom all nations have known the grace of God.

Fifth Lesson.

LET us now consider what were the merits of the Apostle Paul, which entitled him to look for a crown of righteousness from the Lord, the righteous Judge, and let us see whether these merits sprang from himself or were God's gifts to him. He saith: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." To begin with, these good works would have been nothing worth, unless they had come from good thoughts. Listen therefore to what this same Paul saith concerning good thoughts. He writeth to the Corinthians: "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything, as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God." (2 Cor. iii. 5.) Now let us take point by point.

Fifth Responsory.

By the grace of God I am what I am. And His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but abideth ever in me.

Verse. He that wrought effectually in Peter to the Apostleship, the Same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles.

Answer. And His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, but abideth ever in me.

Sixth Lesson.

HE saith: "I have fought a good fight." I should like to know in whose strength he fought? In his own strength? or in strength given him from above? God forbid that this great teacher should be supposed not to have known the Law of his God, Who saith in the Book of Deuteronomy: "Say not in thine heart: My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for it is He That giveth thee power to get wealth." (viii. 17, 18.) And, again, what is the good of a fight except it end in victory? And who is he that giveth victory save He of Whom this very same Paul saith: "Thanks be to God, Which giveth us the victory, through our Lord JESUS Christ!" (1 Cor. xv. 57.)

Sixth Responsory.

[1] Saul, who also is called Paul, was made a great preacher; and being of God increased the more in strength, he confounded the Jews.

Verse. Proving that This is very Christ, the Son of God.

Answer. And being of God increased the more in strength, he confounded the Jews.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And being of God increased the more in strength, he confounded the Jews.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Saul, who also is called Paul, was made a great preacher, and, being of God increased the more in strength, he confounded the Jews.

Second Antiphon. [2] Lest I should be exalted above measure through the greatness of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me: for this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me; and the Lord said unto me: Paul, My grace is sufficient for thee.

Third Antiphon. There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 16.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (34*th on Matthew.*)

It is as though He said: "Let not your heart be troubled although when I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves, I bid you be harmless as doves—for, albeit, if I would, I could now make things otherwise, and suffer not that ye should have to bear anything grievous, neither be at the mercy of the wolves as are other sheep, but on the contrary, could make you more dreadful to the lions than the lions to you; nevertheless, thus must it needs be, and yourselves it will make more glorious, and My power it will wholly show forth." For thus was it that afterwards the Same Lord said unto Paul: "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness." (2 Cor. xii. 9.) It is I that have made you to be what ye are.

Seventh Responsory.

O Holy Apostle Paul, Preacher of the truth, and teacher of the Gentiles, pray for us to God, Who hath chosen thee, that we may be made worthy of the grace of God.

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God, and a Preacher of the truth.

Answer. Pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee, that we may be made worthy of the grace of God.

[1] Acts ix. 22, 20.

[2] 2 Cor. xii. 7-9.

Eighth Lesson.

But let us look what wisdom it is which the Lord requireth. It is the wisdom of the serpent. The serpent draweth all the rest of his body after his head, and it is no matter to him if his body be cut through, so long as he keepeth his head unharmed. Thus, O Christian, is it with thee. It is no matter to thee that for thy faith's sake thou shouldest lose all things else—money, or body, or, if need be, life itself. Thy faith is thy head, and the root of thy being—hold fast to that, and, as long as thou hast that, although thou shouldest lose all things else, it will only be to receive them back again with interest an hundredfold. And thus it is that the Lord biddeth us, not to be single-hearted only, nor wise only, but both together, that therefrom we may be strong.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king was desirous to apprehend me, and by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall, and so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

Verse. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ knoweth that I lie not.

Answer. And by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

Ninth Lesson.

If thou wilt see how these words were brought to the proof in very deed, read the Book of the Acts of the Apostles. There thou wilt see how that oftentimes the Jewish people rose against the Apostles and gnashed on them with their teeth, but they, with dove-like guilelessness, gave them smooth answers, and turned away their wrath, and quenched their fury, and stopped their onset. When the Jews said: "Did not we straitly command you, that ye should not teach in this Name?"—although the Apostles could have worked any miracles they chose, yet they neither said nor did anything sharp, but answered them with all meekness: "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." (Acts v. 28; iv. 19.) Here thou hast the harmlessness of doves; listen now to the wisdom of serpents: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." (20.)

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [2] I have planted, * Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. [3] Most gladly therefore will I rather glory * in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

Third Antiphon. The grace of God which was bestowed upon me was not in vain, * but His grace abideth ever in me.

Fourth Antiphon. In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king was desirous to apprehend me; by the brethren in a basket was I let down by the wall, and so escaped I his hands, in the name of the Lord.

Fifth Antiphon. [4] Thrice was I beaten with rods, * once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, for Christ's name's sake.

Chapter. (2 Tim. iv 7.)

I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.

Hymn from the Common of Apostles, (p. 589.)

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God.

Answer. To preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Thus saith the Lord: Ye, which have followed Me, shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israël.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O God, Who, through the preaching of the Blessed Apostle Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine gloriously among the Gentiles, we beseech Thee that we who keep the Feast of his birth, may, now that he is with Thee, feel to our comfort that his prayer availeth much with Thee. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then the following Commemoration of St Peter.

Antiphon. Thou art the Shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee hath God given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Thou art Peter.

Answer. And upon this rock I will build My Church.

Prayer.

O God, Who hast given unto Thy Blessed Apostle Peter the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and the power to bind and to loose, loose us, we beseech Thee, at his mighty intercession, from all the bands of our sins. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

After the Commemoration of St Peter, is made one of the Birth of St John.

PRIME.

Antiphon. I have planted, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the Octave of the Birth of the holy Baptist John.

Upon the same 1st day of July, was born into the better life—

On Mount Hor, holy Aaron, the first High Priest of the tribe of Levi.

In Britain, the holy martyrs Julius and Aaron, who suffered in the persecution under Diocletian, after holy Alban; at the which time there were very many there who suffered divers torments and were most cruelly mangled, and so finished their fight, and went to be glad for ever in the Jerusalem which is above.

the holy martyr Rumald, Bishop [of that city,] son of an Irish king and Bishop of Dublin.

At Mondragone, in Latium, the holy Bishops Castus and Secundinus, both martyrs.

At Vienne, holy Martin, Bishop [of that see,] a disciple of the Apostles.

In Auvergne, [in the sixth century,] holy Gallus, Bishop [of Clermont.]

In the country of Lyons, the holy Domitian, Abbat [of Bebron,] the first who there led an hermit's life. He gathered very many together there to serve God, and was gathered unto his fathers in a good old age, very famous for great graces, and for glorious and wonderful works.

In the country of Rheims, the holy Priest Theodoric, a disciple of blessed Bishop Remy.

At Angoulême, [in the sixth century,] the holy Abbat Eparchius.

At Hums, in Syria, [likewise in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Simeon, whose surname was Sali. He became a fool for Christ's sake, but God showed by great miracles how deep was his wisdom.

At Vicenza, [in the eleventh century,] the holy Hermit Theobald, of the family of the Earls of Campania, whose name Pope Alexander III. added to the list of the Saints on account of his fame for holiness and miracles.

Chapter at the end. (1 Cor. xv. 9.)

FOR I am the least of the Apostles, that am not worthy to be called an Apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace, which was bestowed upon me, was not in vain.

TERCE.

SEXT.

Antiphon. The grace of God, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (2 Cor. xii. 7.)

LEST I should be exalted above measure through the greatness of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet me: for this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me; and the Lord said unto me: Paul, My grace is sufficient for thee.

NONE.

Antiphon. Thrice was I beaten, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

SECOND VESPERS.

Full Vespers of St Paul, Antiphons and Psalms, as in the Common of Apostles. Chapter and Prayer as at Lauds. Hymn, Verse and Answer, and Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as at First Vespers in Churches dedicated to St Paul.

A Commemoration of St Peter is made as at Lauds, and of the Octave of the Birth of St John, from the First Vespers of that Feast.

If the above Festival in Commemoration of St Paul should fall upon the Octave Day of Corpus Christi, in all Churches except those dedicated to St Paul, it is transferred to the first free day, and then the whole Office is as if it were in his own Church.

FEAST-DAYS IN JULY.

On the first day on which Nine Lessons are not read is said the Office of the Dead.

Lord's Day nearest to the first day of the month.

Feast in Honour of the Most Precious Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Double of the Second Class.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

On the Saturday the Martyrology begins with the words:

On the morrow is the Feast of the Most Precious Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.

FIRST VESPERS.[1]

First Antiphon. Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this, that is glorious in His apparel?

Second Antiphon. I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.

Third Antiphon. He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and His name is called "The Word of God."

Fourth Antiphon. Wherefore art Thou red in Thine apparel, and Thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

Fifth Antiphon. I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with Me.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the Lord, (p. 105.)

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[2]

FORTH let the long procession stream,
And through the streets in order wend;
Let the bright waving line of torches gleam,
The solemn chant ascend.

While we, with tears and sighs profound,
That memorable Blood record,
Which, stretched on His hard Cross, from many a Wound,
The dying Jesus poured.

By the first Adam's fatal sin
Came death upon the human race;
In this new Adam doth new life begin,
And everlasting grace.

For scarce the Father heard from heaven
The cry of his expiring Son,
When in that cry our sins were all forgiven
And boundless pardon won.

Henceforth, whoso in that dear Blood
Washeth, shall lose his every stain,
And, in immortal roseate beauty robed,
An Angel's likeness gain.

Only, run thou with courage on
Straight to the goal set in the skies;
He Who assists thy course will give thee soon
The everlasting prize.

Father Supreme! vouchsafe that we,
For whom Thine only Son was slain,
And whom Thine Holy Ghost doth sanctify,
May heavenly joys attain. Amen.

[1] Antiphons from Isa. lxiii. 1-3 except the 3rd, which is Apoc. xix. 13.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. Father Caswall.

Verse. [1] Lord, Thou hast redeemed us by Thy Blood.
Answer. And hast made us unto our God a kingdom.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] Ye are come unto Mount Sion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to JESUS the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the Blood of sprinkling That speaketh better things than that of Abel.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ the Son of God hath redeemed us by His Own Blood.* O come, let us worship Him.

Hymn.[3]

HE Who once, in righteous vengeance,
Whelmed the world beneath the flood,
Once again in mercy cleansed it
With the stream of His Own Blood,
Coming from His Throne on high
On the painful Cross to die.

[4] Blest with this all-saving shower
Earth her beauty straight resumed;
In the place of thorns and briars,
Myrtles sprang and roses bloomed:
Flowers surprised the desert waste,
Wormwood lost her bitter taste.

Scorpions ceased; the slimy serpent
Laid his deadly poison by;
Savage beasts of cruel instinct
Lost their wild ferocity;
Welcoming the gentle reign
Of the Lamb for sinners slain.

O the wisdom of the Eternal!
O its depth and height Divine!
O the sweetness of that mercy
Which in JESUS Christ doth shine!
Slaves we were condemned to die,
Our King pays the penalty.

When before the Judge we tremble,
Conscious of His broken laws,
May this Blood in that dread hour
Cry aloud and plead our cause—
Bid our guilty terrors cease—
Be our pardon and our peace.

Prince and Author of salvation!
Lord of Majesty Supreme!
JESU, praise to Thee be given
By the world Thou didst redeem!
Who with the Father and the Spirit
Reignest in eternal merit. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. [5] And when eight days were accomplished, for the circumcising of the child, His Name was called JESUS.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Second Antiphon. [6] And being in an agony, He prayed more earnestly, and His Sweat was as it were great drops of Blood falling down to the ground.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. [7] Judas, which had betrayed Him, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver, saying: I have sinned, in that I have betrayed the innocent Blood.

Ps. xv. Preserve me, O Lord, &c., (p. 7.)

Verse. Lord, Thou hast redeemed us—
Answer. By Thy Blood.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Hebrews (ix. 11.)

CHRIST being come an High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building, neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His own Blood, He entered in once into the Holy Place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of goats or of bulls, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the Blood of Christ, Who, through the Holy Spirit, offered Himself without spot to God, purge our conscience from dead works to serve the living God? And for this cause, He is the Mediator of the New Testament, that, by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first Testament, they, which are called, might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

First Responsory.

[8] JESUS also, that He might sanctify the people with His own Blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach.
Verse. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.
Answer. Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the gate, bearing His reproach.

Second Lesson.

FOR where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth. Wherefore neither the first Testament was dedicated without blood. For when Moses had read every precept of the law to all the people, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people, saying: This is the blood of the Testament which God hath enjoined unto you. Moreover, he sprinkled likewise with blood both the Tabernacle and all the vessels of the ministry. And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

Second Responsory.

[9] Moses took the blood, and sprinkled all the people, saying: This is the blood of the Testament which God hath enjoined unto you.
Verse. Through faith he kept the Passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the first-born should touch them.
Answer. Saying: This is the blood of the Testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

Third Lesson. (x. 19.)

HAVING therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the Blood of Christ, by a new and living way which He hath consecrated for us, through the veil (that is to say, His Flesh,) and having an High Priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water; let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for He is faithful That promised,) and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works.

Third Responsory.

[1] Ye, who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the Blood of Christ. For He is our Peace, Who hath made both one.

Verse. [2] It pleased [the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell, and,] having made peace through the Blood of His Cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself, [by Him, I say,] whether they be things in earth or things in heaven.

Answer. For He is our Peace, Who hath made both one.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For He is our Peace, Who hath made both one.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [3] Pilate, willing to content the people, delivered JESUS, when he had scourged Him, to be crucified.

Ps. xxii. The LORD is my shepherd, &c., (p. 26.)

Second Antiphon. [4] When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying: I am innocent of the Blood of this just Person.

Ps. xxix. I will extol Thee, &c., (p. 42.)

Third Antiphon. Then answered all the people and said: His Blood be on us, and on our children.

Ps. lxiii. Hear my voice, &c., (p. 64.)

Verse. [5] The blood of JESUS Christ, the Son of God,—

Answer. Cleanseth us from all sin.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Archbishop [of Constantinople.]

WOULDEST thou hear the power of the Blood of Christ? Then let us look at the figure thereof, let us call to mind the old type, and tell the story written in the antient Scriptures. The Egyptians would not let God take away Israël His firstborn,[6] "And Moses said: Thus saith the LORD—About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt, and all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is behind the mill, and all the first-born of beasts. And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more. But against any of the children of Israël shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast; that ye may know how that the LORD hath put a difference between the Egyptians and Israël." (Ex. xi. 4-7.) "Then Moses called for all the elders of Israël, and said unto them: Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families and kill the Passover. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop and dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood . . . . and when He seeth the blood upon the lintel and on the two side-posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you." (xii. 21-23.) And could the blood of a sheep save a man? Yea, in good sooth; not because it was blood, but because it represented in a figure the Blood of the Lord.

Fourth Responsory.

[7] Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear; forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold—

Verse. But with the Precious Blood of Christ, as of a lamb without spot.

Answer. Ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold.

Fifth Lesson.

THE statues of monarchs, mindless and speechless images though they be, have sometimes been an helpful refuge to men endowed with soul and reason, not because they are works of the brazier's skill, but because the likeness they bear is a King's. And just so did this unconscious blood deliver the lives of men, not because it was blood, but because it foreshadowed the shedding of the Blood of JESUS. On that night in Egypt, when the destroying Angel saw the blood upon the lintel and on the two side-posts, he passed over the door, and came not in unto the house. Even so now much more will the destroyer of souls flee away when he seeth, not the lintel and the two side-posts sprinkled with the blood of a lamb, but the[8] mouth of the faithful Christian, the living dwelling of the Holy Ghost, shining with the blood of the True Messiah. If the Angel let the type be, how shall not the enemy quail before the Reality? Wouldest thou hear more of the power of that Blood? I am willing. Consider from what source it welleth, from what fountain it springeth. Its fountain is the Heart of the Lord, pierced for us upon the Cross. "Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with Him; but when they came to JESUS, and saw that He was dead already, they brake not His Legs, but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water," (John xix. 32-34,) whereof One is a figure of Baptism, and the other of the Sacrament [of the Altar.][1]

[7] 1 Peter i. 17-19.

[8] I.e., probably, as wet from the Eucharistic chalice.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] Ye are bought with a great price, therefore glorify God and bear Him in your body.

Verse. Ye are bought with a price —be not ye the servants of men.

Answer. Glorify God and bear Him in your body.

Sixth Lesson.

ONE of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side—the veil of the Temple of His Body was rent in twain. (John ii. 19-21, Matth. xxvii. 51.) O how glorious is the treasure that is laid open to me therein! How noble the riches that it is my joy there to have found! Thus was it with the Paschal lamb. The Jews slew the typical sheep, but to me also is it given to know the worth of the thing typified. "One of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water." I would not, O my hearer, that thou shouldest pass by the depths of such a mystery as this without pausing. I have some mystic and hidden words to say. I have said that that Blood and Water were a figure of Baptism and of the Mysteries [of the Altar.] These are the foundations of the Church, "the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Tit. iii. 5.) I say [that the Church is founded in these things, whereof the substance came out of the Redeemer's Side, namely,] in Baptism and the Mysteries [of the Altar.] It was therefore out of the Side of Christ that the Church was created, just as it was out of the side of Adam that Eve was raised up to be his bride. (Gen. ii. 21, 22.) This is the reason why Paul saith, no doubt in allusion to the [bride of the Second Adam, even the Holy Church to which we belong, coming, like the bride of the first Adam, out of the] Side [of her Husband]: "We are members of His Body, [of His Flesh,] and of His bones." (Eph. v. 30.) For even as God made the woman Eve out of the rib which He had taken out of the side of Adam, so hath Christ made the Church out of the Blood and Water Which He made to flow for us out of His Own Side.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, in due time Christ died for us.

Verse. Much more then being now justified by His Blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him.

Answer. In that, while we were yet sinners, in due time Christ died for us.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. In that, while we were yet sinners, in due time Christ died for us.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [4] Then came JESUS forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them: Behold the Man!

Ps. lxxiii. O God, why hast Thou, &c., (p. 73.)

Second Antiphon. And He, bearing His Cross, went forth into a place called "the place of a Skull," where they crucified Him.

Ps. lxxxvii. O LORD God, &c., (p. 82.)

Third Antiphon. [But] when they [came to JESUS, and] saw that He was dead already, they brake not His legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water.

Ps. xciii. The LORD God to Whom vengeance, &c., (p. 84.)

Verse. [5] Christ loved us—

Answer. And washed us from our sins in His Own Blood.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 29.)

AT that time: When JESUS had received the vinegar, He said: It is finished. And He bowed His Head, and gave up the ghost. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (120th Tract on John.)

"One of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water." The Evangelist speaketh carefully. He saith not that he smote the Side, nor yet that he wounded It, nor yet anything else, but "pierced"—"pierced" It, to fling wide the entrance unto life, whence flow the Sacraments of the Church, those Sacraments without which there is no entrance unto the life which is life indeed. That Blood which was shed there was shed for the remission of sins, that Water is the water that mantleth in the cup of salvation. Therein are we washed, and thereof do we drink. Of this was it a type when it was said unto Noah: "The door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof . . . . and of every living thing of all flesh shalt thou bring into the ark . . . . to keep them alive." (Gen. vi. 16, 19.) A figure this of the Church. Thus was it that the first woman was made from the side of her husband while he slept, and she was called [Eve, which is, being interpreted,] "Life," "because she was the mother of all living." (Gen. iii. 20.) This name set forth a great good, before it became associated with the bitter fruit of a great evil. And here we have the Second Adam bowing His Head, and the deep sleep of death falling upon Him upon the Cross, and He sleepeth, that the Lord God may take a thing out of His side, and may make thereof a wife for Him. O what a death was His, which quickeneth the dead! What is cleaner than His Blood? What more health-giving than His wounding?

Seventh Responsory.

[6] This is He That came by Water and Blood, even JESUS Christ; not by Water only, but by Water and Blood.

Verse. [7] In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness.

Answer. Not by Water only, but by Water and Blood.

[1] After this comes a passage which I omit, as it relates to a reading in the Gospel of St John, used by St Chrysostom, but rejected by the present Greek and Latin texts.

Eighth Lesson.

MEN were being held bondsmen to the devil, slaves to evil spirits. But they have been redeemed from that bondage. They had been able to sell themselves, but they were not able to redeem themselves. A Redeemer came and paid the price for them. He shed His Blood, and at that cost bought the world. Ye ask what He bought? Look what He paid, and ye shall see what He bought. Christ's Blood was the price. What is His Blood worth? What, but the whole world? What but all men? They are very unthankful for His redemption, or very proud, who say that It is only precious enough to buy the Africans, or that they themselves are so precious that It was shed only for them. Let there be an end to such conceit, an end to such vainglory. What He paid, He paid for all.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] God hath predestinated us unto the adoption of children by JESUS Christ, in Whom we have redemption through His Blood.

Verse. The forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace, wherein He hath abounded toward us.

Answer. In Whom we have redemption through His Blood.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. In whom we have redemption through His Blood.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday, and the Hymn "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said at the end.

LAUDS.[2]

First Antiphon. What are these * which are arrayed in white robes? And whence came they?

Second Antiphon. These are they which came out of great tribulation, * and have washed their robes [and made them white] in the Blood of the Lamb.

Third Antiphon. Therefore are they before the throne of God, * and serve Him day and night.

Fourth Antiphon. And they overcame the dragon * by the Blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony.

Fifth Antiphon. Blessed are they * that wash their robes in the Blood of the Lamb.

Chapter. (Heb. ix. 11.)

BRETHREN, Christ being come an High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by His Own Blood, He entered in once into the Holy Place, having obtained eternal redemption.

Hymn.[3]

HAIL, Holy Wounds of JESUS, hail!
Sweet pledges of the saving Rood!
Whence flow the streams that never fail—
The purple streams of His dear Blood.

Brighter than brightest stars ye show,
Than sweetest rose your scent more rare,
No Indian gem may match your glow,
No honey's taste with yours compare.

Portals are ye to that dear Home,
Wherein our wearied souls may hide,
Whereto no angry foe can come,
The Heart of JESUS Crucified.

What countless stripes our JESUS bore,
All naked left in Pilate's hall,
What copious floods of purple gore
Through rents in His torn garments fall.

His comely brow, O shame and grief,
By the sharp thorny crown is riven,
Through Hands and Feet, without relief
The cruel nails are deeply driven.

But when for our poor sakes He died,
A willing Priest, by love subdued,
The soldier's spear transfixed His Side—
Forth flowed the Water and the Blood.

Beneath the winepress of God's wrath,
To save our souls from endless pains,
Still hour by hour His Blood flows forth
Till not a single drop remains.

Come, bathe you in that healing flood,
All ye who mourn with sin opprest,
Your only hope in JESUS' Blood,
His Sacred Heart your only rest.

All praise to Him, the Eternal Son,
At God's right hand enthroned above,
Whose Blood the world's redemption won,
Whose Spirit seals the gifts of love.
Amen.

Verse. Being justified by the Blood of Christ—

Answer. We shall be saved from wrath through Him.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The blood shall be to you for a token, saith the Lord, and when I see the Blood I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you.[4]

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and Everlasting God, Who hast appointed Thine Only-begotten Son to be the Redeemer of the world, and hast been pleased to be reconciled unto us by His Blood, grant us, we beseech Thee, so to use this solemn worship of the price of our salvation, that the Power thereof may here on earth keep us from all things that may hurt us, and the purchase of the same may gladden us for ever hereafter in Heaven. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. This day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye shall keep it a Feast to the Lord throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a Feast by an ordinance for ever.

Commemoration of the Second Vespers of the Sunday.

If this Sunday should be the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary or a Feast of higher rank, the Office of the Precious Blood will be transferred to the first day that is not a Double of the First or Second Class; a Feast above a Double, or of a Doctor, will be kept on the first free day; but of a Double or Semi-Double, a Commemoration will be made in both Vespers and Lauds, and the historical Lessons will be read as the Ninth Lesson.

JULY 1.

Octave-Day of the Birth of St John the Baptist.

Double.

All as on the Feast-day except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Maximus, Bishop [of Turin.] (3rd for the Birth-day of St John the Baptist.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, the feast which we this day keep hath been hallowed by the true Birth of the worshipful Baptist, John. He was a man whom God was pleased to send into this world, not only that he himself might fill the glorious office of a Prophet, but also that by him the words of all the other Prophets might be established. That we should give him, as we now do, the chiefest honour among them all, is right; for he had poured upon him this special blessing, that, being the last who prophesied in the world the coming of Him Who came to redeem the world, he was the first who, when He came, pointed to Him as already come. The other Prophets, at the distance of ages, knew that our Lord JESUS Christ was to come; the Prophet John alone was worthy to see Him with his very eyes, and to proclaim Him actually present.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS is he concerning whom the seer Isaiah, by the inspiration of God, said: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness: Prepare ye the way of the LORD." (xl. 3.) How meetly, dearly beloved brethren, is this blessed John called "a voice"—he who was sent to be at once the herald and the witness of the Word from heaven! This is he whose birth, whose name, and whose work were foretold by the angel Gabriel. This is he who in the sight of heavenly knowledge is more honourable than any other man, as hath been declared by the Lord: "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." (Matth. xi. 11.) How beautifully is it said, "born of women"—since He Who was infinitely greater than John was born of a Virgin!

Sixth Lesson.

IN sight of these things, consider, dearly beloved brethren, in how great worship, in how great love ye are behoven to hold him, who is thus honourable, that he hath been foretold by the Holy Ghost, promised by an Angel, extolled by the Lord Himself, and hallowed by the everlasting glory of an holy death. His birth, surrounded with wonders, is the meet beginning of a wondrous life, that holy, sinless life the meet fore-runner of a death which was a gift to God. It is but just then, my brethren, that the Church of Christ should on this day with keen joy keep throughout the whole world the Feast of his Birth, even his, who arose a right faithful witness to tell a wondering world that a life of eternal gladness was lying open to the choice of dying creatures.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 57.)

ELIZABETH'S full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son. And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk ii. on Luke i.)

"He shall be called John."

Elizabeth who had herself prophesied of Christ, could not fail to recognise the Fore-runner of the Lord. It is well added: "There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name"—whereby we know that he was named, not as the son of Zacharias, but as the Prophet of God. "And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called"—but since unbelief had bereft him of voice and hearing, he was not able to answer them by word of mouth, "and he asked for a writing-table and wrote, saying: His name is John."

Eighth Lesson.

"HE asked for a writing-table and wrote, saying: His name is John"—he giveth not this name to his son, but maketh known that it is already his. "And his mouth was opened immediately"—unbelief had shut it, faith opened it. If, then, we likewise would speak, let us believe; let our tongues, which unbelief hath tied, be opened to speak wisdom.

Ninth Lesson.

IF we be fain to speak, let us engrave deep things upon our memories; let us engrave the fact that Christ is at hand, "not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart." (2 Cor. iii. 3.) He that spake of John prophesied of Christ. Let us so speak of John, as to speak of Christ, that our mouth also may be opened, as was the mouth of the great Priest Zacharias which, like the mouth of a dumb beast constrained by the bit, was forced by a wavering faith to make voiceless signs.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the General Commemorations. Prayer from June 29.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the visit of the Blessed Virgin Mary to Elizabeth.

On the same 2nd day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyrs Processus and Martinian, who were baptized by the blessed Apostle Peter in the Mamertine Prison, and crowned with martyrdom under Nero by being slain with the sword, after suffering the beating of their mouths, the rack, thongs, cudgels, fire, and loaded whips.

At Rome also, the three holy soldiers who turned to Christ at the martyrdom of the blessed Apostle Paul, and thus earned a share with him in the glory of heaven.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Ariston, Crescentian, Eutychian, Urban, Vitalis, Justus, Felicissimus, Felix, Marcia, and Symphorosa, who were all crowned with martyrdom in the Campania while the persecution was raging under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Winchester, in England, the holy Swithin, Bishop of that city, [in the year 863,] whose holiness shone forth in the grace of working miracles, and whose feast day we keep upon the 15th day of this present month of July. [His head was taken to the cathedral of Evreux at the end of the fourteenth century.]

At Bamberg, [in Bavaria,] holy Otho, Bishop of [that see,] who preached the Gospel to the Pomeranians, and turned them to the faith, [in the year 1139.]

At Tours, the holy woman Monegund, [about the year 570.]

Vespers of the following.

JULY 2.

Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women.

Answer. And blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Mary! blessed art thou that didst believe! for there shall be a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Birth of St John—and no other.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep holiday for the Visitation of the Virgin Mary. * Let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs.[1] (ii. 1.)

[THE Bride.] I am a rose of the plain and a lily of the valleys. [The Bridegroom.] As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

---

[1] This Song of Songs is a Dramatic Pastoral, composed of the dialogue of two lovers. In the text, though not in the original, their speeches are separated, as the English language has not the same power of distinguishing gender as the Hebrew or even the Latin.

[The Bride.] As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. Under the shadow of him who is my delight, I sat down, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. He brought me into the wine-cellars, he established his love upon me. Revive me with flowers, stay me up with apples, for I am swooning with love. His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me—

[The Bridegroom.] I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the hinds, and the roe-bucks of the field, that ye stir not up nor awake my love till she please!

First Responsory.

Rise up, make haste, my love! my fair one! and come away! For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone. The voice of the turtle-dove is heard in our land.

Verse. Mary entered into the house of Zacharias and saluted Elizabeth.

Answer. The voice of the turtle-dove is heard in our land.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bride.] The voice of my beloved! Behold, he cometh!—leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills! My beloved is like a gazelle or a young roe-buck! Behold, he standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, peeping through the lattice. Behold, my beloved is calling unto me—

[The Bridegroom.] Rise up, make haste, my love! my dove! my beautiful one! and come away! For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone—the flowers appear on the earth—the time of grafting is come—the voice of the turtle-dove is heard in our land—the fig-tree putteth forth her green figs—the vines with the tender grape give a good smell!

Second Responsory.

Who is this that cometh up like the sun? This, comely as Jerusalem? The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Third Lesson.

[THE Bridegroom.] Arise, my love! my fair one! and come away! O my dove, that art in the clefts of the rock, in the hole in the wall! let me see thy countenance! let me hear thy voice in mine ears!—for sweet is thy voice and thy countenance is comely. Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines, for our vines have tender grapes.

[The Bride.] My beloved is mine, and I am his, that feedeth among the lilies, until the day break, and the shadows flee away. Turn, my beloved! be like a gazelle, or a young roe-buck upon the mountains of Bether!

Third Responsory.

Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost; and she spake out with a loud voice, and said: Blessed art thou among women and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb! And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

Verse. For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

Answer. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (In Metaphrast. July.)

AS soon as our Redeemer was come among us, He went with haste, while as yet He was in His mother's womb, to visit His friend John. And John, in the one womb, becoming conscious of the Presence of JESUS in the other womb, dashed himself impatiently against the narrow walls of his natural prison, as though crying out: "I see the very Lord who hath given nature her bounds, and I wait not for the due season of my birth. There is no need for me to linger here till nine months are ended, for He That is Eternal is with me—I will break out of my dark cell—I will proclaim my full knowledge of many wonders. I am the sign. I will show that the Christ is here. I am the trumpet—let me peal forth the news that the Son of God is come in the flesh. Let me give my trumpet-note, let me bless my father's tongue, and make it to speak again. Let me give my trumpet-note, let me quicken my mother's womb."

Fourth Responsory.

Behold, he cometh!—leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills! My beloved is like a gazelle or a young roe-buck!

Verse. He rejoiceth as a giant to run his course, his going-forth is from the end of the heavens.

Answer. My beloved is like a gazelle or a young roe-buck!

Fifth Lesson.

THOU seest, O beloved, how new and how strange a mystery is here! John is not born, but by leaping he speaketh; he is yet unseen, and he giveth warning; he is not yet able to cry, but by his acts he is heard; he draweth not yet the breath of life, but he preacheth God; he seeth not yet the light, but he maketh known the Sun; he is not come out of the womb, but he hasteth to play the Fore-runner; in the Presence of the Lord he cannot restrain himself; he rebelleth against the bounds set by nature, and struggleth to break out of the prison of the belly; his longing is to herald the coming Saviour. He saith, as it were: "Behold, the Deliverer cometh—and am I to remain still bound to abide here? The Word cometh, that He may set right all things—and am I still to tarry in prison? I will go forth. I will run before Him, and cry aloud to all men, 'Behold the Lamb of God! Which taketh away the sin of the world!'"

Fifth Responsory.

Rejoice with me, rejoice with me, all ye that love the Lord, for, while I was yet a little one, I pleased the Most High, and I have brought forth from my bowels God and man.

Verse. All generations shall call me blessed, for God hath regarded the low estate of His hand-maiden.

Answer. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and man.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT do thou tell us, O John, how it came to pass that while thou wast still in the darkness of thy mother's womb, thou didst see and hear? How didst thou behold the things of God? How didst thou leap and bound for joy? "Great," saith John, "is the mystery of that which taketh place here, far from the understanding of men are these doings. It is meet that I should do a new thing in nature for the sake of Him Who is making new things which are beyond nature. I see in the womb, because I see the Sun of righteousness in a womb. I hear, because I am coming as the herald of the Great Word. I cry out, because I espy the Only-begotten Son of the Father clad in Flesh. I bound for joy, because I see that He by Whom all things were made, hath taken upon Him the form of a servant. I leap, because I think of the Redeemer of the world being made Flesh. I run before His coming, and herald His approach unto you with this, as it were, my confession."

Sixth Responsory.

Blessed art thou that hast believed, for there shall be a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord. And Mary said: My soul doth magnify the Lord.

Verse. [1] Come, hear, and I will declare what God hath done for my soul.

Answer. My soul doth magnify the Lord.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. My soul doth magnify the Lord.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 39.)

AND Mary arose in those days and went into the hill-country with haste, into a city of Judah. And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elizabeth. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. ii. Comm. on Luke i.)

We must here consider that the greater cometh unto the lesser, Mary unto Elizabeth, Christ unto John. And again afterwards, to hallow the baptism of John, the Lord came unto him to be baptized. It was soon that the blessings of the coming of Mary and of the Presence of God were made manifest. Have regard here to the distinction made, and to the special weight of every word. Elizabeth was the first to hear the voice of Mary's salutation, but John was the first to receive grace. She heard naturally, but he leaped mystically. She hailed the coming of Mary, he that of the Lord, Mary and Elizabeth spake words full of grace, but JESUS and John worked, and commenced their mystery of godliness from their mothers' beginnings, and so by twin miracles the mothers prophesied from the spirit of their unborn offspring. The babe leaped, and the mother was filled with the Holy Ghost. The mother was not filled before the son, but when the son was filled with the Holy Ghost, he filled his mother also.

Seventh Responsory.

All generations shall call me blessed, for the Lord, That is mighty, hath done to me great things, and holy is His Name.

Verse. And His mercy is on them that fear Him, from generation to generation.

Answer. For the Lord, That is mighty, hath done to me great things, and holy is His Name.

Eighth Lesson.

"AND whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?" That is to say, How cometh it to pass that so great a good should befall me, as that the Mother of my Lord should come to me? I feel the miracle, I acknowledge the mystery; the Mother of my Lord, pregnant with the Word, is full of God.

(56) "And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house." It is meet to record how Mary showed this kindness, and abode this mystic number of months.[2] She tarried long, not only for friendship's sake, but also for the good of the Great Prophet. For if the first coming of Mary so blessed him, that even as a babe in the womb he leapt for joy, and his mother was filled with the Holy Ghost, what blessedness must we not deem to have flowed upon him from so long neighbourhood of Mary? Thus was the Prophet anointed, and trained by exercise like a strong wrestler, in his mother's womb, for his sinews were being braced for a hard battle.

Eighth Responsory.

O Holy Virgin Mary, happy indeed art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God; may all that make remembrance of thine holy Visitation feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Even Christ our God.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Processus and Martinian.)

AT what time Peter and Paul were kept in the Mamertine Prison, at the foot of the Tarpeian Rock, two of the gaolers, named Processus and Martinian, along with other forty, were moved by the preaching and miracles of the Apostles to believe in Christ, and were baptized in a spring which suddenly brake forth out of the rock. These men let the Apostles depart if they willed it. But Paulinus, Prefect of the soldiers, when he heard what was come to pass, strove to turn away Processus and Martinian from their purpose. And when he found that he but wasted time, he ordered their faces to be bruised and their teeth to be broken, with stones. Moreover, when he had had them led to the image of Jupiter, and they still boldly answered that they would not worship the gods, he caused them to be tormented on the rack, and white-hot plates of metal to be put to their flesh, and that they should be beaten with sticks. Whileas they were suffering all these things they were heard to say only this one word—"Blessed be the Name of the Lord." They were afterwards cast into prison, and in a little while they were taken outside the city, and slain with the axe, upon the Aurelian Way. The Lady Lucina buried their bodies upon her own farm, upon the 2nd day of July, but they were afterwards brought into the City, and are buried in the Church of the Prince of the Apostles.

[1] Ps. lxv. 16.

[2] If a Ninth Lesson of the Feast be required the Eighth is broken here.

The Hymn, "We Praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Mary arose * and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Judah.

Second Antiphon. Mary entered * into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elizabeth.

Third Antiphon. When Elizabeth heard * the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb, and she was filled with the Holy Ghost. Alleluia.

Fourth Antiphon. Blessed art thou among women, * and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Fifth Antiphon. As soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. Alleluia.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women—

Answer. And blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, she spake out with a loud voice and said: Whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me? Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, O Lord, we beseech Thee, unto all Thy servants, the gift of Thine heavenly grace, that even as the Blessed Virgin being made a Mother hath been unto them the first step unto their salvation, so the godly and solemn memorial of her Visitation may be the bringer of an increase of peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The only Commemoration is that of the Holy Martyrs Processus and Martinian.

Antiphon, "Even the very hairs of your head, &c.," and Verse and Answer, (p. 608.)

Prayer.

O GOD, Who dost encompass and shield us with the glorious witnessing of Thine holy Martyrs Processus and Martinian, grant unto us the grace to improve by their ensample, and the happiness to rejoice because of their intercession. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth, from Lauds, respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 3rd day of July, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Tryphon and twelve others.

At Constantinople, the holy martyrs Eulogios and his Companions, [fourth century.]

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, holy Hyacinth, a groom of the bed-chamber to the Emperor Trajan. He was accused of Christianity, variously tormented with stripes, and cast into prison, where he died of hunger.

At Chiusi, in Tuscany, the holy martyrs Irenæus, a Deacon, and Mustiola, a matron, who under the Emperor Aurelian were tormented in divers and terrible ways, and gained a crown of martyrdom.

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Marcus and Mucian were slain with the sword for Christ's sake. A child called out to them not to sacrifice to idols, and for this reason was ordered to be whipped, and forasmuch as he continued to confess Christ all the more vehemently, he also was put to death, along with a certain Paul who also had exhorted the martyrs.

At Laodicea, in Syria, holy Anatolius, Bishop [of that see, in the year 283,] who has left writings which are admired not by devout men only, but by philosophers also.

At Altino, in Venetia, holy Heliodorus, Bishop [of that see, about the year 390,] famous for his teaching and holiness.

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Dathus, Bishop [of that see, in the year 190.]

At Edessa, in Mesopotamia, is commemorated the translation from India of the body of the holy Apostle Thomas, whose relics have since been brought to Ortona, [in Italy. Henry the Liberal, Count of Champagne, brought one whole rib of St Thomas from the East. He presented it to the Collegiate Church of St Stephen de Troyes (Aube.)]

SECOND VESPERS.

The same as the First, except the following.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. All generations shall call me blessed, for God hath regarded the lowliness of His hand-maiden. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Commemoration, (p. 103.) Prayer as on June 29.

On the 3rd, 4th, and 6th of July, being the 5th, 6th, and 8th days of the Feast of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, the Office is that Common to all the Apostles, except the following.

1. The Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Scripture according to the Season.

2. The Lessons of the Second and Third Nocturns as immediately hereafter given.

3. The Antiphons at the Songs of Zacharias and of the Blessed Virgin, and the Verses and Answers at Lauds and Vespers are from the Common Commemorations, (pp. 17 and 103.)

4. The Prayer is from June 29, except from the evening of the 5*th till the end, when it also is from the Common Commemoration.*

On the 3*rd and* 4*th, the Antiphons are not doubled.*

JULY 3.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (1*st for the Birth-day of SS. Peter and Paul.*)

"PRECIOUS in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints"—and no cruelty can trample out that Religion which was founded in the mysterious Sacrifice of the Cross of Christ. Under persecution the Church waneth not, but waxeth. And the Lord's field is ever clothed with a nobler harvest, when the grains of His wheat abide not alone, but fall into the ground, and die, and bring forth fruit manifold, (John xii. 24.) What an increase hath sprung up from these two glorious grains of God's seed, is witnessed by the thousands of blessed martyrs who have rivalled the triumph of the Apostles, who gird this our city with their red and world-famous armies, and have set upon her head a crown of many kingly jewels.

Fifth Lesson.

THEIR united succour, dearly beloved brethren, which hath been given unto us by God as an example of patience and a confirmation of faith, will be the cause of our joy on the days of the commemoration of all the Saints, but amid all their glory, doth excel in glory the glory of their spiritual fathers, whom the grace of God exalted to such a pitch of eminence among all the members of the Church, that they seem as it were the two eyes of that body whereof Christ is the Head. The worthy deed and loyal courage of either of them are such as to baffle all power of man's speech worthily to express the same, nor need we draw any distinction between them. In their election they were peers, in their work fellows, and in their end equals.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT, as our own experience hath taught us, and that of our forefathers hath proved, we believe and trust that, amid all the toils whereby in this life we strive towards the obtaining of God's mercy, we shall ever be holpen by the prayers of these our special Patrons, and that when our own sins thrust us down, the good deeds of the Apostles may pull us up. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Who, with the Father and the Holy Ghost, hath but one power, as He hath one Divine nature, for ever and ever. Amen.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 592.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of July, were born into the better life—

The Prophets Hosea and Haggai, [766 and 520 B.C.]

In Africa, the holy martyr Jucundian, who was drowned in the sea for Christ's sake.

In the county of Bourges, in Gaul, the holy martyr Laurian, Bishop of Seville, in Spain, [in the year 544,] whose head has been taken thither.

At Sirmich, [in Hungary,] the holy martyrs Innocentius, Sebastia, and thirty others.

At Madaurus, in Africa, the holy martyrs Namphanion and his Companions, whom he nerved to the fight and carried on to the crown. [Namphanion has among his countrymen been called the Arch- or Proto-Martyr, because he was the first to shed his blood in a public persecution—that of Septimius Severus, at the end of the second century. The names of his companions were Miggine, Luciate, and Sanae.]

At Cyrene, in Libya, the holy Confessor Theodorus, Bishop [of that see,] who in the persecution under Diocletian was hided with scourges loaded with lead, under the President Dignian, and had his tongue cut out, but in the end died in peace.

On the same day, holy Flavian, second Patriarch of Antioch, and Elias, Bishop of Jerusalem, who were banished by the Emperor Anastasius because of the Council of Chalcedon, and passed away as conquerors to be ever with the Lord.

At Augsburg, holy Ulderic, Bishop [of that see,] famous for the grace of wonderful self-restraint, beneficence, watchfulness, and miracles, [in the year 973.]

At Lisbon,[1] the holy widow Isabel, Queen of Portugal, [in the year 1336,] whose feast is kept upon the 8th day of this present month of July by order of Pope Innocent XII.

At Tours, are commemorated upon this same day both the translation of the body of the holy Confessor Martin, Bishop of that city, and the dedication of his church there, being also the same day whereon he had been ordained Bishop not many years before.

JULY 4.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Epistle of St Paul to the Romans, written by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (Serm. xxxii. in the Moral Exhortations.)

THE Apostle Paul wisheth unto us the grace of our Lord JESUS Christ, as the mother of all good, and it remaineth for us to show ourselves worthy of the care of such a Protector, that we may not only listen to Paul's voice, while we are here, but when we pass away to the hereafter, may earn a sight of that great soldier of Christ. Yea—if we listen to him here, we shall see him there. Not nigh, but from afar off, shall we see him—see him standing near the glory of that Kingly throne where the Cherubim glorify God, where the Seraphim are flying, there shall we see Paul along with Peter, a prince and a leader of the army of the saints, and we shall rejoice in his brotherly love.

---

[1] But, according to the lessons of her feast, she died at Estremoz.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR if, while he was yet here, he so loved men, that, although he would fain have been dissolved and been with Christ, yet he was willing still to tarry for man's sake, much greater is the tender love which he now showeth. This is why I love Rome, although if I would, there are many other things for which I might praise her—her greatness, her antiquity, her beauty, her population, her empire, her wealth, or her victories. But all these I pass by, and I call Rome blessed for this cause, that Paul in his lifetime loved her children so well, was so kindly toward them, taught openly there, and at length laid down his life among them. They have there his holy body, and this alone maketh that city illustrious more than doth aught else. And just as a great and strong body hath two bright eyes, so are the bodies of these two Holy Apostles in the city of Rome.

Sixth Lesson.

NOT brighter is the sky when the sun doth make it all light with his beams, than is the city of Rome darting forth these twin rays of light to the uttermost bounds of the earth. There it is that Paul, there it is that Peter, will rise, and be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. (1 Thess. iv. 16.) Think, and thrill at the thought, of what Rome will see then, when she beholdeth Paul and Peter rising suddenly out of that coffin, to be caught up to meet the Lord. What rose will Rome offer to Christ? What twin crowns are they wherewith that city is adorned withal? What fresh springs hath she in her? Therefore it is that I marvel at that city, not because of the abundance of her gold, not because of her pillars, not because of any other loveliness that she hath, but because of these two pillars of the Church. Would that I could even now embrace the corpse of Paul—that I could cling to his grave—that I could see the dust of that body, which filled up those things that were behind of the sufferings of Christ (Col. i. 24,) which bore about in it the marks of the Lord JESUS (Gal. vi. 17,) and which went everywhere carrying the seed of the Gospel!

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 629.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of St Anthony Mary Zaccaria, Confessor, founder of the Clerks Regular of St Paul, a man illustrious for every virtue, and famous for miracles. Leo XIII. enrolled his name among those of the Saints. His body is reverenced at Milan, in the Church of St Barnabas.

Upon the same 5th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Zoe, the wife of the blessed martyr Nicostratus. She was praying at the grave of the blessed Apostle Peter when she was arrested by the persecutor under the Emperor Diocletian, and committed to a dark prison. In the end she was hung on a tree by her neck and hair, and a thick smoke made below her, and so, constantly confessing the Lord, gave up the Ghost.

In Syria, the holy martyr Domitius, [in the year 363,] who by his power doth many kindnesses unto the dwellers there.

At Cyrene, in Libya, the holy martyr Cyrilla, [in the year 310.] In the persecution under Diocletian live embers mixed with incense were laid upon her hand, and she held them there for a long while, lest, if she jerked away the live coals, she should seem to have offered the incense, when she was most cruelly mangled, and so passed away to Christ her Bridegroom adorned with her own blood.

At Jerusalem, holy Athanasius, Deacon [of the Church of Rome.] He was seized by the heretics regarding the holy council of Chalcedon, [held in the year 451,] and after he had been tried with all kinds of torments, was at length slain with the sword, [in the year 452.]

In Sicily, the holy martyrs Agathon and Triphina.

At Tomisvar, on the Black Sea, the holy martyrs Marinus, Theodatus, and Sedophas.

At Trier, the holy Confessor Numerian, [Bishop of that see, in the year 657.]

On the same day is commemorated the holy Confessor Michael de Sanctis, of whom mention is made upon the 10th day of April.

At San Severino, in Picenum, the holy Virgin Philumena, [sixth century.]

Vespers of the following.

JULY 5.

St Anthony Mary Zaccaria, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

MAKE us able, O Lord God, in the Spirit of Thy blessed Apostle Paul, to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, wherein Thy blessed servant Anthony Mary was so wonderfully taught when he gathered together in Thy Church new households of clerks and of virgins. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the General Commemorations, (p. 103.) Prayer from June 29.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ANTHONY Mary Zaccaria was born [in 1502] of a noble family, at Cremona, on the Pau. Even in his childhood marks of his future holiness became manifest. There shone brightly in him, signs of excellent graces of childlike love toward

God and the blessed Virgin, and more especially of tenderness toward the poor, for the relief of whose needs he was ready more than once to strip off his own costly dress. He studied arts at his own home, philosophy at Ticino, and medicine at Padua, and as he excelled all others in goodness, so did he surpass all his companions in intellectual power. After taking his degree he returned home, and there understood from God that his call was to the healing of souls, rather than to that of bodies. He therefore began earnestly to study theology while he continued in the meantime to visit the sick, to teach Christian doctrine to children, to excite godliness among the young, and oftentimes even to exhort the aged to amend their ways. It is said that when he first said Mass after his ordination a light broke from heaven, and he seemed to the astonished bystanders to be surrounded by a circle of angels: from that time forth he laboured more earnestly for the salvation of souls, and the struggle against evil living. His fatherly love for strangers, for the needy, and for the afflicted, and the godly exhortations and alms wherewith he entertained them, made his house to become a refuge for the wretched, and earned for himself from his fellow-citizens the title of father of the fatherland and of angels.

Fifth Lesson.

WHILE he was at Milan he bethought him that greater Christian good might be done if he gathered round him some fellow-labourers in the Lord's vineyard, and when he had conferred thereon with those noble and holy men Bartholomew Ferrari and James Morigia, he founded the brotherhood of Clerks Regulars, to whom on account of his own great love for the Apostle of the Gentiles he gave the name of Clerks of St Paul. Under the approbation of the Supreme Pontiff Clement VII. and the confirmation of Paul III. this brotherhood was in a short time widely spread abroad. The Congregation of nuns who are called Angelicals also regard Anthony Mary as their Father and Founder. His own thought of himself was so lowly that he never would be at the head of his own Order. In great long-suffering he bore with patience the violent storms which were raised against his Institute. In the greatness of his charity he never ceased to enkindle the members of religious orders to love toward God, to exhort priests to live Apostolic lives, and to found guilds of married men, to the bringing forth of much fruit. Somewhiles he and his disciples would walk through the streets and squares with a Cross carried before them, and there by burning and vehement harangues call to salvation the wandering and the wicked.

Sixth Lesson.

IT is to be remembered that in his burning love for JESUS Crucified he reminded all men of the Mystery of the Cross by the sound of a bell every Friday evening, and himself as a true disciple of Paul always bore about in his body the dying of the Lord JESUS, (2 Cor. iv. 10.) The holy Name of Christ is found everywhere in his writings and was ever in his mouth. He was moved by a singular love toward the Holy Eucharist. He established a custom of receiving it often, and is said to have brought in the practice of exposing the same upon a lofty throne for three days' adoration. Of his earnest modesty the appearance of life which was seen even in his dead body seemed a witness. Together with all these things he possessed the gifts of trance, of tears, of knowledge of things to come, of reading the thoughts of the heart, and of power against the enemy of mankind. He was worn out with toil when he was seized with his last illness at Guastalla, whither he had been called as a peacemaker. He was carried to Cremona amid the tears of his brethren and the embraces of his devoted mother, whose imminent death he foretold. He was comforted by a vision of the Apostles above, and predicted the increase of his Brotherhood. On the 5th day of July, in the year 1539, he died a holy death at the age of thirty-six. Christians forthwith began to honour him for his eminent sanctity and the number of his signs and wonders, which honour the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. approved and confirmed, and on the Feast of the Lord's Ascension in the year 1897 solemnly enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark, (x. 15.)

AT that time: Jesus said unto His Disciples: Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child: he shall not enter therein. [And He took them up in His arms, put His hands upon them, and blessed them.] And when He was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to Him, and asked Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Sermon 47: various.)

That which the Lord commandeth hard and heavy seemeth: ["Come, take up the Cross, and follow Me": and as it is written elsewhere,] "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. (Matth. xvi. 24.) But neither hard nor heavy is that which He commandeth when He that commandeth giveth help to fulfil. That is true which is said in Ps. xvi. 5, "By the words of Thy lips I have kept me to strait paths." That which is hard in the commandment love maketh easy. How great is the power of love, we know. And what signifieth this, "let him deny"? Let him put no trust in himself, let him feel that he is man, and let him have regard unto that which was spoken of the prophet, (Jer. xvii. 5,) "saying, Cursed be the man that trusteth in men." Let him mistrust himself, but not to sink; let him mistrust himself, that he may cleave unto God.

Eighth Lesson.

WHITHER are we to follow the Lord? Whither He is gone, we know. He is risen from the dead, and is gone up into heaven. Thither we must follow Him. And we must not despair of so doing, not because man is able to do anything, but because "He is faithful That promised." (Heb. xi. 11.) Why, then, should we despair, since "we are members of His Body, of His Flesh, and of His Bones," Who is the Head of the Church, and He "is the Saviour of the body," (Eph. xxx. 23.) Good is it to follow Him, but whither we are to follow Him we must see. When the Lord JESUS uttered those words bidding us to follow Him, He had not Himself as yet arisen from the dead, He had not as yet suffered, there lay still before Him the cross, shame, mockery, scourging, thorns, wounds, outrages, insults, death. After He uttered those words, His way became very rough. Art thou slothful? willest thou not to follow Him, but follow Him all the same, for who would not follow unto glory? All men love exaltation, but lowliness is the step to rise withal.

Ninth Lesson. (Epis. xxxviii.)

TAKE up thy cross, and follow the Lord, and the cross that the Lord commandeth us to carry after Him, that we may follow Him most speedfully, what is it but the death of this flesh? For it is this flesh that crucifieth us until "death is swallowed up in victory," (1 Cor. xv. 55.) Therefore must this our own cross itself be crucified and pierced with the nails of the fear of God, lest if it be free it hamper thee, in the carrying of it, and thou canst nowise follow the Lord save in carrying it. For how canst thou follow Him if thou be none of His. "And they that are Christ's," saith the Apostle, "have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts," (Gal. v. 24.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave of the Apostles.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the Octave of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul.

Upon the same 6th day of July, were born into the better life—

In Judea, the holy Prophet Isaiah, who was sawn asunder under King Manasseh, [about 715 B.C.,] and was buried under the oak at En Rogel beside the flowing of the waters, [the first of the four Greater Prophets.]

At Rome, the holy martyr Tranquillinus, father of the holy martyrs Mark and Marcellian. He had been converted to Christ by the preaching of the holy martyr Sebastian, baptized by the blessed Priest Polycarp, and himself ordained a Priest by the holy Pope Caius. He was praying at the grave of blessed Paul, upon the Octave Day of the Apostles, when the pagans under the Emperor Diocletian tried and stoned him. And so he finished his testimony, [in the year 286.]

At Fiesole, in Tuscany, the holy martyr Romulus, Bishop [of that see,] a disciple of Peter. He was sent forth by the Apostle to preach the gospel, and when he had proclaimed Christ in many places of Italy, he came back to Fiesole, where he and many Companions were crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Domitian.

In Campania, the holy Virgin and martyr Dominica, [fourth century.] Under the Emperor Diocletian she was condemned to the beasts for breaking idols, but the beasts did not hurt her. She was then beheaded, and so passed away to be ever with the Lord. Her body is kept with great reverence at Tropea, in Calabria.

On the same day, the holy martyr Lucy, a Campanian by race, who, being tried and sharply tormented under the Vicar Rixius Varus, turned him to Christ, with whom were joined Antoninus, Severinus, Diodorus, Dion, and seventeen others, who all suffered and were crowned together.

In the country of Treves, the holy Priest and Confessor Goer, [in the year 575.]

Vespers are of the following.

JULY 6.

Octave of the SS. Apostles Peter and Paul.

Double.

All from the Common Office of Apostles, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Verse and Answer, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and Prayer from the Common Commemoration at Vespers in the Psalter. A Commemoration is made of the Second Vespers of St Anthony. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (In the Metaphrastes.)

O BLESSED Apostles, who have toiled so much for us, what thanks shall we give you? When I remember thee, O Peter, I am lost in amazement—Paul, when I think of thee, my heart overwhelmeth me, and I weep. When I look at your sufferings I know not what to say or what to speak. How many prisons have ye made holy? How many fetters have ye made honourable? How many torments have ye endured? How many reproaches have ye borne? How have ye carried Christ? How have ye made the Churches glad by your preaching? Verily, your tongues were blessed instruments; it was for the Church's sake that your limbs were bloody. Ye have been made in all things followers of Christ. Your sound is gone out through all the earth, and your words to the ends of the world. (Ps. xviii. 4.)

Fifth Lesson.

REJOICE, O Peter, who hast been gladdened by the wood of the Cross of Christ. It was a showing forth of thy Teacher that thou didst will to be crucified, not like the Lord Christ, standing upright, but with thine head toward the earth, as one that made a way from earth to heaven. Blessed are the nails which pierced thine holy limbs. With sure and certain hope didst thou commend thy spirit into the hands of the Lord, thou who hadst been a faithful servant to Him and to His Bride the Church, thou who in thy warm heart hadst loved the Lord more loyally than all the Apostles.

Sixth Lesson.

REJOICE thou also, O blessed Paul, whose head was cut off by the sword, thou whose fearless devotion no words can express. What sword was that which divided thine holy neck, that instrument of the Lord's work, worthy that heaven should wonder at it, and earth worship it? What place was that which drank in thy blood, that appeared like drops of milk upon the raiment of him who smote thee, and made the savage and his comrades to become strangely gentle and faithful? Would that I could have that sword for a crown, and the nails of Peter set therein as the jewels of the diadem.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xiv. 22.)

AT that time: JESUS constrained His disciples to get into a ship, and to go before Him unto the other side, while He sent the multitudes away. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. ii. Comm. on Matth. xiv.)

The Lord commanded His disciples to cross over to the other side, and constrained them to get into a ship. By these expressions we perceive that they were unwilling to leave the Lord, the love of their Teacher making them desire not to lose a moment of His company.

"And when He had sent the multitudes away, He went up into a mountain apart to pray."

Perchance, if Peter, and James, and John, who had seen Him in the glory of the Transfiguration, had been with Him, they would have gone up into the mountain with Him, — but the common herd could not follow Him, save when He taught them on the sea shore, or fed them in the wilderness.

Eighth Lesson.

HE went up into a mountain apart to pray,—not as He Who, with five loaves and two fishes, had satisfied about five thousand men, besides women and children, but as He, Who when He heard of the death of John, departed into a desert place apart (vv. 12-21.) Not that we make two Persons in the Lord; but some of His works He did as God, and some as man.

"But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves."

The Apostles were right to be slow and unwilling to leave the Lord, for, when He was not with them, they were in peril of shipwreck.

Ninth Lesson.

WHILST the Lord abode alone upon the top of the mountain, a contrary wind arose, and the sea raged, and the Apostles were endangered; and yet the threatening shipwreck held off until JESUS came.

"And in the fourth watch of the night, JESUS went unto them, walking on the sea."

The watches of soldiers are divided into three. When therefore it is said that the Lord came unto them in the fourth watch, it appeareth that they had been in peril all night, and that it was at the end of the night, as it will again be at the end of the world, that He came to the rescue of His disciples.

LAUDS.

Verse and Answer, Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias, and Prayer from the Common Commemoration, (p. 17.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the translation of the holy martyr Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury. [On the which 7th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1223, his body was raised from its grave in the crypt of Canterbury Cathedral and placed in a shrine.]

Upon the same 7th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Claudius the book-keeper, Nicostratus the chief clerk, Castorius, Victorinus, and Symphorianus, whom holy Sebastian brought to believe in Christ and the blessed Priest Polycarp baptized. Fabian the judge ordered them to be arrested while they were seeking the bodies of holy martyrs, and troubled them for ten days with threats and cajolery. When he found that he was in nowise able to move them, he ordered them to be tortured and afterwards to be cast into the sea, [in the year 302.]

At Durazzo, in Macedonia, the holy martyrs Peregrin, Lucian, Pompey, Hesychius, Papius, Saturninus, and German. These were Italians by nation, and fled to Durazzo during the persecution under Trajan. When they came thither they saw holy Bishop Astius hanging upon the cross for Christ's faith's sake, whereupon they openly confessed themselves to be Christians, and by command of the President they were first tried and then drowned in the sea.

At Perugia, the blessed Pope Benedict XI., surnamed Tarvisini, a Friar of the Order of Preachers, who in the short while of his Papacy did wondrous much for the peace of the Church, the restoration of discipline, and the increase of religion. [He died at Perouse in 1304, after reigning eight months and some days.]

At Alexandria, the holy Pantænus. He was a man apostolic and adorned with all wisdom. Such was his use and love toward the Word of God that he went glowing with faith and earnestness to preach the gospel of Christ to the nations that are in the uttermost parts of the East. Thence he returned to Alexandria, and there at length he fell asleep, under the Emperor Antoninus Caracalla, [in the year 214.]

At Brescia, the holy Confessor Apolonius, Bishop [of that see, second century.]

In Saxony, holy Willibald, first Bishop of Eichstadt, who laboured in the Gospel along with holy Boniface and turned many peoples to Christ, [he died in the year 786,] whose feast we keep upon the 9th day of this present month of July.

[At Clermont,] in Auvergne, holy Illidius, Bishop [of Clermont,] [in the year 385.]

At Urgel, in Spain, holy Odo, Bishop [of that see,] [in the year 1122.]

In England, holy Hedda, [a monk of the monastery of St Hilda,] Bishop of the West Saxons. [In the year 676 he lived first at Dorchester, but afterward removed his see to Winchester. He governed his church with great holiness for about thirty years, and departed to the Lord in the year 705.]

At Gray, in Burgundy, blessed Peter Foreri, a Canon Regular of the Order of the Most Holy Saviour, famous for graces and miracles, [in the year 1640.]

In England, the holy Virgin Eadelburg, daughter of [Anna,] King of the East Angles. [She became a nun, and finally Abbess, in the monastery of Ferremontier, in the forest of Brie, in France, about the year 695.]

Prayer throughout the day from the Common Commemoration. Vespers of the following.

JULY 7.

Translation of St Thomas, Archbishop [of Canterbury,] Martyr.

Greater Double.

All as in the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Extracted from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who dost grant unto us to keep the translation of Thy blessed Martyr and Bishop Thomas, we humbly beseech Thee, for his sake, and at his prayers, to translate us from vice unto virtue, and from the dungeon unto the throne. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers Commemoration of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, same as the Common Commemoration, (p. 103.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Acts xx. 17, as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Ambrose, (p. 600.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (x. 11.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the Pharisees: I am the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd giveth His life for His sheep. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (14th on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren, ye have heard from the Holy Gospel what is at once your instruction, and our danger. Behold, how He Who, not by the varying gifts of nature, but of the very essence of His being, is Good, behold how He saith: "I am the Good Shepherd." And then He saith what is the character of His goodness, even of that goodness of His which we must strive to copy: "The Good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." As He had foretold, even so did He; as He had commanded, so gave He ensample. The Good Shepherd gave His life for the sheep, and made His Own Body and His Own Blood to be our Sacramental Food, pasturing upon His Own Flesh the sheep whom He had bought.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] A crown of gold upon his head, wherein is engraved Holiness, an ornament of honour, a costly work.

Verse. For Thou hast prevented him with the blessings of sweetness, Thou hast set a crown of precious stones upon his head.

Answer. Wherein is engraved Holiness, an ornament of honour, a costly work.

Eighth Lesson.

HE, by despising death, hath shown us how to do the like; He hath set before us the mould wherein it behoveth us to be cast. Our first duty is, freely and tenderly to spend our outward things for His sheep, but lastly, if need be, to serve the same by our death also. From the light offering of the first, we go on to the stern offering of the last, and, if we be ready to give our life for the sheep, why should we scruple to give our substance, seeing how much "more is the life than meat?" (Matth. vi. 25.)

Eighth Responsory.

This is a Martyr indeed, who shed his blood for Christ's Name's sake; who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. [2] The Lord guided the righteous in right paths, and showed him the kingdom of God.

Answer. Who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who feared not for the threats of judges, nor sought to be great with the glory of this world, but pressed on unto the kingdom of heaven.

Ninth Lesson.

AND some there be which love the things of this world better than they love the sheep; and such as they deserve no longer to be called shepherds. These are they of whom it is written: "But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth" (12.) He is not a shepherd, but an hireling which feedeth the Lord's sheep, not because he loveth their souls, but because he doth gain earthly wealth thereby. He that taketh a shepherd's place, but seeketh not gain of souls, that same is but an hireling; such an one is ever ready for creature-comforts, he loveth his pre-eminence, he groweth sleek upon his income, and he liketh well to see men bow down to him.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy widow Isabel, Queen of Portugal, famous for her graces and miracles, [in the year 1336,] whom Pope Urban VIII. enrolled among the Saints.

In Lesser Asia, the holy Aquila and Priscilla his wife, of whom the holy Evangelist Luke writeth in the Acts of the Apostles [xviii. 2.]

At Porto, in Italy, fifty holy soldiers, all martyrs, who were brought to the faith through the testifying of holy Bonosa, baptized by the blessed Pope Felix, and slain in the persecution under the Emperor Aurelian.

In Palestine, the holy martyr Procopius. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian he was brought from Bethshan, [where he was reader, exorcist, and interpreter in the church,] to Cæsarea, where at the constancy of his very first answers he was beheaded by the command of Fabian the judge.

At Constantinople, the holy Abrahamite monks, who resisted the Emperor Theophilus concerning the worship of the holy images, and therefore suffered martyrdom.

At Wurzburg, in Germany, holy Kilian, Bishop of that city. [An Irish monk, who travelled to Rome in the year 686, was sent by the Roman Pontiff Conon to preach the Gospel. When he had turned many to Christ he was murdered, [in the year 689,] along with Colman a Priest and Tothan a Deacon.

At Rome, the blessed Pope Eugenius III. He had been Abbat of the monastery of SS. Vincent and Anastatius, near Rome, before he was made Supreme Pontiff. He ruled the universal Church with wonderful holiness and wisdom. [His name was Bernard Paganelli, and he was a native of Pisa, and Canon of that city. He then became a monk of Cîteaux and disciple of St Bernard before being elected Pope. He was elected Pope on February 15, 1145, and consecrated in the Benedictine Abbey of Fafa on the 16th of that month. He died at Tivoli on July 8, 1153.]

At Trier, the holy Confessor Auspicius, Bishop [of that see, fifth century.]

At Second Vespers Commemoration of St Isabel.

Antiphon. Be wise now therefore, O ye kings, be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

Verse. Blessed Isabel, pray for us.

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Prayer from her Office.

SECOND LORD'S DAY IN JULY.

Feast of the Holy Relics.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

At the beginning of the Martyrology on the preceding Saturday is read:

On the morrow is the feast in honour of the holy Relics which are laid up in our churches.

Prayer throughout.

LORD, Who workest wonders in the relics of Thy Saints, increase in us the faith of the Resurrection, and make us finally partakers of that immortal glory whereof in their ashes we do honour the pledges. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Treatise by St John of Damascus upon the Orthodox Faith (iv. 15.)

THE Lord Christ hath made the relics of the Saints to be as it were healing wells, whence floweth for us much good, and a right sweet balm. Do not let any one gainsay this. If God was pleased that water should flow out of the hard and living rock in the desert, or again out of the jawbone of an ass in order to quench the thirst of Samson, why should it seem to any one impossible to believe that He should cause a sweet balm to flow from the relics of the martyrs? Nay. None will gainsay this who hath seen and known that power and honour wherewith God doth glorify His Saints. It is written in the old Law, Num. xix. 16, "Whosoever toucheth . . . . a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean." But the martyrs we cannot reckon among the dead.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR since the Life Himself and the Author of life was numbered among the dead we cannot call them dead who have died in the hope of the Resurrection, and in faith toward Him. How could a corpse work miracles? But through the Saints devils are cast out, diseases are put to flight, the sick are healed, the blind receive their sight, lepers are cleansed, trials and sorrows are done away; in short, through the Saints every good gift and every perfect gift cometh down from the Father of Lights upon them who believe, nothing wavering. What trouble wouldst thou not take to find a patron to commend thee unto an earthly king and to speak unto him on thy behalf? and are not they to be honoured who offer themselves as the patrons of all mankind and who entreat God on our behalf?

Sixth Lesson.

IN good sooth are they to be honoured, and thus honoured that we should build temples and offer oblations to God in their name, that we should worship their memories and rejoice therein with spiritual joy, but a joy which should become them by whom we are invited thereto, and not one by which, while we are seeking to worship them and deserve well of them, we should rather insult and provoke them. Those things by which God is worshipped give pleasure to His servants. Those things by which God is insulted offend His champions, therefore let us worship the Saints with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, and repentance, and pitifulness toward the poor, the which things are a service acceptable to God. Let us put up to them statues and visible images, but let us rather by imitating their goodness make ourselves their living images.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609,) the last of the three is omitted.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious work
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday, and the Hymn, "We praise Thee, O Lord, &c.," is said at the end. A Commemoration of the Sunday is made at Lauds and Second Vespers.

JULY 8.

St Isabel, Queen of Portugal, Widow.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Virgin nor Martyr, (p. 649,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

When the full First Vespers are said the Antiphons and Prayer are from Lauds.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. For the holy works of blessed Isabel, * let us praise our God.

Hymn.[1]

PURE, meek, with soul serene,
Sweeter to her it was to serve unseen
Her God, than reign a Queen.

Now far above our sight,
Enthroned in the azure, starry height,
She reigns in realms of light.

So long as time shall flow,
Teaching to all who sit on thrones below
The good that power can do.

Praise to the Father be—
Praise to the Son—praise, Holy Ghost, to Thee!
Through all eternity. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Thou hast set * the glory of Isabel above the heavens.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. Come, O My chosen one, * and I will establish My throne in thee.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. She hath received a blessing from the Lord, * and mercy from the God of her salvation.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. Many daughters have gathered riches—
Answer. But thou excellest them all.

Lessons from Prov. xxxi. 10, (p. 649.)

First Responsory.

Born daughter of a kingly race, in heaven standeth Isabel victorious, clad in a vesture wrought about with three divers colours of grace. For she hath left upon earth unto all them that come after her a noble ensample of a woman in three states of life.
Verse. As a virgin, as a wife, and as a widow, she walked undefiled.
Answer. For she hath left upon earth unto all them that come after her a noble ensample of a woman in three states of life.

Second Responsory.

She opened her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue was the law of kindness.
Verse. For thou hast prevented her with the blessings of sweetness.
Answer. And in her tongue was the law of kindness.

Third Responsory.

Thou, O Lord, hast given her her heart's desire, and hast not withholden the request of her lips.
Verse. Thou hast compassed her with Thy favour as with a shield.
Answer. And hast not withholden the request of her lips.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And hast not withholden the request of her lips.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness * shall thy right hand lead thee wonderfully.

Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Second Antiphon. He breaketh the bow, * and cutteth the weapons in sunder, and burneth the shields in the fire.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. Thy right hand * is full of righteousness and mercy.

Ps. xlvii. Great is the LORD, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. [2] Thy rod and Thy staff—
Answer. They comfort me.

Fourth Lesson.

ISABEL, daughter of Peter III., King of Aragon, was born in the year of Christ 1271, and it was an omen of her saintly life, that her father and mother, contrary to the usual custom, caused her to be baptized, not by the name of her mother or grandmother, but by that of her mother's aunt, the holy Lady Elizabeth of Thuringia. As soon as ever she was born, her destiny of being a peacemaker between kings and kingdoms began to appear, for the joy of her birth put an end to the ruinous quarrels of her father and grandfather. As she grew up, her father, delighted with her disposition, was used to foretell that his Isabel would in herself excel all the daughters of the kingly house of Aragon, and that the happiness of his own home and kingdom was all owing to this one damsel, whose heavenly life he venerated for her indifference to bodily finery, her abstinence from pleasures, her many fasts, her instancy in prayer to God, and her activity in doing works of charity. This illustrious maiden was sought in marriage by many princes, and [at twelve years of age] was wedded with Christian rites to Denys, King of Portugal.

Fourth Responsory.

Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people and thy father's house;

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] Ps. xxii. 4.

and the king shall greatly desire thy beauty.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty, go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Answer. And the King shall greatly desire thy beauty.

Fifth Lesson.

AS a wife, she gave herself up as much to the education of her children, as to her own improvement, striving in all ways, next to God, to please her husband. For nearly half the year, she was used to live on bread and water, and once, when she was ill, God changed the water into wine, which the physicians had ordered her to drink, but which she was unwilling to take. Once when she kissed a disgusting ulcer in a poor woman, it was immediately healed. One winter-time when she was giving some money to the poor, and was fain her husband should not see her alms, the coins changed into roses. She gave sight to a maiden who had been born blind, and healed many other persons of grievous sicknesses by the Sign of the Cross. The miracles of this kind, which she worked, were many. She not only built, but richly endowed convents, schools, and churches. She had a wonderful skill in making peace between kings, and toiled unweariedly to lighten all suffering, whether public or private.

Fifth Responsory.

She laid her hands to hard work. She stretched out her hand to the poor, yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy.

Verse. She dispersed, she gave to the poor. Her righteousness endureth for ever.

Answer. She stretched out her hand to the poor, yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy.

Sixth Lesson.

KING Denys died [on the 6th day of January, 1325,] and Isabel, who in her maidenhood had been a pattern to virgins, and in her married life to wives, now, in her loneliness, was an ensample to widows. Clad in the raiment of the nuns of St Clare, she faithfully attended at the King's funeral, and soon after went to Compostella, where she offered many precious gifts, of silk, and gold, and silver, and precious stones, for the benefit of his soul. Thence she returned home, and spent in holy and godly uses everything that remained to her that was dear and costly, eager to relieve every kind of suffering. She lived, not for herself, but for God, and to be useful to mankind. She finished the convent for nuns, right worthy of a Queen, which she had founded at Coïmbra. She fed the poor, defended widows, protected orphans. A war being lighted up between her son Alphonsus IV., King of Portugal, and her grandson Alphonsus XI., King of Castile, she resolved to set out to reconcile them, and went to the famous city of Estremoz, [upon the borders of the two kingdoms.] On the journey, she caught a violent fever, of which, after a vision of the Virgin Mother of God, she died a saintly death on the 4th day of July, in the year 1336. She became illustrious for miracles after her death, especially for the sweetness of the savour of her body, which hath now remained uncorrupt for well-nigh three hundred years,[1] and she hath always been spoken of as "the Holy Queen Isabel." At length, in the year of our salvation 1625, which was that of the Jubilee, Urban VIII., all Christendom gathered together and approving, formally enrolled her name among those of the Saints.

Sixth Responsory.

The kingdoms of the earth and all the glory of the world I have reckoned but loss for the love of Christ JESUS my Lord, Whom I have seen, Whom I have desired, Whom I have believed, Whom I have loved.

Verse. My heart is overflowing with a good matter, I speak of my works unto the king.

Answer. Whom I have seen, Whom I have desired, Whom I have believed, Whom I have loved.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whom I have seen, Whom I have desired, Whom I have believed, Whom I have loved.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Praise and beauty are before Him; * holiness and majesty are in His sanctuary.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. The heavens declared His righteousness * and all the people saw His glory.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. With righteousness shall He judge * the world, and the people with equity.

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. A fire shall go before Him.

Answer. And burn up His enemies round about.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

Seventh Responsory.

She opened her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue was the law of kindness. She looked well to the ways of her household; and she spoke of the testimonies of the Lord.

Verse. She tasted and perceived that her merchandise was good. Her candle went not out by night.

Answer. She spoke of the testimonies of the Lord.

Eighth Responsory.

[2] I called [upon God,] and the spirit of wisdom came to me, and I preferred her before sceptres and thrones, and esteemed that riches are nothing in comparison of her.

Verse. [3] Wisdom is better than all riches.

Answer. Riches are nothing in comparison of her.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Riches are nothing in comparison of her.

---

[1] This was apparently written when she was canonised, in 1625.

[2] Wisd. vii. 7.

[3] Prov. iii. 15.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. While the King was in his chamber, * my spikenard sent forth the smell thereof.

Second Antiphon. The King shall greatly desire thy beauty, * for He is the Lord thy God.

Third Antiphon. [1] Mighty in work and word, * to pacify the wrath of the Lord, and to turn the heart of the father unto the son.

Fourth Antiphon. As the rainbow giving light in the bright clouds, * and as the flower of roses in the spring of the year.

Fifth Antiphon. As the morning-star in the midst of a cloud, * and as the moon at the full.

Hymn.[2]

ANGEL of peace, thy regal wealth and fame
Thou didst abandon for thy Lord's sweet sake;
Now Angel choirs thy blessedness proclaim—
Let not the foe thy children overtake.

Be thou our guide in life till we have found
Eternal life. Let all one mind approve.
May every act sweet fragrance breathe around,
As when the roses hid thy deeds of love.

O blessed Charity! which can bestow
A never-fading crown in heavenly spheres.
To Father and to Son be glory now,
And to the Spirit, through eternal years.
Amen.

Verse. For the sake and at the prayers of blessed Isabel,

Answer. Be merciful unto Thy people, O Lord!

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [3] Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, * thou art the great glory of Israël, thou art the great rejoicing of thy nation.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O MOST merciful God, Who didst ennoble the blessed Queen Isabel with divers excellent graces, and withal with a gift of stilling the tempest of war, grant unto us through her pleading, in this dying life that peace for which we humbly pray, and hereafter to attain unto everlasting joy in Thy Presence. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Willibald, first Bishop of Eichstad, in Saxony, who laboured in the Gospel along with holy Boniface, and turned many peoples to Christ, [in the year 786,] of whom mention is made upon the 7th day of this present month of July.

Upon the same 9th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, at the Dropping Well, the holy martyrs Zeno and ten thousand two hundred and three others, [third century.]

At Gortyna, in Crete, the holy Cyril, Bishop [of that see.] In the persecution under Decius he was cast into the fire by order of the President Lucius, when his bonds were burnt but he escaped unburnt, and the judge was so confounded at such a marvel that he would have let him go free, had he not there and then with lively faith proclaimed Christ, wherefore he caused him to be beheaded.

At Tora, on Lake Velino, in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyrs Anatolia and Audax. Anatolia was a Virgin of Christ, she had healed many sick of divers diseases throughout the whole province of Picenum, and turned them to Christ, when by command of the judge Faustinian she suffered divers punishments. She was delivered from a serpent which was sent against her and converted Audax to the faith, and at last was run through with a sword as she stood praying with outspread hands. Audax also was thrown into prison, and forthwith received his crown by being beheaded.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Patermuth, Copres, and Alexander, who were slain under the Emperor Julian the Apostate.

At La Brille, in Holland, the nineteen holy martyrs who are called the Martyrs of Gorcum. They were subjected to divers mockings and torments, and at last put to death, [in the year 1572,] by the Calvinist heretics, because they defended the authority of the Church of Rome and the real presence of Christ in the Eucharist. Their names were enrolled among those of the holy martyrs by the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX

At Martula, in Umbria, the holy Confessor Brictius; he suffered many things under Marcian the judge, for confessing the Lord, and when he had turned a great multitude of people to Christ he fell asleep in the Lord. [He was Bishop of Martula at the end of the sixth century.]

At Città di Castello, the holy Virgin Veronica de Quiliani, of the Order of Friars Minors Capuchins, Abbess of the Convent of Poor Clares at Città di Castello. [She was born on December 27, 1660, at Mercatello, a little town in the Duchy of Urbino.] Famous for her wonderful love of suffering and other excellences and gifts of heavenly grace, [in the year 1727,] Pope Gregory XVI. enrolled her name among those of the holy Virgins.

Vespers are of the following.

SECOND VESPERS.

Prayer from her Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WILLIBALD was a son of holy King Richard, and brother of the holy Virgin Wallburg and of the Abbat Wunibald. When he was three years old he seems to be at the point of death from sickness when his godly parents carried him to the Cross, which it was the use of the noble Anglo-Saxons to set up in their houses for prayer's sake, and there commended him to God with tears, whereupon he was straightway healed. When he was fifteen years old his parents, in consequence of a vow, put him in a monastery, where he was taught letters and good living. After some years he went on pilgrimage, and while he was visiting the holy places in Palestine he received his eyesight back again upon Calvary after he had lost it for two months.

Fifth Lesson.

HE returned from the East and betook himself to Monte Cassino, where he filled divers offices for ten years, when he went to Rome. Holy Pope Gregory III. sent him into Germany, where he was ordained first Bishop of Eischstad, by holy Boniface, and he took to the work of preaching the Gospel in company with the Apostolic men that were come from England, that is to say the holy Bishops Burchard and Lullus, the Abbat Wigbert, and others. At Eischstad he built a monastery, wherein he showed forth by his own example the things which he had seen at Monte Cassino and in other houses of monks. By his saintly conversation he was a burning and shining light unto his brethren, and trained to a holy life them who resorted to him from all sides. By graces worthy of a Bishop, and by unwearied toil, he greatly profited the church committed to his care. He died full of days, and was buried at Eischstad, about the year of Christ 786. In the Roman Martyrology Willibald is named among the Saints upon the 7th day of July.

Sixth Lesson. (From St Maximus.)

Our blessed Father Willibald is safe now, &c., (p. 619.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, under Publius, Prefect of the City, in the time of the Emperor Antonine, seven holy Brethren, the sons of the holy martyr Felicity. Their names were Januarius, Felix, Philip, Silvanus, Alexander, Vitalis, and Martial. Januarius was first beaten with rods and starved, but in the end hided to death with scourges loaded with lead. Felix and Philip were beaten to death with clubs. Silvanus was killed by being cast over a steep place. Alexander, Vitalis, and Martial were beheaded.

Also at Rome, the holy sisters Rufina and Secunda, both Virgins and both martyrs. In the persecution under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus they were both tortured and then beheaded, and so passed to heaven. Their bodies lie buried in due honour in the Lateran Cathedral, hard by the Baptistery.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Januarius, Marinus, Nabor, and Felix, who were all beheaded.

At Nicopolis, in Armenia, the holy martyrs Leontius, Maurice, Daniel, and their Companions, who were put to divers and dreadful torments under the Emperor Licinius, and the President Lysias, and at length were cast into the fire, and so finished the course of their testimony.

In Pisidia, the holy martyrs Bianor and Sylvanus, who suffered most cruel torments for Christ's name's sake, and then were beheaded, and so received their crowns, [fourth century.]

At Iconium, the holy martyr Apolonius, who finished his illustrious testimony upon the Cross, [fourth century.]

At Ghent, the holy Virgin Amelberga, [in the year 772. She was a nun in the Abbey of Munster Blisen, in the Diocese of Liege. She died at the age of 31.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration of the following. Prayer from their office.

JULY 10.

The Seven Holy Brethren and the holy Virgins Rufina and Secunda, all Martyrs.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who know Thy glorious martyrs to have been in their testimony leal to Thee-ward, may feel the same in their prayers pitiful to us-ward. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN the persecution at Rome under Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, there were seven brethren, sons of the holy woman Felicity, whom the Præfect Publius first essayed to cajole by kindness, and then to shake by fear, to deny Christ and worship the gods; but, by their own bravery and the exhortation of their mother, they remained firm in their confession, and were all put to death in divers ways. Januarius was lashed to death with whips loaded with lead; Felix and Philip were beaten to death with cudgels; Silvanus was thrown over a precipice; Alexander, Vitalis, and Martial were beheaded. Their mother gained the same palm of martyrdom four months afterwards. The seven Brethren gave up their souls to God upon the 10th day of July.

Fifth Lesson.

THE virgin sisters, Rufina and Secunda, were Romans. Their parents had betrothed them to Armentarius and Verinus, but they both consecrated their virginity by vow to Christ, and refused marriage. They were arrested in the reign of the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus. The Præfect Junius failed to change their minds either by promises or threats, and then ordered Rufina to be scourged. While the lashing was going on, Secunda said to the Judge: "Why dost thou judge my sister to honour and me to dishonour? Be pleased to whip us both together, for we both together declare that Christ is God." The Judge was angered at these words, and ordered them both to a dark and stinking dungeon; but it was presently filled with a bright light and a sweet savour. They were then shut up in a hot flue of a bath, but they came forth from it unharmed. Stones were next tied to their necks and they were cast into the river Tiber, but an Angel delivered them therefrom. In the end they were beheaded on the Aurelian Way, at the tenth mile-stone from the city. The Lady Plautilla buried their bodies upon her own farm, but they were afterwards brought into the city, and laid in the Cathedral Church of the Most Holy Saviour,[1] hard by the Baptistery.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (110*th on various subjects.*)

WONDERFUL is the sight, my brethren, which is set before the eyes of our faith. We have heard with our ears, and we see in our thoughts, a mother, with superhuman love, watching her sons leaving this life before her. All men would fain depart hence before their children, but she was ready to die last. Departing from her, they were not lost, but gone before. And she looked, not to the life they were ending, but to the life they were beginning. They laid aside a life which must needs end in death, and began that life wherein they are alive for ever. The least of her work was that she was an on-looker; more amazing is it, when we remember that she was their exhortress. Her courage was more fruitful than her womb, and when she saw them contending and conquering, her heart contended and conquered in each.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xii. 46.)

AT that time: while JESUS yet talked to the people, behold, His mother and His brethren stood without, desiring to speak with Him. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory the Great. (3rd on the Gospels.)

Dearly beloved brethren: The gospel which is read this day is but very short, but it is heavy with great mysteries. Here JESUS, our Maker and Redeemer, feigneth Himself as though He knew not His Own Mother, and telleth who they be who are His mother and brethren, not by fleshly kinship, but by kinship of mind. "Who is My Mother? And who are My brethren? Whosoever shall do the will of My Father, Which is in heaven, the same is My brother, and sister, and mother." By the which words, what are we to understand, save that He gathereth together from out of Heathendom many that are willing to obey His commandments, and that He knoweth not Jewry, whereof, according to the flesh, He is a son.

Eighth Lesson.

SEEING that both men and women are called to the faith, we marvel not that He saith that whosoever shall do the will of His Father, the same is His brother, and sister. But it is startling to hear that the same is also His mother. His faithful disciples He is pleased to call His brethren, where He saith: "Go, tell My brethren," (Matth. xxviii. 10.) If then it is by joining His religion that one can become the brother of the Lord, let us see how one can become His mother.

Eighth Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood indeed, &c., (p. 607.)

Ninth Lesson.

BUT we must know that even as one becometh His brother or His sister by believing in Him, so one becometh His mother by preaching Him. Such an one, as it were, giveth birth to the Lord by causing Him to be in the hearer's heart, and by words giving His love existence in their neighbour's mind. For an example in point, behold blessed Felicity, whose Birth-day we keep to-day. She was one whose faith made her Christ's hand-maiden, and whose preaching made her Christ's mother. We read in the corrected edition of her Acts that she dreaded as much to leave her seven sons behind her alive in the flesh, as do worldly mothers to send theirs dead before them.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy brethren Cyril and Methodius, Bishops, who brought many peoples and kings to believe in Christ, and of whom mention is made on the 9th day of March.

Upon the same 11th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the blessed martyr Pope Pius I., [most likely reigned from 142-157,] who was crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.

At Nicopolis, in Armenia, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Januarius and Pelagia, who finished their testimony after having been tormented for four days with the rack, with hooks, and with potsherds.

---

[1] Now known as St John Lateran.

In the country of Sens, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Sidronius.

At Iconium, the holy martyr Marcian, who under the President Perennius through many torments attained the palm, [in the year 243.]

At Side, in Pamphylia, the holy Priest Cindeus, [third century.] In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the President Stratonicus caused him to be many ways tormented, and afterwards cast into the fire; there he remained unhurt, but afterward, while he was praying, gave up the ghost.

At Brescia, the holy martyrs Savinus and Cyprian, [martyrs in the Diocese of Poitiers, in the fifth or sixth century.] [La Bresse, in France, the native place of these saints, must be meant instead of Brescia, and probably the last entry on this day is merely a repetition.]

At Bergamo, [in Lombardy, in the year 683,] holy John, Bishop [of that see,] who was slain by the Arians for guarding the Catholic faith.

At Cordova, the holy Priest Abundius, who was crowned with martyrdom, [in the year 854,] for inveighing against Mohammedanism.

In the country of Poitiers, the holy Confessor Sabinus, [sixth century.]

Vespers are of the following.

JULY 11.

SS. Cyril and Methodius, Bishops and Confessors.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast granted unto the Slav peoples the knowledge of Thy Name through the mean of Thy blessed Confessors and Bishops Cyril and Methodius, grant that we, who here keep gladly the festival of the same Thy Saints, may hereafter be gathered unto their company. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

MATTINS.

Hymn.

THE heroes twain, in heaven's high place
Enthroned in light, the twofold grace
And strength of the Slavonian race,
Ye Faithful sing.

One love these brethren linked in one;
One duty urged them forth to run
With eager feet to preach the Son—
Eternal life.

Bulgaria, and Moravia too,
They bring, with all Bohemia, through
The light of heaven's clear shining to St Peter's feet.

Heaven crownéd for your well-fought fight,
On tearful suppliants turn your sight,
Defend the gift that once your might
Won for the Slav.

O may the generous soil that lies
Thus pleading keep th' eternal prize.
Rome ever gives to her that cries
What Rome first gave.

Father of all the human race,
Redeemer, Giver of all grace
And good, to Thee be thanks and praise
For ever more. Amen.

Verse. [1] Let Thy Priests be clothed with righteousness.

Answer. And let Thy Saints shout for joy.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things, that say unto Sion: Thy God reigneth!

A Commemoration is made of the Seven Holy Brethren from the Second Vespers of the Common of Many Martyrs, with the Prayer as above; also of St Pius I. from the First Vespers of the Common of One Martyr, with the Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness."

MATTINS.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Encyclical Letter of Pope Leo XIII.)

THE brethren Cyril and Methodius were born in an honourable position at Thessalonica. As they advanced in years they went to Constantinople to study letters in the capital of the Eastern world. Both made quick progress, but most chiefly Cyril, who gained such learning that he was called for excellency "the Philosopher." Methodius became a monk, but the Empress Theodora, on the recommendation of the Patriarch Ignatius, deemed Cyril worthy of receiving the task of teaching Christianity to the Khazar who dwelt beyond the Crimea. By the grace of God he so taught them that they laid aside their many superstitions and were joined to JESUS Christ. After properly establishing the new community of Christians Cyril hastened back to Constantinople, where he entered the monastery of Polychron, whither Methodius had already withdrawn himself. Rastilaw, Prince of Moravia, having heard tell of the good deeds beyond the Crimea, sent to Constantinople to the Emperor Michael III. to obtain some Gospel labourers. Cyril and Methodius were sent to him, and gladly received in Moravia, and applied themselves with such power and industry to the work of Christianising souls that it was not long before that nation also joyfully submitted to JESUS Christ. To this end Cyril found of great use the knowledge of the Slavonic language, which he had already acquired, and much effect was produced by the translation of holy Scripture which he made into the language of the people. Cyril and Methodius were the inventors of the alphabet in which the language of the Slavs is characteristically expressed, and for this reason they have been not unjustly termed the fathers of Slavonic literature.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the happy tidings of what they had done reached Rome, the Supreme Pontiff the holy Nicholas I. commanded these excellent brethren to come to Rome. When they started for Rome they brought with them the relics of the supreme Pontiff the holy

---

[1] Ps. cxxxi. [2] Rom. x. 15; Isa. lii. 7.

Clement I. which Cyril had discovered at Cherson. On hearing of their approach Adrian II., who had succeeded to the Papacy upon the death of Nicholas, went forth to meet them accompanied by the clergy and people with every sign of honour. Then Cyril and Methodius gave to the Supreme Pontiff in the presence of the clergy an account of the Apostolic office which they had discharged in so holy and toilsome a manner. When it was made blame to them by some enviers that they had used the Slavonic language for the purposes of public worship, they stated their reasons with such clearness and force that the Pontiff and clergy praised and approved them. When they had both taken an oath that they would remain in the faith of blessed Peter and of the Roman Pontiffs, they were consecrated bishops by Adrian, but it was the Will of God that Cyril, old in grace rather than in years, should close his life at Rome. His dead body received a public funeral, and was laid in the tomb which Adrian had built for himself, but it was afterwards brought to St Clement's and buried hard by the ashes of that martyr. As it was carried through the city with joyful psalm-singing, it seemed as though the procession were rather that of a triumph than that of a funeral, and that the Roman people were offering heavenly honour to some eminent saint. Methodius went back to Moravia, and there became from his whole soul a pattern to his flock, and from day to day more zealous in the service of Catholicism. He confirmed the Pannonians, the Bulgarians, and the Dalmatians in the Christian religion, and laboured much to bring the Corinthians to the worship of the one true God.

Sixth Lesson.

METHODIUS was again accused before John VIII., the successor of Adrian, of unsoundness in faith, and transgression of the traditions of the elders; he was summoned to Rome, and there easily proved, in the presence of John and of some Bishops and clergy of the city, that he had himself always firmly held the Catholic faith, and had carefully taught it to others, and that as regarded the use of the Slavonic language for public worship, he had acted lawfully from certain reasons, and the permission of Pope Adrian, and in nowise contrary to holy writ. The Pontiff therefore in this matter concurred with Methodius, and confirmed even in writing his archepiscopal authority and his mission among the Slavs. Methodius therefore went back to Moravia and resumed more earnestly than before the task committed to him, for the which also he cheerfully suffered exile. He converted the Prince of the Bohemians and his wife, and spread the Christian name far and wide among that people. He carried the light of the Gospel into Poland, and according to some writers, after establishing the see of Leopolis, went into Muscovy properly so called and established the see of Kieff. At the last he returned into Moravia, and when he felt that he was about to go the way of all flesh he named his own successor, exhorted the clergy and people for the last time to good living, and then calmly departed that life which had been to him a path to heaven. As Rome had honoured Cyril in his death, so did Moravia honour Methodius. The festival of these Saints, which had long been observed among the Slav nations, the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. ordered to be kept throughout the Universal Church with a special office and Mass.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

Ninth Lesson. (For St Pius I.)

PIUS I., the son of Rufinus, was from Aquilia, and was a Priest of the holy Roman Church when he was made Supreme Pontiff, he lived under the Emperors Antoninus Pius and Marcus Aurelius, he held five ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained twelve Bishops and eighteen Priests. There remain several eminent ordinances of his, notably that which ruleth that the Resurrection of the Lord be not observed upon any day of the week save the Lord's Day. He turned the house of Pudens into a church, and on account of its eminence above the other churches, as being that where the Bishop of Rome dwelt, he dedicated it under the name of the Shepherd. Here he often celebrated, and baptized and numbered among the faithful many converts to the faith. While he strove to do the work of a good shepherd he shed his blood for his sheep, and for the chief Shepherd Christ. He was crowned with martyrdom upon the 11th day of July, and buried upon the Vatican Hill.

LAUDS.

Hymn.

O FATHERLAND'S most radiant light,
Patrons of the Slavonic race,
Twin brethren, ye, of heavenly might,
Accept our yearly song of praise.

O ye whom Rome applauds, receives,
And clasps as in a mother's arms,
Right princely crowns for you she weaves,
And with a new strength you confirms.

Ye penetrate to barbarous lands,
And bring them Christ; so where the night
Of error fixed its hopeless bands
Ye bring the freedom of the light.

Then hearts in evil once forlorn
With new-found heavenly ardour burn;
The cruel thrustings of the thorn
To flowers of holy living turn.

Though, with the saints above, ye reign
In heavenly homes, from strife apart,
O hear our prayers, and maintain
The faith of the Slavonic heart.

So may the people now that stray,
Like wandering sheep from Christ's one fold,
Their fathers' better deeds display;
Then faith shall flourish as of old.

O Blessed Trinity, in us
Renew those bright celestial fires
To seek the path all glorious
Where trod the footsteps of our sires.
Amen.

Verse. [1] The people will tell of the wisdom of the Saints.

Answer. And the congregation will show forth their praise.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. In holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of their life did they serve the Lord, and therefore the Lord God of Israel hath clothed them with a robe of glory.

Commemoration of St Pius I. from Simple Office of One Martyr, (p. 601.) Prayer, "Mercifully consider our weakness," (p. 599.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of July, were born into the better life—

At the monastery of Passignano, near Florence, the holy Abbat John Gualberto, [in the year 1073,] founder of the Order of Vallombrosa.

At Milan, the holy martyrs Nabor and Felix, who suffered in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian.

In Cyprus, the blessed Jason, [Bishop of Cyprus, his native land. His name is properly Mnason,] an old disciple of Christ.

At Aquileia, the holy martyr Hermagoras, a disciple of the blessed Evangelist Mark, and the first Bishop of the said city. He was performing miracles of healing, preaching without ceasing, and converting the people, when he was many ways punished and at last beheaded, along with his Deacon Fortunatus, and so won an everlasting crown, [under Nero.]

At Lucca, in Tuscany, the blessed martyr Paulinus, who was ordained by the holy apostle Peter the first Bishop of that city. Under the emperor Nero, after many contendings, he finished his testimony along with others his Companions at the foot of Monte Pisano.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Proclus and Hilarion, who gained the palm of martyrdom through most dire torments under the Emperor Trajan and President Maximus.

At Lentini, in Sicily, the holy Epiphana, who had her breasts cut off, and so gave up the ghost, under the Emperor Diocletian and the President Tertyllus.

At Toledo, the holy Virgin and martyr Marciana, who for Christ's faith's sake was thrown to wild beasts and gored by a bull, and so crowned with martyrdom, [fourth century.]

At Lyons, holy Viventiolus, [24th] Bishop [of that see, in the year 524. He was a monk of Coudak, in the diocese of Saint-Claude, of the Order of St Benedict.]

At Bologna, holy Paternian, Bishop [of that see, about the year 470.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 12.

St John Gualberto, Abbat [of Passignano.]

Double.

All from the Common Office for Abbats, (p. 629,) except the following. Prayer throughout the Office, "O Lord, we beseech Thee that the prayers, &c."

FIRST VESPERS.

These as regards St John begin at the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of the Second Vespers of SS. Cyril and Methodius.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. These are holy men who are made the friends of God and glorious heralds of His truth: their tongues are as keys for heaven's opening.

Verse. May Thy priests be clothed with righteousness.

Answer. And Thy saints shout aloud for joy.

A Commemoration is made also of the Holy Martyrs Nabor and Felix. Antiphon, Verse and Answer, from the Common of Many Martyrs.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Lord, that as the Birth-day of Thine holy martyrs Nabor and Felix faileth not to come round for our keeping, so their prayers may never fail to accompany it. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN Gualberto was the son of a noble family at Florence. In accordance with the wishes of his father, he became a soldier. While he was in that profession, his only brother, Hew, was slain by a cousin. On a certain Good Friday, John, armed and accompanied by soldiers, met the murderer, alone and defenceless, in a narrow way, where neither could turn aside. As he was at the point to kill him, the wretch fell on his knees, and stretched out his arms in the form of the Cross, adjuring him, for the sake of that sign, to forgive him; and out of reverence for the Cross he had mercy on him and spared his life. After pardoning his enemy, he went into the Church of St Minias, which was hard by, to pray. And there he saw the image of JESUS crucified, which had that day received the worship of the faithful, bow its head to him. By this miracle John was so moved, that he laid aside soldiering, even against his father's wishes; cut off his hair with his own hands, at the Convent of St Minias, and clad himself in the garb of a monk. In a short while he so shone with all godly and monkish graces, that he became a pattern of excellency to many. When the Abbat of that house died, the monks all chose John to succeed him. But the servant of God desired to obey, more than to command, and, being kept by God for greater things, he betook himself to one Romuald, a dweller in the hermitage at Camaldoli. Through Romuald he received a revelation from heaven, and forthwith founded an Order of his own under the Rule of St Benedict, in the valley called Vallombrosa.

Fifth Lesson.

MANY gathered themselves to him, drawn by the fame of his holy life. Them he took for his comrades, and laboured earnestly among them to cleanse the Church in those parts from the pollution of heresy and simony, and spread abroad the Apostolic Faith. He and his had to fight with almost countless hardships. Certain enemies broke by night into the monastery of San Salvi, to destroy John and his monks, set the church on fire, pulled down the huts, and mortally wounded all the monks; but the man of God perfectly healed them all by the sign of the Cross. One of his monks named Peter also passed unhurt through a vast and raging fire. At length John and his disciples got the peace which they longed for. He purged Tuscany of the pollution of simony, and restored the faith throughout all Italy to its first purity.

Sixth Lesson.

HE entirely built several monasteries, and furnished them and others with buildings. He restored in them the strict observance of the Rule, and gave them holy laws. He sold the furniture of the Church to feed the poor, and found the very elements subject to him to bend stubborn hearts withal. He used the Cross like a sword to drive out devils. In his old age, worn out by abstinence, watching, fasts, prayers, and punishing of the flesh, his strength utterly gave way, and he often repeated the words of David: "My soul thirsteth for God, for the mighty God, for the living God—when shall I come and appear before God?" (Ps. xli. 2.) When he was at the point of death, he gathered his disciples together and exhorted them to love one another, and, after a little while, ordered the following words to be written down, which he wished should be buried with him—"I, John, do believe and confess that Faith which the Holy Apostles preached, and which the Holy Fathers have ratified in the four Councils." At length, at Passignano, where he is held in the highest reverence, after a vision of angels which lasted three days, he passed away to be with the Lord, upon the 12th day of July, in the 78th year of his own age, and in that of salvation 1073. He is illustrious for countless miracles, and Celestine III. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 43.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye have heard that it hath been said: Thou shalt love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i., Comm. on Matth. v. and vi.)

"But I say unto you: Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you." There are many who judge of the commandments of the Lord by their own weakness, and not by the strength of His Saints; and so deem Him to have commanded things impossible. These are they who think that not to hate their enemies is all that they are able to do; and that to command us to love them, is to command more than man's nature can bear. It behoveth then to know, that this which Christ commandeth is not impossible, albeit perfect. This is what David did in respect of Saul and Absalom; the martyr Stephen also prayed for his enemies, even while they were stoning him; and Paul "could wish that himself were accursed from Christ for his" persecutors. (Rom. ix. 3.) And this, JESUS Himself did, as well as taught, when He said: "Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do." (Luke xxiii. 34.)

Eighth Lesson.

FOR the leaving undone other good works, some excuse can sometimes be given; but no man can give an excuse for being loveless. Such and such an one may say to me, I am not able to fast—but can he say, I am not able to love? Such and such an one may say, I am not able to remain a virgin, I am not able to sell all that I have and give to the poor—but can he say, I am not able to love my enemies?

Ninth Lesson.

THIS is a work wherein the feet are not wearied with running, nor the ears with hearing, neither do the hands fail from labour, that we should set up thereby an excuse to rid us of the duty. It is not said unto us: Go to the East, and search for charity; sail to the West, and ye shall find love. It is into our own inner hearts that we are to go, as saith the Prophet: "Bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors." (Isa. xlvi. 8.) What is asked of us is not to be found afar off.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Nabor and Felix. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Pope Anaclete, who governed the Church of God after holy Clement, and adorned the same with a glorious testimony, [in the year 91 or 96.]

On the same day, the holy Prophets Joel and Ezra, [two of the twelve minor Prophets, in the seventh and fifth centuries, B.C.]

In Macedonia, blessed Silas, who was one of the first of the Brethren, and was sent by the Apostles to the churches of the Gentiles along with Paul and Barnabas. He was full of the grace of God, earnestly discharged his duty of preaching, and when he had glorified Christ in his sufferings, afterward fell asleep. Also the holy martyr Serapion, who under the Emperor Severus and the President Aquila attained through fire unto the crown of martyrdom.

In the island of Chios, the holy martyr Myropis, who under the Emperor Decius and the President Numerian was broken with bars, and so passed away to be with the Lord.

In Africa, the holy Confessors Eugenius, Bishop of Carthage, glorious for faith and good works, and all the Clergy of that church, to the number of five hundred or more, [in the year 505,] in the persecution of the Vandals, under the Arian King Hunneric, suffered stripes and hunger—among whom were very many Readers that were little children—and were driven into cruel exile but rejoicing in the Lord. Among the noblest of them were the Archdeacon named Salutaris, and Murrita the second in the ministry, who became Confessors for the third time, and are illustrious for their glorious steadfastness unto Christ.

In Brittany, the holy Confessor Turiaf, Bishop [of the ancient see of Dol,] a man of marvellous simplicity and innocency, [in the year 749.]

In Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

Fourth Lesson.

ANACLETE was an Athenian who governed the Church in the time of the Emperor Trajan. He ordained that a Bishop should be consecrated by three Bishops and no less, that clerks should be publicly ordained to Holy Orders by their own Bishop, and that in the Mass, after the Consecration, all should afterwards Communicate. He adorned the grave of Blessed Peter, and ordered a place for burying the Popes in. He held two ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained five Priests, three Deacons, and six Bishops. He sat as Pope nine years, three months, and ten days. He received the crown of his testimony, and was buried on the Vatican Hill.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons from St Ambrose on Ps. cxviii., (p. 600.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 597.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 14th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Lyons, the holy Confessor "Buona-ventura,"[2] of the Order of Friars Minors, Cardinal Bishop of Albano, Doctor of the Church, very famous for his teaching and the holiness of his life, [in the year 1279.]

At Rome, under the Tribune Claudius, the holy soldier Justus. God caused a vision of the Cross to appear to him, whereupon he believed in Christ, and as soon as he was baptized gave all his goods to feed the poor. He was tried under the Prefect Magnetius, who commanded him to be beaten with thongs, and a red-hot helmet to be put upon his head, and to be laid upon a burning fire. Not an hair of his head was hurt, but he gave up the ghost, confessing the Lord.

At Sinope, in Pontus, the holy martyr Phocas, Bishop of that city. Under the Emperor Trajan he overcame imprisonment, chains, iron, and fire for Christ's sake, and winged his flight to heaven. His relics were brought to Vienne, in Gaul, and are laid in the Church of the Holy Apostles.

At Alexandria, holy Heracles, Pope [of that see,] to whose judgment so much weight was attached that the Chronicler Julius the African mentions that he went to Alexandria to visit him, [in the year 246.]

At Carthage, holy Cyrus, Bishop [of that see,] on whose feast-day holy Austin preached to the people a sermon concerning him.

At Como, holy Felix, first Bishop of that city.

At Brescia, the holy Optatian, Bishop [of that see, fifth century.]

At Deventer, in the Low Countries, the holy Priest Marcellinus, [about the year 800.]

At Rome, the holy Camillus de' Lelli, founder of the Congregation of Regular Clerks for ministering to the sick, [in the year 1619.] He was illustrious for his holy life and miracles, and the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIV. enrolled his name among those of the saints. [We keep his feast upon the 18th day of this present month of July.]

At Lima, in the kingdom of Peru, the holy Confessor Francis Solano, of the Order of Friars Minors,—famous for his preaching, signs, and mighty works, among the Indians of that country, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIII. added to the list of the Saints.

Vespers of the following.

JULY 14.

St "Buona-ventura," [Cardinal] Bishop [of Albano,] Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following. Prayer throughout the Office, "O God, Who didst give, &c."

At First Vespers. Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, "O right excellent Teacher, &c.," (p. 612.)

A Commemoration is made of St Anaclete. Prayer as during his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Book of Ecclesiasticus xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

"BUONA-VENTURA" was born at Bagnarea in Tuscany, [in the year of our Lord 1221.] In his infancy he was dangerously ill, and his mother made a vow that, if he recovered, she would dedicate him to the Order of Blessed Francis. While he was still a young man[3] he entered the Order by his own wish. Under the teaching of Alexander of Hales he advanced so quickly in learning, that in seven years he lectured publicly at Paris on the Books of the Sentences, with great applause. He afterwards explained the same Books by a brilliant Commentary. After six years he was made General Master of his Order at Rome, in which office he did his duty with such wisdom and holiness as caused all men to talk of him and marvel at him.

---

[1] There are strong grounds for believing that this Anaclete and the Cletus of April 26 are both the same as the Cletus named in the Canon of the Mass, and that the real name was neither Cletus nor Anacletus but Anencletus.

[2] That is, "Good-luck." His real name was John. When he was alarmingly ill as a baby, his mother implored the prayers of St Francis, and the Saint, when he afterwards heard the child had recovered, said in Italian, "O buona-ventura!" "What good luck!"—and the expression stuck to John as a nickname.

[3] He was twenty-two years old.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was the author of many books, in which the depth of his learning and the earnestness of his godliness affect the reader and teach him at the same time. Gregory X., moved by his reputation for wisdom and holiness, created him a Cardinal and Bishop of Albano. Blessed Thomas of Aquino gave him the title of Saint even during his life-time. It fell on this wise. Thomas found him writing the Life of St Francis, and said, "Let us leave one Saint to work for the other." He departed this life at the Council of Lyons, upon the 14th day of July 1274, being of the age of 53 years, and having worked many miracles. Pope Sixtus IV. numbered him among the Saints.

Sixth Lesson from St Gregory on Job, (p. 630.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St John Chrysostom, (p. 631.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Swithun, Bishop of Winchester, of whom mention is made upon the 2nd day of this present month of July.

Upon the same 15th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Bamberg, the holy Emperor Henry II. He and his wife Cunegunda preserved perpetual virginity. He brought holy Stephen, king of Hungary, and nearly all his realm, to believe in Christ, [972-1029.] We keep feast in his honour upon the 21st day of this present month of July.

At Porto, in Italy, the holy martyrs Eutropius and the sisters Zosima and Bonosa.

At Carthage, the blessed Deacon Catulinus, in praise of whom holy Austin preached a sermon to the people, and the holy martyrs Januarius, Florence, Julia, and Justa, who were buried in the Basilica of Faustus.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Philip, Zeno, Narseus, and ten little children.

In the island of Tenedos, the holy martyr Abudemius, who suffered under Diocletian.

At Sebaste, the holy physician Antiochus, who was beheaded under the President Hadrian. Milk ran out of his body instead of blood, whereby Cyriacus the headsman was turned to Christ, and himself suffered martyrdom.

At Pavia, the holy martyr Felix, Bishop [of that see, in the year 243.]

At Nisibis, holy James, Bishop of that city, a man of great holiness, and famous for his wonders and his learning. He was one of the Confessors in the persecution under the Emperor Galerius Maximian. At the Council of Nice, [in the year 325,] he condemned the perversity of Arius in opposing the definition that our Lord Christ is homousius—that is, of one Being with the Father, and it was at the prayers of this James, and of Alexander Archbishop of Constantinople, that the same Arius received the due reward of his iniquity at Constantinople, when his bowels gushed out.

At Naples, in Campania, holy Athanasius, Bishop of that city, who suffered much from his ungodly nephew Sergius, and was thrust out of his see. In the time of King Charles the Bald, [in the year 872,] he passed away from earth to heaven, worn out with sorrow, at Veroli.

At Palermo is commemorated the finding of the body of the holy Virgin Rosalie of that city. It was found by revelation from God, in the year of the jubilee, under the Supreme Pontiff Urban VIII., and Sicily was freed from the plague. [She was of the family of Charlemagne, and was born at Palermo in 1130 and died in 1160. Her body was found in 1625, when the exposition of it caused the plague to cease at Palermo.]

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 15.

(St Henry is permanently transferred to the 21st.)

Translation of St Swithun, Bishop [of Winchester,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Extracted from the Salisbury Missal.)

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who makest this day to be honourable unto us because of the feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Swithun; grant unto Thy Church to rejoice in keeping the same, that he, of whom we do solemnly and reverently keep the memorial upon earth, may by his prayers help us toward heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Swithun, begin with the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of St Buona-ventura. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c." Prayer as before from the Common Office.

The first verse of the Hymn is changed.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Harpsfield's Church History of the Ninth Century.)

SWITHUN bore the stamp of seriousness and holiness even from his boyhood. That he might be freer for God and the things of God, he entered the monastery of Winchester, and became a priest therein. King Egbert heard of his fame and gave his son Ethelwulph into his care, and when this prince many years afterwards succeeded to the kingdom, he did many wise and godly things by the advice of his learned and holy teacher; and one such act was that (not indeed as a reward, but because by universal admission he was best fitted for the place,) he nominated Swithun Bishop of Winchester, with the consent of Celnuth, Archbishop of Canterbury, and the clergy.

Fifth Lesson.

IN his duty towards his See, Swithun left nothing undone which is the part of an holy and faithful shepherd. He fled from luxury and pleasure, and added stern fasts to unceasing prayer and watching. He shrank from all display and gaining of glory in the sight of men, and desired nothing more than that all the good which he did should be unknown, save to God and to his own conscience.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was very careful that all the churches in his diocese should be kept in safe repair. As often as he was summoned to the dedication of a new church, he went thither, not with any idle and pretentious equipage, but barefoot. When he was dying, he expressed the wish that his body should be laid in the earth outside the church, under the open sky, that the feet of them that came thither might pass over him, and that the rain and the dew might fall upon him. His lowly wish was carried out in the year 862, but God was not pleased that the glory of His servant should be hidden, and, an hundred and nine years afterwards, the hallowed body was taken to a worthier place with great pomp and rejoicing.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow is the Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Mount Carmel.

Upon the same 16th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Greece, the holy martyr Faustus, who was crucified under the Emperor Decius. He remained alive upon the cross five days, and at last was pierced with arrows, and so passed away to Heaven.

At Sebaste, in Armenia, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Bishop Athenogenes, and ten of his disciples.

At Antioch, in Syria, the blessed Confessor Eustace, [Patriarch of Antioch,] famous for his teaching and holiness, [in the year 338.] Under the Arian Emperor Constantius he was banished, for defending the Catholic faith, to Trajanopolis, in Thrace, where he fell asleep in the Lord.

On the same day the holy Monk Hilarinus, who was arrested in the persecution under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, along with holy Donatus, and for as much as he would not offer sacrifice, he was beaten to death with clubs, and so received martyrdom, at Arezzo, in Tuscany, but his body hath been brought to Ostia.

At Trier, the holy martyr Valentine, Bishop [of that see, in the fourth century.]

At Cordova, in Spain, the holy Levite Sisenand, a martyr, [he was born at Badajoz, the capital of Estramadura. While he was still young he entered the community of the Clerks of Saint Aciocle of Cordova,] who was slain by the Saracens, for Christ's faith's sake, [in the year 851.]

In Saintes, in Gaul, the holy Virgin Rainaldis and her Companions, martyrs, who were slain by the barbarians, for Christ's faith's sake, [in the year 680.]

At Bergamo, the holy martyr Domnion, [under Maximianus Herculeus.]

At Capua, the holy Confessor Vitalian, Bishop [of that see, in the seventh century.]

Vespers are of the following.

JULY 16.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled, of Mount Carmel.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD, Who hast given this excellency unto the Order of Carmel that the same should be especially styled the Order of the Most Blessed Mary, always a Virgin, Thine Own Mother, mercifully grant that we who on this day do renew her memory in solemn worship, may worthily be shielded by her protection, and finally attain unto Thine everlasting joy. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers, in the Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, instead of—"this thine holy Feast-day," is said,—"this thy solemn Commemoration." A Commemoration is made of St Swithun. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Proverbs viii., as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THERE is a story to the effect that many men who had kept a tradition of the holy Prophets Elijah and Elisha, were made ready by the preaching of John the Baptist to hail the coming of the Messiah, and that, when the Apostles having been filled with the Spirit upon the holy day of Pentecost, spake with divers tongues and worked miracles by calling upon the Name of JESUS which is above every other name, these men, seeing and being assured of the truth, straightway embraced the faith of the Gospel, and that on account of their singular love toward the Most Blessed Virgin, whose conversation and friendship they were able to enjoy, they paid her the respect of building her a little Chapel, the first which was ever raised in honour of this same most pure Maiden, and which stood upon that part of Mount Carmel whence [the servant of] Elijah had in old days espied that manifest type of the Virgin, the "little cloud like a man's hand," arising out of the sea. (3 (1) Kings xviii. 44.)

Fifth Lesson.

TO this new Chapel they repaired oftentimes, day by day, and in their sacred ceremonies, prayers, and praises, honoured the most blessed Virgin as the particular Guardian of their Congregation. For this reason they came to be everywhere called the Brethren of Blessed Mary, of Mount Carmel, and the Supreme Pontiffs have not only confirmed to them the right to use this name, but have granted particular indulgences to all those who so call either the Order itself, or any particular member thereof. Her name and protection are not the only gifts which the most bountiful Virgin hath given them—yea, she hath given them the badge of the Holy Scapular, which she delivered to the Blessed Englishman Simon Stock, even an heavenly garment whereby this Holy Order is marked, and harnessed against all assaults. Moreover, in old times, when this Order was unknown in Europe, and not a few were instant with Honorius III. to put an end to it, the most gracious Virgin Mary appeared by night to the said Honorius, and flatly commanded him to show kindness to the Order and to the men belonging thereto.

Sixth Lesson.

MANY godly persons believe that it is not in this world only that the most blessed Virgin hath marked with her favour this Order which pleaseth her so well, but that in the next world, where her power and mercy have a freer scope than here, they who belong to the Guild of the Scapular, who have practised an easy abstinence, have been regular in reciting a few prayers enjoined to them, and have kept chastity according to their state of life, are comforted by her motherly love while they are being cleansed in the fire of Purgatory, and by her help are borne forward towards their home in heaven more quickly than others. The Order loaded with so many and so great gifts, hath instituted a solemn Commemoration of the Most Blessed Virgin, to be made year after year, in perpetual observance, for the glory of the same Virgin.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xi., with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 638.)

At the Verse in the Seventh Responsory, instead of, "this thine holy Feast-day," is said, "this thy solemn Commemoration."

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [1] Thine head upon thee is like Carmel, and the hair of thine head like kingly purple bound in tresses. Alleluia.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Osmund, Bishop of Salisbury, of whom mention is made upon the 4th day of December, [in the year 1099.]

Upon the same 17th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Confessor Alexius, [in the year 404,] son of the Senator Euphemian. Upon the first night of his marriage he left his bride untouched, and absconded from his home. After a long pilgrimage he returned to the city, where he was received as a beggar out of charity in his own father's house, and there remained unknown for seventeen years, thus deceiving the world by a new craft. After he was dead, in the Supreme Pontificate of Innocent I., he was recognised by a voice which was heard throughout the churches of the city and by his own writing, and his body was carried with the greatest honour to the Church of Saint Boniface, where he hath been illustrious for many miracles. We keep feast in his honour upon the 24th day of this present month of July.

At Carthage, the holy martyr of Scillita, [now Csarin, in Tunis,] Speratus, Nazales, Cythinus, Veturius, Felix, Acyllinus, Laetantius, Januaria, Generosa, Vestina, Donata, and Secunda. At the command of the Prefect Saturninus, after their first confession of Christ, they were cast into prison, where they were laid in stocks and afterward beheaded, [in the year 180.] The body of Speratus was brought from Africa to Gaul, along with the bones of blessed Cyprian and the head of the holy martyr Pantaleon, where it has been laid with religious honour in the church of St John the Baptist at Lyons.

At Amarserah, in Paphlagonia, the holy martyr Hyacinth, who suffered many things under the President Castrisius, and fell asleep in prison, [fourth century.]

At Tivoli, the holy martyr Generosus. [His body lies, with that of the Monk and Confessor St Severinus, under the high altar in the Cathedral of St Lawrence, at Tivoli.]

At Constantinople, the holy Theodota, martyr under the Emperor Leo the Iconoclast.

At Rome, the holy Pope Leo IV. [He was elected in 847 and died in 855. He was a Benedictine monk in the monastery of Saint Martin, which was joined to the ancient Vatican Basilica.]

At Pavia, the holy Confessor Ennodius, Bishop [of that see, in the year 521. He was born at Arles, about 473.]

At Auxerre, holy Theodosius, Bishop [of that see, in the year 512.]

At Milan, [in the year 398,] the holy Virgin Marcellina, sister of the blessed Bishop Ambrose, who received the holy veil from Pope Liberius in the church of St Peter at Rome. Her holiness is attested by the said blessed Ambrose in his writings.

At Venice is commemorated the translation, [in the year 1230,] of the holy Virgin Marina.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. Alleluia.

A Commemoratian is made of the following. Prayer from his Office.

---

[1] Cant. vii. 5.

[2] Isa. xxxv. 2.

JULY 17.

(St Alexis is transferred to the 24th.)

Translation of St Osmund, Bishop [of Salisbury,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, who dost this day cause us to rejoice in the feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Osmund, we humbly beseech Thee in Thy mercy to grant us eternal life and glory at his fatherly prayers whose memory we solemnly honour in this service. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Harpsfield's History of the eleventh Century.)

OSMUND, who was Earl of Seez in Normandy and of Dorset in England, held the dignity of Lord Chancellor in the reign of William the First. After he had served the state in purity and honour, God called him to rule the Church of Salisbury. During his occupancy he finished at a great expense the Cathedral which had been begun by his predecessor. He appointed therein Canons of the kind called sæcular; men eminent for learning and godliness; and bought for their use an excellently furnished library.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was most eminent both for his teaching and for the innocency of his life; he was neither spendthrift of his own substance nor a seeker of other men's. Finding that nearly all the diœceses differed from one another in the way of performing the fixed and occasional offices of worship, he compiled and ordered them into that rite [called the Sarum rite] which was the use of nearly all the churches of England, Wales, and Ireland until the faith of our fathers was overthrown.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Osmund laid down his dying life, these and other his godly works made him to be enrolled as a citizen in heaven. He was buried in his own church in the year 1099, and when, after an hundred and twenty years, the clergy went thence to New Salisbury, they took his body with them. His name was inscribed among those of the Saints by Kallistus III. Bishop of Rome.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Camillus de' Lelli, founder of the Congregation of Regular Clerks for ministering to the sick, whose birthday, [in the year 1614,] to the better life was recorded upon the 14th of this present month of July, and whom the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. proclaimed the patron in heaven of the sick and of those that tend them.

Upon the same 18th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Tivoli, the holy Symphorosa, wife of the holy martyr Getulius, along with her seven sons Crescens, Julian, Nemesius, Primitivus, Justin, Stacteus, and Eugene. Under the Emperor Hadrian the Mother, on account of her invincible constancy, was first long beaten with palm branches, then hung up by the hair, and lastly tied to a stone and thrown into the river; her sons stretched upon posts by pullies, finished their testimony by divers ways of death, [about the year 120.] Their bodies were afterwards brought to Rome, and in the time of the Supreme Pontiff Pius IV., they were found in the Diaconal church of the Holy Angel at the Fish-pond.

At Carthage, the holy Virgin and martyr Gondines. Because of her Confession of Christ the Pro-consul Rufinus caused her to be four different times racked; she was horribly tormented with tearing by hooks, she suffered long a foul imprisonment, and in the end she was slain with the sword, [in the year 203.]

At Dorostorum, in Mysia, the holy Martyr Æmilian, who was cast into a furnace under the President Capitolinus, in the time of the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and so received the palm of martyrdom.

At Utrecht, the holy martyr Frederick, Bishop [of that see, in the year 838.]

In Gallicia, in Spain, the holy Virgin and martyr Marina.

At Milan, holy Maternus, Bishop [of that see,] who for the sake of Christ and of the church unto him committed was cast into prison, under the Emperor Maximian, and oftentimes beaten, and at length fell asleep in the Lord, glorious for much testifying.

At Brescia, holy Philastrius, Bishop of that city, who fought much both by word and writing against the heretics, and especially the Arians, of whom he suffered many things, and at length fell asleep in peace, as a Confessor famous for miracles, [in the year 386.]

At Metz, in Gaul, holy Arnulph, Bishop [of that see,] famous for holiness and the gift of working wonders, who chose to live as an hermit and fell asleep in blessedness, [in the year 641.]

At Segni, the holy Confessor Bruno, Bishop [of that see, in the year 1125.]

At Forlimpopoli, on the Emilian Way, holy Ruffillus, Bishop of that city, [in the year 385.]

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 18.

St Camillus de' Lelli, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Camillus these begin at the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, to succour the souls of the dying in their last agony, didst ennoble the holy Camillus with an extraordinary grace of charity, we beseech Thee to pour into our hearts, for his sake, the Spirit of Thy love, that we may worthily prevail against the enemy in the hour when we depart hence, and pass to receive a crown of glory in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Osmund. Prayer as in his Office. Then of the Holy Martyrs Symphorosa and her Seven Sons, from the Common Office for Many Martyrs. Prayer, "O God, by Whose mercy we here keep the birth-day of Thine holy Martyrs Symphorosa and her children, &c."

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CAMILLUS was a son of the noble family of the Lelli, and was born at Bacchianico, a town in the Diocese of Chieti, [in the Abruzzi, in the year of our Lord 1550.] His mother was sixty years of age at the time of his birth. While she was great with child, she dreamed that she brought forth a babe bearing the mark of a Cross upon his breast, and going before a troop of other babes marked likewise. When Camillus was a young man he served as a soldier, and yielded himself for a while to the sins of the world. In the twenty-fifth year of his age light from God broke upon him; and in a violent fit of tears he determined to wipe away the evil relics of his past life, and to put on the new man. That very day, being the holiday of the Purification of the most blessed Virgin, he ran to the Friars Minors, who are commonly called Capuchins, and implored them to enrol him among them. They granted his wishes, but God was keeping him for greater things, and on this as well as on another occasion when he made the same attempt he was forced to abandon it by the increasing virulence of a loathsome running sore in the leg, with which he was afflicted. He meekly bowed himself to the will of Providence, and conquering his own wishes twice, stripped himself of the habit of the Order, which he had sought and received.

Fifth Lesson.

HE went to Rome and was received as an inmate in the Hospital for Incurables. In consequence of his eminent good qualities the administration of the Hospital was committed to his charge, and he discharged this office with the most thorough trustworthiness and with a tenderness like a father's. He counted himself the slave of all the patients, and made it a religious duty to make their beds, clean them, dress their sores, and help by godly prayers and exhortations such as were in their last agony. In doing these things he showed himself a bright example of wonderful patience, indomitable firmness, and heroic charity. He became persuaded that a knowledge of letters would make him much more useful as a comforter to the dying, who were his peculiar care, and therefore, at the age of thirty-two years, he humbly went to school again, among little boys learning the first rudiments. After a time he took Priests' orders,[1] and, in company with some companions who joined him, he laid the first foundations of the Congregation of Regular Clerks for ministering to the sick—a scheme against which the enemy of man made an unsuccessful struggle. Camillus heard a voice from heaven issue from an image of Christ Crucified, strengthening him, and saw the nailed hands stretched out from the Cross to protect him. He obtained from the Apostolic see an approval of his Institute, the members of which, (besides the three vows of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience,) take a fourth and very stern one, by which they bind themselves to serve all sick persons, even those stricken with the plague. Holy Philip Neri, who was Confessor to Camillus, testified that he had often seen Angels prompting the members of this Congregation what they should speak when they were assisting the dying, a proof how well-pleasing in the sight of God, and how useful for the salvation of souls, is this Institution.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN he had thus given himself entirely over by these strict ties to the service of the sick, it was wonderful to see with what earnestness Camillus, broken by no weariness, and scared by no danger to himself, watched over their comfort by day and by night as long as life lasted. Becoming all things to all men, he took with cheerful readiness the most repulsive duties, discharging them with the most humble attention, and oftentimes on his knees, as though he saw Christ Himself in His suffering members. That he might be the readier to serve every one's need, he resigned the general government of his own Institute, and denied himself the indulgence in the heavenly refreshment which abundantly poured upon him, when he fixed his mind solely upon God. His tender, fatherly love toward the wretched had its brightest manifestations when Rome was stricken first by a contagious sickness, and then by famine, and Nola in Campagna suffered from a frightful plague. His love to God and to his neighbour was so glorious that he earned the nickname of "Angel," and found Angels helping him in the difficulties of his divers journeyings. He had the gifts of prophecy and healing, and could read the secret thoughts of men's hearts. At his prayer, food was multiplied, and water turned into wine. His want of sleep, fasting, and unceasing work wore him down till he seemed nothing but skin and bones. He suffered from a complication of five different painful and incurable diseases, which he was accustomed to call the Lord's mercies to him, and which he bore bravely. He died at Rome on the day which he had himself foretold, the fourteenth of July, in the year of salvation 1614, and of his own age the 65th. He had received the Sacraments, and fell asleep in the Lord in an attempt to utter the sweet names of JESUS and Mary, while the Priest was reciting the words of the Ritual—"Gentle and joyous may the Countenance of Christ JESUS appear to thee." He was famous for many miracles, and Benedict XIV. solemnly enrolled him in the Kalendar of the Saints.

---

[1] He was ordained by Goldwell, Bishop of St Asaph's.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 12.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: This is My commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (83rd Tract on John.)

What think ye, my brethren? Is this His only commandment, this, That we love one another? Is there not another and a greater, the commandment to love God? Or hath God commanded us only to love, so that we need seek to do no more? Surely the Apostle commendeth three things:—"And now abideth Faith, Hope, Charity, these three; but the greatest of these is Charity." (1 Cor. xiii. 13.) And although in charity, that is, in love, he included the two first and great commandments, and charity he called the greatest, yet is charity not said to be alone. Concerning Faith,—concerning Hope, how much is commanded us! Who can gather them all together? Who can reckon them all? And yet let us consider how the same Apostle saith:—"Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Rom. xiii. 10.)

Eighth Lesson.

WHERE, therefore, Charity is, what can be lacking? or where Charity is not, what can there be availing? The devil believeth and loveth not, but there is no one that loveth and believeth not. Useless though it be, it is still possible for one that loveth not, to hope to be forgiven; but for one that loveth it is impossible to give up hope. Therefore, where love is, there also must faith and hope needs be, and where there is love toward our neighbour there also must there needs be love toward God. For one that loveth not God, how can he love his neighbour as himself, seeing he hateth himself, for he is a blasphemous, wicked wretch, and the lover of wickedness is not the lover, but the deadly enemy of his own self.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Symphorosa and her children.)

SYMPHOROSA was a woman of Tivoli, the wife of the martyr Getulius, unto whom she bore seven sons, named respectively, Crescentius, Julian, Nemesius, Primitivus, Justin, Stacteus, and Eugene, all of whom were arrested along with their mother, in the reign of the Emperor Hadrian, for professing the Christian faith. Their love was tried by many and divers torments, and their mother who had taught them their religion, was their leader to martyrdom. A stone was tied round her neck and she was thrown into the river. Her body was found and buried by her brother Eugene. The next day, being the 18th of July, the seven brethren were tied each to a stake, and all put to death in divers ways. Crescentius was stabbed in the throat, Julian in the breast, Nemesius in the heart, and Primitivus in the navel. Justin was hacked limb from limb. Stacteus was shot to death with darts. Eugene was cut into two parts across his breast, [from the head downwards.] Thus were these eight sacrifices of sweet savour offered up to God. Their bodies were thrown into a deep pit, on the road between Rome and Tivoli, at the ninth milestone from Rome, but were afterwards brought to Rome and buried in the Church of the Holy Angel-in-the-Fish-market.

If a Ninth Lesson be required for St Camillus, the following is read:

IF we hold fast to this commandment of the Lord which biddeth us to love one another, we shall do whatsoever else He commandeth us, for all else is included in this. The difference between this love and the earthly love wherewith men use to love one another, is made, where it is added, "as I have loved you." To what end did Christ love us, but that we may be able to reign with Christ? To this end then let us also love one another, and so with a love different to the love of others, who love not one another to this end, because in this sense they love not at all. But they that love themselves to possess God, love themselves: therefore, they love God, that they may love themselves. This love have not all men: but few love themselves that God may be all in all.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Symphorosa and her children. All from the Common.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Vincent of Paul, who slept in the Lord upon the 27th day of September, and whom Pope Leo XIII. proclaimed the patron before God in heaven of all charitable societies throughout the whole Catholic world which derive their origin in any way from his institution, [in the year 1660.]

Upon the same 19th day of July, were born into the better life—

The holy Epaphras, whom the holy Apostle Paul doth call his own fellow-prisoner. He was ordained by the same Apostle Bishop of Colossi, where, illustrious for graces, he gained the palm of martyrdom in manly contending on behalf of the sheep committed to his care. His body is buried at Rome, in the Church of St Mary the greater.

At Seville, in Spain, the holy Virgins Justa and Rufina. They were arrested under the President Diogenian. They were first racked and tormented by being torn with hooks, and afterwards afflicted with imprisonment, starvation, and divers tortures; in the end Justa gave up the ghost in prison, and Rufina had her neck broken for confessing the Lord, [at the end of the third century.]

At Cordova, the holy Virgin Aurea, who for a time fell away, but repented of what she had done, and in a renewed combat prevailed against the enemy by the shedding of her blood, [in the year 856.]

At Trier, the holy martyr Martin, Bishop [of that see, in the year 210.]

At Rome, the holy Pope Symmachus, who long suffered through the deeds of the schismatics, and at length passed away, famous for holiness, to be ever with the Lord, [in the year 514.]

At Verona, holy Bishop Felix.

At Mount Skete, in Egypt, holy Arsenius, a Deacon of the Church of Rome, who in the time of Theodosius betook himself to the desert, where he gave up his soul to God, finished in all graces and plentifully wet with tears, [in the year 450.]

In Cappadocia, the holy Virgin Macrina, sister to holy Basil the Great and Gregory of Nyssa, [in the year 379.]

Vespers are of the following from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 19.

St Vincent de Paul, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Vincent, these begin with the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is changed.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make blessed Vincent strong with the strength of an Apostle, to preach the Gospel to the poor, and to adorn the clergy of Thy Church, grant, we beseech Thee, that we who worshipfully recall his godly and worthy conversation, may also order our own goings upon the mighty example of his good life. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

VINCENT de Paul was a Frenchman by nation, and was born at [Ranquines, in the parish of] Pouy, not far from Dax in Gascony, [upon the 24th day of April, in the year of salvation 1576.] From a little child he showed remarkable charity towards the poor. His father removed him from keeping his cattle, in order to give him a school education, and he learnt earthly things at Dax, and theology both at Toulouse and at Saragossa. He took Priest's orders, and a degree in Divinity. [In 1605,] he was taken prisoner by Mahommedan pirates, who carried him off, and sold him for a slave in Africa. In his slavery he converted his owner, who was an apostate, back to Christ. Under the protection of the Mother of God, Vincent escaped from Barbary. He first visited the thresholds of the Apostles, and afterwards returned to France. He was the saintly Rector first of the Parish of Clichi, and afterwards of that of Châtillon. He was appointed by the King, Chaplain-General for the galleys of France, and worked with extraordinary zeal for the health of the souls both of those who commanded and of the convicts who rowed. He was made Superior of the Nuns of the Visitation by St Francis de Sales, and discharged this duty for about forty years, with a wisdom which so approved itself to the judgment of their holy Founder, that he was used to say he knew no worthier Priest than Vincent.

Fifth Lesson.

THE preaching of the Gospel to the poor, especially peasants, was the work at which he toiled unweariedly, till he was disabled by age. To this special work he bound himself and the members of the Congregation which he founded under the missionary Congregation of Secular Priests, by a perpetual vow approved by the Holy See. How great were his labours for bettering the discipline of the clergy, is attested by the building of Seminaries for the final education of young clerks, the number of meetings of Priests to discuss holy things, and the religious exercises preparatory to Ordination, for which, as well as for godly retreats by laymen, he wished that the houses belonging to his Institute should be always freely open. To spread wider the growth of faith and godliness, he sent his Gospel labourers not only into the several provinces of France, but also into Italy, Poland, Scotland, and Ireland, and also to Barbary and India. He assisted Lewis XIII. on his death-bed, and the Queen Anne of Austria, mother of Lewis XIV., put him upon the young King's Council of Conscience during the Regency, in which position it was his unceasing effort that none but the most worthy should be named to churches and monasteries, that civil contests, duels, and creeping false doctrines, from which himself shrank as soon as he met them, should be put down, and that all men should yield the obedience which was due to the decisions of the Apostolic See.

Sixth Lesson.

THERE was no kind of misery which he did not strive with fatherly tenderness to relieve. Christians groaning in Mahommedan slavery, foundlings, deformed children, young maidens exposed to danger, houseless nuns, fallen women, convicts sent to the galleys, sick foreigners, disabled workmen, lunatics, and beggars without number, all these he relieved, and devoutly housed in divers charitable institutions which remain to this day. When Lorraine, Champagne, Picardy, and other districts were desolated by plague, famine, and war, he made immense efforts for their relief. He founded many charitable societies, to find out and succour the unfortunate. Among these are remarkable that of Matrons, and that of "Sisters of Charity" which hath been so widely spread. By those "of the Cross," "of Providence," and "of St Guinevere" he aimed at bringing up young girls as school-mistresses. Amid all these and other most anxious business-matters, he remained always looking simply to God, kind to all, true to himself, plain, upright, and lowly. From all honours, riches, and pleasures, he ever shrank, and was heard to say, that nothing gave him any pleasure, except in Christ JESUS, Whom it was his wish in all things to follow. With a body worn out with hardships, work, and old age, he gently fell asleep in the house of St Lazarus at Paris, the chief house of the Congregation of the Missions, upon the 27th day of September, in the year of salvation 1660, and of his own age the 85th. He was famous on account of his life, his works, and his miracles, and Clement XII. inscribed his name among those of the saints, appointing for his Feast-day the 19th day of the month of July. Finally, at the earnest prayer of many prelates, Leo XIII. proclaimed and established this hero of charity, illustrious for his services to all classes of men, as the patron before God in heaven of all charitable societies throughout the whole Catholic world which derive their origin in any way from his institution.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Jerome Miani, founder of the congregation of Somascha, famous for divers miracles in his life and since his death [in the year 1537,] whose name Pope Clement XIII. solemnly enrolled among those of the saints, and of whom mention is made upon the 8th day of February.

Upon the same 20th day of July, was born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy Virgin and martyr Margaret, [in the year 275.]

On Mount Carmel is commemorated the holy Prophet Elijah, [of Thesbe, 880 B.C.]

The blessed Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, whom the Apostles appointed along with blessed Matthias that he might take part of the ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell. The lot fell upon Matthias, but Joseph nevertheless served in the office of preaching and sanctification, and bore much persecution of the Jews for Christ's faith's sake. He fell asleep in Judea, in a triumphant end. It is told of him that he drank poison, and was unharmed thereby because of his faith in the Lord.

At Damascus, the holy martyrs Sabinus, Julian, Maximus, Macrobius, Cassia, and Paula, and ten others.

At Cordova, the holy Deacon Paul. He rebuked the unbelieving princes for their Mohammedan ungodliness and cruelty and constantly preached Christ, wherefor the said princes commanded him to be slain, and he passed away, to receive a martyr's reward in heaven, [in the year 851.]

In Portugal, the holy Virgin and martyr Wilgefortes, who contended for Christian faith and chastity, and obtained a glorious triumph upon the Cross. [This is probably the same person as St Liberata on January 28.]

In the country of Boulogne, in Gaul, the holy Abbat Vulmar, a man of wonderful holiness, [in the year 689. Founder of the Abbey of Samer, in the Diocese of Arras.]

At Trier, the holy Virgin Severa, [in the year 660.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 20.

St Jerome Miani, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Jerome, these begin at the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, the Father of mercies, Who wast pleased that blessed Jerome should be an helper and a father to the fatherless, grant unto us for his sake and at his prayers, the grace ever to hold fast to the spirit of adoption, whereby [we cry to Thee "Father," and] are called and are Thy sons. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Vincent. Prayer from his Office. Then of St Margaret, Virgin and Martyr.[1] Prayer, "O Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Jerome was born at Venice, of the Patrician family of the Miani, [in the year of our Lord 1481.] He was trained up to be a soldier, and [in 1508,] in the most troublesome times of the Commonwealth, he commanded the fortress of Castel-nuovo at Quero, in the mountains near Treviso. After the fall of the place, he was chained hand and foot, and cast into a filthy prison. When all hope of help from man had forsaken him, the most blessed Virgin, in answer to his prayers, mercifully came to him, loosed his fetters, and brought him unhurt within sight of Treviso, through the midst of the enemy, who kept all the roads. As soon as he entered the city of Treviso, as an acknowledgment of the favour he had received, he hung up his chains, which he had brought away with him, at an Altar of the Mother of God, to whom he had vowed himself. After his return to Venice he gave himself up to godly works. Amid his great tenderness to all the poor, his compassion was chiefly roused by the fatherless little boys who wandered through the city starving and filthy; them he took into an house conducted by himself, where at his own cost he provided them with board, lodging, clothing, and a Christian education.

Fifth Lesson.

IN those days there came to Venice blessed Cajetan [of Tiene,] and Peter Carafa, who was afterwards Paul IV. They were pleased with the spirit of Jerome, and with his new Asylum for Orphans, and took him to the Hospital for Incurables, as well to bring up Orphans, as to extend his charity equally to the sick. Soon after, by the advice of the same, he went to the mainland, and built orphanages first at Brescia, then at Bergamo and Como. His chief foundations were at Bergamo, where besides an orphanage for little boys, and another for little girls, he opened an house of Refuge for repentant harlots, being the first institution of that kind in that part of the world. In the end he went to dwell at Somascha, a hamlet in the district of Bergamo, close to the frontiers of the Venetian territory, and there made an house for himself and his disciples, and gave shape to a congregation, which is generally called the Congregation of Somascha. This congregation grew and spread, and found its work not only in the education of orphans and the service of Churches, but also in a wider usefulness to the Christian Commonwealth, by training up lads in letters and good manners. Holy Pius V. enrolled it among the religious Orders, and other Popes have given it divers privileges.

---

[1] Suffered at Antioch in the persecution under Diocletian, circ. A.D. 284.

Sixth Lesson.

JEROME went to Milan and to Ticino to gather orphans together, and in both places he gathered a multitude of little boys for whom the charity of noblemen enabled him to provide board, lodging, clothes, and schooling. He returned to Somascha, and, still making himself all things to all men, refused no toil by which he saw that he could be of any use to his neighbour. He was used to go about in the fields, helping the reapers in their work, and meanwhile teaching them in the mysteries of the faith. He was very patient in cleansing and healing the heads of little boys foul with lice, and proved so successful a physician to the stinking sores of the poor country-people, that he got a reputation for having the gift of healing. He found a cave in the mountain which hangs over Somascha, and there he would hide himself, passing whole days without meat or drink, and oftentimes scourging himself, continuing in prayer long into the night, and taking his short sleep upon the bare rock, in expiation of his own sins and the sins of others. In the far end of this cave, there drippeth out of the dry stone some water, which is said by an unwavering tradition to have come there at the prayers of the man of God. It droppeth freely even to this day, and is taken to divers places at a distance, where it often hath an healing effect upon the sick. At length an infectious disorder broke out in all the valley, and Jerome, who nursed the sick and carried the dead to burial on his own shoulders, caught it, and died a precious death, as he had himself foretold, [upon the 8th day of February,] in the fifty-seventh year of his age, and that of salvation 1537. He was famous for many miracles, both during his life and after his death; Benedict X. solemnly enrolled his name among those of the Blessed, and Clement XIII. inserted it in the Kalendar of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 13.)

AT that time: At that time, there were brought unto JESUS little children that He should put His Hands on them, and pray. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (26th on Matth.)

Wherefore did the disciples rebuke them that brought them? From an idea of His dignity. What therefore did He? To teach them to be lowly, and to be above the niceness of the world, He took the little children, and embraced them in His Arms, and declared that of such is the kingdom of heaven—as also He had said above. (xviii. 3, 4.) And we also, if we would fain be heirs of the kingdom of heaven, let us seek with great earnestness this virtue. For this is the highest peak of philosophy, to be simple and wise: this is the life of an Angel. The mind of a little child is free from all the diseases of the mind: a little child keepeth no remembrance of injuries, but goeth unto such as have inflicted them, as if unto friends, and as if nothing had happened. Although his mother give him stripes, yet a little child ever seeketh her, and putteth her before all.

Eighth Lesson.

IF thou wert to show him a Queen adorned with her crown, he would not prefer her before his own mother, in raiment how faded soever, and he would rather see her, albeit unkempt, than the Queen in all her glorious apparel. For his use is to account of things whether they be his own, or of others, not by the standard of poverty and riches, but by that of love only. He seeketh no more than he needeth. When he is satisfied with milk, he leaveth the pap. The things that press upon us, such as the loss of money, and the like, do not press upon him, nor do the same transitory things that please us, please him, neither doth he gaze with admiration at loveliness of shape. Therefore Christ said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," to make us do by force of will what little children do by nature.

Ninth Lesson.

THE Pharisees' usual springs of action were spite and vanity; therefore doth the Lord everywhere command His disciples to be simple, and in teaching the one, pointeth silently at the other class. Nothing breedeth pride so much as princedom and precedence. Since, then, His disciples were to receive much honour throughout all the world, He warneth their minds beforehand, and letteth them not stumble into the snare of men, nor go seeking for honours from the mob, nor put themselves forward before others. It is true, these may seem little things, but they give occasion for very great evils. It was when they were placed in these positions, that the Pharisees fell into their direst misfortunes: from looking for salutations, and foremost or good places, they got into a keen desire of distinction, and from that into ungodliness.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Margaret, Virgin and Martyr. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Emperor Henry II. He and his wife Cunegunda preserved perpetual virginity. He brought holy Stephen, King of Hungary, and nearly all his realm, to believe in Christ. Of him mention is made upon the 15th day of this present month of July.

Upon the same 21st day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Virgin Praxedes. She was learned in the divine law, and spent her time constantly in all chastity, in watchings, and prayers, and fastings, and fell asleep in Christ, [in the year 164.] She was buried on the Salarian Way, beside her Sister Pudentiana.

At Babylon, the Prophet Daniel, [in the year of the world 3429, about 626 B.C.]

At Marseilles, the holy soldier Victor. He refused either to perform military service or to offer sacrifice to idols, wherefore he was first cast into prison, where he was visited by an angel, then punished with divers torments, and lastly broken in a flour mill, and so finished his testimony. There also suffered along with him the three soldiers, Alexander, Filician, and Longinus, [in the year 290.]

At Troyes, the holy Virgin and martyr Julia, [in the year 275.]

At the same place, under the Emperor Aurelian, the holy martyrs Claudius, Justus, Jucundinus, and five others.

At Camana, in Armenia, the holy martyr Zoticus, Bishop [of that see,] who was crowned under the Emperor Severus.

At Strasburg, [in the year 678,] holy Arbugastus, [19th] Bishop [of that see, and Patron of the Diocese,] famous for miracles.

In Syria, the holy monk John, [of Edessa,] the Companion of holy Simeon, [called the Fool, sixth century.]

At Second Vespers Commemorations are made of the following, with Prayer from his Office, and of St Praxedes from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) with the Prayer, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 645.)

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

HENRY II., surnamed the Pious,[1] became successively Duke of Bavaria, [in the year 995,] King of Germany, [in 1002,] and the Emperor of the Romans, [in 1014.] His hope soared beyond the short enjoyment of a fleeting kingdom, and he aimed at the possession of an unfading crown by living as the loyal servant of the Eternal King. After he became Emperor, he earnestly set himself to the furtherance of the cause of godliness. He restored with new splendour the Churches which had been ruined by the unbelievers, and enriched them with many offerings and possessions. Monasteries and other godly places he either built himself, or endowed them with allowances. He founded out of his own family inheritance the Bishopric of Bamberg, and made it tributary to Blessed Peter and to the Bishop of Rome. When Benedict VIII., who had set on his head the Imperial crown, was an exile, he hospitably received him, and afterwards restored him to his See.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he was struck down with a grievous sickness in the Monastery of Monte Cassino, he was healed by an evident miracle through the intercession of St Benedict. He was a princely benefactor to the Church of Rome, for the defence of which he entered into a war against the Greeks, and took again from them the province of Apulia, which they had long possessed. He never undertook anything until he had made it a subject of prayer. And in battle he once saw the Angel of the Lord and the Holy Martyrs [Laurence, George, and Adrian] his patrons under whose protection he had placed his army, fighting for him in front of his line. With the help of God, he prevailed against the tribes of savages more by prayer than by arms. He gave his sister in marriage to King Stephen of Hungary, whom he induced to be baptized,[2] and so brought all that country to believe in Christ. His marriage with the holy maiden Cunegunda is one of the rare instances of the union of two virgins. When he drew near to death, he gave her back inviolate to her kinsfolk.

Sixth Lesson.

HE managed with great wisdom whatever could tend to the honour and usefulness of the Empire. He left in France, Italy, and Germany, splendid monuments of his godly munificence. The perfume of his saintly life spread its sweetness far and wide, and the glory of his holiness outshone the splendour of his crown. When the work of his life was done, he was called by the Lord to the possession of an eternal kingdom [on the 14th day of July,] in the year of salvation 1024. His body was buried in the Church of the Blessed Apostles Peter and Paul at Bamberg, and God glorified him by the miracles which began forthwith to take place at his grave. The same being duly proved, Eugenius III. numbered him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

The last is omitted or read as one with the Second in order to leave room for

Ninth Lesson (of St Praxedes.)

THIS Praxedes was a maiden of Rome, and the sister of the maiden Pudentiana. When the Emperor Marcus Antoninus was hunting down the Christians, she followed them constantly with money, labour, comfort, and every helpful office of Christian charity. Some she hid in her house, some she exhorted to firmness in professing the faith, of some she buried the bodies. For them that were in prison, and them that were toiling in slavery,[1] she supplied every need. At last the sight of such butchery of Christians was more than she could bear, and she implored God that if it were expedient for her to die, He would release her from such suffering. And so upon the 21st day of July she was called away to receive the reward of her godly conversation in heaven. Pastor the Priest laid her body in the grave of her father [Pudens] and her sister Pudentiana, which was in the cemetery of Priscilla, upon the Salarian Way.

[1] Born A.D. 972.

[2] Alban Butler says this is a mistake. St Stephen was born of Christian parents.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who on this day didst take Thy blessed Confessor Henry from the highest peak of earthly power, and make him to inherit an eternal kingdom—O God, Who didst so prevent him with the blessings of Thy sweetness that the snares of the world could not in any wise entangle him—hear us, we humbly beseech Thee, and make us after his ensample to turn away from the enticements of this life, and with all our heart to seek earnestly after Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Praxedes from the Common Office, (p. 645,) with the Prayer, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 645.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of July, were born into the better life—

At Marseilles, holy Mary Magdalen, out of whom the Lord cast seven devils, and who was made worthy to be the first to see this same Saviour after that He was risen from the dead.

At Philippi, holy Syntyche, of whom mention is made by the blessed Apostle Paul.

At Ancyra, in Gallicia, the holy martyr Plato, [in the year 304.] Under the Vicar Agrippinus he was cut with stripes, pronged with iron nails, and tormented with other dire sorts of torments, then at last beheaded, and so gave up his soul unconquered to God. The miracles wrought by him in the succouring of prisoners are attested by the acts of the Second Council of Nice.

In Cyprus, the holy Praetor Theophilus. The Arabs strove to make him deny Christ, but as neither bribery nor threats could bend him, they slew him with the sword, [in the year 790.]

At Antioch, holy Cyril, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his teaching and holiness, [in the year 300.]

In Auvergne, the holy Abbat Menelaus, [about the year 700, Restorer of the Abbey of Menat, in the Diocese of Clermont.]

In the Monastery of Blonda, in Lucania, (?) holy Wandregisilus, Abbat of Fontenelle, [in the year 667. Founder of several monasteries in France.]

At Lisbon, the holy Confessor Laurence of Brindisi, Minister-General of the Order of Capuchin Friars Minors of St Francis. He was famous for his preaching of the word of God, and for his hard work for God's glory, and the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. enrolled his name among those of the saints.

At Bethshan, in Palestine, the holy Earl Joseph, [about the year 366.]

FIRST VESPERS.

Hymn.[2]

FATHER of lights! one glance of Thine,
Whose eyes the Universe control,
Fills Magdalen with holy love,
And melts the ice within her soul.

Her precious ointment forth she brings,
Upon those sacred Feet to pour;
She washes them with burning tears;
And with her hair she wipes them o'er.

Impassion'd to the Cross she clings:
Nor fears beside the tomb to stay;
Nought of its ruffian guard she recks,
For love has cast all fear away.

O Christ, Thou very Love itself!
Blest hope of man, through Thee forgiven!
So touch our spirits from above,
So purify our souls from Heaven.

To God the Father, with the Son,
And Holy Paraclete, with Thee,
As evermore hath been before,
Be glory through eternity. Amen.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. A woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that JESUS sat at meat in the house of Simon the leper, brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at the Feet of JESUS, behind Him, weeping, and began to wash His Feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed His Feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

Hymn.[2]

HIS sacred Feet with tears of agony
She bathes, and prostrate on the ground adores;
Steeps them in kisses chaste, and wipes them dry
With her own hair; then forth her precious ointment pours.

Praise in the highest to the Father be;
Praise to the mighty coeternal Son;
And praise, O Spirit Paraclete, to Thee,
While ages evermore of endless ages run.
Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The lesson is taken from the Song of Songs (iii. 1.)

[THE Bride.] By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth. I sought him but I found him not. Then I rose and went about the city; in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city found me. Saw ye him whom my soul loveth? It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found him whom my soul loveth. I have taken hold on him, and I will not let him go, until I bring him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

First Responsory.

Mary Magdalen and the other Mary went very early to the sepulchre. That JESUS Whom ye seek, is not here; for He is risen, as He said: He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him.

Verse. [1] And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre, at the rising of the sun; and, entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting upon the right side, who saith unto them:

Answer. That JESUS Whom ye seek, is not here; for He is risen, as He said: He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him.

Second Lesson (viii. 1.)

[THE Bride.] O that thou wert my brother, that sucked the breasts of my mother, that I might find thee without, and kiss thee, and still no man despise me! I will take hold on thee, and bring thee into my mother's house; there thou shalt teach me, and I will give thee a cup of my spiced wine, and new wine of my pomegranates. His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me.

[The Bridegroom.] I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, that ye stir not up, nor awake my love, until she please.

Second Responsory.

Rejoice with me, all ye that love the Lord: for I sought Him and He hath appeared unto me; and while as I was weeping at the Sepulchre, I saw the Lord.

Verse. When His disciples were gone away, I tarried still; and the fire of love in my heart yearned after Him.

Answer. And while as I was weeping at the Sepulchre, I saw the Lord.

Third Lesson.

[CHORUS.] Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, overflowing with gladness, leaning upon her beloved?

[The Bride.] Under an apple-tree did I rouse thee up—there was thy mother ravished, there was she deflowered that bare thee. Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm. For love is strong as death, jealousy is cruel as the grave—the light thereof is a light of fire and flames. Many waters cannot quench love, neither will floods drown it.

Third Responsory.

[2] They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid Him. The Angels say unto her: Woman, why weepest thou? He is risen, as He said. He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him.

Verse. And as she wept, she stooped down and looked into the Sepulchre, and saw two Angels in white, sitting; and they say unto her:

Answer. He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (25*th on the Gospels.*)

MARY Magdalen, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, through love of the truth, washed away in her tears the defilement of her sins, and the words of the Truth are fulfilled which He spake—"Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much." She who had remained chilly in sin, became fiery through love. When even His disciples went away again unto their own home, Mary still stood without at the sepulchre of Christ, weeping. She sought Him Whom her soul loved, but she found Him not. She searched for Him with tears; she yearned with strong desire for Him Who, she believed, had been taken away. And thus it befell her, that being the only one who had remained to seek Him, she was the only one that saw Him. It is the truth that the backbone of a good work is perseverance.

Fifth Lesson.

AT first when she sought Him, she found Him not; she went on searching, and so it came to pass that she found Him; and this was so, to the end that her longing might grow in earnestness, and so in its earnestness might find what it sought. Hence is it that the Bride in the Song of Songs saith as representing the Church:—"By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth." We seek on our bed for Him Whom our soul loveth, when, having got some little rest in this world, we still sigh for the Presence of our Redeemer—but it is by night that we so seek Him, for though our mind may be on the alert for Him, yet still He is hidden from our eyes by the darkness that now is.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT if we find not Him Whom our soul loveth, it remaineth that we should rise and go about the city, that is, by thought and questioning, go through the holy Church of the elect—seek Him in the streets, and in the broad ways, that is, walk anxiously looking about us both in the narrow and the broad places, that if we can, we may find His footsteps there—for there are some even of those who live for the world, from whom something may be learnt to be imitated by a godly man. As we thus go wakefully about, the watchmen, that keep the city, find us; the holy Fathers, who are the watchmen of the bulwarks of the Church, come to meet our good endeavours, and to teach us either by their words or by their writings. And it needeth but a little to pass from them, but we find Him Whom our soul loveth—[a little we must pass,]—for albeit our Redeemer in lowliness became a man among men, yet by right of His Divine Nature He is still above men.

[1] Mark xvi. 2, 5-7.

[2] John xx. 13, 12, 11; Matth. xxviii. 6, 7.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vii. 36.)

AT that time: One of the Pharisees desired JESUS that He would eat with him. And He went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. I. Hom. 23, tom. x.)

Ye have listened carefully to the Gospel whileas it was being read, so that the thing told hath, as it were, passed before the eyes of your heart. Ye have seen in your mind's eye, albeit not with bodily sight, the Lord JESUS Christ sitting down to meat in the Pharisee's house, and not refusing when He is bidden of him. Ye have seen also an infamous woman of the city, one of utterly bad character, a sinner, thrusting herself in an uninvited guest, to the banquet where her Healer was sitting, and seeking health at His hands with godly shamelessness; thrusting herself in eager for mercy, as though eager for the feast. She knew under what a disease she laboured, and she knew that He unto Whom she came was mighty to cure it.

Eighth Lesson.

SHE drew near therefore, not unto the Lord's Head, but unto His Feet. She that had so long walked the paths of sin betook her unto the Feet that went about doing good. She first poured forth heart-felt tears, and washed the Lord's Feet with the humble service of her acknowledgment, wiped them wlth her hair, kissed them, and anointed them. Her silence cried aloud, not in words but in manifested love. The Pharisee, who had desired the Lord JESUS Christ that He would eat with him, belonged to that class of proud men concerning whom the Prophet Isaiah saith: "A people . . . which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou." (lxv. 5.) When therefore he saw how this woman touched the Lord's Feet with her tears, her kisses, her hair, and her ointment, "he spake within himself, saying: This Man, if He were a Prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is, that toucheth Him; for she is a sinner."

Ninth Lesson.

O PHARISEE, that biddest and scornest the Lord! Thou invitest the Lord to meat, and thou knowest not Him That should have given thee to eat! Whence knowest thou that the Lord knoweth not who and what manner of woman this is, save from this, that she is allowed to draw near unto Him, and that He suffereth her to kiss His Feet, to wipe them, and to anoint them? Ought not an unclean woman to have been permitted to do these things to clean feet? If such a woman had drawn near to the feet of this Pharisee, he would have said to her what Isaiah putteth into the mouth of such: "Stand by thyself, come not near to me, for I am holier than thou." But she came unto the Lord unclean that she might go away cleansed,—sick, that she might go away healed,—with confession, that she might go away with thanksgiving.

LAUDS.

Hymn.[1]

THOU only Son of God on high,
Regard us with a gracious eye,
Who weeping Magdalen dost own,
And call unto Thy Glorious Throne.

Lo! in the royal coffers laid,
Again the long-lost coin displayed;
The noble gem of sparkling sheen,
From mire recovered, glows serene.

JESU, our Refuge sure and sweet,
Thee, Hope of penitents, we greet;
Forgive the hearts that fain would break
For that repentant sinner's sake.

The assaults of sin, with ceaseless spite
And galling sting, the conscience smite;
The world's vain blandishments impure,
And harlot smiles, the sense allure.

Fain unto Thee our thankful lays
We would, yet may not, freely raise;
While here on earth, our souls forlorn
Beneath this fleshly burden mourn.

And may Thy Mother kind and meek
Think on our nature frail and weak,
And raise her prayer that we may gain
A passage safe o'er life's rough main.

To God alone be honour paid
For grace so manifold displayed:
Their guilt He pardons who repent,
And gives reward for punishment. Amen.

Verse. God hath chosen her and forechosen her.

Answer. He hath made her to dwell in His tabernacle.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Mary anointed the Feet of JESUS, and wiped Them with her hair; and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

Prayer throughout the Office.

LORD, we pray Thee that we may be holpen by the pleading of Blessed Mary Magdalen, whose prayers so much availed with Thee, that Thou didst call up her brother Lazarus living from the dead, when he had lain in the grave four days already. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of July, were born into the better life—

At Ravenna, the holy martyr Apollinaris, Bishop of that city. He was ordained at Rome by the Apostle Peter and sent to Ravenna, where he suffered divers and manifold things for Christ's faith's sake. He afterwards preached the Gospel in Emilia, and turned many from the worshipping of idols. At length he came back to Ravenna, and there finished a glorious testimony under the Cæsar Vespasian.

At Mans, in Gaul, the holy Confessor Liborius, [fourth Bishop of Mans, in the year 425.]

At Rome, the holy martyr Rasyphus.

Also at Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Primitiva.

Also at Rome, the holy martyrs Apollonius and Eugenius.

On the same day the holy martyrs Trophimus and Theophilus, who under the Emperor Diocletian were stoned and burnt and at last beheaded, and so crowned with martyrdom.

In Bulgaria, very many holy martyrs, whom the profane Emperor Nicephorus, when he was wasting the churches of God, caused to be slain by divers sorts of death—by the sword, by the rope, by arrows, by long imprisonment, and by hunger.

---

[1] Translation extracted from the Hymnal Noted.

At Rome, the holy Virgins Romula, Redempta, and Hirundo, of whom writeth the holy Pope Gregory.

Also at Rome, the holy widow Brigid, [about the year 1373,] whose sacred body was taken to Sweden upon the 7th day of October, and whose feast is kept upon the 8th day of the same month.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

(If of St Mary Magdalen, Hymn from First Vespers, Verse and Answer and Antiphon from the Commemoration given below.

JULY 23.

St Apollinaris, Bishop [of Ravenna,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for one Martyr, (p. 594), except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Apollinaris, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who art Thyself the exceeding great Reward of all faithful souls, and in Whose sight this day is holy because Thy blessed Priest Apollinaris did hereon lift up his last earthly testimony, we beseech Thee to grant unto us Thy servants, who do keep his worshipful Feast-day, to obtain by his prayers Thy gracious remission for our offences. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Mary Magdalen.

Antiphon. A woman in the city, which was a sinner, brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at the Lord's Feet, behind Him, and began to wash His Feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head.

Verse and Answer, and Prayer, from the Lauds of the Office.

A Commemoration is also made of St Liborius, Bishop of Mans and Confessor.[1] All from the Common Office. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c."

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

APOLLINARIS came from Antioch to Rome with the Prince of the Apostles, and was by him ordained a Bishop, and sent to Ravenna to preach the Gospel of the Lord Christ. He had already converted a great number of persons to the Christian Faith, when the idolatrous priests caught him and gave him a sharp flogging. A second riot was got up against him on account of one Boniface, a nobleman who had long been dumb, speaking, and his daughter being delivered from an unclean spirit. On this occasion Apollinaris was flogged again, and made to walk barefoot over hot embers. The fire did him no harm, and he was expelled from the city.

Fifth Lesson.

APOLLINARIS lay hid for a while with certain Christians. Thence he went to Emilia, where he restored to life the dead daughter of the Patrician Rufinus, so that the whole household of Rufinus might believe in JESUS Christ. This affair greatly incensed the Præfect, who sent for Apollinaris, and earnestly dealt with him to induce him to cease spreading the Christian Faith in that city. As Apollinaris paid no heed to the Præfect's orders, he was tortured on the rack, boiling water poured on his wounds, and his mouth bruised with a stone, after which he was ironed and cast into prison. On the fourth day he was put on board a ship and sent into banishment. The ship was wrecked, and he so came to Mysia, thence to the shores of the Danube, and afterwards into Thrace.

Sixth Lesson.

HOWEVER, the devil in the temple of Serapis declared that he could not give oracles, while the disciple of the Apostle Peter abode in these parts, and after a long search Apollinaris was found and commanded again to take ship. Thus he went back to Ravenna, where he was denounced by the same idolatrous priests as before, and given into the keeping of a centurion. This centurion was a secret worshipper of Christ, and in the night he let Apollinaris go. When it became known some of the officers of justice followed after him, caught him on the road, beat him till they thought he was dead, and left him. Some Christians took him up, but on the seventh day, still exhorting them to stand firm in the Faith, he departed this life with the glorious splendour of martyrdom. His body was buried hard by the wall of the city.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xxii. 24.)

AT that time: There was a strife among the disciples, which of them should be accounted the greatest. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. ii. on Luke xxii.)

"My kingdom," our God hath said, "is not of this world." (John xviii. 36.) Man, then, must strive, not to be equal with God, but to be like unto God. Christ alone is the full image of God, as being the brightness of His Father's glory, and the express image of His Person. (Heb. i. 3.) But the righteous man is made after the image of God, in so far as, for the sake of following the example of his God, he, through knowledge of God, setteth no esteem upon this world, and looketh down upon all carnal motions of the will, through having taken in that Word whereby we are fed unto life everlasting—and this is the end whereto we eat the Body of Christ, namely, that we may have eternal life. (John vi. 50.)

---

[1] A Gaul, elected fourth Bishop of Mans in A.D. 348. He was a friend of St Martin, in whose presence he died, June 9, A.D. 390.

Eighth Lesson.

THE reward which is promised unto us is not meat and drink, but a part in that grace and that life which come down from heaven. Neither are the twelve thrones (Matth. xix. 28) to be understood as meaning chairs for bodies to sit in, but as meaning a dignity like that of God Himself, wherein they that have left all and followed Christ shall judge as Christ doth, not by dint of cross-examinations, but by simple knowledge of the heart, rewarding the good, and condemning the evil. Thus are the Apostles erected into a ghostly tribunal, for the rewarding of faith and the cursing of unbelief, by their might breaking back errors, and laying upon blasphemers the just punishment of hatred.

Ninth Lesson.

LET us, then, turn about, and look well to it that there be no strife among us, which of us shall be accounted the greatest. That this strife arose among the Apostles, is not an excuse but a caution for us. If it was only after a while that Peter was converted—Peter, who had started up at the first command of the Lord—who can promise himself to be converted forthwith? Have a care, then, of boasting; have a care of the world. He who was commanded to strengthen his brethren (Luke xxii. 32) was he who was able to say, "Behold, we have forsaken all, and have followed Thee." (Matth. xix. 27.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Liborius. Prayer as at Vespers.

Note. Should this day be a Saturday, the Ninth Lesson will be of St James' Eve, and the Eve will also be commemorated at Lauds; in which case the Prayer in the Commemoration of St Liborius will be (not "Grant, we beseech Thee," as at Vespers, but) "Hear, O Lord, &c."

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the eve of the holy Apostle James. Upon the morrow also we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Alexis, son of the Senator Euphemian. Upon the first night of his marriage he left his bride untouched, and absconded from his home. After a long pilgrimage he returned to the city, where he was received as a beggar out of charity in his own father's house, and there remained unknown for seventeen years, thus deceiving the world by a new craft. After he was dead, [in the year 404,] in the Supreme Pontificate of Innocent I., he was recognised by a voice which was heard throughout the churches of the city and by his own writing, and his body was carried with the greatest honour to the Church of St Boniface, where he hath been illustrious for many miracles. Mention is made of him upon the 17th day of this present month of July.

Upon the same 24th day of July, was also born into the better life—

At Tyro, a city which stood formerly on an island, in the lake of Bolsena in Tuscany, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy Virgin and martyr Christina. She brake her father's idols of gold and silver, and gave the morsels to the poor; whereupon he commanded her to be torn with stripes and otherwise fearfully tortured; after which a great stone was tied about her neck, and she was cast into the lake; but an angel delivered her. She then suffered bravely the sharpest torments under another judge, who succeeded her father, and in the end finished the course of her testimony under the President Julian, having endured a burning furnace, wherein she remained shut up unhurt for five days, having by Christ's power overcome serpents, having had her tongue cut out, and being lastly shot to death with arrows.

At Rome, in the Tiburtine Way, the holy martyr Vincent.

At San Vitturino, in Samnium, eighty-three holy martyrs, all soldiers.

At Merida, in Spain, the holy soldier Victor, who, along with his two brothers Stercatius and Antinogenes, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, by divers torments finished their testimony.

In Lycia, the holy martyrs Nicetas and Aquilina, who were turned to Christ by the preaching of the blessed martyr Christopher, and received the palm of martyrdom by being beheaded.

Also the holy martyrs Meneus and Capiton.

At Sens, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Ursicinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. (Prayer from his Office,) and of St Christina, Virgin and Martyr. All from the Common Office. Prayer, "O Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

JULY 24.

Eve of St James, Apostle.
St Alexis, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed Confessor Alexis to be a marvel in his contempt of this world, grant, we beseech Thee, unto Thy faithful people, that with the help of his prayers they may esteem but little things earthly, and desire always such things as be heavenly. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is changed.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ALEXIS was a member of one of the noblest Roman families. Through his exceeding great love for JESUS Christ, he received a particular command from God to leave his bride untouched upon his wedding night, and to undertake a pilgrimage to the most famous Churches of the world. For seventeen years he remained occupied in these journeys and utterly unknown. At the end of that time, his name was spoken from an image of the most holy Virgin Mary in the city of Edessa, in Syria, and when he found himself recognised he took ship from thence. He landed at Porto near Rome, and fared to the house of his own father, who gave him shelter as a strange beggar. He lived there unrecognised by any for seventeen years more, and then passed away to heaven, in the time of Pope Innocent I. He left behind him a writing giving his name, family, and the story of his life.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons from St Gregory, (p. 628. Fourth and Fifth alternative Lessons for the Second Nocturn.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix., with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.) The last may be read along with the Second or omitted.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson from John xv. 12, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 575,) the three Lessons being read together as one, or the first only.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Eve of St James. Antiphon and Verse and Answer of the Week-Day. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee," (p. 575.)

Then of St Christina, Virgin and Martyr, from the Common Office. Prayer, "O Lord, we pray Thee, &c.," (p. 645.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Apostle James, brother to the blessed Evangelist John. He was beheaded by King Herod Agrippa about the time of the Passover. His sacred bones were on this day brought from Jerusalem to Spain, and laid in the uttermost parts thereof, in Gallicia, where they are devoutly honoured by the constant veneration of the peoples of that country, and by the flocking together of multitudes of Christians who betake themselves thither for godliness' sake and from vows.

In Lycia, the holy martyr Christopher, who, under the Emperor Decius, was beaten with iron rods. He was preserved from fire by the power of Christ, but at last was shot with arrows, and then beheaded, and so finished his testimony.

At Barcelona, in Spain, the blessed martyr Cucufas, who, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, overcame many torments under the President Dacian, and was then smitten with the sword, and so passed a conqueror to Heaven.

In Palestine, the holy martyr Paul. He was condemned to death under the President Firmilian in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian Galerius. He asked for a few moments in which to pray, wherein he besought God with all his heart for his fellow-countrymen—then for the Jews and Gentiles, that they might be brought to the knowledge of the truth—then for the multitude that stood around—then for the judge who had condemned him, and for the executioner who was to slay him. Then his head was cut off, and he received the crown of martyrdom.

There also the holy Virgin and martyr Valentina. When she was led to the altar to sacrifice, she kicked it over. She was horribly tortured, and then cast into the fire, along with another Virgin that was her companion, and so hastened hence, to be with Christ her Bridegroom.

At Civita di Bagno, in Valeria, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Florence and Felix of Siponte.

At Cordova, [in the ninth century,] the holy martyr, the monk Theodemir.

At Treves, at the end of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Magneric, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following.

JULY 25.

St James, Apostle.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

BE Thou Thyself, O Lord, the Sanctifier and the Shepherd of Thy people, that we who are overshadowed by the help of Thine Apostle James may, in our conversation, walk with Thee, and in all quietness of spirit serve Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

No Commemoration is made.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. iv. 1, (p. 585.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JAMES, the Son of Zebedee and brother of the Apostle John, was a Galilean, and with his brother one of the first of His Apostles whom the Lord called, whileas they were "in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets—and they immediately left the ship, and their father, and followed Him." (Matth. iv. 21, 22.) "And He surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder." (Mark iii. 17.) Peter, and James, and John, were the three Apostles whom the Saviour loved best; them "He took and brought up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them," (Matth. xvii. 1, 2;) when He went to the house of the ruler of the synagogue to raise his daughter from the dead, "He suffered no man to follow Him save Peter, and James, and John," (Mark v. 37;) and, at the last, just before the Jews took Him, when "He cometh unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples: Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. . . . He took with Him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee." (Matth. xxvi. 36, 37.)

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER that JESUS Christ was ascended into heaven, James preached how that He was God, and led many in Judæa and Samaria to the Christian Faith. A while afterward, he went to Spain, and there he brought some to Christ, of whom seven were afterwards ordained Bishops by Blessed Peter, and were the first such sent into that country. From Spain James went back to Jerusalem, where he taught the Faith to divers persons, and, among others, to the Magian Hermogenes. Thereupon Herod Agrippa, who had been raised to the kingdom under the Emperor Claudius, to curry favour with the Jews, condemned James to death for his firm confession that JESUS Christ is God. The officer who led James to the judgment-seat, at sight of the courage wherewith he was ready to offer up his testimony, declared himself also to be a Christian.

Sixth Lesson.

AS they were being hurried to execution, this man asked pardon of James, and the Apostle kissed him, saying, "Peace be unto thee." James healed a paralytic, and immediately afterwards both the prisoners were beheaded. The body of the Apostle was afterwards taken to Compostella, [in the province of Gallicia, in Spain,] where his grave is very famous. Multitudes of pilgrims from all parts of the earth betake themselves thither to pray, out of sheer piety or in fulfilment of vows. The Birth-day of James is kept by the Church upon this day, which is that of the bringing of his body to Compostella. It was about Easter-time (Acts xii. 2-4) that he bore witness to JESUS Christ with his blood, at Jerusalem, being the first of the Apostles to do so.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xx. 20.)

AT that time: Came to JESUS the mother of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshipping Him, and desiring a certain thing of Him. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (66*th on Matth.*)

Let no man be troubled if we say that the Apostles were still imperfect, for the mystery of the Cross was not yet finished, the grace of the Spirit had not yet been shed abroad in their hearts. If thou wilt behold them in their strength, consider them such as they became after the grace of the Spirit was given them, and thou wilt perceive that they had trodden under foot every vain desire. This is the cause wherefore their present imperfection is made known unto us, that is, that thou mayest see how great a change could be forthwith wrought by grace. But nevertheless let us now look how they came unto Christ, and what they said. "Master," they said, "we would that Thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire." (Mark x. 35.) "And He said unto them: What would ye that I should do for you?" (36)—not, surely, that He knew not what their wish was, but that He would make them answer, and so uncover the wound, to lay a plaster upon it.

Eighth Lesson.

THEIR wish proceeded from earthly motives, and they were shy and ashamed to express it, and therefore they took Christ apart, and so asked Him. The Evangelist saith, "For they were gone apart, that they might not be discovered of them"[1]—and then they told Him what they sought. To me it seemeth most likely that they had heard how that the disciples should sit upon twelve thrones; they were fain to obtain for themselves the chiefest places at this enthronement; they knew that the Lord loved them better than the most of the others; but they feared that Peter would still be preferred before them; and therefore they made bold to say: "Grant unto us that we may sit, one at Thy right Hand, and the other at Thy left Hand, in Thy glory." (Mark x. 37.) They were even instant with Him, saying: "Say . . . that we may . . ." And what answered He? To show that they were asking no spiritual gift, nor even knew for themselves what they were asking, nor would have asked it if they had known what it was, "JESUS said unto them: Ye know not what ye ask"—ye know not how great a thing, how wonderful a thing this is, a thing which even "is not Mine to give."

Ninth Lesson.

AND He said moreover: "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" Behold how He turneth their thoughts at once another way, speaking to them of things altogether different, as though He said, Ye come unto Me treating of honours and crowns, but I speak unto you of the wrestling and the sweat. This is not yet the time of reward, neither is My glory immediately to be revealed; but now death and danger are present with you. But consider how, by the manner of His questioning, He doth both exhort and invite them. He saith not: Are ye able to bear death? Are ye able to shed your blood?—but: How are ye able to drink the cup—whereto He presently inviteth them, saying: "the cup that I shall drink of;" that He may make them readier for the strife by knowing that it is a strife which they are to share with Him.

At Lauds (and Lauds only) is made a Commemoration of St Christopher, Martyr. All from the Common Office. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c., (p. 599.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of July fell on sleep the holy Anne, mother of Mary the Mother of God.

On the same 26th day of July, was also born into the better life—

At Philippi, in Macedonia, holy Erastus, who was left there as Bishop by the blessed Apostle Paul, and was there crowned with martyrdom.

At Rome, upon the Latin Way, the holy martyrs Symphronius, Olympius, Theodulus, and Exuperia, who, as is written in the Acts of the holy Pope Stephen I., were burnt in the fire, and so gained the palm of martyrdom.

At Porto Romano, the holy martyr Hyacinth. He was first cast into the fire, and then into a torrent, but escaped unhurt. Afterwards, under the Emperor Trajan, Leontius the Consular caused him to be smitten with the sword, and so ended his earthly life. The matron Julia buried his body upon her own farm hard by the city of Rome.

Also at Rome [in the second century,] the holy Priest Pastor, who giveth his name to the Church upon the Viminal Hill, which is that of holy Pudentiana.

---

[1] Progressi sunt enim, inquit, ne illis manifesti fierent. The present text of the Gospels does not contain any such words. They look like a conjectural commentary upon Matt. xx. 24, or Mark x. 41, which had got miscopied into the text of St John Chrysostom's New Testament.

At Verona, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Valens, Bishop [of that see.]

In the monastery of St Benedict, in the country of Mantua, [in the year 1016,] the holy Monk and Hermit Simeon, who fell asleep in a good old age, famous for many marvels.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from the next Lauds.

JULY 26.

St Anne, Mother of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman, neither Martyr nor Virgin, (p. 649,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Prov. xxxi. 10, (p. 649.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John of Damascus. (2nd on the Birth of the Blessed Virgin.)

THE home of Anne is set before us, wherein to see an ensample both of married and of maiden life, the one in the person of the mother, the other in that of the daughter, whereof the one hath but now ceased to be barren, and the other is in a little while destined, beyond the course of nature, to become the Mother of the Messiah by a singular birth, specially designed by God to build up anew our nature. It is with reason then that Anne, filled with the Holy Ghost, with joyful and jubilant spirit singeth aloud: "Rejoice with me, for out of my barren womb I have borne the bud of promise, and, as I have longed, I nourish at my breasts the fruit of benediction. I have laid aside the mournful garments of barrenness, and put on the joyful raiment of fruitfulness. Let Hannah the adversary of Peninnah make merry with me, and join with me for fellow-feeling, in singing of this new and unhoped-for wonder that is wrought in me"—

Fifth Lesson.

"LET Sarah be glad that was joyfully pregnant in her old age, and was a shadow cast before of my conception that hitherto have been barren. Let all the barren and fruitless break forth into singing, when they behold in what wondrous wise I have been visited from heaven." Let all mothers likewise, that like Anne are gifted with fruitfulness, say: Blessed be He That gave their desire unto them that besought Him, That gave fruitfulness unto her that was barren, and That granted unto her that from her should bud forth the joy-bringing Virgin, who, according to the flesh, was Mother of God, and whose womb was a heaven wherein He dwelt Whom no place can contain. Let us also with them offer our praises to her that was called barren, but now is become the mother of a maid-child; let us say unto her in the words of the Scripture: O how blessed is the house of David from whence thou art sprung, and that womb wherein God hath fashioned the ark of His holiness, that is, her, by whom He was Himself conceived without man's seed.

Sixth Lesson.

RIGHT blessed art thou, and thrice blessed, whom God hath so blessed as to make thee to bring forth, as His own gift, the babe Mary, whose very name is highly honourable, out of whom Christ, the Flower of life, blossomed—a maiden whose rising is glorious, and whose delivery is worth more than the world. We also, O woman most blessed, do wish thee joy. In sooth thou hast brought forth what we have all hoped for, and God hath given us, namely, the babe of promise. Blessed indeed art thou, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. The tongues of all the godly do magnify thine offspring, and every glad word is spoken concerning her of whom thou art delivered. Meet in truth is it, and most meet to praise her who received a revelation from the goodness of God, and bore for us such and so great a fruit, from whom sweet JESUS sprang.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to give unto Blessed Anne such grace that she earned to become the mother of the mother of Thine Only-begotten Son, mercifully grant that, now that she is with Thee, we who keep her Feast-day may be holpen by her prayers. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 27th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyr Pantaleon. He was a physician, who was tried by the Emperor Maximian because he believed in Christ, and tormented on the rack, and by scorching with lamps, amid the which things he was comforted by the Lord appearing to him. At last he finished his testimony by the sword.

Also at Nicomedia, the holy Priest Hermolaus, by whose teaching blessed Pantaleon was brought to the faith. Also, the holy brethren Hermippus and Hermocrates, who, after many sufferings, were put to death by Maximian for confessing Christ.

At Nola, the holy martyrs Felix, Julia, and Jucunda.

At Biseglia, in Apulia, the holy martyrs Maurus, Bishop [of that see,] Pantaleemon, and Sergius, who suffered under Trajan.

On the same day are commemorated the holy martyrs whom the tyrant Dunaan caused to be burnt in Yemen, in Arabia, because they believed in Christ.

On this day also were born into the better life—

At Cordova, in Spain, in the persecution under the Arabs, the holy martyrs George the Deacon, Felix, Aurelius, Natalia, and Liliosa.

At Ephesus, the Seven Holy Sleepers, Maximian, Malchus, Martinian, Denis, John, Serapian, and Constantine.

At Auxerre, [in the sixth century,] deceased the blessed Confessor Ætherius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Constantinople, the blessed Virgin Anthusa, who was scourged, under the Emperor Constantine Copronymus, for honouring the holy images, and was sent into exile, where she fell asleep in the Lord.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 599.)

JULY 27.

St Pantaleon, Martyr.

Simple.

All from the Common Office for a Simple Feast of One Martyr, (p. 601,) except the following. Prayer throughout the Office, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 599.)

Third Lesson.

THIS Pantaleon was of a noble family of Nicomedia, and was a physician by trade. Hermolaus the Priest taught him well the faith of JESUS Christ, and he was baptized. A little while after, he persuaded his father Eustorgius to become a Christian. He afterwards duly preached the Faith of the Lord Christ at Nicomedia, and exhorted all to embrace His doctrine. For this he was tortured under the Emperor Diocletian, first on the rack, and then by putting red-hot metal to his body. He bore all the bitterness of his torments with a quiet and brave heart, and at last received the stroke of the sword, and grasped the crown of martyrdom.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 28th day of July, was born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Pope Victor I.

At Rome also, the holy Confessor Pope Innocent I.

At Milan, the holy Nazarius, and Celsus a lad, both martyrs, whom Anolinus, during the madness of the persecution which Nero stirred up, caused to be beheaded, after they had been long maltreated and afflicted in prison.

On the same day are commemorated many holy martyrs in the Thebaïd, in Egypt, who suffered in the persecution under Decius and Valerian, when the Christians eagerly accepted death by the sword for Christ's name's sake, and the subtil enemy, seeking to slay souls rather than bodies, invented slower paths to death. One of them, after he had conquered the rack, and plates, and vessels of heated metal, had his hands tied behind his back and was smeared with honey, after which he was set in the burning sun, exposed to the stings of bees and flies. Another was tied down softly among flowers, and a shameless harlot was sent to excite him to lust, but he bit off the end of his tongue and spat it into her face as she was cajoling him.

At Ancyra, in Galatia, the holy martyr Eustathius, who was put to the question with divers kinds of torments, and cast into the river, whence he was delivered by an angel. But at length a dove came down to him from heaven, and called him away to his everlasting reward.

At Miletus, the holy martyr Acatius, who, under the Emperor Licinius, after divers torments, was cast into a furnace, where by the help of God he remained unhurt, and then finished his testimony by being beheaded.

In Brittany, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Samson, Bishop [of Dol.]

At Lyons, [in the second century,] the holy Priest Peregrin, whose blessedness is attested by the glory of miracles.

JULY 28.

The Holy Martyrs Nazarius, Celsus, and Victor, and the Holy Confessor Pope Innocent.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

UPON us, O Lord, be somewhat of the blessing of the testification of Thine holy servants Nazarius, Celsus, Victor, and Innocent, and may the same ever plead with Thee on behalf of our weakness, and ever obtain for us Thy succour. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

NAZARIUS was baptized by the blessed Pope Linus, and afterwards went to Gaul. There he met with the boy Celsus, whom he instructed in the Christian law, and baptized. They went together to Treves, and, in the persecution under Nero, were both thrown into the sea, from which they had a marvellous escape. Later on, they came to Milan, where they spread the Faith of Christ, and as they remained firm in declaring that He is God, the Præfect Anolinus had them beheaded. Their bodies were buried outside the Roman gate, and lay long unknown, till, by a revelation from God, Blessed Ambrose found them, smeared with fresh blood, as though they had only a short time undergone martyrdom. They were taken up from thence, carried into the city, and laid in an honourable sepulchre.

Fifth Lesson.

VICTOR was by birth an African, and governed the Church in the time of the Emperor Severus. He confirmed the decree of Pius I. that the Holy Passover should be kept upon the Lord's Day. To bring this rule into use, Councils were held in many places, and in the First Synod of Nice it was decided that the Holy Passover Day should be kept after the 14th day of the month [Nisan], lest the Christians should seem to be copying the Jews. Victor decided that if need be, baptism can be administered with any water, as long as it be natural. He cast out of the Church Theodotus the tanner, of Constantinople, who taught that Christ was nothing but a man. He wrote upon the subject of the Passover, and some other small works. He held two Ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained four Priests, seven Deacons, and twelve Bishops for divers places. He received the crown of his testimony, and was buried at the Vatican on the 28th day of July, [in the year of our Lord 197.] He sat in the throne of Peter nine years, one month, and twenty-eight days.

Sixth Lesson.

INNOCENT of Albano flourished in the time of St Jerome and St Austin. Concerning him, St Jerome saith, writing to Demetrias: "Keep firm hold on the faith of holy Innocent, who is the heir and the child of the Apostolic See, and of Anastasius of blessed memory, and receive not any strange doctrine, how wise and acute soever thou mayest count thyself." Orosius writeth that God kept Innocent at Ravenna that he might not see the destruction of the Roman people, even as righteous Lot was withdrawn by God's Providence [from being at the burning of Sodom.] He condemned Pelagius and Cælestius, and made a decree against their heresy, that little children, even those whose mother was a Christian, must be born again in baptism, that the new birth may wash away in them the stain which they have contracted in their conception. He approved also that a Fast should be kept upon Saturday in memory of the Lord Christ's lying in the grave on that day. He sat in the throne of Peter fifteen years, one month, and ten days. He held four Ordinations in the month of December, and made therein thirty Priests, fifteen Deacons, and forty-four Bishops for divers places. He was buried in the "Bear-and-Cap" Cemetery, [upon the 28th of July, in the year 417.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xxi. 9, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 606.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 29th day of July, was born into the better life—

At Tarascon, in Gaul, the holy Virgin Martha, the hostess of our Saviour, and the sister of blessed Mary Magdalene and of holy Lazarus.

On the same day is commemorated at Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyr Pope Felix II., who was expelled from his See by the Arian Emperor Constantius because of his defence of the Catholic faith, and who fell gloriously, secretly murdered with the sword, at Cera, in Tuscany. [Concerning Felix there has been much dispute. The Missal and Breviary, by suppressing the title of Pope or Bishop (always given in such cases), seem to confirm the view now generally adopted by historians, viz., that he was an African martyr, who suffered on November 10, and whose reliques were brought to Rome on July 29; but the Martyrology retains another theory, now generally rejected, which identifies this Saint with one Felix, intruded into the See of Rome by Constantius during the Pontificate of Liberius, and now commonly regarded as an Anti-Pope of very dubious orthodoxy.] His body was brought thence by clerks and buried upon the aforesaid Way, whence it was afterwards taken to the church of SS. Cosmas and Damian, where it was found under the altar in the time of the Supreme Pontiff Gregory XIII., along with the relics of the holy martyrs Mark, Marcellian, and Tranquillinus, along with which it was again buried in the same spot upon the last day of July. Under the same altar were also found the bodies of the holy martyrs Abundius the Priest and Abundantius the Deacon, which not long after were solemnly taken to the church of the Society of Jesus, upon the eve of their birthday into the better life.

Upon the same day, were born into the same better life—

At Rome, on the Way to Porto, in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Simplicius, Faustinus, and Beatrix. Simplicius and Faustinus were beheaded, after many and divers torments, and their sister Beatrix was strangled in prison, for confessing Christ.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyrs the Virgins Lucilla and Flora, Eugene, Antonine, Theodore, and eighteen others their Companions, who suffered martyrdom under the Emperor Gallienus.

At Gangra, in Paphlagonia, the holy martyr Callinicus, who was first beaten with iron rods and tormented in other and divers ways, and at length cast into a furnace, and so resigned his spirit to God.

In Norway, [in the year 1030,] the holy martyr King Olaf II.

At Troyes, in Gaul, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Lupus, Bishop [of that See,] who went into Britain along with blessed German to rid that country of the Pelagian heresy, and who by his unceasing prayers delivered the city of Troyes from the fury of Attila when he was wasting all Gaul, and at length fell asleep in peace, after having performed the office of the Priesthood with worship for two and fifty years.

At St Brieux, [in the year 1237,] the holy Confessor William, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day deceased also blessed Prosper, Bishop of Orleans, [in the fifth century.]

At Todi, [in the third century,] the holy Confessor Faustinus.

At Mamia, in Galicia, [in the fifth century,] the holy [Virgin] Seraphina.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter, inclusive.

JULY 29.

St Martha, Virgin.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin, (p. 641,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Martha, begin at the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 645.)

A Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from their Office.

Then of the Holy Martyrs Felix, Simplicius, Faustinus, and Beatrix.

Prayer.

GRANT, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that as Thy Christian people do here in time unite in solemn joy for the blessedness of Thy Martyrs Felix, Simplicius, Faustinus, and Beatrix, they may also rejoice with them hereafter in their eternal joy, and may understand by very knowledge, that whereof they now speak in their prayers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Fourth Lesson.

MARTHA was the daughter of noble and wealthy parents, but is best known as having been the hostess of the Lord Christ. After that He was ascended into heaven, Martha, along with her brother [Lazarus,] her sister [Mary Magdalene,] her waiting-woman Marcella, Maximin, who was one of the seventy-two disciples of the Lord Christ, and who had baptized the whole of the family, and many other Christians, was taken by the Jews, and turned adrift upon the open sea in a ship without sail or oars, to meet with certain wreck, but by the governance of God the ship came to land at Marseilles with all safe.

Fifth Lesson.

THROUGH this miracle and the preaching of the Saints, the people of Marseilles first, and then those of Aix, and of the uttermost tribes, believed in Christ, and Lazarus was made Bishop of Marseilles, and Maximin Bishop of Aix. Mary Magdalene sat still at JESUS' Feet, being altogether given to prayer and the contemplation of heavenly blessedness, that that good part which she had chosen might not be taken away from her, withdrew herself to a great cave in an exceeding high mountain, where she lived for thirty years, utterly cut off from all conversation with men, and every day during that time carried up by Angels into the air, to listen to them that dwell in heaven praising God.

Sixth Lesson.

MARTHA, by the wondrous holiness and charity of her life, drew upon herself the love and wonder of all the inhabitants of Marseilles. She withdrew herself in company with some other honourable women into a place out of the way of men, where she lived long, with great praise for godliness and discretion. She foretold her own death long before, and at last, illustrious for miracles, passed away to be ever with the Lord, upon the 29th day of July. Her body is held in great worship at Tarascon.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 38.)

AT that time: JESUS entered into a certain village, and a certain woman, named Martha, received Him into her house. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26th upon the Words of the Lord.)

The words of our Lord JESUS Christ which have just been read from the Gospel, give us to wit that there is one thing toward the which we are making our way, all the while that we are striving amid the divers cares of this world. Thitherward we make our way, whileas we are still strangers and pilgrims, unpossessed as yet of any abiding city, still on the journey, not yet come home, still hoping, not yet enjoying. Still thitherward let us make our way, not slothfully nor by fits and starts, but so that some day we may arrive thither. Martha and Mary were sisters, not in the flesh only, but also in godliness; together, they clave unto the Lord; together, with one heart they served the Lord present in the Flesh.

Eighth Lesson.

MARTHA received Him into her house. It was just as strangers are received, but it was the handmaiden receiving her Lord, the sick receiving her Saviour, the creature receiving her Creator. She received Him, to give bodily meat unto Him by Whom she herself was to be fed unto eternal life. It had been the Lord's will to take upon Him the form of a servant, to be fed by servants, (still out of His good pleasure, not of necessity,) and in that form of a servant which He had taken upon Him. This was His good pleasure, to offer Himself as a subject for hospitality. He had Flesh, wherein He was somewhiles an-hungered and athirst, but know ye not how that, when He was in the desert and was an-hungered, "angels came and ministered unto Him." Himself it was therefore, That gave unto them of whom He was fain to be fed, the wherewithal. And what wonder is this if we consider how that holy Elijah, coming from being fed by the ministry of ravens, asked bread of the widow of Zarephath, and himself gave her the wherewithal to feed him? Had God failed to feed Elijah when He sent him unto the widow? God forbid. He did so that He might bless that godly widow for a service rendered unto His servant.

Ninth Lesson.

THUS was that same Lord received as a guest, Who came unto His own, and His own received Him not, "but as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God," adopting servants and making them children, redeeming prisoners and appointing them coheirs. Perchance some of you will say: O how blessed were they who were worthy to receive Christ as a guest into their own home! but mourn not, neither murmur, for that thou hast been born in an age wherein thou canst no more see Christ in the flesh. He hath not put the honour of receiving Him beyond thy reach. "Inasmuch," saith He, "as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." (Matth. xxv. 40.) The above remarks have occurred to me regarding the Lord considered as fed in the flesh, and I shall now touch briefly, as time permits, upon the Same, considered as the Feeder of the soul.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Felix, Simplicius, Faustinus, and Beatrix. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy German, Bishop of Auxerre, a man illustrious alike for his birth, his faith, his teaching, and the glory of his miracles, who rid Britain of the Pelagian heresy, and of whom mention is made upon the morrow.

Upon the same 30th day of July, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Abdon and Sennen. These were Persians who were brought to Rome in bonds under Decius. They were first hided with scourges loaded with lead, and then slain with the sword.

At Tuburbe, in Africa, the holy Virgin martyrs Maxima, Donatilla, and Secunda. In the persecution under Valerian and Gallienus, Maxima and Donatilla were given vinegar and gall to drink, then severely hided and racked, burnt over gratings, and rubbed with lime. Afterward, they were thrown to the beasts along with Secunda, a virgin of twelve years of age, but as the beasts would not touch them they were all slain with the sword.

At Assisi, in Umbria, the holy martyr Rufinus.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, [in the time of the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyr Julitta. She raised a law-plea against a certain great man who had spoiled her goods, and he pleaded against her that being a Christian she could not be heard, whereupon the judge commanded her to offer some incense to the idols in order that she might be able to plead. She firmly refused, and was cast into the fire, where she resigned her soul to God, but the fire did not hurt her body. Her famous praises have been set forth by holy Basil the Great in a noble discourse.

At Auxerre, [at the beginning of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Ursus, Bishop [of that See.]

Vespers of the following.

JULY 30.

St German, Bishop of Auxerre, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "Hear, O Lord, &c.," (p. 617.)

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding, all from the Common as in her Office, then of the Holy Martyrs Abdon and Sennen from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) and the following.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who didst give unto Thy saints Abdon and Sennen the abundant grace whereby to attain unto this glory, Grant unto Thy servants the remission of all their sins, that, with the pleading of the worthy deeds of Thy Saints, they may worthily be delivered from all things hurtful. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GERMANUS of Auxerre was a man eminent by birth, by learning, and by legal wisdom, who had moreover improved his social position by a distinguished marriage. In the time of the blessed Bishop Amator he was appointed to the governorship of a province. In consequence of a warning from God he caused himself to be enrolled by Amator among the clergy, and was afterwards his successor in the Bishopric. Thenceforth he became a new man, and a type of the Gospel counsels of perfection. He renounced all the pomps and pleasures of the world, became his wife's brother, distributed all his goods to feed the poor, and adopted a life of extraordinary austerity and self-denial. For food he had nothing but barley bread and water mingled with ashes, slept upon bars covered with ashes, clad himself in sackcloth and hair-cloth, prayed without ceasing, passed almost whole nights without sleep in bewailing his sins, washed the feet of the poor and extended hospitality to all, while he himself fasted. At length his love toward God and toward his neighbour broke forth marvellously, and he became famous for oftentimes working wonders.

Fifth Lesson.

AT this time the Pelagian heresy was doing wide harm to souls in Britain, and at the prayers of the Britons for help a synod of Gaulish Bishops, under the authority of Pope Celestine, sent blessed German along with Lupus, the holy Bishop of Troyes, to confute the authors of the corrupt doctrine, and either to preserve the people in the faith or recall them thereto. It was during this journey that blessed German, while he was at Paris, foresaw in the spirit of prophecy the future holiness of the Virgin Geneviève, and hallowed her unto Christ while she was as yet a little maid. When he embarked on the sea he calmed by his prayers, and by the sprinkling of oil blessed by him, a storm which was raised by evil spirits. When these two apostolic Bishops were landed, they soon filled the whole island with their opinion, their preaching, and their works of power, so that the whole country shortly passed over to their judgment, and the heretics, being confuted in argument, were compelled either to give way or at least to hide themselves in darkness. At this time also, German, at a general assembly of the people, gave sight to a blind damsel aged ten years, the daughter of a tribune, by the which miracle he turned a countless multitude to Christ. Presently after, being sent for to the camp of the Britons, against whom the Saxons and Picts were making war, he first made the soldiers friends with Christ, and then obtained for them a bloodless victory at the triple intonation of the word Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER these and other wonders, the two apostolic Bishops returned home to their own Churches, but no long while after there came to blessed German from Britain a new messenger to give him the wish of all the bishops that he would come over again, since the heresy was beginning to sprout anew, and they were fain that he should pluck it up by the roots. He took with him therefore Severus, the blessed Bishop of Treves, and went back to Britain again. There, by his preaching and by the wonderful work of healing a lame man, he confirmed the people in the faith. He sought out and condemned the authors of the corrupt doctrine, and caused them to leave the whole island. He returned home, and after many illustrious works betook himself to Ravenna, to plead for peace for the Britons. At Ravenna he was received with the deepest reverence by the Emperor Valentinian III. and his mother Placidia, and there, among other wonders, he raised a dead man to life. In that city he was seized with his last illness, and upon the seventh day thereof passed away to be for ever with Christ, in the year of our Lord 448, upon the 31st day of July, on the which day he is commemorated in the Roman Martyrology. By command of the Emperor his body was carried home to his own Church, and wonders took place at its home-bringing. The Empress took for herself his box of reliques. The Bishops divided his clothes among them, and holy Peter Chrysologos, Archbishop of Ravenna, received his cowl and hair-cloth for the lot of his own possession.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619,) the Ninth is read along with the Eighth in order to make room for the Ninth Lesson. (For SS. Abdon and Sennen.)

ABDON and Sennen were Persians. In the reign of the Emperor Decius they were accused of interring, on their own farm, the bodies of Christians, which had been thrown out unburied. The Emperor commanded them to be arrested and ordered to sacrifice to the gods. This they refused to do, and persistently preached that JESUS Christ is God, whereupon they were put into strict confinement. When Decius afterwards returned to Rome, he had them led in chains in his triumph. Being thus dragged into the city and up to the idols, they abhorred and spat upon them, for which they were cast to bears and lions; the beasts were afraid to touch them. They were butchered with the sword, and the corpses, with their feet bound together, were dragged before the image of the sun. Thence they were stolen away, and the Deacon Quirinus buried them in his own house.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of SS. Abdon and Sennen from the Common Office, with Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 31st day of July, was born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Confessor Ignatius, Founder of the Society of Jesus, famous for holiness and miracles, and most earnest to spread everywhere the Catholic religion.

At Cæsarea, the blessed martyr Fabius. He refused to carry the President's standard; wherefore he was committed to prison for some days, after which he was twice interrogated, and then, as he persevered in confessing Christ, was beheaded by order of the judge.

At Milan, the holy martyr Calimerus, Bishop [of that see.] He was arrested in the persecution under Antonine, grievously wounded, pierced through the neck with a sword, and cast headlong into a well, and so finished the course of his testimony.

At Synnada, in Phrygia, the holy martyrs Democritus, Secundus, and Denys.

In Syria, three hundred and fifty holy martyrs, all monks, who were slaughtered by the heretics for their defence of the Council of Chalcedon.

At Ravenna, the holy German, Bishop of Auxerre, eminent alike for his birth, his faith, his teaching, and the glory of his miracles, who rid Britain of the Pelagian heresy; whose feast we are this day keeping.

At Tagaste, in Africa, [in the fourth century,] holy Firmus, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his glorious testimony.

At Sienna, in Tuscany, [in the year 1367,] the blessed John Columbini, Founder of the Order of the Jesuates; he was famous for his holiness and miracles.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

JULY 31.

St Ignatius, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, to set forward the greater glory of Thine own Name,[1] didst through blessed Ignatius strengthen Thy Church in her earthly warfare, with the succour of a new regiment, grant unto us so to fight here upon earth with his help and after his ensample, that we may worthily hereafter be crowned with him in heaven. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Ignatius, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St German. All from the Common as in his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

---

[1] Of course an allusion to the celebrated motto of the Society of JESUS—A.M.D.G.—Ad majorem Dei gloriam—For the greater glory of God.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IGNATIUS was a Spaniard by nation, and was born of the noble Biscayan family of Loyola, [in the year of our Lord 1491.] He followed first the Court and then the army of the Most Catholic King. At the siege of Pampeluna [in the year 1521] he received a severe wound which laid him up with a long and dangerous illness. During this time he chanced to read some godly books, and conceived from them a burning desire to follow in the footsteps of Christ and His saints. He betook himself to Monserrat, and there entered himself for the heavenly warfare, by hanging up his weapons, and watching them for a night before the Altar of the Blessed Virgin. Thence he withdrew to Manresa, clad in sackcloth, for he had before given his costly raiment to a beggar. At Manresa he lived upon bread and water, begging the bread, and fasting every day except the Lord's Day. He mastered his flesh by the use of a sharp chain and hair-cloth, slept upon the ground, and lashed himself to blood-shedding with iron scourges. Thus he dwelt for a year, feasted by God with such clear lights, that he was used afterwards to say that even if the Holy Bible had not existed, he would have been ready to die for the faith only on the evidence of those things which the Lord had shown unto him at Manresa. It was at this time that, albeit a man of little education, he put together that wonderful book intituled "Spiritual Exercises," whose worth hath been attested by the judgment of the Apostolic See, and by universal usefulness.

Fifth Lesson.

TO make himself of greater use for the profit of souls, he determined to improve himself by education, beginning by going through the rudiments among little boys. He left nothing untried that could help towards the salvation of others, and it was marvellous what pain and mockery he cheerfully accepted on all hands, suffering ill-usage also, imprisonment and stripes almost unto death; but he was willing to suffer them all much more for the greater glory of his Master. At Paris he took to him seven comrades from the members of that University, men of different nations, but who had all taken the Degree of Master of Arts and in Divinity. With these seven he laid the first foundations of the Society of JESUS in the crypt at Montmartre, [upon the 15th day of August, in the year of Christ 1534.] When he afterwards organised the same Society at Rome he bound it by the closest bonds to the Apostolic See, adding to the three accustomed vows of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience, a fourth, concerning Missions. Paul III. was the first Pope to receive and confirm the Institute, but it has since been approved by other Popes and by the Council of Trent. Ignatius, to spread the Faith, sent holy Francis Xavier to preach the Gospel in the Indies, and others in other parts of the world, and the war, which he thus proclaimed against paganism and heresy, was waged with such success, that it was the general belief, confirmed by the utterance of the Pope, that even as God had in other times raised up holy men specially to meet the needs of their day, so He had raised up against Luther and the heretics of that age, Ignatius and the Society which he had founded.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT the first care of Ignatius was to set forward godliness among Catholics. He was a great promoter of seemliness in the Churches, instruction in the Catechism, and often hearing Sermons and using the Sacraments. He opened schools everywhere to train up boys in godliness and good learning. At Rome he founded the German College, a home for fallen, and another for imperilled girls, an orphanage for boys and another for girls, houses for converts under instruction, and other godly institutions. He never wearied in his work of gaining souls for God, and was sometimes heard to say that if he had the choice he would rather live without knowing whether he was to be among the blessed, and meanwhile work for God and the salvation of his neighbours, than know he was going to glory and die forthwith. He exercised an extraordinary power over devils. Holy Philip Neri and others saw heavenly light shining from his face. At last, [on the 31st day of July,] in the year [of our Redemption 1556 and] of his own age the sixty-fifth, he passed away to the embrace of that Lord Whose greater glory had been the constant theme of his words and aim of all his works. He is very illustrious in the Church on account of his great deeds and miracles, and Gregory XV. enrolled him in the Kalendar of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of August is commemorated the dedication of the Church of St Peter-in-Chains, upon the Esquiline Mount at Rome.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the seven holy Maccabee brethren and their mother, who suffered under King Antiochus Epiphanes. Their relics have been brought to Rome and buried in the aforesaid Church of St Peter-in-Chains.

At Rome, [in the year 137,] the holy Virgins, Faith, Hope, and Charity, [daughters of St Sophia, who is named under September 30,] who gained the crown of martyrdom under the Emperor Hadrian.

Likewise at Rome, upon the Latin Way, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Bonus the Priest, Faustus, and Maurus, and nine others, of whom it is written in the Acts of holy Pope Stephen.

At Philadelphia, in Arabia, the holy martyrs Cyril, Aquila, Peter, Domitian, Rufus, and Menander, who were all crowned upon one and the same day.

At Perge, in Pamphylia, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Leontius, Attius, Alexander, and six other husbandmen, who were beheaded under the President Flavian in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Gerona, in Spain, [in the year 304,] the holy martyr Felix, who after torments of divers kinds was ordered by the Emperor Dacian to be mangled until he gave up his unconquered spirit to Christ.

At Vercelli, [in the year 370,] the holy martyr Eusebius, Bishop of that city, who was banished by the Emperor Constantius, first to Bethshan and then into Cappadocia, on account of his confession of the Catholic faith, but at length returned unto his own Church. He suffered [a living] martyrdom under the persecution of the Arians. His memory is chiefly kept upon the 15th day of December, which is that of his ordination as Bishop.

At Paris, [in the year 287,] the holy martyr Justinus.

At Vienne, [in the year 136,] holy Verus, [fifth] Bishop [of that see.]

At Winchester, in England, [in the year 984,] holy Ethelwold, Bishop [of Winchester, and Confessor.]

In the district of Lisieux, [in the department of Calvados, France,] the holy Confessor Nemesius.

Vespers are of the following.

FEAST-DAYS IN AUGUST.

On the first day on which Nine Lessons are not read is said the Office of the Dead.

AUGUST 1.

Lammas Day.

Feast of St Peter-in-Chains.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for an Apostle, (p. 583,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[1]

THE Lord commands; and, lo, his iron chains,
Falling from Peter, the behest obey,
Peter, blest shepherd! who, to verdant plains,
And life's immortal springs from day to day,
Leads on his tender charge, driving all wolves away.

Praise to the Father through all ages be;
Praise, blessing to the eternal Son,
And Holy Ghost, One Glorious Trinity;
To Whom all majesty and might belong:
So sing we now, and such be our eternal song. Amen.

Verse. Thou art Peter.

Answer. And upon this rock I will build My Church.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thou art the shepherd of the sheep, and the Prince of the Apostles, and unto thee are given the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

Commemoration of St Paul from Lauds.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from his Office.

Then of the Seven Holy Martyred Brethren, told of in the Second Book of the Machabees.[2] All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, with the following.

Prayer.

LORD, we pray Thee, that the crown of the Brethren Thy Martyrs, may be a joy unto us, nerving the valour of our Faith, and strengthening us by sevenfold intercession. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

Hymn.[1]

PETER, whatever thou shalt bind on earth,
The same is bound above the starry sky;
What here thy delegated power doth loose,
Is loosed in heaven's supremest court on high:
To judgment shalt thou come when the world's end is nigh.

Praise to the Father through all ages be!
The same to Thee, O Co-eternal Son!
And Holy Ghost, One Glorious Trinity;
To Whom all majesty and might belong:
So sing we now, and such be our eternal song. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (xii. 1.)

HEROD the King stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church. And he killed James, the brother of John, with the sword. And, because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded farther to take Peter also. Then were the days of unleavened bread. And, when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers, to keep him, intending, after the Passover, to bring him forth to the people. Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him.

First Responsory.

Simon Peter, before I called thee, &c., (p. 909.)

Second Lesson.

AND when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night, Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains. And the keepers before the door kept the prison. And, behold, the Angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison. And he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying: Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands. And the Angel said unto him: Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. And he saith unto him: Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

Second Responsory.

Simon Peter, if thou lovest Me, &c., (p. 910.)

Third Lesson.

AND he went out and followed him, and wist not that it was true which was done by the Angel, but thought he saw a vision. And when they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city, which opened to them of his own accord.

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] See Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, Fifth Week of October.

And they went out, and passed on through one street. And forthwith, the Angel departed from him. And when Peter was come to himself, he said: Now I know of a surety that the Lord hath sent His Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

Third Responsory.

Thou art Peter, &c., (p. 910.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN [the year of our Lord 439, in] the reign of the Emperor Theodosius the younger, his wife went to Jerusalem in fulfilment of a vow, and there was gifted with many presents. Among other things, they gave her in especial an iron chain, adorned with gold and precious stones, which they affirmed to be the same wherewith the Apostle Peter had been bound by King Herod. Eudocia, with godly reverence, afterwards sent this chain to Rome, to her daughter Eudoxia, who brought it to the Pope, and the Pope in return showed to her another chain wherewith the same Apostle had been shackled under the Emperor Nero.

Fourth Responsory.

Lord, if it be Thou, &c., (p. 910.)

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN then the Pope put together the Roman chain and that which had been brought from Jerusalem, it came to pass that they got so entangled the one with the other that they seemed no longer two but one chain. From this wonder these holy fetters began to receive such honour, that Eudoxia's Church of St Peter on the Esquiline Mount was dedicated under the name of St Peter-in-Chains, and a Feast-Day instituted upon the first day of August in memory of it.

Fifth Responsory.

Arise, O Peter, &c., (p. 910.)

Sixth Lesson.

FROM that time forth the honour which before had used to be paid to the profane festivity of the Gentiles, [held in memory of the dedication of the temple of Mars, and of the birth of Claudius,] began to be turned to the Chains of Peter, whose very touch healed the sick, and drave out devils. Among other such cases there befell in the year of man's Redemption 969, that of a certain Count, a servant of the Emperor Otho, who was possessed by an unclean spirit, and tore himself with his own teeth. This man the Emperor ordered to be taken to Pope John, and as soon as he had touched the Count's neck with the hallowed chains, the foul spirit came out of him, and left him free. And thenceforward the reverence for these holy chains greatly increased in the City.

Sixth Responsory.

Thou art the shepherd, &c., (p. 911.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (29*th on the Saints.*)

Peter was the only one of the Apostles who was worthy to hear the words: "Amen, I say unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church." Worthy indeed must he be, who, when the nations are to be built up into a Temple of God, is chosen as the ground-stone whereon the building is to stand: the pillar whereby it is to be held up, and the key wherethrough entrance is to be made into the kingdom. Concerning him the Word of God saith: "That they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them." (Acts v. 15.) If the shadow of his body then could give help, how much more shall the fulness of his strength give help now? If the very air, as he passed by, was then profitable to such as besought him, how much more shall his favour profit where now he abideth? It is with reason that, throughout all the Churches of Christ, the iron chains wherewith he was afflicted are reckoned more precious than gold.

Seventh Responsory.

Peter, I have prayed for thee, &c., (p. 911.)

Eighth Lesson.

IF his shadow as a visitor was so healthful, what is his chain now that he bindeth and looseth? If his empty image in the air had healing power, how much power must have been contracted from his body by those chains, whose iron weight sank into his holy limbs during his suffering? If, before he testified, he was so mighty to aid them that called upon him, how much mightier is he now since his victory? (If a Ninth Lesson of St Peter be required, the Eighth is divided here.) Blessed were the links, doomed to be changed from fetters and shackles, into a crown, which by touching the Apostle, made him a Martyr. Blessed were the chains, whose prisoner left them for the Cross of Christ, and which brought him thither, not as the instruments of condemnation, but of sanctification.

Eighth Responsory.

JESUS asked His disciples, &c., (p. 911.)

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Gregory of Nazianzus, Patriarch of Constantinople. (20*th on the Machabees.*)

WHAT were the Machabees? For it is under their name that the Festival at which you are this day assembled is kept. It is true that many persons do not hold them in honour, because they fought before the coming of Christ; nevertheless they deserve to be venerated by all men, for they bore themselves bravely and faithfully in defence of the laws and ordinances of their people. They that underwent martyrdom before Christ came, what would not have been their deeds, if they had suffered persecution after He came, and had had before them for a pattern the Death which He embraced for the sake of man's salvation? With no ensample to lead them, their bravery was what it was; had they had the ensample before their eyes, would they not have gone down with double nerve to the battle? There is a mystic and subtle idea, which seemeth very likely to me and to all lovers of God, that none of those who were crowned with martyrdom before Christ came, could have been so, unless they had had faith in Christ.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Herod the King proceeded farther * to take Peter also. And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison: intending, after the Passover, to bring him forth to the people.

Second Antiphon. Peter therefore was kept in prison, * but prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him.

The rest is as on June 29th, except the following.

Hymn.[1]

PETER, blest Shepherd! hearken to our cry,
And with a word unloose our guilty chain;
Thou! who hast power to ope the gates on high
To men below, and power to shut them fast again.

Praise, blessing, majesty, through endless days,
Be to the Trinity immortal given;
Who in pure Unity profoundly sways
Eternally alike all things in earth and heaven. Amen.

Verse. Thou art Peter.

Answer. And upon this rock I will build My Church.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make the chains to fall off from the hands of Thy Blessed Apostle Peter, and didst cause him to go away unhurt out of prison, make to fall off from us, we beseech Thee, the chains of our sins, and in Thy great mercy deliver us from all evil. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then the following Commemoration of St Paul.

Antiphon. O Holy Apostle Paul, Preacher of the truth, and Teacher of the Gentiles, pray for us to God Who hath chosen thee.

Verse. O Holy Apostle Paul, thou art a chosen vessel unto God.

Answer. To preach the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who, through the preaching of the Blessed Apostle Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine throughout the world, grant, we beseech Thee, that we, who do keep his memorial, may continually be holpen by his intercession with Thee.

Then of the Holy Martyrs. Prayer as at Vespers.

Antiphon at Prime. Herod the King, &c. (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 2nd day of August, were born into the better life—

At Nocera-dei-Pagani, [in Campania, Italy, in the year 1787,] holy Alphonsus Mary de' Liguori, Bishop of Santa-Agata-de'-Goti, and Founder of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer. Illustrious for the zeal for the salvation of souls shown both by his writings, his words, and his ensample. Pope Gregory XVI. enrolled his name with those of the Saints, and the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. gave him the title of Doctor of the Church.

At Rome, in the cemetery of Callistus, [in the year 257,] the holy Pope and martyr Stephen. He was celebrating Mass during the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, when the soldiers broke in. He finished his office before the altar without fear or trembling, and then was beheaded as he sat upon his throne.

At Nice, in Bithynia, [in the fourth century,] the holy Theodota and her three sons, who were all burned [alive] in the fire together by the order of Neretius, Consular of Bythinia, after he had first caused the eldest son, whose name was Evodius, to be beaten with clubs for his faithful confession of Christ.

In Africa, [in the year 211,] the holy martyr Rutilius. He had fled from one place to another in order to escape the persecution, and had sometimes bought himself out of danger, when he was unexpectedly arrested and brought before the President. He was long put to the torture, then given over to the fire, and so crowned with a noble testimony.

At Padua, [in the second century,] the holy Maximus, Bishop of that city, who died a blessed death, famous for miracles.

Antiphon at Terce. Peter therefore, &c. (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, and Prayer as at Lauds.

Hymn as at First Vespers.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thou to whom God hath given the keys of the kingdom of heaven, loosen the chains which bind the sordid souls of the earthly.

A Commemoration is made of St Paul, as at Lauds.

Then of St Alphonsus Mary de' Liguori. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.," and Prayer from his Lauds.

Then of St Stephen, Pope and Martyr. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

AUGUST 2.

St Alphonsus Mary de' Liguori, Bishop [of Santa-Agata-de'-Goti,] Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ALPHONSUS Mary de' Liguori was born of a noble family, at [Marianella, near] Naples, [on the 26th day of September, in the year of salvation 1696.] From his earliest days he gave no dark signs of holiness. When he was but a babe, his parents carried him to holy Francis de Hieronymo, of the Society of JESUS, and holy Francis, after long prayer, said that the child would live to ninety years of age, that he would become a Bishop, and that he would be a great blessing to the Church. From his childhood, he had a strong distaste to games, and by his entreaty and example, induced the noble pages [of the Court, among whom he served,] to conduct themselves with Christian decency. As a young man, he became a member of divers godly guilds, and made it among his delights to nurse the sick in the hospitals, to spend much time in prayer in the Churches, and often to receive the Holy Sacraments. With his godliness he so joined zeal for learning, that when he was scarcely sixteen years of age he took degrees in Canon and Civil law in the University of Naples. In obedience to the wish of his father, he adopted the profession of an advocate, in which he gained great credit, but, finding dangers in the practice of the law, he entirely gave it up. He declined a very brilliant marriage which was proposed to him by his father, resigned his family inheritance as an eldest son, hung up his sword at the Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled "of Ransom," and surrendered himself altogether to the service of God. He became a Priest, [in 1726,] and made so zealous an onslaught on sin, running hither and thither in the office of an Apostle, that he accomplished the conversion of multitudes of lost creatures. The poor and the country-people most chiefly roused his compassion, and [in 1742] he founded the Congregation of Priests called that "of the Most Holy Redeemer," to follow the Redeemer's footsteps by preaching the Gospel to the poor throughout the fields, villages, and hamlets.

Fifth Lesson.

THAT he might not turn aside from his work, he bound himself by a vow never to lose any time. Inflamed with the love of souls, he toiled to gain them to Christ and to amend their lives, not only by preaching of the word of God, but also by writings full of holy learning and godliness. It is a marvel how many hatreds he stilled, and how many backsliders he led again into the paths of salvation. He was eminently devoted to the Mother of God, published a book on her glories, and when he was earnestly speaking thereof in his sermons, it happened more than once that all the people openly saw a strange brightness fall upon him from her image, till all his countenance shone, and he was rapt in an ecstasy. The sufferings of the Lord and the Holy Eucharist were ever before his eyes, and to them he spread abroad a wonderful love. When he was praying before the Altar of the Blessed Sacrament, or celebrating the Holy Liturgy, which he never failed to do every day, through the seraphic violence of his love, he wept burning tears, or shook with strange movements, or became altogether beside himself. He joined a wonderful innocence and purity, which he never polluted by the stain of deadly sin, to a wonderful depth of repentance, and chastised his body with hunger, iron chains, hair-cloth, and scourgings even to blood-shedding. Among all these things he was remarkable for the gift of prophecy, the power of seeing into the hearts of men, the ability to be in more places than one at the same time, and other miracles.

Sixth Lesson.

HE firmly and perseveringly refused all high places in the Church which were offered him, but [in 1762] Pope Clement XIII. absolutely commanded him to take the Bishoprick of the Church of Santa Agata de' Goti. On becoming a Bishop, the only change which he made in the hardness of his life was that of his outer raiment. There remained, too, the same simplicity of meats, the same strong zeal for Christian discipline, the same determined will to put down sin and keep out false doctrines, and the same earnestness in all the duties of a shepherd of souls. In his tenderness to the poor, he spent among them all the revenues of his Church, and in a year of famine sold the furniture of his own house to feed his starving people. He was all things to all men; and brought nuns to lead a more perfect life, while he saw to it that a monastery was opened for nuns attached to his own Congregation. On account of grievous and continual sickness, he resigned his Bishoprick, and poor as when he had left them, poor he returned among his disciples. On the 1st day of August, in the year 1787, he peacefully died at Nocera-dei-Pagani, amid the tears of his followers. He was then ninety years of age; his body was worn out with old age and hard work, and with chronic gout, and other painful maladies, but the freshness of his mind never failed to the last, in talking and writing on heavenly things. In the year 1816 Pope Pius VII., finding him famous on account of his good works and miracles, enrolled his name among those of the Blessed. God still glorified him by new signs and wonders, and on the Feast of the Most Holy Trinity, in the year 1839, Gregory XVI., with solemn pomp, numbered him among the Saints of the Church. Lastly, Pope Pius IX., in accordance with a Resolution of the Congregation of Sacred Rites, gave him the title of Doctor of the Universal Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.) The last Lesson is omitted or read as one with the Eighth.

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c.

Ninth Lesson. (For St Stephen, Pope and Martyr.)

THIS Stephen was a Roman, and exercised the Popedom in the reign of the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus. It was his ordinance which forbade Priests and Deacons ever to use their hallowed garments except in the Church. He forbade a re-baptism of such as had been baptized by heretics, writing to St Cyprian in these words:—"Let us have no innovations, but only what hath been handed down unto us." He turned many to Christ, and, among them, the Tribune Olympius, with his wife Exuperia, and his son Theodulus, and the Tribune Nemesius, to whose blind daughter he had given sight, along with all his household. All these were martyrs for JESUS Christ. When the persecution of the Emperors was waxing dreader and more dread, Stephen gathered together the clergy, and exhorted them to be brave in lifting up their testimony, and himself celebrated Masses and Councils in the Catacombs. He was caught by some unbelievers, and haled to the temple of Mars, to do sacrifice to that idol, but he boldly said he would never pay to devils an honour which it behoved to give to God only. As he spake these words an earthquake made the image of Mars to fall down, and all the temple to tremble. All they that held Stephen fled, and the Pope went back to his own people in the cemetery of Lucina. He there delivered to them a discourse full of the Word of God, and gave them the Communion of the Sacrament of the Body of Christ. While he was finishing the Mass, the soldiers of the Emperor again brake in upon them, and his head was cut off as he sat in his chair. The rêliques of the Martyr, along with the chair stained with his blood, were buried by the clergy in the cemetery of Callistus, upon the 2nd day of August, [in the year of our Lord 257.] He lived as Pope three years, three months, and twenty-two days. He held two ordinations in the month of December, and in them ordained six Priests, five Deacons, and three Bishops.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst enkindle in Thy Blessed Confessor and Bishop Alphonsus Mary a burning love of souls, and by him didst make Thy Church the Mother of a new family, we pray Thee to give us such strength that, taught by his wholesome doctrine and nerved by his ensample, we also may in the end happily attain unto Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds, a Commemoration is made of St Stephen. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 3rd day of August is commemorated the finding at Jerusalem, [in the year 415,] of the body of the most blessed Stephen, the first of all the martyrs, and of those of holy Gamaliel, Nicodemus, and Abibon. Their place was revealed by God to Lucian the Priest, in the time of the Emperor Honorius. [The body of St Stephen now rests at Rome in the Basilica of St Lawrence beyond the Walls.]

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Constantinople, the holy martyr Hermellus.

In India, upon the coasts of Persia, the holy Monks and others whom King Abenner, when he was persecuting the Church of God, caused to be tormented and slain in divers ways.

At Naples, in Campania, [in the year 97,] holy Aspren, Bishop of Naples, who was healed of sickness by the holy Apostle Peter, and thereupon procuring himself to be baptized was ordained Bishop of that city.

At Autun, [in the year 490,] the holy Confessor Euphronius, Bishop of that see.

At Anagni, [in the year 1105,] holy Peter, Bishop [of that see,] who fell asleep in the Lord, famous for his observance as a Monk first, and afterwards for his carefulness as a shepherd.

At Philippi, [in the year 60,] in Macedonia, holy Lydia, a seller of purple, who was the first of all to believe the Gospel there at the preaching of the holy Apostle Paul. [Acts of the Apostles xvi. 14.]

At Berœa, in Syria, [about the year 450,] the holy women Marana and Cyra, [Virgins of Berœa.]

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent, &c.

A Commemoration is made of the following.

Antiphon. And Stephen, full of grace and power, did great wonders among the people.

Verse. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord.

Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Prayer.

GRANT, O Lord, that we may have grace to tread in his footsteps whom we honour, and learn to love and bless our persecutors by the example of Thy First Martyr Stephen, who prayed even for his murderers to JESUS Christ, Thy Son; Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

AUGUST 3.

Finding of the Body of St Stephen, the First Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, except what is otherwise given here.

Should there be First Vespers, the Antiphons and Chapter are from Lauds.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Martyrs, * O come, let us worship Him!

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Acts of the Apostles (vii. 51.)

[1] "YE stiff-necked, and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost; as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the Prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of Whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers: who have received the law by the disposition of Angels, and have not kept it." When they heard these things they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

First Responsory.

And Stephen, full of grace and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

Verse. There arose certain of the synagogue, disputing with Stephen; and they were not able to resist the wisdom, and the Spirit which spake.

Answer. Did great wonders and miracles among the people.

Second Lesson.

BUT he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and JESUS standing on the right hand of God. And said: "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord. And they cast him out of the city and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul. And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying: "Lord JESUS, receive my spirit."

Second Responsory.

[2] All that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on Stephen, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel standing among them.

Verse. Full of grace and power, he did great wonders and miracles among the people.

Answer. His face as it had been the face of an angel standing among them.

Third Lesson.

AND he kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, saying: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And when he had said this, he fell asleep in the Lord. (viii. 1.) And Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the Church which was at Jerusalem: and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apostles. And devout men carried Stephen to his burial and made great lamentation over him.

Third Responsory.

[3] The blessed Stephen looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and said: Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of the power of God.

Verse. But Stephen, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and said:

Answer. Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of the power of God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing at the right hand of the power of God.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN [the year of our Lord 415,] in the reign of the Emperor Honorius, a Priest named Lucian, [dwelling at Caphargamala, about twenty miles from Jerusalem,] received a message from God, in consequence of which discovery was made of the bodies of the Saints Stephen the First Martyr, Gamaliel, Nicodemus, and Abibon, [the son of Gamaliel,] which had long been lying unknown and unheeded. Lucian was asleep when Gamaliel appeared to him in a dream as a tall comely old man of worshipful presence, told him where the bodies were lying, and bade him go to John, Patriarch of Jerusalem, and deal with him that they might have more honourable burial.

Fourth Responsory.

[4] They stoned Stephen, calling upon God and saying: Lord JESUS Christ, receive my spirit; and lay not this sin to their charge.

Verse. And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, saying:—

Answer. Lord JESUS Christ, receive my spirit; and lay not this sin to their charge.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the Patriarch of Jerusalem heard it, he called together Bishops and Priests from the neighbouring cities, and betook himself to the place, where he found the tombs hewn in the rock, and a right sweet savour flowing forth from them. The thing being noised abroad, a great multitude of people came together, and many that were sick and weak of divers diseases returned home whole. The sacred body of holy Stephen was then carried with great pomp to the holy Church of Zion. Under the Emperor Theodosius the Younger it was taken to Constantinople; and during the Popedom of Pelagius I. it was brought to Rome, where it has been laid in the sepulchre of the holy Martyr Lawrence in the Veranian Field.[5]

Fifth Responsory.

[6] They ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city, calling upon God, and saying: Lord JESUS, receive my spirit.

Verse. And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul; and they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying:

Answer. Lord JESUS, receive my spirit.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon "The City of God," written by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] (xxii. 8.)

WHEN the Bishop Projectus brought some reliques of that most glorious Martyr Stephen to Tibilis,[1] a great multitude came together and went out to meet the shrine.[2] A blind woman prayed to be led to the Bishop who was bearing the hallowed deposit.[3] She laid on the reliques the flowers which she was carrying, took them up again, touched her eyes with them —and forthwith saw. She went forward rejoicing, at the head of the amazed procession, choosing her own path, and needing no more that any should lead her. I remember also the shrine of this same Martyr which hath been placed in the town of Synica, hard by this city of Hippo. Lucillus, Bishop of that place, was carrying it, with a multitude going before and following after; when, all of a sudden, by bearing this hallowed burden, he was healed of the emerods, from which he was even then suffering, and which were being treated by a physician, an intimate friend of his, who was about to cut them.

Sixth Responsory.

The ungodly fell upon the righteous, to put him to death. But he received the stones with joy, that he might earn a crown of glory.

Verse. They stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord.

Answer. But he received the stones with joy, that he might earn a crown of glory.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. But he received the stones with joy, that he might earn a crown of glory.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiii. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the Scribes and Pharisees: Behold, I send unto you Prophets, and wise men, and Scribes; and some of them ye shall kill and crucify. And so on.

Homily on this passage by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iv. Commentary on Matth. xxiii.)

We have already remarked that the Lord's words, "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers," (32,) refer in the first place to Himself, Whom the Jews afterwards put to death. In a secondary sense it may likewise be applied to His disciples, of whom He saith, "Behold, I send unto you Prophets, and wise men, and Scribes." Here observe that, according to the Apostle writing to the Corinthians, (1 Cor. xii. 4,) there are diversities of gifts among Christ's followers. Some are Prophets of that which is to come; some are wise men, who know the due season for rebuke and exhortation; some are Scribes learned in the law. And of these they stoned Stephen, slew Paul with the sword, crucified Peter, and scourged the Disciples mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles. (v. 40; xvi. 33.)

Seventh Responsory.

Stephen, the servant of God, who was stoned by the Jews, saw the heavens opened: he saw and entered in. Blessed is he, unto whom the heavens were opened.

Verse. While his poor body was crushed by the hurtling shower of stones, God's brightness broke upon him out of the heavenly palaces.

Answer. Blessed is he unto whom the heavens were opened.

Eighth Lesson.

IT is a subject of dispute among commentators who is meant by Zacharias the son of Barachias. We read of several persons of the name of Zacharias. But here, in order to prevent any mistake, it is particularly said, "Whom ye slew between the temple and the altar." I have read various opinions in various places upon this question, and I will give each. First, some hold that Zacharias the son of Barachias is the eleventh of the twelve Minor Prophets; and this opinion is supported by the father's name. But the Bible nowhere telleth us that this Prophet was slain between the temple and the altar; and it is hardly possible that he can have been, for in his time it could scarcely be said that even the ruins of the temple were in existence. Secondly, others maintain that this Zacharias was Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist. This interpretation is derived from the dreams of the Apocryphal Gospels, wherein it is asserted that he was martyred for preaching Christ's coming.

Eighth Responsory.

The gates of heaven were opened to Christ's blessed martyr Stephen, and he is the first of all the martyrs. Wherefore he reigneth crowned in heaven.

Verse. For he was the first to make an offering of his death to that Saviour Who vouchsafed to suffer death for us.

Answer. Wherefore he reigneth crowned in heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Wherefore he reigneth crowned in heaven.

Ninth Lesson.

A THIRD school will have it that this Zacharias, the son of Barachias, was that Zacharias of whom we read, in the story of the Kings,[4] that he was slain by Joash, king of Judah, between the temple and the altar. Against this it is to be remarked, that that Zacharias was not the son of Barachias, but of Jehoiada the priest; whence it is written, "Joash remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him." The question therefore ariseth, if this opinion be true, why, the name and manner of death both agreeing with this explanation, Zacharias is called the son, not of Jehoiada, but of Barachias. In Hebrew "Barachias" signifieth "the Blessed of the LORD," and "Jehoiada" "Righteousness." In the Gospel used by the Nazarenes, the name of Jehoiada is used instead of Barachias.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of August is commemorated the holy Confessor Dominic [of Guzman,] Founder of the Order of Friars Preachers, very famous for his holiness and teaching. He remained always a virgin, and through his wonderful gifts raised three dead men to life. By his preaching he crushed heresies, and grounded many in a religious and godly life. He fell asleep in peace, [in the year 1221,] upon the sixth day of this present month of August. But his feast is kept upon this day by command of Pope Paul IV.

On the same 4th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Thessalonica, [in the first century,] the blessed Aristarchus, the disciple and close companion of the holy Apostle Paul, concerning whom the same Apostle writeth unto the Colossians, (iv. 10,) "Aristarchus my fellow-prisoner saluteth you." He was by the same Apostle ordained Bishop of the Thessalonians, and after long contendings under Nero he was crowned by Christ, and fell asleep.

At Rome, upon the Latin Way, [in the year 275,] the blessed martyr Tertullinus. He was a Priest who, under the Emperor Valerian, was horridly beaten with clubs, had his sides burnt and his mouth crushed, was stretched upon a rack and had his muscles cut, and then sentence was given to behead him, and so he finished his testimony.

At Constantinople, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Eleutherius, of the Senatorial Order, who was slain with the sword for Christ's sake, in the persecution under Maximian.

In Persia, [in the year 346,] the holy martyrs Ia and her Companions, who were diversly afflicted and underwent martyrdom along with nine thousand Christian prisoners under King Sapor.

At Cologne, the holy martyr Protasius.

At Verona, the holy Confessor Agabius, Bishop of that see.

At Tours, holy Euphronius, [Arch-] Bishop of that see.

At Rome, holy Perpetua, who was baptized by the blessed Apostle Peter. She turned her son Naserius and her husband Africanus to believe in Christ, and buried a great number of bodies of the holy martyrs, and passed away to be with the Lord, full of good works.

Chapter at the end. (Acts vii. 59.)

AND he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, saying: Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep in the Lord.

AUGUST 4.

St Dominick, Confessor.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast been pleased to shed throughout Thy Church the light of the worthy deeds and healthful teaching of Thy blessed Confessor Dominick, grant unto the same, with the help of his prayers, that she may never be either helpless in things temporal, or barren in things spiritual. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then is made the following Commemoration of the preceding.

---

[1] Acts vii. 58, 59. [2] Acts vii. 55. [3] Acts viii. 2.

Antiphon. Devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

Prayer as during the Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclesiasticus xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

DOMINICK was a Spaniard, a son of the noble family of Guzman. He was born at Calaruega, [in Old Castile,] in the year of our Lord 1170, and was sent to be taught worldly and sacred learning at Palencia. He attained great success in his studies, and became, first, a Regular Canon of the Cathedral Church of Osma, and afterwards Founder of the Order of Friars Preachers. While his mother was great with child, she dreamt that what was in her womb was a little whelp dog with a lighted torch in his mouth, and that when she was delivered of him, he set all the world on fire. By this dream was figured that burning and shining light of holiness of life and power of doctrine, whereby he should enkindle godliness throughout whole nations. The end proved the truth of the image, for this is in good sooth what his work was, a work which he hath continued to do through the Brethren of his Order.

Fifth Lesson.

HIS wisdom and bravery were most chiefly shown in confounding the [Albigensian] heretics, who were fain, with their pestilential falsehoods, to corrupt the people of the county of Toulouse. In this business he spent seven years. Afterwards he came to Rome to the IVth Lateran Council, along with the Bishop of Toulouse, that the Order which he had founded might be confirmed by Innocent III. While the matter was under consideration, Dominick, by the advice of the Pope, went home, that he might put his Rule into shape. He returned again to Rome [in 1216,] and obtained from Honorius III., the immediate successor of Innocent, the confirmation of the Order of Preachers. At Rome Dominick founded two Convents, one for men, and one for women. He raised three dead men to life, and worked many other miracles, wherethrough the Order of Preachers became exceedingly spread abroad.

Sixth Lesson.

BY his work convents were already during his life-time established in all countries, and almost countless persons embraced the life of prayer and godliness. In the year of Christ 1221 he fell sick of a fever at Bologna. When he understood that he was about to die, he called together his brethren and disciples, and exhorted them to innocence and uprightness. Lastly, he left to them as his legacy, love, lowliness, and poverty, and as the brethren were all praying, and the words were being said, "Come ye to help him, ye Saints of God! run ye to meet him, ye Angels—" he fell asleep in the Lord. It was the 6th day of August. Pope Gregory IX. afterwards placed his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory the Great, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of August is kept the dedication of the Church of St Mary in the Snow upon the Esquiline Hill at Rome, [in the year 366.]

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 304,] twenty-three holy martyrs, who, in the persecution under Diocletian, were beheaded on the old Salarian Way, and buried there at Cucumber Hill.

At Augsburg, [in the year 304,] the holy martyr Afra. She was turned from paganism to Christ by the teaching of the holy Bishop Narcissus, and baptized with all her house, and for confessing Christ she was burnt.

At Ascoli, in Picenum, [in the Marches of Ancona,] the holy Bishop and martyr Emygdius, who was ordained Bishop [of that see] by holy Pope Marcellus and sent thither to preach the Gospel, and he received a crown of martyrdom for confessing Christ, under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Antioch, [in the year 362,] the holy soldier Eusignius. He was in the hundred and tenth year of his age when he cast in the teeth of the Emperor Julian the Apostate the faith of Constantine the Great, under whom he had served, and rebuked Julian himself for a renegade from the religion of his Fathers, whereupon Julian commanded him to be beheaded.

Also, in Egypt, the holy martyrs Cantidius, Cantidian, and Sobel.

At Châlons[-sur-Marne,] in Gaul, holy Memmius, a Roman citizen, whom the holy apostle Peter consecrated first Bishop of that city, and who led unto Gospel truth the people committed unto him.[1]

At Autun, [in the year 355,] blessed Cassian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Teano, [in Italy, about the year 346,] holy Paris, Bishop [of that see.]

In England, [in the year 642,] the holy Oswald, King of the Northumbrians, whose acts are written by the venerable Priest Bede, [and whose feast we keep upon the 9th day of the present month of August.]

Upon the same day, [about the year 374,] holy Nonna, the mother of blessed Gregory of Nazianzus.

Vespers are of the following.

AUGUST 5.

Our Lady of the Snows.

Dedication of the Church of St Mary in the Snow.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin Mary, (p. 633,) except the following.

At First Vespers, a Commemoration is made of St Dominick.

---

[1] By some stated to have died in 126, by others in 290.

MATTINS.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN the time of Pope Liberius, there lived at Rome a certain nobleman named John and a noble lady his wife, who had no children to whom to leave their substance. Then they vowed that they would make the most holy Virgin Mother of God their heiress, and earnestly besought her in some way to make known to them upon what godly work she would that the money should be spent. The blessed Virgin Mary graciously listened to their prayers and heart-felt earnestness, and by a miracle assured them of her will.

Fifth Lesson.

ON the 5th day of August, which is that time when the heat of summer waxeth greatest in Rome, a part of the Esquiline Hill was covered by night with snow. And on this same night the mother of God appeared in a dream to John and his wife separately, and told them that on that spot, which in the morning they should see clad with snow, they should build a Church, to be dedicated in the name of the Virgin Mary, for that this was the way in which she chose that they should make her their heiress. John went and told it to Pope Liberius, who declared that he also had been visited by a like dream.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE he came in a solemn procession of Priests and people to the snow-clad hill, and traced upon that spot the plan of a Church which was built with the money of John and his wife. It was afterwards rebuilt by Sixtus III. At the beginning it was called by divers names, sometimes the Liberian Basilica, sometimes the Church of St Mary-at-the-Manger.[1] Howbeit, since there are in Rome many Churches called after the Holy Virgin Mary, and this Church doth excel them all, both in honour, and because of the strange sign wherewith it was dedicated, it hath come to be called the Church of St Mary, the Greater.[2] The memory of the dedication thereof is kept every year by a Feast-day that taketh name from the wonderful fall of snow which on this day took place.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of August we keep the feast of the Transfiguration of Our Lord Jesus Christ upon Mount Tabor [in the year of our Lord 32.]

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Rome, in the cemetery of Callistus, upon the Appian Way, [in the year 258,] the blessed Pope and martyr Xystus II., who received the crown of martyrdom by the sword in the persecution under Valerian. Likewise the holy martyrs Felicissimus and Agapitus, deacons of the aforesaid blessed Xystus, and his sub-deacons Januarius, Magnus, Vincent, and Stephen, who were all beheaded along with him, and were buried in the cemetery of Pretextatus. Along with them suffered also the blessed Quartus, as is written by holy Cyprian.

At Burgos, in Spain, in the Monastery of St Peter de Cardeña, of the Order of St Benedict, [in the year 872,] the Abbat Stephen and two hundred monks, who were massacred by the Saracens for their faith in Jesus Christ, and by the Christians then buried inside their cloister.

At Alcala, in Spain, [in the year 304], the holy brethren Justus and Pastor, both martyrs. They were boys learning at school when they threw away their slates, and ran of their own wish to be martyred. The President Dacian ordered them to be taken and cudgelled, and when they continued to call on each other to stand firm he had them led outside the city, where the executioner cut their throats.

At Rome, [in the year 523,] the holy Confessor Pope Hormisdas.

At Diarbekr, [in Mesopotamia, about the year 502,] the holy hermit James, famous for miracles.

Vespers are of the following.

AUGUST 6.

Transfiguration of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Fifth Psalm.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[3]

O YE who seek the Lord,
Lift up your eyes on high!
For there He doth the sign afford
Of His bright majesty.

We see a dazzling sight
That shall outlive all time,—
Older than depth or starry height—
Limitless and sublime.

'Tis He for Israël's fold
And heathen tribes decreed—
The King to Abraham pledged of old—
And his unfailing seed.

Prophets foretold His Birth,
And witnessed when He came;
The Father speaks to all the earth,
To hear and own His Name.

To JESUS, Who displays
To babes His beaming Face,
Be, with the Father, endless praise,
And with the Spirit of grace. Amen.

Verse. Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord.

Answer. Therefore the Lord hath clothed Thee with majesty.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [4] Christ JESUS, being the Brightness of the Father's glory, and the express Image of His Person, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when He was about purging our sins, was pleased, as on this day, to manifest forth His glory upon an high mountain.

A Commemoration is made of the Blessed Virgin Mary.[5]

---

[1] A small piece of wood, brought by St Helen from the cave at Bethlehem, and supposed to have been part of the stable-fittings at the time of the Birth of our Lord, is kept there.

[2] In Italian, "Santa Maria Maggiore."

[3] Translation by Dr Newman.

[4] Heb. i. 3.

[5] Notice that these Commemorations are omitted where the Transfiguration is a double of the First Class.

Antiphon. All generations shall call me blessed, for God hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden.

Verse. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be—
Answer. Give me strength against thine enemies.

Prayer from her Common Commemoration, (p. 102.)

Then of the Holy Martyrs Xystus, Felicissimus, and Agapitus. Prayer, "O God, by Whose mercy, &c.," (p. 608.)

The last verse of the Hymn at Compline is said thus:

To JESUS, Who in love displays
To little ones His face,
And to the Father endless praise,
And to the Spirit of grace.

And the same is done throughout the Office of the Transfiguration, (and its Octave, if it have one)—viz. the last verse of every Hymn, capable of it, is altered in honour of that event.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Most High King, the King of glory, even Christ, * Him let us worship.

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. Even while He was made a little lower than the angels, * He was crowned with glory and honour, and made to have dominion over the works of God's hands.

Ps. viii. O LORD our Ruler! &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord discovereth the thickets,[1] * and in His temple every whit of it uttereth His glory.

Ps. xxviii. Give unto the LORD, &c., (p. 42.)

Third Antiphon. Thou art fairer than the children of men; * grace is poured into thy lips.

Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Verse. Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord.
Answer. Therefore the Lord hath clothed thee with majesty.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Peter (i. 10.)

WHEREFORE, the rather, brethren, give diligence by good works to make your calling and election sure: for while ye do these things, ye shall never sin. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour JESUS Christ. Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth. But I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up, by putting you in remembrance: knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord JESUS Christ hath showed me.

First Responsory.

[2] Arise, shine, O Jerusalem, for thy light is come, and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee.
Verse. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.
Answer. And the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee.

Second Lesson.

MOREOVER, I will endeavour that ye may be able also after my decease, to have these things always in remembrance. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord JESUS Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His Majesty. For He received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory: This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased, hear ye Him.

Second Responsory.

[3] The Holy Ghost was manifested in a bright cloud, and the voice of the Father was heard: This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him.
Verse. There was a cloud that overshadowed them, and the voice of the Father came out thereof in thunder:
Answer. This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him.

Third Lesson.

AND this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with Him in the holy mount. We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts. Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation; for the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

Third Responsory.

[4] Behold what manner of love God the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called, and should be, the sons of God.
Verse. We know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.
Answer. That we should be called, and should be, the Sons of God.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. That we should be called, and should be, the sons of God.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When Thou didst make Thy light to shine forth right wondrously *, from the everlasting hills, all they that were foolish of heart were troubled.

---

[1] Mount Tabor in Galilee, which an ancient, but somewhat difficult tradition assigns as the scene of the Transfiguration, is very well wooded.

[2] Isa. lx. 1-3; Apoc. xxi. 24.

[3] Matth. xvii. 5; Mark ix. 7.

[4] 1 John iii. 1, 2.

Ps. lxxv. In Judah is God known, &c., (p. 73.)

Second Antiphon. A day in Thy courts * is better than a thousand.

Ps. lxxxiii. How lovely, &c., (p. 81.)

Third Antiphon. Glorious things are spoken * of thee, O city of God!

Ps. lxxxvi. Her foundation, &c., (p. 82.)

Verse. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord—
Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (On the Transfiguration.)

THE Lord taketh chosen witnesses, and in their presence, revealeth His glory. That form of body which He had in common with other men, He so transfigured with light, that His Face did shine as the sun, and His raiment became exceeding white as snow. Of this metamorphosis the chief work was to remove from the hearts of the disciples the stumbling at the Cross. Before their eyes was unveiled the splendour of His hidden majesty, that the lowliness of His freely-chosen suffering might not confound their faith. But none the less was there here laid by the Providence of God a solid foundation for the hope of the Holy Church, whereby the whole body of Christ should know with what a change it is yet to be honoured. The members of that body whose Head hath already been transfigured in light may promise themselves a share in His glory.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] They were abundantly satisfied with the fatness of Thy house, and Thou madest them drink of the river of Thy pleasures.
Verse. For with Thee is the fountain of life, and in Thy light shall we see light.
Answer. And Thou madest them drink of the river of Thy pleasures.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR the strengthening the Apostles and bringing them forward into all knowledge, "there appeared unto them Moses and Elias"—that is, the Law and the Prophets—"talking with Him." Before five witnesses did His glorification take place, as though to fulfil that which is written: "At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established." (Deut. xix. 15.) What can be more certain, what can be better attested than this matter, which is proclaimed by the trumpets of both the Old and the New Testaments, and concerning which the witness of ancient testimony uniteth with the teaching of the Gospel? The pages of either Covenant strengthen one another, and the brightness of open glory maketh manifest and distinct Him Whom the former prophecies had promised under the veil of mysteries.

Fifth Responsory.

Master, it is good for us to be here. Let us make here three tabernacles, one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.
Verse. [2] For he wist not what to say.
Answer. Let us make here three tabernacles, one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

Sixth Lesson.

THE unveiling of such mysteries roused the mind of the Apostle Peter to an outburst of longing for the things eternal, which despised and disdained the things worldly and earthly; overflowing with gladness at the vision, he yearned to dwell with JESUS there, where the revelation of His glory had rejoiced him. And so he said: "Master, it is good for us to be here: if Thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles, one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." To this proposal the Lord answered nothing, this signifying, that what Peter wished was not wrong, but out of place, since the world could not be saved but by the death of Christ. And the Lord's example was to call the faith of believers to this, that albeit we are behoven to have no doubts concerning the promise of eternal blessedness, yet we are to understand that, amid the trials of this life, we are to seek for endurance before glory.

Sixth Responsory.

[3] If the ministration of death, written and engraven on stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israël could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance—which is done away—how shall not the ministration of the Spirit, which abideth, be rather glorious?
Verse. For Christ was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.
Answer. How shall not the ministration of the Spirit, which abideth, be rather glorious?
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. How shall not the ministration of the Spirit, which abideth, be rather glorious?

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in Thy Name. * Thou hast a mighty arm.

Ps. lxxxviii. I will sing of the mercies, &c., (p. 83.)

Second Antiphon. Light is sprung up for the righteous, * and gladness for the upright in heart.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. He was clothed with honour and majesty, * covering Himself with light as with a garment.

Ps. ciii. Bless the LORD, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. His glory is great in Thy salvation.
Answer. Honour and great majesty shalt Thou lay upon him.

[1] Ps. xxxv. 9, 10.

[2] Mark ix. 5.

[3] 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8; Heb. iii. 3.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvii. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS took Peter, and James, and John his brother, and brought them up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (57*th on Matthew.*)

Since the Lord had spoken much concerning dangers, much concerning His Own sufferings, much concerning death, and the killing of His disciples, and had laid upon them many hard and grievous things, and since all these were in this present life, and already hanging over them, whereas the good things were matter for hope and waiting; as, for example, that whosoever should lose his life for His sake should find it, for that the Son of Man should come in the glory of His Father, and reward every man according to his works. (Matth. xvi. 25, 27.) Therefore, to assure them by their own eyes, and show them what the glory is wherein He will come, He manifested and unveiled it to them, as far as in this life they were able to grasp it, lest they—and especially Peter—should grieve over their own deaths, or the death of their Lord.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] God hath called us with an holy calling, according to His own grace, which is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour JESUS Christ.

Verse. Who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light.

Answer. By the appearing of our Saviour JESUS Christ.

Eighth Lesson.

BEHOLD what He doth, when He treateth of heaven[2] and hell. Where He saith: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it." And again: "He shall reward every man according to his works"—in these words He pointeth at heaven and hell. But although He speaketh concerning both, He giveth a glimpse of heaven only and not of hell. To see hell would have profited the brutish and stupid, but His disciples were upright and clear-sighted, and therefore for them it was enough to be strengthened by the better things. This was what suited Him the best. Yet He left not the other altogether undone. Sometimes He set the horrors of hell, as it were, before the eyes, as for instance in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, and that of him who was fain to wring the hundred pence from his fellow-servant.

Eighth Responsory.

[3] God, Who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the Face of JESUS Christ.

Verse. Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness; he is gracious and full of compassion, and righteous.

Answer. To give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of JESUS Christ.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. To give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of JESUS Christ.

Ninth Lesson. (For certain Holy Martyrs.)

POPE Xystus II. was an Athenian, who, from a philosopher, became a disciple of Christ. In the persecution under Valerian he was accused of openly preaching Christ, and was seized and haled to the temple of Mars, where he was given the choice of death or offering sacrifice to the idol. He firmly refused to commit that wickedness, and as he was being led away to seal his testimony, holy Lawrence ran up to him and in his grief said to him: "Father, whither goest thou without thy son? Holy Priest, dost thou fare hence without a Deacon?" Xystus answered him: "I am not leaving thee, my son; there awaiteth thee for Christ's truth a sterner wrestling than mine; yet three days, and thou shalt follow me, the Deacon behind the Priest; and in the meanwhile, if thou hast anything in the treasury, give it to the poor." Xystus was accordingly slain upon that day, and with him the Deacons Felicissimus and Agapitus, and the Subdeacons Januarius, Magnus, Vincent, and Stephen. He was buried in the cemetery of Callistus, and they in the cemetery of Prætextatus upon the 6th day of August, [in the year of our Lord 258.] He sat [in the throne of Peter] eleven months and twelve days. During that time he held one ordination in the month of December, wherein he made four Priests, seven Deacons, and two Bishops.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. JESUS took Peter, * and James, and John his brother, and brought them up into an high mountain apart; and was transfigured before them.

Second Antiphon. His Face did shine as the sun, * and His raiment exceeding white as snow. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias, * talking with JESUS.

Fourth Antiphon. Then answered Peter, * and said unto JESUS: Lord, it is good for us to be here.

Fifth Antiphon. While he yet spake, * behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them.

Chapter. (Phil. iii. 21.)

WE look for the Saviour, the Lord JESUS Christ; Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious Body.

Hymn.[4]

LIGHT of the anxious heart,
JESU, Thou dost appear,
To bid the gloom of guilt depart,
And shed Thy sweetness here.

Joyous is he, with whom,
God's Word, Thou dost abide—
Sweet Light of our eternal home,
To fleshly sense denied.

Verse. [1] A crown of gold upon his head.

Answer. Wherein was engraved Holiness, glory, and honour.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. And, behold, a voice out of the cloud, * which said: This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, in the glorious Transfiguration of Thine Only-Begotten Son didst attest the mysteries of the Faith by the witness of the Fathers, and didst wonderfully signify by a voice out of a bright cloud, the adoption of sons, mercifully grant unto us to be made co-heirs with the very King of glory, and bestow upon us a partaking of His glory. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In the Short Responsory, instead of "Thou That sittest, &c.," is said:

Verse. Thou That didst reveal Thyself this day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Naples, in Campania, [in the year 1547,] the holy Confessor Gaëtan of Tiené, Founder of the Clerks Regular, who with wonderful confidence in God enjoined upon them the first way of living of the Apostles. He was famous for miracles, and Clement X. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

At Arezzo, in Tuscany, [in the year 362,] the holy martyr Donatus, Bishop [of that see.] Blessed Pope Gregory writeth that among other works of power which he wrought he mended by his prayers a chalice which had been broken by the heathen. He was arrested by the Augustal Quadratian in the persecution under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and for as much as he refused to sacrifice to idols he was beheaded, and so finished his testimony. There suffered also along with him the blessed monk Hilarinus, whose feast is kept upon the 16th day of July, being the day whereon his body was brought to Ostia.

At Rome, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Peter and Julian, and eighteen others.

At Milan, [in the second century,] the holy soldier Faustus, who under the Emperor Aurelius Commodus, after many contendings, gained the crown of martyrdom.

At Como, [in the district of Milan,] the holy martyrs Carpophorus, Exanthus, Cassius, Severinus, Secundus, and Licinius, who were beheaded, [about the year 303,] for confessing Christ.

At Nisibis, in Mesopotamia, [in the year 363,] holy Dometius, a Persian monk, who was stoned to death with two of his disciples, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate.

At Rouen, [about the year 407,] holy Vitricius, Bishop [of that see.] He was a soldier who threw away his belt for Christ's sake under the same Emperor Julian. He was put to many torments by his Tribune, and condemned to death, but the executioner who had been sent to behead him was struck blind, and he got his bonds loosed, and escaped. He afterwards became a Bishop, and by his preaching of the word brought the unconquered tribes of the Morini and Nervii to believe in Christ, and at the last fell asleep in peace.

At Châlons[-sur-Marne,] in Gaul, [in the year 136,] holy Donatian, Bishop [of Châlons.]

At Messina, in Sicily, [in the year 1306,] the holy Confessor Albert, of the Order of Carmelites, famous for miracles.

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. xxi. 10.)

HE carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me the holy city Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God. And the Lamb is the Light thereof.

TERCE.

The last verse of the Hymn is said thus:

JESU, to Thee Who in Thy grace
Grantest to babes to see Thy Face,
With Father and with Spirit, be given
Praise upon earth and praise in heaven.

Antiphon. His Face, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Answer. Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Answer. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Verse. Thou hast crowned him with glory and honour, O Lord—Alleluia.

Answer. And madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands. Alleluia.

SEXT.

The last verse of the Hymn is said thus:

JESU, to Thee, Whom children see,
And to the Father, praise be given,
And to the Spirit, One and Three,
By men on earth, by Saints in heaven.

A Commemoration is made of the following.

Antiphon. Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.

Verse. The Lord loved him, and adorned him—
Answer. He clothed him with a robe of honour.

Prayer from the next Lauds.

[1] Then of the Holy Martyr Donatus. Prayer also from the next Lauds.

Where a Ninth Lesson of the Transfiguration is wanted, the following is used.

CONSIDER with how great calmness Matthew giveth the names of the three most honoured disciples. This trait also John often showeth, where he doth most truly and carefully write the praises of Peter. In the fellowship of the Apostles jealousy and vanity had no place. The Apostles whom the Lord took up into the mountain apart were the three chiefest. Wherefore took He only those three? Because they were more excellent than the others. But wherefore did He do it, not at once, but "after six days?" (Matth. xvii. 1.) Lest either the other disciples or men in general should be moved; wherefore also He did not give beforehand the names of those whom He was going to take.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GAËTAN was born at Vicenza, [in the year 1480,] of the noble family of the lords of Tiené, and was forthwith dedicated by his mother to the Virgin Mother of God. From his childhood such wonderful innocence shone in him that all called him "the Saint." He took the degree of Doctor in Civil and Canon Law at Padua, and afterwards went to Rome, where Julius II. gave him a place among the Prelates. Having taken Priest's Orders, he became so full of the fire of the love of God, that he left the Court, that he might be free to work entirely for God. He founded hospitals at his own expense, and nursed the sick, even such as were suffering from the plague, with his own hands. He laboured with such constant earnestness for the salvation of his neighbours that he got the name of the "Hunter of souls."

Fifth Lesson.

FROM a desire to restore the corrupted discipline of the clergy to the mould of the Apostolic life, he founded, [in 1524,] a Congregation of Clerks Regular, who should give up all care of earthly things, neither keeping any income, nor begging the needful things of life from the faithful, but living only on such alms as might be given them unasked. For this end, and with the approval of Clement VII., Gaëtan himself, together with John Peter Carafa, Archbishop of Chieti, (afterwards Pope Paul IV.), and two other men of eminent godliness, took solemn vows at the High Altar of St Peter's Church on the Vatican. When the city of Rome was sacked by the troops [of the Constable de Bourbon, in 1527,] Gaëtan was most cruelly ill-used to make him reveal his wealth, which had long before been laid up for him in heaven by the hands of the poor, and he endured with unconquered patience stripes, torture, and imprisonment. He held on bravely in the way of life he had taken up, trusting altogether to the Providence of God, Whose unfailing care of him was sometimes attested by miracles.

---

[1] If the Transfiguration be of the First Class, the Commemoration of St Donatus is omitted.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was a great advancer of care in the worship of God, of splendour in the house of God, of exactness in the holy ceremonies, and of the often receiving of the most holy Eucharist. The hideous forms and dark convolutions of heresy he more than once unmasked and abolished. He would remain in prayer with abundance of tears as much as eight hours at a time. He was often thrown into trances, and was celebrated for the gift of prophecy. One Christmas night at Rome, when he was praying before the Lord's manger, he was deemed worthy that the Mother of God should lay the Child JESUS in his arms. He sometimes spent the whole night in whipping himself, nor could he ever be persuaded to soften the hardness of his life, but witnessed that he was fain to die in sackcloth and ashes. In the end he fell ill with grief at the offence against God, which the people of Naples committed by rebelling [against the establishment of the Inquisition.] Refreshed by a vision from heaven, he departed thither [on the 7th day of August, 1547.] His body lieth at Naples in the Church of St Paul, where it is held in great reverence. Pope Clement X., finding him to have been illustrious for miracles, both during his life and after his death, enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. vi. 24, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 565.) The Seventh and Eighth Lessons there given are read here together as the Seventh, the Ninth of the Sunday as the Eighth.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Donatus, Bishop of Arezzo.)

DONATUS was the child of a father and mother who had both been slain for JESUS Christ's sake. He fled with the monk Hilarinus to Arezzo in Tuscany, of which city he afterwards became Bishop. There the Præfect Quadratian, during the persecution under Julian, commanded both Hilarinus and Donatus to worship idols, and when they both refused to commit such abominable iniquity, Hilarinus was beaten with clubs before the eyes of Quadratian, until he gave up the ghost. Donatus also was savagely tortured, and slain with the sword.[1] The Christians buried their bodies honourably hard by the city.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? For your Father knoweth what things ye have need of.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst give grace unto Thy blessed Confessor Gaëtan to order his life on the pattern of Thine Apostles, grant unto us through his prayers, and after his ensample ever to put all our trust in Thee, and to seek only heavenly things. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Donatus.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who art Thyself the glory of Thy Priests, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, to feel the help of Thine holy Martyr and Bishop Donatus, whose Feast we are keeping. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 8th day of August are commemorated at Rome the holy martyrs Cyriacus the Deacon, Largus, Smaragdus, and twenty others, who suffered upon the 16th day of March in the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian, and whose bodies, which had been buried by John the Priest beside the Salarian Way, were upon this day moved by the holy Pope Marcellus to Lucina's farm upon the Ostian Way, whence they have since been brought into the city and buried in the deaconry of St Mary in Broad Street.

Upon the 8th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Anazarbus, in Cilicia, [in the year 290,] holy Marinus the Elder. Under the Emperor Diocletian and the President Lysias he was flogged, tied to a beam, and mangled, and at last thrown to wild beasts. Likewise, the holy martyrs Eleutherius and Leonides, who finished their martyrdom, [in the third century,] by fire.

In Persia, under King Sapor, the holy martyr Hormisdas.

At Cyzicus, upon the Hellespont, [in the year 820,] holy Æmilianus, Bishop [of that see,] who suffered much at the hands of the Emperor Leo on account of the worship of the holy images, and at last died in exile.

In Crete, [in the year 350,] holy Myron, Bishop [of that see,] famous for miracles.

At Vienne, in Gaul, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Severus, a Priest, who undertook a wearisome pilgrimage from India in order to preach the Gospel, and when he came to the aforesaid city, by his word and miracles brought a vast multitude of heathen to believe in Christ.

At Second Vespers, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as at the Commemoration last evening, and a Commemoration of the following. Prayer from their Lauds.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CYRIACUS the Deacon was long kept in prison with Sisinius, Largus, and Smaragdus, and wrought many wonderful works. Among other things he by his prayers freed from a devil Arthemia, a daughter of Diocletian, and, being sent to Sapor, King of the Persians, also delivered his daughter Jobia from a foul spirit. He baptized the king, her father, and four hundred and thirty others, and afterwards returned to Rome. He was arrested by command of the Emperor Maximian, and dragged in chains before his chariot. Then after four days he was brought forth from prison, had boiling pitch poured upon him, was stretched on a block, [and belaboured with a cudgel,] and at last was slain with the axe, along with Largus, Smaragdus, and twenty others, at the gardens of Sallust, on the Salarian Way. On this Way were their bodies buried by John the Priest, on the 16th day of March, [in the year of our Lord 303,] but afterwards, on the 8th of August, Pope Marcellus and the noble lady Lucina took them and wrapped them in linen, and embalmed them with costly ointments, and carried them to the farm belonging to the said lady Lucina, at the seventh milestone from Rome on the road to Ostia.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons from the Sermon of St John Chrysostom, (p. 609,) the last being omitted, or the three read as two.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (29*th on the Gospels.*)

By the words "every creature" we may understand every tribe of the Gentiles. Of aforetime it had been said, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles," (Matth. x. 5,) but now, "Preach the Gospel to every creature," that, since the Jews had proudly rejected the preaching of the Apostles, that might become our gain which was the seal of their condemnation. But when the Eternal Truth sendeth forth His disciples to preach, what doth He but scatter seed over the field of the world? He scattered abroad a few grains for seed, that He may afterward reap an abundant harvest in our faith.

Eighth Lesson.

THE great harvest of faithful souls throughout the whole world would never have sprung up, if the hand of the Lord had not first scattered those chosen grains of preachers over the reasonable soil of men's minds. Then is written, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved: but he that believeth not shall be damned." Now, perchance, thou sayest in thine heart: I believe, and therefore I shall be saved. True, if to thy faith thou dost add works. He only hath a living faith whose life doth not give the lie to his profession. It is of this that Paul speaketh, where he saith of certain vain believers, "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him." (Tit. i. 16.)

Ninth Lesson.

"AND these signs shall follow them that believe: In My name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues, they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

My brethren, these signs do not follow us. Do we, then, not believe? Nay. The truth is, these things were needful when the Church was young. That she might grow by the increase of the faithful, she needed to be nourished with miracles. So we, when we plant a young tree, continually water and tend it, till we see that it hath taken firm root in the earth: but when once it hath taken firm root, it can grow of itself. Hence Paul saith of tongues: "Tongues are for a sign not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." (1 Cor. xiv. 22.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who dost gladden us by the yearly Feast-day of Thine holy Martyrs Cyriacus, Largus, and Smaragdus, mercifully grant unto us who keep their birth-day, the strength to imitate their patience under suffering. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the holy martyr Lawrence.

Upon the same 9th day of August, we keep in England the feast of the holy Oswald, King of the Northumbrians, whose acts are written by the Venerable Priest Bede, and of whom mention is made upon the 5th day of this same month.

Upon the same 9th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 258,] the holy soldier Romanus, who was so wrought upon by the confession of the blessed Lawrence that he sought baptism at his hands, and was presently arraigned, beaten with clubs, and then beheaded.

In Tuscany, [in the year 261,] the holy martyrs Secundian, Marcellian, and Verian. In the time of the Emperor Decius the Consular Promotus caused them first to be hided, then hung upon the rack, scarified with hooks, and burnt in the sides, thereafter they were beheaded, and so gained the palm of victory through martyrdom.

At Verona, the holy martyrs Firmus and Rusticus, in the time of the Emperor Maximian.

In Africa, [in the third century,] many holy martyrs, who at the exhortation of holy Numidicus gained the palm of martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian by being cast into the fire. Numidicus himself was thrown upon the burning fire along with the others, and then covered with stones; but when his daughter dug him out there was still some life left in him, he was healed, and afterwards by his worthy life obtained from blessed Cyprian admission as a Priest to the Church at Carthage.

At Constantinople, [in the year 730,]

the holy martyrs Julian, Marcian, and eight others, who were long tortured, and then slain with the sword by command of the wicked Emperor Leo, on account of the image of the Saviour which they had set up in the Brazen Gate.

At Châlons[-sur-Marne], in Gaul, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Domitian, [third] Bishop [of that see.]

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

OSWALD was the son of Ethelfrid, King of the Northumbrians. After his father had been slain in battle by Redwald, King of the East Angles, he was carried into exile in Scotland, where he was taught the faith of Christ and baptized. When he returned to his own country he found Cadwalla, King of the Britons, pitifully wasting everything. This Cadwalla had already slain three kings of the English, and sought to destroy all that nation. Oswald gathered together a small army, and, placing his trust in God, bravely attacked the countless hosts of the enemy. Before he joined battle he set up the standard of the Cross of the Lord with his own hands, knelt down, and prayed God to help a righteous war for the saving of the fatherland. He exhorted all his soldiers to do likewise, and so did they, and all promised that if God granted them the victory they would believe in Him Who had been crucified. Thereupon they obtained an easy victory, and crushed the tyrant with all his legions. The place where the Cross was set up is called in the English language Heaven Field, and through pieces of the Cross in question miracles from heaven have oftentimes been wrought.

Fifth Lesson.

OSWALD being thus placed in possession of his kingdom was fain that all that nation should receive the grace of Christian belief. He sent forthwith into Scotland, praying them to send him a Bishop, by whose teaching and ministry the English people might receive the faith and sacraments of Christ. There was sent unto him blessed Aidan, unto whom the king granted at his own prayer the island of Lindisfarne to be the see of his Bishopric. After Aidan came many other Gospel preachers, especially from the island of Iona. By their preaching and the support given to them by the godliness and zeal of the king the kingdom of Christ was wonderfully spread in all the country between the Humber and the Forth, churches were built in divers places, schools set up for the teaching of children, and monasteries founded by the king's bounty, so that the English might learn not only the greater studies but also the institutes of regular discipline. The king himself listened to the preaching of Aidan, and humbly and cheerfully granted all his wishes, and by his own illustrious example did much to set forward the cause of the Church throughout all his dominions. Now Aidan could not speak English well, and when he was preaching the Gospel there could often be seen the lovely spectacle of the king himself interpreting the heavenly Word to his own officers and servants.

Sixth Lesson.

THUS did this most devout King Oswald show himself a loyal and ready subject of the eternal King of kings, and by Him he was glorified as regards his temporal dominion more than all that had been before him, so that nearly all the provinces of all Britain came under his sway, and nevertheless he was never tainted with pride, and was always lowly, kindly, and open-handed to Christ's poor and to strangers. When he had happily reigned for eight years he was encompassed in battle by heathen rebels, and when he saw that he was bound to perish he called for the divine mercy for himself and for the souls of them that were about to slay him, in the year of Christ 642, and of his own age the thirty-eighth, upon the 5th day of August, upon the which day mention is made of his memory in the Roman Martyrology. How precious was his death in the sight of the Lord became afterwards manifest by countless miracles obtained through his intercession.

THIRD NOCTURN.[2]

Lesson from Matth. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Eve of St Lawrence. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer of the Week-day, and the following,

---

[1] He was a soldier at Rome at the time of the martyrdom of St Lawrence. Seeing the joy and constancy with which that holy martyr suffered his torments, he was moved to embrace the faith, and addressing himself to St Lawrence, was instructed and baptized by him in prison. He was arraigned, condemned, and beheaded the day before the martyrdom of St Lawrence. (Alban Butler, viii. Aug. 9.)

[2] Notice that there is no Homily for the Eve of St Lawrence, because the Gospel and Homily of that Eve are the same as for the Feast of St Oswald.

Prayer.

GIVE ear, O Lord, to our supplications, and that the prayers of Thy blessed martyr Lawrence, for whose feast we are making ready, graciously pour upon us Thine everlasting mercy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then of St Romanus, from the First Vespers of the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) with the Prayer, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 599.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Tiburtine Way, [in the year 258,] the blessed Archdeacon Lawrence. In the persecution under the Emperor Valerian he suffered many torments, divers stripes, armed scourges, cudgels, and whips loaded with lead, and plates of heated metal, and at the last he was laid upon a bed of iron bars over a slow fire, and so finished his testimony. His body was buried in the cemetery of St Cyriaca in the Veran field by blessed Hippolytus and Justin the Priest.

Likewise at Rome, [in the third century,] one hundred and sixty-five holy soldiers, who suffered martyrdom under the Emperor Aurelian.

At Bergamo, in the persecution under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, the holy Virgin and martyr Asteria.

At Alexandria are commemorated the holy martyrs, who under the President Æmilian, in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, were long tortured with divers and terrible torments, and gained the crown of martyrdom by divers kinds of death.

At Carthage, the holy Virgins Bassa, Paula, and Agathonica, all martyrs.

At Rome, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Deus Dedit, who gave to the poor every Saturday whatever he had gained by working with his hands throughout the week.

In Spain, the apparition of the blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Ransom, Foundress of the Order for the Redemption of Captives, established in her name.

Vespers of the following.

AUGUST 10.

The Holy Martyr Lawrence.[1]

Double of the Second Class, with an Octave.

Whatever is not given here is from the Common Office for a Martyr, (p. 594.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Levite Lawrence wrought a good work, * in that with the sign of the Cross he gave sight to the blind, and dispersed among the needy the riches of the Church.

A Commemoration is made of St Oswald. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ's blessed Martyr Lawrence is crowned and triumphing in heaven. * O come, let us worship the Lord!

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Father, whither goest thou * without thy son? Holy Priest, dost thou fare hence without a Deacon?

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. Leave me not, holy father, * for I have spent already thy treasures, which thou gavest unto me.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. I leave thee not, my son, neither forsake thee; * there awaiteth thee for Christ's truth a sterner wrestling than mine.

Ps. iii. Lord, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Lessons from Ecclus. li. 1, (p. 646.)[2]

First Responsory.

The Levite Lawrence wrought a good work, in that with the sign of the Cross he gave sight to the blind, and dispersed among the needy the riches of the Church.

Verse. He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever.

Answer. He dispersed among the needy the riches of the Church.

Second Responsory.

[3] O my child, be not afraid, for I am with thee, saith the Lord. When thou passest through the fire, the flame shall not harm thee, neither shall the smell of fire pass upon thee.

Verse. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

Answer. When thou passest through the fire the flame shall not harm thee, neither shall the smell of fire pass upon thee.

Third Responsory.

They laid him upon the grating, and stretched out his limbs. Christ's Levite held in derision them that brought the live coals. O Lawrence, blessed witness for Christ! plead for us!

Verse. [4] The darkness is no darkness to me, but the night is all as clear as the morning, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Answer. O Lawrence, blessed witness for Christ! plead for us!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O Lawrence, blessed witness for Christ! plead for us!

---

[1] Appointed Archdeacon of the Roman Church by St Xystus II. on his accession to the Papacy in A.D. 257. Before his martyrdom on August 6, 258, Xystus charged him to distribute the property of the Roman Church among the poor, which he accordingly did. He was soon after arrested, and, after being scourged, was grilled alive on a sort of large gridiron over a slow fire, during the night between the 9th and 10th August. The Antiphons and Responsories of the Office are mostly taken from his own words to St Xystus or others.

[2] Lessons of First Nocturn of St Lawrence. Notice that the first sentence of the Third Lesson on p. 647, "Thou hast lifted up my dwelling on earth, and I prayed for deliverance from death," forms part of the Second Lesson in St Lawrence's Office. The Third Lesson therefore begins, "I called upon the Lord," &c.

[3] Jer. xv. 20, 21; Isa. xliii. 2; Dan. iii. 94.

[4] Cf. Ps. cxxxviii. 12; Prov. iv. 18.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The blessed Lawrence prayed * and said: "O Lord JESUS Christ, God of God, take pity upon me Thy servant."

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Second Antiphon. Romanus said * to Blessed Lawrence: "I see in front of thee a very well-favoured young man; make haste to baptize me."

Ps. v. Give ear to my words, &c., (p. 49.)

Third Antiphon. The blessed Lawrence said: The darkness is no darkness to me, * but the night is all as clear as morning, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (For St Lawrence's Birth-day.)

WHEN the fury of the heathen power was raging against Christ's choicest members, in aiming in especial at such as were of the Priestly Order, the wicked persecutor turned fiercely on the Levite Lawrence, who was remarkable, not only as a minister of the Sacraments, but also as distributor of the property of the Church, promising himself a double prey by the taking of this one man, namely, to make him betray the consecrated treasure, and apostatise from the true faith. The wretch was thus doubly fired by his greed for money and his hatred of the truth, his greed urging him to seize the gold, and his wickedness to rob a believer of Christ. He demanded of the upright keeper of the sacred treasury, to bring him the wealth of the Church, for which his rapacity longed. But the pure-minded Levite showed him where these riches were stored, by bringing before him a great multitude of holy poor, by the feeding and clothing of whom he had laid up all that he had, in such wise, that it could be lost no more, and was now all the safer, as the way of spending it had been the holier.

Fourth Responsory.

Father, whither goest thou without thy son? Holy Priest, dost thou fare hence without a Deacon? It hath never been thy use to offer sacrifice without a minister.

Verse. What therefore in me hath displeased thee, my Father? Hast thou tried me and found me unworthy to be called thy son? Make trial if I am indeed an useless servant, even I, whom thou didst choose, to commit unto me the administration of the Cup of the Blood of the Lord.

Answer. It hath never been thy use to offer sacrifice without a minister.

Fifth Lesson.

THE baffled thief chafed, and his hatred for the godliness which had appointed such an use of riches, flaming forth, he attempted the robbery of a dearer treasure from him in whose hands he had found no coin, even to take from him that possession wherein he had holier wealth. He commanded Lawrence to deny Christ, and made ready to assail the immovable firmness of the Levite's soul with appalling tortures, of which the failure of the first was followed by the application of others more fearful still. When his limbs had been mangled and cut by many stripes, his tormentor ordered them to be roasted over a fire. He was laid on an iron grating, the bars of which by the continual fire below, became themselves burning hot, so that by turning and rearranging his limbs upon them, his agony was kept keener, and his suffering made to last longer.

Fifth Responsory.

Leave me not, holy Father, for I have spent already thy treasures. I leave thee not, my son, neither forsake thee—but there awaiteth thee for Christ's truth a wrestling sterner than mine.

Verse. We, as old men, have an easier race to run; for thee in thy youth there is kept a more glorious victory over the enemy; yet three days, and thou shalt follow me, the Deacon behind the Priest.

Answer. I leave thee not, my son, neither forsake thee—but there awaiteth thee for Christ's truth a wrestling sterner than mine.

Sixth Lesson.

CRUEL savage! thou gainest nothing, and advancest nothing. That which can die passeth by degrees beyond the reach of thy tortures, and when Lawrence departeth to heaven, thou and thy fires are conquered. The love of Christ could not be overcome by the flames, and the glow that scorched the outward man was colder than that that burnt in the inner. Thou didst rage, O thou persecutor; thou didst rage against the Martyr, but by making keener his agony, thou hast but made nobler his palm. What did thine imagination fail to discover that could minister to the glory of him who conquered thee, since even the means of his execution have turned to the honour of his triumph? Wherefore, dearly beloved brethren, let us rejoice with spiritual joy, and make our boast in the Lord, Who is wonderful in His Saints, (Ps. lxvii. 36,) and hath given unto us, in them an help and an ensample; let us, I say, make our boast of the extraordinary happiness of the illustrious Lawrence's end, in that same Lord Who hath so glorified the name of His servant throughout the whole world, that from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof, wheresoever the constellation of the Levitical lights shineth, even as Jerusalem is made glorious by Stephen, so Rome is made famous by Lawrence.

Sixth Responsory.

The blessed Lawrence cried and said: My God do I worship, and Him only do I serve—and therefore I am not afraid of thy tortures.

Verse. The darkness is no darkness to me, but the night is all as clear as the morning, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Answer. And therefore I am not afraid of thy tortures.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And therefore I am not afraid of thy tortures.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. They laid him upon the grating, and stretched out his limbs. * Christ's Levite held in derision them that brought the live coals.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Second Antiphon. Thou hast tried me with fire, * and found no wickedness in me.

Ps. xvi. Hear my right, &c., (p. 7.)

Third Antiphon. When I was asked, I acknowledged Thee to be the Lord—* now that I am roasted, I give Thee thanks.

Ps. xx. The King shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract 51 on John.)

The Lord JESUS was Himself a corn of wheat that was to die and bring forth much fruit; to die by the unbelief of the Jews, and to bring forth much fruit in the faith of the Gentiles. He, exhorting men to follow His steps, saith: "He that loveth his life shall lose it." Now, these words may be understood in two ways. First: "he that loveth his life shall lose it," that is, "If thou love life, thou wilt lose it; if thou wilt live for ever in Christ, refuse not to die for Christ." Or secondly: "he that loveth his life shall lose it; love not then that which thou shalt lose; love not this present life, so that thou be thereby in jeopardy of losing life eternal."

Seventh Responsory.

Upon the bars I denied Thee not, O God. And when they put me to the fire, I acknowledged Thee to be the Lord, O JESUS Christ.

Verse. Lord, Thou hast proved mine heart and visited it by night.

Answer. And when they put me to the fire, I acknowledged Thee to be the Lord, O JESUS Christ.

Eighth Lesson.

THAT this second interpretation is the meaning of the Gospel, appeareth most probable from the words which follow: "And he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal." From which we may suppose the sense of the first words to be: "He that loveth his life in this world shall lose it unto life eternal." This is a great and marvellous saying, showing how a man may so love life as to lose life, and so hate life as to keep life. If thou love it too well, then dost thou hate it: if thou hate it with an holy hatred, then dost thou love it. Blessed are they that, lest they should so love it as to lose it, so hate it as to keep it.

Eighth Responsory.

O Hippolytus, if thou believest in the Lord JESUS Christ, I lay before thee treasure an hundredfold, and promise thee life everlasting.[1]

Verse. The blessed Lawrence said unto Hippolytus: If thou believest in the Lord JESUS Christ—

Answer. I lay before thee treasure an hundred-fold, and promise thee life everlasting.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. I lay before thee treasure an hundred-fold, and promise thee life everlasting.

Ninth Lesson.

BEWARE lest thou take these words—"He that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal"—as some do, for an approval of suicide. Some evil and perverse men, bloody and guilty murderers of themselves, do indeed throw themselves into the fire, drown themselves in water, and cast themselves down precipices, and so perish. This is not the teaching of Christ, Who, when the devil would have Him cast Himself down from an high place, answered: "Get thee behind Me, Satan. It is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." (Matth. iv. 5-7.) Who also said to Peter, signifying by what death he should glorify God: "When thou wast young thou girdedst thyself and walkedst whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not." (John xxi. 18.) From which it is evident that he that would follow Christ's footsteps, must be slain, not by himself, but by another.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Lawrence went in to be a martyr, * and acknowledged the name of our Lord JESUS Christ.

Second Antiphon. Lawrence wrought a good work, * in that with the sign of the Cross he gave sight to the blind.

Third Antiphon. O my God, my soul cleaveth fast after Thee, * for my flesh hath been burnt with fire for Thy sake.

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord hath sent His Angel, * and hath delivered me out of the midst of the fire, so that I am not scorched.[2]

Fifth Antiphon. The blessed Lawrence prayed * and said: I give Thee thanks, O Lord, that Thou hast made me worthy to enter within Thy gates.

Chapter. (2 Cor. ix. 6.)

BRETHREN—He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

Verse. He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor—

Answer. His righteousness endureth for ever.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Upon the bars I denied Thee not, O God. * And when they put me to the fire, I acknowledged Thee to be the Lord, O Christ. Thou has proved mine heart, and visited it by night; Thou hast tried me with fire, and found no wickedness in me.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY God, Who didst give unto Blessed Lawrence power to be more than conqueror in his fiery torment, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, the power to quench the flames of our sinful lusts. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

[1] Matth. xix. 29.

[2] Cf. Dan. iii. 49; vi. 22; Acts xii. 11.

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth, from Lauds, respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 286,] between the two Laurel trees, the holy martyr Tiburtius. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian the judge Fabian caused him to walk with bare feet upon burning coals, and as he confessed Christ all the more firmly, commanded him to be led to the third mile-stone outside the city, and there beheaded.

Likewise at Rome, [in the year 295], the holy Virgin Susanna, a damsel of noble birth, a niece to blessed Pope Caius. She was beheaded in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, and so gained the palm of martyrdom.

At Comana, in Pontus, [in the year 250,] holy Alexander, Bishop of that city, surnamed the charcoal-burner. He was a most learned philosopher, who learnt to be eminent for humility as a Christian. He was raised by holy Gregory the wonder-worker to fill that see, and was illustrious not only for his preaching but because he suffered martyrdom by fire.

Upon the same day, under the Emperor Maximinus, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Rufinus, Bishop of the Marsi, and his Companions.

At Evreux, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Taurinus, who was ordained [first] Bishop of that city by blessed Pope Clement. He spread the Christian faith by his preaching of the gospel, and after much labour for that end fell asleep in the Lord, famous for miracles.

At Cambray, in Gaul, [in the year 614,] the holy Confessor Gaugeric, [St Géry,] Bishop of that see.

In the province of Valeria, on the Danube, [about the year 540,] the holy Abbot Equitius, whose holiness is attested by the witness of blessed Pope Gregory.

At Todi, the holy Virgin Digna.

At Prime the Chapter at the end is (2 Cor. ix. 8.)

AND God is able to make all grace abound in you, that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work, as it is written: He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever.

At Terce the Chapter is from Lauds.

Chapter at Sext. (2 Cor. ix. 7.)

EVERY man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.

At None the Chapter is as at the end of Prime.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. The Levite Lawrence wrought a good work—

Answer. In that with the sign of the Cross he gave sight to the blind.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. When the blessed Lawrence was lying, stretched upon the bars, and burning, he said * to the iniquitous magistrate: The cooking is done enough now, turn the meat and eat; for the property of the Church, which thou seekest, hath been garnered up in heaven by the hands of the poor.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Tiburtius and Susanna.

Prayer.

LORD let the constant succour of Thine holy Martyrs Tiburtius and Susanna continually defend us, for Thou never failest to look in mercy upon all them unto whom Thou dost grant the aid of such helpers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

AUGUST 11.

Second Day within the Octave of St Lawrence.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (30*th on the Saints.*)

I BELIEVE that ye know the history of the sufferings of that most blessed Martyr, Lawrence, whose birth-day we are keeping this day, and I doubt not, my beloved brethren, but that ye may know what agonies he endured under the persecutors. So illustrious is the glory of his martyrdom, that the splendour thereof shineth throughout the whole world. And this light, which Lawrence maketh so clearly to shine throughout the world, is the light of the fire wherewith he himself was enkindled. By the flames which he endured, he hath made hot every Christian heart.

Fifth Lesson.

WHO is there but knoweth how that Lawrence chose rather to burn in earthly flames for a while, than to suffer the eternal fire of hell? The ensample, therefore, of blessed Lawrence provoketh us to lift up our testimony, kindleth our faith, and setteth our love all a-glow. If for us there are now no fires of persecution, the flame of faith is not therefore quenched. We give not our bodies to be burned for Christ's sake, but our hearts burn with His love. The persecutor stirreth up no fire around me, but a fire is stirred up in me by the longing for the presence of my Saviour.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT that the Saviour hath a fire of His own we read in the Gospel, where the Lord saith: "I am come to send fire on the earth, and what will I but that it be kindled?" (Luke xii. 49.) It was this fire which had been enkindled in the two disciples when they said: "Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?" (Luke xxiv. 32.) It was because this fire had been enkindled within him that the blessed Lawrence felt not the burning of the flames, and through eager yearning for the sight of Christ perceived not the cruelty of his persecutor.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (51*st Tract on John.*)

When matters are come to this pass that a simple choice must be made, either to break the law of God, or to bid farewell to this life; when a man must needs choose one or the other alternative, and the persecutor is threatening him with death, then let him choose rather to honour God and die, than to insult Him and live. This choice will be to hate his life in this world and to keep it unto life eternal. "If any man serve Me, let him follow Me." And what is it to follow Christ but to imitate Him? "Christ," saith the Apostle Peter, "suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow His steps." (I. ii. 21.)

Eighth Lesson.

BEHOLD what is said: "If any man serve Me, let him follow Me." Follow Him!—and with what result? at what wage? for what reward? "And," saith the Lord, "where I am, there shall also My servant be." He must be loved for Himself alone, if the wage of working in His service be to be with Him. Where would it be well where He was not? Or where could it be ill where He was? Hear even more clearly: "If any man serve Me, him will My Father honour." With what honour will He honour him, but to put him to be with His Own Son? That which is said first: "Where I am there shall also My servant be"—is explained by the next words: "Him will My Father honour." What higher honour can an adopted son receive, than to be where the Only-Begotten Son is, not in equality of Divine nature, but linked in eternal fellowship?

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Tiburtius and Susanna.)

TIBURTIUS was son to Chromatius, Præfect of the city of Rome, and was converted to Christianity by holy Sebastian. On this account he was brought before Fabian the judge, and spake boldly in his presence many things concerning belief in Christ. Then Fabian broke out in anger and caused the pavement to be spread with live coals. "Now, Tiburtius," said he, "thou must either sacrifice to our gods, or walk barefoot on these coals." Tiburtius armed himself with the sign of the Cross and walked boldly on the coals. "Learn from this," said he, "that there is no God but He whom the Christians worship; for the coals are to me like flowers." For this [in the year 286] he was credited with art magic, led forth without the city and smitten with the sword at the third milestone on the Lavican Road, where he was buried by the Christians.

On the same day, [about the year 295,] the noble maiden Susanna, having refused the offer of marriage of Galerius Maximianus, son to the Emperor Diocletian, because she had made a vow of her virginity to God, after divers torments wherewith her holy resolution was tried, was smitten with the sword, in her own house, by order of the Emperor, and passed to heaven to receive the double reward of virginity and martyrdom.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Tiburtius and Susanna. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Assisi, in Umbria, [in the year 1253], the holy Virgin Clare, the first of the women of the Order of Friars Minors [who are called Poor Clares.] Her life and miracles were famous, and Pope Alexander IV. enrolled her name among those of the holy virgins.

At Catania, in Sicily, in the persecution under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, the holy Deacon Euplius. He was long put to the torture for confessing the Lord, and at length beheaded, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

At Augsburg, [in the fourth century,] the holy Hilaria, the mother of the blessed martyr Afra. She was watching at her grave when she was taken by persecutors, and for Christ's faith's sake committed to the fire, along with her handmaidens Digna, Euprepia, and Eunomia.

In the same city, upon the same day, [in the fourth century,] there suffered also Quiriacus, Largis, Crescentian, Nimmia, Juliana, and twenty others.

In Syria, the holy martyrs Macarius and Julian.

At Nicomedia, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Count Anicete, his brother Photinus, and many others.

At Civita Castellana, in Tuscany, [under Galerius Maximianus,] the holy martyr Gracilian and the Virgin Felicissima. Because they confessed the faith, their mouths were first bruised with stones, and then they were smitten with the sword, and so received that palm of martyrdom which they had desired.

On the same day, [about the year 730,] the holy martyrs Porcarius, Abbat of the monastery of Lerins, and five hundred monks, crowned with martyrdom, slain by the barbarians for the Catholic faith's sake.

At Milan, the holy Confessor Eusebius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Brescia, holy Herculanus, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following.

AUGUST 12.

St Clare, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "Graciously hear us, &c.," (p. 645.)

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Lawrence, from his Second Vespers.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE noble maiden Clara was born at Assisi in Umbria, [in the year 1193.] In imitation of her holy fellow-citizen Francis, she distributed all her goods among the poor and needy. She fled from the din of the world, and [on the 18th day of March, 1212,] betook herself to the Church [of St Mary of the Angels] in the fields, where blessed Francis cut her hair. She stoutly resisted the efforts of her family to make her come back, and after a while Francis took her to the Church of St Damian, where the Lord gathered around her several companions. Thus she founded an holy Sisterhood, which, at the earnest entreaty of holy Francis, she governed. For two-and-forty years she directed her monastery with wonderful care and wisdom in the fear of the Lord and the full keeping of the Rule. Her own life was an instruction and teaching for the rest, whence others learnt to order their own.

Fifth Lesson.

THAT she might wax stronger in spirit by keeping the body down, she made her bed on the bare ground, sometimes with little twigs, and with hard wood for a pillow. Her dress was a gown and cloak of mean and rough cloth, and she sometimes wore hair-cloth next the skin. She bridled herself with such abstinence, that for a long time she took no bodily nourishment whatever upon three days in the week. Upon the remaining days she ate so little that the others wondered how she lived. As long as her health allowed it, she kept two Lents every year, during which she fasted upon bread and water. Moreover, she was instant in watching and prayer, wherein she chiefly spent both her days and nights. She suffered from constant illnesses, and when she could not herself rise to bodily work, she sat up with the help of the sisters, and with her back propped, worked with her hands, that she might not be idle even in the midst of her weaknesses. She was an eminent lover of poverty, from which no need ever made her swerve, and she persistently refused the possessions which were offered to the sisters by Gregory IX. for their support.

Sixth Lesson.

THE power of her holy life shone forth in many and divers miracles. She restored the use of speech to one of the sisters in her convent; for another she opened a deaf ear; she healed one sick with fever, one swollen with dropsy, one troubled with an hollow oozing ulcer, and others afflicted with divers ailments. She cured a brother of the Order of Friars Minors of raging madness. Once when all the oil in the house was spent, she took the vessel and washed it, and it was found filled with oil by the goodness of God. She multiplied half a loaf till it was enough to satisfy fifty sisters. When the Saracens [attached to the army of Frederick II.] attacked Assisi, [in the year 1239,] and were fain to break into Clare's monastery, she being sick, caused herself to be carried to the door, and likewise the vessel in which was held the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist, and there she prayed, saying: "O Lord, deliver not unto beasts the souls of them that praise Thee, but preserve Thine handmaids whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy Precious Blood." Whereupon a voice was heard which said: "I will always preserve you." Some of the Saracens took to flight, and others who had mounted the wall became blind, and fell down headlong. When Clare herself was at the point of death she beheld a white multitude of blessed Virgins, with one among them nobler and brighter than the rest. Having received the Holy Eucharist, and a Plenary Indulgence from Innocent IV., she resigned her soul to God upon the [1] 12th day of August [1253.] After her death she became illustrious for very many miracles, and Alexander IV. enrolled her name among those of the Holy Virgins.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

At Lauds there is a Commemoration of the Octave of St Lawrence from his Feast.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 258,] the blessed martyr Hippolytus. Such was the glory of his confession, under the Emperor Valerian, that after other torments his feet were tied to the necks of unbroken horses, and he was thus cruelly dragged through thistles and thorns until his whole body was torn and he gave up the ghost.

Upon the same day there suffered his nurse, the blessed Concordia, who was beaten to death with scourges loaded with lead, and passed away before him to be ever with the Lord, and nineteen others of his house, who were beheaded outside the Tiburtine Gate, and buried along with him in the Veran field.

At Imola, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Cassian. When he refused to worship idols the persecutors called for the boys to whom he had become hateful while teaching them, and gave them permission to kill him, and the weaker their hands were the greater were his sufferings through the delay of death.

At Todi, [in Umbria,] under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyr Cassian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Burgos, in Spain, the holy martyrs Centolla and Helen.

At Constantinople, [in the year 662,] the holy monk Maximus, famous for his teaching and zeal for Catholic truth. He vigorously contended against the Monothelites, and the heretical Emperor Constans cut away his hands and tongue, and banished him to the Crimea, where he gave up the ghost. At the same time the two Anastasii, his disciples, and many others, suffered divers torments and were sent into hard banishments.

---

[1] Alban Butler says the 11th. Perhaps he reckons from midnight and the Church from sunset.

In Germany, [in the year 747,] the holy Confessor Wigbert the Priest.

At Poitiers, [in the year 587,] the holy Queen Radegundis, whose life was famous for miracles and graces.

At Rome, [in the year 1621,] holy John Berchmans, a scholastic of the Society of Jesus, illustrious for the innocency of his life and his observance of the discipline of his Institute, to whom the supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. decreed the honours paid to the Saints in heaven.

At Vespers there is a Commemoration of the Octave of St Lawrence, and of the Holy Martyrs Hippolytus and Cassian. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617,) as in the Office of a Bishop and Confessor, but substituting the words "worshipful Feast of Thy Blessed Martyrs Hippolytus and Cassian."

AUGUST 13.

Fourth Day within the Octave of St Lawrence.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book on Offices written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. i. ch. 41.)

LET us not pass by the holy Lawrence, who began to weep when he saw Sixtus his Bishop being led to martyrdom, not because Sixtus was going to suffer, but because he himself was going to remain behind. And so he began to say to him such words as these: "Father, whither goest thou without thy son? Holy Priest, dost thou fare hence without a Deacon? It hath never been thy use to offer sacrifice without a minister. What therefore in me hath displeased thee, my Father? Hast thou tried me and found me unworthy to be called thy son? Make trial if I am indeed an useless servant, even I, whom thou didst choose to commit unto me the administration of the cup of the Blood of the Lord; unto me, to whom thou gavest part in the celebration of the Sacraments, dost thou refuse part with thee in thy blood-shedding?"

Fifth Lesson. (Bk. ii. 28.)

WHEN he was asked for the treasures of the Church, he answered that he would show them. The next day he brought the poor. When he was asked where were the treasures which he had promised, he pointed to the poor and said: "These are the treasures of the Church." And in good sooth, he was right. They are treasures indeed, in whom Christ is, and in whom the belief in Christ is. The Apostle saith: "We have this treasure in earthen vessels." (2 Cor. iv. 7.) What better treasures hath Christ than they in whom He hath said that He Himself is? For thus is it written: "I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took Me in," and then: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." (Matth. xxv. 35, 40.) These were the treasures which Lawrence showed, and he had the better of his persecutors, for these were treasures which they could not take away.

Sixth Lesson.

WAS it not said to blessed Lawrence: "Thou hadst no right to disperse the riches of the Church, or to sell the vessels which were used for the Sacraments?" If any man is to do thus, it is a thing which must be done with the most upright honesty and the most wise discretion. If any man do it for his own profit, it is surely a sin, but if it be done to help the poor or redeem slaves, it is a work of mercy. For no man can say, Why doth the needy live? or, Why ought we to ransom slaves? No man can challenge it, if it be done to build the temple of God. No man can rebuke it, if a rule be stretched to bury the remains of the faithful. No man can grieve that the departed find rest in Christian burial-places. For these three objects it is lawful to break, melt down, or sell the vessels of the Church, even after they have been in use.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Continuation of the Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (As on Aug. 11.)

He which suffereth martyrdom hath followed Christ, even to the point of having that love, greater than which no man hath, even that a man lay down his life for his friends. (John xv. 13.) Hereby also he hath laid down his life for Christ, Who hath said touching His members: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto these, ye have done it unto Me." (Matth. xxv. 35, 40.) Such a servant as this He was pleased to make and to call Himself, as He saith: "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." (Matth. xx. 28.) A servant of Christ, therefore, is so called for the same reason that Christ is called, a servant. And thus it cometh that if any man serve Christ, him will the Father honour, even with the great honour that, where His Son is, there shall also His servant be; and his joy will never wane.

Eighth Lesson.

WHEN, therefore, my brethren, ye hear how that the Lord saith:—"Where I am, there shall also My servant be,"—think not that He speaketh only of good Bishops and Clergymen. Do ye also do your little to serve Christ, by living well, by giving alms, and by proclaiming His Name and doctrine to such as ye can. Let every man who is father of a family know that this very name implieth that he should bear them a fatherly love. For Christ and for life eternal let him warn, teach, exhort, correct all that belong to him; let him shew kindness, let him use discipline upon them. And so shall he discharge in his own house the office of the Church and, as it were, of a Bishop, serving Christ, that where He is, there also he may be.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Hippolytus and Cassian.)

HIPPOLYTUS was one of those baptized by St Lawrence. He was arrested in his own house while he was taking the Holy Communion. He was brought before the Emperor Valerian, and, when he was asked by him touching his religious profession, he freely confessed that he was a Christian. Wherefore he was beaten with clubs, but when his faith was found only the bolder under the blows, he was tempted with promises of gifts and honours. Then when words were found only to be thrown away upon him, he was given over to the Præfect to be put to death. The Præfect went to the house of Hippolytus to take possession of his goods, and there found that all the household were Christians. He strove in vain to awe them into the denial of their faith, and then ordered Concordia, the nurse of Hippolytus, who was encouraging the rest, to be beaten to death with whips loaded with lead, and afterwards the others to be slain outside the gate that leadeth toward Tivoli. Hippolytus was tied to wild horses which dragged him through rough places full of briars and thistles, until with a mangled body he resigned his soul to God. Justin the Priest buried him along with the others.

On the same day, at Imola, the Martyr Cassian was put to a most cruel death. He was a schoolmaster, and was given up to his scholars, with his hands bound behind his back, to be stabbed and torn to death with steel pens. Owing to the weakness of the means, the suffering of his martyrdom was very grievous and long, and his palm all the more glorious.

At Lauds there is a Commemoration of SS. Hippolytus and Cassian. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Upon the same 14th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 357,] the holy Priest Eusebius. On account of his defence of the Catholic faith the Arian Emperor Constantius caused him to be imprisoned in a bed-chamber in his own house, where he lived for seven months, continuing instant in prayer, and then fell asleep. His body was taken by the Priests Gregory and Orosius and buried in the cemetery of Callistus, upon the Appian Way.

In Illyricum, under the Emperor Maximian and the President Aristides, the holy martyr Ursicius, who was beheaded for Christ's name's sake after many and divers torments.

In Africa, the holy martyr Demetrius.

At Apamea, in Syria, [in the year 389,] the holy martyr Marcellus, Bishop [of that see,] who was destroying a shrine of Jupiter when he was slain by the infuriated Gentiles.

At Todi, [in Umbria,] the holy martyr Callistus, Bishop [of that see.]

In the island of Ægina, in the Grecian Archipelago, [about the year 860,] the holy widow Athanasia, [Abbess of a monastery under the rule of St Basil,] famous for her monastic observance and her power of working miracles.

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Eusebius, Confessor. Prayer, "O God, Who, year by year, &c.," (p. 626.)

AUGUST 14.

Eve of the Assumption.

Fifth Day within the Octave of St Lawrence.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Maximus, Bishop [of Turin.] (1st on St Lawrence.)

IT is an holy thing, brethren, and a thing well-pleasing in the sight of God, to venerate with special earnestness the Birth-day of blessed Lawrence, in the radiance of whose flames the victorious Church of Christ doth, even unto this day, shine splendidly throughout all the world. He discharged the office of a Deacon at the seat of the most glorious of the Patriarchates, and by the purity of his stainless life, and the brilliant victory of his noble death, hath gained himself a place in the fellowship of the Apostles. It is not an exaggeration to claim something in common with the Apostles for one whose purity of soul gave him the ministry of a Levite, and whose fulness of faith hath crowned him with the dignity of Martyrdom.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the worshipful Sixtus, Bishop of the city of Rome, was overcoming through suffering the wickedness of a frantic world, and was now drawing very nigh to the kingdom of heaven, he saw Lawrence very sorrowful at the death of his ghostly father, and he is said to have addressed to him, in the spirit of prophecy, these words: — "Be not sorrowful, my son; yet three days, and thou shalt follow me." Hence it appeareth, dearly beloved brethren, that the blessed Lawrence was not sorrowful because of his Bishop's victory, but because he was not going to equal his Bishop in conquering the world. "Be not sorrowful, my son," said Sixtus, "yet three days, and thou shalt follow me,"—that is to say—"Be not sorrowful, as though thou wert left alone in the world; thy faith and thy life will not suffer thee to go without such a death as thou wouldest."

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN, therefore, Lawrence learned from the mouth of the Priest and Martyr that he also was to be taken away, he called together the multitudes of the needy, and dispersed among them with godly bounty the treasures of the Church. This was a deep and heavenly thought of this spiritual-minded man, that he might care for the poor, and also that, at the same time, by the multitude consuming what he had given them, the persecutor might not be able to find anything to plunder. Herein he followed that which is written:—"He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever." (Ps. cxi. 8.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (65*th on John.*)

Paul also, when disputing about the resurrection, hath used the same figure. What excuse then have they who believe not in the resurrection, when we see it take place every day in the case of seeds and plants, and even in [the procreative functions of] our own kind? For the seed from which generation taketh place must first itself corrupt. But at the same time, when God doth anything, there is no need to look for any reason. How made He us out of nothing? This I speak to Christians, who say that they believe the Scriptures.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT I will also bring forward another argument from human reason. Some live bad lives, and others live good lives. But many of the evil-doers attain to an happy old age, and the well-doers do not. How then is each to be rewarded according to his works? and when? They will certainly be rewarded, say [my opponents,] but still their bodies will not rise again. Do they not hear how Paul saith:—"This corruptible must put on incorruption"?—(1 Cor. xv. 53.) And this cannot be understood of the soul, which is incapable of corruption. And it is called the rising again from the dead. Now, it is the body which falleth.

Eighth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Eve of the Assumption.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 27.)

AT that time: As JESUS spake unto multitudes, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto Him: Blessed is the womb that bare Thee. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (10*th Tract on John.*)

Blessed is the Virgin Mary, because she did the will of the Father. (Matth. xii. 50.) This it was that the Lord praised in her, namely, that she did the will of His Father, not that her flesh had given birth to His Flesh. Be kind enough to give me your attention, my dear brethren. When the Lord amazed the crowd by working signs and wonders, and showing thereby What was veiled in His Flesh, a woman, in the astonishment of her mind, cried out:—"Blessed is the womb that bare Thee, and the paps which Thou hast sucked. But He said: Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the Word of God, and keep it." That is to say—"Even My Mother, whom ye call blessed, hath her blessedness from this, that she keepeth the word of God; not because it was in her that the Word of God was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, but because she heareth and keepeth that Word of God by Which she was made, (John i. 3,) and Which in her was made Flesh."

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Eve. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Week-day, and the following.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to choose for Thy dwelling the maidenly palace of Blessed Mary, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, under the shield of her protection, all joys in keeping her Festival.

Then of St Eusebius. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th day of August God took to Himself His most holy Mother the Virgin Mary, [in the year of Our Lord 57.]

Upon the same day were also born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Appian Way, [under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus,] the holy Acolyte Tharsicius. The pagans found him bearing the Sacraments of the Body of Christ, and began to ask him what he was carrying, but he deemed it unseemly to produce pearls before swine, and they maltreated him so with sticks and stones that he gave up the ghost. When they sacrilegiously searched his body, they did not find any trace of the Sacraments of Christ either in his hands or among his clothes, but the Christians took up the body of the martyr and buried it honourably in the cemetery of Callistus.

At Tagaste, in Africa, [in the year 431,] the holy [Confessor] Alypius, Bishop [of that see,] first the disciple of blessed Augustine, then his companion in his conversion, his comrade in his work as a shepherd of souls, his brave fellow-soldier in his contendings against the heretics, and now a sharer in his glory in heaven.

At Soissons, in Gaul, [in the year 1087,] the holy Confessor Arnulf, Bishop [of that see.]

At Alba, in Pannonia, in the year 1038,] holy Stephen, King of Hungary, whose feast is kept upon the 2nd day of September.

At Rome, [in the year 1568,] the holy Polish Confessor Stanislaus Kostka, of the Society of Jesus, who was made perfect in a little while, and finished the work of many years in angelic innocency of life, and whose name the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIII. enrolled among those of the Saints.

The Vespers are of the Festival.

AUGUST 15.

Marymas[1] or Lady-Day-in-Harvest.

The Assumption[2] of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the First Class, with an Octave.

Whatever is not specially given here is from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Maiden most wise, whither goest thou up, like the dawn gloriously rising?[3] * O daughter of Zion, thou art all beautiful and pleasant, fair as the moon, clear as the sun.

No Commemorations.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O come let us worship the King of kings. * This day was His Mother taken to the heavens above.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The holy Mother of God is exalted over choirs of Angels * into the heavenly kingdom.

Ps. viii. O LORD our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. Through thee have the gates of Paradise been thrown open to us, * O thou who this day dost triumph so gloriously among the Angels.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. Blessed art thou among women, * and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. The holy Mother of God is exalted

Answer. Over choirs of Angels into the heavenly kingdom.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Song of Songs, (i. 1.)

[THE Bride.] Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth—for better than wine are thine embraces, redolent of the best perfumes! Thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee. Draw me! We will run after thee on the scent of thy perfume. The king hath brought me into his chambers. We will be glad and rejoice in thee. We will think of thine embraces more than of wine. I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem,—as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

First Responsory.

I saw her, when, fair like a dove, she winged her flight above the rivers of waters. The priceless savour of her perfumes hung heavy in her garments. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.[4]

Verse. Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like a pillar of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense?[5]

Answer. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bride.] Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath tanned me. My mother's children were angry with me; they made me the keeper of the vineyards; mine own vineyard have I not kept. Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest thy flock, where thou layest thee down at noon, lest I begin to turn aside after the flocks of thy companions.

[The Bridegroom.] If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beside the shepherd's tents. I have compared thee, O my love, to my company of horses in Pharaoh's chariot. Thy cheeks are comely like a dove's, thy neck like strings of jewels.[6]

Second Responsory.

I was exalted, &c., (p. 637.)

Third Lesson.

NECKLACES of gold will we make for thee, with inlaid work of silver.

[The Bride.] While the king sat on his couch, my spikenard sent forth the smell thereof. A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me. He shall lie betwixt my breasts. My beloved is unto me as a bunch of cypress in the vineyards of Engaddi.

[The Bridegroom.] Behold, thou

---

[1] This is the only regular popular title for this Festival with which I have ever met, and that only as the name of some horse-races which take place annually at Irvine in Ayrshire. They are of ancient institution, and there can be no doubt what they are meant to celebrate, though those who take part in them are now unconscious of it.

[2] Literally, God's taking the Blessed Virgin to Himself, i.e., by death (from the Latin assumo, I take to myself.) There is a common tradition that her resurrection took place in about forty hours, like our Lord's, and that both body and soul are now where He is—but such tradition must be carefully distinguished from matters of faith. See Alban Butler, August 15.

[3] Mrs Jameson, in her Legends of the Madonna, elegantly paraphrases these words, as applied to the Assumption, "like the morning, rising from the night of death."

[4] Ecclus. l. 8.

[5] Cant. iii. 6.

[6] Or "Thy cheeks are comely with strings, and thy neck with rows of jewels."

art fair, my love, behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes.

[The Bride.] Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, yea, comely.

[Both.] Our bed is of flowers, the beams of our house are of cedar, our rafters of cypress.

Third Responsory.

[1] Who is this that cometh up like the sun? This, comely as Jerusalem? The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Verse. Mary hath been taken to heaven—the Angels rejoice—

Answer. They praise and bless the Lord.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John [of Damascus.] (2nd on the Falling-on-sleep of Blessed Mary.)

THIS day the holy and animated Ark of the living God, which had held within it its own Maker, is borne to rest in that Temple of the Lord, which is not made with hands. David, whence it sprang, leapeth before it,[2] and in company with him the Angels dance, the Archangels sing aloud, the Virtues ascribe glory, the Princedoms shout for joy, the Powers make merry, the Lordships rejoice, the Thrones keep holiday, the Cherubim utter praise, and the Seraphim proclaim its glory. This day the Eden of the new Adam receiveth the living garden of delight, wherein the condemnation was annulled, wherein the Tree of Life was planted, wherein our nakedness was covered.

Fourth Responsory.

When the Lord beheld, &c., (p. 637,) omitting the last Verse and Answer.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS day the stainless maiden, who had been defiled by no earthly lust, but ennobled by heavenly desires, returned not to dust, but, being herself a living heaven, took her place among the heavenly mansions. From her true life had flowed for all men, and how should she taste of death? But she yielded obedience to the law established by Him to Whom she had given birth, and, as the daughter of the old Adam, underwent the old sentence, which even her Son, Who is the very Life Itself, had not refused; but, as the Mother of the living God, she was worthily taken by Him unto Himself.

Fifth Responsory.

All generations, &c., (p. 639,) omitting the last Verse and Answer.

Sixth Lesson.

EVE, who had said "yea" to the proposals of the serpent, was condemned to the pains of travail and the punishment of death, and found her place in the bowels of the Netherworld. But this truly blessed being who had inclined her ears to the word of God, whose womb had been filled by the action of the Holy Ghost, who, as soon as she heard the spiritual salutation of the archangel, had conceived the Son of God without any sexual pleasure or carnal knowledge by a man, who had brought forth her Offspring without any the least pang, who had hallowed herself altogether for the service of God—how was death ever to feed upon her? how was the grave ever to eat her up? how was corruption to break into that body into which Life had been welcomed? For her there was a straight, smooth, and easy way to heaven. For if Christ, Who is the Life and the Truth, hath said: "Where I am, there shall also My servant be"—how much more shall not rather His mother be with Him?

Sixth Responsory.

Blessed art thou, &c., (p. 635.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Verse. The Virgin Mary hath been taken into the chamber on high.

Answer. Where the King of kings sitteth on a throne amid the stars.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 38.)

AT that time: JESUS entered into a certain village, and a woman named Martha received Him into her house. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (27th on the Words of the Lord.)

When the Holy Gospel was read, we heard how that a godly woman hospitably received the Lord into her house, and that this woman's name was Martha. And while Martha herself was cumbered about much serving, a sister of her's, called Mary, sat at the Lord's Feet, and heard His word. The one worked, the other was idle. One ministered, the other was filled. Nevertheless, Martha, working hard in the bustle and business of the serving, came to the Lord, and made complaint of her sister, because she would not help her in her work.

Seventh Responsory.

Grace is poured into thy lips; therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Verse. Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloës, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces whereby kings' daughters among thy honourable women have made thee glad.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Eighth Blessing.

She whose Feast-day, &c.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT the Lord undertook to answer Martha for Mary; He, Who had been called upon to be her Judge, became her Advocate. "And JESUS answered and said unto her:

---

[1] Cant. viii. 5; vi. 10, 4, 8.

[2] Cf. 2 Kings (Sam.) vi. 14.

Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things. But one thing is needful, and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." We have heard both the complaint, and the sentence of the Judge, the which sentence replieth to the complainant, and shieldeth her whom the Lord had received. Mary was wrapped up in the sweetness of the word of the Lord. Martha was busied how to feed the Lord, and Mary, how to be fed by the Lord. Martha was getting ready a banquet for that same Lord, at Whose banquet Mary was already revelling.

Eighth Responsory.

O Virgin Mary, Mother of God, blessed art thou that didst believe the Lord, for there hath been a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord. Behold, thou art exalted over choirs of Angels. Plead for us with the Lord our God.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee.

Answer. Plead for us with the Lord our God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Plead for us with the Lord our God.

Ninth Lesson.

WHEN, then, Mary was listening in peace and gentleness to those words of unutterable sweetness, and being feasted to the full extent of her heart's power, and Martha came and complained of her to the Lord, how must we imagine that she feared, lest the Lord should say unto her: Arise, and help thy sister—? She was held by that wondrous sweetness the smack whereof is felt more by the mind than by the belly. She was excused, and she sat all the safer. But on what grounds was she excused? Let us now turn our attention to this point, and thoroughly see into and examine it as far as we can, that we also may be fed.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Mary hath been taken to heaven; * the Angels rejoice; they praise and bless the Lord.

Second Antiphon. The Virgin Mary hath been taken into the chamber on high, * where the King of kings sitteth on a throne amid the stars.

Third Antiphon. We run after thee, on the scent of thy perfumes— * the virgins love thee heartily.

Fourth Antiphon. Blessed of the Lord art thou, O daughter, * for by thee we have been given to eat of the fruit [of the tree] of Life.

Fifth Antiphon. Fair and comely art thou, O daughter of Jerusalem, * terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv.)

IN all these I sought rest, and I will abide in the inheritance of the Lord. So the Creator of all things gave me a commandment and said, (and He That made me rested in my tabernacle):—[1]

Verse. The holy Mother of God hath been exalted.

Answer. Over choirs of Angels, into the heavenly kingdom.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Who is she that cometh up like the rising dawn, * fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array?

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, forgive the transgressions of Thy servants, and, forasmuch as by our own deeds we cannot please Thee, may we find safety through the prayers of the Mother of Thy Son and our Lord. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

PRIME.

Antiphon. Mary hath been taken, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of August we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Hyacinth, of the Order of Preachers, [who died at Cracow, in Poland, upon the feast-day of the Assumption, in the year 1257, and] whose feast Pope Clement VIII., when he enrolled his name among those of the Saints, ordered to be kept on the morrow thereof.

Upon the same 16th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 410,] the holy Deacon Titus. While the city was occupied by the Goths he was distributing money to the poor, when a tribune of the barbarians ordered him to be killed.

At Nice, in Bithynia, the holy physician Diomede, who in the persecution under Diocletian was for Christ's faith's sake slain with the sword, and so finished his testimony.

Likewise thirty-three holy martyrs.

At Ferentino, in Latium, the holy centurion Ambrose, who in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian was tortured in divers ways, and when he had passed unhurt through the fire was sunk in water, and so entered into rest.[2]

At Milan, [about the year 400,] holy Simplician, Bishop [of that see,] famed through the testimony of holy Ambrose and Augustine.

At Auxerre, [in the year 561,] holy Eleutherius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Nicomedia, [in the year 358,] the holy Confessor Arsacius. Under the persecutor Licinius he deserted from the army, and took to the life of a hermit, wherein he shone with such graces that it is written that he cast out devils and by his prayers killed a huge dragon. At length he foretold the sack which was coming upon the city, and gave up his soul to God in prayer.

At Montpellier, in Languedoc, [in the year 1327,] the blessed Confessor Roch, who by the sign of the Cross delivered many cities of Italy from the plague. His body hath been taken to Venice, and buried with great honour in the church consecrated in his name.

At Rome, holy Serena, once the wife of the Emperor Diocletian.

---

[1] The end of the sentence is "—and He said: Dwell thou in Jacob, and inherit in Israël, and strike thy roots amid My chosen people."

[2] Per ignem illacsus transiens demersus in aquam, eductus est in refrigerium. This does not seem to be, as might at first appear, a sort of grim pleasantry upon the nature of his two last sufferings, but a quaint adaptation of Ps. lxv. 12: Transivimus per ignem et aquam et eduxisti nos in refrigerium.

Chapter at the end. (Ecclus. xxiv. 19.)

IN the broad ways I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm; I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

TERCE.

Answer. The Virgin Mary hath been taken into the chamber on high.

Verse. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be.

Answer. Give me strength against thine enemies.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First except—

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. This is the day * whereon Mary went up into heaven. Rejoice; for she reigneth for ever with Christ.

A Commemoration is made of St Hyacinth. Prayer, "O God, Who, year by year, &c.," (p. 626.)

Lord's Day within the Octave of the Assumption.

Feast of St Joachim, Father of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Confessor.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office of a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621.)

The Verse at Prime and the last verses of all the Hymns except at Vespers and Mattins are altered in honour of the Incarnation.[1]

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Verse and Answer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin from that of Zacharias. Prayer from Lauds.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Epiphanius, Bishop [of Pavia.]

FROM the Root of Jesse sprang King David, and from the stock of King David, the Holy Virgin. Holy I call her, and the daughter of holy men. Her father and mother were Joachim and Anne, who pleased God in their lives, and brought forth an offspring well-pleasing to Him, even the Holy Virgin Mary, at once the Temple and the Mother of God. These three, Joachim, Anne, and Mary, clearly offered up unto the Trinity a sacrifice of praise. For the name Joachim being interpreted, signifieth "The preparation of the Lord,"[2] and out of him was prepared the Temple of the Lord, namely, the Virgin. The name Anne signifieth "grace," and she and Joachim did indeed receive a grace when, in answer to their prayers, they generated such an offspring, compassing the Holy Virgin. Joachim prayed upon the mountain and Anne in her garden.[3]

Fifth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John of Damascus. (1st on the Birth of the Blessed Virgin Mary.)

SINCE it was to be that the Virgin Mother of God should be born of Anne, nature dared not to produce any other child before this child of grace, but humbly waited until grace should have produced her's. It behoved that she should come into the world as a first-born, who was to bear the First-born of every creature, even Him by Whom all things were made. O blessed couple, Joachim and Anne—unto you is all creation laid under debt, since through you creation hath offered to the Creator this noblest of gifts, namely, that chaste mother, who alone was worthy of the Creator.

---

[1] That is, if this Feast be kept within the Octave of the Assumption.

[2] Rather, according to Gesenius, "The LORD hath established" or "set up," the name seeming to be the same as Jehoiachin or Jehoiakim.

[3] This relates to a story in the Apocryphal Gospels. Protevangel. i.-iv. Pseudo-Matthew, ii. iii., &c., &c.

Sixth Lesson.

REJOICE, O Joachim, from whose daughter a Child hath unto us been born, and His name is called The Angel of the Great Counsel, that is, of the salvation of the whole world. Let Nestorius be ashamed, and put his hand upon his mouth. Her Child is God. How then can His Mother be other than Mother of God? "Whosoever acknowledgeth not the Holy Mother of God is far from God." This saying is not mine, although it is mine in all other senses than that of authority. I have received it as a most godly legacy from Father Gregory the Divine. O blessed couple, Joachim and Anne. Christ saith in a certain place: "By their fruits ye shall know them" (Matth. iii. 20)—and ye are known by the fruit of your chaste loins. That that which should be born of you might be worthy and well-pleasing in the sight of God, ye ordered your own lives by rule. In the chaste and holy exercise of your natural gift, ye produced the treasure of virginity.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St John of Damascus. (Bk. iv. on the Orthodox Faith.)

That Joseph sprang from the lineage of David, the most holy Evangelists Matthew and Luke have clearly shown. There is this difference between them, that Matthew traceth the pedigree from David through Solomon, and Luke through Nathan. But both of them pass in silence over the descent of the Holy Virgin. In explanation of this we shall find on investigation that among the Jews, and in the Holy Scriptures, it hath never been in use to chronicle the pedigrees of women. But the Law containeth a warning against the tribes intermarrying one with another. Joseph was of the same tribe as David, [namely, Judah,] and since he was a just man (this is the praise which the Gospel of God giveth him,) he would not have espoused the Holy Virgin, unless she had been of the same race, as such an union would not have been in accordance with the commandment of the law. For this reason the Evangelist held it enough to have shown the descent of Joseph.[1]

Eighth Lesson.

THEREFORE, from the stock of Nathan the son of David, Levi begat Melchi and Panther; and Panther begat Bar-Panther (for so was he called;) and Bar-Panther begat Joachim; and Joachim begat the Holy Mother of God. Again, from the stock of Solomon the son of David, Mathan of his wife begat Jacob. And after Mathan was dead, Melchi, of the family of Nathan, son to Levi and brother to Panther, took to him in marriage her that had been the wife of Mathan, and was mother of Jacob, and begat of her Heli. So that Jacob and Heli were half-brothers, sons of the same mother, but one of the stock of Solomon and the other of the stock of Nathan. (Here the Eighth Lesson ends, if a Ninth Lesson of St Joachim be needed.) Then Heli, who was the descendant of Nathan, died, having had no children. Whereupon, Jacob, who was the descendant of Solomon, took to himself the widow of his half-brother Heli, to raise up seed unto his brother, and begat of her Joseph. So Joseph was by nature the son of Jacob the descendant of Solomon, but in the eye of the Law he had for his father Heli the descendant of Nathan. Things being thus, Joachim took to wife that most eminent and praiseworthy woman, Anne. And even as the patient Hannah, being stricken with barrenness, by prayer and promise became the mother of Samuel, so likewise this woman also through prayer and promise received from God the Mother of God, that in fruitfulness she might not be behind any of the famous matrons. And thus "grace" (for such is the signification of the name of Anne) is mother of the "Lady" (for such is the signification of the name of Mary.[2]) And indeed she became the Lady of every creature, since she hath been mother of the Creator.

Ninth Lesson from the Gospel of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

Verse. His seed shall be mighty upon earth.

Answer. The generation of the upright shall be blessed.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [3] Let us praise a man famous in his generation, * with whom the Lord didst establish the blessing of all nations, and on whose head He made His covenant to rest.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, out of all Thy Saints, didst choose blessed Joachim to be the father of the mother of Thy Son, mercifully grant that as we hold his Festival in honour, we may ever feel his protection. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Commemoration of the Sunday at Lauds.

At Second Vespers all from the Common, except the Prayer. Commemoration of the Sunday.

---

[1] The ordinance referred to by St John Damascene is doubtless that contained in Numbers xxxvi., and appears to relate only to heiresses. Joachim and Anne seem to have had no male issue, hence any daughter they had would be bound to "be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father." (8.) As to this genealogy, see note after Sept. 8.

[2] This is opposed to other passages in the Breviary. See Sunday after Sept. 8.

AUGUST 16.

St Hyacinth, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 626.)

The Verse at Prime and the last verse of all the Hymns except at Vespers and Mattins are altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. See the Rubric for the Third Sunday of August (p. 488.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

HYACINTH was a Pole, and was born [in the year 1185] of the noble and Christian family [of the Counts of Odrowatz,] in the town of Camien, in the diœcese of Wratislaw. He was trained up in learning from his youth, and after studying law and theology, became a Canon of Crakow, where he was eminent above his fellows by the singular godliness of his life and the depth of his learning. Being at Rome, [in 1218,] he was received into the Order of Friars Preachers by the Founder, St Dominick, himself, and kept in holiness to the end of his life the rule of perfect living which he had learnt from him. He remained always a virgin, and loved modesty, long-suffering, lowliness, self-restraint, and all other good graces as his heritage in the life of a Friar.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the heat of his love for God, he sometimes passed whole nights in pouring forth prayers and chastising his body, to which he never gave rest but in leaning against a stone or lying upon the ground. He was sent back to his own country, and, on the way, founded a very large house of his Order at Friesach; and soon afterwards another at Crakow. In other provinces of the kingdom of Poland he founded four others, and it passeth belief what success he had with all kinds of men, by his preaching of the Word of God, and the innocency of his life. Not a day passed wherein he did not display some bright gift of faith, godliness, or innocency.

Sixth Lesson.

THE zeal of this most holy man for the salvation of his neighbours was that which God marked by His greatest miracles. Among these is famous the time when coming to the River Vistula near Wisgrade, and finding it in flood, he crossed it without a boat, drawing over also his three companions standing upon the waves upon his outspread mantle. He led a wonderful life for nearly forty years after his profession, and then foretold to his brethren the day of his death. Upon the very day of the Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin, he finished the recitation of the Office of the Church, received the Sacraments with the utmost reverence, and then with the words, "Into Thy hands, O Lord," gave up his soul to God in the year of salvation 1257. He was illustrious for miracles even after his death, and Pope Clement VIII. numbered him among the saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

At Lauds Commemorations are made of the Assumption and of St Lawrence.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the Octave of the holy martyr Lawrence.

Upon the same 17th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Carthage, in Africa, [in the year 483,] the holy martyrs Liberatus the Abbat, Boniface the Deacon, Servus and Rusticus the Sub-Deacons, the monks Rogatus and Septimus, and the boy Maximus. In the persecution by the Vandals under King Hunneric, they were put to divers and unheard-of tortures, on account of their confession of the Catholic faith and their defence of one baptism; at last they were nailed to the wood upon which they were to be burnt, and the fire was several times kindled but by the power of God always extinguished. Then the king commanded to beat in their heads with the handles of oars, and so they finished the lovely course of their fight, and were crowned by the Lord.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, [about the year 273,] the holy martyr Mamas, who endured one long martyrdom from his childhood to his old age, and at last happily finished it under the President Alexander in the reign of the Emperor Aurelian. The holy fathers Basil and Gregory of Nazianzus highly extol him.

In Achaia, [in the Peloponnesus, about the year 253,] the holy martyr Myron, a Priest, who was beheaded at Cyzicus, [in Asia Minor,] after many torments, under the President Antipater, in the time of the Emperor Decius.

At Nicomedia, [in the year 303,] the holy martyrs Straton, Philip, and Eutychian. They were condemned to the beasts, but as these left them unhurt they finished their testimony by fire.

At Terni, [in Spoleto, in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Anastasius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Ptolemais, in Palestine, [about the year 260,] the holy martyrs Paul and Juliana his sister, who suffered under the Emperor Valerian.

Vespers are of the Octave of St Lawrence, from the Chapter, inclusive.

AUGUST 17.

Octave Day of St Lawrence.

Double.

All as on the Festival, except the following, and that the Verse at Prime and the last verse of every Hymn, except at Vespers and Mattins, is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Lawrence, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

STIR up in Thy Church, O Lord, the spirit in which the blessed Levite Lawrence served Thee, that we being filled therewith, may be ever fain to love what he loved, and to do what he taught. Through Our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Same Holy Spirit, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Hyacinth, and then of the Assumption.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from one of the Tracts upon John, written by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (27*th.*)

BRETHREN, we know that all we who are in the body of the Lord, and abide in Him that He also may abide in us, must needs in this world live even unto the end among the wicked; by the wicked I mean not such as blaspheme Christ, for it is now but few who are found who blaspheme Him with their tongue, but many there be who do it by their lives. Among such we must needs live, even unto the end. But what is it that He saith, "He that abideth in Me and I in him?" (John xv. 5.) Is it not that whereunto the Martyrs gave ear, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved?" (Matth. x. 22.)

Fifth Lesson.

IN what wise abode in Him the holy Lawrence whose Feast-day we keep to-day? He abode in Him until trial came; he abode in Him until He was browbeaten by the tyrant; he abode in Him until his fearful sentence came; he abode in Him even unto death. That is saying but a little of him; he abode in Him even in savage torture. He was not slain quickly, but tortured in the fire. He was allowed to remain long alive, and yet not allowed to remain long alive, but slowly put to death. During that long death, in all that agony, since he had well eaten and well drunk, filled with that Food, and drunken with that Cup, he felt not the torture.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR the holy Martyr Xystus, whose day we kept five days ago, had said unto him: "Be not sorrowful, my son" (for he was the Bishop and Lawrence the Deacon,) "be not sorrowful," said he, "yet three days and thou shalt follow me." These three days of which he spake were the three clear days which elapse between the day of the passion of holy Xystus, and this day, the day of the passion of holy Lawrence. The three days are those between. O what a strange comfort! He saith not: "Be not sorrowful, my son; the persecution will come to an end, and thou wilt be safe," but "Be not sorrowful, whither I go, thither shalt thou follow me, and the time will not be long. Three clear days shall pass, and then thou shalt be with me." Lawrence received the prophecy, conquered the devil, and entered into his triumph.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 24.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Amen, Amen, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (66*th on John.*)

This present life is sweet, and full of many pleasures, not indeed for all, but for those who love it. But if one should have cast his looks heavenward, and studied the excellent things that are there, he will forthwith despise this present life and hold it of no moment. So is bodily comeliness esteemed, only as long as we see none fairer, but as soon as a comelier appeareth, the first is held cheap. And thus if we will look at the beauty above, and study the loveliness of the kingdom in heaven, we shall forthwith loose the ties that bind us to this world.

Eighth Lesson.

THE ties that bind us to this world are the love of earthly things. Listen to what Christ saith, to draw us to loosen these ties. "He that loveth his life shall lose it, and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." This hath the sound of a puzzle, and yet it is full of the most excellent wisdom. How shall he that loveth his life lose it? He shall lose it by yielding to its senseless lusts, by indulging any of its lusts more than he ought. Whereas he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal, by not obeying it when it demandeth things hurtful.

Ninth Lesson.

CHRIST saith not, He that obeyeth it not, but, "He that hateth it." For even as we cannot bear to hear the voice or see the face of them whom we hate, so doth it behove us to turn angrily away from our own life, if it demand from us anything contrary to the will of God. He was about to speak to them touching death, even His Own death, and He foresaw their grief and faintness, and spake in strong expressions, as though He said: "What shall I say, if ye take not My death bravely? Unless ye also die, ye shall gain no profit."

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Assumption.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Lavican Way, [in the year 328,] holy [widow] Helen, [Empress of the West,] mother of that most religious Emperor Constantine the Great, who was the first to leave to other princes the pattern of how to protect and spread the Church.

At Palestrina, Italy, [in the year 274,] the holy martyr Agapitus, [principal patron of the Church in Palestrina]; he was fifteen years of age, and hot with the love of Christ. He was tried by command of the Emperor

Aurelian, and was first scourged for a very long time with raw thongs, afterwards he suffered worse under the Prefect Antiochus. By command of the Emperor he was thrown to lions, but as these hurt him not at all the servants smote him with the sword, and so he went to be crowned.

At Rome, the blessed Priests John and Crispus. During the persecution under Diocletian they busied themselves in burying many bodies of the Saints, with whom they themselves were afterward made fellows, and gained the gladness of life eternal [by martyrdom.]

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyrs Hermas, Serapion, and Polyænus, who were dragged through strait, rocky, and rough places until they gave up their souls to God.

In Illyricum, [in the second century,] the holy martyrs Florus and Laurus, quarrymen, who, after their masters Proculus and Maximus had been martyred, were put to many torments, under the President Licion, and then thrown into a well.

At Myra, in Lycia, the holy martyrs Leo and Juliana.

At Metz, in Gaul, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Firmin, [eleventh] Bishop [of that see.]

At Montefalco, in Umbria, [in the year 1308,] the blessed Virgin Clare, a Nun of the Order of Hermits of St Austin, on whose heart the mysteries of the suffering of the Lord were found set forth anew, and are therein most reverently worshipped. The Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. solemnly enrolled her name in the list of those of the holy Virgins.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

AUGUST 18.

St Helen, Empress of the Romans, Widow.

All from the Common Office for a Holy Woman, neither Virgin nor Martyr, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who didst reveal unto Thy blessed handmaid Helen the place where Thy Cross lay hid, that so Thou mightest use her to enrich Thy Church with that precious Treasure, grant unto us at her petition, that we may gain the prize of life eternal which Thou didst purchase for us upon that Tree of Life, Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These as regards St Helen begin with the Chapter. A Commemoration is made of the Second Vespers of the Octave day of St Lawrence, then of the Assumption, and then of the Holy Martyr Agapitus.

Prayer.

MAY Thy Church, O God, rejoice with confidence in the pleadings of Thine Holy Martyr Agapitus, and with the help of his glorious prayers remain ever godly and stand ever secure. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermon of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Funeral Sermon on Theodosius.)

HELEN therefore cometh and beginneth to visit the holy places. The Holy Ghost hath inspired into her that she should seek the Wood of the Cross. She hath come to Golgotha, and she saith, Behold the battlefield! Where is the victory? I seek the Standard of Salvation and I find it not. Am I, saith she, upon a throne, and the Lord's Cross in the dust? Am I in kingly halls, and Christ's triumph in ruins? There it still lieth hid, and still lieth hid the palm of life eternal. Why should I think myself redeemed if the redemption itself is unseen? I see what thou hast done, O devil, to hide the sword wherewith thou hast been slain. But "Isaac digged again the wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham; and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them. And Isaac's servants digged in the valley and found there a well of living water" (Gen. xxvi. 18, 19.) Therefore let the ruins be cleared away, that the life may be seen. Let the sword wherewith the true Goliath's head hath been cut off be drawn from its sheath. Let the earth be opened that salvation may flash forth. Hast thou not hid the Tree, O devil, that thou mayest just be conquered again?

Fifth Lesson.

MARY conquered thee, Mary who brought forth the Victor, Mary who remaining always a virgin brought forth Him Who was to conquer thee by His Crucifixion and crush thee by His death; thou shalt be conquered this day also, that a woman may detect thy tricks. Mary in her holiness bore the Lord, I will search out His Cross; she carried Him when He was born, I will carry Him now that He is risen from the dead. She caused God to be seen among men, I will raise up His standard from these ruins for the healing of sinners. She openeth therefore the ground, she putteth away the dust, she findeth lying heaped together the three crosses which the enemy had hidden and the ruin had covered. But the triumph of Christ cannot be obscured. As a mere woman she is at a loss, but the Holy Ghost inspireth her to a search that can leave no doubt.

Sixth Lesson.

SHE seeketh for the nails wherewith the Lord had been crucified, and she findeth them. With one nail she commandeth to make a horse's bit, another she hath worked up into a crown; of the one she maketh an ornament, of the other an object for godliness. Mary was visited to set Eve free, Helen was visited to redeem Emperors. She sendeth unto her son Constantine the crown set with gems, wherewith, herself a gem, she had joined the more precious iron with the cross of God's redemption of man; she sendeth the bit also. Constantine used them both, and hath bequeathed his faith unto the monarchs that have followed him.[1] In time, therefore, the beginning of the believing Emperors which was on the bit of the horse was holy, from him began the faith whereby persecution ended and godliness took its place. Wisely hath Helen done in setting the Cross above kings' heads, that on kings Christ's Cross may be adored; to bow down to the holy [sign of] Redemption is not a novelty but an act of godliness. Good therefore is the nail[2] of the Roman Empire which ruleth the whole globe and clotheth the brows of princes, that they who once were persecutors may now be preachers.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

The Ninth Lesson is read along with the Eighth to leave room for the Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Agapitus.)

THIS Agapitus was a lad of Palestrina, who eagerly accepted martyrdom at the age of fifteen years, under the Emperor Aurelian. On account of his firmness in his religion, the Emperor ordered him first to receive an exceedingly long hiding with cat-gut, and then to be thrown into a foul dungeon, where he remained for four days without food. Being brought out of prison, live embers were put upon his head, but, whereas he still gave God thanks, he was whipped again, and hung up naked by the feet, in such wise that a thick smoke from a fire kindled under his face might pour into his mouth. Afterwards, boiling water was poured upon his belly, and his jaws were broken. Then presently the judge fell from the judgment-seat, and shortly after died. Whereupon the Emperor was enraged, and commanded the holy lad to be thrown to wild beasts, but these dared not to touch him, and he was stricken by the sword at Palestrina.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Assumption, and then of St Agapitus.

Prayer as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 192,] the holy martyr Julius. He was a Senator who was denounced to the judge Vitellius and by him committed to prison, thereafter by command of the Emperor Commodus he was beaten with cudgels until he gave up the ghost. His body was buried in the cemetery of Calipodius, upon the Aurelian Way.

In Cilicia, [about the year 300,] the holy soldiers Andrew the Tribune, and his Companions. After obtaining a victory over the Persians by God's help, they were turned to the faith of Christ, and being accused therefore, they were massacred by the army of the President Seleucus in the straits of the Taurus mountain, under the Emperor Maximian.

In Palestine, the holy martyr Timothy, who after overcoming many torments was burnt at a slow fire, under Urban the President, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian. There suffered there at the same place Thecla and Agapius. Thecla was thrown to wild beasts, and being rent by them passed away to her Divine Bridegroom. Agapius suffered many tortures, but was kept for greater contendings still.

At Anagni, [about the year 250,] the holy martyr Magnus, Bishop [of that see,] who was slain in the persecution under Decius.

At the Brignoles, in Provence, [in the year 1297,] holy Lewis, of the Order of Friars Minors, Bishop of Toulouse, famous for the holiness of his life and his miracles. His body was carried thence to Marseilles, and is honourably buried there in the church of the Friars Minors.

At Sisteron, in Gaul, [in the year 535,] the blessed Confessor Donatus, a Priest, who had been from his very infancy marvellously gifted with the grace of God. He lived as a hermit for many years, and passed away to be with Christ, famous for miracles.

In Berry, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Marian.

At Mantua, the holy Confessor Rufinus.

AUGUST 19.

Fifth Day within the Octave of the Assumption.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs (v. 8.)

[THE Bride.] I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if ye find my beloved, that ye tell him that I am faint with love.

[Chorus of Damsels.] What is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou fairest among women? What is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

[The Bride.] My beloved is white

---

[1] Principium itaque credentium Imperatorum Sanctum est quod super frenum—the passage is excessively crabbed and the reference very far-fetched. Zech. xiv. 20 runs: "In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses holy unto the Lord, and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar" (Revised Version). The reference seems to be to Exodus xxxix. 30, where, speaking of the mitre of the High Priest, it is said: "And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon the writing like the engravings of a signet holy to the Lord" (Revised Version), and the general meaning to be that in the regeneration the commonest objects shall be precious, beautiful, and holy. The LXX renders the first clause of the verse of Zechariah: "In that day what is upon the horse's bit shall be holy unto the Lord Almighty," and the Latin is, In that day what is upon the horse's bit shall be holy unto the Lord—In die illa erit quod super frenum equi est sanctum Domino—and the author of this homily availing himself (1) of the fact that the word super may be taken in the sense of above, (2) that a rider on horseback is from his position raised somewhat higher than the bit in the animal's mouth, and (3) that the Latin word principium is of the neuter gender, has managed to apply the passage to the Emperor Constantine riding on horseback, with a bit formed in whole or in part out of one of the nails of the Passion.

[2] There seems to be an untranslatable play upon the sense in which the word Clavus was used as a symbol of immovable fixedness, based upon the custom of fixing a nail in the temple of Jupiter in order to mark the year.

and ruddy, one among thousands. His head is [precious as] the most fine gold, his locks [long] like the sprays of palm-branches, and black as a raven. His eyes are like doves [reflected] upon floods of water, washed with milk, and they rest in watery fulness.

Second Lesson. (vi.)

[THE Bride.] My beloved is gone down into his garden, to his bed of spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies. I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine; he feedeth among the lilies.

[The Bridegroom.] Thou art beautiful, O my love, pleasant and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array. Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have scared me. Thine hair is like flocks of goats that have come up from Gilead. Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that have come up from the washing, whereof every one is with lamb with twins, and none is barren among them.

Third Lesson. (8.)

[THE Bridegroom.] My dove, my undefiled is but one—she is the only one of her mother, the darling one of her that bare her. The daughters saw her, and cried out that she was most blessed, yea, the queens and the concubines, they praised her. Who is she that goeth forth, like the dawn gloriously rising, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array? I went down into the garden of nuts, to see the fruits of the valleys, and to see whether the vine was in flower, and the pomegranates budded. I knew not; my soul troubled me on account of the chariots of Aminadab.[1] Return, return, O Shulammith! return, return, that we may look upon thee.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (1st on the Assumption.)

WHEN the glorious Virgin this day mounted upon the heavens, without doubt, she abundantly increased the joy of the citizens above. This same is she the voice of whose salutation maketh to leap with joy even such as are still shut up in their mothers' bellies. (Luke i. 41, 44.) If the soul of an unborn babe melted when Mary spake, what must we imagine to have been the jubilation of the heavenly ones, when it was their reward at once to hear her voice, and to see her face, and to enjoy her blessed presence?

Fifth Lesson.

BUT who also can picture to himself with what glory the Queen of the world went forth, and with what keen desire the whole multitude of the armies which are in heaven came out to meet her, with what hymns she was led to her throne of glory, with what a look of peace, with what a countenance of grace, with what Divine embraces her Son welcomed her, and set her above everything which God hath made? It was that honour of which such a Mother was worthy, and with that glory which beseemed such a Son.

Sixth Lesson.

SWEET indeed were the kisses which the Suckling, Whom His Mother had praised while yet He lay hid in her virginal womb, pressed upon her lips. But shall we not believe that sweeter were those which she received from Him in blessed welcome, when He was sitting at the right hand of His Father, and she went up to the throne of His glory, singing the marriage-song and saying:—"Let Him kiss me with the kisses of His mouth?" (Cant. i. 2.) Who shall declare the generation of Christ or the Assumption of Mary? So much as she found grace on earth more than others, so much more excellent than that of others is the glory which she hath in heaven.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 38.)

AT that time: JESUS entered into a certain village, and a woman named Martha received Him into her house. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (27th on the Words of the Lord.)

The troubling about many things passeth away, but the love for the one thing remaineth. Therefore that which Mary hath chosen shall not be taken away from her. But that which thou hast chosen, O Martha, it must needs follow, it must needs be understood, shall be taken away from thee. But it will be taken away from thee for thy good, that that which is better may be given unto thee. Work will be taken away from thee that thou mayest rest. Thou art on the voyage; Mary is already in port.

Eighth Lesson.

YE see then, my dearly beloved brethren, and, as I think, ye now understand that in these two women, who were both well-pleasing in the sight of the Lord, both lovely, both disciples, ye see, I say, and whosoever ye be that understand, ye understand something great, which ye also that do not understand ought to hear and know, that in these two women there were figured two lives, that which now is, and that which is to come, the toilful and the restful, the sorrowing and the blessed, the temporal and the eternal.

Ninth Lesson.

THERE are two lives. Think more about them. Whatsoever this present life hath, I say not of evil, not of wickedness, not of crime, not of uncleanness, not of ungodliness, but toilsome and full of troubles, chastened by fears, and tried by temptations, so, I say, is even the guileless life which Martha must have. Look into this, then, as well as ye can, and, as I have said, think more about it than I speak. There was no wrong life in that house, either in the case of Martha, or in the case of Mary, and if ever there had been, it fled away when the Lord came in.

---

[1] Gesenius merely gives it as a man's proper name, signifying "Kindred of the Prince." Abp. Kenrick, quoting Rosenmuller, says, "'Without knowing it, my soul made me as the chariots of my noble people.' His desire of seeing his beloved was such that unconsciously he moved almost with the rapidity of a war-chariot,"—in hasty return from the garden of nuts. As the text stands in the Latin the natural meaning is that he was afraid of some distinguished person carrying her off.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of August, were born into the better life—

In the country of Langres, [in the year 1153,] holy Bernard, the first Abbat of Clairvaux, glorious for his life, his teaching, and his miracles, whom the Supreme Pontiff Pius VIII. declared and confirmed a Doctor of the Universal Church.

In Judea, [in the year 1043 before Christ,] the holy Prophet Samuel, whose sacred bones, as writeth blessed Jerome, were carried to Constantinople by the Emperor Arcadius, and laid near the Hebdomon.

On the same day, [in the fourth century,] the holy Senator Lucius. He was turned to the faith of Christ by seeing the constancy with which Theodore, Bishop of Cyrene, underwent martyrdom, and drew the President Dignian to the same belief; they went together to Cyprus, and when he saw other Christians there being crowned for confessing the Lord, he thrust himself forward and gained the same crown of martyrdom by being beheaded.

In Thrace, thirty-seven holy martyrs, who under the President Apellian, for Christ's faith's sake, had their hands and feet cut off, and were cast into a furnace of fire. Likewise the holy martyrs Severus and Memnon the centurion, who finished their testimony by the same kind of death, and departed to heaven as conquerors.

At Cordova, [in the year 852,] the holy martyrs Leovigild and Christopher. They were monks who were cast into prison for their defence of the Christian faith in the persecution under the Arabs, and were presently beheaded, and so gained the palm of martyrdom, whereafter their bodies were burnt.

At Rome, [in the third century,] blessed Porphyry, a man of God, from whom the holy martyr Agapitus learnt the faith and teaching of Christ.

In the island of Noirmoutier, [in the seventh century,] the holy Philibert, [first] Abbat [of Jumièges and of Noirmoutier.]

In the castle of Chinon, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Maximus, a disciple of blessed Martin, Bishop [of Tours.]

At Monte Senario, in the Diocese of Florence, [in the year 1268,] the blessed Confessor Manetto [Zantella,] one of the Seven Founders of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who died as he was reciting hymns to her.

Vespers are of the following.

AUGUST 20.

St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux,] Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

A Commemoration is made of the Assumption.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

BERNARD was born [in the year of salvation 1091] at a decent place in Burgundy called Fontaines. On account of extraordinary good looks, he was as a boy very much sought after by women, but he could never be turned aside from his resolution to keep chaste. To fly from these temptations of the devil, he determined at two-and-twenty years of age to enter the Monastery of Citeaux, whence the Cistercian Order took its rise. When this resolution of Bernard's became known, his brothers did all their diligence to change his purpose, but he only became the more eloquent and happy about it. Them and others he so brought over to his mind, that thirty young men entered the same Order along with him. As a monk he was so given to fasting, that as often as he had to eat, so often he seemed to be in pain. He exercised himself wonderfully in watching and prayer, and was a great lover of Christian poverty. Thus he led on earth an heavenly life, purged of all care and desire for transitory things.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was a burning and shining light of lowliness, mercifulness, and kindness. His concentration of thought was such, that he hardly used his senses except to do good works, in which latter he acted with admirable wisdom. Thus occupied, he refused the Bishoprics of Genoa, Milan, and others, which were offered to him, declaring that he was unworthy of so high a sphere of duty. Being made Abbat of Clairvaux [in 1115,] he built monasteries in many places, wherein the excellent rules and discipline of Bernard long flourished. When Pope Innocent II., [in 1138,] restored the monastery of St Vincent and St Anastasius at Rome, Bernard set over it the Abbat who was afterwards the Supreme Pontiff Eugene III., and who is also the same to whom he addressed his book upon "Consideration."

Sixth Lesson.

HE was the author of many writings, in which it is manifest that his teaching was rather given him of God, than gained by hard work. In consequence of his high reputation for excellence, he was called by the most exalted Princes to act as arbiter of their disputes, and for this end, and to settle affairs of the Church, he often went to Italy. He was an eminent helper to Pope Innocent II., in putting down the schism of Peter Leoni, and worked to this end, both at the Courts of the Emperor and of Henry King of England, and in the Council of Pisa. He fell asleep in the Lord, [at Clairvaux, on the 20th day of August,] in the [year 1153, the] sixty-third year of his age. He was famous for miracles, and Pope Alexander III. numbered him among the Saints. Pope Pius VIII., acting on the advice of the Congregation of Sacred Rites, declared and confirmed St Bernard a Doctor of the Universal Church. He also commanded that all should use the Mass and Office for him as for a Doctor, and granted perpetual yearly plenary indulgences to all who should visit Churches of the Cistercian Order upon the Feast-day of this Saint.

Eighth Responsory. In the midst, &c., (p. 625.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Assumption.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Jeanne Frances Frémiot de Chantal, Foundress of the Order of Nuns of the Visitation of St Mary, at Annecy, in Savoy, of whom mention is made on the 13th day of December.

Upon the same 21st day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, in the Veran Field, [San Lorenzo, in the third century,] the holy widow and martyr Cyriaca. In the Valerian persecution she spent herself, and all that she had, in ministering to the saints, and at last suffered martyrdom for Christ, and so willingly spent her life itself.

At Salona, [in the third century,] holy Anastasius, a petty officer in the army, who was converted to the faith by beholding the firmness with which the blessed martyr Agapitus bore all his torments, and who was slain by order of the Emperor Aurelian for confessing Christ's name, and so passed away as a martyr, to be ever with the Lord.

In Sardinia, the holy martyrs Luxorius, Cisellus, and Camerinus, who were slain with the sword under the President Delphius, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

In the Gévaudan country, the holy martyr Privatus, Bishop [of Mende,] who suffered in the persecution under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus.

On the same day, [in the year 363,] the holy martyrs Bonosus and Maximian, [officers of the Old Herculians, and the last victims of the Emperor Julian the Apostate.]

At Fondi, in Latium, [under the Emperor Decius,] the holy martyr Paternus. He had come from Alexandria to Rome to visit the graves of the Apostles, and had gone from Rome to Fondi. He was arrested by a Tribune while he was burying the bodies of martyrs, and died in his chains.

At Edessa, the holy Bassa and her sons Theogonius, Agapius, and Faithful, all martyrs. Their loving mother by her exhortations sent them, crowned before her, to receive their palms, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, and then was herself beheaded, and thus joyfully followed them in triumph.

At Verona, the holy Confessor Euprepius, Bishop [of that see.]

Likewise, the holy Bishop Quadratus.

At Sienna, in Tuscany, [in the year 1348,] the holy Abbat Bernard Tolomei, Founder of the Congregation of the Olivetans.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

AUGUST 21.

St Jeanne Frances Frémiot de Chantal, Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Martyr nor Virgin, (p. 649,) except the following.

The Verse at Prime and the last verse of all the Hymns capable of it are altered in honour of the Incarnation.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Jeanne, these begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and merciful God, Who didst enkindle the love of Thyself in the blessed Jeanne Frances, Who didst give unto her the grace to make every path of life temporal the straight and narrow way which leadeth unto life eternal, and Who wast pleased to use her as a mean whereby to adorn Thy Church with a new sisterhood, grant unto us for that Thine handmaid's sake, and at her prayers, that we who know that we have no strength as of ourselves to help ourselves, and therefore do put all our trust in Thine Almighty power, may by the assistance of Thy heavenly grace, always prevail in all things against whatsoever shall arise to fight against us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Bernard. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c." Then, of the Assumption.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JEANNE Frances Frémiot de Chantal was born of parents of the highest rank, at Dijon in Burgundy, [on the 23rd day of January, in the year 1575.] From her earliest childhood she gave no dark promise of a life of eminent holiness. It is said that when she was scarcely fifteen years of age she confuted with precocious acuteness a Presbyterian nobleman, and when he gave her a little present she put it in the fire, saying: "That is how heretics will burn in hell for not believing Christ when He speaketh." On the death of her mother, she placed herself under the keeping of the Virgin Mother of God, and discharged a maid who strove to beguile her into loving the world. She had nothing youthful about her ways. She shrank from the pleasures of life. She had a strong wish that she might die a martyr. She devoted herself unweariedly to religion and godliness. Her father gave her in marriage, [at twenty years of age,] to the Baron de Chantal, and she strove to excel in all the duties and graces of a wife. She made it her work to see that her children, her servants, and all others under her authority were taught the doctrines of the faith and the practice of good living. She relieved the sufferings of the poor by plentiful almsgiving, for which purposes God not unfrequently miraculously multiplied her money. And so it came to pass that no one ever asked her for food in Christ's name and was refused it.

Fifth Lesson.

[IN 1601] her husband was accidentally killed out shooting, and in her widowhood she determined to embrace the more excellent way, and took a vow not to marry again. She bore her bereavement with resignation to the Will of God, and so far overcame her horror of the gentleman who had fired the shot, that, to show she attributed no blame to him, she stood god-mother to his little boy. She was quite content with few servants and plain cookery and dress, and sold her rich wardrobe for the benefit of charities. She received offers of second marriage which would have been both politic and honourable, but never was induced to accept one of them, and to harden herself in her intention of remaining in her widowhood, she renewed her vow to that effect, and branded on her chest with a hot iron the most holy name of JESUS Christ. Her love grew tenderer every day, and she had brought to her the starving, the abandoned, the diseased, and those who were afflicted with the most sickening disorders. Them she not only sheltered, comforted, and nursed, but washed and mended their filthy and ragged garments, and shrank not from putting her mouth to their sores oozing with disgusting matter. Whatever of her time was not taken up by her household duties she spent in prayer, reading godly books, and working.

Sixth Lesson.

SHE used the services of St Francis de Sales as her spiritual adviser, and when she learnt from him what was the will of God, she scrupled not to disregard the wishes of her own father, brother-in-law, and even of her son, whom she left with calm determination, went forth from her home, and founded the holy Institution of the Sisters of the Visitation of St Mary, [at Annecy, upon Trinity Sunday 1610.] She most rigidly kept the rules of this Institute, and loved so well to be poor, that it made her glad to lack even the necessaries of life. She showed herself a model of Christian lowliness, obedience, and all graces. Having settled in her heart still to go up higher and higher towards the Temple of the Lord, she bound herself by a most difficult vow always to do that which she should understand to be best. It was chiefly through her labour that the holy Institute of the Visitation became spread far and wide, and she stirred up the sisters to godliness and love by her words, by her example, and by writings full of Divine wisdom. She duly received the Sacraments before her death, and then, at Moulins, on the 13th day of December, in the year 1641, departed hence, to be for ever with the Lord. St Vincent of Paul, who was far distant, in a vision beheld her soul borne to heaven, and St Francis de Sales coming to meet it. Her body was afterwards taken to Annecy. She was famous for miracles both before and after her death, and Pope Benedict XIV. enrolled her among the Blessed, and Pope Clement XIII. among the Saints. Pope Clement XIV. ordered her Feast-day to be kept by the whole Church upon the twenty-first day of August.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.) At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Assumption.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is the Octave of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Upon the same 22nd day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Ostian Way, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Timothy. He was tried by Tarquinius, Prefect of the city, and suffered a long imprisonment, and forasmuch as he would not sacrifice to idols, he was then hided, put to horrid tortures, and at length beheaded.

At Porto, [in the third century,] holy Hippolytus, Bishop [of that city,] a man of eminent learning, who received the palm of martyrdom under the Emperor Alexander, on account of his illustrious confession of the faith, for the which he had his hands and feet tied and was cast into a deep pit full of water; his body was buried by the Christians at the same place.

At Autun, the holy martyr Symphorian, who finished his testimony in the time of the Emperor Aurelian,[1] because he would not sacrifice unto idols, being first beaten, then imprisoned, and in the end beheaded.

At Rome, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Antoninus. He openly professed himself a Christian, and therefore was sentenced to death by Vitellius the judge, and was buried upon the Aurelian Way.

Likewise at Porto, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Martial, Saturninus, Epictetus, Maprilis, and Felix, and their Companions.

At Nicomedia, under the Emperor Maximian and the President Eutholomius, the holy martyrs Agathonicus, Zoticus, and their Companions.

At Tarsus, [in Cilicia,] under the Emperor Valerian, the holy martyrs Athanasius, Bishop [of that see,] the noble lady Anthusa, whom he had baptized, and two of her slaves, [called Charisius and Neophytus.]

At Rheims, [at the end of the third century,] the holy martyrs Maurus and his [forty-nine] Companions.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Fabrician and Philibert.

At Pavia, the holy martyr Gunifort.

AUGUST 22.

Octave of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Jeanne Frances. Prayer from her Office.

Then of the Holy Martyrs Timothy, Hippolytus, and Symphorian.

---

[1] Said by the Petits Bollandistes to be an error for [Marcus] Aurelius.

Prayer.

MERCIFULLY help us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, and at the pleading of Thine holy Martyrs Timothy, Hippolytus, and Symphorian, stretch forth over us the right hand of Thy favour. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs (viii. 5.)

[CHORUS.] Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, overflowing with gladness, leaning upon her beloved?

[The Bride.] Under an apple-tree did I rouse thee up. There was thy mother ravished, there was she deflowered that bare thee. Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm; for love is strong as death, jealousy is cruel as the grave. The lamps thereof are lamps of fire and flames.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bride.] Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it. If a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned. We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we will build upon her battlements of silver—if she be a door, we will furnish her forth with boards of cedar.

Third Lesson.

[THE Bride.] I am a wall, and my breasts like towers; whence it was that I found "Peace"[1] in his presence. "Peaceful"[1] hath a vineyard at "The-place-of-a-multitude,"[2] he hath let it out unto keepers; the man bringeth for the fruit thereof a thousand pieces of silver. Mine own vineyard is before me.[3] The thousand pieces be thine, O "Peaceful," and two hundred for them that keep the fruit thereof.

[The Bridegroom.] O thou that dwellest in the gardens! they that love thee are listening—cause me to hear thy voice!

[The Bride.] Flee away, my beloved! and be like to a roe or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat of Clairvaux. (4th on the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin.)

THERE is nothing which giveth me keener pleasure or keener fear than to have to speak of the glory of the Virgin Mary. Behold! if I praise her virginity, many virgins come before me, who bear her company, and, after her, are brought unto the King. (Ps. xliv. 16.) If I proclaim her lowliness, there will some be found, few though they may be, who have learnt of her Son to be meek and lowly in heart. (Matth. xi. 29.) If I extol the multitude of her mercies, there are men who are also merciful—yea, and women. But there is one thing wherein—

> "Neither before nor henceforth hath there been or shall be such another,—
> The joy of a Mother was hers, remaining a virgin unsullied."[4]

This is the peculiar grace of Mary, which will never be another's. This standeth alone, and what it is words can never really tell.

Fifth Lesson.

NEVERTHELESS, if thou gazest thoughtfully upon her, thou wilt see that her virgin motherhood was not the only grace which was peculiar to Mary alone, although, at first sight, her graces other than her motherhood seem to have been possessed by others as well as by herself. Where, for example, even among Angels, canst thou find any purity such as that of her maidenhood,—her maidenhood, which was meet to become the shrine of the Holy Ghost, and the dwelling of the Son of God? Again, what must have been the greatness and price of lowliness in one, whose purity and whose guilelessness were what her's were, whose conscience never could or did, ever so gently, reproach her with anything, and who was actually filled full of grace? (Luke i. 28.) Blessed being! how came it that thou couldest be lowly at all, far less, lowly as thou wast? Worthy in good sooth was His handmaiden that the Lord should regard her lowliness (48), that the King should greatly desire her beauty, (Ps. xliv. 13,) and that the unspeakable savour of her perfumes should lure Him from His eternal rest in the bosom of the Father.

Sixth Lesson.

BEHOLD, blessed maiden! with what congratulations we have been able, though from so far off, to follow and cheer thee on thy way as thou goest up unto thy Son! May it be the work of thy kindness to show to the world what grace thou hast found with God, by procuring, through thy holy prayers, pardon for the guilty, health for the sick, courage for the faint-hearted, help and deliverance for the endangered. Yea, in this solemn day of His joy and of the gladness of His Heart, (Cant. iii. 11,) may our Lord JESUS Christ thy Son be pleased to make a special out-pouring of His grace through thee, O merciful Queen! upon all who are calling upon the sweet name of Mary. He is over all, God, blessed for ever. Amen. (Rom. ix. 5.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (x. 38.)

AT that time: JESUS entered into a certain village, and a certain woman named Martha received Him into her house. And so on.

---

[1] The name of the Bridegroom "Sh'lomoh" means "Peaceful."

[2] Baal-hamon, a place near Samaria. Whether it really means "The-place-of-a-multitude" and not rather a shrine of the idol Jupiter Ammon, is at least doubtful.

[3] The meaning seems to be that she afforded in herself a richer feast than any vineyard, and had it always at hand.

[4] From the second Antiphon at Lauds of Christmas Day.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin.)

Why should we speak of JESUS having entered into a village? He entered even into the narrow lodging of a Virgin's womb. "And a certain woman received Him into her house." Happy was that woman whose house the Saviour, Whom she received therein, found clean but not empty. For how can any man say that she was empty whom an Angel hailed as full of grace? Nor this only, but also declared that the Holy Ghost was about to come upon her. And wherefore, thinkest thou, should He come but to fill her unto overflowing? Wherefore, but that she who was full when He came, should, when He came upon her, and the power of the Highest overshadowed her, brim over and overflow upon us?

Eighth Lesson.

LET the Saviour then enter into that house. Let Him oftentimes resort to that home cleansed by the repentant Lazarus, adorned by Martha, and hallowed by Mary to inward contemplation. But perchance some curious enquirer will ask why in the passage now read from the Gospel there is no mention made of Lazarus. I opine that it was to avoid anything which could mar the perfection of this house as a figure [of the womb of Mary.] The Holy Spirit willing to set forth a maidenly dwelling, hath been meetly silent touching repentance, which implieth the thought of evil. Let not this house be spoken of as ever having had any defilement for the broom of Lazarus to seek.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

TIMOTHY came from Antioch to Rome in the time of Pope Melchiades. He had preached the faith of Christ there for a year, when he was thrown into irons by Tarquinius, Præfect of the city. After suffering a long imprisonment he was brought to the idols to offer them sacrifice. He refused right boldly to commit this great sin, and was thereupon savagely scourged, and his raw body covered with quick-lime. He steadily persisted in his testimony under these and other tortures, and at last was beheaded, [in the year 311.] His body is buried upon the road to Ostia, hard by the sepulchre of the blessed Apostle Paul.

On the same day, under the Emperor Alexander, and at Ostia, Hippolytus,[1] Bishop of Porto, on account of his illustrious confession of the faith, had his hands and feet bound, and was thrown into a deep pit full of water, and so received the crown of his testimony. The Christians buried him there.

Also on the same day, [in the year 180,] under the Emperor Aurelian, and at Autun, the young lad Symphorian was tortured in divers ways for professing the same faith. As he was being led to die, he heard his mother crying out to him: "My child, my child! think of life eternal! Look to heaven and to Him That reigneth there! Thy life is not being taken away, but changed for a better." And so, for JESUS Christ's sake, he bravely offered his neck to the executioner.

A Commemoration of these holy Martyrs is made at Lauds. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the holy Apostle Bartholomew.

Upon the same 23rd day of August, were born into the better life—

At Todi, [in Umbria, in the year 1285,] the holy Confessor Philip Benizzi of Florence, a man of eminent lowliness, who greatly spread the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and whose name Pope Clement X. added to the list of those of the Saints.

At Antioch, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Restitutus, Donatus, Valerian, and Fructuosa, along with twelve others, who were crowned with the glory of an illustrious testimony.

At Ostia, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Quiriacus, Bishop [of that see,] the Priest Maximus, the Deacon Archelaus, and their Companions, who suffered under the Prefect Ulpian, in the time of the Emperor Alexander.

At Ægæa, in Cilicia, the holy brethren Claudius, Asterius, and Neon, all martyrs. They were accused of Christianity by their step-mother, in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, and were first severely tortured, and then crucified, under the President Lysias, and so triumphed as conquerors with Christ. After them suffered Donvina and Theonilla.

At Rheims, in Gaul, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Timothy and Apolinaris, who there finished their testimony and gained the Kingdom of Heaven.

At Lyons, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Minervus and Eleazar, with their eight children.

Likewise, the holy martyr Luppus, who was a slave, but free in Christ, and received also the crown of martyrdom.

At Jerusalem, [in the second century,] holy Zachæus, the fourth Bishop from the blessed Apostle James who governed that Church.

At Alexandria, [in the year 300,] the holy Confessor Theonas, Pope [of that see.]

At Utica, in Africa, [in the fifth century,] blessed Victor, Bishop [of Vite, in the territory of Tunis.]

At Autun, [in the seventh century,] holy Flavian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Clermont, in Auvergne, [in the fifth century,] holy Sidonius, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his learning and holiness.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

AUGUST 23.

Eve of the Holy Apostle Bartholomew. St Philip Benizzi, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

---

[1] There is some uncertainty about this Saint's identity, but the person chiefly meant is no doubt the eminent author. He seems, most probably, to have suffered under Decius in the year 251.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Philip was a scion of the noble Florentine family of the Benizzi; from his very cradle he showed signs of holiness. When he had scarcely entered the fifth month of his life, his cries marvellously assumed the form of words, entreating his mother to give some alms to the servants of the Mother of God. While he was a young man at Paris studying letters, but ever of a fervent piety, he stirred up in many the love of our Fatherland which is in heaven. After his return to his own country, the most blessed Virgin appeared to him in a vision, and specially called on him to enter the Order of her Servants, which had then been newly founded. He withdrew himself to a cave on Monte Senario, where he led a life hard as touching the chastisement of the flesh, but sweet with thoughts of the agonies of Christ. Thence he came forth and went through nearly all Europe and great part of Asia, preaching the Gospel, founding Guilds everywhere in honour of the Seven Sorrows of the Mother of God, and extending his Order by the wonderful example of his own holy life.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was forced against his own wishes to undertake the duties of General of his Order, and, in his love of God and of the spreading of the Catholic Faith, sent forth brethren to preach the Gospel of Christ in Russia. He himself went through many cities of Italy, stilled the raging quarrels of the inhabitants, and recalled many of them to their obedience to the Bishop of Rome. He left nothing undone to forward the salvation of his neighbour, and brought the most depraved wretches to leave the slough of their sins, to do penance, and to love JESUS Christ. He was most earnest in prayer, and was often seen to fall into trances while engaged in it. Virginity he so prized that to his very last breath he kept it unsullied by dint of self-imposed and stern penances.

Sixth Lesson.

THERE appeared in him an extraordinary pity towards the poor, whereof it is a famous instance that at the village of Camiliano in the territory of Sienna he gave his own garment to a naked leper who asked him for an alms, and as soon as the said leper had cast it about him he was straightway cleansed of his leprosy. The fame of this miracle spread far and wide, and some of the Cardinals who had assembled at Viterbo after the death of Clement IV., to elect a successor to him, cast their eyes upon Philip, with whose heavenly wisdom they were also acquainted. When the man of God found how things stood, lest he should be constrained to take upon him the burden of the Pastoral Office, he went and hid himself on Montagnate, until Gregory X. had been proclaimed Pope. By his prayers he obtained medicinal powers for the waters in these mountains, which are still called St Philip's Baths. At length, [on the 22nd of August,] in the year 1285, he departed this life in a most holy manner at Todi, while embracing the image of Christ hanging upon the Cross, which he called "his book." At his grave the blind received their sight, the lame walked, and the dead were raised. Pope Clement X., finding him famous for these and many other great signs and wonders, enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.)

The Ninth Lesson is omitted or read as one along with the Eighth.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson.

From John xv. 12, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 575); either the First Lesson only, or the three together as one.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast given us in Thy blessed Confessor Philip a wonderful ensample of lowliness, grant unto Thy servants walking in his steps to set little store by the pleasant things of this life, and to seek ever for that glory which Thou hast prepared in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Eve of St Bartholomew.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that the solemn and Venerable Feast-day of Thine holy Apostle Bartholomew, on the Eve of which we now are, may both encourage and profit us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 24th day of August, were born into the better life—

The holy Apostle Bartholomew. He preached the Gospel of Christ in India, whence he went into the greater Armenia, where, when he had turned many to the faith, he was flayed alive by the barbarians, and beheaded by order of King Astyages, [about the year of our Lord 71,] and so finished his testimony. His sacred body was first taken to the island of Lipari, then to Benevento, and lastly to Rome, to the island in the Tiber, where it is devoutly reverenced by the veneration of the faithful.

At Carthage, three hundred holy martyrs, in the time of the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, among other torments applied to them the President caused a limekiln to be lighted, and producing some hot embers and incense said to them, now choose one of two things, either offer this incense to Jupiter upon these coals, or be thrown into that lime. Then they, being armed with faith, and confessing that Christ is the Son of God, threw themselves in a twinkling into the kiln, where they were burnt to powder among the lime, whence this white-robed army of the blessed has gained the name of the White Lump.

At Nepi, [in the first century,] the holy Bishop Ptolemy, a disciple of the blessed Apostle Peter, by whom he was sent into Tuscany to preach the Gospel, and in that city fell a glorious martyr of Christ; and in the same place holy Romanus, Bishop of the same city, who, as he had been the disciple of holy Ptolemy was also his comrade in his last testimony and sufferings.

At Ostia, [in the year 230,] the holy Virgin and martyr Aurea, who was cast into the sea with a stone tied about her neck. Her body was washed up upon the shore, and was buried by blessed Nonnus.

In Isauria, [about the year 304,] the holy martyr Tation, who was slain with the sword under President Urban, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

On the same day, [at the end of the first or beginning of the second century,] holy Eutychius, a disciple of the blessed Evangelist John. For preaching the Gospel he suffered in many countries imprisonment, stripes, and fire; but at length fell asleep in peace. Also, [in the eighth century,] the holy monk George, surnamed Limniotes; he rebuked the wicked Emperor Leo for breaking the holy images and burning the relics of the Saints, whereupon the Emperor commanded his hands to be cut off, and his head to be set on fire, and so as a martyr he passed away to be ever with the Lord.

At Rouen, [in the year 683,] the holy Confessor Ouen, [Bishop of that see.]

At Nevers, the holy Abbat Patrick.

Vespers of the following.

AUGUST 24.

St Bartholomew, Apostle.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast given unto us this day to be a day worshipful, and holy, and joyful, because of the Feast of Thy blessed Apostle Bartholomew, grant, we beseech Thee, unto Thy Church both to love that which he believed, and to preach that which he taught. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Philip Benizzi. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. iv. 1, (p. 585.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Apostle Bartholomew was a Galilæan. In the division of the world among the Apostles it fell to his lot to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ in hither India. He went thither and preached to those nations the coming of the Lord Jesus, according to the Gospel of St Matthew. When he had turned many in that province to Jesus Christ, and had endured many toils and woes, he came into the Greater Armenia.

Fifth Lesson.

THERE he brought to the Christian faith Polymius the King, and his wife, and likewise the inhabitants of twelve cities. This stirred up a great hatred against him among the priests of that nation. They so inflamed against the Apostle Astyages the brother of King Polymius, that he savagely ordered Bartholomew to be flayed alive and beheaded; under the which martyrdom he gave up his soul to God.

Sixth Lesson.

HIS body was buried at the town of Albanopolis in the Greater Armenia, where he had suffered. It was afterwards taken to the Island of Lipari, and thence carried to Benevento. Lastly, the Emperor Otho III. brought it to Rome, where it was laid in the Church dedicated to God in his name on the Island in the Tiber. His Feast is kept at Rome upon the 25th day of August, and is celebrated by great crowds of people at the Church above mentioned, during the eight days following.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (vi. 12.)

AT that time: Jesus went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. And when it was day, He called unto Him His disciples. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. v. Comment. on Luke 6.)

All they who go up into the mountain are the great and the aspiring. It is not to every man that the Prophet saith: "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion, get thee up into the high mountain! Thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, lift up thy voice with strength." (Isa. xl. 9.) Not with bodily feet, but by high deeds get thee up into this mountain, and follow Christ, that thou mayest be a mountain thyself. Therefore it is that thou findest in the Gospel that none but His disciples went up into the mountain with the Lord. The Lord therefore prayeth, not to entreat anything for Himself, but to obtain somewhat for me. For, albeit the Father had given the Son power over all flesh, that He might give eternal life to as many as He had given Him, (John xvii. 2,) the Son Himself, being found in fashion as a man, (Phil. ii. 8,) thinketh well to pray the Father (John xiv. 16) on our behalf, inasmuch as He is our Advocate with the Father, (1 John ii. 1.)

Eighth Lesson.

"AND continued all night in prayer to God." Herein, O Christian, a pattern is set before thee, an example is given thee, after the which thou oughtest to aspire. What doth it not behove thee to do for thy salvation, when Christ spent an whole night in prayer for the same? What doth it become thee to do, when thou willest some good work, when Christ prayed before He sent forth His Apostles? He prayed first, and He prayed alone. Neither, unless I am mistaken, do we anywhere find that He ever joined in prayer with His disciples. He ever prayed alone. Human desires cannot grasp the counsel of God, nor can any man, however spiritually minded, share the thoughts of God.

Ninth Lesson.

THE Evangelist continueth thus: "And when it was day, He called unto Him His disciples; and of them He chose twelve"—whom He sent forth to help the salvation of men by sowing the seed of the faith throughout the whole world. Consider here the counsel of heaven. He chose out for His mission men, not wise, nor rich, nor noble, but fishermen and publicans, lest He should seem to have converted any to His grace by skill, or bought them with money, or drawn them by the power and authority of greatness, and the simple force of the truth, not the charms of argument, might have the victory.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 25th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Paris,[1] [in the year 1270,] the holy Confessor Lewis, King of France, famous for the holiness of his life and for the glory of his miracles.

At Rome, [in the second century,] the holy martyrs Eusebius, Pontian, Vincent, and Peregrin. Under the Emperor Commodus they were first racked, then stretched with thongs, and afterwards cudgelled, their sides were burnt, and as they remained faithful in the praise of Christ they were hided to death with scourges loaded with lead.

Likewise at Rome, [in the year 286 or in 303,] the holy martyr Genesius; while he was a Gentile he was a player. One while in the theatre, in the presence of the Emperor Diocletian, he was making a mock at the mysteries of the Christians, when the spirit of God came upon him, and he was suddenly turned to the faith, and baptized. The Emperor caused him to be very cruelly beaten with cudgels, then racked, and tormented for a long time by being torn with hooks, and burned with lamps. He stood firm in Christ's faith, saying there is no King but Christ, and if I should be slain for Him a thousand times, ye cannot take Him either out of my mouth or out of my heart. In the end he was beheaded, and so gained the palm of martyrdom.

At Old Seville, in Spain, [in the first century,] holy Gerontius, Bishop [of that see,] who preached the Gospel in that province in the time of the Apostles, and after many toils fell asleep in prison.

At Arles, in Gaul, [in the year 303,] blessed Genesius; he was a registrar who refused to register the wicked edicts which commanded the punishment of Christians, but publicly cast away his tables and professed himself a Christian; for this cause he was taken and beheaded, and being so baptized in his own blood gained the glory of martyrdom.

In Syria, the holy martyr Julian.

At Taragona, [under the Emperor Maximin,] the holy martyr Maginus.

At Constantinople, [in the year 552,] holy Mennas, [Arch-]Bishop [of that see.]

At Utrecht, [about the year 776,] holy Gregory, Bishop [of that see.]

At Naples, [in the year 365,] the holy Virgin Patricia, [daughter of the Emperor Constans I.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from the next Lauds.

AUGUST 25.

St Lewis IX., King of France, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LEWIS IX., King of France, [was born on the 25th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1215.] At the age of twelve years he lost his father. He was brought up under the godly care of his mother, Blanche of Castile. In the twentieth year of his reign he fell grievously sick, and the thought then occurred to him of delivering Jerusalem out of the hands of the Moslems. On his health being restored, he received a banner from the Bishop of Paris, and crossed the sea [to Egypt] with a very great army. In his first battle he put the Saracens to flight, but, a great number of the soldiers perishing by disease, he was himself conquered and taken prisoner.

Fifth Lesson.

THE King afterwards entered into treaty with the Saracens, and he and his army departed in peace. He remained five years in the East, during which he redeemed great numbers of Christians from slavery among the unbelievers, and also brought many of the unbelievers themselves to believe in Christ. Moreover he rebuilt several cities of the Christians at his own cost. Meanwhile, his mother departed this life, whereby he was constrained to return home, where he gave himself up entirely to works of godliness.

Sixth Lesson.

HE built many monasteries, and charitable institutions for the poor. By his alms he relieved the needy, and often visited the sick, for whom he not only provided at his own cost, but waited on them with his own hands with such things as they wanted. He wore a plain dress and constantly chastised his body with hair-cloth and fasting. [In the year 1270] he crossed the sea [to Tunis] to make war again upon the Saracens. His camp was pitched in sight of the enemy, but he was seized with pestilence, and died uttering the words—"I will come into Thy house—I will worship toward Thy holy temple, and praise Thy Name." (Pss. v. 8; cxxxvii. 2.) His body was afterwards carried to Paris, and it is kept and honoured in the famous Abbey Church of St Denys, but his head in the oratory called "La Sainte Chapelle." He was renowned for miracles, and Pope Boniface VIII. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

---

[1] This is a singular statement, as he died at Tunis.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS spake this parable unto His disciples: A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. viii. on Luke.)

It is well ordered that, being about to call the Gentiles, and to command the destruction of those Jews, who would not have Christ to reign over them, He should put forth first this parable; lest it should be said: He had given the Jews no means of becoming better. How can they be asked to repay who have received nothing? That is not a piece of silver of little worth, which, when the woman before mentioned in this Gospel (xv. 8) hath lost, she lighteth a candle, and sweepeth the house, and searcheth diligently until she findeth it.

Eighth Lesson.

WITH a single pound one gained ten and another five pounds. Perchance by him which had the five pounds is signified he which practiseth well, since the body hath five senses, and by him which had the ten, (that is, double the other,) he which is learned and orthodox in the deep things of doctrine, as well as upright in his practical life. Hence also in Matthew we have five talents and two talents—the five talents signifying good practice, and the two talents precept and practice together. So that that which counteth as the greater number is but a fraction of the lesser number.

Ninth Lesson.

AND here we may also understand by the ten pounds the ten words, that is, the Commandments, and by the five pounds, the enforcement of their teaching. But I would that a lawyer should be in all things perfect. "For the kingdom of God is not in word but in power." (1 Cor. iv. 20.) Meet also is it, that, in speaking of Jews, Christ should represent only two as bringing in increased capital, for these talents are talents not of money but of grace, and to increase money by usury is a very different thing from improving heavenly revelation by the like means.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 219,] the holy Pope and martyr Zephyrinus.

Likewise at Rome, [in the third century,] the holy martyrs Irenæus and Abundius. In the persecution under the Emperor Valerian they took the body of blessed Concordia out of the sewer into which it had been thrown, and for so doing were themselves drowned in the same sewer. Justin the Priest drew their bodies thence, and buried them under the ground near blessed Lawrence.

At Vintimiglia, [under the Emperor Maximian,] the holy martyr Secundus. He was a man of good social position, and a captain in the Theban Legion.

At Bergamo, [in the year 286,] the holy martyr Alexander, who was also a soldier of the same legion. As he constantly confessed the name of the Lord JESUS Christ he was beheaded, and so finished his testimony.

Among the tribe of the Marsi, holy Simplicius and his sons, Constantius and Victorian, who were first put to divers torments, under the Emperor Antoninus, and then beheaded, and so gained the crown of martyrdom.

At Nicomedia, [in the fourth century,] holy Hadrian, the son of the Emperor Probus. He blamed the persecution stirred up by Licinius against the Christians, and was therefore by him ordered to be slain; his body was buried at Argyropolis by his uncle Domitius, Bishop of Byzantium.

In Spain, the holy martyr Victor, who was slain by the Moors for Christ's faith's sake, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

At Capua, the holy Confessor Rufinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pistoia, the holy Priest and Confessor Felix.

At Lima, in the kingdom of Peru, holy Rose of St Mary, a Virgin of the Third Order of St Dominic, whose feast is kept upon the 30th day of this present month of August.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst give unto Thy blessed Confessor Lewis a glorious change from an earthly kingdom unto an heavenly, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, for his sake and by his prayers, one day to enter like him into the Presence of the King of kings, even Thy Son JESUS Christ, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration of the following, from the Simple Office for One Martyr, (p. 602,) with the following.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that as the worthy acts of Thy blessed Bishop and martyr Zephyrinus are made unto us a cause of joy, so his ensample may be of betterment. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

AUGUST 26.

St Zephyrinus, Pope and Martyr.

Simple.

All from the Simple Office of One Martyr, (p. 601,) except the following. Prayer throughout the Office, as in the Commemoration at Vespers.

MATTINS.

Third Lesson.

POPE Zephyrinus was a Roman, who was called to govern the Church, [in the year 202,] during the reign of the Emperor Severus. It was he who decreed that they who are to be ordained should be ordained only at a fit time, and in the presence of many clerks and laymen, as was indeed already the custom, and that none but learned men and well known and spoken of should be set apart to that office. He decreed also that when the Bishop celebrated the Holy Liturgy, all the Priests should be present around him. Also he decreed that no Patriarch, Primate, or Metropolitan should pronounce sentence on a Bishop, unless they were charged with the authority of the Apostolic See. He lived as Pope eighteen years. He held four December ordinations, wherein he made thirteen Priests, seven Deacons, and thirteen Bishops for divers places. He received the crown of his testimony under the Emperor Antonine, and was buried on the Appian Way, near the cemetery of Callistus, upon the 26th day of August, [in the year 219.]

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 27th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 1648,] the holy Confessor Joseph, famous for the innocency of his life and for his miracles, who founded the Order of Poor Regular Clerks of the Mother of God of the Pious Schools, for the teaching of godliness and good learning unto children.

At Capua, [towards the end of the first century,] the holy martyr Rufus, Bishop [of that see.] A man of Patrician family, who was baptized along with all his house by blessed Apollinaris, the disciple of holy Peter.

Likewise at Capua, the holy martyrs Rufus and Carpophorus, who suffered under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian.

At Tomi, [about the year 303,] in Pontus, the holy martyrs Marcellinus the Tribune, Mannea his wife, and their sons, John, Serapion, and Peter.

At Lentini, in Sicily, [about the year 256,] the holy Virgin Euthalia, who was slain by her own brother Sermilian with the sword, because she was a Christian, and so passed away to Christ the Bridegroom.

On the same day holy Anthusa the younger received martyrdom by being drowned in a well for Christ's faith's sake.

At Bergamo, [about the year 75,] holy Narnus, who was baptized by blessed Barnabas, and was ordained by him to be the first Bishop of that city.

At Arles, [in the year 542,] holy Cæsarius, Bishop of that city, a man of marvellous holiness and godliness.

At Autun, [about the year 600,] the holy Confessor Syagrius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, [in the year 813,] holy John, Bishop [of that see.]

At Lerida, in Spain, holy Licerius, Bishop [of that see.]

In the Thebaid, [about the year 450,] the holy hermit Pœmon [or Pastor, Abbat of Sceté.]

At San Severino, in the March of Ancona, [in the year 1396,] the holy widow Margaret.

Vespers are of the following. The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

AUGUST 27.

St Joseph Casalanz, Confessor.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to provide a new help for Thy Church by raising up Thine holy Confessor Joseph to train up the young in the spirit of understanding and godliness, we beseech Thee for his sake, and by his prayers, to grant us the grace always so to work and so to teach, that we may finally attain unto Thine everlasting joy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOSEPH Casalanz, called "of the Mother of God," was born of a noble family at Petralta in Aragon, [on the 15th day of September, in the year of Christ 1556.] From his tender years he began to show that fondness for children, and that gift of instructing them for which he was afterwards distinguished. He called them around him when he was still but a child himself, and taught them the mysteries of the faith and godly prayers. He was deeply learned in profane and sacred letters, and it was while he was studying theology at Valencia that he bravely overcame the wiles of a noble and powerful lady and, by a brilliant victory, kept untarnished that virginity which he had vowed to God. He became a Priest in consequence of a vow, and was summoned by many Bishops in the kingdoms of New Castile, Aragon, and Catalonia to help them in their work, wherein he surpassed the hopes of all, correcting depraved manners, restoring the discipline of the Church, and marvellously putting an end to hatreds and bloody feuds. But in obedience to a vision from heaven and many warnings from the voice of God, he left Spain and went to Rome.

Fifth Lesson.

IN Rome he afflicted his body with extraordinary hardness of living, with watching, and with fasting, and so passed his days and nights in prayer, and in the contemplation of heavenly things. He was used to visit the Seven Churches almost every night, a custom which he kept for many years. Having joined several godly Brotherhoods, it was strange how eagerly he relieved the poor by alms and every sort of kindness, choosing especially the sick and the imprisoned. When the city was ravaged by a pestilence, such was the charitable zeal with which he joined in the labours of St Camillus de' Lelli, that besides the great help which he brought to the sick poor, he would even carry the bodies of the dead on his own shoulders to burial. Having understood from God that his call was to bring up children in godliness and good learning, he founded the Order of the Poor Regular Clerks of the Pious Schools of the Mother of God, who profess as the special object of their Institute a singular care for the teaching of the poor. This Institute received the warm approval of Clement VIII., Paul V., and other Popes, and in a short time obtained a marvellous extension through many provinces and kingdoms of Europe. In this work Joseph Casalanz underwent so many toils, and patiently bore so many griefs, that he was proclaimed by all men a wonder of endurance and a very image of holy Job.

Sixth Lesson.

EVEN when he was at the head of his whole Order, and toiling with all his might for the salvation of souls, he never ceased to teach children, especially the poor, to sweep out the school-rooms, and to accompany the scholars home. Thus in spite of broken health he worked on for two and fifty years, with the greatest long-suffering and lowliness. He won that God should glorify him by many miracles worked in the presence of his disciples, and that the most blessed Virgin should appear to him, with the Child JESUS in her arms, blessing them as they prayed. He refused wealthy preferments when they were offered to him. He was eminent for the gift of prophecy, for the power of reading the secrets of the heart, of knowing distant events, and of miracles. The Virgin Mother of God, to whom from his childhood he had had an especial love, and other heavenly ones, honoured him by often allowing him to see them. He foretold the day of his own death, and the restoration and growth of his Order, which seemed at that time to be almost entirely destroyed. He fell asleep in the Lord at Rome, upon the 25th day of August, in the year of salvation 1648, and of his own age the 92nd. An hundred years after his death his heart and tongue were found whole and incorrupt. God glorified him by many miracles even after his death, and he was first crowned by Benedict XIV. with the honours paid to the Blessed, and then solemnly enrolled by Clement XIII. among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: Came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (60th on Matth. xviii.)

"Take heed," saith JESUS, "that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father"—and that for their sake am I come, and this is the will of My Father. Hereby the Lord stirreth us up to guard and save these little ones. Thou seest how mighty are the walls which He raiseth to protect little children, and how great thought and care He hath lest they should be lost, threatening on the one hand the uttermost punishment against whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Him, (6) and promising on the other hand, the highest reward to whosoever shall receive one such little child in His Name, (5) and this His teaching He giveth both in His Own, and in His Father's Name.

Eighth Lesson.

LET us therefore take ensample by the Lord, and let us leave nothing undone for the good of any of our brethren, even for such as seem to us the least and lowliest, but if there be any need that we should serve any, low and outcast though he be, let us serve him; though the thing look hard to us and calling for a great deal of work, let such things, I pray, be looked on as light and easy if they be required for our neighbour's salvation, for of such price and such care did God count his soul to be worth, that He spared not to purchase it, even His Own Son. (Rom. viii. 32.)

Ninth Lesson.

IF it be not enough for our salvation that we should ourselves live well, but we must also seek the salvation of others, what shall we answer, if we neither live well ourselves, nor exhort others? What hope that we shall be saved is then left to us? What more important task is there than to train up minds, and teach to the young how to live? He that is skilled to mould well the minds of children I reckon a nobler workman than any painter or sculptor, or such like artist.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 28th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Hippo, in Africa, [in the year 430,] the holy Austin, Bishop of that city, the eminent Doctor of the Church. He was converted to the Catholic faith, and baptized by blessed Bishop Ambrose. He was the stalwart defender of the faith against the Manicheans and other heretics, and, after manifold toil for the Church of God, he passed away to be rewarded in heaven. His body was first brought from his own city to Sardinia, on account of the barbarians, and afterwards by Luitprand, King of the Lombards, to Pavia, where it is honourably buried.

At Rome, [in the year 116 or 132,] the holy martyr Hermes, a man of illustrious worldly station, who, as is written in the acts of the blessed Pope Alexander, was first committed to prison, and then slain with the sword along with many others, under the judge Aurelian.

At Brioude, in Auvergne, the holy martyr Julian; he was a comrade of the blessed Tribune Ferreolus, and secretly served Christ as a soldier; but in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian he was tried by the other soldiers, who horribly murdered him by cutting his throat.

At Constance, the holy martyr Pelagius, who received his crown under the Emperor Numerian and the judge Evilasius.

At Salerno, the holy martyrs Fortunatus, Caius, and Anthes, who were beheaded under the Emperor Diocletian and the Proconsul Leontius.

At Constantinople, [in the year 340,] holy Alexander, [Arch-]Bishop [of that see,] that glorious old man by the power of whose prayer the judgment of God smote Arius so that he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

In Saintes, [about the year 450,] the holy Confessor Vivian, Bishop [of that see.]

Also, [about the year 395,] holy Moses the Ethiopian, who from a famous robber became a famous Hermit, converted many other robbers, and took them with him to his monastery.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

AUGUST 28.

St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Austin, begin with the Chapter.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent, &c.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRACIOUSLY hear our supplications, O Almighty God, and as Thou hast given unto us the hope that we are of the number of them upon whom Thou wilt show mercy, grant unto us in Thy goodness, that, holpen by the prayers of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Austin, we may experience the fulfilment of Thine accustomed loving-kindness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Joseph Casalanz. (Prayer from his Office.) And then of the Holy Martyr Hermes.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed witness Hermes strong to wrestle and to suffer, grant unto us that nerved by his ensample, we may, for the love of Thee, seek but lightly of the pleasant things of this world, and dread not such things therein as be grievous. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

AUSTIN was born of honourable parents at Tagaste in Africa, [upon the 13th day of November, in the year of our Lord 354.] As a boy his great intellectual sharpness caused him to distance all his companions in learning. When he was living at Carthage as a young man, he fell into the heresy of the Manichæans. He afterwards went to Rome, and was thence sent to Milan to teach Rhetorick. At Milan he often went to hear the sermons of Bishop Ambrose, by whose labours he was drawn to the Catholic Church, and by whom he was baptized [on Holy Saturday,[1] 387,] at the age of thirty-three. After his return to Africa, [in 388,] Valerius, the illustrious and saintly Bishop of Hippo, finding him to unite holiness of life with Catholic profession, made him a Priest, [about the end of 390.] At this time he founded a sort of family of godly men, who lived and worshipped in common with him, and whom he earnestly formed upon the model of the Apostolic life and teaching. The Manichæan heresy flaming forth with violence, he began strongly to attack it, and confounded the arch-heretic Fortunatus.

Fifth Lesson.

VALERIUS, moved by the godly zeal of Austin, [in December 395,] joined him with himself as an assistant in his duties of Bishop: [and dying in the year following, was succeeded by him.] He was lowly and pure in the highest degree. His furniture and dress were plain, and his food of the commonest sort, which he always seasoned when at table by either reading some religious book, or arguing upon some religious subject. His tenderness to the poor was such that, failing all other resources, he broke up the hallowed vessels to relieve their wants. It was his rule not to dwell or be very close friends with any woman, a rule which he did not relax even in the case of his sister and niece, for he was accustomed to say, that although no scandal could arise in the case of such near kinswomen, yet it might arise concerning the women friends who sought their company. He never ceased to preach the Word of God, until he was disabled by heavy sickness. He was always an hard follower after heretics, and by his words and his writings never suffered them to rest anywhere. In great measure, he purged Africa of the Manichæans, Donatists, Pelagians, and other heretics.

Sixth Lesson.

HE wrote so much, and that with such godliness and understanding, that he is to be held among the very chiefest of them by whom the teachings of Christianity have been shown forth. He is one of the first of those whom later theologians have followed, in method, and in argument. He fell sick of a fever what time the Vandals were laying Africa waste, and when they were busy in the third month of besieging Hippo. When he understood that his departure from this present life was at hand, he caused the Psalms of David which most speak the language of repentance to be placed before him, and read them with tears, for he was wont to say that even if a man's conscience were to accuse him of no sin, he should not dare to leave this world except as a penitent. His senses remained vigorous to the last, and it was while rapt in prayer, in the presence of the brethren whom he had exhorted to love, godliness, and all goodness, that he departed for heaven, [upon the 28th of August, 430.] He lived 76 years, whereof he had been a Bishop nearly thirty-six. His body was first carried to Sardinia, but Luitprand, King of the Lombards, afterwards bought it for a great price, and took it to Ticino, where it is honourably buried.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. v. 13, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 631.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 616.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Hermes. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we commemorate the beheading of the holy Baptist John, whom Herod commanded to be beheaded about the time of the feast of the Passover, [in the 31st year of our Lord;] but the memorial of his death is solemnly made on the day when his worshipful head was found for the second time, which head hath since been brought to Rome, and is kept with deep reverence of the people in the Church of St Sylvester, at the Campus Martius, [hence commonly called the Church of S. Silvestro in Capite, that is to say, St Sylvester with the Head of the Fore-runner.]

Upon the same 29th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, [in the year 126,] upon the Aventine Mount, the holy martyr Sabina, who under the Emperor Hadrian was smitten with the sword, and so gained the palm of martyrdom.

Likewise at Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Candida, whose body Pope Paschal I. brought to the Church of St Praxedes.

At Antioch, in Syria, the holy martyrs Nicæas and Paul.

At Constantinople, [in the eighth century,] the holy martyrs Hypatius, a Bishop of Asia, and Andrew, a Priest, who were killed, under the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, for the reverence due to the holy images, after their beards had been filled with pitch and set on fire, and their heads flayed.

At Perugia, [about the year 309,] holy Euthymius, a Roman, who fled thither along with his wife and Crescentius his son, to escape the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and there fell asleep in the Lord.

At Metz, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Adelphus, [sixth] Bishop [of that see.]

At Paris, [about the year 700,] the holy Priest Mederic.

In England, [in the year 697,] holy Seb, King [of the East Saxons.]

At Smyrna, holy Basilla.

In the country of Troyes, the holy Virgin Sabina, glorious for her graces and miracles.

Vespers are of the following.

AUGUST 29.

The Beheading of St John the Baptist.

Greater Double.

Whatever is not given here is taken from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, and Prayer from Lauds, and Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, the same as at that of Zacharias.

A Commemoration is made of St Austin. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c.," (p. 612,) and Prayer from his Office.

Then, of the Holy Martyr Sabina. Prayer, "O God, Who amidst, &c.," (p. 645.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Jer. i. 1, as on June 24, (p. 900.)

First Responsory.

Herod the King sent forth, and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison, for he feared him, for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife, for he had married her.

Verse. For John had rebuked Herod, for Herodias' sake.

Answer. His brother Philip's wife, for he had married her.

Second Responsory.

John the Baptist had rebuked Herod, for Herodias' sake, his brother's wife, whom he had married while his brother was yet alive.

Verse. Herod sent an executioner, and commanded to behead John in the prison.

Answer. For Herodias' sake, his brother's wife, whom he had married while his brother was yet alive.

Third Responsory.

The damsel danced, and her mother charged her, saying: See thou ask nothing but only the head of John. And the king was sorry, for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him.

Verse. The damsel said unto her mother: What shall I ask? And she said:—

Answer. See thou ask nothing, but only the head of John. And the king was sorry, for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And the king was sorry, for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Virgins, written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (ii. 6.)

WE must not hurry by the record of the Blessed Baptist John. We must ask what he was, and by whom, and why, and how, and when he was slain. He was a righteous man murdered by adulterers. The guilty passed upon their judge the sentence of death. Moreover, the death of the Prophet was the fee of a dancing-girl. And lastly, there was a feature about it from which even savages shrink — the order for completing the atrocity was given amid the merriment of a dinner-party.

From banquet to prison, from prison to banquet—that was the course run by the servants of the murderer. How many horrors does this simple crime embrace within its details!

Fourth Responsory.

The righteous shall grow, &c., (p. 595.)

Fifth Lesson.

WHO is there, that, on seeing the messenger hasten from the dinner-table to the prison, would not have forthwith concluded that he carried an order for the Prophet's release. If any one had heard that it was Herod's birth-day, and that he was giving a great feast, and that he had offered a damsel the choice of whatever she listed, and that thereupon a messenger had been sent to John's dungeon—if any one, I say, had heard this, what would he have supposed? He would have concluded that the damsel had asked and obtained John's freedom. What have executions in common with dinners? or death with gaiety? While the banquet was going on, the Prophet was hurried to death, by an order from the reveller whom he had not troubled even by a prayer for release. He was slain with the sword, and his head was served up in a plate. This was the new dish demanded by a cruelty which the Feast had been powerless to glut.

Fifth Responsory.

This is he which knew, &c., (p. 595,) with the last Verse and Answer omitted.

Sixth Lesson.

LOOK, savage King, look at a decoration which suiteth well with thy banquet! Put out thine hand, so as to lose no part of the luxury of cruelty, and let the streams of the sacred blood run between thy fingers. Thine hunger the dinner hath been unable to satisfy, thy cups have not been able to quench thine inhuman thirst—suck, suck the blood which the still palpitating veins are discharging from the place where the neck has been severed! Look at the eyes! Even in death they remain the eyes of a witness of thine uncleanness, but they are closing themselves upon the spectacle of thy pleasures. Those eyes indeed are shutting—but it seems not so much from the laws of natural death, as from horror at the scene of thine enjoyment. The golden mouth, whose bloodless lips are silent now, can repeat no more the denunciation which thou couldest not bear to hear—and still thou art afraid of it!

Sixth Responsory.

The Lord made him honourable, &c., (p. 596,) with the following addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And gave him perpetual glory.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (vi. 17.)

AT that time: Herod had sent forth, and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison, for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife, for he had married her. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (10th of the new Sermons.)

The reading of the Holy Gospel hath set a scene of cruelty before our eyes—even the head of St John in a charger—a message of death sent forth to discharge the bloody commands of one that hateth the truth—a damsel dancing, and a mother rabid—a rash oath sworn in the midst of uncleanness and the revels of a supper—and a wicked fulfilment of the oath so sworn. It befell unto John according to his own saying. For he had said concerning the Lord JESUS Christ: "He must increase, but I must decrease" (John iii. 30,) so John decreased by an head, and Christ's height was made higher upon the Cross. The truth drew hatred. It could not be borne in patience that the holy man of God should utter a rebuke, albeit he sought by his rebuke nothing but the soul's health of them to whom he addressed it. They repaid him evil for good.

Seventh Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast given him, &c., (p. 596.)

Eighth Lesson.

FOR what could he say but that whereof he was full? And what could they answer him but that whereof they were full? He sowed wheat, and found thorns. He had said unto the King: "It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife." Lust had got the better of the King, and he kept a woman whom it was not lawful for him to have, even his brother's wife. But she pleased him, so that his cruelty was lulled. He respected the Saint who had spoken the truth to him. But the horrible woman conceived hatred, and by-and-by brought it forth. When she brought forth, she brought forth a girl, a dancing-girl.

Eighth Responsory.

The Lord hath put on him, &c., (p. 597.)

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Sabina.)

SABINA was a Roman lady, the wife of a distinguished nobleman named Valentine. The Christian faith was taught to her by a maiden named Seraphia. After the martyrdom of this holy virgin, Sabina gathered together her reliques, and buried them with godly service. For this cause she was in a little while arrested, under the Emperor Hadrian, and brought before the Judge Elpidius. "Art thou," said he, "the same Sabina who is so distinguished for her blood and for her marriage?" She answered: "I am; but I give thanks to my Lord JESUS Christ for having delivered me through the prayers of His hand-maiden Seraphia from the troubling of devils." Divers attempts were made to make her change her mind, but when they proved in vain the Præfect passed sentence of death upon her for despising the gods. The Christians laid her body in the same grave in which she had herself laid that of Seraphia, her teacher in the faith.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. For Herod had laid hold upon John, * and bound him, and put him in prison, for Herodias' sake.

Second Antiphon. O Lord my King, * give me in a charger the head of John the Baptist.

Third Antiphon. The damsel danced, * and her mother charged her saying: See thou ask nothing, but only the head of John.

Fourth Antiphon. John had rebuked Herod for Herodias' sake, * his brother Philip's wife, for he had taken her.

Fifth Antiphon. Give me in a charger the head of John the Baptist. * And the King was sorry, for his oath's sake.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Herod sent an executioner, and commanded that John's head should be cut off in the prison. And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

Prayer throughout the Office.

LORD, we beseech Thee that the keeping of this honourable Feast-day in memory of the holy Baptist John, Thy Fore-runner, and Thy Martyr, may be a mean to draw upon us the effectual outpouring of Thy saving help. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Sabina. Antiphon, "Give her, &c.," and Prayer as before.

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds, respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Virgin Rose of St Mary, whose birth into the better life, [in the year 1617,] is mentioned upon the 26th day of this present month of August.

Upon the same 30th day of August, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Ostian Way, under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, the blessed Priest Felix. After being racked he was sentenced to be beheaded; as he was being led to execution he was met by some man who of his own accord professed himself a Christian, and was accordingly forthwith beheaded along with him. The Christians never knew the name of this other, and they accordingly always spoke of him as him who was added, that is, added to the company of the holy martyr Felix in winning of the crown.

Likewise at Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Gaudentia, with three others.

At Rome, [in the year 410,] also the holy Priest Pammachius, [a Roman Senator,] who was eminent for his teaching and holiness.

At Sfaitla, in Africa, [in the year 399,] sixty blessed martyrs, who were slain by the fury of the Gentiles.

At Susa, also in Africa, [in the year 250,] holy Boniface and Thecla, who were the parents of twelve sons, all blessed martyrs.

At Thessalonica, the holy Confessor Fantinus. He suffered much from the Saracens, and was thrust out of the monastery wherein he had lived in marvellous austerity. He led many into the path of salvation, and at length fell asleep in a good old age.

At Meaux, [in the year 670,] the holy Confessor [Fefrash, an Irishman, who came over into Gaul, where he is called] Fiacre, [and founded a monastery, and died towards the end of the seventh century.]

At Trevi, [near Subiaco, towards the middle of the eleventh century,] the holy Confessor Peter, famous for many graces and miracles, who there passed away to be with the Lord, and is held in honour and worship.

At Bologna, [in the year 1026,] the holy Abbat Bononius.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The unbelieving King sent his loathsome messengers, and commanded that John the Baptist's head should be cut off.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from her Lauds. Then of the Holy Martyrs, Felix and the Other. Prayer also from the next Lauds.

AUGUST 30.

St Rose of Lima, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE first flower of holiness which came to full blossom in South America, was the maiden Rose. She was born at Lima, of a Christian father and mother, [upon the 20th of April, in the year 1586,] and was remarkable from her childhood for marks of saintliness. The occasion of her name[1] was a strange likeness to a rose, which her face assumed when she was a babe. To this name she afterwards added that of the Virgin Mother of God, desiring to be called "St Mary's Rose." At the age of fifteen years she uttered a vow of perpetual virginity. As she grew older, lest her parents should force her to marry, she polled her head of all her hair, which was very beautiful. She fasted to a degree almost superhuman, passing whole Lents without taking bread, and eating day by day only five pips of a lime.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE took the habit of the Third Order of St Dominick, and then doubled her former severities. She wore a long and very rough hair-cloth, into which she inserted small pins. She wore day and night under her veil a crown, the inner side of which was armed with pricks. In imitation of the hard steps of St Katharine of Sienna, she girded her loins with a threefold iron chain. She made to herself a bed of knotty sticks, and filled the gaps with broken bits of potsherd. She built herself a very small hut in the farthest corner of the garden, where she gave herself up to thoughts of heavenly things, and to punishing her body with often scourging, starvation, and sleeplessness. But she waxed strong in spirit, and though she often had to fight with evil ghosts, she conquered them, fearlessly prostrated them, and triumphed over them.

---

[1] It was a nick-name. She was baptized Isabel.

Sixth Lesson.

She suffered greatly from painful illnesses, from the maltreatment of the servants, and from slanderous accusations, but still complained that she did not suffer as much as she deserved. For fifteen years she pined in misery from desolation and dryness of spirit, bravely enduring torments worse than any form of death. After this period she began to overflow with consolation, to be enlightened by visions, and to melt with love like a Seraph's. She attained, by the frequency of visions, to a strange personal familiarity with her Guardian Angel, with St Katharine of Sienna, and with the Virgin Mother of God, and she earned from Christ the words, "Rose of My Heart, be thou My bride." She was famous for many miracles, both before and after she departed hence, and was happily transplanted into the Bridegroom's garden, [upon the 24th of August 1617, being aged 31 years.] Pope Clement X. with solemn pomp inscribed her name in the list of holy maidens.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.) The last part is omitted or read as one with the Eighth, to make room for

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

Felix was arrested in the reign of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, on the charge of having embraced the Christian Faith, and was brought to the temple of Serapis. When he was ordered to offer sacrifice, he spat in the face of the brazen idol, which thereupon fell down. When this happened a second and third time in the temples of Mercury and Diana, he was accused of impiety and magic, and tortured upon the rack. It was not long, however, before he was led out to the second mile-stone upon the road to Ostia, to be smitten with the axe. As they were on the way thither, they chanced to meet a certain Christian, who, when he knew that Felix was going to finish his testimony, said aloud, "I live by the same law as he doth; I worship the same Christ Jesus." And therewith he kissed Felix, and they were beheaded together, upon the 30th day of August. What the name of the second person was the Christians never knew, and he is therefore honoured under the title of "Him-who-was-added;"[1] that is, added to the company of the Holy Martyr Felix in winning of the crown.

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the Office of St Rose.

O Almighty God, from Whom cometh down every good and perfect gift, and Who didst cause the dew of Thy grace to fall early from heaven upon this blessed Rose, making the same to blossom in the Indies, as a flower whose loveliness was virginity and long-suffering, grant unto Thy servants, who do run after the smell of her perfumes, worthily themselves to become a sweet savour unto Christ. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Felix and the Other.

Prayer.

We humbly beseech Thy Majesty, O Lord, that as Thou dost make us exceeding glad at the remembrance of Thine holy servants, so Thou wouldest ever shelter us under their prayers. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 31st day of August, were born into the better life—

In England, [in the year 651,] holy Aidan, Bishop of Lindisfarne. Holy Cuthbert, who was then a shepherd lad, saw the soul of Aidan carried up into heaven, and he thereupon left his sheep and became a monk.

At Cardona, in Spain, [in the year 1240,] the holy Confessor Cardinal Raymond, surnamed the Unborn, of the Order of Blessed Mary of Ransom for the Redemption of Prisoners, a man famous for the holiness of his life, and for his wondrous works, whose feast we keep upon the first day of September.

At Treves, [in the year 358,] holy Paulinus, Bishop [of that see.] In the time of the persecution under the Arians he was exiled by Constantius the Arian Emperor on account of his Catholic belief, and when he had been wearied out by changing the places of his exile, even beyond the bounds of Christendom, he at length died in Phrygia, and received a crown from the Lord in reward of his blessed sufferings.

Likewise the holy martyrs Robustian and Mark.

At Trasacco, on the Lake of Celano, the holy martyrs Cæsidius the Priest and his Companions, who were crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Maximin.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, [in the third century,] holy Theodotus, Rufina, and Ammia. Theodotus and Rufina were the father and mother of the holy martyr Mamas. Rufina gave him birth in prison, and Ammia was his nurse.

At Athens, [in the second century,] the holy Aristides, a man illustrious for his faith and wisdom, who offered to the Emperor Hadrian a book upon the Christian religion, containing an exposition of our doctrine, and delivered a most able discourse in the presence of the said Emperor, to prove that Christ Jesus is the only God.

At Auxerre, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Optatus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Nusco, [in the year 1093,] holy Amatus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Monte Senario, hard by Florence, [in the year 1257,] the blessed Confessor Bonajuncta [Manetti,] one of the Seven Founders of the Order of Servants of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who gave up the ghost into the Lord's hands as he was discoursing to his brethren concerning the same Lord's Passion.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

AUGUST 31.

St Aidan, Bishop [of Lindisfarne,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee," &c.

The First Vespers as concerns St Aidan begin with the Chapter, and St Rose is commemorated.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Venerable Bede's History, iii. 3.)

OSWALD, King of the Northumbrians, had been baptized when he was in banishment amongst the Scots, and when he was on the throne he sent to the elders of that nation for a Catholic Bishop. They sent him a man called Aidan, a monk of great meekness and godliness, from the monastery of St Columba in the island of Iona; and to him Oswald gave a Bishop's See in the island of Lindisfarne. Now Aidan could not speak English well, and when he was preaching the Gospel, there could often be seen the lovely spectacle of the king himself interpreting the heavenly word to his own officers and servants.

Fifth Lesson.

AIDAN had no thought of seeking or loving anything in this world. He went about everywhere on foot, and when he met any, if they were heathens, he entreated them to receive the Sacraments of the faith; if they were faithful, he exhorted them to almsgiving and good works. It was from his example that the monks and nuns of that time took the custom of eating nothing until after three o'clock in the afternoon upon all the Wednesdays and Fridays throughout the year except the fifty days of Paschal-time.

Sixth Lesson.

IN this man, saith Bede, there are many things which I recommend for the imitation of my readers. He was a profound lover of peace and charity, of self-control, and of lowliness; his soul had risen above anger and avarice; he looked down upon pride and vainglory. He was very diligent in working and in teaching, firm as became a priest when it was his duty to rebuke the proud and mighty, very tender in comforting the sick and relieving the poor; in short, I may say that it was his use to leave nothing undone which he knew from the Evangelists, or the Apostles, or the Prophets, that he ought to do. He died in the seventeenth year of his episcopate, and was buried in the island of Lindisfarne on the right hand of the Altar, as an honour due to such a Bishop.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Cardinal Raymond, surnamed the Unborn, of the Order of Blessed Mary of Ransom for the Redemption of Prisoners, a man famous for the holiness of his life and for his wonderful works, of whom mention was made yesterday.

Upon the same 1st day of September, were born into the better life—

In the province of Narbonne, the holy Abbat and Confessor Giles.

At Benevento, [in the third century,] the Twelve Holy Brethren Martyrs.

In Palestine, holy Joshua and holy Gideon.

At Jerusalem, the blessed Prophetess Anna, whose holiness is set forth in the words of the Gospel.

At Capua, upon the Aquarian Way, the holy martyr Priscus, who was one of the original disciples of Christ.

At Rheims, in Gaul, holy Xystus, a disciple of the blessed Apostle Peter, who was by him consecrated as the first Bishop of that city, and received the crown of martyrdom in the persecution under Nero.

At Todi, in Umbria, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Terentian, Bishop [of that city,] who was racked and tormented with armed whips by command of the Pro-Consul Lætian, under the Emperor Hadrian, whereafter his tongue was cut out and he was condemned to be beheaded, and so finished his testimony.

At Heraclea, [in Thrace,] the holy Deacon Ammon, and the forty holy Virgins to whom he taught the faith, and whom he led with him, under the tyrant Licinius, to the glory of martyrdom.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Vincent and Lætus.

At Piombino, in Tuscany, the holy martyr Regulus, who was martyred there under Totila, on his landing from Africa.

At Sens, [in the seventh century,] the blessed Confessor Lupus, Bishop [of that see,] concerning whom it is said that one day when he was standing at the holy Altar in the presence of the clergy a precious stone fell from heaven into his chalice.

At Capua, holy Priscus, Bishop [of that city.] He was one of those Priests who, in the persecution under the Vandals, were diversly afflicted for the Catholic faith's sake, and were put on board an old ship wherein they came from Africa to the shores of Campania, and being scattered about those parts, and set over divers churches, they wonderfully spread abroad the Christian religion. His Companions were Castrensis, Tammarus, Rosius, Heraclius, Secundinus, Adjutor, Mark, Augustus, Elpidius, Canion, and Vindonius.

At Aquino, [in the sixth century,] holy Constantius, Bishop [of that see,] famous for the gift of prophecy, and for many other graces.

At Mans, [in the fifth century,] holy Victorius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Baden, in the country of Constance, the holy Virgin Verena.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

FEAST-DAYS IN SEPTEMBER.

On the first day on which Nine Lessons are not read is said the Office of the Dead.

SEPTEMBER I.

St Raymond the Unborn, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Raymond, begin with the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed Confessor Raymond to do a wonderful work in delivering thy faithful ones from bondage to the unbelievers, grant unto us at his prayers to be delivered from the chains of sin, and with all willingness of mind to do those things that are pleasing in Thy sight. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Aidan. Prayer as in his Office, then of St Giles, Abbat and Confessor. Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.) Then of the Twelve Holy Brethren Martyrs.

Prayer.

LORD, let the crown of the Brethren Thy Martyrs rejoice us, and their ensample give nerve to our faith, and their prayers in many ways strengthen us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Raymond is commonly called the Unborn, because his was one of the rare cases in which the child is not brought into the world in the course of nature, but by a surgical operation after the death of the mother.[1] He was the son of godly and noble parents, at Portel, [in the diœcese of Urgel,] in Catalonia. The tokens of his holy after-life appeared even in his childhood. The things that delight children, and the attractions of the world, had no charm for him. He was so earnest in godliness that all men marvelled at his habits of premature old age. As he grew older, he gave himself to the study of letters, but, at the command of his father, turned to farming. He went often to the Chapel of St Nicolas, in the suburbs of Portel, to visit the sacred image of the Mother of God, which is still sought with great tenderness by the faithful. There he poured forth his soul in prayer, and earnestly entreated the Mother of God herself to be pleased to take him for her son, to show him the way wherein it should be safe for him to walk, and to teach him the science of the Saints.

Fifth Lesson.

AND the most gracious Maiden was not deaf to his prayers. From her he understood that it would please her right well, if he would join the Religious Order which had just been founded at her own inspiration, styled "of Ransom" or "of Mercy," for buying up and freeing slaves. As soon as he had received this intimation from her, he went to Barcelona, and entered the Institute so nobly dedicated to love for our neighbour. Once enlisted in the Regular Army, he guarded unspotted for ever the virginity which he had already consecrated to the Blessed Virgin for ever. But he was a bright and shining light of all other good words and works, especially of tender compassion for Christians who were passing a life of grievous bondage in the possession of unbelieving masters. To free such he was sent into Africa, and delivered many. But his money ran short, and as there were still many in imminent danger of denying the faith, he pawned himself. He was enkindled with a most vehement longing for the salvation of souls, and by his exhortations brought divers Mohammedans to Christ. The Moors therefore threw him into close prison, and put him to divers tortures, at last making holes through his lips and locking them together with an iron padlock, which horrid cruelty he long bore.[2]

Sixth Lesson.

ON account of these, and other brave things that he did, he got the name of a Saint far and wide. Gregory IX. was moved thereby to make Raymond a Cardinal of the Holy Roman Church, but in this place of honour the man of God shrank from all outward show, and clung ever tightly to the lowliness that beseemeth a Religious man. He had started for Rome, [in obedience to the command of the Pope,] but had only got as far as Cardona, [six miles from Barcelona,] when he was seized with his last illness, and earnestly called for the strengthening Sacraments of the Church. But his position became critical, and the Priest had not arrived. Then Angels came unto him, clad in the habit of his own Order, and ministered unto him the wholesome Provision for the last journey. When he had taken It, he gave God thanks, and departed hence to be ever with the Lord. It was the last Lord's Day in August, 1240. After his death there was some dispute arose as to where his body should be buried; so they shut it up in a box, and laid it upon a blind mule, and the beast was guided by God to carry it to the chapel of St

---

[1] He was (not born, but) extracted from the womb, in the year 1204.

[2] It was only the fear of losing the price of their slaves that prevented the Muslims from impaling him. See his Life, which is very edifying, in Alban Butler, Aug. 31.

Nicolas, that he might be buried where he had laid the foundations of his nobler life. There was built there a Convent of his Order, and the faithful come together thither from all parts of Catalonia to honour him, and he is famous for divers signs and wonders.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) The last is read as one with the Eighth or omitted to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (Of the Holy Abbat Giles.)

THE holy Abbat Giles was by birth an Athenian, and of Royal lineage. From his youth he showed ever such a love for sacred learning and for works of charity, that he seemed to care for nothing else. When his father and mother were dead, he bestowed his whole inheritance upon the poor. He took off even his own coat, to clothe a poor sick man withal, and the sick man was healed forthwith as soon as he put it on him. As Giles became famous for working miracles, he fled from glory among men, and betook him to Arles, [in France,] to the company of blessed Cæsarius. After the space of two years he departed thence, and went into the desert, for he lived in wonderful holiness for a long while upon the roots of herbs and the milk of an hind, which came to him at regular hours. This hind was chased one day by the King's hounds, and took refuge in Giles's cave. Thereby the King of France was moved earnestly to entreat of him that he would suffer a monastery to be built in the place where this cave was. At the instant desire of the King, he took the rule of this monastery, albeit himself unwilling, and discharged this duty wisely and godly for some years, until he passed away to heaven.[1]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Giles. Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.) Then of the Twelve Holy Brethren Martyrs. Prayer as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Stephen, King of Hungary, adorned with many graces from God, who was the first to turn the Hungarians to believe in Christ, and who was received by the Virgin Mother of God into heaven upon the very day of her Assumption; but by the appointment of Pope Innocent XI. his feast is rather kept upon the 2nd day of September, whereon the Christian army, by the help of this holy King, wrested the strong fortress of Buda [from the Turks.]

Upon the same 2nd day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Maxima, who confessed Christ along with holy Ansanus, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and was beaten to death with cudgels.

At Pamiers, in Gaul, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Antonine, whose relics are kept with great reverence in the church of Palencia in Spain.

Likewise the holy martyrs Diomede, Julian, Philip, Eutychian, Hesychius, Leonides, Philadelphus, Menalippus, and Pantagapa, whereof some finished their testimony by fire, some by water, some by the sword, and some by the cross.

At Nicomedia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Zeno and his sons, Concordius and Theodore.

On the same day, [at Syracuse,] the holy brethren Evodius and Hermogenes and their sister Callista, all martyrs.

Upon the same day is commemorated at Lyons, in Gaul, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Justus, Bishop [of that see,] a man of wonderful holiness of life, gifted with the spirit of prophecy; he resigned his Bishopric, and withdrew himself into the desert of Egypt, along with Viator his Reader. There he led for some years a life bordering upon the life of Angels, and, when the worthy end of his labours came, departed hence to receive a crown of righteousness from the Lord. It was the 14th day of October, but it was upon the 2nd of September that his sacred body was brought to Lyons, along with the bones of his blessed servant Viator.

Also at Lyons, [in the fifth century,] was born into the better life the holy Confessor Elpidius, Bishop [of that see.]

In the March of Ancona, [in the fifth century,] at the town called by his name, which rejoices to own his sacred body, the holy Abbat Elpidius.

On Mount Soracte, the holy Abbat Nonnosus, who by his prayer moved a stone of great weight, and was famous for other wonders.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Office.

SEPTEMBER 2.

St Stephen, [called "the Apostle,"] King of Hungary, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT unto Thy Church, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that even as Thy blessed Confessor Stephen, while he was a King upon earth, was her forwarder, so, now that he is a glorious Saint in heaven, he may be her defender. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Stephen [was the son of Geysa, fourth Duke of the Hungarians, and was born at Gran in the year 977.] He it was who first gave to Hungary the faith of Christ and the name of a kingdom. He obtained the Kingly crown from the Bishop of Rome, and being by command of the same anointed King, he made an offering of his kingdom to the Apostolic See. With wonderful devotion and bounty he founded divers godly houses at Rome, Jerusalem, and Constantinople, and in Hungary the Archbishoprick of Gran and ten other Sees. Toward the poor he had the same love and bounty. He greeted them as though they were Christ Himself, and never sent any one away sorrowing and empty. He spent vast sums in relieving their poverty, and also often parted among them with exceeding tenderness even the furniture of his house. Moreover it was his use to wash the feet of the poor with his own hands, and to go in the night, alone and unknown, to the hospitals, and to wait on them that lay there, and show them other deeds of kindness. It was the reward of these good works that, when the rest of his body decayed, his right hand remained uncorrupt.

---

[1] As to the facts, or rather statements, regarding this Saint or Saints, which are very scanty, confused, and obscure, see Alban Butler, IX. Sept. 1.

Fifth Lesson.

HE passed almost whole nights in earnest prayer, and when totally rapt in the thought of heavenly things, he sometimes became beside himself, and was seen to rise off the ground into the air. In more than one instance he strangely escaped through the power of prayer from rebellion, treason, and the onslaughts of mighty foes. He married Gisela of Bavaria, sister to the holy Emperor Henry, and begat on her Emeric, whom he trained up in such manners and godliness, as are shown by his also becoming a Saint. To carry on the business of his kingdom, he gathered together from all quarters the most learned and godly men, and took nothing in hand without their advice. Meanwhile he entreated of God by the most lowly supplications, offered up in sack-cloth and ashes, that, before he departed this life, he might see all Hungary Catholic. On account of his excellent zeal for the spread of the Faith he is called the Apostle of that nation, and the Bishop of Rome gave to him and to his successors the right to have a Cross carried before them.

Sixth Lesson.

HE had a burning zeal to honour the Mother of God. He built a very great Church in her honour, and made her Patroness of Hungary. In return, the same Virgin received him into heaven, [in the year 1038,] upon the day of her own Assumption, which the Hungarians, by the example of the holy King, call "the Great Lady's Day." His hallowed body yielded the sweetest savour, and reeked with an heavenly liquid, and amid many and divers wonders it was removed by command of the Bishop of Rome into a more noble place, and more honourably buried. Pope Innocent XI. ordered his Feast to be held upon the 2nd day of September, on account of the famous victory over the Turks which was gained upon this day, [in the year 1686,] when the army of Leopold I., Emperor (elect) of the Romans, and King of Hungary, wrested from them, by the help of God, the city of Buda.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xix. 13, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 1012.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is commemorated at Rome the holy Virgin Serapia. Under the Emperor Hadrian she was given over to two young rakes, but they could not deflower her. Neither could she afterwards be burnt with torches, wherefore, by the command of the judge Berillus, she was cudgelled and then beheaded with the sword. She suffered upon the 29th day of July, and was buried by blessed Sabina in her own sepulchre hard by the threshing-floor of Vindician. But the memory of her martyrdom is kept the most chiefly upon the 3rd day of September, when the stone coffin of Sabina and of herself was there set in order and adorned, and the place of prayer was meetly dedicated.

Upon the same 3rd day of September, were born into the better life—

At Corinth, holy Phœbe, of whom the blessed Apostle Paul doth make mention in writing unto the Romans.

At Aquileia, the holy Virgins, Euphemia, Dorothy, Thecla, and Erasma, all martyrs, who, after many torments, were slain with the sword under Nero, and were buried by holy Hermagoras.

At Capua, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Aristæus, Bishop [of that see,] and the little lad Antonine.

At Nicomedia, the holy Virgin and martyr Basilissa, who, at nine years of age, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, by the power of God triumphed over stripes, fire, and wild beasts, under the President Alexander, and gave up her soul in prayer to God.

Likewise the holy martyrs Zeno and Chariton, whereof the one was cast into a vessel of molten lead and the other into a fiery furnace.

At Cordova, the holy martyr Sandalus, [who suffered in the persecution under the same Emperor Diocletian.]

Upon the same day, [in the seventh century,] the holy martyrs Aigulph, Abbat of Lerins, and the monks his Companions, who had their tongues cut out and their eyes put out, and were beheaded with the sword.

At Toul, in Lorraine, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Mansuetus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Milan, [in the sixth century,] deceased holy Auxanus, Bishop [of that see.]

Upon the same day, [at the end of the sixth century,] the holy Stylite Simeon the Younger.

At Rome is commemorated the Ordination as Supreme Pontiff of that excellent man holy Gregory the Great; the compulsion which forced that burden upon him caused the rays of his holiness to shine through all the world, all the clearer in that they shone from an higher spot.

SEPTEMBER 3.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of September is commemorated the death of the holy Law-giver and Prophet Moses, upon Mount Nebo, in the land of Moab.

Upon the same 4th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Ancyra, in Galatia, the three holy children Rufinus, Silvanus, and Vitalicus, all martyrs.

At Châlons, in Gaul, under the Emperor Antonine, the holy martyr Marcellus; he was bidden by Priscus the President to a sinful banquet, and, in his horror at such a feast, he boldly rebuked all them that were there for their serving of idols; wherefore the same President, with strange cruelty, caused him to be buried in the earth up to the girdle, where he remained for three days still giving praise to God, and then yielded up to Him his spirit without stain.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Magnus, Castus, and Maximus.

At Treves, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Marcellus, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day holy Thamel, who had once been a priest of idols, and his Companions, all martyrs under the Emperor Hadrian.

Likewise the holy martyrs Theodore, Oceanus, Ammian, and Julian, who, under the Emperor Maximian, suffered martyrdom by having their feet cut off, and being then cast into a fire.

At Rimini, [in the fourth century,] the holy Deacon Marinus.

At Palermo, [in the year 1160,] the holy Rosalie, a Virgin of that city, sprung of the Imperial blood of Karl the Great, who for the love of Christ forsook her hereditary principality and her palace, and led an heavenly life alone upon the mountains and in caves of the earth.

At Naples, in Campania, holy Candida, who was the first to meet the holy Apostle Peter when he came to that city. She was baptized by him, and in the end she fell asleep in an holy death. There also, [in the sixth century,] holy Candida, called the Younger, famous for miracles.

At Viterbo, [in the year 1252,] the blessed Virgin Rose, [of the Third Order of Friars Minors.]

SEPTEMBER 4.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Lawrence Giustiniani, first Patriarch of Venice, who adorned by graces and by the glory of miracles that Episcopal see which, upon the 5th day of September, he was compelled against his own will to occupy; his birth into the better life is mentioned upon the 8th day of January.

Upon the same 5th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, in the suburb, the blessed martyr Victorinus, Bishop of Amiternum, [now called after him San Vittorino.] He was famous for holiness and miracles, and was chosen to the see of that city by the voice of all the people thereof. Afterwards, under Nerva-Trajan, he was sent, along with other servants of God, to Cutilia, where there is a pool of stinking sulphurous waters, and where the judge Aurelian ordered him to be hung up with his head downwards; this torment he suffered for the space of three days, for Christ's name's sake, and then departed in triumph, gloriously crowned to be ever with the Lord. The Christians carried off his body, and buried it honourably at Amiternum.

At Porto, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Herculan.

At Capua, the holy martyrs Quintius, Arcontius, and Donatus.

Upon the same day holy Romulus, Præfect of the Palace to the Emperor Trajan; he denounced the cruelty of that Emperor against the Christians, and for that cause was first beaten with rods and then beheaded.

At Melitina, in Armenia, the holy soldiers Eudoxius, Zeno, Macarius, and their Companions, one thousand one hundred and four in number, who in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian renounced their military service, and were massacred for confessing Christ.

At Constantinople, the holy martyrs Urban, Theodore, Menedem, and their Companions, seventy-seven in number, of the ecclesiastical state, who under the Emperor Valens, for the Catholic faith's sake, were put on board a ship and burnt at sea.

At the monastery of Sithiü, in the country of Therouanne, [in the eighth century,] the holy Abbot Bertin.

At Toledo, the holy Virgin Obdulia.

SEPTEMBER 5.

St Lawrence de' Giustiniani, Patriarch of Venice, Confessor.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Lawrence was born at Venice, [in the year 1380,] of the noble family of the Giustiniani, and was an exceedingly sober lad even from his childhood. He passed a godly boyhood, and feeling the Divine Wisdom calling him to a pure marriage between his own soul and the Word [of God,] he began to think of becoming a monk. He therefore tried in private some of the exercises of this new warfare, and, among other afflictions of his body, used to sleep upon the bare boards. As he thus sat weighing on the one hand the pleasures of the world, and a marriage which his mother wished to bring about for him, and, on the other, the hardness of the cloister, he turned his eyes upon the Cross of the suffering CHRIST, and said: "Thou, O LORD, art my trust; there hast Thou made my surest refuge."[1] He entered among the Canons of St-George's-in-the-sea-weed, where he devised new tortures and declared war against himself as his own worst enemy. He allowed himself no enjoyment, so that he would not even go into the private garden of the house, neither did he ever go thenceforth into the house of his own father, except when his mother was dying, and he went there with dry eyes to pay her the last offices of a son's duty and affection. His obedience, gentleness, and especially his lowliness were very great. He went out of his way to take the meanest pieces of work about the house. He used to go to the most public places of the city, seeking, not so much for food as for mockery, and bore unmoved and in silence the insults and slanders which were cast upon him. He found his ever-present help in prayer, wherein he became often beside himself and rapt in God, and such was the warmth that burned in his heart, that he stirred up failing comrades to hold bravely on and to love JESUS Christ.

---

[1] Cf. Ps. xc. 9.

Fifth Lesson.

[IN the year 1433] Eugenius IV. named him Bishop of Venice, an office which he very earnestly struggled to avoid, and which he discharged with great honour. He changed in no wise his way of living, but kept always to his beloved poverty in his table, his furniture, and his bed. He kept but a small household, saying that he had another very large one, in Christ's poor. At what hour soever any one came to see him, he was always ready to receive them, he helped all with the tenderness of a father, not refusing to charge himself with debts, that he might have wherewith to relieve misery. When he was asked with what hope he incurred these liabilities, he answered: "With hope in my Master, Who can easily meet them for me." And the Providence of God put not his hope to shame, but helped him amply with unexpected funds. He built several Convents of nuns, for whom his watchful care ordered a more perfect way of living. He laboured much to wean married women from worldly folly and display, and to reform the discipline of the Church and the lives of all. He was indeed worthy that Eugenius should call him in the presence of the Cardinals "the glory and ornament of the Episcopate," and that his successor Nicolas V. should transfer the title of Patriarch from Grado, and create him, [in 1451,] the first Patriarch of Venice.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was eminent for the gift of tears, in which he offered up to God every day the Sacrifice of atonement. When he was so doing one Christmas Midnight, he won to see Christ JESUS in the form of a little Child exceeding fair to look upon. Such was his care of the flock committed to his charge, that it was sometime revealed from heaven[1] that the Commonwealth had been saved by the prayers of her Bishop. He was inspired with the spirit of prophecy, and fore-told many things which no wit of man could have perceived. By his prayers he often put diseases and devils to flight. Though very ignorant of letters, he wrote books which breathe heavenly teaching and godliness. When he fell into his last deadly sickness, his servants got ready a more comfortable bed for the suffering old man, but he turned away from such ease as so different from the hardness of the Cross upon which his Master had died. He ordered himself to be laid upon the planks to which he was accustomed, and when he knew that the end of his life was come, he looked up to heaven and said: "O good JESUS, I am coming to Thee," and so fell asleep in the Lord on the 8th day of January, [in the year 1455.] How precious was his death was attested by this, that some Charterhouse monks heard Angels singing; and that the hallowed corpse, remaining unburied for two months, was whole and uncorrupted, always yielding a sweet smell, and rosy in the face. New miracles took place after his death, whereby Pope Alexander VIII. was moved to enroll his name among those of the Saints. Innocent XII. appointed for his Feast the 5th day of September, being that upon which he had first been enthroned in his Cathedral Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of September is commemorated the Prophet Zachariah, who returned home from Chaldea as an old man, and is buried beside the prophet Haggai.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At the Dardanelles, holy Onesiphorus, a disciple of the Apostles, of whom holy Paul maketh mention in writing unto Timothy. By command of the Proconsul Hadrian, holy Onesiphorus and Porphyry were heavily beaten, and drawn by wild horses, and so gave up their souls to God.

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs the Priest Faustus, Macarius, and ten Companions, who finished their testimony for Christ's name's sake, under the Emperor Decius and the President Valerius, by being beheaded.

In Cappadocia, the holy martyrs the Deacon Cottidus, Eugenius, and their Companions.

In Africa, the holy Bishops Donatian, Præsidius, Mansuetus, German, and Fusculus, who in the persecution under the Vandals were, by command of the Arian King Hunneric, because of their assertion of the Catholic truth, heavily beaten with cudgels, and banished. Among them was also a Bishop named Lætus, a man of great activity and learning, who, after suffering a long and foul imprisonment, was burnt.

At Verona, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Petronius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome, the holy Abbat Eleutherius, the servant of God, of whom holy Pope Gregory writeth, that by his prayer and tears he raised a man from the dead.

SEPTEMBER 6.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the blessed martyr John. When he saw the cruel edicts against the Christians hanging up in the market-place, in the heat of his faith he stretched forth his hand, pulled them down, and tore them up. When this was told to the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, who were then in that city, they ordered all the kinds of torment to be tried upon him; and the man, right noble as he was, bore this with such a cheerful face and heart that he seemed not even saddened thereby.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyr Eupsychius, who was cast into prison under the Emperor Hadrian on the charge of being a Christian. Being shortly liberated therefrom, he forthwith sold his inheritance, and distributed the price thereof partly unto the poor, and partly unto his accusers, as unto benefactors. He was arrested again, and finished his testimony under the judge Sapritius, being mangled, and pierced with the sword.

---

[1] It is said to have been revealed to an hermit in the Isle of Corfu, who told a Venetian nobleman.

At Soli, in Cilicia, the holy martyr Sozon, who under the Emperor Maximian was cast into the fire, and gave up the ghost.

At Aquileia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyr Anastasius.

In the country of Autun, the holy Virgin and martyr Regina, who passed away to Christ the Bridegroom under the Proconsul Olybrius, by whose orders she was imprisoned, racked, burnt with lamps, and lastly beheaded.

At Troyes, the holy martyrs Nemorius the Deacon, and his Companions, who were slain by Attila, King of the Huns.

At Orleans, in Gaul, holy Bishop Evortius, who was first a Subdeacon of the Church of Rome, and was then pointed out by the vision of a dove for Bishop of the aforesaid city.

In Gaul, the holy Confessor Bishop Augustal.

At Capua, holy Pamphilus, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Paris, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest and Confessor Clodoald [St Cloud].

SEPTEMBER 7.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we commemorate the birth of the Most Blessed Mary, always a Virgin, Mother of God.

Upon the same day are commemorated the holy martyr Adrian, and twenty-three others, who finished their testimony at Nicomedia after many sufferings, under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, by having their legs broken, upon the 4th day of March. Their relics were carried by the Christians to Byzantium, where they were buried with reverence and honour, and thence the body of holy Adrian was afterwards brought to Rome, upon the 8th day of September, upon the which day the chief feast is kept in his honour.

Upon the same 8th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Ammon, Theophilus, Neoterius, and twenty-two others.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Timothy and Faustus.

At Gaza, in Palestine, the holy brethren Eusebius, Nestabus, and Zeno, all martyrs, in the time of the Emperor Julian the Apostate. A multitude of the Gentiles fell upon them, rent them, and slew them.

There also the holy martyr Nestor, who was most cruelly tormented by the same raging Gentiles, under the same Emperor Julian, and gave up the ghost.

At Valencia, in Spain, holy Thomas of Villanueva, Archbishop [of that city,] famous for his exceeding charity toward the poor. His name was enrolled among those of the Saints by Pope Alexander VII., and we keep his feast upon the 22nd day of this present month of September.

At Frisingen, holy Corbinian, first Bishop of that city. He was ordained and sent forth to preach the Gospel by Pope Gregory II. He bore much fruit in Gaul and in Germany, and at length fell asleep in peace, famous for graces and wonders.

SEPTEMBER 8.

The Birth of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double of the Second Class.

Whatever is not specially given here is taken from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Verse and Answer, and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Let us tell again of the right worthy Birth of the glorious Virgin Mary, who gained the honour of Motherhood without losing the guilelessness of a Maid.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep the Birth-day of the Virgin Mary. * Let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Song of Songs, i. 1, (p. 994.)

First Responsory.

This day was the Blessed Virgin Mary born of the lineage of David. The same is she through whom the salvation of the world hath been manifested before the eyes of all believers. This is she whose glorious life hath given light to the world.

Verse. Let us keep with rejoicing the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. The same is she through whom the salvation of the world hath been manifested before the eyes of all believers. This is she whose glorious life hath given light to the world.

Second Responsory.

Let us keep right heartily the Birth-day of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. Let us keep with right hearty rejoicing the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. That she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Third Responsory.

Let us tell again of the right worthy Birth of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Verse. Let us keep right earnestly the Birth-day of the most Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (18*th on the Saints.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren, the day for which we have longed, the Feast-day of the Blessed and Worshipful and Alway-Virgin Mary, that day is come. Let our land laugh and sing with merriment, bathed in the glory of this great Virgin's rising. She is the flower of the fields on which the priceless lily of the valleys hath blossomed. This is she whose delivery changed the nature that we draw from our first parents, and cleansed away their offence. At her that dolorous sentence which was pronounced over Eve ended its course; to her it was never said: "In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children." (Gen. iii. 16.) She brought forth a Child, even the Lord, but she brought Him forth, not in sorrow, but in joy.

Fourth Responsory.

This day was born the glorious Virgin Mary, a child of the seed of Abraham, a daughter of the tribe of Judah, a Princess of the lineage of David. This is she whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Verse. This day was the Blessed Virgin Mary born of the lineage of David.

Answer. This is she whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Fifth Lesson.

EVE wept, but Mary laughed. Eve's womb was big with tears, but Mary's womb was big with gladness. Eve gave birth to a sinner, but Mary gave birth to the sinless One. The mother of our race brought punishment into the world, but the Mother of our Lord brought salvation into the world. Eve was the foundress of sin, but Mary was the foundress of righteousness. Eve welcomed death, but Mary helped in life. Eve smote, but Mary healed. For Eve's disobedience, Mary offered obedience; and for Eve's unbelief, Mary offered faith.

Fifth Responsory.

Let us keep with rejoicing the Birthday of the Blessed Mary, that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. With all our heart and with all our soul let us sing praise to Christ on this the solemn Feast-day of Mary the mighty Mother of God.

Answer. That she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Sixth Lesson.

LET Mary now make a loud noise upon the organ, and between its quick notes let the rattling of the Mother's timbrel be heard. Let the gladsome choirs sing with her, and their sweet hymns mingle with the changing music. Hearken to what a song her timbrel will make accompaniment. She saith: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. For He hath regarded the lowliness of His hand-maiden, for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed—for He That is Mighty hath done to me great things." The new miracle of Mary's delivery hath effaced the curse of the frail backslider, and the singing of Mary hath silenced the wailing of Eve.

Sixth Responsory.

Thy Birth, O Virgin Mother of God, was a message of joy to the whole world, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE Book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comm. on Matth.)

In Isaiah (liii. 8) we read: "Who shall declare His generation?" Let us not think that there is any contradiction between the Prophet and the Evangelist, because the Prophet saith that this thing cannot be done, and the Evangelist beginneth by doing it. The one speaketh of the generation of the Divine [Word by the Eternal Father,] the other of the [family in which the] Incarnation [took place.] Matthew beginneth with carnal things, that by learning of men we may go on to learn of God.

"The Son of David, the son of Abraham." The reversal of the order in these clauses is a needful change. If Abraham had been put first and David afterwards, Abraham would have had to be taken again, in order to marshal the pedigree properly.

Seventh Responsory.

All generations shall call me blessed, for the Lord That is Mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name.

Verse. And His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation.

Answer. For the Lord That is Mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name.

Eighth Lesson.

MATTHEW first calleth Christ the Son of these twain—Abraham and David—without making mention of the others, because unto these twain only was promise of Christ made; unto Abraham, where it is said: "In thy seed" (that is, in Christ) "shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," (Gen. xxii. 18;) and unto David, in the words: "Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne." (Ps. cxxxi. 11.)

"And Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamàr." It is to be remarked that in the genealogy of the Saviour none of the holy women are named, but those women only are named against whom the Scripture hath to say something amiss. He Who came to save sinners was born of sinners, that He might wash away all sin. Afterwards are named Ruth, who was a Moabitess, and Bathsheba, who had been the wife of Uriah.[1]

Eighth Responsory.

O holy Virgin Mary, happy indeed art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God. May all that keep thine holy Birth-day feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Even Christ our God.

Ninth Lesson. (For the holy Martyr Adrian.)

ADRIAN was a man who was employed by the Emperor Maximian to persecute the Christians of Nicomedia. The firmness with which they owned their faith and endured their torments oftentimes excited his wonder, and at last so powerfully moved him that he himself turned to Christ. For this he was thrown into prison along with three-and-twenty other Christians. There he was visited by Natalia his wife, who also herself already had believed in Christ, and by her urged on to lift up his testimony. When he was brought out of prison he was lashed until his bowels fell out. His shins were then broken, and his hands and feet cut off, whereafter, in company with many others, he brought to an happy end the conflict of martyrdom.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. This day was born the glorious Virgin Mary, * a child of the seed of Abraham, a daughter of the tribe of Judah, a Princess of the lineage of David.

Second Antiphon. This day is the Birth-day of the holy Virgin Mary, * whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Third Antiphon. Mary was a maiden of illustrious birth, * the daughter of a Kingly race. We earnestly entreat her to help our minds and souls by her prayers.

Fourth Antiphon. With all our heart and with all our soul let us sing praise to Christ * on this the solemn Feast-day of Mary, the mighty Mother of God.

Fifth Antiphon. Let us keep with rejoicing the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary, * that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. This day is the Birth-day of the holy Virgin Mary.

Answer. Whose famous life still sheddeth lustre upon all the Churches.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Let us this day keep solemnly the Birth-day of Mary, Mother but still Maiden, her Birth, a step toward the loftiness of her throne. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT unto us Thy servants, we beseech Thee, O Lord, the gift of Thy heavenly grace, unto whom Thou didst give the first sight of a Saviour as the offspring of a Blessed Virgin, and grant that this Feast, which they keep in honour of the same Virgin, may avail them unto the increase of peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds only, a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyr Adrian, Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c." (p. 599.)

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds respectively.

The last verses of all the Hymns are altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Verse at Prime, "Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Dorotheus and Gorgonius. They stood high at the Court of the Emperor Diocletian. They denounced in his presence the persecution which he was raising against the Christians, wherefore he caused them to be hung up, and their whole bodies torn with lashes, then to have the skin taken off their bowels, to be covered with vinegar and salt, and cooked upon a grid-iron, and at the last strangled. In after times the body of the blessed Gorgonius was brought to Rome, and laid first upon the Latin Way, and afterwards in the Basilica of St Peter.

In the land of the Sabines, at the 30th milestone from the city of Rome, the holy martyrs Hyacinth, Alexander, and Tiburtius.

At Sebaste, under the Emperor Licinius, the holy soldier Severian. He often visited the forty martyrs while they were in prison, whereupon Lysias the President ordered him to be hung up with a stone tied to his feet, and to be beaten and torn with stripes and lashes, under the which torment he gave up the ghost.

On the same day, the holy martyr Straton, who, for Christ's sake, was bound to two trees and torn asunder, and so finished his testimony.

Likewise the holy brethren Rufinus and Rufinian, both martyrs.

At Rome, [in the year 701,] the holy Confessor Pope Sergius I.

In the country of Therouanne, [in the seventh century,] holy Omer, Bishop [of that see.]

In Ireland, [in the sixth century,] the holy Abbat Ciaran, [founder of Clonmacnois.]

At Cartagena, in South America, [in the year 1654,] the holy Confessor Peter Claver, of the Society of Jesus, who toiled for more than forty years among the negro slaves with marvellous self-sacrifice and exceeding love, and of them with his own hand caused nearly three hundred thousand to be born again in Christ. His name was enrolled by the Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. among those of the Saints.

[1] Rahab might be added, v. 5.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Thy Birth, O Virgin Mother of God, was a message of joy to the whole world, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, Who hath taken away the curse and brought a blessing, confounded death, and given unto us everlasting life.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyr Gorgonius.

Prayer.

O LORD, may Thine holy servant Gorgonius gladden us by his prayers, and make this his blessed Festival to be unto us indeed a day of rejoicing. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Note on the pedigree of the Blessed Virgin. This subject is repeatedly treated of in the Office during this Octave, and it is therefore thought that it may be a convenience to the reader to see here at a glance what the Breviary says, here and elsewhere, upon it. What the Breviary does not enter upon is not entered upon here, e.g., the exact relationship of Mary of Cleophas, or of Elizabeth to the Blessed Virgin. The Scriptural names are given in small capitals; those found only in the Office, in ordinary type.

Lord's Day within the Octave of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin.

Feast of the holy Name of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633), except the following.

Note. If the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin fall upon a Saturday, the Vespers on that day are simply the Second Vespers of the Feast, with Commemorations of the Sunday and of St Gorgonius, but nothing concerning the Name of Mary.

On all other days within the Octave, even upon the Octave day itself, upon which this Feast of the Name may fall, no notice of the Birth-day is taken in the Office of the Name.

If this Feast and that of the Seven Sorrows fall upon the same day, the Feast of the Sorrows is moved on to the next Sunday which is not occupied by a Double of the First or Second Class.

A Commemoration of the Sunday is made at both Vespers and at Lauds.

At the beginning of the Martyrology on the preceding Saturday is read—

On the morrow we keep the feast of the most holy Name of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which feast Pope Innocent XI. ordered to be kept upon the Lord's Day within the Octave of the Birth of the aforesaid Blessed Virgin Mary, in thanksgiving for the famous victory which was won by the Christians over the Turks when they were threatening Vienna, in Austria.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that Thy faithful people, who rejoice in the Name and keeping of the most holy Virgin Mary, may by her Motherly prayers be freed from all ills upon earth, and worthily attain unto Thine everlasting joy in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Proverbs viii. 12, and ix., (p. 635.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (Second Homily on Luke i. 26.)

IT is said: "And the virgin's name was Mary." Let us speak a few words upon this name, which signifieth, being interpreted, "Star of the Sea,"[1] and suiteth very well the Maiden Mother, who may very meetly be likened unto a star. A star giveth forth her rays without any harm to herself, and the Virgin brought forth her Son without any hurt to her virginity. The light of a star taketh nothing away from the star itself, and the birth of her offspring took nothing away from the Virginity of Mary. She is that noble star which was to come out of Jacob, (Num. xxiv. 17,) whose brightness still sheddeth lustre upon all the earth, whose rays are most brilliant in heaven, and shine even unto hell, lighting up earth midway, and warming souls rather than bodies, fostering good and scaring away evil. She, I say, is a clear and shining star, twinkling with excellencies, and resplendent with example, needfully set to look down upon the surface of this great and wide sea.

Fifth Lesson.

O THOU, whosoever thou art, that knowest thyself to be here not so much walking upon firm ground, as battered to and fro by the gales and storms of this life's ocean, if thou wouldest not be overwhelmed by the tempest, keep thine eyes fixed upon this star's clear shining. If the hurricanes of temptation rise against thee, or thou art running upon the rocks of trouble, look to the star, call on Mary. If the waves of pride, or ambition, or slander, or envy toss thee, look to the star, call on Mary. If the billows of anger or avarice, or the enticements of the flesh beat against thy soul's bark, look to Mary. If the enormity of thy sins trouble thee, if the foulness of thy conscience confound thee, if the dread of judgment appal thee, if thou begin to slip into the deep of despondency, into the pit of despair, think of Mary.

---

[1] The signification of the word MRYM, or Mary, has been the subject of many theories, of which the Breviary gives two, viz., "Lady" and "Star-of-the-Sea"—Stella Maris. The latter was probably taken by St Bernard from what seems to have been then and is now the text of St Jerome. But it may be remarked that if the word MRYM be Hebrew (which is itself uncertain), the meaning lying upon the surface would be (not Stella but) Stilla Maris, "Drop-of-the-Sea" or "Wild-sea-spray," a very elegant name for a virgin, as implying the idea of sparkling freshness and incorruptibility. And that St Jerome really wrote Stilla instead of Stella seems the more probable, because he expressly rejects the meaning Illuminatrix Maris, "Light-of-the-Sea." See this very blunder of copyists as early as the time of St Gregory, p. 631, footnote.

Sixth Lesson.

IN danger, in difficulty, or in doubt, think on Mary, call on Mary. Let her not be away from thy mouth or from thine heart, and that thou mayest not lack the succour of her prayers, turn not aside from the example of her conversation. If thou follow her, thou wilt never go astray. If thou pray to her, thou wilt never have need to despair. If thou keep her in mind, thou wilt never wander. If she hold thee, thou wilt never fall. If she lead thee, thou wilt never be weary. If she help thee, thou wilt reach home safe at the last—and so thou wilt prove in thyself how meetly it is said: "And the virgin's name was Mary." (Here ends St Bernard.)

Particular honours were already paid to this worshipful name in divers parts of the Christian world, but the Bishop of Rome, Innocent XI., ordered this Feast in honour of it to be held every year throughout the whole Church, upon the Lord's Day within the Octave of the Birthday of the Blessed Virgin Mary, as an everlasting thanksgiving for the great blessing that, under her protection, the brutal Sultan of the Turks, who was trampling upon the necks of the Christian population, was thoroughly beaten before the walls of Vienna, [upon the 12th day of September, in the year 1683.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop [of Ravenna.] (142nd on the Annunciation.)

Dearly beloved brethren, ye have this day heard how an Angel treated with a woman touching the regeneration of mankind. Ye have heard how it was arranged that man should return to life by the same mean whereby he had fallen into death. The Angel treateth, treateth with Mary concerning salvation, because an angel had treated with Eve concerning destruction. Ye have heard how an Angel set about to raise with unspeakable building a temple of the Divine Majesty out of the dust of the earth. Ye have heard how by a mystery which cannot be understood, God got a place on earth and man a place in heaven. Ye have heard how by a working hitherto unheard of, God and man are joined together in one Body. Ye have heard how at the message of an angel, the weak nature whereof our flesh is sharer, became strong to bear the whole glory of the Godhead.

Eighth Lesson.

THEN, lest the frail clay of humanity should break down under the weight of God's work, and in Mary the tender stem should snap, which was about to bear the fruit of all mankind, the Angel's first words were a preventive against fear. "And the Angel said unto her: Fear not, Mary." Even before the matter is revealed, the exalted station of this Virgin is made clear by her very name, for the name Mary is an Hebrew word, and signifieth "Lady." The Angel therefore greeteth her as "Lady," that the Mother of the Lord may lay aside the fearfulness of His handmaiden, whom the will of her own Offspring had made to be born and to be called a "Lady." "Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace." He that hath found grace, need fear no more. "Thou hast found grace."

Ninth Lesson, the whole or first part of the Sunday Homily.

SEPTEMBER 9.

Second Day within the Octave of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (18th on the Saints.)

MARY is happy, with joyful wonder at her own Motherhood, and her joy is that she is fruitful by the Holy Ghost. She is not alarmed to find herself an unwedded mother, but still is in joyful wonder at her Motherhood. Oh woman blessed above women, who doth nowise know a man, and yet compasseth a man in the womb. Mary compasseth a man by believing the Angel, since Eve lost a man by saying "Yea" to the serpent. Happy obedience, glorious grace! which yielded lowly belief, and embodied in her Him Who created the heavens. Hence she earned that glory which He afterward increased. "Behold," saith she, "from henceforth, all generations shall call me blessed."

Fifth Lesson.

O BLESSED Mary, who is able enough to thank and to praise thee, thou, who by once saying "Be it unto me," hast arisen to help a lost world? What blessings shall weak man utter upon thee, thou, who, by thine own one treaty, hast given unto him to find the entrance into new life? Receive these far and random, these unworthy thanksgivings, and, since thou receivest our prayers, by thy prayers obtain pardon for our sins. Let our supplications come into thine hallowed presence, and give us in return the medicine for our healing.

Sixth Lesson.

If we ask through thee, make our request forgiven; what we ask honestly, make obtainable. What we offer, do thou receive; what we pray for, do thou grant; what we fear, do thou get remitted—for thou art the sinner's only hope.[1] Through thee we hope for the remission of our sins; in thee, O thou most blessed! we look for reward. O Holy Mary, be thou an help to the helpless, a strength to the fearful, a comfort to the sorrowful; pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God; may all that keep thine holy Birth-day feel the might of thine assistance.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comment. on Matthew.)

"And Jacob begat Joseph." This is one of the passages which the Emperor Julian [the Apostate] put forward against us as an instance of mutual contradiction between the Evangelists, for, whereas Matthew here saith that "Jacob begat Joseph," Luke (iii. 23,) saith that "Joseph was the son of Heli." Julian understood not the use of Scripture, and that the one was the father of Joseph by nature, and the other according to the Law. We know that Moses, by the command of God, ordained: "If brethren dwell together, and one of them die and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without, unto a stranger; her husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her. And it shall be, that the first-born which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israël," (Deut. xxv. 5, 6.) "Joseph, the husband of Mary." Let not this title of husband lead thee to form any thought of [completed] wedlock, but remember the use of Scripture to speak of Bridegroom and Bride as Husband and Wife.

Eighth Lesson.

"And from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations." Count from Jechonias to Joseph, and thou wilt find only thirteen generations. Christ therefore Himself is to be counted as the fourteenth generation. "Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise."

The careful reader will say: Since Joseph was not the father of the Lord Saviour, what concern with the Lord hath Joseph's pedigree? To this we answer, first, that it is not the use of Scripture to give the pedigrees of women; and, secondly, that Joseph and Mary were of the same family, so that they were bound by the law to marry, and to be both enrolled at Bethlehem, as scions of one and the same stock.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Gorgonius.)

Gorgonius was a native of Nicomedia, and one of the chamberlains of the Emperor Diocletian. He, with the help of a fellow-chamberlain named Dorotheus, brought all the other chamber-servants to believe in Christ. Both of them one day saw a martyr hideously tortured in the presence of Diocletian, and the ensample of his testimony roused them both up to desire the same, and they both said: "Why, O Emperor, dost thou punish this man only, by condemning an opinion which we share with him? His belief is our belief. Our will is the same." The Emperor thereupon ordered them to be bound and scourged till their bodies were perfectly flayed, and a mixture of vinegar and salt poured into the wounds. Soon after he commanded them to be bound again and grilled on bars over hot coals. Finally, after a variety of tortures, they were hanged. The body of the holy Gorgonius was some time brought to Rome,[1] and buried between the two laurel-trees upon the Latin Way, but, afterwards, during the Pontificate of Gregory IV., it was brought into the Church of the Prince of the Apostles.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyr. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Tolentino, in the March of Ancona, the holy Confessor Nicholas, of the Order of Hermits of St Austin.

In Africa, the holy Bishops Nemesian, Felix, Lucius, another also named Felix, Litteus, Polyan, Victor, Jader, Dativus, and others, who, when the storm of persecution broke under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, at their first steadfastness in confessing Christ were heavily cudgelled, bound, and condemned to penal servitude in the mines, where they finished their glorious contending.

At Chalcedon, the holy martyrs Sosthenes and Victor, who were condemned to be burnt by Priscus the Proconsul of Asia, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, after they had overcome bonds and beasts; then they saluted one another with an holy kiss, and gave up their souls in prayer to God.

In Bithynia, the holy sisters Menodora, Metrodora, and Nymphodora, Virgins, who passed into glory crowned with martyrdom, under Maximian the Emperor and Fronto the President.

Likewise the holy martyrs Apellius, Luke, and Clement, [who were among the first disciples of the Lord Christ.]

At Liege, in Belgium, [in the seventh century,] the holy martyr Theodard, the Bishop, who laid down his life for the sheep, and shone with the grace of miracles after his death.

At Rome, [in the fifth century,] the blessed Confessor Pope Hilary.

At Compostella, holy Bishop Peter, famous for many graces and miracles.

In the city of Albi, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Salvius, Bishop [of that see.]

---

[1] Quia tu es spes unica peccatorum.

[1] Alban Butler says the Roman Gorgonius is different from the Nicomedian, whose body was thrown into the sea. Vol. ix., Sept. 9.

At Novara, [in the sixth century,] holy Agapius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Constantinople, [in the fifth century,] the holy Virgin Pulcheria, Empress of the Romans, famous for godliness.

Vespers are of the following.

SEPTEMBER 10.

St Nicholas of Tolentino, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following. Prayer throughout, "O Lord, mercifully hear, &c.," (p. 626).

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Nicholas is called Nicholas of Tolentino, because he lived in that town for most part of his life. He was born at St Angelo, [a place near Fermo,] in the March of Ancona, [about the year 1245.] His parents were godly people, and in their desire to have children, vowed and made a pilgrimage to the shrine of St Nicholas at Bari, where they were assured of their wish, and therefore gave the name of Nicholas to the son whom they received. From his childhood the lad gave many good signs, but especially as regarded abstinence. In his seventh year, in imitation of his blessed name-sake, he began to fast upon several days in the week, which custom he always kept, and was content with only bread and water.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER he reached man's estate, he enlisted himself in the army of the clergy, and was preferred to a Canonry. One day he chanced to hear a sermon upon contempt of the world delivered by a preacher of the Order of Hermits of St Austin, and was so moved by it that he forthwith entered that Order. As a Friar he was most strictly observant of that way of life. He subdued his body with rough clothing, stripes, and an iron chain. He never ate meat, and seldom any relish to his meals. And he was a burning and shining light of love, lowliness, long-suffering, and all other graces.

Sixth Lesson.

HE persisted in constant and earnest prayer, notwithstanding many troubles from the assaults of Satan, who sometimes even flogged him. Every night for six months before his death he heard Angels singing with such sweetness, that it was a fore-taste of the happiness of heaven, and he would often repeat the words of the Apostle: "I have a desire to depart and to be with Christ" (Phil. i. 23.) Lastly, he foretold to his brethren the day of his death, which was the 10th day of September [1306.] After his death also he was famous for miracles, and when due investigation had been made thereof, Pope Eugenius IV. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Birth of the Blessed Virgin.

The verse in the Responsory at Prime, and the last verse of the Hymns at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None are altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the old Salarian Way, at the cemetery of Basilla, the holy brethren Protus and Hyacinth, both martyrs. They were eunuchs who belonged to blessed Eugenia. Under the Emperor Gallienus they were arrested on the charge that they were Christians, and, forasmuch as they could not be made to offer sacrifice, they were first grievously beaten, and then beheaded.

At Laodicea, in Syria, the holy martyrs Diodorus, Diomede, and Didymus.

At Leon, in Spain, [in the middle of the sixth century,] the holy martyr Vincent, Abbat [of the monastery of St Claudius.]

In Egypt, holy Paphnutius, Bishop [in the Thebaid.] He was one of those Confessors who under the Emperor Galerius Maximinus had his right eye put out and his left hough cut, and was condemned to penal servitude in the mines. Under the Emperor Constantine the Great he strove stalwartly for the Catholic faith against the Arians, and at length fell asleep in peace, crowned with many crowns.

At Lyons, [toward the close of the fifth century,] deceased the holy [Confessor] Patient, Bishop [of that see.]

At Vercelli, [in the sixth century,] the holy [Confessor] Emilian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Alexandria, [in the fifth century,] holy Theodora, who, having carelessly transgressed and deeply repented, continued unknown in the holy habit in wondrous self-denial and long-suffering, until her death.

At Second Vespers another Commemoration of the Birth of the Blessed Virgin, and then of the Holy Martyrs Protus and Hyacinth.

Prayer.

MAY the precious testimony of Thy blessed witnesses Protus and Hyacinth cheer us, O Lord, and their gracious prayers shield us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Last verse of the Hymn at Compline altered as before.

SEPTEMBER 11.

Fourth Day within the Octave of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following:

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux,] (on Apoc. xii. 1.)

“THE Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, a woman shall compass a man.” (Jer. xxxi. 22.) And this man is no other than Christ, of Whom it is said: “Behold the Man Whose name is The Day-spring” (Zech. vi. 12.) In heaven also hath the Lord created a new thing, “a woman clothed with the sun.” She also hath crowned Him and hath earned from Him a crown in return. “Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold King Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him.” (Cant. iii. 11.) And again go forth now, and behold the Queen with the crown wherewith her Son crowned her. “And upon her head,” saith St John, “a crown of twelve stars.”

Fifth Lesson.

THAT is an head worthy to be crowned with stars whose own glory is greater than theirs, and rather giveth than receiveth lustre from them. Why should not she have stars for her crown, who hath the sun for her clothing? “And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.” (Ecclus. l. 8.) The left hand of her Bridegroom is under her head, and his right hand doth embrace her. (Cant. ii. 6.) Who shall appraise these starry jewels whereof is made the Queenly crown of Mary?

Sixth Lesson.

WHAT starry splendour flasheth in the birth of Mary? Manifestly, she was a daughter of Kings, a child of the seed of Abraham, a Princess of the lineage of David. But whereas this is but too little, add that she is known to have been granted by God to that race, on account of the singular privilege of holiness which the same possesseth, to have been promised from heaven long before her fathers were born, to have been foreshadowed by mysterious wonders, and foretold by the utterances of Prophets. She was the rootless rod of Aaron the Priest, which yet budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds. (Num. xvii. 8.) She was the fleece of Gideon, which was put in the floor, and whereon only there was dew when it was dry upon all the earth beside. (Judges vi. 37, 38.) She was the gate which Ezekiel saw, which looked toward the East and was shut, and the Lord said unto him: “This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it.” (Ezek. xliv. 1, 2.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE Book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comment. on Matth. i.)

By the generation which Matthew noteth in the Kingly, and Luke in the Priestly descent of our Lord, both mean to show His relationship with each race, and both reach it in the clear line of the pedigree which they are tracing, for that connection between the Kingly and Priestly houses which was begun by the marriage of David was fully accomplished in the link between Salathiel and Zorobabel. And so while Matthew recordeth the line from father to son coming down from Judah, and Luke teacheth the descent from the tribe of Levi through Nathan, both prove that by His fore-fathers our Lord Jesus, Who is already a King and a Priest from everlasting to everlasting, hath also the right to these dignities by earthly inheritance.[1]

Eighth Lesson.

THAT it is the pedigree of Joseph and not of Mary which is given mattereth nothing, seeing that they were both of the same tribe and of the same family. Both Matthew and Luke afford instances of giving the title of father and son to persons who were only fore-father and descendant, the line being treated as one where the descent is in the same blood. Thus when Matthew will show that the Lord was the Son of David and Abraham, he saith: “The Book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham.”

Ninth Lesson. (For the holy Martyrs Protus and Hyacinth.)

PROTUS and Hyacinth were brethren, eunuchs of the blessed Virgin Eugenia, and were baptized along with her by Bishop Helenus. They gave themselves to the study of God’s Word, and dwelt for a while in wonderful lowliness and holiness of life in a monastery in Egypt. However, they afterwards followed the holy Virgin Eugenia to Rome, in the reign of the Emperor Gallienus, and were arrested in that city for professing the Christian faith. By no means could they be brought to leave the Christian religion and to worship the gods, and they were therefore severely scourged and beheaded, upon the 11th day of September.[2]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of these holy Martyrs. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of September is commemorated[3] the Holy Name of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the which Commemoration the Supreme Pontiff Innocent XI. ordered to be made in thanksgiving for the famous victory gained over the Turks at Vienna, in Austria, under the protection of the same Blessed Virgin, [upon the aforesaid day, in the year 1683.]

Upon the [same] 12th day of

[1] It would appear either that St Hilary’s text must be here given in a corrupt form, or that he must have used a corrupted text of St Luke, who distinctly says that Nathan was the son of David (iii. 31), the descendant of Judah. (33.) Besides, the dignity of Cohen is not transmissible through women.

[2] The subject is obscure. See Alban Butler.

[3] Should this day be a Sunday, the Feast of the Holy Name of Mary is kept hereon (v. supra).

September, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the holy martyrs Hieronides, Leontius, Serapion, Selesius, Valerian, and Straton, who, under the Emperor Maximin, were drowned in the sea for confessing Christ's Name.

In Bithynia, the holy martyr Bishop Autonomus. He fled thither from Italy to escape the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and when he had turned very many to the faith the raging Gentiles slew him at the Altar while he was celebrating the Holy Mysteries, whereby he himself became a sacrifice of Christ.

At Merus, in Phrygia, the holy martyrs Macedonius, Theodulus, and Tatian. The President Almachius, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, after putting them to other torments, caused them to be stretched upon red-hot iron gratings, and thus with gladness they finished their testimony.

At Iconium, in Lycaonia, the holy martyr Curonotus, Bishop [of that see,] who was beheaded under the President Perennius, and so received the palm of martyrdom.

At Pavia, holy Juventius, Bishop [of that city,] of whom mention is made upon the 8th day of February. He was sent thither along with holy Syrus by the blessed Hermagoras, a disciple of the holy Evangelist Mark, and they both there preached the gospel of Christ, and shone forth with great graces and wonders, so that by the works of God they lighted up even the cities hard by, and fell asleep at last in the honour of their Bishophood, in glory and in peace.

At Lyons, [in the sixth century,] deceased the holy [Confessor] Sacerdos, Bishop [of that see.]

At Verona, holy Silvinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Anderlecht, [hard by the city of Brussels, in the year 1012,] the holy Confessor Guy [the Palmer.]

FIRST NOCTURN.

SECOND NOCTURN.

The Lessons from St John Chrysostom in the Common Office, (p. 637.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.]

It mattereth nothing who is actually inserted in the genealogy, as long as the whole line are understood to proceed from one source. Hence, since Joseph and Mary were of the same family, and Joseph is shown to have been a descendant of Abraham, Mary is shown to have been the same. It was a rule of the Law that if a man died without children, his next brother should take his widow to wife, and the first son begotten of her was counted as the son of her first husband. And thus the inheritance was kept in the line of the first-born, since the descendants who inherited were always the sons of the first-born, in name, if not in fact.

Eighth Lesson.

THE next thing is, that, since we have said that, according to the ordinary value of terms, this genealogy is inconsistent with itself both as regards number and order, we should produce some explanation of this phenomenon. It is not a trifle that the statements should be one thing and the facts another, since the summary is not in accordance with the details. From Abraham to David are counted fourteen generations, and from David until the carrying away into Babylon, are found in other books seventeen. But this is neither a falsehood nor a piece of carelessness. There are three generations passed by. Joram begat Ahaziah, and Ahaziah begat Joash, and Joash begat Amaziah, and Amaziah begat Uzziah. But in Matthew it is stated that Joram begat Uzziah, whereas they are separated from each other by three clear generations. This is so because the woman of whom Joram begat Ahaziah was a foreign heathen, namely [Athaliah, the daughter] of Ahab, and Jezebel his wife.

Ninth Lesson.

IT was declared by the Prophet that the descendants of Ahab should not sit upon the throne of Israël beyond the fourth generation. The stain of heathenism is therefore left out by omitting the three kings tainted therewith, and fourteen generations are counted to Mary, although they were actually in number seventeen, and this can seem no blunder to any that know that our Lord JESUS Christ hath not only that origin which He drew from Mary, but that in His bodily generation is comprehended a signification of His eternal generation.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 13th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the blessed Philip, father of the holy Virgin Eugenia. He resigned the dignity of Prefect of Egypt, and received the grace of baptism, and while he was in prayer Terentius, who had succeeded him as Prefect, caused him to be slain with the sword.

Likewise the holy martyrs Macrobius and Julian, who suffered under Licinius.

Upon the same day suffered the holy martyr Ligorius, who was slain by the Gentiles for Christ's faith's sake while he was dwelling in the desert.

At Alexandria, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Eulogius, Pope [of that see,] famous for his teaching and holiness.

At Angers, in Gaul, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Maurilius, Bishop [of that see,] famous for countless miracles.

At Sens, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Aimé, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Venerius, a man of marvellous holiness, who dwelt as an hermit in the island of Palmaria.

In the monastery of Remiremont, in Gaul, [in the seventh century,] the holy Abbat Aimé, a Priest famous for his graces of self-denial and of wonder-working.

SEPTEMBER 13.

Sixth Day within the Octave of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson from the Book against heresies written by St Epiphanius, Archbishop [of Salamis.] (Bk. iii. 78.)

EVE, who received the mystic title of Mother of all living (Gen. iii. 20), was a type of Mary, the Blessed Mother of God. It was even after she had heard the words, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," that Eve was called Mother of all living. And it is certainly strange that after the transgression she should receive this great title. In respect of carnal things all men upon the earth do indeed draw their genealogy from Eve, and in respect of spiritual things life was born upon the earth from Mary, who gave birth to Him That liveth, and so becometh Mother of all that live by Him. And so Mary hath a mystic right to the title of Mother of all living.

Fifth Lesson.

UNTO Eve was given a coat of skins to clothe the natural body withal when she knew that she was naked, (Gen. iii. 21,) but unto Mary it was given to bring forth for us a Lamb with Whose glorious fleece [of merits] we may through wisdom be clothed in a robe of immortality. Eve was a cause of death to all men, for by her, death entered into the world; but Mary is a cause of life whereby life is sprung up for us all, since through her the Son of God entered into the world. "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." (Rom. v. 20.) Whence death was brought in, thence hath life also come forth, that life may take the place of death, and He Who by a woman hath become life unto us may put away the death which was invented by a woman. On the one hand Eve, being still a virgin, transgressed by disobedience; on the other hand, by a virgin came the obedience of grace, the announcement of Him Who came from heaven and took flesh, and life everlasting.

Sixth Lesson.

IF I may be permitted to say so, the following words, written of the Church, may be taken of Mary: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh." (Gen. ii. 24.) The holy Apostle saith: "This is a great mystery,[1] but I speak concerning Christ and the Church." (Eph. v. 32.) See the scrupulous accuracy of the Scriptural language. Concerning Adam it is said that God formed him, but concerning Eve that He builded her. "And the rib which the LORD God had taken from man, builded He into a woman." (Gen. ii. 22.) Hereby is shown that the Lord formed unto Himself a Body out of Mary, but that out of His Rib He builded up the Church, namely, when His Side was pierced and opened, and the mystic streams of Blood and Water flowed for the remission of sin.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE Book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. iii. upon the Harmony of the Gospels, 1.)

The Evangelist Matthew beginneth thus: "The book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham." By this beginning he sufficiently showeth that he taketh upon him to tell the generation of Christ according to the Flesh. It is by this generation that Christ is the Son of Man, a title whereby He oftentimes calleth Himself, pointing out unto us what He hath been mercifully pleased to become for our sakes. As to His higher and eternal Generation, by Which He is the Only-begotten Son of God, begotten before any creature, and by Whom all things were made, it is so indescribable that the Prophet may be understood to point to it where he saith: "who shall declare His generation?" (Isa. liii. 8.)

Eighth Lesson.

MATTHEW therefore followeth the human pedigree of Christ, tracing down the line of His forefathers from Abraham to "Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born JESUS." That it was not from lying with Joseph, but as a virgin, that Mary gave birth to the Christ, is deemed by the Evangelist no reason why he should not give Joseph the name of husband. By this it is clearly indicated that even where the faithful who are married abstain from one another by common consent, their union may continue and be called wedlock, albeit it be a tie which consisteth in the tender attachment of minds and not the coupling of bodies, and this more especially, since they were able to have a Son born unto them without that carnal embrace the only right end of which is the begetting of children.

Ninth Lesson.

SINCE the Apostle Paul clearly saith that "JESUS Christ our Lord was made of the seed of David according to the flesh," (Rom. i. 3,) we must not doubt that Mary was somewise descended from the stock of David. But it is also asserted that she was a woman with Priestly blood, by the statement that she was cousin to Elizabeth, (Luke i. 36,) who was of the daughters of Aaron. (5.)[1] We are therefore bound to believe that in Christ flowed the blood of the two great races, namely, the Kingly and the Priestly. In these two races was found among the Hebrews that mysterious anointing which typified the anointing or "Chrisma" from which the title of the "Christ" or "Anointed" is taken, and which Anointing was so long beforehand in these clear types so plainly foreshadowed.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 14th day of September is commemorated the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, when the Emperor Heraclius brought it back from Persia to Jerusalem, after he had overcome King Chosroës.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Appian Way, the blessed martyr Pope Cornelius. In the persecution under Decius, he was first sentenced to exile, but afterwards to be beaten with scourges loaded with lead, and then to be beheaded, along with twenty others, both men and women. The soldier Cerealis and Sallustia his wife, unto whom Cornelius had taught the faith, were put to death upon the same day.

In Africa, the holy martyr Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, a man very famous for his holiness and teaching. Under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, after a hard exile, he finished his testimony by being beheaded upon the seashore, at the sixth milestone from Carthage.

The feast of these two saints Cornelius and Cyprian is kept as one upon the 16th day of this present month of September.

There suffered at Carthage also the holy martyrs Crescentian, Victor, Rosula, and Generalis.

At Rome, the holy boy Crescentius, the son of holy Euthymius, who, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, under the judge Turpilius, died upon the Salarian Way, smitten with the sword.

At Treves, holy Maternus, Bishop [of that see,] a disciple of the blessed Apostle Peter, who turned to the faith of Christ the people of Tongres, Cologne, and Treves, and other dwellers in the parts thereabout.

Upon the same day, holy John Chrysostom, Archbishop of Constantinople. By the plots of his enemies he was sent into exile, and although his recall was decreed by the Supreme Pontiff Innocent I., he suffered many things on his journey from the soldiers who had him in charge, and gave up his soul to God. His feast is kept upon the 27th day of January, upon the which day his sacred body was brought to Constantinople by the Emperor Theodosius the Younger.

Vespers are of the following.

Hymn.[2]

THE Royal Banners forward go;
The Cross shines forth in mystic glow,
Where Life for sinners death endured,
And life by death for man procured.

Where deep for us the spear was dy'd,
Life's torrent rushing from His Side,
To wash us in that precious flood
Where, mingled, Water flowed, and Blood.

Fulfilled is all that David told
In true Prophetic song of old;
"Amidst the nations, God," saith he,
"Hath reigned and triumphed from the Tree."

O Tree of Beauty! Tree of Light!
O Tree with Royal Purple dight!
Elect on whose triumphal breast
Those holy Limbs should find their rest!

On whose dear arms, so widely flung,
The weight of this world's ransom hung:
The price of human kind to pay,
And spoil the spoiler of his prey.

Hail, Altar! Hail, O Victim! Thee
Decks now Thy Passion's Victory,
Where Life for sinners death endured,
And life by death for man procured!

To Thee, Eternal Three in One,
Let homage meet by all be done;
Whom by the Cross Thou dost restore,
Preserve and govern evermore. Amen.

Verse. [3]This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.

Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Hail, O Cross! Brighter than all the stars! Thy name is honourable upon earth! To the eyes of men thou art exceeding lovely! Holy art thou among all things that are earthly! Thy transom made one only worthy balance whereon the price of the world was weighed! Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, Sweetest Weight is hung on thee! O that every one who is here gathered this day to praise thee may find that thou art indeed salvation for him!

A Commemoration is made of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ our King was lifted up for our sakes upon the Cross. * O come, let us worship Him.

[1] On this quotation and deduction the reader is invited respectfully to remark, (a) that Luke i. 5 says no more than that Elizabeth's own father was a Priest, (b) that the Apocryphal Gospel called "Pseudo-Matthew" states that Elizabeth was cousin to the Blessed Virgin, as being a daughter of a sister of her mother Anne, named Emerina, and that Anne and Emerina were daughters of Achar, of the tribe of Judah, and (c) that this Pseudo-Matthew theory has at least one point in its favour, viz., that if Achar's daughter married out of the tribe of Judah into that of Levi, she must, according to Num. xxxvi. 8, have had a brother, and that if Mary of Cleophas be supposed to be the offspring of this brother, an escape is found from the great difficulties by which the two chief theories as to her position are beset.

[2] Translation by the late Dr Neale.

[3] Matth. xxiv. 30.

Hymn.[1]

SING, my tongue, the glorious battle,
With completed victory rife:
And above the Cross's trophy
Tell the triumph of the strife:
How the world's Redeemer conquered
By surrendering of His life.

God his Maker, sorely grieving
That the first-made Adam fell,
When he ate the fruit of sorrow,
Whose reward was death and hell,
Noted then this Tree, the ruin
Of the ancient tree to quell.

For the work of our salvation
Needs would have his order so,
And the multiform deceiver's
Art by art would overthrow,
And from thence would bring the med'cine
Whence the insult of the foe.

Wherefore, when the sacred fulness
Of th' appointed time was come,
This world's Maker left His Father,
Sent the Heavenly Mansion from,
And proceeded, God Incarnate,
Of the Virgin's Holy Womb.

Weeps the Infant in the manger
That in Bethlehem's stable stands;
And His Limbs the Virgin Mother
Doth compose in swaddling bands,
Meetly thus in linen folding
Of her God the Feet and Hands.

To the Trinity be glory
Everlasting, as is meet:
Equal to the Father, equal
To the Son, and Paraclete:
Trinal Unity, Whose praises
All created things repeat. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Only three Psalms are said.

First Antiphon. In the noble tree's uplifting, and the nations bending low, see a proof that Christ hath triumphed o'er the legions of the foe.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. In the Holy Cross uplifted, see the rod of power exalted wherewithal King JESUS triumphed.

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. Cross most gracious, from whose aspect health to sickly souls is given, with what praises shall I praise thee, who hast brought us life from heaven?

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Verse. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.
Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Numbers (xxi. 1.)

WHEN King Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israël came by the way of the spies, he fought against them, and overcame them, and took a prey from them. But Israël vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said: If Thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, I will utterly destroy their cities. And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israël, and delivered up the Canaanite. And they slew them and destroyed their cities; and he called the name of the place Hormah, that is, Curse.

First Responsory.

Lo! the Church, with solemn gladness, hails the day for ever glorious when in Kingly pomp was lifted that dread tree of mystic triumph, on whose boughs her dying Saviour shattered death and crushed the serpent.
Verse. He the Word of God Eternal, on those stately branches hanging hath for us a new way opened.
Answer. On whose boughs her dying Saviour shattered death and crushed the serpent.

Second Lesson.

AND they journeyed from Mount Hor by the way of the Red Sea, to compass the land of Edom. And the people wearied because of the way and the toil, and they spake against God and against Moses, saying: Wherefore hast thou brought us up out of Egypt, to die in the wilderness? There is no bread, neither is there any water, and our soul loatheth this light bread.[2] Therefore the LORD sent fiery serpents among the people.

Second Responsory.

Faithful Cross, above all other, one and only noble tree! None in foliage, none in blossom, none in fruit thy peers may be! Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, sweetest Weight is hung on thee!
Verse. Thou art higher than all cedars.
Answer. Sweetest wood and sweetest iron, sweetest Weight is hung on thee!

Third Lesson.

AND [the serpents] bit the people, and when many died, they came to Moses and said: We have sinned, for we have spoken against the LORD and against thee; pray [unto the LORD] that He take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people; and the LORD said unto him: Make thee a brazen serpent and set it up for an ensign; every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live. So Moses made a serpent of brass and set it up for an ensign, and, if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld [the serpent of brass] he was healed.

Third Responsory.

[3] This is that noble tree, planted in the midst of the garden, whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men.
Verse. Even the Cross, whereof the glory is so excellent, and which the Emperor Heraclius did so eagerly rescue.
Answer. Whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Whereon the Author of our salvation did by His Own death openly triumph over the death of all men.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. For all that feel sin's fiery wound ensign of health the Saviour see! May we as conquerors be found through Him Who triumphed on the tree!

---

[1] Translation by the late Dr Neale.

[2] The Manna.

[3] Cf. Gen. ii. 8, 9; Heb. v. 9; Col. ii. 15.

Ps. iv. When I called upon Him, &c., (p. 116.)

Second Antiphon. When by the Saviour on the Cross the bonds of sin were riven, we by His chastisement were healed, and death to death was given.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. Before the saving Cross of Christ all Christians bend in prayer, and glory is ascribed to Him who dreadly triumphed there.

Ps. xx. The King shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee—
Answer. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.

Fourth Lesson.

CHOSROËS, King of Persia, having, in the last days of the reign of the Emperor Phocas, overrun Egypt and Africa, [in 614,] took Jerusalem, where he slaughtered thousands of Christians and carried off to Persia the Cross of the Lord, which Helen had put upon Mount Calvary. Heraclius, the successor of Phocas, moved by the thought of the hardships and horrid outrages of war, sought for peace, but Chosroës, drunken with conquest, would not allow of it even upon unfair terms. Heraclius therefore, being set in this uttermost strait, earnestly sought help from God by constant fasting and prayer, and through His good inspiration gathered an army, joined battle with the enemy, and prevailed against three of Chosroës his chief captains, and three armies.

Fourth Responsory.

But us it behoveth to glory in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ; in Whom is our salvation, life, and resurrection; Who hath saved us and redeemed us.
Verse. O Lord, we worship Thy Cross and make memorial of Thy glorious Passion.
Answer. Who hath saved us and redeemed us.

Fifth Lesson.

CHOSROËS was broken by these defeats, and when in his flight, [in 628,] he was about crossing the Tigris, he proclaimed his son Medarses partner in his kingdom. Chosroës' eldest son Siroës took this slight to heart, and formed a plot to murder his father and brother, which plot he brought to effect soon after they had come home. Then he got the kingdom from Heraclius upon certain terms, whereof the first was that he should give back the Cross of the Lord Christ. The Cross therefore was received back after that it had been fourteen years in the power of the Persians, and [in 629] Heraclius came to Jerusalem and bore it with solemn pomp unto the Mount whereunto the Saviour had borne it.

Fifth Responsory.

The Relique true from heaven revealed hath now the Gospel's figure sealed; as by the serpent Moses reared, so by the Cross the sick are healed.
Verse. When the dead touch the Cross they arise, and the wonderful works of God are made manifest.
Answer. As by the serpent Moses reared, so by the Cross the sick are healed.

Sixth Lesson.

THIS event was marked by a famous miracle. Heraclius, who was adorned with gold and jewels, stayed perforce at the gateway which leadeth unto Mount Calvary, and the harder he strove to go forward, the harder he seemed to be held back, whereat both himself and all they that stood by were sore amazed. Then spake Zacharias, Patriarch of Jerusalem, saying: "See, O Emperor, that it be not that in carrying the Cross attired in the guise of a Conqueror thou showest too little of the poverty and lowliness of JESUS Christ." Then Heraclius cast away his princely raiment and took off his shoes from his feet, and in the garb of a countryman easily finished his journey, and set up the Cross once more in the same place upon Calvary whence the Persians had carried it away. That the Cross had been put by Heraclius in the same place where-in it had first been planted by the Saviour caused the yearly Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross tc become the more famous thenceforward.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven when the Lord cometh to judgment. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest.
Verse. When the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, and shall begin to judge the world by fire.
Answer. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Then shall the secrets of our hearts be made manifest.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee, because through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. By a tree were we brought into bondage, and by the Holy Cross are we set free. The fruit of a tree beguiled us; the Son of God hath brought us back. Alleluia.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Save us, O Saviour of the world, Who hast redeemed us by Thy Cross and Blood; help us, we beseech Thee, O our God!

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee—
Answer. Let them sing to Thy Name, O Lord!

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xii. 31.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes of the Jews: Now is the judgment of this world, now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And so on.

---

[1] Cf. Matth. xxiv. 30; 1 Cor. iv. 5; Matth. xix. 28.

Homily by Pope St Leo the Great. (8th on the Lord's Passion.)

Dearly beloved brethren, when we gaze upon Christ lifted up upon the Cross, the eyes of our mind see more than that which appeared before the wicked, unto whom it was said through Moses: "And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee, and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life." (Deut. xxviii. 66.) They saw in the crucified Lord nothing but the work of their own wickedness, and "they feared greatly," (Matth. xxvii. 54,) not with that faith which giveth earnest of life by justification, but with that whereby the evil conscience is tortured. But our understanding is enlightened by the Spirit of truth, and with pure and open hearts we see the glory of the Cross shining over heaven and earth, and discern by inward glance what the Lord meant when His Passion was nigh at hand, and He said: "Now is the judgment of this world, now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all things unto Me."

Seventh Responsory.

Sweetest wood, and sweetest iron, sweetest Weight is hung on thee! Thou alone wast counted worthy this world's ransom to uphold.

Verse. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven when the Lord cometh to judgment.

Answer. Thou alone wast counted worthy this world's ransom to uphold!

Eighth Lesson.

O HOW wonderful is the power of the Cross! O how unutterable is the glory of the Passion, wherein standeth the Lord's judgment-seat, and the judgment of this world, and the might of the Crucified! Lord! Thou hast drawn all things unto Thee! Thou didst spread out Thine Hands all the day unto an unbelieving and gainsaying people, (Isa. lxv. 2,) but the world hath felt and owned Thy Majesty! Lord! Thou hast drawn all things unto Thee! All the elements gave one wild cry of horror at the iniquity of the Jews—the lights of the firmament were darkened, day turned into night, earth quaked with strange tremblings, and all God's work refused to serve the guilty. Lord! Thou hast drawn all things unto Thee! The veil of the Temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, the Holy of Holies denied itself as a Sanctuary for the ministration of unworthy Priests, that the shadow might be changed for the substance, prophecy for realization, and the Law for the Gospel.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.

Verse. God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.

Answer. That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.

Ninth Lesson.

LORD! Thou hast drawn all things unto Thee! That which was veiled under types and shadows in the one Jewish Temple, is hailed by the love of all peoples in full and open worship. There is now a higher order of Levites, a more honourable rank of elders, a Priesthood with an holier anointing. Thy Cross is a well of blessings for all, and a cause of thanksgiving for all. Thereby for them that believe in Thee, weakness is turned into strength, shame into glory, and death into life. The changing ordinance of divers carnal sacrifices is gone; the one oblation of Thy Body and Blood fulfilleth them all. For Thou art the Very Paschal Lamb, Which takest away the sins of the world, and art in Thyself all offerings finished. And even as Thou art the One Sacrifice Which taketh the place of all sacrifices, so may Thy kingdom be one kingdom established over all peoples.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. O what a work of love was that! * when Life and death died together upon the tree.

Second Antiphon. Save us, * O Christ the Saviour, save us through the might of Thy Cross. Thou Who didst save Peter when he was ready to sink in the sea, have mercy upon us!

Third Antiphon. Behold the Cross of the Lord! * Fly, ye ranks of the adversary! [2] The Lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David, hath prevailed.

Fourth Antiphon. [3] But us it behoveth to glory in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ.

Fifth Antiphon. By Thy Cross' Holy Sign, * JESUS, guard this soul of mine, from my ghostly enemy.

Chapter. (Phil. ii. 5.)

BRETHREN, let this mind be in you which was also in Christ JESUS, Who being in the form of God thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but emptied Himself, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men, and found in fashion as a man.

Hymn.[4]

THIRTY years among us dwelling,
  His appointed time fulfilled,
Born for this, He meets His Passion,
  For that this He freely willed:
On the Cross the Lamb is lifted,
  Where His Life-Blood shall be spilled.

He endured the nails, the spitting,
  Vinegar, and spear, and reed;
From that Holy Body broken
  Blood and water forth proceed:
Earth, and stars, and sky, and ocean
  By that flood from stain are freed.

Faithful Cross! above all other,
  One and only noble Tree!
None in foliage, none in blossom,
  None in fruit thy peers may be:
Sweetest wood and sweetest iron!
  Sweetest Weight is hung on thee.

[2] Apoc. v. 5.

[3] Gal. vi. 14.

[4] Continuation of the Mattins Hymn.

Bend thy boughs, O tree of glory!
 Thy relaxing sinews bend;
For a while the ancient rigour,
 That thy birth bestowed, suspend:
And the King of heavenly beauty
 On thy bosom gently tend.

Thou alone wast counted worthy
 This world's ransom to uphold;
For a shipwrecked race preparing
 Harbour, like the ark of old;
With the Sacred Blood anointed
 From the smitten Lamb that rolled.

To the Trinity be glory
 Everlasting, as is meet:
Equal to the Father, equal
 To the Son, and Paraclete:
Trinal Unity, Whose praises
 All created things repeat. Amen.

Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee.

Answer. Because that through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Thou art higher than all the cedars, thou, whereon the Life of the world hung, whereon Christ openly triumphed, and His death trampled down death for ever.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who dost this day gladden us by the yearly Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, grant, we beseech Thee, that even as we have understood the mystery thereof upon earth, so we may worthily enjoy in heaven the fruits of the redemption which was paid thereon. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin.

PRIME.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Antiphon. O what a work, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory:

Verse. Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Octave of the Birth of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Upon the same 15th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Nomentan Way, [in the first century,] the holy martyr Nicomede the Priest. Unto them that would have forced him to offer sacrifice he said, "I do not sacrifice, save unto the Almighty God, Who reigneth in the heavens," and he was beaten with scourges loaded with lead until at last he passed away to be ever with the Lord.

In the country of Châlons, [in the second century,] the holy martyr Valerian. The President Priscus caused him to be hung up and tormented by mangling with metal hooks, but when he saw that he could not be shaken in his confession of Christ, but continued the rather to praise Him with a glad heart, he commanded to slay him with the sword.

At Marcianopolis, in Thrace, the holy martyr Melitina. Under the Emperor Antonine and the President Antiochus, she was twice brought to the temples of the Gentiles, but as the idols continually fell down, she was hung up and mangled, and at last beheaded.

At Adrianople, the holy martyrs Maximus, Theodore, and Asclepiodotus, who were crowned under the Emperor Maximian.

Also holy Porphyry, a jester who received baptism as a farce in the presence of the Emperor Julian the Apostate, and was thereupon suddenly changed by the power of God, so that he professed himself to be a Christian, and by command of the Emperor received martyrdom by the axe.

Upon the same day, the holy Goth Nicetas, who was burnt by order of King Athanaric for the Catholic faith's sake.

At Cordova, [in the ninth century,] the holy martyrs Emilas, the Deacon, and Jeremiah, who suffered a long imprisonment in the persecution under the Arabs, and finished their testimony by being beheaded.

At Toul, in Lorraine, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Aper, Bishop [of that see.]

Likewise, [in the sixth century,] holy Lubin, Bishop of Chartres.

At Lyons, [in the fourth century,] holy Albin, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day, [in the seventh century,] holy Aichard, Abbat [of Jumièges.]

In [Auvergne, in] Gaul, [in the fifth century,] the holy widow Eutropia.

Chapter at the end. (Phil. ii. 8.)

HE humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross; wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and hath given Him a name which is above every name.

TERCE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Antiphon. Save us, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.

Answer. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.

Verse. When the Lord cometh to judgment.

Answer. In heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.

Verse. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee.

Answer. Because through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.

SEXT.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Antiphon. Behold the Cross, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

The Chapter. (Gal. vi. 14.)

BUT God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world.

Short Responsory.

We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee.

Answer. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee.

Verse. Because through Thy Cross Thou hast redeemed the world.
Answer. We bless Thee.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. We adore Thee, O Christ, and we bless Thee.
Verse. Let all the earth worship Thee and sing unto Thee.
Answer. Let them sing unto Thy Name, O Lord.

NONE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

Antiphon. By Thy Cross, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

Short Responsory.

Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee.
Answer. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee.
Verse. Let them sing unto Thy Name, O Lord.
Answer. And sing unto Thee.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Let all the earth worship Thee, and sing unto Thee.
Verse. This sign of the Cross shall be in heaven.
Answer. When the Lord cometh to judgment.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as at First Vespers.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O blessed art thou, O Cross, thou which wast counted the only tree worthy to bear the Lord and King of heaven. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin, from the First Vespers of the Feast.

Then of the Holy Martyr Nicomede.

Prayer.

GIVE ear, O Lord, unto Thy people, and grant that as they do acknowledge the glory of Thy blessed witness Nicomede, they may never lack his help to obtain their requests from Thee. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

SEPTEMBER 15.

Octave of the Birth-day of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Cant. viii. 5, (p. 1007.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Cyril, Pope of Alexandria, (against Nestorius.)

I BEHOLD a joyful congregation of all the Saints, who have come together with glad hearts at the bidding of Holy Mary, Mother of God, and always a Virgin. Praise and glory be unto Thee, O Holy Trinity! Who hast called us unto this Feast! Praise be to thee also, Holy Mother of God! Thou art the priceless Pearl of earth, thou art the undying lamp, thou art the crown of virginity, thou art the staff of the orthodox faith, thou art the everlasting temple, thou art the limits of the Illimitable, thou art Mother and Maiden, wherethrough cometh He of whom the Gospels tell, that Blessed One Who cometh in the Name of the Lord!

Fifth Lesson.

THROUGH thee is the name of the Trinity hallowed, through thee is the precious Cross preached and worshipped throughout all the world. Through thee there is joy in heaven, through thee Angels and Archangels shout aloud, through thee the devils are put to flight, and man is recalled to Paradise. Through thee every creature once in bondage to idols turneth to the knowledge of the truth, through thee believers come to holy Baptism, through thee Churches are built in all the earth.

Sixth Lesson.

BY thy help, the heathen turn to repentance. What more? Through thee the Only-begotten Son of God, He in Whom is Life, and the Life is the Light of men, hath shined upon them that sat in darkness and in the shadow of death. Through thee the Prophets have prophesied, through thee the Apostles have preached salvation unto the Gentiles. Who can set forth all thy praise, O Mary, Mother and Maiden? Dearly beloved brethren, let us glorify her, while we worship her Son, the Sinless Bridegroom of the Church, unto Whom be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (i. 1.)

THE Book of the Generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (2nd on Matthew.)

Is it not startling to hear that the ineffable God, Whom words cannot describe, nor thought grasp, and Who is in all things equal to the Father, was pleased to come to us through the womb of a virgin, to be made of a woman, and to take for forefathers David and Abraham? But why should I speak of David and Abraham? It is more astounding still that He took for ancestresses those women whom I have just above named, [Thamar, and Ruth, and Bathsheba.] But when thou hearest this, stir up thy mind, and look not down upon the lowly elements. Wonder rather at this, that the very and beloved Son of the Eternal God was content to become the Son of David, that He might give thee power to become a son of God; to have His own servant for His forefather, that He might make God Himself His servants' Father.

Eighth Lesson.

THOU seest how glad tidings these be even from the beginning. If thou be busy about such things as concern thine own honour, learn to believe such from the things which concern Him. For even by the measure of man's understanding it is harder to make God man than to hallow a man into a son of God. When therefore thou hearest that the Son of God is likewise the Son of David and Abraham, doubt no more that thou, which art a son of Adam, shalt be a son of God. He would not so have humbled Himself, had it not been to exalt us. He was born according to the flesh that thou mightest be born according to the Spirit; He was born of a woman that thou mightest cease to be the child of a woman.[1]

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Nicomede.)

THIS Nicomede was a Priest who was ordered to be seized during the persecution of the Christians by the Emperor Domitian, because he had buried the body of the Virgin Felicula, who had been slain by the Count Flaccus for confessing the Christian Faith. He was led to the statues of the gods, and forasmuch as he stoutly disobeyed the command to sacrifice to them, since sacrifice is due only to the one true God Who reigneth in heaven, he was flogged with scourges loaded with lead until he sealed his testimony by giving up his spirit to God. The said Count Flaccus ordered his body to be thrown into the floods of the Tiber, but Justus, clerk to Nicomede, sought diligently for it until he found it, and buried it honourably upon the road to Mentana, hard by the walls of the city.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of this Martyr. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy martyrs Cornelius, Pope of Rome, and Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, of whose birth into the better life mention hath been made upon the 14th day of this present month of September.

Upon the same 16th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Chalcedon, the holy Virgin and martyr Euphemia. Under the Emperor Diocletian and the Proconsul Priscus, she overcame for Christ's sake torture, imprisonment, stripes, wheels, fire, stones, beasts, rods, sharp saws, and hot metal. When she was again cast to the beasts in the theatre, she prayed the Lord to take her spirit to himself, and then one of them bit her sacred body, while the rest licked her feet, and she resigned her soul without spot to God.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Lucy, a noble matron, and Geminian, whom the Emperor Diocletian, after they had suffered grievously and long been tormented, and had thus gained a noble victory by martyrdom, commanded to be slain with the sword.

Likewise at Rome, upon the Flaminian Way, the holy martyrs Abundius the Priest and Abundantius the Deacon, whom the Emperor Diocletian commanded to be beheaded at the tenth milestone from the city, along with the eminent Marcian, and John, the son of Marcian, whom they had raised from the dead.

At Heraclea, in Thrace, the holy martyr Sebastiana, who was led to believe in Christ by the blessed Apostle Paul. Under the Emperor Domitian and the President Sergius she was diversely tried and at last slain with the sword.

At Cordova, [in the ninth century,] the holy martyrs Rogellus and Servus-Dei, who had their hands and feet cut off and were at last beheaded.

In Scotland, the holy Confessor Ninian, Bishop [of Galloway, whose feast we keep upon the 25th day of this present month of September.]

In England, [in the tenth century,] the holy Virgin Edith, daughter of Edgar, King of the English, who was dedicated to God from a child in the Monastery [of the Order of St Benedict, at Wilton,] and knew not the world, rather then forsook it.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Cornelius and Cyprian. Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 608.)

Then of the Holy Martyrs Euphemia, Lucy, and Geminian. Antiphon, "In heaven do rejoice, &c.," (as in Second Vespers for Many Martyrs, p. 609.) Verse and Answer, "Let the Saints be joyful, &c.," (p. 608.)

Prayer.

BE ready, O Lord, to listen unto our joyful prayers, and grant that as we do year by year in love and earnestness recall the day whereon Thy blessed witnesses Euphemia, Lucy, and Geminian suffered for Thy sake, so we may also have the grace to imitate the firmness of their faith. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Third Sunday of September.

Feast of the Seven Sorrows of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

If this Feast is transferred for any cause, it should be kept on the next free Sunday, and if no Sunday is free till Advent, it must be kept on the first free day following the third Sunday of September.

On the Saturday the Martyrology begins with the words: On the morrow is the Feast of the Seven Sorrows of the most Blessed Virgin Mary.

Whatever is not specially given here is taken from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[2]

WHAT a sea of tears and sorrow
Did the soul of Mary toss
To and fro upon its billows,
While she wept her bitter loss;
In her arms her JESUS holding,
Torn so newly from the Cross.

---

[1] Apparently, Eve.

[2] Translation by the Rev. E. Caswall.

O that mournful Virgin Mother!
See her tears how fast they flow
Down upon His mangled Body,
Wounded Side, and thorny Brow;
While His Hands and Feet she kisses—
Picture of immortal woe!

Oft and oft His Arms and Bosom
Fondly straining to her own;
Oft her pallid lips imprinting
On each Wound of her dear Son!
Till in one last kiss of anguish
All her melting soul is gone.

Gentle Mother, we beseech thee
By thy tears and trouble sore;
By the death of thy dear Offspring;
By the Bloody Wounds He bore;
Touch our hearts with that true sorrow
Which afflicted thee of yore.

To the Father everlasting,
And the Son Who reigns on high,
With the Co-Eternal Spirit,
Trinity in Unity,
Be salvation, honour, blessing,
Now and through eternity. Amen.

Verse. Pray for us, O Queen of Martyrs.
Answer. Who didst stand by the Cross of JESUS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath tanned me. My mother's children were angry with me.

Prayer from Lauds. A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

Antiphon. [2] Remember not, Lord, mine offences, nor the offences of my forefathers, neither take Thou vengeance of my sins.

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.
Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is said thus:—

Lord JESU, slain for us, to Thee
Eternal praise be given,
With Father, Spirit, One and Three,
Here as it is in heaven.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us take our stand by the Cross, in company with Mary, the Mother of JESUS. * A sword of sorrow hath pierced through her own soul also.

Hymn.

COME, let us stand to pray when now
The darkness of the night
Recalls the awful gloom that wrapt
Golgotha's fatal height.

Come, in the spirit let us stand
Where Mother Mary stood,
Watching the great salvation wrought
Upon the bitter Rood.

Come, let us stand with her in whom
Each wound that pierced the Lord
With woe unutterable pierced
Her spirit like a sword.

Come, let us stand with her whose heart
The thirst that parched His tongue,—
The thorns that tore His brow—with grief
Less than His only—wrung.

Come, let us ask of her, who there
Undying Martyr stood,
That we with her through tears may see
Salvation in the Rood.

Glory to Him of whom we pray,
This grace on us send down,
To stand with her beside the Cross,
With her to see the Crown. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. They are increased that trouble me; * many are they that rise up against me.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Second Antiphon. They make ready their arrows in the quiver, * that they may privily shoot at the upright in heart.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. My life is spent with grief, * and my years with sighing.

Ps. xxx. In Thee, O LORD, &c., (p. 42.)

Verse. Pray for us, O Queen of Martyrs,—
Answer. Who didst stand by the Cross of JESUS.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the [Lamentations of the] Prophet Jeremiah (i. 2.)

SHE weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are upon her cheeks: among all her lovers, she hath none to comfort her; all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, and are become her enemies. (20.) Behold, O LORD, for I am in distress; my bowels are troubled; mine heart is turned within me, for I am full of anguish. Abroad, the sword bereaveth, and at home there is death. They have heard that I sigh, and there is none to comfort me.

First Responsory.

[3] There was a man whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout; and he said unto Mary: Yea, a sword shall pierce through thine own soul also.
Verse. [4] Call me not "My-pleasantness," but call me "Embittered," for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.
Answer. Yea, a sword shall pierce through thine own soul also.

Second Lesson. (ii. 13.)

WHAT thing shall I take to witness for thee? What thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? What shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? For thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee? (15.) All that pass by clap their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying: Is this the city that men call "The Perfection of beauty," "The joy of the whole earth!" All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee; they hiss and gnash the teeth, and say: We will swallow her up.

Second Responsory.

[5] Arise, and take the young Child and His Mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word.
Verse. Out of Egypt have I called My Son, that salvation may come unto Israël.
Answer. And be thou there until I bring thee word.

---

[1] Cant. i. 6.
[2] Tob. iii. 3.
[3] Luke ii. 25, 34, 35.
[4] Ruth i. 20.
[5] Matth. ii. 13, 15; Hos. xi. 1.

Third Lesson.

THE LORD hath done that which He had devised; He hath fulfilled His word that He had commanded in the days of old; He hath thrown down, and hath not pitied; and He hath caused thine enemy to rejoice over thee, and hath set up the horn of thine adversaries. Their heart cried unto the Lord for the walls of the daughter of Zion. Let tears run down like a river day and night. Give thyself no rest, neither let the apple of thine eye cease.

Third Responsory.

[1] Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? I and Thy father have sought Thee sorrowing.

Verse. How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Answer. I and Thy Father—

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Have sought thee sorrowing.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. My heart is like melting wax in the midst of my bowels.

Ps. xxi. My God, My God, &c., (p. 27.)

Second Antiphon. O God, I have declared my life unto Thee—Thou hast put my tears in Thy sight.

Ps. lv. Be merciful unto me, &c., (p. 62.)

Third Antiphon. My tears have been my meat day and night.

Ps. xli. As the hart panteth, &c., (p. 53.)

Verse. [2] A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me—

Answer. He shall lie betwixt my breasts.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On the twelve stars.)

THE Martyrdom of the Virgin is set before us, not only in the prophecy of Simeon, but also in the story itself of the Lord's Passion. The holy old man said of the Child JESUS, (Luke ii. 34,) "Behold, this Child is set for the fall and the rising again of many in Israël; and for a sign which shall be spoken against; yea," (said he unto Mary,) "a sword shall pierce through thine own soul also"—Even so, O Blessed Mother! The sword did indeed pierce through thy soul! for nought could pierce the Body of thy Son, nor pierce thy soul likewise. Yea, and when this JESUS of thine had given up the ghost, and the bloody spear could torture Him no more, thy soul winced as it pierced His dead Side—His Own Soul might leave Him, but thine could not.

Fourth Responsory.

[3] JESUS, bearing His Cross, went forth. And there followed Him a company of women, which bewailed and lamented Him.

Verse. Daughters of Jerusalem, weep for yourselves and for your children.

Answer. There followed Him a company of women, which bewailed and lamented Him.

Fifth Lesson.

THE sword of sorrow pierced through thy soul, so that we may truly call thee more than martyr, in whom the love, that made thee suffer along with thy Son, wrung thy heart more bitterly than any pang of bodily pain could do. Did not that word of His indeed pierce through thy soul, sharper than any two-edged sword, even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, (Heb. iv. 12,)—"Woman, behold thy son!" (John xix. 26.) O what a change to thee! Thou art given John for JESUS, the servant for his Lord, the disciple for his Master, the son of Zebedee for the Son of God, a mere man for Very God. O how keenly must the hearing of those words have pierced through thy most loving soul, when even our hearts, stony, iron, as they are, are wrung at the memory thereof only!

Fifth Responsory.

[4] And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him. Now there stood by the Cross of JESUS His Mother.

Verse. Then was it that a sword of sorrow pierced through her blessed soul.

Answer. There stood by the Cross of JESUS His Mother.

Sixth Lesson.

MARVEL not, my brethren, that Mary should be called a Martyr in spirit. He indeed may marvel who remembereth not what Paul saith, naming the greater sins of the Gentiles, that they were "without natural affection," (Rom. i. 31.) Far other were the bowels of Mary, and far other may those of her servants be! But some man perchance will say: Did she not know that He was to die? Yea, without doubt, she knew it. Did she not hope that He was soon to rise again? Yea, she most faithfully hoped it. And did she still mourn because He was crucified? Yea, bitterly. But who art thou, my brother, or whence hast thou such wisdom, to marvel less that the Son of Mary suffered than that Mary suffered with Him? He could die in the Body, and could not she die with Him in her heart? His was the deed of that Love, greater than which hath no man, (John xv. 13;) her's, of a love, like to which hath no man, save He.

Sixth Responsory.

[5] Joseph of Arimathæa begged the Body of JESUS, and he took It down from the Cross, and His Mother received It into her arms.

Verse. [6] The Shunamite took her dead son, and laid him on her knees; and her soul was vexed within her.

Answer. His Mother received It into her arms.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. His Mother received It into her arms.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. They bend their bow, even bitter words, that they may shoot in secret at the perfect.

Ps. lxiii. Hear my voice, O God, &c., (p. 64.)

Second Antiphon. My soul is sore vexed, but Thou, O LORD—how long?

Ps. vi. O LORD, rebuke me not, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. God is our help in trouble, which is come upon us exceedingly.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. [1] Through thee, O Virgin Mary, may we draw the waters of salvation—

Answer. Out of the Wounds of Christ.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 25.)

AT that time: There stood by the Cross of JESUS His Mother, and His Mother's sister, Mary [the wife] of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, [Bishop of Milan.] (On Virgins, 7.)

There stood by the Cross His Mother. Men had forsaken Him, but she stood there fearless. Behold how the Mother of JESUS could break through her shrinking modesty, but could not belie her heart. With the eyes of a mother's love she gazed upon the Wounds of her Son, those Wounds through Which she knew that redemption for all mankind was flowing. The Mother, who feared not the executioners, was able to endure the sight of their work. Her Son was hanging upon the Cross, and she braved His tormentors.

Seventh Responsory.

O what a sickening at heart was thine, thou Mother of sorrows: [2] when Joseph wrapped thy Son in linen and laid Him in the sepulchre?

Verse. [3] Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.

Answer. When Joseph wrapped thy Son in linen and laid Him in the sepulchre.

Eighth Lesson. (From St Ambrose, 25th Epistle to the Church of Vercelli.)

MARY, the Mother of the Lord, stood by the Cross of her Son. My only informant of this fact is the holy Evangelist John. Others have written that when the Lord suffered, the earth quaked, the heavens were veiled in darkness, the sun was hidden, and the thief received, after a good confession, the promise of Paradise. John hath taught us what the others have not taught us. Upon the Cross He called her Mother. It is reckoned [by John] a greater thing that in the moment of triumph over agony, He should have discharged the watchful duty of a Son to His Mother, than that He should have made gift of the kingdom of heaven. For if it be a sacred thing to have forgiven the thief, this so great kindness of the Son to the Mother is to be worshipped as the outcome of a tenderer and more touching love.

Eighth Responsory.

[4] Forget not the sorrows of thy mother with thine whole heart, that thine offering and thy blessing may be perfected.

Verse. Hail, O maid of Royal birth, Noblest martyr-rose of earth, lily of virginity.

Answer. That thine offering and thy blessing may be perfected.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That thine offering and thy blessing may be perfected.

Ninth Lesson.

The whole, or first part, of the Sunday Homily.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [5] Whither is thy beloved gone, * O thou fairest among women? Whither is thy beloved turned aside?—that we may seek him with thee.

Second Antiphon. [6] Look away from me. * I will weep bitterly. Labour not to comfort me.

Third Antiphon. [7] He hath no form nor comeliness, * and when we shall see him there is no beauty that we should desire him.

Fourth Antiphon. [8] From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it.

Fifth Antiphon. [9] Revive me with flowers, * stay me up with apples—for I am swooning with love.

Chapter. (Lam. ii. 13.)

WHAT thing shall I take to witness for thee? What thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? What shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? For thy breach is great like the sea.

Hymn.[10]

GOD, in Whom all grace doth dwell!
Grant us grace to ponder well
On the Virgin's Dolours seven,
On the Wounds to JESUS given.

May the tears which Mary poured
Gain us pardon of the Lord:—
Tears excelling in their worth
All the penances of earth.

May the contemplation sore
Of the Wounds which JESUS bore,
Source to us of blessings be
Through a long eternity.

To the Incarnate Son Who died
For His servants crucified,
Praise be rendered, with the Sire
And the Spirit Sanctifier. Amen.

Verse. By the woes that tortured thee,

Answer. Mary, ask for joy for me.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [11] Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, [12] and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.

To Father, Spirit, One and Three,
Be praise, and thanks, and glory given,
By men on earth, by Saints in heaven.

Antiphon. Look away, &c. (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

All ye that pass by,—
Answer. All ye that pass by,—
Verse. Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow.
Answer. Ye that pass by.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. All ye that pass by,—
Verse. Mine eyes do fail with tears.
Answer. All my bowels are troubled.

SEXT.

The last verse of the Hymn is said thus:

Lord Jesu, Who for us didst die,
To Father, Thee, and Holy Ghost,
Be praise below, as praise on high,
On earth, as 'mid the Angelic host.

Antiphon. He hath no form, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Lam. i. 2.)

CORNELIUS was a Roman who held the Popedom during the reign of the Emperors Gallus and Volusian. He, and that most holy

[2] Cant. v. 6.

[3] Job xvi. 17.

Lady Lucina, took the bodies of the Apostles Peter and Paul out of the Catacombs and put them in more convenient places. Lucina laid the body of Paul in a farm of her own upon the road to Ostia, hard by the place where he had received the sword-stroke. Cornelius placed that of the Prince of the Apostles hard by where he had been crucified. When this was told to the Emperors, and likewise that Cornelius was the means of making many Christians, he was banished to Civita Vecchia,[1] where Cyprian, the holy Bishop of Carthage, comforted him by letters.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY continued thus to write often one to the other, till the Emperors took in bad part these exchanges of Christian love, and sent for Cornelius to Rome. There they commanded him to be lashed with scourges loaded with lead as though he were a traitor, and then to be carried to offer sacrifice before the image of Mars. He firmly refused to commit this great wickedness, and was forthwith beheaded, upon the 14th day of September, [in the year of our Lord 252.] The blessed Lucina, with the help of the clergy, buried his body in the sand-pit on her own farm, near the Cemetery of Kallistus. He lived as Pope about two years.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon "Church Writers," composed by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

CYPRIAN was an African. He was first distinguished as a teacher of Rhetorick. He afterwards became a Christian at the persuasion of the Priest Cæcilius, whose surname he took, and parted all his goods among the poor. It was not long before he was chosen a Priest, and then made Bishop of Carthage. It would be idle to enlarge upon his wit, seeing that his works are as well known as the sun. He suffered under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, in the eighth persecution, and upon the same day, though not in the same year, that Cornelius testified at Rome.[2]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xxi. 9, with the Homily of Pope St Gregory, (p. 606.) The last part is omitted, or read as one with the second, to make room for

Ninth Lesson. (For the other Holy Martyrs.)

EUPHEMIA, Lucy, and Geminian were all crowned with Martyrdom in the persecution under Diocletian, upon the same day, though not in the same place. Euphemia was a maiden of Chalcedon, who suffered divers tortures under the Proconsul Priscus. She endured unflinchingly the rods, the rack, the wheels, and the fire, and in the end was thrown to wild beasts. These all licked her feet, save one, which gave her holy body such a bite, that she forthwith resigned her guileless spirit to God. Lucy was a widow at Rome, who was accused by her own son Eutropius, for that she had for many years worshipped Christ. She was put into a vessel of hot pitch and lead, but came forth unhurt. As she was being haled through the city loaded with iron and lead, the sight of her faith and unwavering testification turned to Christ the nobleman Geminian. He was one of many whom she had brought to the faith, and she had him for a comrade in her glorious martyrdom, for he was divers ways tormented, and then beheaded. Their bodies were given honourable burial by the Christian lady Maxima.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the above Martyrs. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer (as at First Vespers for Many Martyrs.) Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we commemorate the making of the sacred marks which God was pleased by a wonderful grace to make upon the hands, feet, and side of holy Francis, Founder of the Order of Friars Minors, upon Mount Alvernia in Tuscany.

Upon the same 17th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Tiburtine Way, the holy martyr Justin, a Priest who was famous for his glorious confession of Christ in the persecution under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus. He buried the bodies of the blessed Pope Xystus, of Lawrence, of Hippolytus, and of many other saints, and at length himself achieved martyrdom under Claudius.

Likewise at Rome, [under the Emperor Valerian,] the holy martyrs Narcissus and Crescentio.

In Phrygia, holy Ariadne, martyred under the Emperor Hadrian.

In Britain, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Socrates and Stephen.

At Nyon, [on the Lake of Geneva,] the holy martyrs Valerian, Macrinus, and Gordian.

At Autun, the holy lad Flocellus, who suffered many things under the Emperor Antonine and the President Valerian, and at last was torn by wild beasts, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

At Liege, blessed Lambert, Bishop of Mæstricht. In his godly zeal he rebuked the Royal House [of Pepin,] whereupon the saint was slain by the sinners, and he went hence to live for ever in a mansion in the kingdom of heaven.

At Zaragoza, in Spain, [in the year 1485,] holy Peter of Arbues, the first Inquisitor of the Faith in the kingdom of Aragon, who was cruelly murdered by some relapsed Jews for the sake of that Catholic faith which in his office he was zealously protecting. Pope Pius IX. enrolled his name among those of the holy martyrs.

Upon the same day, the holy Agathoclia, the handmaid of a certain unbelieving woman, who afflicted her of a long time with stripes and other sufferings, to make her deny Christ, and at length brought her before the judge, by whose orders she was very cruelly mangled; and forasmuch as she still remained firm in the confession of the faith, her tongue was cut out, and she was cast into the fire.

At Cordova, [in the persecution under the Moors, in the ninth century,] the holy Virgin and martyr Columba.

At Milan, the holy Confessor Satyrus, whose excellences are recorded by his holy brother Ambrose.

At Rome, the holy Matron Theodora, who ministered constantly to the holy martyrs in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Bingen, in the diœcese of Mainz, [in the year 1179,] the holy Virgin Hildegarde.

Vespers are of the following.

SEPTEMBER 17.

The Marking of the Body of St Francis with the Marks of the Lord Jesus.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is said thus :

This is the day when JESU's true Confessor,
Whose happy Festal here His people keep,
First in his flesh the five marks of his Blesser,
Bore printed deep.

Verse. Lord, Thou didst mark Thy servant Francis.

Answer. With the marks of our Redemption.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who, when the love of many was waxing cold, didst manifest once more the holy marks of Thine own Suffering in the flesh of Thy most blessed servant Francis, to the end that our hearts might kindle again with the fire of the love of Thyself, be Thou entreated for Thy servant's sake, and grant to his and our prayers that we may effectually carry Thy Cross and bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs Cornelius and Cyprian. Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 608.)

MATTINS.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Galatians (v. 25.)

IF we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another. (vi.) Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ. For if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself. But let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another. For every man shall bear his own burden. Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things.

Second Lesson.

BE not deceived. God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. Ye see in what great letters I have written unto you with mine own hand. As many as desire to make a fair show in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised; only lest they should suffer persecution for the Cross of Christ. For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

Third Lesson.

BUT God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ, by Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. For in Christ JESUS neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israël of God. From henceforth let no man trouble me; for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord JESUS. Brethren, the grace of our Lord JESUS Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Readings upon the Life of St Francis, composed by St "Buona-Ventura," Cardinal Bishop [of Albano.] (13.)

FRANCIS being indeed a faithful servant and minister of Christ, about the space of two years before he gave back his spirit to heaven, withdrew himself into an high mountain apart, even that mountain which is called Mount Alverno, and began to fast for forty days to the honour of the Archangel Michaël. To think of the things above gave him sweeter comfort than beforetime he was wont, and the hot longing for heaven was kindled in him, so that he began to feel that the gifts from above were poured forth upon him in such fulness as he had never felt before. The burning of his desire made his heart rise towards God like the heart of a seraph, and his tender answering love yearned to be changed into the likeness of Him Who hath so loved us that He was content to bear the Cross. And it was so that one morning early, about the time of the Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, he was praying upon the side of the mountain, and there appeared unto him as it had been one of the Seraphim, having six wings, glorious and fiery, flying to him from heaven. It came therefore very swiftly, and stood in the air, hard by the man of God. He beheld then the appearance thereof that it was not winged only, but crucified also. His hands and feet were stretched forth and nailed to a Cross. Twain of his wings were lifted up and joined one to the other over his head, and twain were stretched forth to fly withal, and with twain he wrapped around his body. When Francis saw it, he was sore amazed, and his soul was filled with sorrow and gladness, for the eyes of him that appeared were full of strange love and tenderness, so that he conceived great rejoicing thereat, but the nailing to the Cross was so exceedingly dreadful, that as he saw it, a sword of sorrow pierced his soul.

Fifth Lesson.

THEN He Whom he beheld with his bodily eyes, began to speak silently unto him in his heart, and he understood that albeit the deathless Seraphim cannot suffer or faint, this vision was nevertheless therefore set before him, that he might know that as a friend of Christ he was to be all changed into the likeness of Christ JESUS crucified, not by the martyrdom of the body, but by the fervour of the soul. Then they held together some sweet converse, as of a man with his friend, and the vision passed from him, but his heart was kindled inwardly with the fire of the Seraphim, and his body was outwardly changed into the likeness of Him Who was crucified, even as wax is softened by the fire and taketh the impression of the seal. From thenceforth there were in his hands and feet the marks of the nails. The heads of the nails were seen in the palms of his hands and on the insteps of his feet, and the points came out on the backs of his hands and the soles of his feet. In his right side also was a long raw wound, as though he had been pierced with a spear, from which wound his holy blood oftentimes ran and stained his shirt and breeches.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREAFTER Francis was a new creature, famous for a new and awful sign. The holy marks of the Lord JESUS, whereon living man for twelve centuries had not been allowed to look, were his adornment. He came down from the mount bearing in himself the form of JESUS Crucified, not pourtrayed upon tables of stone or wood by the hand of any earthly craftsman, but drawn upon his flesh by the finger of the living God. The dying Seraph knew well that "it is good to keep close the secret of a king," (Tobit xii. 7,) and knowing the secret of his King, he strove as far as in him lay to keep the sacred marks hidden from men. Nevertheless, forasmuch as it is the will of the Lord God for His Own glory to make manifest the greatness of His Own works, He openly showed forth divers wonders through these wounds which He had Himself made in secret, so that the hidden and wondrous power of the marks might become known by the fame of the miracles.

The foregoing marvellous but thoroughly witnessed facts, which were already spoken of in Papal documents with especial praise and joy, were made, by the pleasure of Pope Benedict XI., the subject of a yearly memorial, which was afterwards extended by Paul V. to the whole Church, in the hope of fanning in the hearts of the faithful the love of Christ Crucified.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.)

Eighth Responsory.

God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord JESUS Christ, by Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

Verse. For I bear in my body the marks of the Lord JESUS.

Answer. By Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. By Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

If this be an Ember-day the Ninth Lesson will be taken from the Homily thereof, and the Ember-day will be commemorated at Lauds.

At Lauds the third verse of the Hymn is altered thus:

Again returns the sacred day
With heavenly glory bright,
When Thou wast pleased upon his flesh
Thine own dread Marks to write.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Osimo, the holy Confessor Joseph of Cupertino, of the Order of Friars Minors Conventuals, whose name Pope Clement XIII. enrolled among those of the saints.

Upon the same day, holy Methodius, Bishop first of Olympus in Lycia, and afterward of Tyre, very famous for his clear words and teaching, who, as is written by holy Jerome, was crowned with martyrdom at Chalcis, in Greece, at the end of the last persecution.

In the country of Vienne, the holy martyr Ferreolus, of Tribunitial rank. [During the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] he was tried by command of the wicked President Crispin, and first most cruelly beaten, then heavily loaded with chains and cast into a foul prison. God loosed his chains, and the gates of the prison opened, and he went forth, but he was followed and again taken, and received the crown of martyrdom by being beheaded.

Also the holy martyrs Sophia and Irene.

At Milan, [in the fourth century,] holy Eustorgius I., Bishop of that city, famous through the witness of blessed Ambrose.

At Gortyna, in Crete, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Eumenius, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

SEPTEMBER 18.

St Joseph of Cupertino, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As far as St Joseph is concerned these begin with the Chapter.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] I am dead, and my life is hid with Christ in God.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who art pleased that Thine Only-begotten Son being lifted up from the earth should draw all things unto Him, be entreated for the sake of Thy servant Joseph, whom Thou didst make like unto one of the Seraphim, and so effectually work in us, that even as he, we also may be drawn up above all earthly lusts, and worthily attain unto Him, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

[1] Cor. iii. 3.

A Commemoration is made of the Marking of St Francis. Verse and Answer and Prayer from the First Vespers of the Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Corinthians (iv. 6.)

GOD, Who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of JESUS Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in our body the dying of the Lord JESUS, that the life also of JESUS might be made manifest in our bodies. For we which live are alway delivered unto death for JESUS' sake, that the life also of JESUS might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

Second Lesson. (v. 1.)

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven; if so be that, being clothed, we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord (for we walk by faith, not by sight): but we are confident and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

Third Lesson. (xii. 1.)

IF it behoveth me to glory (but it is not expedient) yet I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I know a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell, or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth;) such an one to have been caught up to the third heaven. And I know such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth;) how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for man to utter. Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities. For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool: for I will say the truth: but I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me. And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me, and He said unto me: My grace is sufficient for thee: for My strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Joseph was born, of godly parents, at Cupertino, a small village of the diœcese of Nardo, between Brindisi and Otranto, [six miles from the coast of the Gulf of Tarento, upon the 17th day of June,] in the year of Redemption 1603. The love of God came to him early, and he passed his childhood and youth in great guilelessness and harmlessness. After recovering by the help of the Virgin Mother of God from a long and painful sickness which he bore very quietly, he gave himself altogether to godliness and self-improvement. God called him inwardly to higher things, and to give himself more utterly to His service, he determined in himself to join the "Seraphic"[1] Order. After divers failures and changes, he obtained his wish among the Friars of the convent of "La Grotella." He went first as a lay-brother, on account of his ignorance of letters, but God was pleased to allow him afterwards to be taken among the choir-brethren. After taking his solemn vows he was ordained Priest, and then set before him to aim at a more perfect life. To this end (as far as in him lay) he thrust from him all earthly affections and all carnal things, even to such as seem almost needful for life. He tormented his body with haircloth, scourging, spiked chains, and every kind of hardship and affliction. He fed his spirit sweetly upon the constant exercise of holy prayer, and gazing upon the highest matters. And so it came to pass that the love of God, which had been enkindled in his heart from his earliest years, burnt forth day by day more strangely and openly.

Fifth Lesson.

THE chief outcome of this love of God was the strong and marvellous trances whereinto he oftentimes fell. It was, nevertheless, strange to observe that after he had entirely lost his senses he could be called out of the trance by the mere order of his superiors. To be utterly obedient was one of his chief aims, and he was used to say that those who ruled him could lead him about like a blind man, and that it was better to die than not to obey. He so imitated the poverty of the Seraphic Patriarch,[2] that when he was at the point of death, when the Friars use to dispose of anything they have, he was able to tell his Superior that he had absolutely nothing. Thus bearing about in his body the dying of the Lord JESUS, the life also of JESUS was made manifest in his body. When he saw that certain persons had committed a foul sin of uncleanness, there came from him a strong savour, a proof of that snowy and glorious purity which, in spite of the most hideous temptations whereby the unclean spirit wrestled long to darken it, he kept undefiled, partly by an iron bridling of his senses, partly by the stern punishments he inflicted upon his own body, and partly by the extraordinary protection of the pure Virgin Mary, whom he was used to call his own Mother, whom he honoured and worshipped as his most tender Mother in his very heart of hearts, and whom he was eager that all men should honour, because, as he said, if we have her protection, every good thing comes with it.

[1] Laudatory name of the Franciscans.

[2] St Francis.

Sixth Lesson.

THIS eagerness on the part of the blessed Joseph was but one outcome from his love for his neighbours. So great was his zeal for souls, that he vehemently sought in all ways for the salvation of all. When he saw his neighbour in any trouble, whether it were poverty or sickness or any other affliction, his tenderness went out toward him, and he helped him as well as he could. They who reviled, and slandered, and insulted himself were not cut off from his love. He was used to welcome such with great long-suffering, meekness, and cheerfulness of countenance; and he preserved the same constantly amid many hardships and changes when he was sent hither and thither by command of the Superiors of his Order, and of the Holy Inquisition.[1] People and princes alike marvelled at the exceeding holiness of his life, and the spiritual gifts poured upon him from above, but he was so lowly, that he sincerely held himself to be chief among sinners, and earnestly besought God to take away from him the more showy of His gifts. Of men he entreated that after his death they would cast his body somewhere where his memory might soonest perish. But God, Who exalteth them of low degree, glorified His servant during life with the gifts of heavenly wisdom, of prophecy, of discerning the hidden thoughts of the heart, of healing, and of other spiritual gifts in marvellous abundance, gave him a precious death, and made the place of his rest glorious. He fell asleep in JESUS upon the very day and at the very place foretold by himself, that is, at Osimo, [between Ancona and Loreto, upon the 18th day of September,] in the 61st year of his own age, [and in that of salvation 1663.] He was famous for miracles even after his death, and Benedict XIV. enrolled his name among those of the Blessed, and Clement XIII. among those of the Saints. Clement XIV., being himself a member of the same Order, extended the use of the Office and Mass in memory of him to the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxii. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto the chief priests and Pharisees by parables, and said: The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Bk. ii. Hom. 38, 9.)

Dearly beloved brethren, ye have already entered, at the Lord's bidding, into the house where the marriage-feast is being held, that is to say, into the Holy Church, and look ye well to it, that when the King cometh in to see the guests, he see nothing amiss in your soul's wedding-garment. For indeed it is with great searchings of heart that we are behoven to consider that which so soon cometh. "And when the King came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding-garment." Dearly beloved brethren, what are we to think is signified by this wedding-garment? Is it baptism? or is it faith? But without baptism, or without faith, who could be seated at the marriage-feast? He that believeth not would still be without the house. What then, except love, must we understand by the wedding-garment? He who hath faith and is in the Holy Church, but hath not charity, cometh in unto the wedding indeed, but hath not a wedding-garment. And charity is well called the wedding-garment, for it is the garment wherewithal our Maker decked Himself when He came to wed the Church unto Himself.

Eighth Lesson.

IT was the work of God's love alone that His Only-begotten Son should wed Himself unto the souls of the elect. Whence indeed John saith: "God so loved the world, that He gave His Only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (iii. 16.) He therefore Whom love brought among men, showeth that the same love is His wedding-garment. Each one therefore of you who is in the Church and believeth in God, hath already come in unto the marriage-feast, but if he keep not the grace of charity, he is come in thither not having a wedding-garment. In sooth, my brethren, if one be asked to an earthly marriage, he changeth his attire, to show even by his garments that he rejoiceth in the joy of the Bride and Bridegroom, and he would be ashamed to appear in unseemly raiment among the guests that are feasting and making merry. We are come unto God's marriage-feast, and we make pretence to change the vesture of our hearts. There is joy among the angels when the elect are taken to heaven. With what face shall we look upon this spiritual feast if we come in thither not having charity, the only wedding-garment wherein we can appear comely?

Ninth Lesson. (On the Ember-days this is the Week-day Homily.)

WE must know that as every garment is woven upon two beams, an upper and a lower, so love is bound unto two commandments, the one bidding us to love God, and the other to love our neighbour. For thus is it written: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the Prophets." (Matth. xxii. 37-39.) In the which we are to see that bounds are set to that love wherewith we are to love our neighbour, for it is said: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." But to the love wherewith we are to love God are set no bounds, for it is said: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." A man is not commanded to what point he is to love God, but from what point, even as it is said, "with all"—for he only truly loveth God, who leaveth nothing for himself. We are behoven therefore to keep two commandments touching love, if we would be seen at the marriage with a wedding-garment.

[1] He was denounced before it as an impostor, and, although the charge failed, he was, for some reason or other, kept more or less strictly confined in different convents of his Order for the rest of his life.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The Lord showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.[1]

If needful, a Commemoration of Ember-day. (But at neither Vespers.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Puzzuoli, in Campania, the holy martyrs Januarius, Bishop of Benevento, Festus his Deacon, and Desiderius his Reader, Sosius, a Deacon of the Church of Miseno, Proculus, a Deacon of Puzzuoli, [and two laymen named respectively] Eutyches and Acutius, who were chained and imprisoned, and at length beheaded, under the Emperor Diocletian. The body of the holy Januarius was carried to Naples, and honourably buried in the church there, where also is still kept in a glass phial some of the blood of this most blessed martyr, which is seen to melt and bubble, as though it were fresh, when it is put in sight of his head.

At Nocera, the holy martyrs Felix and Constance, who suffered under Nero.

In Palestine, the holy martyrs Peleus, Nilus, and Elias, Bishops of Egypt, who, in the time of the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, were, along with many other clerks, consumed with fire for Christ's sake.

On the same day, under the Emperor Probus, the holy martyrs Trophimus, Sabbatius, and Dorymedon. Sabbatius was flogged to death at Antioch, by command of Atticus the President; Trophimus was sent to Synnada to the President Perennius, and there, after being put to many torments, he was beheaded along with the Senator Dorymedon.

At Cordova, in the persecution under the Arabs, [in the ninth century,] the holy Virgin and martyr Pomposa.

At Canterbury, holy Theodore, Archbishop of that city, who was sent into England by Pope Vitalian, and was a burning and a shining light for teaching and holiness. [We keep his feast upon the 26th day of this present month of September.]

At Tours, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Eustochius, Bishop [of that see,] a man of many graces.

In the country of Langres, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest and Confessor Sequanus.

At Barcelona, in Spain, the blessed Virgin Mary de Cervelhon, of the Order of St Mary of Ransom, who, because of her ready help to them that call upon her, is commonly called Helpful Mary.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

SEPTEMBER 19.

The Holy Martyrs Januarius, Bishop [of Benevento,] and his Companions.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, O God, Who year by year, &c., (p. 608.)

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards the Martyrs, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Joseph of Cupertino.

Antiphon. [2] I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ JESUS my Lord.

Verse. The Lord guided the just in right paths.

Answer. And showed him the kingdom of God.

Prayer from the foregoing Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. (On Ember-day from Rom. viii. 12, p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WHAT time the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian were furiously raging against Christians,[3] Januarius, Bishop of Benevento, was taken to Nola, to Timothy, President of Campania, on the charge of professing the Christian faith. There his firmness was tried divers ways, and he was cast into a burning fiery furnace, but came forth thence unhurt, for neither upon his raiment nor upon the hairs of his head did the flame take any hold. Thereupon the wrath of the President was enkindled, and he commanded the martyr to be torn limb from limb. But in the meanwhile Januarius' Deacon Festus and his Reader Desiderius were taken, and the whole three were led in bonds to Puzzuoli in front of the President's carriage, and there thrown into the same prison wherein were already held four other Christians condemned to be devoured by wild beasts, that is to say, Sosius, a Deacon of Miseno; Proculus, a Deacon of Puzzuoli; and two laymen, named respectively Eutyches and Acutius.

Fifth Lesson.

THE next day all seven were exposed to the wild beasts in the amphitheatre, but these creatures forgot their natural fierceness, and lay down at the feet of Januarius. Timothy would have it that this came from charms, and commanded the witnesses of Christ to be beheaded. Thereupon he became of a sudden blind, until Januarius had prayed for him; by the which miracle nearly five thousand persons were turned to Christ. But this good turn roused up no gratitude in the President, yea, rather, the conversion of so many drave him wild, and in his hot fear to obey the decrees of the Emperors he commanded that the holy Bishop and his companions should be smitten with the sword.

[1] Apoc. xxii. 1.

[2] Phil. iii. 8.

[3] In the year 305.

Sixth Lesson.

THE cities of those coasts strove to obtain their bodies for honourable burial, so as to make sure of having in them advocates with God. By God's will the reliques of Januarius were taken to Naples at last, after having been carried from Puzzuoli to Benevento, and from Benevento to Monte Vergine; when they were brought thence to Naples, they were laid in the chief Church there, and there have been famous on account of many miracles. Among these is remarkable the stopping of eruptions of Mount Vesuvius, whereby both that neighbourhood and also places afar off have been like to have been brought to desolation. It is also well known, and is the plain fact, seen even unto this day, that when the blood of Januarius, kept dried up in a small glass phial, is put in sight of the head of the same martyr, it is used to melt and bubble in a very strange way, as though it had but freshly been shed.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 3.)

AT that time: As JESUS sat upon the Mount of Olives, His disciples came unto Him privately, saying: Tell us, when shall these things be? And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comm. on Matth. xxv.)

"His disciples came unto Him privately, saying: Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the end of the world?" Here are in one question three several points, and the answers are to be understood of three several times, and by three several interpretations. "When shall these things be?" And herein He taught them concerning the fall of the city [of Jerusalem], whereof He made plain announcement, lest the unlearned might fall a prey to any deceiver. For within the lifetime of His then hearers were to come many, saying: I am Christ. He giveth warning therefore beforehand, lest such pestilential liars should gain any belief.

Eighth Lesson.[1]

"SEE that ye be not troubled," saith the Lord, "for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. [For nation shall rise up against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows.] Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for My Name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise and shall deceive many." (One such false prophet was Nicolas, one of the seven Deacons.) "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold."

Ninth Lesson. (On Ember-day omit this; or read it with the last, and here read the Week-day Homily.)

"BUT he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this Gospel shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." When the knowledge of the heavenly revelation had been carried everywhere, then should come the fall and end of Jerusalem; then should the punishment of them that had not believed, and the awful example of the city that had been destroyed, bear out the truth of the preacher. When she had stoned, and hunted down, and murdered the Apostles, then should she be consumed by famine, and war, and slavery. And indeed she would then have shown herself unworthy to be any longer, having shown by casting out the preachers of Christ that she was unworthy that any should speak to her of God.

On Ember-day a Commemoration thereof is made at Lauds.

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow is the Eve of the holy Apostle and Evangelist Matthew.

Upon the same 20th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Eustace and Theopista his wife along with their two sons Agapitus and Theopistus, who, under the Emperor Hadrian, were condemned to be devoured by wild beasts, but, as by God's help these would not touch them, they were shut up in a bull of hot bronze, and so finished their testimony.

At Cyzicus, in the Propontis, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyrs, the Virgin Fausta and Evilasius. Evilasius was a priest of idols who shaved Fausta's head to put her to shame, hung her up, and tormented her, then he was fain to cause her to be cut in two, but the executioners could not hurt her; whereupon he was confounded and believed in Christ. Then was he mightily tormented, by command of the Emperor, and Fausta was pierced through the head and nails fixed into her whole body, and so was laid upon a vessel of burning metal; and then a voice came from heaven and called them both together to go to be with the Lord.

In Phrygia, the holy martyrs Denys and Privatus.

Also the holy martyr Priscus, who was stabbed with poignards and beheaded.

At Perge, in Pamphylia, under the Emperor Antonine, the holy martyrs Theodore and Philippa his mother, and their Companions.

At Carthage, the holy Virgin and martyr Candida, who was crowned with martyrdom under the Emperor Maximian, her whole body being torn with stripes.

---

[1] The Latin of this Lesson is a sort of oratorical paraphrase of the Gospel words which I have thought it best to restore to their own purity.

Also, [in the fourth century, at Beyt Jabryn, in Palestine,] the holy martyrs Susanna and Martha, of the whom Susanna was the daughter of Arthemius, a priest of idols.

Upon the same day, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Pope Agapitus, whose holiness is recorded by blessed Gregory the Great.

At Milan, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Clicerius, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

SEPTEMBER 20.

The Holy Martyrs Eustace and his Companions.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602), except the following.

Prayer throughout, "O God, by Whose mercy, &c.," inserting the words, "Eustace and his Companions," (p. 608.)

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer as in their Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. (On Ember-day from Rom. viii. 12, p. 603. The Ninth Lesson will be of the Ember-day, a Commemoration of the same being made at Lauds. On Ember-day there is no Lesson or Commemoration of the Eve of St Matthew.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

EUSTACE (whose name before his Baptism was Placidus) was a Roman, alike well-known on account of his noble birth, his great earthly wealth, and his eminent distinction as a soldier. He gained, under the Emperor Trajan, the post of military commander. Once upon a time he was hunting, and following an extraordinarily large stag, when the beast stood still, and Eustace saw between his horns a tall and glorious figure of the Lord Christ hanging upon the Cross, whence came a voice bidding him to follow after life eternal. Thereupon Eustace and his wife Theopista, and their two little sons Agapitus and Theopistus, enlisted themselves as soldiers under the Great Captain, Christ.

Fifth Lesson.

IN a little while he went back, according as the Lord had commanded him, to the place where he had seen the first vision, and there he heard from God how much he was to bear for His glory. It was not long after that he had great losses and became exceedingly poor, but he bore it very patiently. Then he was constrained to fly away privily, and on the journey was grievously afflicted in that, first, his wife and then his children were parted from him and carried he knew not whither. Under the weight of these sorrows he lay hid a long while in a far off place, working as the steward of a land owner, until the voice of God called him forth, and Trajan sought for him again to make him a captain in his army.

Sixth Lesson.

WHILE he was with the army he found his wife and children once more, by an unexpected happiness, and re-entered the city [of Rome] as a conquering soldier amid the loud applause of all men, but thereupon, when he was commanded to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving for the victory to the gods that are no gods, he stoutly refused. They tried him in vain with divers cajoleries to make him deny Christ, but could not, and he and his wife and little ones were thrown to the lions. When these beasts would not touch them, the Emperor's fury was kindled, and he commanded them all to be shut up in the brazen image of a bull, which was heated with fire underneath. There they praised God until their testimony was ended, and they departed hence to be perfectly blessed for ever and ever, upon the 20th day of September. Their bodies were buried whole by the faithful, with deep reverence, and were afterwards honourably carried to a Church built in their name.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth.

Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Eve of St Matthew.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (v. 27.)

AT that time: JESUS saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom; and He said unto him: Follow me. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Book v. Comment. on Luke v.)

There is a mystery in this calling of the publican, whom He biddeth to follow Him, not so much by bodily steps as by change of heart. Hitherto Levi had been making greedy gains from merchandise, cruel riches at the cost of sailors' toils and dangers; but now, at the call of a word, he, who had been plundering other men's goods, leaveth his own. He leaveth that base station, and followeth hard after the Lord with all his heart.

"And Levi made Him a great feast in his own house." He that welcometh Christ into his home, feasteth upon the excellency of all pleasures.

LAUDS.

A Commemoration is made of the Eve. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer, of the Week-day. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 575.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of September, were born into the better life—

The holy Apostle and Evangelist Matthew, who suffered in Ethiopia, where he had preached the Gospel. A copy of his Gospel written in the Hebrew language was, by a revelation from himself, found in the time of the Emperor Zeno, along with the body of the blessed Apostle Barnabas.

In the land of Shaar, the holy prophet Jonah, who is buried in Gath.

At Rome, the holy martyr Pamphilus.

Likewise at Rome, at the twentieth milestone from the city upon the Claudian Way, the holy Bishop and martyr [Pope] Alexander [I.] Under the Emperor Antonine, he, for Christ's faith's sake, overcame fettering, cudgelling, racking, burning with lamps, tearing with hooks, exposure to wild beasts, and the fire of a furnace, and being at last beheaded won the life of glory that fadeth not away. The blessed Pope Damasus afterwards brought his body into the city on the 26th day of November, upon the which day he commanded a feast to be kept in his honour.

In Phœnicia, the holy martyr Eusebius, who went openly to the Prefect and proclaimed himself a Christian, for the which cause he was put to many torments and then beheaded.

In Cyprus, the holy Bishop and martyr Isacius, and there also the holy Bishop and Confessor Meletius.

In Ethiopia, the holy Virgin Iphigenia, who was baptized and consecrated to God by the blessed Apostle Matthew, and fell asleep in a holy death.

The Feast begins at sunset.

SEPTEMBER 21.

St Matthew, Apostle and Evangelist.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

HELP us, O Lord, by the prayers of Thine holy Apostle and Evangelist Matthew, that what for ourselves we are not able to obtain, may be freely given us at his petition. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Eustace, and his wife and children. All from the Common Office. Prayer as before.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ezek. i. 1, (p. 592.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IT came to pass one day at Capernaum, that Christ "went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom; and He said unto him: Follow Me. And he left all, rose up, and followed Him. And Levi made Him a great feast in his own house." This Levi is the Apostle and Evangelist Matthew. After that Christ was risen again from the dead, and while he was yet in Judea, before he set forth for that land which had fallen to the lot of his preaching, he wrote the Gospel of JESUS Christ in the Hebrew tongue, for the sake of them of the circumcision who had believed. His was the first written of the four Gospels. Thereafter he went to Ethiopia, and there preached the Gospel, confirming his preaching with many miracles.

Fifth Lesson.

OF his miracles, the most notable was that he raised the King's daughter from the dead, and thereby brought to believe in Christ the King her father, his wife, and all that region. After that the King was dead, Hirtacus, who came after him, was fain to take his daughter Iphigenia to wife, but by the exhortation of Matthew she had made vow of her maidenhood to God, and stood firm to that holy resolution, for which cause Hirtacus commanded to slay the Apostle at the Altar while he was performing the mystery. He crowned the dignity of the Apostleship with the glory of martyrdom upon the 21st day of September. His body had been brought to Salerno, where it was afterwards buried in a Church dedicated in his name during the Popedom of Gregory VII., and there it is held in great worship and sought to by great gatherings of people.

Sixth Lesson, from St Gregory's exposition of Ezekiel, (p. 593.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (ix. 9.)

AT that time: JESUS saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom; and He saith unto him: Follow Me. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Comment. on Matth. ix.)

The other Evangelists, out of tenderness towards the reputation and honour of Matthew, have abstained from speaking of him as a publican by his ordinary name, and have called him Levi. Both names were his. But Matthew himself (according to that that Solomon hath: "The just man is the first to accuse himself," Prov. xviii. 17, and again, in another place: [1] "Declare thou thy sins that thou mayest be justified,") doth plainly call himself Matthew the publican, to show unto his readers that none need be hopeless of salvation if he will but strive to do better, since he himself had been all of a sudden changed from a publican into an Apostle.

Eighth Lesson.

PORPHYRY and the Emperor Julian [the Apostate] will have it that the account of this call of Matthew is either a stupid blunder on the part of a lying writer, or else that it showeth what fools they were who followed the Saviour, to go senselessly after any one who called them. But there can be no doubt that before the Apostles believed they had considered the great signs and works of power which had gone before. Moreover, the glory and majesty of the hidden God, which shone somewhat through the Face of the Man Christ JESUS, were enough to draw them which gazed thereon, even at first sight. For if there be in a stone a magnetic power which can make rings and straws and rods come and cleave thereunto, how much more must not the Lord of all creatures have been able to draw unto Himself them whom He called?

---

[1] Isa. xliii. 26. (?)

Ninth Lesson.

"And it came to pass, as JESUS sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Him." They saw how that a publican who had turned to better things had found a place of repentance, and therefore they also hoped for salvation. It was not, as the Scribes and Pharisees complained, sinners clinging to their sinfulness who came to JESUS, but sinners repenting, as indeed appeareth from the next words of the Lord, where He saith: "I will have mercy and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." The Lord went to eat with sinners to the end that He might have occasion to teach, and to break spiritual bread unto them which bade Him.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Thomas of Villanueva, Bishop of Valencia, in Spain, of whom mention is made upon the 8th day of this present month of September.

Upon the same 22nd day of September, were born into the better life—

At Sitten, in Switzerland, the holy martyrs of the Theban Legion—Maurice, Exuperius, Candidus, Victor, Innocent, Vitalis, and their Comrades, who were massacred for Christ's sake under the Emperor Maximian, and have enlightened the whole world by the glory of their passion.

At Rome, under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, the holy Virgins Digna and Emerita, both martyrs. Their reliques are kept in the Church of St Marcellus.

At Châtres, the holy martyr Jonah, a Priest, who came into Gaul along with holy Denys, and was, by command of the Prefect Julian, flogged and beheaded.

At Ratisbon, in Bavaria, [in the seventh century,] the holy martyr Emmeram, the Bishop who, in order that he might deliver others, patiently submitted to a most cruel death for Christ's sake.

At Antinoopolis, in Egypt, the holy martyrs Irais, a Virgin of Alexandria, and her Companions. She was gone out to draw water from a well near by when she saw a ship full of confessors of Christ, and thereupon she forthwith left her water-pot and joined them, and was brought along with them into the city, where she first of all, after many torments, was beheaded, and then all the rest, of whom some were Priests, Deacons, or Virgins, were put to the same death.

At Meaux, blessed Sanctinus, a disciple of holy Denys the Areopagite, who consecrated him Bishop of that city, where he was the first to preach the Gospel.

In the country of Coutances, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Lauto, Bishop [of that see.]

In Poitou, [in the fifth century,] the holy Priest Florence.

In the country of Bourges, [in the first century,] the holy Confessor Silvan.

At Laon, [in the seventh century,] the holy widow Salaberga, Abbess [of the Monastery of St John the Baptist.]

At Second Vespers, a Commemoration is made of St Thomas of Villanueva.

Antiphon. He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor: his righteousness endureth for ever.

Verse. The Lord loved him and adorned him.

Answer. He hath put on him a robe of honour.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Who didst adorn the blessed Bishop Thomas with the grace of an excellent pitifulness toward the needy, we entreat Thee for the same Thy servant's sake mercifully to pour forth the riches of Thine own pitifulness upon all them which cry unto Thee.

Then of the Holy Martyrs Maurice and his Companions. Antiphon, and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for Many Martyrs.

Prayer.

GIVE us joy, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, in the glad and solemn Feast-day of Thine holy Martyrs, Maurice and his Comrades, and let their Birth-day make us prouder as their prayers do make us stronger. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

SEPTEMBER 22.

St Thomas of Villanueva, Archbishop, [of Valencia,] and Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. (On Ember-day from 1 Tim. iii. 1, p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THOMAS of Villanueva[1] was born of excellent parentage, in the town of Fuenlana, in the Diœcese of Toledo in Spain, in the year of our Lord 1488, and was early taught godliness, and an especial pitifulness towards the needy. Of this grace he gave many ensamples while he was still a lad, whereof it is an eminent one that he more than once stripped himself of raiment of his own, in order to clothe the naked. He was become a man when the death of his father called him from Alcala, whither he had been sent to work as a student in the great College of St Alonzo. He gave all the inheritance which fell to him to feed poor unmarried women, and forthwith returned to Alcala, and finished his course in Theology. He was so eminent in learning that he was commanded to take a Professorship in that University, and delivered remarkable Lectures upon Philosophy and Theology. Meanwhile he ceased not earnestly to entreat of the Lord in prayer the knowledge of the Saints, and to know what was the path of life whereunto he was called. In course of time, by the inspiration of God, he entered the Institute of Hermits of St Austin.

---

[1] His surname was Garcias, but his parents were originally from Villanueva de los Infantes, where he was sent to school, about two miles from Fuenlana.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the Order wherein he had professed, he was marked for all that maketh a good and edifying Friar, for lowliness, for long-suffering, for cleanness-of-heart, but, above all, for the warmth of his charity. Amid divers and hard works, he let his spirit never faint from prayer and study of the things of God. On account of his holiness and learning he was bidden to undertake the work of preaching, and, by the help of God's grace, was the means of drawing countless souls out of the slough of sin into the way that leadeth unto life. Being raised to rule over his brethren, he so joined wisdom, justice, and gentleness with watchfulness and firmness, that he either established or restored in many places the original discipline of his Order.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was named to the Archbishoprick of Granada, but, with excellent lowliness and firmness, he refused to take so high a place. However, not long after, he was forced by the commands of his superiors to accept the government of the Church of Valencia, which he discharged for nearly eleven years with the reputation of a most holy and watchful shepherd of souls. His elevation changed nowise his way of life, except to give greater scope to his wonderful charity by placing the revenues of a wealthy Church at his disposal to distribute to the poor. He did not leave himself even a bed; that on which he was lying when he was called to heaven, he had only on loan from a person to whom he had shortly before given it as an alms. He fell asleep in the Lord upon the 8th day of September, in the 69th year of his own age, [and of our Lord 1555.] God was pleased to approve the holiness of His servant by miracles, both during his life and after his death, whereof are specially remarked that when he had utterly emptied his barn by giving away all his corn to the poor, it was suddenly found full again, and that a dead boy was raised to life at his grave. Finding him famous for these signs, and not a few others, Pope Alexander VII. enrolled him in the list of the Saints, and ordered that his memory should be held in remembrance upon the 18th day of September.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, to make room for the following.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs, but on Ember-day this is the Week-day Homily.)

WHEN the Emperor Maximian led his army into Gaul, he stopped at the frontiers of the Seduni to offer a sacrifice. The Theban legion, that they might not be defiled by any share in the unhallowed rites, withdrew themselves from the rest of his army. Therefore the Emperor sent soldiers unto them to bid them in his name, if they valued their lives, come back into the camp to the sacrifice. They answered that the Christian religion did not allow them. This answer enkindled in him greater wrath than before. He therefore despatched a part of his army to the Thebans, with orders to begin by killing one man in every ten of them. By their own will, and at the urgent exhortation of Maurice, they chose rather to endure this martyrdom than to do the commandment of the unrighteous Emperor. At the last, the Emperor, upon the 22nd day of September, bade his whole army fall upon them and slay them all. They confessed Christ bravely even to the end.

LAUDS.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. All the congregation of the Saints shall declare his alms.[1]

Prayer throughout the Office as at the Commemoration last evening.

Then a Commemoration of the Holy Martyrs. Prayer as last evening.

On Ember-day a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of September, was born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr Pope Linus. He was the first successor of the blessed Apostle Peter in the government of the Church of Rome, was crowned with martyrdom, and is buried upon the Vatican Hill, hard by the Apostle.

At Iconium, in Lycaonia, the holy Virgin and martyr Thecla. She was converted to the faith by the holy Apostle Paul. Under the Emperor Nero she overcame fire and beasts for her confession of Christ, and after many contendings, wherein she was victorious, for the teaching of many, she came to Seleucia, and there fell asleep in peace. The holy Fathers do greatly extol her.

In Campania is made commemoration of the blessed Sosius, Deacon of the Church of Miseno. One while when he was reading the Gospel in the church, the holy Bishop Januarius saw flames rising from his head, and foretold that he would be a martyr. Neither was it many days afterward, when, being himself of the age of thirty years, he was beheaded along with the said Bishop, and so received martyrdom.

On the same day, were also born into the better life—

In Africa, the holy martyrs Andrew, John, Peter, and Anthony.

In the country of Coutances, the holy martyr Paternus, the Bishop.

At Ancona, holy Constantius, watchman of the Church [of St Stephen,] who was remarkable for his grace of working miracles.

In Spain, the holy women Xantippe and Polyxena, who were disciples of the Apostles.

SECOND VESPERS.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed

A Commemoration is made of St Linus, Pope and Martyr. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," from the Common.

Then of the Holy Virgin Martyr Thecla.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, unto all Thy servants who do here keep the birthday of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Thecla, and do year by year rejoice at her solemn commemoration, that they may have grace to follow after the pattern of her great faith. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SEPTEMBER 23.

St Linus, Pope and Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. (On Ember-day from Acts xx. 17, p. 594.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

POPE Linus was by birth a native of Velletri in Tuscany, and was the immediate successor of Peter in the government of the Church. His faith and holiness were such that he not only cast out devils, but also raised the dead. He wrote the acts of Blessed Peter, and especially the history of his strife with Simon Magus. He forbade women to enter the Church without having a veil upon their heads. His own head was cut off, on account of his firmness in confessing Christ, by command of the godless Consular Saturninus, an unthankful wretch whose own daughter he had delivered from being tormented by a devil. He was buried upon the Vatican Mount, hard by the grave of the Prince of the Apostles, upon the 23rd day of September. He sat as Pope eleven years, two months, and twenty-three days. He held two December ordinations, wherein he made fifteen Bishops, and eighteen Priests.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons from St Ambrose on Ps. cxviii., (p. 600.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 597.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For St Thecla—but on Ember-day this is the Week-day Homily.)

THE virgin Thecla was the daughter of noble parents at Iconium, and a disciple of the Apostle Paul. She is the subject of extraordinary praises by the holy Fathers. In the eighteenth year of her age, she parted from one Thamiris, to whom she had been betrothed, and her kindred accused her of being a Christian. A pile was set a-fire for her, unless she should deny Christ, but she made the sign of the Cross, and willingly entered it, and rain came, and put out the fire. She came to Antioch, where they threw her to wild beasts; and strove to tear her asunder, by tying her to oxen driven different ways; and cast her into a pit with many snakes; but by the mercy of JESUS Christ she was delivered from all. The warmth of her faith and the holiness of her life brought many to Christ. She returned into her own country, and withdrew to be an hermit, alone on a certain mountain, and passed away to be with the Lord, aged ninety years, and famous for many good works and miracles. She was buried at Seleucia.

At Lauds, a Commemoration is made of St Thecla.

On Ember-day, a Commemoration of the Week-day.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the feast of the blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Ransom.

Upon the same 24th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Autun, the holy martyrs Andochius a Priest, Thyrsus a Deacon, and Felix. Blessed Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, sent Andochius and Thyrsus from the east to teach in Gaul, where they were [received as guests by the noble Felix. In the end they and he were] most heavily scourged, and hung up all day by the hands, then cast into the fire, but as they were not burnt their necks were broken with bars, and so they received a right glorious crown.

In Egypt, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Paphnutius and his Companions. He was dwelling in the desert when he heard that many Christians were kept in chains; wherefore the Spirit of God moved him to go of his own free will to the Prefect, and profess himself a Christian. The Prefect had him first bound in iron fetters, and racked for a very long time; then he sent him, and many others, to Diocletian, by whose command Paphnutius was hung upon a palm-tree, and the others were beheaded.

At Chalcedon, nine-and-forty holy martyrs, who were condemned to be devoured by wild beasts, under the Emperor Diocletian, after the martyrdom of holy Euphemia, but by the will of God they were delivered from the beasts, then they were beheaded, and so passed away to heaven.

In Hungary, [in the year 1047,] the holy martyr Gerard [Sagredo,] Bishop of Chonad, called the Apostle of Hungary. By birth he was a nobleman of Venice, and was the first of his countrymen who adorned their fatherland by the glory of martyrdom.

In Auvergne, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Rusticus, Bishop [of Clermont.]

In the country of Beauvais, [in the seventh century,] holy Geremar, Abbat [of Flay, now called after him Saint-Germer.]

SEPTEMBER 24.

The Blessed Virgin, styled "of Ransom."

Greater Double.

All as in the Common Office, (p. 633,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst use the glorious Mother of Thy Son as a mean to ransom Christ's faithful people out of the hands of the unbelievers, by enriching Thy Church with yet another family, grant, we beseech Thee, that we who reverently honour her as the Foundress of that great work, may for her sake and by her prayers, be redeemed from all sin and all bondage unto the evil one. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Linus.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Prov. viii., ix., as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN the early part of the thirteenth century of the era of our Lord, the greatest and fairest part of Spain lay crushed under the yoke of the Saracens, and countless numbers of the faithful were held in brutal slavery, with the most lively danger of being made to deny the Christian faith and of losing everlasting salvation. Amid such sorrows the most Blessed Queen of heaven came mercifully to the rescue, and showed how the greatness of her motherly love was fain for their redemption. Holy Peter Nolasco, in the full bloom of the treasures of godliness as well as rich in earthly wealth, was earnestly pondering with himself how he could succour so many suffering Christians dwelling in bondage to the Moors. To him appeared with gracious visage the Most Blessed Virgin, and bade him know that it would be well-pleasing in her own sight, and in the sight of her Only-begotten Son, that an Order of Religious men should be founded in her honour, whose work it should be to redeem prisoners from Mohammedan slavery. Strengthened by this heavenly vision, the man of God began to burn with wonderful charity, nursing in his heart the one desire that he himself and the Order which he should found might exercise that love, greater than which hath no man, that a man lay down his life for his friends. (John xv. 13.)

Fifth Lesson.

UPON the same night the same most holy Virgin appeared to the Blessed Raymund de Peñafuerte, and to James, King of Aragon, charging them concerning the founding of the Order, and desiring them to help in raising up so great a work. Peter betook himself forthwith to the feet of Raymund, who was his confessor, and laid the matter before him, whom also he found taught from heaven, and to whose governance he right humbly submitted himself. Then came King James, who appointed to carry out this revelation, which himself also had received from the Most Blessed Virgin. The three took counsel together, and all with one consent entered upon the institution of an Order in honour of the said Virgin Mother, to be placed under the invocation of "St Mary of Ransom, for the redemption of captives."

Sixth Lesson.

UPON the 10th of August, in the year of our Lord 1218, the above-named King James decreed the establishment of this Order, thus already conceived by these holy men. The brethren take, [in addition to the vows of Poverty, Chastity, and Obedience,] a fourth vow, whereby they bind themselves to remain in pawn with the unbelievers, if need so require, for the liberation of Christians. The King granted them the right to bear on their breasts his own Royal blazon, and obtained from Gregory IX. the confirmation of this Institute and Order so nobly marked by brotherly charity. God Himself, through the Virgin Mother, gave the increase, causing this Institute speedily and prosperously to spread through all the world, and to blossom with holy men, great in love and godliness, to spend in the redemption of their neighbours the alms which are committed to them by Christ's faithful people, to that end, and some whiles to give themselves up for the ransom of many. That due thanks might be rendered to God and to the Virgin Mother for the great blessing of this Institute, the See Apostolic among other well-nigh countless favours bestowed upon it, permitted that this special Feast-day should be kept and this Office said.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xi. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 638.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Ninian, Bishop of Galloway in Scotland, of whom mention is made upon the 16th day of this present month of September.

Upon the same 25th day of September, were born into the better life—

At the village of Emmaus, blessed Cleophas, the disciple of Christ, of whom it is said that he was slain by the Jews for confessing the Lord, and thereafter buried with glorious memory within the same house wherein he had prepared a table for the Lord.

At Rome, the holy martyr Herculan. He was a soldier who was turned to Christ on beholding the miracles that were wrought at the passion of the blessed bishop [Pope] Alexander [I.,] and was beheaded under the Emperor Antonine, after suffering many torments.

At Amiens, in Gaul, blessed Firmin, [of Pampeluna, first] Bishop [of Amiens,] who suffered martyrdom under the President Rictiovarus, in the persecution under Diocletian, by being beheaded, after enduring divers torments.

At Damascus, the holy martyrs Paul, Tatta his wife, and their sons Sabinian, Maximus, Rufus, and Eugene. On the accusation that they were Christians they were flogged and otherwise tormented, and gave up their souls to God.

In Asia, the holy martyrs Bardomian, Eucarpus, and twenty-six others.

On the same day, holy Anathalon; he was a disciple of the blessed Apostle Barnabas, and followed after him as Bishop of the Church of Milan.

At Lyons, [in the year 542,] holy

Lupus, Bishop [of that see,] who had been an hermit.

At Auxerre, [at the beginning of the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Anacharius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Blois, [at the beginning of the sixth century,] holy Solemnius, Bishop of Chartres, famous for miracles.

On the same day, [and at the distance of a few years,] holy Principius, Bishop of Soissons, brother to blessed Remi, Bishop of Rheims.

At Anagni, the holy Virgins Aurelia and Neomisia.

At San Severino, in the March of Ancona, [in the year 1721,] the holy Confessor Pacificus, of the Order of Franciscan Friars Minors of the Reformed Observance, a man of wonderful long-suffering and famous for his love of being alone, whose name Pope Gregory XVI. enrolled in the list of the saints.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Ninian from the Common Office of a Bishop and Confessor. Prayer, "Hear, O Lord, &c.," (p. 617.)

SEPTEMBER 25.

St Ninian, Bishop [of Galloway,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

Hear, O Lord, &c., (p. 617.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Ninian was a Briton by nation. While he was yet young, he left his country and kinsfolk and went to Rome, where he regularly learned the faith and the mysteries of the truth under the best teachers. When he had dwelt there for many years, and had made great way in holy letters, and in the knowledge of the Saints, the chief Pontiff sent him back into Britain as a Bishop to preach the Gospel of Christ to the unbelievers, of whom the most part dwelt in the northern half of the island.

Fifth Lesson.

HE went there therefore unto the people of the Picts, and by his preaching, which was commended unto them the more by the wonderful holiness of his life and the glory of his miracles, he happily brought a great multitude of them, even all that dwelt to the south of the Grampian chain of mountains, out of the darkness of idolatry and the shadow of death unto the true light which is Christ. He had his See at the place which is called Whithorn, from the church which he built there of white stone, after a fashion unused to the Britons, in honour of St Martin, and there also, when his pilgrimage was done, he fell asleep in the Lord, along with many other holy men whom he had gathered around him, about the middle of the fifth century, In the Roman Martyrology mention is made of him upon the 16th day of September.

Sixth Lesson. (From St Maximus of Turin.)

Our blessed Father Ninian, &c., (p. 619.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matthew xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of holy Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was sent into England by Pope Vitalian, and was a burning and a shining light for teaching and holiness; of whom mention is made upon the 19th day of this present month of September.

Upon the same 26th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Cyprian and Justina the Virgin. Justina suffered much for Christ's sake under Diocletian the Emperor and Eutholmius the President, and she converted to Christ the warlock Cyprian, who had sought by his magical arts to put her out of her mind, but along with whom she afterwards suffered martyrdom. Their bodies were cast out to be eaten by beasts, but certain Christian sailors took them by night and brought them to Rome, and they were afterwards taken to the church of the Most Holy Saviour, founded by the Emperor Constantine, where they are buried hard by the Baptistery.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Callistratus and forty-nine others, all soldiers. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, Callistratus was sewn up in a leathern sack and cast into the sea, and when, by the help of God, he escaped unharmed, the others were converted to Christ and suffered martyrdom along with him.

Likewise at Rome, [in the year 310,] the holy Confessor Pope Eusebius.

At Bologna, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Eusebius, Bishop [of that See.]

At Brescia, [in the sixth century,] holy Vigilius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Albano, holy Senator.

In the country of Frascati, [at the beginning of the eleventh century,] the blessed Abbat Nilus, a man of great holiness, Founder of the Monastery of Grotta-Ferrata, [of the Italian Congregation of the Order of St Basil.]

At Città di Castello, the holy Priest Amantius, famous for the grace of working miracles.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

SEPTEMBER 26.

St Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

Grant, we beseech Thee, &c., (p. 617.)

First Vespers as regards St Theodore begin with the Chapter.

The first verse of the Hymn is altered. A Commemoration is made of St Ninian, then of the Holy Martyrs Cyprian and Justina, from the Common Office for many Martyrs, (p. 602,) and the following.

Prayer.

LORD, let the succour of Thy blessed martyrs Cyprian and Justina never fail us, since Thou never ceasest to look in mercy upon any unto whom Thou dost grant the stay of such helpers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Theodore who, [like the Blessed Apostle Paul,] was a native of Tarsus, in Cilicia, was a monk well skilled in letters divine and human, upright in life and venerable in age. He was flourishing at Rome in godliness and learning when Pope Vitalian was in treaty to send an Archbishop to Canterbury after the death of Deusdedit, the sixth who had ministered to that church since blessed Augustine. The Pope offered this dignity to the Abbat Hadrian, who excused himself out of lowliness, and put forward Theodore. Theodore therefore was consecrated and sent into England by Vitalian, who gave him for a comrade the aforesaid Abbat Hadrian, a man in all way most learned, and eminent for all graces. As soon as he had come to his church he went through not his own diocese only, but also all the provinces of England, taking the said Hadrian with him everywhere. He was gladly welcomed by all, and established everywhere a right order of living and the canonical rule for the keeping of Easter. He also ordained Bishops in meet places, and corrected with their help such things as needed amending.

Fifth Lesson.

FORASMUCH as Theodore himself and the blessed Hadrian also were excellently taught in letters both sacred and profane, they opened everywhere Church schools, and when they had gathered the children together they poured richly upon their hearts every day a stream of saving knowledge. Hence the Venerable Bede saith that brighter times never shone upon England than those wherein Theodore administered her Church. She had kings who were both mighty and godly, and all men were longing for the joys of that heavenly kingdom whereof they had but just heard, and they that would be taught in heavenly reading had famous masters at hand. Many learnt by their instruction, and so lighted England by their teaching and holiness that this would seem to be the golden age of the Church of England. Neither did Theodore and Hadrian give sacred letters only to their hearers, but worldly learning also, as the handmaid of theology, and they so happily spread abroad the knowledge of the Latin and Greek languages that many of their disciples knew them as well as their own mother tongue wherein they were born.

Sixth Lesson.

BLESSED Theodore oftentimes held Synods, that he might establish and keep in their wholeness the purity of the faith and the discipline of the Church. In these Synods he passed wholesome decrees. He published a Book of Penitentials for the reformation of the lives of the faithful. His chief care was to ordain as Bishops in the churches of England men above all cavil. He it was who made blessed Chad, Bishop of Lichfield ; he it was who consecrated holy Erconwald, Bishop of the Church of London, holy John of Beverley, Bishop of the Church of Hexham, holy Cuthbert, Bishop of the Church of Lindisfarne, and men not less holy as Bishops in other churches. When the kings of England fell into disputes he so affected them by the authority which he enjoyed among them all, that they cast away their arms, and bound themselves together in the bond of a lasting peace. He had ministered in holiness to the Church committed unto him for the space of twenty-two years, and was himself of the age of four score and eight years, when he passed away to be ever with the Lord, in the year of Christ 690, upon the 19th day of September, upon the which day he is mentioned with honour in the Roman Martyrology. He was buried with his predecessors in the Church of St Peter at Canterbury. Concerning him blessed Bede beareth witness that it may rightly and truly be said that "their bodies were buried in peace, but their name liveth for evermore." (Ecclus. xliv. 14.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matthew xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

The Ninth Lesson is read along with the Eighth to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (Of the Holy Martyrs.)

CYPRIAN was firstly a warlock and lastly a Martyr. A certain young man having a violent lust after a Christian maiden named Justina, employed him to excite her to join in this lewdness, by dint of incantations and philters. Cyprian thereupon asked counsel of the devil, how he might best gain that end. But the devil answered him that these arts are only thrown away upon true worshippers of Christ. This answer troubled Cyprian, and he began to repent heartily of the course of life he had hitherto led. And then he forsook his arts magic, and gave himself wholly up to the faith of the Lord Christ. For this cause, he and the Virgin Justina were arrested together, beaten with blows and scourging, and cast into prison, if haply they might change their mind. Being brought out of the prison, but still standing fast in their Christian religion, they were dipped in a vessel full of hot pitch, fat, and wax, and in the end beheaded, at Nicomedia, [on the 26th day of September, in the year of our Lord 304.] Their bodies were thrown out, and lay unburied for the space of six days, at the end of which time some sailors took them secretly by night on board a ship and carried them to Rome. They were first buried on the farm of the noble Lady Rufina, but afterwards brought into the city, where they lie hard by the Baptistery in the Church of [the Saviour, built by] Constantine.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of SS. Cyprian and Justina. Prayer from the preceding evening.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 27th day of September, were born into the better life—

At Ægæ, in Cilicia, the holy brethren Cosmas and Damian, both martyrs. They were beheaded in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, after they had suffered many torments, bonds, and imprisonment, and after God had enabled them to overcome, in the sea and in the fire, crucifixion, stoning, and arrows. Along with them it is stated that there suffered also three more, who were brethren unto them, namely Anthimus, Leontius, and Euprepius.

At Rome, the holy Epicharis, a woman of senatorial rank, who, in the same persecution, was beaten with scourges loaded with lead, and then beheaded.

At Todi, under the same Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Fidentius and Terence.

At Cordova, [in the ninth century,] the holy brethren Adolph and John, both martyrs, who were crowned for Christ's sake in the persecution under the Arabs.

At Semont, in Gaul, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Florentine, who had his tongue cut out, and was then beheaded, along with the blessed Hilary.

At Byblos, in Phœnicia, the holy Mark, Bishop [of that see,] who is called by the blessed Evangelist Luke, [in the Acts of the Apostles,] "John, whose surname was Mark."

At Milan, holy Caius, Bishop [of that see,] a disciple of the blessed Apostle Barnabas, who suffered much in the persecution under the Emperor Nero, but fell asleep at last in peace.

At Ravenna, [in the second century,] the holy Confessor Aderitus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Paris, [in the year 1660,] the holy Priest Vincent of Paul, Founder of the Congregation of the Mission, and of the Sisters of Charity. A man of apostolic spirit, and a father to the poor; whose feast is kept upon the 19th day of July.

At Paris also, [in the year 1325,] the holy Eleazar [de Sabran,] Earl [of Ariano.]

In Hainault, [toward the end of the eighth century,] the holy virgin Hiltrude.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from their Office.

SEPTEMBER 27.

The Holy Martyrs Cosmas and Damian.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who keep the birthday of Thine holy Martyrs Cosmas and Damian may at their prayers be delivered from all dangers that presently hang over us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

COSMAS and Damian, who were eminent physicians in the time of the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, were brothers, and Arabs by race, but born in the city of Ægæ [in Cilicia.] Not more by their knowledge of medicine than by the power of Christ they healed diseases which had been hopeless for others. When the Præfect Lysias learnt to what faith they belonged, he commanded them to be brought before him, and questioned them as to their way of life, and the confession of their religion; and then, forasmuch as they freely owned themselves Christians and the Christian faith needful to salvation, he commanded them to worship the gods, under threats of torments and a most cruel death.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT when he found that it was but in vain to lay such things before them, he said: "Bind their hands and feet together, and put them to the sharpest of the question." And he was obeyed, but nevertheless Cosmas and Damian abode still of the same mind. Therefore they were cast into the depth of the sea, bound as they were, but they came forth again, whole and unbound. The Præfect, therefore, who would have it that it came to pass so by force of art magic, cast them into prison. On the morrow he haled them forth again, and bade cast them upon a great fire, but the flame turned away from them. He was pleased then to have them tormented in divers and cruel sorts, and lastly, smitten with the axe. Thus did they bear witness for Christ JESUS even until they grasped the palm of their testimony.

Sixth Lesson, from St Austin's 47th Sermon "on the Saints," (p. 605.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.)

Eighth Responsory.

Theirs is a brotherhood, &c.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 28th day of September, was born into the better life—

In Bohemia, the holy martyr Wenceslaus, Duke[1] of that country, glorious for his holiness and his miracles, who was murdered in the house of his brother, and thus gained the palm of victory.

---

[1] He is so called in the Missal and Martyrology, doubtless in deference to his own wish during life, though the title of King was bestowed upon him in A.D. 937 by the Emperor Otho I., and always afterwards employed towards him by the Sovereign and Princes of the Empire. His successors, however, were only Dukes until A.D. 1086.

At Rome, the holy martyr Privatus. He had been full of sores, whereof he had been healed by the blessed Pope Callistus. Under the Emperor Alexander, for Christ's faith's sake, he was flogged to death with scourges loaded with lead.

Likewise at Rome, the holy martyr Stacteus.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Martial, Lawrence, and twenty others.

At Antioch, in Pisidia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Mark, who was a shepherd, Alphius, Alexander, and Zosimus who were his brethren, Nicon, Neon, Heliodorus, and thirty soldiers who were brought to believe in Christ by beholding the wonders wrought by the blessed Mark, and were crowned with martyrdom in divers manners and places.

Upon the same day, under the Emperor Decius, the holy martyr Maximus.

At Toulouse, [at the beginning of the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Exuperius, Bishop [of that see,] concerning whom holy Jerome hath told how sparing he was to himself and how open-handed to others.

At Genoa, [likewise in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Salomon, Bishop [of that see.]

At Brescia, [also in the fifth century,] holy Silvinus, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day, the holy Virgin Eustochion, the daughter of blessed Paula, [and disciple of holy Jerome,] who was brought up with other virgins at the Lord's birthplace, and passed away, glorious for eminent good works, to be for ever with this same Lord.

In Germany, [in the eighth century,] the holy Virgin Lioba, eminent for the gift of miracles.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

SEPTEMBER 28.

St Wenceslaus, Duke [of Bohemia,] Martyr.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed servant Wenceslaus to pass by the palm of martyrdom from dominion on earth to glory in heaven, keep us, at his prayers, from all hurt here, and grant unto us the joy of fellowship with him hereafter. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as far as concerns St Wenceslaus, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from their Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WENCESLAUS, Duke of Bohemia, was the son of a Christian father, Duke Wratislaus I., and an heathen mother named Drahomira. He had for his grandmother a most holy woman, named Ludmilla, who trained him up in godliness. He was a man eminent in all graces, and one who carefully held his virginity unsullied throughout the whole course of his life. His mother seized the supreme power by the foul murder of Ludmilla, and lived foully with her younger son Boleslaus, and the nobles roused thereby to indignation, and wearied with her tyranny and wicked government, cast off the yoke of both of them, and hailed Wenceslaus in the city of Prague as their King.

Fifth Lesson.

HE ruled his kingdom by his virtues rather than by force. To the orphaned, the widowed, and the destitute he was very charitable, so that some whiles in the winter he carried firewood to the needy on his own shoulders. He helped oftentimes to bury the poor, he set captives free, and went many times to the prisons at the dead of night to comfort with money and advice them that were detained therein. To a Prince of so tender an heart it was a great grief to be behoven to condemn any to death, however guilty. For Priests he had a most earnest respect, and with his own hands sowed the corn and pressed the grapes for the bread and wine which they were to use for the Sacrifice. He would walk round the Church by night with bare feet upon the snow and ice, leaving behind him bloody footprints that warmed the ground.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR his Body-guard he had angels. For when Radislaus, Prince of Gurinna, invaded Bohemia, and Wenceslaus, to save the effusion of his people's blood, went out to meet him in single combat, [two] angels were seen serving him with arms, and heard to say to the adversary: "Strike not." Therefore, his enemy was stricken with terror, fell down in reverence before him, and begged his forgiveness. When he went to Germany, the Emperor saw two angels carrying a golden Cross before him as he drew nigh him, and arose from his throne, embraced him in his arms, created him a King, and gifted him with the arm of the holy [Martyr] Vitus. Nevertheless, his godless brother, at the exhortation of their mother, bade him to a feast, [given on account of the birth of his son,] and when Wenceslaus, with a foreboding of the death prepared for him, went afterwards into the Church, and was praying there, [Boleslaus followed him thither,] together with some accomplices of his crime, and [when they had wounded him,] despatched him [with his own hand, running him through the body with a lance. He suffered a little after midnight, upon the 28th day of September, in the year of our Lord 938.] The stains of his blood may still be seen upon the walls. By the judgment of God, his unnatural mother was swallowed up by the earth, and his murderers, in divers ways, perished miserably.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is made the worshipful Commemoration of the Blessed Archangel Michael; on the which day was consecrated[1] in his name the church upon Mount Gargano, mean as to building, but filled with power from heaven.

Upon the same 29th day of September, were born into the better life—

In Thrace, the holy martyrs Eutychius, Plautus, and Heraclea.

In Persia, the holy martyr Gudelia, who had turned many to Christ. Forasmuch as she would not worship the sun and the fire, Sapor the king put her to many torments and caused the skin to be plucked from her head, and her to be fastened to a post, where she won the last victory.

Likewise in Persia, the holy martyrs Dadas, kinsman of King Sapor, Casdoa his wife, and Gabdelas their son, who were stripped of their worldly goods, tormented with divers sufferings, imprisoned for a long time, and at last beheaded.

In Armenia, under the King Tiridates, the holy virgins Ripsimis and her Companions, all martyrs.

At Auxerre, [in the fifth century,] the holy martyr Fraternus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pontecorvo, hard by Aquino, [in the twelfth century,] the holy Confessor Grimwald the Priest.

In Palestine, [in the sixth century,] the holy hermit Quiriacus.

Vespers are of the following.

SEPTEMBER 29.

Michaelmas Day.

Dedication of the Church of St Michael the Archangel.

Double of the Second Class.

All as on Sundays except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm, Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[2]

THEE, O Christ, the Father's Splendour,
Life and virtue of the heart
In the presence of the Angels
Sing we now with tuneful art:
Meetly in alternate chorus
Bearing our responsive part,

Thus we praise with veneration
All the armies of the sky:
Chiefly him, the warrior Primate
Of celestial chivalry:
Michael, who in princely virtue
Cast Abaddon from on high.

By whose watchful care, repelling,
King of everlasting grace!
Every ghostly adversary,
All things evil, all things base;
Grant us of Thine only goodness
In Thy paradise a place.

Laud and honour to the Father,
Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
Ever Three, and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

Verse. [3] An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple.
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. While as John was gazing upon the holy mystery, the Archangel Michael sounded his trumpet: Forgive us, O Lord our God, Which openest the book, and loosest the seals thereof. Alleluia.

At First Vespers no Commemoration of the Holy Martyr.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Archangels. * O come, let us worship Him.

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The sea was moved and the earth quaked, when the Archangel Michael descended from heaven.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. Let us praise the Lord, Whom the Angels do praise, unto Whom Cherubim and Seraphim do cry, "Holy, Holy, Holy."

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall dwell, &c., (p. 6.)

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple.
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Daniel (vii. 9.)

I BEHELD till the thrones were set, and the Ancient of days did sit: Whose garment was white as snow, and the Hair of His Head like the pure wool: His throne, the fiery flame; His wheels, burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before Him. Thousands of thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times hundreds of thousands stood before Him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: and I saw that the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to be burnt with fire.

First Responsory.

[4] There was silence in heaven while the dragon fought against Michael the Archangel. I heard the voice of thousands of thousands, saying: Salvation, and honour, and power unto God, the Almighty.
Verse. Thousands of thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times hundreds of thousands stood before Him.
Answer. I heard the voice of thousands of thousands, saying: Sal-

[1] "This Festival," says Alban Butler, "was certainly celebrated in Apulia in 493. The dedication of the famous Church of St Michael on Mount Gargano" (see under May 8,) "gave occasion to the institution of this Feast." A Church was dedicated on Hadrian's Mausoleum, now called the Castle of St Angelo, at Rome, on this same day in A.D. 610.

vation, and honour, and power unto God, the Almighty.

Second Lesson. (x. 4.)

AND in the four-and-twentieth day of the first month, I was by the side of the great river, which is the Tigris. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked; and, behold, a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz: his body also was like the chrysolite, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire; and his arms and his lower parts at his feet like in appearance to shining brass; and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I Daniel alone saw the vision; for the men that were with me saw it not; but a great fear fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me; for my comeliness was changed in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

Second Responsory.

An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand; and there was given unto him much incense; and the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand.

Verse. [1] Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee; I will worship toward Thy holy temple, and praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Answer. And the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand.

Third Lesson.

YET heard I the voice of his words; and when I heard, I fell down astounded upon my face, and my face clave unto the ground. And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands. And he said unto me: O Daniel, thou man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright; for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me: Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one-and-twenty days, but, lo! Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me, and I then obtained the victory with the King of Persia. Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days, for yet the vision is [not to be fulfilled] till [after many] days.

Third Responsory.

Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, and will worship toward Thy holy temple. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Verse. For Thy loving-kindness, and for Thy truth; for Thou hast glorified Thine holy Name on us.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Archangel Michael, come to help God's people.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. The Archangel Michael is the Vice-Roy of Paradise, and the Angels that are the dwellers therein do hold him in worship.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. Thou wast manifested in Thy glory in the Presence of the Lord. Therefore the Lord hath clothed Thee with majesty.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord.

Answer. Out of the Angel's hand.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory the Great. (34th on the Gospels.)

WE say that there are nine Orders of Angels, for, by the witness of the holy Word, we know that there be Angels, Archangels, Mights, Powers, Principalities, Dominions, Thrones, Cherubim, and Seraphim. Nearly every page of the holy Word witnesseth that there be Angels and Archangels. The books of the Prophets, as is well known, do oftentimes make mention of Cherubim and Seraphim. Paul, writing to the Ephesians, (i. 21,) counteth up the names of four Orders, where he saith: "[The Father of glory . . . raised (Christ) from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places,] far above all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion, [and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come.]" And the same, again, writing to the Colossians, (i. 16,) saith: "[By (the Son) were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible,] whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers; [all things were created by Him and for Him.]" If, then, we add the Thrones to the four Orders of which he spake unto the Ephesians, we have five Orders; and when we add unto them the Angels and the Archangels, the Cherubim and the Seraphim, we find that the Orders of Angels are beyond all doubt nine.

Fourth Responsory.

This is Michael, who to battle leads the armies of the skies; whosoever on him calleth, blessed within his wardship lies. His a prayer whose voice availing aids from earth toward heaven to rise.

Verse. The Archangel Michael is the Vice-Roy of Paradise, and the Angels that are the dwellers therein do hold him in worship.

Answer. Whosoever on him calleth, blessed within his wardship lies. His a prayer whose voice availing aids from earth toward heaven to rise.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT we must know that the word "Angel" is the designation, not of a nature, but of an office. Those holy spirits in the heavenly fatherland are alway spirits, but they may nowise be alway called Angels, [which is, being interpreted, "messengers,"] for they are Angels only when they are sent as Messengers. Hence also it is said by the Psalmist, (ciii. 5,) "Who makest spirits Thine Angels!"[1] as if it were, "Of them who are alway with Him as spirits, He doth somewhiles make use as Messengers." They who go on the lesser messages are called Angels: they who go on the greater Archangels. Hence it is that unto the Virgin Mary was sent no common Angel, but the Archangel[2] Gabriel. For the delivery of this, the highest message, it was meet that there should be sent the highest Angel. Their individual names also are so given as to signify the kind of ministry wherein each is powerful. "Michael" signifieth "Who-is-like-unto-God?" "Gabriel," "the Strength-of-God," and "Raphael," "the Medicine-of-God."

---

[1] Ps. cxxxvii. 1.

Fifth Responsory.

Where Angels lead the spirits of the blessed dead the glad procession moves with Michael at his head, to lead them into the garden of Eden.

Verse. [3] O Lord, send Thy Holy Spirit from heaven: the Spirit of wisdom and understanding.

Answer. To lead them into the garden of Eden.

Sixth Lesson.

As often as anything very mighty is to be done, we see that Michael is sent, that by that very thing, and by his name, we may remember that none is able to do as God doeth. Hence that old enemy whose pride hath puffed him up to be fain to be like unto God, even he who said, "I will ascend unto heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. . . . I will be like the Most High," (Isa. xiv. 13, 14,) this old enemy, when at the end of the world he is about to perish in the last death, having no strength but his own, is shown unto us a-fighting with Michael the Archangel, even as saith John, (Apoc. xii. 7): "There was war in heaven: Michael and his Angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels." Unto Mary is sent Gabriel, whose name is interpreted "the Strength of God," for he came to herald the appearing of Him Who was content to appear lowly that He might fight down the powers of the air. Raphael, also, as we have said, signifieth "the Medicine-of-God," and it is the name of him who touched as a physician the eyes of Tobias, and cleared away his blindness.

Sixth Responsory.

[4] At that time shall Michael stand up, which standeth for your children. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time.

Verse. At that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the Book of Life.

Answer. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And there shall be a time, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Angel Michael the Archangel, he is the messenger whom God sendeth to all the souls of the righteous. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. There was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it upon the golden altar which is before the eyes of the Lord.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Great things are spoken of Michael the Archangel, who waxed valiant in fight, and won the victory.

Ps. cii. Bless the LORD, O my soul, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God.

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

At that time: Came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iii. Comm. on Matth. xviii.)

After the finding of the piece of money in the fish's mouth, after the payment of the tribute, what meaneth this sudden question of the Apostles? "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" They had seen that the same tribute-money was paid for Peter as for the Lord, and from this equality of reckoning they gathered that Peter was Prince of all the Apostles, seeing that he had been appraised at the same price as his Master. Therefore they ask, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And JESUS, seeing their thoughts, and understanding wherefore they erred, is fain to take away the desire of glory by the love of lowliness.

Seventh Responsory.

[5] Be not ye afraid before the Gentiles: but in your hearts worship ye the Lord, and fear Him; for His Angel is with you.

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.

Answer. For His Angel is with you.

Eighth Lesson.

"Wherefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee

---

[1] This is a different way of taking the text to that in Heb. i. 7.

[2] Giving him this title appears to be a traditional acceptation of Luke i. 19, compared with Tob. xii. 15. He is called "Angel" in the Gospel, and the title "Archangel" only occurs twice in the whole of the Scriptures, once of Michael by name, and once of the same or another unnamed.

[3] Cf. Wisd. ix. 17; Isa. xi. 2.

[4] Dan. xii. 1.

[5] Baruch vi. 5, 6.

. . . for it must needs be that offences come, but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!"—because by his sin he maketh, and maketh to be his own work, that which must needs be in the world. Away, then, with every affection and every kinship, lest thy love should throw a stumbling-block before a single believer. Be there any, saith He, who is as near to thee as thine hand, thy foot, or thine eye, useful, careful, far-seeing, but who layeth a stumbling-block before thee, and whose diverse way of life may draw thee to hell—it is better for thee to lose such an one and thy worldly happiness with him, than to live surrounded by them that are near and needful to thee, and to pile up unto thyself damnation.

Eighth Responsory.

The Archangel Michael came to help God's people. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous.

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.

Answer. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He arose to succour the spirits of the righteous.

Ninth Lesson.

"I SAY unto you that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father." Above, He had said that every tie of kinship or of convenience which might become a stumbling-block, albeit close and needful as hand, or foot, or eye, was to be cut off, but here He softeneth the hardness of that precept: "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones." Hardness, saith He, I command not save as teaching tenderness withal; "in heaven their Angels do always behold the face of My Father." Oh, how great is the dignity of souls, whereof every one hath from its birth an Angel appointed to guard it! Hence, we read in the Revelation of John: "Unto the Angel of the Church of Ephesus," (and so of the others,) "write," (ii. 1, &c.) And the Apostle [Paul] also saith: "The woman" (that is, in the Church) "ought to have a covering on her head, because of the Angels," (1 Cor. xi. 10.)

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. An Angel stood at the Altar * of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.

Second Antiphon. While as the Archangel Michael fought against the dragon, * I heard voices saying: Salvation unto our God. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. Michael Mine Archangel, * I have appointed thee for a prince over the ingathering of souls.

Fourth Antiphon. O ye Angels of the Lord, bless ye the Lord alway.

Fifth Antiphon. O ye Angels and Archangels, * O ye Thrones and Dominions, O ye Principalities and Powers, O ye mighty Ones of heaven, praise ye the Lord from the heavens! Alleluia.

Chapter. (Apoc. i. 1.)

GOD gave unto JESUS Christ to show unto His servants things which must shortly come to pass: and He sent and signified it by His Angel unto His servant John; who bare record of the Word of God and of the testimony of JESUS Christ, of all the things which he saw.

Hymn.[1]

CHRIST! of the holy Angels light and gladness,
Maker and Saviour of the human race,
O may we reach the world unknown to sadness,
The blessed mansions where they see Thy Face!

Angel of peace, may Michael to our dwelling
Down from high Heaven in mighty calmness come,
Breathing serenest peace, wild war dispelling
With all her sorrows to the infernal gloom.

Angel of might, may Gabriel swift descending,
Far from our gates our ancient foes repel,
And his own triumphs o'er the world defending,
In temples dear to Heaven return and dwell.

Angel of health, may Raphael lighten o'er us,
To every sick bed speed his healing flight,
In times of doubt direct the way before us,
And through life's mazes guide our steps aright.

The Virgin, harbinger of peace supernal,
Mother of Light, with all the Angelic train,
Heaven's glittering host, court of the King Eternal,
All Saints be with us, till that bliss we gain.

Be this by Thy thrice holy Godhead granted,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest;
Whose glory by the Angel host is chanted,
Whose Name by all the universe confest.
Amen.

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple.

Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. There was silence in heaven while as the dragon made war, and Michael fought against him, and prevailed over him.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast ordained and constituted the services of angels and men in a wonderful order, mercifully grant that as Thy holy angels alway do Thee service in heaven, so, by Thy appointment, they may succour and defend us on earth. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 30th day of September, was born into the better life—

In Bethlehem of Judea, the holy Priest Jerome, Doctor of the Church, a man most deeply read in all letters, and a follower of approved monks. With the sword of his teaching he transfixed many monsters of heresy. He fell asleep in peace, quite broken down with old age, and was buried hard by the Lord's birthplace, but his body hath since been brought to Rome, where it is laid in the Church of St Mary the Greater.

---

[1] Translation by the Rev. W. J. Copeland.

Upon the same day, the holy martyr Leopardus, one of the household of the Emperor Julian the Apostate. He was beheaded at Rome, but his body hath since been brought to Aachen.

At Soleure, in Switzerland, the holy martyrs Victor and Ursus, of the glorious Theban Legion. They were first put to direful tortures under the Emperor Maximian, but light broke from heaven upon them, the servants of the Emperor fell to the earth, and they were delivered; then they were cast into the fire, but it took no hold upon them; and lastly they were slain with the sword.

At Piacenza, the holy martyr Antonine, belonging to the same Theban Legion.

Upon the same day, holy Bishop Gregory, [called the Apostle and Illuminator] of the Great Armenia, who suffered many things under the Emperor Diocletian, but at length fell asleep in peace.

At Canterbury, in England, the holy Confessor Honorius, Bishop [of that see, wherein he succeeded holy Justus. He was consecrated by holy Paulinus, Archbishop of York. For more than thirty years he laboured for the glory of God, and saw with joy the faith of Christ extended daily. He died in the year 653, and was succeeded in his see by Deusdedit.]

At Rome, holy Francis de Borja, of the Society of Jesus, whose feast we keep upon the 11th day of October.

Likewise at Rome, [in the second century,] the holy widow Sophia, mother of the holy Virgins Faith, Hope, and Charity, [all martyrs.]

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. xii. 7.)

THERE was a great war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought, and his angels: and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O thou Prince most glorious, Michael the Archangel, remember us —and here, and everywhere, alway entreat for us the countenance of the Son of God. Alleluia, Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Antiphon, "O right excellent, &c." Prayer from Lauds. Then of St Honorius, Archbishop of Canterbury, from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) with the Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.) The Verse and Answer from Lauds.

SEPTEMBER 30.

St Jerome, Priest, Confessor, and Doctor of the Church.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor and Doctor not a Bishop, (p. 630,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxix. 1, (p. 630.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JEROME was the son of one Eusebius, and was born at Sdrigni, [a small town upon the confines] of Dalmatia, in the reign of the Emperor Constantius.[1] He was baptized at Rome when a lad, and studied there, under the instruction of Donatus and other very learned personages. He travelled in Gaul for the sake of improving his mind, and there sought the friendship of divers godly men learned in the Scriptures, and made with his own hand many copies of the holy books. He afterwards betook himself to Greece, where he attained eminence as a philosopher and orator, in the following of the most famous theologians. At Constantinople, in especial, he sat at the feet of Gregory of Nazianzus, from whom he professeth himself to have learnt his theology. Then, for godliness' sake, he went to see the home of the Lord Christ, and so throughout all Palestine. He witnesseth that this pilgrimage, wherein he got the help of the most learned of the Jews for the understanding of the Holy Scriptures, did him much good.

Fifth Lesson.

HE withdrew himself into the wild deserts of Syria, where he passed four years in studying the Holy Scriptures and in considering the blessedness of heaven, afflicting his body by alway denying himself, by bitter tears, and by chastisement of the flesh. He was ordained Priest by Paulinus, Patriarch of Antioch. He went to Rome on account of the quarrelling of certain Bishops with Paulinus and Epiphanius, and there helped Pope Damasus in the writing of his letters upon Church affairs. But the longing for his old solitude came upon him, and he went back to Palestine, where, in the monastery at Bethlehem, built beside the cradle of the Lord Christ by the Lady Paula of Rome, he set himself to enter on earth upon the life of heaven, serving God in reading and writing without ceasing, regardless of the sufferings of a body tormented by divers diseases and pains.

Sixth Lesson.

HARD questions upon the interpretation of the Holy Scripture were sent to him from all parts of the earth, as to an oracle. He was oftentimes consulted by Pope Damasus and by the holy Augustine upon the meaning of the most obscure passages of the Scripture, because of his extraordinary learning, and that he knew not the Latin and Greek tongues only, but also the Hebrew and Chaldee, and, as the same Augustine testifieth, had read nearly all writers. He attacked heretics with keen publications, and ever undertook the defence of the godly and Catholic. He translated the Old Testament from Hebrew into Latin, and, at the command of Damasus, reformed, according to the original Greek, the existing version of the New. Upon great part of the Scriptures he wrote commentaries. He translated likewise into Latin the works of many learned men, and himself contributed to the Christian life many monuments of his own wit. He lived to an extreme old age, and passed away to heaven, famous for learning and holiness, in the reign of the Emperor Honorius, [upon the 30th day of September, in the year of our Lord 420.] His body was buried at Bethlehem, but hath since been brought to Rome, where it lieth in the Church of St Mary-at-the-Manger.[2]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Book i. Comm. on Matth. v.)

Apostles and teachers are called salt, for it is by them that the whole mass of mankind is seasoned. "But if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?" If the teacher have gone astray, by what other teacher is he to be corrected? "It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." This is a figure taken from farming. Salt is used to savour food withal, and to preserve meat, but it hath no other use. In sooth, we read in the Scriptures of some cities which were sown with salt in the fury of their conquerors, that no bud of life might ever spring there again.

Eighth Lesson.

LET teachers and Bishops, then, look well to it, seeing that "mighty men shall be mightily tormented," (Wisd. vi. 7.) And there is no help for them, but they fall into hell with a greater crash.

"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that it may give light unto all that are in the house." Here He teacheth boldness in preaching, lest the Apostles should shrink away from fear, and be like unto candles under a bushel; but contrariwise should come forward with all freedom, and should proclaim upon the house-tops that which had been spoken in the ear in closets. (Luke xii. 3.)

Eighth Responsory.

In the midst of the congregation, &c., (p. 625.)

Ninth Lesson.

"THINK not that I am come to destroy the Law or the Prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil." The meaning is, either that He was come to fulfil those things which others had prophesied concerning Him, or that He was come to give the full measure of those things which had been spoken darkly and imperfectly on account of the weakness of their hearers, making away with anger, forbidding to take eye for eye and tooth for tooth, and condemning the secret lusting of the heart.

[2] Sta. Maria Maggiore.

"Till heaven and earth pass, [one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the Law, till all be fulfilled.]" But there are promised unto us new heavens and a new earth, which the Lord God shall make. And if new things are to be created, old things must pass away.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to give unto Thy Church Thy blessed Confessor Jerome to be unto her a great teacher in the way of expounding Thine Holy Scriptures, be entreated, we beseech Thee, for that Thy servant's sake, and grant unto us the strength to put in practice what he taught both by his doctrine and by his life. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Honorius of Canterbury, from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) with the Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.) Verse and Answer from First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 1st day of October is commemorated the holy Confessor Remy, [15th] Archbishop of Rheims, in Gaul, who converted the French nation to Christ, baptized their king Klodwig, and administered to him the Sacraments of the faith. Remy passed many years in his labours as Bishop, and was famous for his holiness and for the power of working miracles. He died upon the 13th day of January, [in the year 533,] but his feast is kept upon the 1st day of October, which is that of the translation of his sacred body.

Upon the same 1st day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the blessed martyrs Aretas, [in the year 852,] and five hundred and four others.

At Tomi, in Pontus, the holy martyrs Priscus, Crescens, and Evagrius.

At Lisbon, in Portugal, the holy martyrs Verissimus and his sisters Maxima and Julia, who suffered in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Tournay, in Gaul, the holy martyr Piaton, a Priest, who came from Rome to Gaul to preach along with the blessed Quinctinus and his Companions, and afterwards finished his testimony by martyrdom, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, and so passed away to be ever with the Lord.

At Thessalonica, under the same Emperor Maximian, the holy martyr Domninus.

At Ghent, the holy Confessor Bavon, [in the seventh century.]

At Orvieto, the holy Priest and Confessor Severus.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O right excellent, &c.

A Commemoration is made of St Remy. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

FEAST-DAYS IN OCTOBER.

On the first day on which nine Lessons are not read, is said the Office of the Dead.

First Lord's Day in the Month.

Rosary Sunday.

Solemn Feast of the most holy Rose-garden of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

On the Saturday preceding, the Martyrology begins with the words, "On the morrow is the solemn Feast of the Rose-garden of the most Blessed Virgin Mary."

Double of the Second Class.

Psalms as in the Common Office of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633.)

FIRST VESPERS.

First Antiphon. Who is this, * fair as a dove, like a rose-tree planted beside the rivers of waters.

Second Antiphon. A virgin most mighty, * like the tower of David, whereon there hung a thousand bucklers, all the shields of valiant men.[1]

Third Antiphon. Hail, Mary, * the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou among women.

Fourth Antiphon. The Lord hath blessed thee * by His power, because through thee He hath brought our enemies to nought.[2]

Fifth Antiphon. The daughters of Sion saw her in her spring time, amidst the flowers of the roses, and called her most blessed.

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 25; xxxix. 17.[3])

IN me is all grace of the way and of the truth. In me is all hope of life and of strength. I brought forth fruit like the rose-tree planted beside the rivers of waters.

Hymn.[4]

BY the archangel's word of love
That announced Thee from above;
By the grace to Mary given;
By Thy first descent from heaven;

By that journey made in haste
O'er that desert mountain waste;
By that voice whose heavenly tone
Thrilled the Baptist in the womb.

By Thy poor and lowly lot;
By the manger and the grot;
By Thy tender Feet and Hands
Folded in Thine swaddling bands;

By the joy of Simeon blest
When he clasped Thee to his breast;
By the widowed Anna's song
Poured amid the wondering throng;

By our Lady's glad delight,
In His temple, at the sight
Of her Child so young and fair,
Wiser than the wisest there;

Child of Mary, hear our cry;
Thou wast helpless once as we;
Now enthroned in majesty
Countless angels sing to Thee. Amen.

Verse. Queen of the most holy Rosary, pray for us.

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Blessed art thou, O Virgin

---

[1] Cant. iv. 4.

[2] Judith xiii. 22.

[3] The last of these two verses [illegible] altered—the words of Scripture run, "Hearken unto me, ye children of God, and bring forth fruit like the rose-tree planted beside the rivers of waters."

[4] Translation taken from Hymns for the Year.

Mary, Mother of God, who didst believe the Lord; for there hath been a performance of all those things which were told thee; pray for us unto the Lord our God.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Whose Only-begotten Son, by living, dying, and rising again, hath purchased everlasting joy for us, mercifully grant that, by calling these things to mind in the Blessed Virgin Mary's most holy Garden-of-roses, we may learn better both to follow what they set forth, and to strive after what they promise. Through the same our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the First Vespers of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep the Feast of the Rose-garden of the Blessed Virgin Mary; * let us worship Christ her Son, and her Lord and ours.

Hymn.[1]

BY the Blood that flowed from Thee
In Thy grievous agony;
By the traitor's guileful kiss,
Filling up Thy bitterness;

By the cords that, round Thee cast,
Bound Thee to the pillar fast;
By the scourge so meekly borne,
By Thy purple robe of scorn;

By the thorns that crowned Thine Head;
By Thy sceptre of a reed;
By Thy foes on bended knee,
Mocking at Thy royalty;

By the people's cruel jeers;
By the holy women's tears;
By Thy footsteps faint and slow,
Weighed beneath Thy Cross of woe;

By Thy weeping Mother's woe;
By the sword that pierced her through
When in anguish standing by
On the Cross she saw Thee die;

Jesu, Saviour, hear our cry;
Thou wert suffering once as we;
Now enthroned in majesty
Countless angels sing to Thee. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel * announced unto Mary, and she conceived by the Holy Ghost.

Second Antiphon. Mary entered * into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elizabeth.

Third Antiphon. She brought forth her first-born Son, and laid Him in a manger.

Verse. Holy Mother of God, Mary, always a Virgin,

Answer. Pray for us, unto the Lord our God.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxiv. 11.)

WITH all these I sought rest, but I shall abide in the inheritance of the Lord. So the Creator of all things gave me a commandment, and said unto me,—even He that made me rested in my tabernacle, and said unto me,—Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thine inheritance in Israël, and strike thou thy roots and make my chosen people. From the beginning and before the ages was I created, and even unto the ages to come I shall not cease to be, and in the holy dwelling-place did I minister before him. And so was I established in Sion, and likewise in the holy city was I given to rest, and in Jerusalem was my power. And I took root among the honourable peoples, even in the portion of my God, and His own inheritance and mine abiding was in the full assembly of the Saints.

First Responsory.

[2] Take the pleasant harp, in the time appointed, on your solemn feast-day, and sing aloud unto the Virgin our strength.

Verse. O sing unto her a new song, declare her glory among the heathen.

Answer. And sing aloud unto the Virgin our strength.

Second Lesson.

I WAS exalted like a cedar in Lebanon, and as a cypress-tree upon Mount Zion. I was exalted like a palm-tree in Kadesh, and as a rose-plant in Jericho, as a fair olive-tree in the plains, and grew up as a plane-tree beside the water in the broad way. I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm, I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh, and like storax, and galbanum, and attar, and stacte, and like an uncut tree of frankincense did I perfume my dwelling-place, and as the snow of balsam unalloyed so was my smell. I stretched forth my branches like the terebinth-tree, and my branches are the branches of honour and grace.

Second Responsory.

[3] I saw the fair one going up above the rivers of waters, a priceless savour hung heavy, and about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Verse. Upon Thy right hand did stand the Queen in a vesture of gold, wrought about with divers colours.

Answer. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Third Lesson.

I AM the mother of fair love, and fear, and knowledge, and holy hope. In me is all graces of the way and of the truth, in me is all hope of life and strength. Come unto me, all ye that be desirous of me, and fill yourselves with my fruits. For my spirit is sweeter than honey, and mine inheritance than honey and the honey-comb. My memorial is everlasting. They that eat me, shall yet hunger: and they that drink me, shall yet thirst. He that harkeneth unto me, shall not be put to confusion: and they that work by me, shall not sin. They that cast light upon me shall have life eternal.

Third Responsory.

[4] Who is this that cometh up like the sun? this, comely as Jerusalem? The daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

---

[1] Translation taken from Hymns for the Year.

[2] A peculiar adaptation of Ps. lxxx. 3, 4, 2; xcv. 1, 3.

[3] Altered from the First Responsory for the Assumption.

[4] Cant. viii. 5; vi. 10, 4, 8.

Verse. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her, and they called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The daughters of Zion saw her, and they called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When His parents brought in [the child] JESUS to present Him to the Lord, Simeon took Him up in his arms and blessed God.

Second Antiphon. His parents seeking JESUS found Him after three days in the midst of the doctors.

Third Antiphon. He began to be very sorrowful, and in the garden the sweat became as it were drops of blood.

Verse. After childbirth thou still remainest a virgin.

Answer. Mother of God, pray for us.

Fourth Lesson.

WHEN the heresy of the Albigenses was making head against God in the County of Toulouse, and striking deeper roots every day, the holy Dominick, who had but just laid the foundations of the Order of Friars Preachers, threw his whole strength into the travail of plucking these blasphemies up. That he might be fitter for the work, he cried for help with his whole soul to that Blessed Maiden, whose glory the falsehoods of the heretics so insolently assailed, and to whom it hath been granted to trample down every heresy throughout the whole earth. It is said that he had from her a word, bidding him preach up the saying of the Rosary among the people, as a strong help against heresy and sin, and it is wonderful with how stout an heart and how good a success he did the work laid upon him. This Rose-garden [or Rosary] is a certain form of prayer, wherein we say one-hundred-and-fifty times the salutation of the Angel, and the Lord's Prayer between every ten times, and, each of the fifteen times that we say the Lord's Prayer, and repeat tenfold the salutation, think of one of fifteen great events in the history of our Redemption. From that time forth this form of godly prayer was extraordinarily spread about by holy Dominick, and waxed common. That this same Dominick was the founder and prime mover thereof hath been said by Popes in divers letters of the Apostolic See.[1]

Fourth Responsory.

Thou art the glory of Jerusalem: thou art the joy of Israël: thou art the honour of our nation: thou hast done manfully, because thou alone hast slain all heresies.

Verse. Fair and comely art thou, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Answer. For thou alone hast slain all heresies.

Fifth Lesson.

FROM this healthy exercise have grown up numberless good fruits in the Christian Commonwealth. Among these deserveth well to be named that great victory over the Sultan of Turkey, which the most holy Pope Pius V., and the Christian Princes whom he had roused, won at Lepanto, [on the 7th day of October, the first Lord's Day in the month, in the year of our Lord 1571.] The day whereon this victory was gained was the very one whereon the Guild-brethren of the most holy Rosary, throughout the whole world, were used to offer their accustomed prayers and appointed supplications, and the event therefore was not unnaturally connected therewith. This being the avowed opinion of Gregory XIII., he ordered that in all Churches where there was, or should be, an Altar of the Rosary, a Feast, in the form of a Greater Double, should be kept for ever upon the first Lord's Day of the month of October, to give unceasing thanks to the Blessed Virgin, under her style of [Queen of] the [Most Holy] Rosary, for that extraordinary mercy of God. Other Popes also have granted almost nnmberless Indulgences to those who say the Rosary, and to those who join its Guilds.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] Thy right hand is become glorious in power: thy right hand hath dashed in pieces the enemy, they sank [as lead] in the mighty waters, and the sea covered them.

Verse. The Lord hath blessed thee by His power, because through thee He hath brought our enemies to nought.

Answer. They sank [as lead] in the mighty waters, and the sea covered them.

Sixth Lesson.

IN the year 1716, Charles VI., Elect-Emperor of the Romans, won a famous victory over countless hordes of Turks, [near Temeswar,] in the kingdom of Hungary, upon the day when the Feast of the Dedication of the Church of St Mary of the Snows was being kept, and almost at the very moment when the Guild-brethren of the most holy Rosary were moving through the streets of Rome in public and solemn procession, amid vast multitudes, all filled with the deepest enthusiasm, calling vehemently upon God for the defeat of the Turks, and entreating the Virgin Mother of God to bring the might of her succour to the help of the Christians. A few days later, [upon the Octave of the Feast of the Assumption,] the Turks raised the siege of Corfu. These mercies Clement XI. devoutly ascribed to the helpful prayers of the Blessed Virgin, and that the memory and the sweetness of such a blessing might for all time coming endure gloriously, he extended to the whole Church the observance of the Feast of the most holy Rosary, for the same day and of the same rank, [as it had already been in the places before mentioned.] Benedict XIII. commanded the record of all these things to be given a place in the Service-book of the Church of Rome; and Leo XIII., in the most troublous times of the Church and the cruel storm of long pressing evils, by fresh Apostolic letters vehemently urged upon all the faithful throughout the earth the often saying of the Rosary of [the Blessed Virgin] Mary, raised the dignity of the yearly festival, added to the Litany of Loretto the Invocation "Queen of the Most Holy Rosary," and granted to the whole Church a special Office for this solemn occasion. Let us all then be earnest in honouring the most holy Mother of God in this form which she liketh so well, that even as the entreaties of Christ's faithful people, approaching her in her Garden of Roses, have so often won her to scatter and destroy their earthly foes, so she may gain for them the victory over their hellish foes likewise.

---

[1] See the note of Alban Butler upon the subject, from which it appears that St Dominick was not the first to propose the frequent repetition of the "Hail, Mary," or other prayers, a fixed number of times, nor the author of the idea of counting these repetitions by a mechanical contrivance, such as beads, or the like. What he seems to have done was to bring in the practice of the hundred-and-fifty repetitions, with the accompanying meditations, as a substitute for the hundred-and-fifty Psalms of the Psalter, by those who were too unlettered to say the Office. But whether he really invented, or only preached up this practice, appears quite uncertain. Similar substitutes for the Office had long been in vogue, even in some religious orders—e.g., the Templars.

[2] A peculiar adaptation of Ex. xv. 6, 10.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] There appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

Verse. [2] Unto thine head shall be given an ornament of grace, and a crown of glory shall cover thee.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Pilate took JESUS and scourged Him.

Second Antiphon. The soldiers plaited a crown of thorns, and put it on His Head.

Third Antiphon. [3] The government was upon His shoulder, even the cross; from the tree hath God reigned.

Verse. O holy Mother of God.

Answer. Thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux,] (on St Mary.)

To commend His Own love towards us, and to bring to nought the wisdom of men, God was pleased to take flesh of a woman, albeit a virgin, that He might bring like against like, heal by opposites, pluck out the poisonous thorn, and blot out mightily the handwriting of our sin that was against us. Eve was a thorn, Mary is a rose. Eve is a thorn that pierceth, Mary is a rose that charmeth all the senses. Eve was a thorn that fixed death into all, Mary is a rose that bringeth health to all. Mary was a white rose through her virginity, and a red rose through her love. She was white in her flesh, red in her mind; white in that she followed the path of grace, red in that she trod down sin; white by the purity of her affections, red by the mortification of her body; white by her love for God, red by her compassion for her neighbour.

Seventh Responsory.

[4] As the vine brought I forth pleasant savour, and my flowers are the fruit of honour and seemliness.

Verse. I am the mother of fair love, and fear, and knowledge, and holy hope.

Answer. And my flowers are the fruit of honour and seemliness.

Eighth Lesson, (of the water course.)

THE Word was made flesh, and dwelleth even now among us. He dwelleth in our memory. He dwelleth in our thought. He hath come down even unto our imagination; and how sayest thou doth he so? By lying in the manger, by nestling in His mother's breast, by preaching upon the mountain, by remaining all night in prayer to God, by hanging upon the Cross, by turning pale in death, by going down free among the dead and triumphing in hell, by rising again the third day, by showing to the Apostles the places of the nails—the marks of his victory, by ascending up into heaven while they all beheld Him,—of which of these things think we not with truth, with godliness, with holiness? If I think of any of these, I think of God, and He is my God through them all. To think of these things I have decreed to be wisdom, and to set forth the memory of their sweetness I have judged to be prudence.[5] The rod of Aaron the Priest brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds; but these things are the almonds of that Rod which came forth out of the stem of Jesse, the Rod whereof sprang the flower, a Rod which was raised in Mary into places higher than the earthly tabernacle, higher indeed, even into places higher than angels, since she received the Word into herself out of the very heart of the Eternal Father.

Eighth Responsory.

Rise up, my love, and make haste. For the winter is past; the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on our earth.[6]

Verse. The Lord shall give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase.

Answer. The flowers appear on our earth.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The flowers appear on our earth.

Ninth Lesson.

The Homily of the Sunday, either the first part only or the whole three read together as one.

---

[1] Apoc. xii. 1.
[2] Prov. iv. 9.
[3] Is. ix. 6.

[4] Ecclus. xxiv. 23, 24.

[5] Num. xvii. 8; Is. xi. 1. The passage is excessively obscure, and the translation is an amplified paraphrase of what the translator supposes to be the sense intended.

[6] Cant. i. 10, 11, 12; Ps. lxxxiv. 12.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Rejoice, O Virgin Mother, * Christ is risen from the grave.

Second Antiphon. God is gone up with a shout, * and the Lord with the sound of a trumpet.

Third Antiphon. The spirit of the Lord * hath filled the world.

Fourth Antiphon. Mary hath been taken to heaven. * The angels rejoice: they praise and bless the Lord. Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. The Virgin Mary * hath been exalted over choirs of angels, and upon her head there is a crown of twelve stars.

Chapter as at First Vespers.

Hymn.

BY the first bright Easter Day,
When the stone was rolled away;
By the glory round Thee shed
At Thy rising from the dead;

By Thy parting blessing given
As Thou didst ascend to heaven;
By the cloud of living light
That received Thee out of sight;

By that rushing sound of night
Coming down from heaven's height;
By the cloven tongues of fire,
Sent our spirits to inspire;

By the day that saw her rise
Borne by Angels to the skies;
When Thy Mother, blest with Thee,
Thou didst call in heaven to be;

By the splendour of the throne
Preordained for her alone,
Where the Angels round her sing,
Mother of our God and King;

King of glory, hear our cry,
Make us soon Thy joys to see,
Where, enthroned in majesty,
Countless Angels sing to Thee. Amen.

Verse. God hath chosen her and forechosen her,

Answer. And hath made her to dwell in His tabernacle.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Let us this day keep right heartily the solemn Feast of the Most Holy Rose-garden of Mary the Mother of God, that she may pray for us to our Lord JESUS Christ.

Prayer throughout the day as at First Vespers. A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

PRIME.

Antiphon. Rejoice, O Virgin Mother, (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory.

Verse. Thou that wast born of the Virgin Mary.

Chapter at the end, (Ecclus. xxiv. 13.)

I was exalted like a cedar in Lebanon, and as a cypress-tree upon Mount Zion. I was exalted like a palm-tree in Kadesh, and as a rose-plant in Jericho.

TERCE.

Antiphon. God is gone up with a shout, (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

Holy Mother of God, Mary always a Virgin.

Answer. Holy Mother of God, Mary always a Virgin,

Verse. Intercede for us with the Lord our God.

Answer. Mary always a Virgin.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Holy Mother of God, Mary always a Virgin.

Verse. After childbirth thou still remainest a Virgin.

Answer. Mother of God, pray for us.

SEXT.

Antiphon. The spirit of the Lord, (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter, (Ecclus. xxxix. 19.)

Flourish as a lily, and send forth a smell, and blossom with grace; sing a song of praise, and bless the Lord in His works.

Short Responsory.

After childbirth thou still remainest a Virgin.

Answer. After childbirth thou still remainest a Virgin.

Verse. Mother of God, pray for us.

Answer. Thou still remainest a Virgin.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. After childbirth thou still remainest a Virgin.

Verse. O Holy Mother of God,

Answer. Thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

NONE.

Antiphon. The Virgin Mary, (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

Short Responsory.

O Holy Mother of God.

Answer. O Holy Mother of God,

Verse. Thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

Answer. Mother of God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O Holy Mother of God.

Verse. God hath chosen her and forechosen her,

Answer. And hath made her to dwell in His tabernacle.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as at the First, except the following.

Hymn.[1]

THE gladness of thy Motherhood,
The anguish of thy suffering,
The glory now that crowns thy brow,
O holy Mother, we would sing.

Hail! blessed Mother, full of joy,
In thy consent, thy Visit too;
Joy in the birth of Christ on earth,
Joy in Him lost and found anew.

Hail! sorrowing in His agony—
The blows, the thorns that pierced His brow;
The heavy wood, the shameful rood—
Yea, Queen and chief of martyrs thou.

Hail! in the triumph of thy Son,
And quickening flames of Pentecost;
Shining a Queen in light serene,
When all the world is tempest-tost.

O come ye nations, roses bring,
Culled from these mysteries divine;
And for the Mother of your King
With loving hands your chaplets twine.

We lay our homage at Thy feet,
Lord JESUS, Thou the Virgin's Son;
With Father and with Paraclete,
Reigning while endless ages run.

[1] Translation by Dom Oswald Hunter-Blair, O.S.B.

Verse. Queen of the Most Holy Rosary, pray for us,

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Blessed Mother and Inviolate Maiden, Glorious Queen of the World, may all that keep the solemn Feast of Thy Most Holy Garden of Roses feel the might of Thine assistance.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

Note that if the first Sunday in October should also be the first Sunday of October, the First Book of Maccabees is begun on the Monday; or, if the Monday be October 2 or 4, on the Tuesday.

OCTOBER 1.

St Remy, Archbishop of Rheims, Confessor.

Simple, but may be said as a Semi-double if the reciter pleases.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

MATTINS.

The first Verse of the Hymn is altered.

First and Second Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Third Lessson.

[1] REMY, Archbishop of Rheims, flourished in the time of Klodwig, King of the Franks, whom he baptized, and was the first who, by his preaching and miracles, brought the Franks to believe in the Lord Christ. At his prayers, a dead maiden was raised to life. He expounded many books of the Holy Scriptures. He ministered to the Church of Rheims with the utmost acceptance for above three score and ten years, and the holiness of his life and death were witnessed by many signs and wonders which befell afterward.

Prayer throughout the day, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

If the above be observed as a Semi-double, the Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Scripture according to the Season; those of the Second, the above of the Saint, and the two first from the Sermon of St Maximus, (p. 614,) and those of the Third from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the feast of the Holy Guardian Angels.

Upon the same 2nd day of October, were born into the better life —

At Nicomedia, the holy soldier Eleutherius, and an unnumbered multitude of others, all martyrs. When the palace of the Emperor Diocletian was burnt, they were falsely accused of the crime of setting it on fire; and by the command of that most cruel Emperor they were slaughtered in crowds: some were slain with the sword, some were burnt in the fire, and some were cast into the sea. But the first of them was Eleutherius, who was long tortured, but at every new torment seemed to grow more steadfast, like gold tried in the fire, and crowned his testimony with victory.

In the country of Arras, the blessed Leodegar, Bishop of Autun, [in the year 678,] who was murdered by Ebroin, mayor of the palace to King Theodoric, after he had laid upon him divers insults and sufferings for the truth's sake.

Likewise the holy martyr Gerin, brother of the said blessed Leodegar, who was stoned to death at the same place.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Primus, Cyril, and Secondarius.

At Constantinople, the holy Monk Theophilus, who was cruelly scourged and sent into exile, under the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, for defending holy images, and passed away to be ever with the Lord.

At Hereford, in England, the holy Confessor Thomas, Bishop of that see, whose feast we keep upon the 3rd day of this present month of October.

OCTOBER 2.

The Holy Guardian Angels.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[2]

PRAISE we those ministers celestial
Whom the dread Father chose
To be defenders of our nature frail,
Against our scheming foes.

For, since that from his glory in the skies
Th' Apostate Angel fell,
Burning with envy, evermore he tries
To drown our souls in Hell.

Then hither, watchful Spirit, bend thy wing,
Our country's Guardian blest!
Avert her threatening ills; expel each thing
That hindereth her rest.

Praise to the trinal Majesty, whose strength
This mighty fabric sways;
Whose glory reigns beyond the utmost length
Of everlasting days. Amen.

Verse. [3] Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God.

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [4] Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

A Commemoration is made of St Remy, if his Office have been observed as a Semi-double.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Angels. * O come, let us worship Him.

Hymn from Vespers.

[1] Born in the year 439; consecrated Bishop at 22 years of age; baptized Klodwig on Christmas Day, 496; died, January 13, 533.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[3] Ps. cxxxvii. 2.

[4] Heb. i. 14.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [1] The Lord God of heaven and earth shall send His Angel before thee.

Ps. viii. O LORD our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. [2] My God hath sent His Angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me.

Ps. x. In the LORD, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. [3] Go prosperously, and the Lord be with you in your journey, and His Angel keep you company.

Ps. xv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 7.)

Verse. [4] An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple,
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Exodus (xxiii. 20.)

BEHOLD, I send Mine Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, and think not lightly of him. For he will not pardon your transgressions; and My Name is in him. But if thou wilt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak, then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries, and Mine Angel shall go before thee.

First Responsory.

[5] God hath given His Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest haply thou dash thy foot against a stone.
Verse. [6] Thousands of thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times hundreds of thousands stood before Him.
Answer. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest haply thou dash thy foot against a stone.

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Zechariah (i. 7.)

THE Word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo, the Prophet, saying: I saw by night, and, behold, a man riding upon a red horse: and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom. And behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white. Then said I: O my lord, what are these? And the angel that spake in me said unto me: I will show thee what these be. And the man that stood among the myrtle-trees answered, and said: These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth. And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle-trees, and said: We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth is inhabited, and is at rest.

Second Responsory.

[7] Then the angel of the LORD answered, and said: O LORD of hosts, how long wilt Thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Judah, against which Thou hast had indignation—
Verse. These three score and ten years?
Answer. How long wilt Thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Judah, against which Thou hast had indignation?

Third Lesson. (ii.)

I LIFTED up mine eyes again, and looked. And, behold, a man with a measuring line in his hand. Then said I: Whither goest thou? And he said unto me: To measure Jerusalem, and see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof. And, behold, the angel that talked in me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him: Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as a town without walls, for the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be in glory in the midst of her.

Third Responsory.

[8] When ye see the Gentiles, be not afraid of them, but in your hearts worship and fear the Lord; for His Angel is with you.
Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.
Answer. For His Angel is with you.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. For His Angel is with you.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [9] When I came unto you, by the will of God I came; bless Him, and give Him thanks.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. [10] The Angel of the Lord, which went before the camp of Israël, removed, and went behind them.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. [11] The Angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord—
Answer. Out of the Angel's hand.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On Ps. xc.)

"HE hath given His Angels charge over thee." A wonderful graciousness, and a wonderful outpouring of love. For who hath given charge? And what charge? Unto whom? And over whom? Let us carefully consider, my brethren, let us carefully hold in mind this great charge. For who hath given this charge? To Whom belong the Angels? Whose commandments do they obey, and Whose will do they do?

[4] Apoc. viii. 3.
[5] Ps. xc. 11, 12.
[6] Dan. vii. 10.

[7] This Responsory is the continuation of the preceding Lesson.

[8] Cf. Baruch vi. 3-6.
[9] Tob. xii. 18.
[10] Exod. xiv. 19.
[11] Ps. xxxiii. 8.

"He hath given His Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways," and that not carelessly, for "they shall bear thee up in their hands." The Highest Majesty, therefore, hath given charge unto Angels, even His Angels. Unto these beings so excellently exalted, so blessed, so near to Himself, even as His own household, unto these hath He given charge over thee. Who art thou? "What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that Thou visitest him?" (Ps. viii. 5.) Even as though man were not "rottenness, and the son of man, a worm." (Job. xxv. 6.) But what charge hath He given them over thee? "To keep thee in all thy ways."

Fourth Responsory.

[1] As the Lord liveth, His Angel hath kept me in my way that I went thither, and in my sojourning there, and in mine home-coming again hither.

Verse. And the Lord hath not suffered me that am His handmaid to be defiled.

Answer. His Angel hath kept me in my way that I went thither, and in my sojourning there, and in mine home-coming again hither.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT respect, what thankfulness, what trust, ought this word to work in thee! Respect for their presence, thankfulness for their kindness, trust in their safe-keeping. Walk carefully, as one with whom are Angels, as hath been laid in charge upon them, in all thy ways. In every lodging, in every nook, have reverence for thine Angel. Dare not to do in his presence what thou wouldst not dare to do in mine. Or dost thou doubt whether he be indeed present, because thou seest him not? What if thou heardest him? What if thou touchedst him? What if thou smelledst him? Behold, not by sight alone is the presence of things made manifest.

Fifth Responsory.

[2] The Angel of the Lord came down into the furnace together with Azariah and his fellows, and smote the flame of the fire out of the furnace, so that the fire touched them not at all, neither hurt them.

Verse. Blessed be their God, Who sent His Angel, and delivered His servants that trusted in Him!

Answer. So that the fire touched them not at all, neither hurt them.

Sixth Lesson.

LET us also, brethren, dearly love His Angels, as them with whom we are one day to be co-heirs, and who in the meanwhile are leaders and guardians set over us by the Father. With such guardians, whereof shall we be afraid? They that keep us in all our ways, can neither be conquered nor corrupted, far less can they corrupt. They are trusty, they are wary, they are mighty. Whereof shall we be afraid? Only let us follow them, only let us cleave unto them, and we "shall abide under the shadow of the God of heaven." As often then as the gloom of temptation threateneth thee, or the sharpness of tribulation hangeth over thee, call upon Him That keepeth thee, thy Shepherd, thy Refuge in times of trouble, call upon Him, and say: "Lord, save us; we perish." (Matth. viii. 25.)

Sixth Responsory.

[3] In all their affliction He was not [4] afflicted, and the Angel of His presence saved them.

Verse. In His love and in His pity He redeemed them; and He bare them and carried them all the days of old.

Answer. And the Angel of His presence saved them.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And the Angel of His presence saved them.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [5] The LORD sent His Angel, which cut off all the mighty of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the King of Assyria.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c. (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. Worship the Lord, all ye His Angels! Zion heard, and was glad.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Bless the LORD, all ye His Angels, that excel in strength, that do His commandments, to hearken unto the voice of His word.

Ps. cii. Bless the LORD, (p. 91.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee.

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: Came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comm. on Matth. xviii.)

"Unless ye become as little children," saith the Lord, "ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," that is, unless by the uprooting of bodily and mental depravity, we bring our souls to the innocency of childhood. But He giveth the name of children to all such as believe by the hearing of faith. Children follow their father, love their mother, know not how to wish evil to their neighbours, are not careful for earthly riches; they insult not, they hate not, they lie not, they believe what they are told, and take for truth what they hear. Us then it behoveth to return to the simpleness of little children, for when we are well rooted therein, we shall so far bear about in ourselves an image of the sublime simpleness of the Lord JESUS.

[1] Judith, xiii. 20.

[2] Dan. iii. 49, 95.

[3] Isa. lxiii. 9.

[4] So the Hebrew, but the Jewish tradition, as in Isa. ix. 3, (p. 153,) attributes the negative to an eccentric spelling, and reads, "In all their affliction He was afflicted."

[5] 2 Par. (Chron.) xxxii. 21.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] When Maccabeus and they that were with him heard that [Lysias] besieged the holds, they and all the people with lamentation and tears besought the Lord that He would send a good Angel to deliver Israël.

Verse. So they went forth together with a willing mind, and, as they were at Jerusalem, there appeared before them on horseback one in white clothing.

Answer. A good Angel to deliver Israël.

Eighth Lesson.

"WOE unto the world because of offences!" The lowliness of the Passion is an offence unto the world. Such is the state of stupidity to which man's ignorance hath reduced itself, that it turneth away from the Lord of Eternal Glory, because of the unsightliness of the Cross! And what is so certain to bring woe unto the world as to turn away from Christ? And therefore He saith: "It must needs be that offences come," because his fulfilling the lowliness of the Passion was the predestined mean whereby He was to give us eternal life.

Eighth Responsory.

[2] O Lord, Thou didst send Thine Angel in the time of Hezekiah, King of Judah, and didst slay in the host of Sennacherib an hundred, fourscore, and five thousand. Wherefore now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us, for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm.

Verse. That those be stricken with terror that come with blasphemy against Thy holy people.

Answer. Now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us, for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us, for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm.

Ninth Lesson.

"TAKE heed that ye despise not one of these little ones that believe in Me." He hath laid on us a most meet tie to constrain us to love one another, especially such as indeed believe in the Lord. "For I say unto you that in heaven their Angels do always behold the face of My Father Which is in heaven. For the Son of Man is come to save that which was lost." From these words we see, first, that the Son of Man saveth; secondly, that the Angels do see God; and thirdly, that the Angels of these little ones have the wardship over the prayers of the faithful. That the Angels have this wardship is taught us absolutely. The Angels therefore do every day offer to God the prayers, which they which are saved, do make to Him in the Name of Christ. Therefore it is dangerous for a man to despise them, seeing that these are they by whose watchful service and ministry his wishes and requests are presented before the throne of the eternal and unseen God.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. God hath given His Angels charge over thee, * to keep thee in all thy ways.

Second Antiphon. Let us praise the Lord, Whom the Angels do praise, unto Whom Cherubim and Seraphim do cry, "Holy, Holy, Holy."

Third Antiphon. In heaven their Angels do always behold the face of My Father, * Which is in heaven.

Fourth Antiphon. Blessed be God, * Who sent His Angel, and delivered His servants that trusted in Him.

Fifth Antiphon. Praise ye God, * all His Angels—Praise ye Him, all His hosts!

Chapter. (Exod. xxiii. 20.)

BEHOLD, I send Mine Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice.

Hymn.[3]

RULER of the dread immense!
  Maker of this mighty frame!
Whose eternal Providence
  Guides it, as from Thee it came!

Low before Thy throne we bend;
  Hear our supplicating cries;
And Thy light celestial send,
  With the freshly dawning skies.

King of Kings! and Lord most high!
  This of Thy dear love we pray,—
May Thy Guardian Angel nigh
  Keep us from all sin this day.

May he crush the deadly wiles
  Of the envious Serpent's art,
Ever spreading cunning toils
  Round about the thoughtless heart.

May he scatter ruthless war,
  Ere to this our land it come;
Plague and famine drive afar;
  Fix securely peace at home.

Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,
  One eternal Trinity!
Guard by Thy Angelic host
  Us, who put our trust in Thee. Amen.

Verse. O my God, before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee.

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy Temple, and praise Thy Name.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [4] The Angel that talked with me came again, and waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who in Thine unspeakable Providence hast been pleased to give Thine holy Angels charge over us, to keep us, mercifully grant unto our prayers, that we be both ever fenced by their wardship here, and everlastingly blessed by their fellowship hereafter. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Thomas, Bishop of Hereford, in England, of whom mention was made yesterday.

Upon the same 3rd day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, at the Bear-and-Cap, the holy martyr Candidus, [in the third century.]

Upon the same day, the holy martyrs Denis, Faustus, Caius, Peter, Paul, and four others, [in the third century.] They originally suffered much under the Emperor Decius, and then, under the Emperor Valerian, were put to a long course of torments by the President Emilian.

Among the antient Saxons, [in Westphalia,] the two holy [English] brethren, both named Ewald, [about the year 695,] [one surnamed the white, and the other the black.] They were priests, and had gone to preach Christ in that country, where they suffered martyrdom, being murdered by the heathen. A bright light was seen around their bodies by night to show where they were, and of what worthiness.

In Africa, holy Maximian, Bishop of Bagaia, who again and again suffered great cruelties at the hands of the Donatists, and was at last thrown off the top of a lofty tower, and left for dead, but afterwards fell asleep in the Lord, famous for his glorious confession.

In Palestine, the holy Confessor Hesychius, [in the fourth century,] a disciple of holy Hilarion, and his companion in his journeyings.

At Brogne, in the diocese of Namur, in Belgium, [in the year 959,] holy Gerard, [Founder and] Abbat, [of the monastery at that place, who introduced a new and most exact discipline into many monasteries of Flanders, Champagne, Lorraine, and Picardy. He reformed some abbayes in Flanders.]

Chapter at the end. (Exod. xxiii. 22.)

BUT if thou wilt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak, then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries, and Mine Angel shall go before thee.

TERCE.

Antiphon. Let us praise, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory as on p. 1068.

SEXT.

Antiphon. In heaven their Angels, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Exod. xxiii. 21.)

THINK not lightly of him, for he will not pardon your transgressions; and My Name is in him.

NONE.

Antiphon. Praise ye God, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

Short Responsory as on p. 1068.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxxxvii. I will praise Thee, &c., (p. 111.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Holy Angels our Keepers, shield us in the battle, that we perish not in the awful judgment.

A Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Office.

OCTOBER 3.

St Thomas, Bishop [of Hereford,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who hast ennobled Thy Church by the Angel-like purity and glorious manliness of blessed Bishop Thomas, mercifully grant unto us Thy servants, for his sake, that we may one day be joined, as he is, unto the fellowship of Angels. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Process and Bull of his Canonization.)

THOMAS was born of the noble family of Cantelupe, and studied letters first in England, and then at Paris and Orleans. After his return home he was made Chancellor of the University of Oxford, and afterwards Chancellor of the whole kingdom. He did not allow the cares of the world to hinder his watchfulness for the salvation of his soul. Early in the morning he performed his sacred office, and afterwards set himself to business, and after his hours of work were over, he spent a great part of the night in prayer and reading. His self-denial in eating and drinking, his tenderness toward the poor, his chastity, and his other graces were so excelling as to make all men's eyes and tongues busy with him.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was appointed Bishop of Hereford, and gave his utmost care to discharge the duties of the shepherd of souls. His main care was to visit his diœcese, to reform sinners either by public preaching or private correction, to hear the confessions of the people, and to administer to children the Sacrament of Confirmation. Upon himself he was very sparing, but was open-handed with his goods towards the poor, and in all things so gracious that he earned to be held by all men as the father of his flock.

Sixth Lesson.

AT the Synod of Reading he had a dispute with his Archbishop, Peckham, and, as the conflict thickened, he appealed to the Pope, who honourably welcomed him when he went to Italy. A little while after, he fell sick unto death at Florence, and when he had duly received the Sacraments of the Church, and recommended his soul most earnestly to God, he went to heaven in the year of salvation 1282, and of his own age the sixty-third. In England he became very famous as a saint, and John XXII. inscribed his name as such.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Assisi, in Umbria, the holy Confessor Francis, [1182-1226,] Founder of the Order of Friars Minor, whose life, full of holiness and miracles, hath been written by holy "Buona-Ventura."

At Corinth, holy Crispus and Caius, [first century,] of whom the holy Apostle Paul maketh mention in writing unto the Corinthians.

In Egypt, the holy brethren Mark and Marcian, [in the year 304,] and a multitude of other holy martyrs which is almost countless, both of men and of women, of old and of young; some after stripes and some after horrid torments of divers kinds were burnt, some cast into the sea, a few beheaded, many starved to death, others crucified (some of these with their head downward), and so earned a most blessed crown of martyrdom.

At Damascus, the holy Bishop and martyr Peter, [in the year 742;] he was accused of teaching the faith of Christ, before the Prince of the Hagarenes. His tongue, hands, and feet were cut off, and he was fastened to a cross, and there finished his testimony.

At Alexandria, the holy Priests and Deacons Caius, Faustus, Eusebius, Chaeremon, Lucius, and their Companions, of whom some suffered martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, and others by serving the martyrs gained the martyr's reward.

At Athens, holy Hierotheus, a disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul.

At Bologna, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Petronius, Bishop [of that see,] who was famous for his teaching, his miracles, and his holiness.

At Paris, [in the year 666,] the holy Virgin Aurea, [Abbess at Paris.]

Vespers of the following.

OCTOBER 4.

St Francis,[1] Confessor.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst use the worthy deeds of Thy blessed servant Francis as a mean whereby to make Thy Church again the mother of children, grant that we like him may set little price by earthly things, and attain unto a portion of those good things which Thou givest in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the preceding. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lesson from Wisd. iv. 7, &c., (p. 621.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

FRANCIS was born at Assisi in Umbria, [in the year of our Lord 1182.] From his early youth he followed the example of his father, [Peter Bernardone,] and busied himself with merchandise. It befell one day that, contrary to his usage, he had thrust from him a beggar, who cried for money for Christ's sake, when, being cut to the heart with regret, he gave him large alms, and promised to God from that day forth never to deny to any that asked of him. He fell after this into a grievous sickness, and from the time that he was healed thereof, he gave himself more earnestly to works of love for his neighbour. At length he became fain in this sort to be perfect, even as the Lord hath said in the Gospel, (Matth. xix. 21,) and gave to the poor whatsoever he had. His father would not have it so, and brought him before the Bishop of Assisi, that he might renounce all right to any inheritance. He cheerfully gave up all to his father, even to his clothes, telling them that now he should be able with more utter dependence to say: "Our Father, Who art in heaven—"

Fifth Lesson.

[UPON the 24th day of February, in the year 1209,] he heard read the words of the Gospel: "Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes." (Matth. x. 9, 10.) Thereupon he determined that that should be his rule of living. He took off his shoes, and contented himself with one coat. When he had gathered twelve comrades, he founded the Order of Friars Minors.[2] He went to Rome in the [same] year, to get from the Apostolic See a confirmation of his Order. When he came Pope Innocent III. thrust him away. Thereafter he dreamt that he saw the Church of the most Holy Saviour falling, and whom he had cast forth bearing it up with his shoulders. He bade therefore that he should be sought for and brought again before him, welcomed him kindly, and approved all the Rule which he had established. Francis therefore sent his Friars into all quarters of the world to preach the Gospel of Christ. He himself was fain to find some occasion of martyrdom, and therefore made a voyage into Syria, [in the year 1219,] but the Sultan treated him with the greatest kindness, offering him many gifts, and, since he could do no good, he returned again to Italy.

---

[1] "Francesco," i.e., Frenchman. His real name was John, but the people of Assisi gave him the nickname of "Frenchman" because he spoke French well.

[2] I.e., "the lesser brethren," a name assumed out of humility in regard to the Dominicans.

Sixth Lesson.

[TOWARDS the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the year 1224,] when there had already been built many houses of Friars of his Order, he withdrew himself into a most secret place upon Mount Alverno, and began to fast for forty days in honour of the holy Archangel Michael. [1] Upon the Feast-day of the Uplifting of the Holy Cross, [as he was praying upon the side of the mountain,] he saw a vision of a crucified Seraph, which left in his hands and feet holes with nails therein, and in his side a great wound. Holy "Buona-Ventura" hath left it in writing that he once heard Pope Alexander IV., when preaching, testify that he had himself seen these marks. It was a sign of such love of Christ toward him as stirred up the great wonder of all men. Two years thereafter he fell sick unto death, and was fain to be carried into the Church of St Mary-of-the-Angels, that he might give up the breath of life in the same place where God had breathed into him the breath of the life of grace.[2] Being there [laid on the earth, sprinkled with ashes, and covered with an old habit,] he exhorted the Friars to be poor and lowly, and to cleave to the faith of the Holy Church of Rome. [He then caused the Gospel of St John to be read from the words "Now before the feast of the Passover" to the end,] after which he began to recite the 141st Psalm: "I cried unto the LORD with my voice," and in uttering the words, "the righteous wait for me, till Thou deal bountifully with me," he gave up the ghost. It was the 4th[3] day of October, [in the year 1226.] He was famous for miracles, and Pope Gregory IX. added his name to the list of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xi. 25, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 629.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Messina, in Sicily, [in the year 546,] the holy monk Placidus, a disciple of the blessed Abbat Benedict, his brothers Eutychius and Victorinus, and the Virgin Flavia, their sister, along with Donatus, the Deacon Firmatus, Faustus, and thirty other monks, all martyrs, who were massacred for Christ's faith's sake, by the pirate Manucha.

Upon the same day, [in the year 171,] blessed Thraseas, Bishop of Eumenia, who achieved his martyrdom at Smyrna.

At Treves, the holy martyrs Palmatius and his Companions, who underwent martyrdom under the President Rictiovarus, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

On the same day, the holy Virgin Charitina, under the Emperor Diocletian and the Consular Domitius. She was tormented with fire, and cast into the sea, whence she came forth unharmed, then her hands and feet were cut off, and her teeth shaken, and she gave up her soul in prayer to God.

At Auxerre, the holy Deacon Firmatus, [in the fifth or sixth century,] and the Virgin Flaviana his sister.

At Ravenna, the holy Confessor Marcellinus, Bishop of [that see.]

At Valence, in Gaul, holy Apollinaris, [about the year 520,] Bishop [of that see;] his life was famous for his graces, and his death was marked by signs and wonders.

Upon the same day holy Attilan, Bishop of Zamora, whose name Urban II. numbered with those of the Saints.

At Leon, [in the year 1006,] in Spain, holy Froilan, Bishop of that city, famous for his zeal in spreading the monastic life, his goodness toward the poor, and other graces and wonders.

At Rome, the holy widow Galla, daughter of the Consul Symmachus; after the death of her husband she passed many years at the church of blessed Peter, intent upon prayer, alms, fastings, and other holy works. Holy Pope Gregory hath written of her right blessed passage hence.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following, from the Common Office for Many Martyrs. Prayer, "O God, by Whose mercy, &c.," (p. 608.)

OCTOBER 5.

St Placidus and his Comrades, Martyrs.

Simple.

All from the Simple Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 611,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. "O God, by Whose mercy, &c., (p. 608.)

MATTINS.

First and Second Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Third Lesson.

PLACIDUS was the son of Tertullus, one of the noblest persons of Rome. He was offered to God [by his father] when a child [only seven years of age,[4]] and given over to holy Benedict, in whose teaching and Rule of monks he so profited that he was reckoned among the chiefest of his disciples. By him he was sent into Sicily, where he founded near the Port of Messina a Church and monastery in honour of St John the Baptist, and lived therein with his monks in wonderful holiness. Thither there came to see him his brothers Eutychius and Victorinus and his virgin sister Flavia, and while they were together, there landed there a certain brutal pirate, named Manucha, who took the monastery, and when he could in no wise prevail upon Placidus and the others to deny Christ, he commanded him, his brothers, and his sister to be cruelly murdered. With them Donatus, Firmatus a Deacon, Faustus, and thirty other monks brought the conflict of testimony to the blessed end of martyrdom, upon the fifth day of October, in the year of salvation 509.[1]

---

[1] This absolute date of Sept. 14, appears to rest upon the authority of an anonymous vision at a later date, and is difficult to reconcile with the original historians. It is hardly consistent with the statement of the Breviary on Sept. 17, and is rejected by the Bollandists in parr. 590, 591, of their preliminary remarks to the Life of St Francis.

[2] It was in that Church that he heard the text from Matth. x. 10.

[3] I.e., after Vespers on Saturday, the 3rd.

[4] This practice was forbidden by a Decretal of Innocent III.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of October, were born into the better life—

In Calabria, [in the year 1101,] the holy Confessor Bruno, Founder of the Order of Monks of the Charterhouse.

At Laodicea, the blessed martyr Sagaris, Bishop [of that see,] who was one of the disciples of the Apostle Paul.

At Capua, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Marcellus, Castus, Emilius, and Saturninus.

At Agen, in Gaul, [towards the end of the third century,] the holy Virgin and martyr Faith, by whose example blessed Caprasius was so stirred up to suffer martyrdom, that he finished his contending with joy.

Likewise the holy martyr Erotis, in whom the love of Christ was so kindled that she triumphed over the flames of fire.

At Treves is kept the memorial of a great multitude of martyrs, which man can scarcely number, who for Christ's faith's sake were put to death in divers ways by the President Rictiovarus in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Auxerre, the holy martyr Romanus, Bishop [of that see, who succeeded Eleutherius and was Bishop three years.]

At Oderzo, [about the year 660,] holy Magnus, Bishop [of that see,] whose body lieth at Venice.

At Naples, [in the year 1791,] holy Mary Frances, of the Five Wounds of our Lord Jesus Christ, of the Third Order of Bare-footed Friars Minor of St Peter of Alcantara; she was famous for graces and miracles, and Pope Pius IX. enrolled her name among those of the holy virgins.

OCTOBER 6.

St Bruno, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

Be we holpen, O Lord, we beseech Thee, by the prayers of Thine holy Confessor Bruno, that we who by our sins have so grievously offended against Thy Majesty, may for his sake and at his petition obtain forgiveness of our trespasses. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

BRUNO, the Founder of the Charterhouse Monks, was born at Cologne, [about the year of our Lord 1030.] From his earliest years he was a very grave child, turning away from childish things, and that so manifestly, that by the grace of God the tokens of holiness already pointed him out as a Father of monks, and a restorer of the life of hermits. His parents, who were eminent for rank and goodness, sent him to Paris, where he studied so well in Philosophy and Theology, that he took the degree of Doctor in both faculties; and a short while after, for his famous graces, he was made a Canon of Rheims.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER some years, he, and six comrades, forsook the world and betook themselves to Hew, the holy Bishop of Grenoble, who, when he learned the reason of their coming, and believing them to have been figured by seven stars which he had seen that night in a dream falling at his feet, gave them a grant of land in some very wild mountains in his Diœcese, which are called the Chartreuses. Thither Bruno and his companions, together with Hew, withdrew themselves, [in the year 1084,] and led for some years the life of hermits. Pope Urban II., who had formerly been his disciple [at Rheims,] commanded him to come to Rome, [in 1089,] and amid the afflictions which then scourged the Church, held him for some time as his counsellor. But at last Bruno, who had refused the Archbishoprick of Reggio, got his leave to go away.

Sixth Lesson.

In his love of the wilderness, he betook himself to a certain desert place in the Diœcese of Squillaci, in the uttermost coasts of Calabria, [whither he went in 1090.] He was praying there one day in a cave, when the hounds of Roger, Sovereign Earl of Sicily and Calabria, who was out a-hunting, came and bayed at the door of it. Thus was he found by this Prince, who was moved by his holiness, and began to cherish him and his comrades, and treat them very kindly. The Earl's goodness was rewarded, for when he was one time laying siege to Capua, and one Sergius, who was first groom of his bedchamber, had made a plot to betray him, Bruno, who was still living in the desert above mentioned, appeared to him in a dream, and delivered him from the danger which was hanging over him. At length Bruno, full of graces and good works, and famous for godliness not less than for learning, fell asleep in the Lord, [upon the 6th day of October, in the year 1101,] and was buried in the monastery of St Stephen, founded by the same Earl Roger, where he is still held in great honour.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

---

[1] There is a good deal of difficulty about the dates and the identification of persons. See Alban Butler, who, in his text, places the oblation of St Placidus in 522, and his death in 546.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Ardeatine Way, [in the year 336,] the holy Confessor, Pope Mark, [who succeeded Sylvester I., and reigned 8 months and 20 days.]

In the district called Rasaphe, in Syria, the holy martyrs Sergius and Bacchus, noble Roman officers under the Emperor Maximian. Bacchus was lashed with strips of raw hide till his whole body was cut into ribbons, and so, still confessing Christ, gave up the ghost. Sergius had his legs tortured in the boots, but remaining firm in the faith, sentence was given on him that he should be beheaded. The place where he sleepeth was called after him Sergiopolis instead of Rasaphe, [by command of the Emperor Justinian,] and thither Christians do greatly resort on account of famous miracles.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Marcellus and Apuleius, who were first disciples of Simon Magus, but afterward, seeing the wonders which the Lord wrought by the Apostle Peter, became disciples of the Apostle, and, after he had suffered, won the crown of martyrdom under the Consular Aurelian. They are buried not far from the city.

At Rasaphe also, the holy Virgin Julia, who gained martyrdom under the President Marcian.

At Padua, the holy Virgin and martyr Justina, who was baptized by blessed Prosdocimus, a disciple of the holy Apostle Peter. Forasmuch as she stood firm in the faith of Christ, the President Maximus caused her to be run through with the sword, and she passed away hence to be ever with the Lord.

At Bourges, [about the year 560,] the holy Priest and Confessor Augustus.

At Rheims, [in the sixth century,] the holy Priest Helanus.

Upon the same day[1] is made the memorial of St Mary, styled of Victory, the yearly observance of which memorial the Supreme Pontiff blessed Pius V. ordained on account of the famous victory gained by the Christians over the Turks upon this day in the sea-fight of Lepanto, by the help of the aforesaid Mother of God, and Gregory XIII. instituted the yearly solemn feast of the same most Blessed Virgin to be kept upon the first Lord's Day in this present month of October.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer as below.

OCTOBER 7.

St Mark, Pope and Confessor.

Simple.

All from the Common Office, (p. 620,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRACIOUSLY hear our supplications, O Lord, and for the sake of Thy Blessed Confessor and Bishop Mark, grant to us in Thy mercy both pardon and peace. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of the holy Martyrs Sergius, Bacchus, Marcellus, and Apuleius. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, and

Prayer.

CAUSE there to come upon us, O Lord, a grace from the blessed and worthy wrestling of Thine holy Martyrs Sergius, Bacchus, Marcellus, and Apuleius, fanning ever in us the fire of the love of Thyself. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

First and Second Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Third Lesson.

THIS Mark was a Roman, who sat as Pope in the reign of the Emperor Constantine the Great. He ordained that the Bishop of Ostia, by whom the Bishop of Rome is consecrated, should use the Pallium. He built two Churches, one in the city and the other on the Ardeatine Way, which Constantine enlarged and richly gifted. Mark lived as Pope eight months, and was buried in the Cemetery of Balbina.[2]

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs. Prayer as above.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the 8th day of October we keep the Feast of the holy Widow Bridget, [Princess of Nericia.] After many pilgrimages to holy places she died at Rome, full of the Spirit of God, upon the 23rd day of July, [in the year 1373,] but her body was taken to Sweden upon the 7th day of October.

Upon the same 8th day of October, were born into the better life—

The holy old man Simeon, of whom it is written in the Gospel that he took the Lord JESUS up in his arms.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy Virgin and martyr Reparata. Forasmuch as she would not offer sacrifice to idols, she was put to divers torments, and then beheaded, under the Emperor Decius. Her soul was seen to leave her body and soar heavenward in a bodily shape like a dove.

At Thessalonica, the holy Proconsul Demetrius, who brought many to believe in Christ, and was martyred by being pierced through with lances, by command of the Emperor Maximian. There also the holy martyr Nestor.

At Seville, in Spain, the holy martyr Peter.

At Laodicea, the holy Priest Artemon, who under the Emperor Diocletian received the crown of martyrdom by fire.

In the country of Lyons, the holy Virgin and martyr Benedicta.

At Ancona, holy Palatias and Laurentia, who were carried into exile by command of the President

[1] There is no direction as to what should be done supposing October 7 should be the first Sunday in the month, but the more reasonable course would seem to be in that case to omit this clause of this Martyrology, as the announcement of the Feast of the Rosary would already have been read at the beginning, and the details are contained in the Sunday Office.

[2] Elected Jan. 18, in the year 336, died Oct. 7.

Dion, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, and died of exhaustion and suffering.

At Rouen, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Evodius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Jerusalem, [about the year 460,] holy Pelagia, surnamed the Penitent.

SECOND LORD'S DAY IN OCTOBER.

Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for her Feast, (p. 633,) except the following.

On the Saturday is read at the beginning of the Martyrology,

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women.

Answer. And blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Let us keep glad holiday in honour of the Motherhood of the Blessed Mary, always a Virgin.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep holiday in honour of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary. * Let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord, and ours.

Hymn.[1]

THE Saviour left high Heaven to dwell
Within the Virgin's womb,
And there arrayed Himself in Flesh,
Our Victim to become.

She unto us divinely bore
Salvation's King and God,
Who died for us upon the Cross,
Who saves us in His Blood.

She too our joyful hope shall be,
And drive away all fears,
Offering for us to her dear Son
Our contrite sighs and tears.

That Son, He hears His Mother's prayer,
And grants, ere it be said;
Be ours to love her and invoke
In every strait her aid.

Praise to the Glorious Trinity
While endless times proceed,
Who in that bosom pure of stain
Sowed such immortal seed. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxiv. 5.)

I CAME out of the mouth of the Most High before there was any creature. I caused the unfading light to arise in the heavens, and covered all the earth as a cloud. I dwelt in high places, and my throne was in the cloudy pillar. I alone compassed the circuit of heaven, and pierced unto the bottom of the deep. I walked in the waves of the sea, and stood in all the earth, and in every people and in every nation I had dominion. And in my power I trod under my feet the hearts of all that are excellent and that are lowly. And in all these I sought rest, and I will abide in the inheritance of the Lord.

First Responsory.

O Holy Virgin Mary, happy art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, by Whom we are saved and redeemed.

Verse. Let us keep glad holiday in honour of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God, by Whom we are saved and redeemed.

Second Lesson.

SO the Creator of all things gave me a commandment and said—(and He that made me rested in my tabernacle)—and He said: Dwell thou in Jacob, and inherit in Israël, and strike thy roots amid My chosen people. I was created from the beginning, before the world; and I shall never fail. And in the holy tabernacle I served before Him. And so I was established in Zion, and likewise in the holy City was I given to rest, and in Jerusalem was my power. And I took root among the honourable people, even in the portion of my God as His own inheritance, and mine abiding was in the full assembly of the Saints.

Second Responsory.

From thee, still maiden undefiled, the Saviour came a little Child. He the Lord Who ruleth o'er earth and o'er heaven for ever, being made man, was enclosed in the blest sides of thy womb.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Answer. He the Lord Who ruleth o'er earth and o'er heaven for ever, being made man, was enclosed in the blest sides of thy womb.

Third Lesson.

I WAS exalted like a cedar in Lebanon, and like a cypress-tree upon Mount Zion. I was exalted like a palm-tree in Kadesh, and like a rose-tree in Jericho. I was exalted like a fair olive-tree in the fields, and like a plane-tree by the water in the broad ways. I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm. I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh. Like storax, and galbanum, and onyx, and myrrh, like the unfelled woods of Lebanon, and like the unadulterated balsam, so did I perfume the place of mine abode. As the turpentine-tree I stretched out my branches, and my branches are the branches of honour and grace. As the vine brought I forth pleasant savour.

Third Responsory.

[2] Many daughters have gotten riches, but thou excellest them all. O holy Mother of God, thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

Verse. May all that are keeping

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] Prov. xxxi. 29.

the Feast of thine holy Motherhood feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. O holy Mother of God, thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. O holy Mother of God, thou art become beautiful and gentle in thy gladness.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great.] (1st for Christmas.)

HIS Mother was chosen a Virgin of the kingly lineage of David, and when she was to grow heavy with the sacred Child, her soul had already conceived Him before her body. She learned the counsel of God announced to her by the Angel, lest the unwonted events should alarm her. The future Mother of God knew what was to be wrought in her by the Holy Ghost, and that her modesty was absolutely safe. For why should she, unto whom was promised all sufficient strength through the power of the Highest, have felt hopeless merely because of the unexampled character of such a conception? She believeth, and her belief is confirmed by the attestation of a miracle which hath already been wrought. The fruitfulness of Elizabeth, before unhoped for, is brought forward that she might not doubt that He Who had given conception unto her that was barren, would give the same unto her that was Virgin. And so the Word of God, the Son of God, Who was in the beginning with God, by Whom all things were made, and without Whom was not anything made that was made, to deliver man from eternal death, was made man.

Fourth Responsory.

Let us tell again of the right worthy Motherhood of the glorious Virgin Mary. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Verse. Let us sing praise to Christ on this the solemn Feast-day of the wondrous Mother of God.

Answer. The same is she whose lowliness the Lord regarded, she who by the message of an Angel conceived the Saviour of the world.

Fifth Lesson. (2nd for Christmas.)

OUR Lord Jesus Christ, descending from His throne in heaven, but leaving not that glory which He hath with the Father, cometh into this lower world by being born after a new order and in a new birth. He cometh after a new order, in that He Who is unseen among His own, was seen among us; the Incomprehensible was fain to be comprehended, and He That is from everlasting to everlasting began to be in time. He was the Offspring of a new birth; conceived of a maiden, born of a maiden, without the passion of any fleshly father, without any breach of His Mother's virginity, since such a birth beseemed the coming Saviour of mankind, Who was to have in Him the nature of man's being, and to be free of any defilement of man's flesh. Though He sprung not as we spring, yet is His nature as our nature; we believe that He is free from the use and custom of men; but it was the power of God which wrought that a maiden should conceive, that a maiden should bring forth, and yet abide a maiden still.

Fifth Responsory.

Blessed art thou of the Lord, O daughter, for through thee have we been given to eat of the tree of life. Thou, without ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse. Despise not our petitions in our necessities, but deliver us from all dangers, O holy Mother of God.

Answer. Thou, without any ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Sixth Lesson.

THE power of the Spirit of God was set to raise up what was cast down, to bind up what was broken, and to bestow abounding strength of modesty for the overcoming of the enticements of the flesh, and therefore it behoved that that power should first be poured forth to preserve that coy cloister, that holy hostel which had pleased Him, and that the sinless Offspring should keep His Mother maiden as she had been before, so that virginity, which in all others cannot survive motherhood, might, by being re-created, serve as a model to others. Moreover, doth it not seem a counsel of the very deepest wisdom, that Christ chose to be born of a virgin? To the end, that is, that the devil might not know that salvation for man had sprung into being, and might think the Child no otherwise born than other children, because the spirituality of the conception escaped his notice, and so it appeared to him to be an ordinary conception like others. To bring this about, the Christ was born of a Virgin, who had been made fruitful by the Holy Ghost: and whereas conception is affected in no other mother without some of the filthiness of sin, this solitary mother drew purification from conception.

Sixth Responsory.

Blessed art thou among women and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb. Whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?

Verse. He That is mighty hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden, and hath done to me great things.

Answer. Whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Verse. He That is mighty hath done to me great things.

Answer. His mercy is on them that fear Him, from generation to generation.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ii. 43.)

AT that time: As they returned, the Child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem, and His parents knew not of it. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (1st Hom. in praise of the B.V.M.)

"Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us?" Mary called God, the Lord of Angels, her son. Which of the angels would have dared to do so? It is enough for them, and they reckon it a great thing, that, being naturally spirits, they should receive the grace of being made and called angels, as witness David: "Who maketh spirits His angels."[1] But Mary, knowing herself to be His Mother, doth boldly apply the word "Son" to that Majesty Whom the angels do serve with awe; neither doth God despise to be called what He hath made Himself. For a little after, the Evangelist saith: "And He was subject unto them." Who to whom? God to men. I say that God, unto Whom the angels are subject, and Who is obeyed by the Principalities and Powers, was subject to Mary.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed art thou, O Virgin Mary, Mother of God, thou that hast believed the Lord, for there hath been a performance in thee of those things which were told thee. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips; plead for us with the Lord our God.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Eighth Lesson.

MARVEL thou at both these things, and choose whether to marvel most at the sublime condescension of the Son, or at the sublime dignity of Mary. Either is amazing, either marvellous. That God should obey this woman, is a lowliness without parallel; that this woman should rule over God, an exaltation without match. In praise of virgins, and of virgins only, is it sung that "These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth," (Apoc. xiv. 4.) Of what praise then thinkest thou that she must be worthy who even leadeth the Lamb? O man, learn to obey. O earth, learn to submit. O dust, learn to keep down. It is of thy Maker that the Evangelist saith: "And He was subject unto them." Blush, O proud ashes! God humbleth Himself; and dost thou exalt thyself? God is subject unto men; and wilt thou, by striving to rule over men, set thyself before thy Maker? (Here the Lesson is broken, if a Ninth Lesson of the Feast be needed.) O happy Mary, lowly and virgin; and wondrous virginity, which motherhood destroyed not, but exalted; and wondrous lowliness, which the fruitful virginity took not away, but ennobled; and wondrous motherhood, which was both virgin and lowly. Which of them is not wondrous? which of them is not unexampled? and which of them doth not stand alone? The wonder would be if thou wert not puzzled at which to wonder most — motherhood in a virgin, or virginity in a mother; a motherhood so exalted, or lowliness in such exaltation. But indeed more marvellous than any one of these things is the combination of them all, and without all comparison, it is more excellent and more blessed to have received them all, than to have received any one of them alone. What wonder is it that God, of Whom we see and read, that "He is wonderful in His holy places," (Ps. lxvii. 36,) should have shown Himself wonderful in His Mother? O ye that be married, honour this incorruption in corruptible flesh; O, holy maidens, gaze in wonder at motherhood in a maid; O, all mankind, take pattern by the lowliness of the Mother of God.

Eighth Responsory.

Rejoice with me, &c., (p. 635,) with this addition.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I have brought forth from my bowels God and Man.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Blessed art thou, * O Virgin Mary, who hast borne the Creator of all.

Second Antiphon. Thou hast given birth * to Him Who made thee, and thou remainest a virgin for ever.

Third Antiphon. All generations shall call me blessed, * for the Lord hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden.

Fourth Antiphon. He That is mighty hath done to me great things, * and holy is His Name.

Fifth Antiphon. The daughters of Zion saw her, * and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Chapter. (Ecclesiasticus xxiv. 12.)

HE that made me rested in my tabernacle and said unto me, Dwell thou in Jacob, and strike thy roots among My chosen people.

Hymn.[2]

MOTHER of Almighty God,
Suppliant at thy feet we pray,
Shelter us from Satan's fraud,
Safe beneath thy wing this day.

'Twas by reason of our Fall
In our first Forefather's crime,
That the mighty Lord of all
Raised thee to thy rank sublime.

O then upon Adam's race
Look thou with a pitying eye,
And entreat of Jesus grace,
Till He lay His anger by.

Honour, glory, virtue, merit,
Be to Thee, O Virgin's Son,
With the Father and the Spirit,
While eternal ages run. Amen.

Verse. The root of Jesse hath blossomed: the Star is arisen out of Jacob.

Answer. The Virgin hath given birth to the Saviour.

[1] Meant for a quotation from Ps. ciii. 5, Heb. i. 7.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. O holy Mary, &c., (p. 633,) and say, May all that tell of thy marvellous Motherhood feel the might of thine assistance.

Prayer throughout as on Lady Day, (p. 791.)

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds, respectively, and the Chapter at Terce is that from Lauds.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Maiden Mother of God, thy Motherhood was a message of joy to the whole world, for out of thee arose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

OCTOBER 8.

St Bridget, Princess of Nericia, Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Virgin nor Martyr, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD our God, Who, through Thine Only-begotten Son, didst cause Thy blessed hand-maid Bridget to see certain things which are naturally known not on earth but in heaven, grant unto us Thy servants at her motherly prayers, to be one day blessed for ever in the vision of Thine eternal glory. Through the same our Lord Jesus Christ, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

BRIDGET was the daughter of princely and godly parents, and was born in Sweden, [in the year of our Lord 1304.] Her life was a very holy one. When she was still in the womb, her mother was for her sake saved from shipwreck. When she was ten years old, she heard a sermon upon the sufferings of the Lord, and the following night she saw Jesus on the Cross, covered with fresh Blood, and heard Him speaking to her of His same sufferings. From that time forth the thought of them touched her so keenly, that she could never again call them to mind without weeping.

Fifth Lesson.

[WHEN she was sixteen years of age] she was given in marriage to Ulpho, Prince of Nericia. She moved her husband to godly works, as well by her noble ensample as by her earnest words. She expended the most motherly care upon the up-bringing of her children.[1] She opened an hospital, in which she carefully tended the poor, especially the sick, and would wash and kiss their feet. She made a pilgrimage with her husband to Compostella, to visit the grave of the holy Apostle James. On their way back Ulpho fell grievously sick at Arras, and St Denys appeared in the night to Bridget, to tell her as well that her husband would be healed, as divers other things to come.

Sixth Lesson.

[IN the year 1344] her husband died, after having become a Cistercian monk. Bridget, having heard the voice of Christ in a dream, took upon herself an harder way of life. During her life God made known to her many hidden things. She founded the monastery of Wastein, under the Rule of the Holy Saviour, a Rule which she had received from the Lord Himself.[2] By the command of God she went to Rome, where she stirred up many by her example to seek the love of God. Thence she went to Jerusalem, and then returned again to Rome. From this pilgrimage she caught a fever, of which she lay sick an whole year in sharp sufferings, and then, laden with good works, and after foretelling the day of her own death, she departed from earth to heaven, [upon the 23rd day of July, in the year 1373.] Her body was taken to the monastery of Wastein. She was famous for miracles, and Boniface IX. enrolled her name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 9th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Paris, the holy martyrs Denys the Areopagite, Bishop [of that city,] Rusticus the Priest, and Eleutherius the Deacon. Denys was baptized by the Apostle Paul, and ordained the first Bishop of Athens. He afterward came to Rome, whence he was sent by the Roman Pontiff, the blessed Clement, to preach in Gaul. He came to Paris, where for some years he faithfully executed the task laid upon him; then the Prefect Fescenninus, when he had put him to divers kinds of grievous torments, caused him to be beheaded, along with his two Companions, and so the three together finished their testimony.

Upon the same day is made memorial of the holy Patriarch Abraham, the father of all them that believe.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Julia, in the country of Parma, upon the Claudian Way, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyr Domninus. He was seeking to escape from the fury of the persecutors, but they that came in pursuit of him ran him through with the sword, and he fell gloriously.

---

[1] She was very blessed in her children. Of eight, two sons died in innocence, and two in the holy war in Palestine, two daughters served God faithfully in the married state, and two as nuns, of whom one is a canonized Saint.

[2] "But this circumstance," says Alban Butler, "is neither mentioned by Boniface IX. in the Bull of her canonization, nor by Martin V. in the Confirmation of her Order, and the Popes, when they speak of this Rule, mention only the approbation of the Holy See."

At Monte Casino, [in the year 834,] the holy Abbat Deusdedit, who was cast into prison by the tyrant Sicard, and there died of hunger and wretchednesss.

In Hainault, [about the year 680,] the holy Confessor Gislen, Bishop, who resigned his see and lived as a monk in a monastery founded by himself, and was famous for many graces.

At Valencia, in Spain, holy Louis Bertrand, of the Order of Friars Preachers, who was filled with the spirit of the Apostolate, and confirmed by innocency of life and many signs the Gospel which he preached to the Americans.

At Jerusalem, holy Andronicus and Athanasia his wife.

At Antioch, the holy Abbess Publia. As the Emperor Julian the Apostate was passing by, she and her Virgins sang those words of David: "The idols of the heathen are silver and gold," and "Let them that make them become like unto them,"[1] wherefore the Emperor commanded her to be buffeted and sharply rebuked.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from the ensuing Lauds.

OCTOBER 9.

The Holy Martyrs Denys, Bishop [of Paris,] Rusticus, and Eleutherius.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.[2]

Fourth Lesson.

DENYS was an Athenian, one of the Judges of the Court of the Areopagus, and a man of varied and deep learning. There is a story concerning him that on the day when the Lord Christ was nailed to the Cross, and when he saw the unnatural eclipse of the sun, Denys said: Either the God of nature is suffering, or the frame-work of the world is breaking up. When the Apostle Paul came to Athens, and was taken and brought unto the Areopagus, and gave an account of the faith which he preached, affirming that Christ had risen from the dead, and that all the dead likewise are to live again, "some mocked, and others said: We will hear thee again of this matter. So Paul departed from among them. Howbeit, certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite." (Acts xvii. 32-34.)

Fifth Lesson.

DENYS was baptized by the Apostle, and set over the Church of the Athenians. He came afterwards to Rome, and was sent by Pope Clement into Gaul, to preach the Gospel. There followed him to Paris one Rusticus a Priest, and Eleutherius a Deacon. He turned many to Christ, and was therefore hided with rods by command of Fescennius the Præfect, and, forasmuch as he still went on bravely preaching Christ, he was tortured with fire upon a grating, and put to divers other torments, and his comrades likewise.

Sixth Lesson.

THEY bore their torments bravely and cheerfully, and then Denys, being over an hundred years of age, and his two comrades with him, suffered by the axe upon the 9th day of October. This is that Denys concerning whom the old story is told that after his head was cut off he took it in his hands and walked two thousand paces, carrying it all the while. He was the author of some marvellous books, clear proofs of a mind fixed in heaven, upon "The Names of God," upon "The Orders in Heaven and in the Church," upon "The Mystic Theology," and divers others.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 1, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 610.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, as upon this day, didst make Thy blessed Witness and Bishop Denys strong to wrestle and to suffer, and Who wast pleased to give unto him, for fellow-workers in declaring Thy glory among the heathen, Thy servants Rusticus and Eleutherius, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, to be like unto them in esteeming the good things of this world but lightly, and in fearing not at all the evil things of the same. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of October, were born into the better life—

At York, in England, [in the year 644,] holy Paulinus, Archbishop of that see. A disciple of the blessed Pope Gregory. Gregory sent him into England along with others to preach the Gospel, and he brought King Edwin and all his people to believe in Christ.

In the island of Crete, blessed Pinytus, noble among Bishops. He flourished as Bishop of Gnossus, under the Emperors Marcus Antoninus Verus and Lucius Aurelius Commodus, and hath left us in his writings a living image of himself as in a looking-glass.

At Cologne, the holy martyr Gereon, with three hundred and eighteen others, who patiently suffered beheading for true godliness' sake in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian.

In the same country, the holy martyrs Victor and his Companions.

---

[1] This no doubt means the whole passage from verse 12 to 16 of Ps. cxxxiv., which accounts for the Emperor's displeasure.

[2] See Alban Butler, from whom it will appear, among other things, that the St Denys honoured on this day flourished and suffered as Bishop of Paris about the end of the third century. His identification with the person mentioned in Acts xvii. 34, and the ascription to either of the writings called after that person, are rejected by most writers.

At Bonn, in Germany, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyrs Cassius and Florence, and many others.

At Nicomedia, [in the year 303,] the holy martyrs Eulampius, and the Virgin Eulampia his sister. When Eulampia heard her brother being tortured for Christ's sake she sprang into the midst of the crowd, and embraced him, and joined herself to him. Then they both were put together into a vessel of boiling oil, but were nowise hurt thereby, by the which wonder two hundred others were brought to believe in Christ, and these two hundred, along with the brother and sister, were all beheaded together, and so finished their testimony.

At Piombino, in Tuscany, [at the end of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Cerbonius, Bishop [of that see,] who was famous for miracles, both in life and in death, as witness holy Gregory.

At Verona also, holy Cerbonius, Bishop of Verona.

At Capua, [about the middle of the ninth century,] holy Paulinus, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 10.

St Paulinus, Archbishop [of York,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c."

At First Vespers a Commemoration of St Denys and his Companions. Prayer from their Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From the Venerable Bede's History, i. 29, ii. 9, 14, 20, iii. 14.)

PAULINUS was sent by the most blessed Pope Gregory in answer to a request of Augustine, to be his helper. He was ordained a Bishop by Justus, Archbishop of Canterbury, to go with the Virgin Ethelburga, whom Edwin, King of the Northumbrians, had espoused to wife. When he was come into that country, he toiled much, not only to keep his own people in the faith, but also by preaching to turn the heathen thereto. For some years it came to very little, but at last the King, after weighing the matter much and long, yielded to Paulinus, and put away his idols.

Fifth Lesson.

THEREFORE King Edwin, with all the chief men of his race, and a great multitude of the people, accepted the faith and the holy laver of the new birth, and were baptized at York, where afterwards was built the Church of St Peter the Apostle, and where also he gave to his teacher Paulinus his episcopal See. It is said that so great was then the eagerness of faith among the Northumbrian people, that at one time Paulinus did nothing for thirty-six days together, from morning even until night, but teach the word of Christ to the multitude who flowed unto him from all round about, and when he had taught them, washed them from their sins in the river Glenny. However, he baptized very often in the river Swale, which runneth by the town of Catterick, for it was not possible to build any houses of prayer at that time of the birth of the Church in those parts.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN King Edwin was dead, and the country of the Northumbrians all troubled, there seemed no help for it but to flee, and Paulinus and Ethelburga went back by ship to Kent. There he found the Church of Rochester without a shepherd, and took charge thereof, but keeping still the Pallium, which Pope Honorius had sent to him at York. While he governed the Church of Rochester he passed away to be with the Lord, upon the 10th day of October in the year 644, and was buried in the church of the blessed Apostle Andrew, which King Ethelbert had built in that city.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Francis Borgia, General of the Society of Jesus, of whom mention is made upon the last day of September, and who is memorable for hardness of living, the gift of prayer, renunciation of the world, and the refusal of high places in the Church.

Upon the same 11th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, the holy martyrs Tharacus, Probus, and Andronicus, who suffered a long and foul imprisonment in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, were three times interrogated under torture and punishment, and, still confessing Christ, were beheaded, and so obtained a glorious triumph.

In the country of the Vexin, under the President Fescenninus, the holy martyrs Nicasius, Bishop of Rouen, the Priest Quirinus, the Deacon Scubiculus, and the Virgin Pientia.

Likewise the holy martyrs Anastasius the Priest, Placidus, Genesius, and their Companions.

In the Thebaid, holy Sarmatas, a disciple of the blessed Abbat Antony, who was slain by the Saracens for Christ's sake.

At Besançon, in Gaul, the holy martyr Germanus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Uzès, in Gaul, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Firmin, Bishop [of that see.]

In Ireland, [in the year 600,] holy Kenneth, Abbat [of Aghaboe.]

At Lier, in Belgium, [in the eighth century,] the holy Confessor Gummar.

At Rennes, in Gaul, [in the ninth century,] the holy Confessor Emilian.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, the holy sisters Zenais and Philonilla, who were kinswomen of the blessed Apostle Paul according to the flesh, and his disciples in the faith.

At Verona, [in the fifth century,] the holy Virgin Placidia.

At Second Vespers is made a Commemoration of the following. Prayer from his Office.

OCTOBER 11.

St Francis Borgia, Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

FRANCIS, fourth Duke of Gandia, was the son of John Borgia, Duke of Gandia, and of Joan of Aragon, daughter of Alphonso, natural son to Ferdinand V. surnamed the Catholic, King of Aragon. [He was born at Gandia, in the kingdom of Valencia, in the year of our Lord 1510.] He passed his boyhood at home in great innocence and godliness, and was still more remarkable for his Christian graces and the hardness of his living, at the Court of the Emperor Charles V., and as Vice-Roy of Catalonia. [On May the 1st, 1539] died the Empress Isabella, and Francis, [as her master of the horse,] was commanded to attend her body to Granada, where it was to be buried. [At Granada the coffin was opened, in order that he might swear to the magistrates of the city that it was indeed the body of the late Empress,] and the sight of the awful change which death had made in her countenance[1] so thrilled him with the thought of our mortality and corruption, that he bound himself by vow, as soon as he lawfully might, to give up all things, and to serve the King of kings only. From that time he so advanced in Christian graces, that his life might be called the miracle of princes, showing, in the midst of a vast mass of business, an image of perfection attained in a cloister.

Fifth Lesson.

HIS wife, Eleanora de Castro, died [on the 27th of March, 1546,] and [in 1551] he entered the Society of JESUS, that therein he might hide himself more safely, and bar by the obligation of a vow the path to dignities.[2] He was the worthy leader of many princes who have embraced a life of hardship, and Charles V. himself when he resigned the Empire did not deny that he had been moved and shown the way by Francis. In his struggle after austerity Francis, by fasting, by iron chains, by the roughest of hair-cloth, by long and bloody flagellations, and by denying himself any but very little sleep, reduced his body to the last degree, but would still spare no toil to overcome himself and to save souls. Thus full of ghostly strength, he was appointed by holy Ignatius, [in the year 1554,] Commissary-General of the Society in Spain, Portugal, and the Indies, and [on the 2nd of July, 1565,] notwithstanding all the precautions he could take to prevent it, he was chosen by the general Congregation of the Society to be General, being the third who held that office. In this position his wisdom and holiness of life greatly endeared him to Princes and Popes, and besides founding or enlarging very many houses in divers places, he sent brethren into the kingdom of Poland, into the islands of the Ocean, and into the provinces of Mexico and Peru, and into other lands also Apostolic men who spread the Roman Catholic faith by their preaching, their sweat, and their blood.

Sixth Lesson.

HE thought so little of himself that he gave himself the nickname of "Francis the sinner." By the Popes he was oftentimes offered the dignity of Cardinal of the Roman Church, but the lowly firmness with which he refused it could never be overcome. In his cheap esteem of the world and of himself his chief pleasures were to clean the house, to beg for food from door to door, and to wait upon the sick in hospitals. He spent many hours every day, oftentimes eight and sometimes ten, in prayer and meditation. An hundred times every day he worshipped God upon his knees. He never missed the opportunity of offering the Holy Liturgy, and the fire from God which burnt within him sometimes shone forth in his countenance when he was lifting the Sacred Host, or preaching. By an inward power given him from God he could tell where the most Holy Body of Christ, under the Eucharistic veils, was kept. [In 1570, the year before the victory of Lepanto,] the blessed Pius V. sent Francis with the Cardinal Alexandrini on an embassy [into France, Spain, and Portugal,] to unite the Christian Princes against Turkey. His vital strength was then nearly worn out, but, through obedience, he undertook the toil of the journey. He became much worse during the travelling, and on his return brought to a blessed end at Rome, as had been his desire, the pilgrimage of this life, [a little before midnight between the last day of September and the first of October,] in the sixty-second year of his own life, and that of salvation 1572. Holy Teresa, who used his advice, called him an holy man, and Gregory XIII., a faithful servant. He was famous for many and great signs and wonders, and Clement X. at last numbered him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD JESUS, Who art Thyself the Ensample and the Reward of true humility, we beseech Thee that as Thou didst make Thy blessed servant Francis glorious in following Thee by setting earthly greatness at nought, so Thou wouldest grant unto us likewise to share in the same imitation and glory: Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

---

[1] It was so disfigured that no one knew it, and he could only swear to its identity because, from the care he had taken, he was sure no one could have changed it on the road.

[2] By permission of the Emperor, he was allowed to pass on to his son, while still alive, the Marquessate of Lombay, which had been conferred on him, and the Dukedom which he had inherited from his father.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Wilfred, Bishop of York.

Upon the same 12th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Evagrius, Priscian, and their Companions.

At Ravenna, on the Laurentine Way, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyr Edistius.

In Lycia, under the same Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyr Domnina.

In Africa are commemorated four thousand nine hundred and sixty-six holy martyrs and Confessors in the Vandal persecution under the Arian King Hunneric. Some of these were Bishops of the Churches of God, and some of them Priests and Deacons, but with them were joined multitudes of the other faithful. For defending the Catholic truth they were driven into exile in the terrible desert; many of them were cruelly taken by the Moors, goaded to run at the point of the spear, and beaten with stones; others had their feet tied together, and were dragged like corpses through hard and sharp places, until all their limbs were mangled; and then were tortured to death in divers ways. Pre-eminent among them were the Bishops Felix and Cyprian.

At Celeia, in Pannonia, [in the fourth century,] holy Maximilian, Bishop [of Lorch.]

At Milan, [in the third century,] the holy Bishop Monas. During the discussion as to the choosing of a Bishop there, a light from heaven shone upon him, and through that wondrous sign he was made Bishop of that church.

At Verona, holy Salvin, Bishop.

In Syria, the holy Priest and Confessor Eustace.

At Ascoli, in the March of Ancona, [in the year 1604,] the holy Confessor Seraphim, of the Order of Friars Minor Capuchins, who was marked by holiness of life and by lowliness, and whose name the Supreme Pontiff Clement XIII. enrolled with those of the Saints.

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 12.

St Wilfred, Archbishop [of York,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Whose grace did make blessed Bishop Wilfred to set a bright example by many excellent works, mercifully grant unto us the help of his patronage, whose teaching hath instructed us to relish things holy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration of St Francis Borgia.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede's History, v. 19.)

WILFRED came from the Monastery of Lindisfarne, and went first to Kent, and then to Rome, where he carefully learnt from the Archdeacon Boniface what were the rites of the Church and the monastic customs which were in use in the Apostolic See. When he returned home King Alchfrid was wishful that a man of such learning and godliness might be attached to himself personally as Priest and Teacher; and Wilfred therefore, when he was about thirty years of age, was ordained Bishop at Paris, and a little while after, his adversaries gave way, and he was set over the whole country of the Northumbrians.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the reign of King Egfrid he was thrust out of his See, and as he was on his way to Rome he landed in Friesland, where he taught the word of life to many thousand savages, and washed them in the waters of salvation. When he came to Rome, his cause was tried in presence of Pope Agatho and many Bishops, and by judgment of all, Wilfred was found innocent and worthy to be Bishop. He came back again to Britain, and there turned the land of the South Saxons from idols to Christ, and sent ministers of the word of God into the Isle of Wight.

Sixth Lesson.

IN the second year of Aldfrid, who reigned after Egfrid, he regained his See, but after five years he fell under fresh accusation, and was banished by the king. He pleaded his cause at Rome, before the Apostolic Pope John, in a council of many Bishops, and in the presence of his accusers, and the above-named Pope wrote to the kings of the English to see that he was put back in his See, since he had been unjustly condemned. This was afterward done in the Synod on the Nid in the reign of Osred, the son of Oldred. He lived four years in peace, and then died at Oundle in Northamptonshire. His body was buried in the church of Ripon with the honour which was due to so great a Bishop, in the year of Christ 709.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy Edward, King of England, who died upon the 5th day of January, but whose feast is kept upon the 13th day of October, which is that of the translation of his body.

Upon the same 13th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Troas, in Asia Minor, holy Carpus, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul.

At Cordova, in Spain, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Faustus, Januarius, and Martial, who were first racked, then had their eyebrows, ears, and noses cut off, and their teeth drawn, and at last completed their suffering martyrdom by fire.

At Thessalonica, the holy martyr Florence, who was put to divers tortures and then burnt.

In Austria, [in the eleventh century,] the holy martyr Colman.

At Ceuta, in Morocco, [in the year 1221,] seven holy martyrs belonging to the Order of Friars Minor—namely, Daniel, Samuel, Angelo, Domnus, Leo, Nicolas, and Hugolin; for their preaching of the Gospel and their confutation of the Mohammedan religion, the Saracens inflicted upon them insults, chains, and stripes, and then beheaded them; and so they gained the palm of martyrdom.

At Antioch, [towards the end of the second century,] the holy Patriarch Theophilus, the sixth after the blessed Apostle Peter, who held the bishopric of that church.

At Tours, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Venantius, Abbat [of St Martin's Monastery.]

At Subiaco, in Latium, the holy Virgin Chelidonia.

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 13.

St Edward, King of England, Confessor.

Double of the Second Class, with an Octave.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast set upon the head of Thy blessed Confessor King Edward a crown of everlasting glory, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, so to use our reverence for him here upon earth, as to make the same a mean whereby to come to reign with him hereafter in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Wilfred. Prayer from his Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Wisd. iv. 7, as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

EDWARD, surnamed the Confessor, was the nephew of the holy King Edward the Martyr, and himself the last Anglo-Saxon King.[1] That he should succeed to the Kingdom was shown by the Lord in a trance to a most holy man named Brithwald. When he was ten years old the Danes, who were ravaging England, sought him, to put him to death, and he was driven into exile to dwell with his mother's brother, [Richard II.] Duke of Normandy, at whose Court [and that of his successors, Richard III., Robert surnamed "the Devil," and William the Bastard] he lived among all the allurements of vice a life of such uprightness and innocency as made all men to marvel. He was a burning and shining light for love of God and the things of God, very gentle-hearted, and quite free from any lust for power. Of him the saying is preserved, That he would liefer not be a King than win a kingdom through slaughter and blood.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the [Danish] tyrants, who had robbed his brothers Edmund and Alfred of life and kingdom, were passed away, Edward was called back into his own country and with the hearty good-will and rejoicing of all, took the kingdom [in the year 1042, being then about forty years old.] He set himself to repair the breaches which wars had made, and began with the things of God. Of the Churches of the Saints, he built some altogether, and renewed others and gifted them with incomes and privileges, being chiefly fain that religion should rise from the low estate whereinto it had fallen. He was brought by the nobles of his Court to marry, but it is constantly said by all writers that in matrimony he remained a virgin with a virgin bride. So great was his love toward Christ, and so strong his faith, that somewhiles when the Mass was in saying, he won to see Him, with countenance full of grace, and glory of God's light. By reason of the abundance of his charity he was styled everywhere the father of orphans and of the poor, and he was never happier than when he had spent upon the needy the whole of his kingly treasures.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was famous for the gift of prophecy, and foretold by inspiration from heaven many things that were to befall England. Of this gift the following is a remarkable instance. Sweyn, King of the Danes, was embarking on ship-board with the mind to invade England, when he fell into the sea and was drowned, and God made known his death to Edward at the very same moment that it happened. He had a wonderful love toward John the Evangelist, so that he was used never to refuse anything for the which he was asked in his name. The Evangelist appeared to him one while in tattered raiment, and, in his own name, asked him for an alms. It befell that the King had no money, wherefore he took a ring from off his finger and gifted him therewith. Not long afterward, the Evangelist sent the same ring back to him by a pilgrim, with a message concerning his death, which was then at hand. The King therefore commanded that prayers should be made for him, and then fell blessedly asleep in the Lord, upon the very day which had been foretold to him by the Evangelist, that is to say, upon the 5th day of January, in the year of salvation 1066. He was famous for miracles, and in 1161 Pope Alexander III. numbered him among the Saints. But Innocent XI. commanded that his memory should be celebrated with a public Office throughout the whole Church, upon the 13th day of October, being that day whereon in the year 1102 his body had been lifted, and found uncorrupt and sweet-savoured.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 14th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the blessed martyr Pope Kallistus. By command of the Emperor Alexander he was long starved in prison, and cudgelled every day, then he was cast headlong out of a window of the house wherein he was warded, and drowned in a well, and so earned the triumph of victory.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy Virgin and martyr Fortunata. In the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian she overcame the rack, fire, beasts, and other torments, and gave up her soul to God. Her body was brought later to Naples, in Campania.

Also the holy martyrs Carponius, Evaristus, and Priscian, brothers of the aforesaid Fortunata, who were slain with the sword, and so received their crown.

Also the holy martyrs Saturninus and Lupus.

At Rimini, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Gaudentius, Bishop [of that see.]

At Todi, the holy Bishop Fortunatus, who, as is stated by blessed Gregory, was distinguished by the grace of an extraordinary power in driving away unclean spirits.

At Würzburg, [in the eighth century,] holy Burchard, the first Bishop of that see.

At Bruges, in Flanders, [toward the end of the fourth century,] holy Donatian, Bishop of Rheims.

At Treves, [in the sixth century,] holy Rusticus, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day, [in the year 1060,] deceased blessed Dominic, called Loricatus, [that is, the mail-wearer, from the coat of mail which he wore as a penance.]

In Latium, the holy Confessor Bernard.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Office.

OCTOBER 14.

St Kallistus, Pope and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

KALLISTUS was a Roman, and ruled the Church in the time of the Emperor Antoninus Heliogabalus. He confirmed the institution of the Ember Fasts, the observance of which hath been received by tradition from the Apostles. He built the Church of St Mary-beyond-the-Tiber, and enlarged the old burying-place on the Appian Way, wherein are buried so many holy Priests and Martyrs, and which hath since been called, on account of this enlargement, the Cemetery of Kallistus.

Fifth Lesson.

IT was by his reverence that the body of the blessed Priest and Martyr Calepodius, which had been cast into the Tiber, was carefully looked for, and, when it had been found, honourably buried. He baptized Palmatius, of Consular, and Simplicius, of Senatorial rank, and likewise Felix and Blanda, all of whom in the end underwent martyrdom. On this account he was thrown into prison, where he wonderfully healed a soldier named Privatus, who was full of sores, and so gained him to Christ; and this Privatus had hardly received the faith, before he was lashed to death with scourges loaded with lead.

Sixth Lesson.

KALLISTUS sat as Pope five years, one month, and twelve days. He held five Ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained sixteen Priests, four Deacons, and eight Bishops. After being long starved, and repeatedly flogged, he was pitched head-foremost down a well, and so crowned with martyrdom, under the Emperor Alexander. His body was carried to the Cemetery of Calepodius on the Aurelian Way, at the third mile-stone from the city, upon the 14th day of October, but was afterwards taken to the Church of St Mary-beyond-the-Tiber, which had been built by himself. There it lieth beneath the High Altar, and is held in great reverence of all men.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. x. 26, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 601.)

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who seest that in our own weakness we do continually fall, make, in Thy mercy, the ensamples of Thy holy children a mean whereby to renew in us the love of Thyself. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 15th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Avila, in Spain, the holy Virgin Theresa, the mother and mistress of the brethren and sisters of the Order of Carmelites of the Stricter Observance.

At Rome, upon the Aurelian Way, the holy martyr Fortunatus.

At Cologne, three hundred holy martyrs, who finished the course of their contending in the persecution under Maximian.

At Carthage, the holy martyr Agileus, on whose feast-day holy Augustine preached to the people a discourse concerning him.

In Prussia, [at the beginning of the eleventh century,] the holy martyr

Bruno, Bishop of the Ruthenians, who was preaching the gospel in those parts when he was taken by wicked men, who cut off, first his hands and feet, and then his head.

At Lyons, [in the fourth century,] holy Antiochus, Bishop [of that see,] who vigorously administered the office of the bishoprick to which he had been called, and inherited a kingdom in heaven.

At Treves, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Severus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Strasburg, [in the year 1027,] the holy Virgin Aurelia.

At Cracow, holy Iadwiga, Grand Princess of Poland, who gave herself up to the serving of the poor, and was famous ever for miracles. Pope Clement IV. enrolled her name among those of the Saints, and Innocent XI. sanctioned her festival for the 17th day of this present month of October.

In Germany, [in the eighth century,] holy Thecla, Abbess [of Kitzingen.]

THIRD LORD'S DAY IN OCTOBER.

The Purity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

All as in the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn, "Blest Guardian, &c.," (p. 678.)

Verse. Let us tell with rejoicing of the Maidenhood of the Blessed Virgin.

Answer. That she may pray for us to our Lord Jesus Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] No defiled thing can fall into her, she is the brightness of the everlasting light, and the unspotted mirror of the power of God.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us keep the Feast of the Maidenhood of the Mother of God. * Let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours.

Hymn.[2]

STAR of Jacob, ever beaming
With a radiance all divine,
Mid the happy stars of Heaven
Glows no purer ray than thine.

All in stoles of snowy brightness,
Unto thee the Angels sing,
Unto thee the virgin choirs,
Mother of th' eternal King.

Joyful in thy path they scatter
Roses white and lilies fair,
Yet with thy chaste bosom's whiteness
Rose nor lily may compare.

Oh that this low earth of ours,
Answering th' angelic strain,
With thy praises might re-echo,
Till the Heavens replied again.

Honour, glory, virtue, merit,
Be to Thee, O Virgin's Son,
With the Father and the Spirit,
While eternal ages run. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Verse. [3] All good things together came to me with her.

Answer. And innumerable riches by her hands.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs.[4] (ii. 1.)

[THE Bride.] I am a rose of the plain and a lily of the valley.

[The Bridegroom.] As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

[The Bride.] As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. Under the shadow of him who is my delight, I sat down, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. He brought me into the wine-cellars, he established his love upon me. Revive me with flowers, stay me up with apples, for I am swooning with love. His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me—

[The Bridegroom.] I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the hinds, and the roe-bucks of the field, that ye stir not up nor awake my love till she please!

[The Bride.] The voice of my beloved! Behold, he cometh!—leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills! My beloved is like a gazelle or a young roe-buck! Behold, he standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, peeping through the lattice. Behold, my beloved is calling unto me—

[The Bridegroom.] Rise up, make haste, my love! my dove! my beautiful one! and come away!

First Responsory.

[5] My beloved is mine, and I am his, who feedeth among the lilies. Thou art beautiful, O my love, winsome and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Verse. My dove, my undefiled is but one. The daughters of Zion saw her and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Answer. Thou art beautiful, O my love, winsome and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bridegroom.] O how beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou! Thine eyes are like dove's eyes, [glancing] out from [the loveliness] that lieth hid [beneath thy veil.][6] Thine hair is like flocks of goats that have come up from Gilead.[7] Thy teeth are like flocks of sheep that have been shorn, that have come up from the washing, whereof every one is with lamb with twins, and none is barren among them.[8]

[1] Wisd. vii. 25, 26.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[3] Wisd. vii. 11.

[4] This Song of Songs is a Dramatic Pastoral, composed of the dialogue of two lovers. In the text, though not in the original, their speeches are separated, as the English language has not the same power of distinguishing Gender as the Hebrew or even the Latin.

[5] Cant. ii. 16; vi. 3, 4, 8, 9.

[6] The present Hebrew is simply: "Thine eyes are like doves' eyes within thy veil."

[7] Apparently long, thick, and deep black.

[8] I.e., very white, and in an even compact lot, the teeth of the upper and lower rows corresponding as in pairs.

Thy lips are like a fillet of crimson, and thy speech is sweet. Like a piece of pomegranate, so are thy cheeks, [shining red] out from [the loveliness] that lieth hid [behind thy veil.] Thy neck is like the tower of David, which is built with battlements, and a thousand bucklers hang from it, all shields of valiant men. Thou art all fair, my love, and there is no spot in thee.

Second Responsory.

[1] Rise up, make haste, my love, my dove, my fair one, and come away! for lo the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth.

Verse. I will arise and go about the city; in the streets and in the broadways, I will seek him whom my soul loveth.

Answer. For lo the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth.

Third Lesson.

[THE Bridegroom.] Come from Lebanon, my spouse! Come from Lebanon, come and thou shalt be a queen! [come] from the springs of the Amana,[2] from the peaks of Senir and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards! Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my heart with one of thine eyes, with one of the hairs on thy neck. How beautiful are thy breasts, my sister, my spouse! Thine embraces are better than wine, and the smell of thy perfumes than all spices! Thy lips, O my spouse, are a rich honey-comb, honey and milk are under thy tongue, and the smell of thy garments is like the smell of frankincense. A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse —a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed.

Third Responsory.

[3] I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if ye see my beloved, that ye tell him that I am faint with love. What is thy beloved like, O thou fairest among women?

Verse. [4] My beloved is white and ruddy, one among thousands. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.

Answer. What is thy beloved like, O thou fairest among women?

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. What is thy beloved like, O thou fairest among women?

SECOND NOCTURN.

Verse. After thy delivery thou still remainest a Virgin undefiled.

Answer. Mother of God, pray for us.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon Virgins, written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Book ii.)

SET before yourselves, as the ideal of virginity, the life of Blessed Mary, which reflecteth, as in a looking-glass, the beauty of chastity, and the loveliness of self-government. Hence ye may take the pattern of your life, for here are to be seen, set forth as in a model, all those things which ye should learn—what to correct, what to flee, what to hold. The first incentive of the learner is the position of the teacher. Whose position is higher than that of the Mother of God? who brighter than she whom the light chose? what purer than she who conceived a body without bodily connection?

Fourth Responsory.

The most Blessed Virgin Mary is a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed; she is the Queen of Angels, the Lady of the world. The same is she through whom God came down to earth that men might go up into heaven.

Verse. To thee we cry, banished sons of Eve, Virgin most holy, remember us.

Answer. The same is she through whom God came down to earth that men might go up into heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT shall I say about the rest of her great qualities? She was a Virgin not in body only, but in mind also; the purity of her thoughts had been deflowered by no evil suggestion, she was lowly in heart, serious in words, wise in head; she spoke little, and took great delight in reading; she placed her hopes not in uncertain riches, but in the prayers of the poor; she was earnest in her pursuits, and modest in conversation; she was used to consider not what men might think of her, but what God might think; she hurt none, and wished well to all; she shrank from boasting, she followed reason; she loved whatsoever was best.

Fifth Responsory.

So pure was Blessed Mary, that she won to be the Mother of the Lord; God made her whom He had chosen, and chose her of whom He would be made.

Verse. The same is the star arisen out of Jacob, whose light shineth in all the world.

Answer. God made her whom He had chosen, and chose her of whom He would be made.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop [of Ravenna.] (Serm. 143.)

SHE gave glory to Heaven, she gave God to earth, she gave faith to the Gentiles, she gave an end to sin, she gave order to life, she gave discipline to manners. The Virgin accepted the grace which was brought to her by the Angel, and then forthwith gave in return everlasting salvation. Virgin blessed indeed, whose are at once the grace of Maidenhood and the crown of Motherhood. Virgin blessed indeed, who won such grace as to conceive from Heaven, and kept untouched the wreath of her guilelessness. Virgin blessed indeed, who received the grace of bearing a divine Offspring, and remaineth the sovereign of purity in all states of life.

---

[1] Cant. ii. 10-12; iii. 2.

[2] The same river otherwise called Abana (now Barada) which rises in the Anti-Lebanon and runs through Damascus. Senir is a part of Mount Hermon. The whole reads as if Shelomith had been a Highland girl from this part of the country. In a subsequent passage she is described as a wild, bright mountain torrent leaping from these hills.

[3] Cant. v. 8.

[4] Cant. v. 10.

Sixth Responsory.

How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

Verse. And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word.

Answer. And the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That Holy Thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Verse. Thou hast found grace with God.

Answer. Holy Mother of God, guileless maiden.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

At that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (Luke i. 26.)

None can doubt that she who is the Queen of Virgins will be the foremost of all to sing that song which it will be given to virgins alone to sing in the kingdom of God. And I think that in singing that song which they alone will sing, but which they will sing all, hers will be the sweetest and the clearest voice, whose notes will make glad the city of our God. To utter such notes as hers, to sing such a song as hers, will none other be found worthy even among those virgins, and that music will be kept for her alone, who alone hath the boast of being Mother, and Mother of the Son of God. She hath wherewith to boast, I say, not in itself that she is mother, but in that He whom she bare was her son. Of a surety God (and it was God whom she bore) who was to give to His Mother a glory which in the heavenly places is all her own, was careful to prevent her on earth, with a grace which was all her own, even that grace whereby in some way which cannot be uttered, she conceived without touch and bore without change.

Seventh Responsory.

There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a flower shall grow out of his roots. Behold the Virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and His name shall be called Emmanuel.

Verse. Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Behold the Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and His name shall be called Emmanuel.

Eighth Lesson.

It became God to be born of none but a virgin. It became a Virgin Mother to be the Mother of God. It became the Creator of mankind, as about to be born a Man, made of a woman, to choose unto Himself out of all, and indeed to create for Himself, such a Mother as He knew beseemed Him, and would please Him. He was pleased, therefore, that she should be a Virgin out of whom, being herself stainless, He should come forth Stainless to purge away all stains. He was pleased that she should be lowly out of whom He should come forth, Who is meek and lowly in Heart, to set an example unto all, in Himself, of needful and healthful graces. He granted her the power of motherhood while yet maiden, having already Himself breathed into her the love of virginity, and granted unto her the reward of her lowliness. And that she who was to conceive and bear the Holy of Holies might be holy in body, she received the gift of virginity; and that she might be holy in mind, she received the gift of lowliness.

If a Ninth Lesson of the Feast is required, the Eighth is divided here.

O Virgin most wonderful and most worshipful, O woman worthy of a worship all thine own, worthy to be wondered at above all women, thou that renewest them that were before thee, and quickenest them that come after thee! "The Angel was sent unto a Virgin"—a virgin in body, a virgin in mind, a virgin by profession, a virgin such as the Apostle would have her be, "holy both in body and in spirit," a virgin not newly found, nor by hazard, but elect from everlasting, foreknown by the Most High, and made ready by Him, kept by Angels, foreshadowed by Patriarchs, and foretold by Prophets.

Eighth Responsory.

O blessed Mary, Mother of God, Temple of the Lord, Sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, thou without any ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. Thou hast given birth to Him Who created thee, and thou remainest a Virgin for ever.

Answer. Thou without any ensample before thee didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Thou without any ensample before thee didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. As the lily among thorns, * so is my love among the daughters.

Second Antiphon. My beloved is mine * and I am his, who feedeth among the lilies.

Third Antiphon. O how beautiful art thou, * my love, how beautiful art thou.

Fourth Antiphon. My dove, * my undefiled is but one.

Fifth Antiphon. When the daughters of Zion saw her, * they cried out that she was most blessed.

Chapter. (Wisdom iv. 1.)

O HOW lovely and glorious is the generation of the chaste, for the memorial thereof is immortal, because it is known with God and with men.

Verse. In thy comeliness and in thy beauty.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. O Mary, how holy and how spotless is thy virginity. I am too dull to praise thee, for through thee we have received our Redeemer, even our Lord JESUS Christ.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that as we do keep a feast to proclaim with worship and gladness how that the Virginity of the most pure Virgin Mary was all whole and undefiled, so we may be holpen by her prayers, that we may become pure both in body and in spirit. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, are the first, second, third, and fifth from Lauds respectively, and the Chapter at Terce is taken from Lauds.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O blessed Mary, Mother of God, Virgin for ever, Sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, thou, without any ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

OCTOBER 15.

St Theresa, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Theresa, begin with the Chapter.

Hymn.[1]

THOU partest from thy father's home,
As herald of the King most High,
Eager, Theresa, far to roam,
And give the heathen Christ, or die.

But thee a gentler death awaits,
A sweeter anguish shall be thine,
When thou shalt sink, as penetrates
The spear-wound made by Love Divine.

May He, Love's sacrifice alone,
Kindle our hearts with equal glow,
And save the nations, now His own,
From all the flames of hell below.

Praise to the Father and the Son,
And to the Holy Spirit be,
Immortal Godhead, Three in One,
Now, and throughout eternity. Amen.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRACIOUSLY hear us, O God of our salvation, and grant that as we do rejoice for the Feast-Day of Thy blessed hand-maiden Theresa, so we may feed to our ghostly health upon her heavenly teaching, and better ourselves by the ensample of her godly conversation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Kallistus. Prayer from his Office.

Then of the Octave of St Edward.

MATTINS.

Hymn.

O LORD of hosts, my God, my King!
Thine altars gave the hallowed rest
Wherein while yet to earth she clung
Thy dove Theresa made her nest.

But now Thy love hath called her hence
To that glad city to depart
Whereof no shrine by walls confined,
But Thou Thyself the Temple art.

Behind the convent lattice heard
The Bridegroom came to call to-day—
"The rain-storms o'er, the winter past,
My love, from Carmel wing thy way!"

Earth's Carmel left, on Zion's heights—
Zion that is above and free—
With virgin souls, O Lamb of God,
In vesture white, she follows Thee.

Angels and Saints in glory swell
Thy marriage-song on high,
But Faith on earth, with Love uncrowned
Can but in Hope reply. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE virgin Theresa was the daughter of a father and mother, equally honourable on account of their birth and of their godliness, [and was born] at Avila [in the kingdom of Old Castile] in Spain, [on the 28th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1515.] She was brought up from the dawn of her life in the fear of God, and when still only seven years old she gave a startling fore-cast of the holy earnestness of her later years. The reading of the acts of the holy martyrs so inflamed and excited her imagination, that she ran away from her father's house, with the design of going to Morocco and the hope there to lay down her life for the glory of Christ JESUS and the salvation of souls. [Upon the bridge over the Adaja, near the town,] she was met by an uncle and brought back to her mother, and was fain to slake her thirst for martyrdom by giving to the poor all the alms she could, and by other godly exercises, though still ever bewailing with tears that the highest prize had been snatched from her. [In the twelfth year of her age,] her mother died, and she besought the most blessed Virgin to be a mother to her in her stead. This she gained; thenceforth she lived always as a daughter under the shelter of the

---

[1] Translation by the Rev. Dr Littledale.

Mother of God. In the twentieth year of her age she withdrew herself among the nuns of St Mary-of-Mount-Carmel. There she dwelt for two-and-twenty years, tormented by grievous sicknesses and divers temptations, and so bravely served her time in the hardest ranks of Christ's army, starved even of that comforting knowledge of God's reconciled love, wherein His holy children are so commonly used even upon earth to rejoice.

Fifth Lesson.

STRENGTHENED in the graces of an angel, the wideness of her love embraced in its tender care the salvation of other souls as well as of her own. To this end, under the blessing of God, and the approbation of Pius IV., she set, first before women and then before men, the observance of the stern Rule of the Old Carmelites. The blessing of the Almighty and merciful Lord did indeed rest most evidently upon this design. This penniless virgin, helped by no man, and in the teeth of many that were great in this world, was enabled to build two-and-thirty houses. The darkness of unbelievers and misbelievers drew from her unceasing tears, and she willingly gave up her own body to God to be tortured, to soften the fury of His indignation against them. His own love so blazed in her heart that she attained to see an Angel run her through with a fiery spear, and Christ Himself take her by the hand, and to hear Him say: "Henceforth thou shalt love Mine honour as a wife indeed." At His inspiration she took the extremely difficult vow to do always that which should seem to her to be most perfect. She wrote much, full of heavenly wisdom, whereby the minds of the faithful are enkindled to long for the Fatherland above.

Sixth Lesson.

EARNEST as were the ensamples of graces which she had shown, and grievous as was the state of her body, afflicted by disease, she still burnt with the desire of tormenting it. She tortured it with sackcloth, chains of spikes, handfuls of nettles, and heavy scourging. She rolled herself sometimes among thorns, and was used to cry to God: "Lord! to suffer—or to die." As long as she remained exiled from the heavenly Fountain of eternal life, her life was to her a lingering death. She was eminent for the gift of prophecy, and God did indeed so pour forth His bounties upon her, that she often cried to Him in entreaty not to bless her so as to make her forget her sins. It was worn out rather by the fever of her love than by the wasting of disease that she sank upon her deathbed at Alva. She foretold the day of her own death, received the Sacraments of the Church, and exhorted her disciples to peace, love, and strictness in observing the Rule, and then her soul, like a pure dove, winged its flight to rest with God, on the 15th day of October in the year 1582, New Style,[1] being then 67 years of age. At her death she had a vision of Christ JESUS surrounded by Angels. A dead tree hard by the cell instantly broke into foliage. Her body is untouched by corruption even unto this day, and lieth in a sort of perfumed oil, regarded with godly reverence. She was famous for miracles both before and after her death, and was numbered by Gregory XV. among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

At Lauds, Hymn as at First Vespers. A Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of October, were born into the better life—

In Africa, two hundred and seventy holy martyrs, all crowned alike.

There also the holy martyrs Martinian and Saturian, and two of their brethren. They were slaves of a certain Vandal, and were brought to believe in Christ by the holy Virgin Maxima, who was their fellow-slave. In the persecution under the Arian king, Genseric, on account of their steadfastness in the Catholic faith, they were first beaten to the very bone with knotty cudgels, but for as much as they were so treated of a long while, and were always found sound and well the next day, they were banished. In their banishment they turned many barbarians to believe in Christ, and obtained from the Roman Pontiff a priest and other ministers to baptize them; wherefore at last they were dragged to death through thorny places in the woods, being fastened by the feet behind chariots. Maxima overcame in many contendings, but God set her at liberty, and she became the mother of many virgins in a monastery, and fell asleep in an holy death.

Likewise the holy martyrs Saturninus, Nereus, and three hundred and sixty-five others.

At Cologne, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, the holy martyr Eliphius.

Likewise, [in the seventh century,] the holy martyr Berchar, Abbat [of Montier-en-Der.]

In the country of Bourges, [in the eighth century,] holy Ambrose, Bishop of Cahors.

At Maintz, [in the year 787,] the holy Confessor Lullus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Treves, holy Florence, Bishop [of that see.]

At Arbon, in Switzerland, [in the seventh century,] the holy Abbat Gall, a disciple of blessed Columbanus.

At Second Vespers, Hymn as at First Vespers, and a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

OCTOBER 16.

Fourth Day within the Octave of St Edward.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

---

[1] She died in the year and at the day in which the Kalendar was changed, about 9 P.M. on the evening of the 4th Oct., as we generally reckon, but the First Vespers of the next day, counted the 15th, being passed, that day is the one to which her death belongs according to the Church reckoning.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.]

HEAR what an evidence of good it is that God judged him worthy of that great position. When Christ had arisen from the dead, what said He unto Peter? "He saith to him . . . Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? He saith unto Him: Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. He saith unto him: Feed My sheep." (John xxi. 16.) And this He said, not only that we might know how well Peter loved Him, but also that He might reveal to us what tenderness He hath toward His sheep. Therefore, if any man will please Him, let him have a care of His sheep, let him seek the common good, let him look unto the salvation of his brethren.

Fifth Lesson.

THERE is no work dearer to God than this, and therefore it is that He saith in another place, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not." (Luke xxii. 31, 32.) What return therefore seeketh He of Peter for that tender care which He hath of him? Even that he should have the like care of others; for He saith: "And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Neither is there anything else which so showeth who is a faithful lover of Christ, as that one should have a care of his brethren, and be at pains for their salvation.

Sixth Lesson.

LET all monks hear this. They have taken their stand upon the high places of the mountains, and have crucified themselves unto the world, that they may do their best to help them that are set over the Churches, and to lessen their cares by prayer, by peace-making, and by love; knowing that unless they, by the grace of God, in all ways help them who are placed amid so many dangers, and succour to the best of their power them that have the care of so much business, although they dwell afar off, their own provision is perished from them, and their wisdom shipwrecked against the rock.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 35.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

To depart from evil, do good, and hope for an eternal reward, these three good things are mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, where it is written that[1] "Paul taught them concerning chastity, and justice, and the hope of eternal life." The words, "Let your loins be girded about," have to do with chastity; "and your lights burning," with justice; and "which is the hope of eternal life,"[2] with looking for the coming of the Lord. Therefore "depart from evil," this is chastity, this is to have the loins girded about; "do good," this is justice, this is to hold the burning lamp; "seek peace and pursue it," this is to look for the world to come.

Eighth Lesson.

WE have these precepts and promises; why seek we good days upon earth, where we cannot find them? For I know that ye seek them when ye are sick or when ye are in those tribulations whereof there be so many in this world, for when life is drawing to an end, the old are full of complaints and have no pleasures; amid all the tribulations wherewith mankind is fretted, men seek nothing but good days, and they desire long life, which they cannot have here.

Ninth Lesson.

WHAT is the life of a man, even such a life as is called a long one here? Listen not to me, but with me. For He saith unto us, "Come, ye children, hearken unto me, I will teach you the fear of the LORD." Behold, what it is he is fain to teach, and for what the fear of the Lord is good. He saith, "What man is he that desireth life, that loveth to see good days?" We all answer, "We desire it." Let us hear what followeth: "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile." Say now, (I will let each answer me,) "I will." If thou dost this, thou mayest safely look for life and good days; seek peace and pursue it, and then thou mayest look up unto the Lord and say, "I have done that which Thou hast commanded, give me that which Thou hast promised."

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy widow Iadwiga, Grand Princess of Poland, who fell asleep in the Lord upon the 15th day of this present month of October.

Upon the same 17th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy martyr Heron, a disciple of blessed Ignatius, after whom he was made Bishop of that city. He followed in all godliness in the steps of his master, and for the love of Christ laid down his life for the sheep committed to his care.

Upon the same day, [in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy martyrs Victor, Alexander, and Marian.

In Persia, [in the fifth century,] the holy martyr Mamelta. She was turned to the faith from the worshipping of idols by a warning from an angel, was stoned by the Gentiles, and drowned in the depths of a lake.

At Constantinople, the holy monk Andrew of Crete. He was often beaten under the Emperor Constantine Copronymus for his honouring of holy images, and at length, after one of his feet had been cut off, he gave up the ghost.

At Orange, in Gaul, [in the sixth century,] holy Florentine, Bishop [of that see,] who was famous for many graces, and fell asleep in the Lord.

---

[1] The only passage in the Acts of the Apostles which at all resembles these words seems to be xxiv. 25: "He reasoned of justice, and chastity, and of judgment to come."

[2] It does not appear whence these words are taken.

At Capua, [in the same sixth century,] holy Victor, Bishop [of that see,] famous for his learning and holiness.

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 17.

St Iadwiga, [Grand Princess of Poland,] Widow.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Virgin nor Martyr, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst teach Thy blessed hand-maid Iadwiga to turn away from the glory of the world, and with all her heart to take up her Cross and follow Thee, teach us, for her sake and after her ensample, to hold light the perishing pleasures of this present world, and cleaving ever unto Thy Cross to rest in the end more than conquerors over all things that would hurt us. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IADWIGA, a Princess, in whom the splendour of her family was outshone by the radiant innocency of her life, was the daughter of Bertold and Agnes, Marquess and Marchioness of Moravia,[1] and sister to Gertrude, wife of Andrew, King of Hungary, and mother of the holy Elizabeth of Thuringia. From her earliest childhood she was a very grave child, and had already done with childish things when, at twelve years of age, she was given in marriage by her father and mother to Henry, Grand Prince of Poland.[2] In marriage she kept the bed in all holiness undefiled, and brought up in the fear of God the children that were therein begotten of her. [After the birth of her sixth child,] she was fain to give herself more continually to God, and induced her husband to agree to a mutual vow of separation of bed-fellowship. After his death [in 1238,] by the inspiration of God, Whom she besought in unceasing prayer, she clad herself for godliness' sake in the habit of a Cistercian nun in the monastery [which had been finished] at Trebnitz [in 1219.][3] She continued absorbed in God. She remained engaged in the Divine Office and hearing Masses from sunrise till noon, and trod mightily under foot the old enemy of man.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE could not bear to hear talk of worldly things, unless they had to do with the things of God or the saving of souls. She was very wise in business, not doing too much, nor unseasonably, and withal courteous and gentle toward all men. She got a great victory over herself by maltreating her flesh with fasting, watching, and rough clothing. She was an ensample of the higher Christian graces and of a godly nun, by the wisdom of her counsels, and the straightforwardness and peacefulness of her mind. It was her use to rank herself after all others, and cheerfully to undertake lower offices than those of the other nuns. She ministered to the poor even upon her knees, and washed and kissed the feet of lepers, having such command over herself as not to recoil from their sores oozing with matter.

Sixth Lesson.

HER long-suffering and endurance were very marvellous, especially when her son Henry, Duke of Silesia, to whom she bore a mother's love, was killed by the Tartars [in 1241.] His death drew from her rather thanksgiving to God than tears for him. [She died upon the 15th day of October, in the year 1243.] She was famous for miracles. One while, being called on, she restored to life a boy who had fallen into the water, been dashed against the wheels of a mill, and wholly crushed. This and the like being duly proved, Clement IV. numbered her name among those of the Saints, and allowed her Feast-day to be kept in Poland, in which country, being Patroness, she hath most honour, upon the 15th of October; which permission was given to the whole Church by Innocent XI. for the 17th day of the same month.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Edward.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of October, were born into the better life—

The blessed Evangelist Luke, who suffered many things for Christ's Name's sake, and died in Bithynia, full of the Holy Ghost. His bones were first brought to Constantinople, and thence to Padua.

At Antioch, holy Asclepiades, Patriarch [of that see,] who was one of the noble multitude of martyrs who suffered gloriously under Macrinus.

In the country of Beauvais, the holy martyr Justus, who, while he was yet a lad, was slain under the President Rictiovarus in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, the holy martyr Athenodorus, Bishop [of that see.] He was brother of holy Gregory the Wonder-worker, was famous for his teaching, and was crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Aurelian.

On the bank of the Euphrates, in Mesopotamia, [at the end of the fourth century,] the holy hermit Julian.

At Rome, the holy Confessor Paul of the Cross, founder of the Congregation styled the Congregation of the Cross and Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ. He was famous for his marvellous innocency and devotion to penance, and kindled with an exceeding love toward Christ crucified. Pope Pius IX. enrolled his name among those of the Saints, and appointed for his festival the 28th day of April.

---

[1] Alban Butler says this is a mere mistake of copyists for Meran,

[2] He was Duke of Silesia at the time of the marriage, and only became Grand Prince of Poland in 1233.

[3] It was begun in 1203. The Saint never took monastic vows,

At Rome also, [in the third century,] holy Tryphonia, widow of Decius Cæsar. She is buried in the Catacombs beside holy Hippolytus.

Vespers are of St Luke, without any Commemoration of St Iadwiga or of the Octave of St Edward.

OCTOBER 18.

St Luke, Evangelist.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, that there may plead for us Thine holy Evangelist Luke, who, for Thy Name's sake, bore about always in his body the death of the Cross.[1] Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ezek. i. 1, (p. 592.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book on Ecclesiastical Writers, written by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

LUKE was a physician of Antioch, who, as appeareth from his writings, knew the Greek language. He was a follower of the Apostle Paul, and his fellow-traveller in all his wanderings. He wrote a Gospel, whereof the same Paul saith: "We have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the Gospel throughout all the Churches" (2 Cor. viii. 18.) Of him, he writeth unto the Colossians, (iv. 14): "Luke, the beloved physician, greeteth you." And again, unto Timothy, (II. iv. 11): "Only Luke is with me." He also published another excellent book intituled "The Acts of the Apostles," wherein the history is brought down to Paul's two-years sojourn at Rome, that is to say, until the fourth year of Nero, from which we gather that it was at Rome that the said book was composed.

Fifth Lesson.

THE silence of Luke is one of the reasons why we reckon among Apocryphal books "The Acts of Paul and Thekla," and the whole story about the baptism of Leo. For why should the fellow-traveller of the Apostle, who knew other things, be ignorant only of this? At the same time there is against these documents the statement of Tertullian, almost a contemporary writer, that the Apostle John convicted a certain Priest in Asia, who was a great admirer of the Apostle Paul, of having written them, and that the said Priest owned that he had been induced to compose them through his admiration for Paul, and that he was deposed in consequence. There are some persons who suspect that when Paul in his Epistles useth the phrase, "According to my Gospel" (Rom. ii. 16, 2 Tim. ii. 8,) he meaneth the Gospel written by Luke.

Sixth Lesson.

HOWBEIT, Luke learned his Gospel not from the Apostle Paul only, who had not companied with the Lord in the flesh, but also from other Apostles, as himself declareth at the beginning of his work, where he saith: "They delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word," (i. 2.) According to what he had heard, therefore, did he write his Gospel. As to the "Acts of the Apostles," he composed them from his own personal knowledge. He was never married. He lived eighty-four years. He is buried at Constantinople, whither his bones were brought from Achaia in the twentieth year of Constantine, together with the reliques of the Apostle Andrew.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke x. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 593.)

At Lauds no Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Arenas, in Spain, the holy Confessor Peter of Alcántara, of the Order of Friars Minor, whose name Clement IX. enrolled among those of the saints on account of his wonderful spirit of penance and his many miracles.

At Rome, under the Emperor Mark Antonine, the holy martyrs Ptolemy and Lucius. Of these it is recorded by Justin Martyr that Ptolemy brought a lewd woman to believe in Christ, and taught her to honour chastity, for the which cause he was accused by an unclean man before Urbicius the Prefect. He suffered a long and foul imprisonment, and at length made a public confession of Christ's teaching, and was sentenced to death. Lucius blamed the sentence and openly avowed himself also to be a Christian, for the which cause he was sent to death likewise, and with them was sent a third under the same condemnation.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Beronicus, the Virgin Pelagia, and forty-nine others.

In Egypt, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximin, the holy soldier Varus. He used to visit seven holy monks that were kept in prison, and to minister to them, and when one of them died he chose to be substituted in his place, and along with the others he suffered great cruelties, and gained the palm of martyrdom.

At Evreux, [at the end of the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Aquilinus, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Orleans, [toward the end of the sixth century,] deceased holy Veran, Bishop [of Cavaillon.]

---

[1] Cf. 2 Cor. iv. 10. The meaning in the text is obscure. What became of the Evangelist after the martyrdom of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul is quite uncertain. (See Alban Butler.) The phrases used in the Martyrology would seem to imply a denial of the statement of St Hippolytus that he was crucified at Elæa in the Peloponnesus. Perhaps the collect means to say that though it is not true that he suffered such a martyrdom physically, yet he suffered a life-long martyrdom in intention and in endurance of hardships, making true of him what St Paul says of himself in 2 Cor. iv. 10. The fact of his having no eve is perhaps also an indication that he was not regarded as a martyr.

At Salerno, [in the fifth century,] holy Eusterius, Bishop [of that see.]

In Ireland, [at the end of the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Ethbin, [sometime] Abbat [of Taurac in Brittany.]

At Oxford, in England, [in the eighth century,] the holy Virgin Frideswide, [Patroness of that city. She was daughter of the Prince of that territory, and founded at Oxford a nunnery in honour of St Mary and all the saints, the direction of which was committed to her care.]

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from Lauds.

OCTOBER 19.

St Peter of Alcántara, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

PETER was born at Alcántara, [a small town in the Province of Estramadura,] in Spain, [in the year of our Lord 1499.] His father, [Alphonso Garavito, was a lawyer and Governor of the town,] and his mother [was] of good extraction. The holiness of his life was foreshadowed from his earliest years. In the sixteenth year of his age he entered the Order of Friars Minor, wherein he showed himself a pattern to all. He undertook the work of preaching in obedience to his Superiors, and thereby brought many to turn away from sin to true repentance. He conceived a great desire to bring back the observance of the Rule of St Francis to the uttermost straitness of old times, and to that end, supported by God's help, and armed with the approval of the Apostolic See, he founded [in the year 1555] a new stern and poor house near Pedraso, from which the harder way of life, therein happily begun, spread marvellously through divers Provinces of Spain even to the Indies. He was an helper to holy Theresa, with whom he was like-minded, in bringing about the Reformation of the Carmelites. She was taught of God that no one should ask anything in the name of Peter without being heard, and was used to ask him to pray for her, and to call him a Saint while as he was yet alive.

Fifth Lesson.

HE humbly excused himself from accepting the courtesies of princes, by whom his advice was sought as that of an oracle, and declined to become the Confessor of the Emperor Charles V. He was a very careful keeper to poverty, and contented himself with a single tunic than which none was worse. Purity he carried to such a point that when he was lying sick of his last illness, he would not allow the brother who ministered to him to touch him, how lightly soever. He brought his body into bondage by unceasing watching, fasting, scourging, cold, nakedness, and all manner of hardships, having made it a promise never to allow it any rest in this world. The love of God and his neighbour, which was shed abroad in his heart, somewhiles burnt so that he was fain to run from his cell into the open air to cool himself.

Sixth Lesson.

IT was marvellous how his thoughts became altogether rapt in God, so that somewhiles it befell that he neither ate nor drank for the space of several days. He was oftentimes seen to rise into the air, shining with an unearthly glory. He passed dryshod over torrents. When his brethren were in the last state of need, he fed them with food from heaven. A staff which he fixed in the earth grew presently into a green fig-tree. Once while he was travelling by night in the midst of an heavy snow-storm, and took refuge in a ruined and roofless house, then the falling snow made a roof over him lest he should be overwhelmed. Holy Theresa beareth witness that he had the gift of prophecy and of the discerning of spirits. At length, in the 63rd year of his own age, [and of salvation 1562,] at the hour which he had himself foretold, [upon the 18th day of October,] he passed away to be for ever with the Lord, cheered in his last moments by a wonderful vision and by the presence of Saints. At the instant of his death, blessed Theresa, then afar off, saw him carried to heaven. He appeared to her afterwards, and said: "O what happy penance, to have won for me such glory!" After his death he became famous for very many miracles, and Clement IX. inscribed his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.)

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast been pleased to set before us in Thy blessed Confessor Peter a wondrous ensample of penance and of a mind unfathomably rapt in Thee, let, we beseech Thee, the same Thy servant pray for us, and him do Thou accept, that we may so die unto earthly things, as to take lively hold on heavenly things. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Octave of the holy Confessor Edward.

[1] Upon the same 20th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Avia, near Aquila, in the Abruzzi, [in the third century,] the blessed martyr Maximus the Levite. From his desire to suffer he showed himself when the persecutors sought for him, when he was interrogated he answered with steadfastness, was tortured upon the rack, then cudgelled, and at last thrown down from an high place, and so slain.

---

[1] In the original, the Martyrology upon this day begins with the notice of St John of Kenty, but as his Feast is kept in England, not upon October 20, but upon October 22, the notice is here transferred accordingly.

At Agen, in Gaul, the holy martyr Caprasius. He had escaped from the fury of the persecution, and was lying hid in a cave, when he heard how the blessed Virgin Faith was suffering for Christ's sake. Then he was stirred up to bear suffering likewise, and he prayed the Lord that if He judged him also to be worthy of the glory of martyrdom He would cause a spring of clear water to break forth from the rock of the cave, which thing when the Lord granted, Caprasius went back confidently to the field of battle, and gained the crown of martyrdom by a noble contention.

At Antioch, the holy Augustal Prefect Artemius, who had been distinguished for the highest military service under the Emperor Constantine the Great, but when he rebuked the Emperor Julian the Apostate for his cruelty toward the Christians, Julian commanded him to be cudgelled, tortured, and beheaded.

At Cologne, the holy Virgins Martha and Saula, and others, all martyrs.

At Minden, [in the third century,] the holy martyr Bishop Felician.

At Paris [is commemorated the translation of the reliques of] the holy martyrs George the Deacon and Aurelius, [of whom mention is made upon the 27th day of July.]

In Portugal, suffered [in the seventh century,] the holy Virgin and martyr Irene.

At Rheims, deceased, [about the year 600,] the holy Confessor Sindulph.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

OCTOBER 20.

Octave of St Edward.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

The First Vespers as regards the Octave of St Edward begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Peter of Alcántara. Prayer from his Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat, [of Clairvaux,] (2nd on St Victor.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, rejoice in the Lord, Who amid the unceasing gifts of His fatherly love, hath bestowed upon the world a man, by whose ensample many may be saved; again I say, rejoice, because God hath set him in the midst, and drawn him nigh unto Himself, that by his pleading many more may be saved. He was seen on earth, to be a model; he hath been raised to heaven, to be a help. Here he teacheth us how we may have life, there he calleth us unto glory. He hath stirred us up unto the work, and he is a mean unto the kingdom. He is a good bedesman who hath now nothing left to ask for himself, and so can give us all the earnestness of his entreaties and the fruit of his petitions. He hath no need any more, and therefore what can he ask for himself?

Fifth Lesson.

THIS is the day of his glorious transit, the day of the gladness of his heart, let us rejoice and be glad in it. He hath entered in into the strength of the Lord; for now he is more able to save. This day did [Edward] lay down the body, and enter lightly, because unencumbered, into the holy places; being made like unto them, in the glory of the saints; having looked down upon the world and triumphed over the prince of the world, he went up as a conqueror above the world, and received from the hand of the Lord a crown of victory. He went up with vast furnishing of good works, illustrious for conquest, and glorious for miracles. The old soldier hath entered into the comfort and peace which he hath earned, and is set down to rest; without care, as regards himself, but careful for us. O what holiness, revered even by Angels, affecting deeply though diversely both the good and the bad, the good to flee unto it, and the bad to flee from it; neither would it be easy for me to say whether holiness is more surely pointed at by the desire of the one or by the dread of the other.

Sixth Lesson.

O VETERAN, who hast now exchanged the stern toil of the Christian warfare for the blessed rest of Angels, look down upon thine unwarlike and unskilful comrades, who are uttering thy praises in the midst of hostile swords and spiritual wickedness. O [Edward,] how godly, how sweet, how gracious is it, while we are in this place of affliction and the body of this death, to sing of thee, to honour thee, to entreat thee. Thy name and thy memorial are a rich honey-comb in the lips of prisoners. Honey and milk are under their tongue who rejoice when they are mindful of thee; ah, then, thou strong champion, thou kind patron, thou faithful advocate, arise to help us, that we may rejoice in freedom, and that thou mayest boast of the fulness of thy victory.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 35.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. And so on.

Homily by St Fulgentius, Bishop [of Ruspa.] (On the Confessors.)

If we consider these words of the Lord only according to the letter, we could find in them no spiritual profit, for what good is it to the saving of the soul if a man should tie up his bodily loins, or light a candle? Therefore by the loins we must understand the lust of the flesh, and by the light, Christian faith and love. When therefore the Lord commandeth us to have our loins girded about, beyond doubt He biddeth us to restrain the lusts of the flesh; when He saith that we should have our lights burning, He commandeth us to give forth the light of the true faith, and to glow with works of holy love.

Eighth Lesson.

LET us compare with the words of the Prophets what we have taken from the Gospel, for it is the same God who hath established both Testaments, both are the gift of one Lord, and albeit the mysteries of these two Testaments differ according to their epochs, the doctrine of man's salvation whereby we are forbidden to sin, and commanded to work good works, is the same in both. By Isaiah the Lord saith these words unto all, "Put away the evil of your doings from before Mine eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do well." (i. 16.) And what is it to have our loins girded about, but to cease to do evil? What is it to have our lights burning, but to learn to do well?

Ninth Lesson.

THE loins of the faithful are girded about when they repress their evil lusts, when they keep down their sinful thoughts, when the will withstandeth lechery, when they deny their lewd motions, when they spurn unclean indulgence, when they rise above avarice and robbery, when they leave their neighbour unhurt, when they conquer pride, when they overcome envy. The lights of the faithful burn, when they keep the rule of the true faith, when they abide steadily in the bosom of our Mother the Church, when they reck little of earthly things and desire greatly heavenly things, when they are careful to keep peace, when they have a pure love one toward another, when in honour they prefer one another, when they go forward in lowliness and meekness of heart, when willingly and cheerfully they work works of mercy, and when in all their good works they seek not to please men but to please God.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 21st day of October, were born into the better life—

At Cologne, the holy Ursula and her Companions, who, for their steadfastness in Christianity and chastity, were massacred by the Huns, and so closed their earthly life by martyrdom. Very many of their bodies are buried at Cologne.

In Cyprus, the holy Abbat Hilarion, of whom holy Jerome hath written the life, full of graces and wonders.

At Ostia, the holy martyr Asterius, a Priest who suffered under the Emperor Alexander, as is written in the acts of the passion of the blessed Pope Kallistus.

At Nicomedia, the holy martyrs Dasius, Zoticus, Caius, and twelve others, soldiers, who were diversly tormented, and then drowned in the sea, [under the Emperor Diocletian.]

At Maronia, in Syria, near Antioch, [in the fourth century,] the holy monk Malchus.

At Lyons, holy Viator, the servant of the blessed Justus, Bishop of Lyons.

At Laon, holy Cilinia, mother of the blessed Remy, Bishop of Rheims.

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 21.

St Ursula, and her Companions, Virgins and Martyrs.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 641,) except the following. At both Vespers and at Lauds, Antiphon, "Trim your lamps, &c.," and Prayer, "Grant unto us, &c." (p. 645.)

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of the Octave of St Edward, and then of St Hilarion from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621.) Prayer, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. vii. 25, (p. 642.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ABOUT the middle of the fifth century, when Attila, chief of the Huns, had been defeated at Chalons in his first invasion of Gaul, he returned into Pannonia, and before crossing the Rhine attacked the noble city of Cologne, and from hatred to the Catholic religion, which greatly flourished therein, he gave it up to sack and slaughter. The savages, burning with lust, cruelly assaulted the young virgins who were abiding there on their journey from Britain, among whom the most famous by name is the virgin Ursula, who exhorted her companions to endure all torments, and rather to suffer the most cruel death than to submit to the loss of their virginity.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS noble band of virgins therefore, while they steadily resisted the Huns, were by them for some part slain with the sword, for some part pierced with arrows, and for some part felled with bludgeons, and Ursula, bending as a glorious victim over the piles of her slaughtered companions, as over heaps of heavenly pearls, red with the bloodshed for faith and chastity, led triumphantly into heaven the army crowned with these double crowns. After the horde of barbarians were departed, they that survived of the dwellers at Cologne gathered together the bodies of the virgins and the other citizens that had suffered martyrdom, and buried them with all honour.

Sixth Lesson.

UPON the field stained with their blood, wherein the bodies of the martyrs had been laid to rest, was built a Church, which, in the middle of the seventh century, was already called that of the Holy Virgins, and there from reverence for them no other human body was thenceforth allowed to be buried. To this Church, in the ninth century, was attached a monastery wherein, in the beginning of the tenth century, the nuns that were flying for fear of the Hungarians found refuge, and this place hath ever been abundantly endowed and devoutly frequented by the chief citizens of that illustrious city. The Church hath oftentimes been restored, but the walls are still to be seen even to this day, everywhere adorned with shrines of the martyrs, while the greater part of their relics are enclosed within the hollow walls of the Choir or lie under the pavement. In a chapel adjoining are countless heads of the virgins marked in part by traces of their martyrdom, and in part covered with hair matted with blood. Unto these sacred pledges [of a blessed eternity] the faithful in past times made devout pilgrimages.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xxv. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples of this parable: The kingdom of heaven shall be likened unto the virgins which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom and the bride. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (93*rd on the Words of the Lord.*)

The lamps of the wise virgins burnt with oil from within, with security of conscience, with inward glory, with love in the heart. And the lamps of the foolish virgins also at one time burnt. With what then did they burn? With the praises of men. But when they arose—that is to say, when they shall have arisen in the resurrection of the dead—they begin to trim their lamps—that is to say, to make themselves ready to render unto God an account of their works.

(If Nine Lessons are required of the Feast this Lesson is divided here.)

But there will be no one to give praise there; every man will be taken up with his own business; no man will think of any but of himself; and so there will be no one to sell oil, and the lamps will be gone out. Therefore is it written, that the foolish virgins turned unto the wise, saying: "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out." For they would seek to make their lamps shine with that wherewith they had shone before, even oil given by others, and to walk in the praises of others.

Eighth Lesson.

"AND the door was shut." And what signifieth this that was said unto them, "I know you not"? Doth not He Who knoweth all things know them? Why therefore is it said unto them, "I know you not." "I reject you. I condemn you in my conduct. I know you not, my conduct knoweth no fault." This is a great thing. He knoweth no fault, and He judgeth faults. He knoweth no fault in His own doing; He judgeth it by His reprobation. Thus is it said, "I know you not." And the five wise virgins went in with the bridegroom to the marriage. My brethren, how many soever ye be in the name of Christ, be ye the five wise ones, but not five human beings. Be ye the five wise virgins, as having the wisdom of that number. For the hour will come. It will come when we know not, it will come at midnight-watch. Thus endeth the Gospel: "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour."

Ninth Lesson. (Of St Hilarion.)

HILARION was born of heathens at Tabatha in Palestine, [about the year of our Lord 291.] He was sent to study at Alexandria, where he bore a fair name for life and wit. There he embraced the religion of JESUS Christ, and made wonderful head-way in faith and love. He went oftentimes to Church, was careful in fasting and prayer, and set no price upon the pleasures and lusts of the world. When the name of Antony became famous in Egypt, Hilarion made a journey into the desert on purpose to see him. There he dwelt with him two months, to the end that he might learn all his way of life, and then returned home. After the death of his father and mother, he gave all that he had to the poor. Before he had completed the fifteenth year of his age, he went into the desert, and built there a little house, scarcely big enough to hold him, and wherein he was used to sleep on the ground. The piece of sackcloth wherewith alone he clad himself he never washed and never changed, saying that hair-cloth was a thing not worth the trouble of cleanliness. He took great interest in reading and meditating on the Holy Scriptures. His food was a few figs and some porridge of vegetables, and this he ate not before set of sun. His self-control and lowliness were beyond belief. By these and other arms he overcame divers and fearful attacks of the devil, and drave out countless evil spirits from the bodies of men in many parts of the world. He had built many monasteries, and was famous for miracles, when, in the eightieth year of his age, he fell sick. When he was gasping for his last breath, he said: "Go out—what art thou afraid of? Go out, my soul!—wherefore shrinkest thou? Thou hast served Christ hard on seventy years—and art thou afraid of death?" And so with these words he gave up the Ghost.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of St Hilarion. All from the Common Office. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the Holy Confessor John of Kenty, in Poland, glorious for graces and miracles, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Clement XIII. enrolled among those of the Saints, [and of whom mention is made upon the 24th day of December.]

Upon the same 22nd day of October, were born into the better life—

At Jerusalem, the blessed Bishop Mark, a man of great eminence and learning, who was the first Gentile to be entrusted with the government of the Church of Jerusalem, and who in no long time gained the palm of martyrdom under the Emperor Antonine.

At Adrianople, in Thrace, the holy martyrs Philip, Bishop [of Heraclea,] the Priest Severus, Eusebius, and Hermes, who, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, were imprisoned and flogged, and then burnt.

Likewise, the holy martyrs the Bishop Alexander, the soldier Heraclius, and their Companions.

At Fermo, in the March of Ancona, [in the third century,] the holy Bishop and martyr Philip.

At Huesca, in Spain, [in the ninth century,] the holy sisters Nunilo and Alodia, two Virgins who were punished with death by the Saracens for their confession of the faith, and so suffered martyrdom.

At Cologne, holy Cordula, one of the Companions of holy Ursula, who had hidden herself in terror at the sight of the sufferings and slaughter of the others, but repented thereof, and on the next day showed herself openly, and received the crown of martyrdom, the last of them all.

At Hierapolis, in Phrygia, holy Abercius, who was illustrious in the time of the Emperor Mark Antonine.

At Rouen, holy Melanius, Bishop [of that see,] who was ordained by holy Pope Stephen I., and sent thither to preach the Gospel.

In Tuscany, [towards the end of the ninth century,] the holy Irishman Donatus, [Bishop of Fiesole.]

At Verona, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Verecundus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Jerusalem, the holy Mary Salome, concerning whom it is written in the Gospel that she was careful about the burying of the Lord.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of St John of Kenty. Prayer from his Office.

FOURTH SUNDAY IN OCTOBER.

Patronage of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

At the beginning of the Martyrology, on the preceding Saturday, is read—

The morrow is the Feast of the Patronage of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

All from the Common Office for her Festivals, (p. 633.)

At First and Second Vespers and at Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Sunday. The Ninth Lesson at Mattins is from the Homily of the Sunday.

In the Antiphon, "O holy Mary," at First Vespers, and the Seventh Responsory, is said, "May all that are keeping feast in honour of thine holy patronage, feel the might of thine assistance."

OCTOBER 22.

St John of Kenty, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

MATTINS.

Hymn.[1]

O GLORY and high boast
Of Poland's ancient race!
True father of thy fatherland!
True minister of grace.

'Twas thine the law of God
To preach and to obey;
Oh, pray that we obedient be;
Nor from its precepts stray!

To th' Apostolic shrines
A pilgrim oft wast thou;
Oh guide aright, through this dark night,
Our pilgrimage below!

Thou to Jerusalem
Didst go for love, and there
The traces of thy Lord adore,
And wash with many a tear.

O sacred wounds of Christ!
Deep in our hearts remain!
May we through you the promise true
Of life eternal gain!

Thy flesh with fastings torn,
With cruel scourgings rent,
'Twas thine to live, O blessed Saint,
A spotless penitent.

Oh, may we follow thee,
With chaste and sinless soul!
And by the Spirit's might, the storms
That vex our hearts, control!

The poor in winter's snow
Thy raiment oft received;
Them that were hungered and athirst
Thy father's heart relieved.

Thou who didst naught deny
To those who sought thine aid,
Thy native land from harm defend,
Her bounds from hostile raid!

Praise to the Father, Son,
And Holy Ghost be given,
And by Thy servant's prayers be won
For us the joys of heaven! Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS John was the son of godly and respectable parents named Stanislaus and Anne, and was born [in the year of our LORD 1397,] in the town of Kenty, a place in the diœcese of Crakow in Poland, from which he took the Latin name of Cantius. By his gentleness, innocency, and seriousness he gave great hopes even from his childhood. He studied Philosophy and Theology in the University of Crakow, wherein he rose step by step to be a Professor and teacher of those sciences wherein he lectured many years, not only enlightening the minds of his hearers, but stirring up in them all godliness, instructing them by ensample as well as by word. Having taken Priests' orders, he ceased not to busy himself with letters, but added thereto the striving after Christian perfection. He grieved exceedingly that God should be offended on all hands, and offered up to Him, day by day, not without many tears, the Unbloody Sacrifice for a propitiation for himself and for his people. He was for some years a faithful Parish Priest at Ilkusi, but after a while gave it up for fear of the danger of souls, and accepted the call of the University to take up again his Professorship.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT time was left him over from his work, he gave up partly to the profit of his neighbour, more especially in preaching, and partly in prayer, wherein he is said sometimes to have had heavenly visions and messages. The sufferings of Christ took such hold upon him, that he sometimes passed whole nights without sleep in thinking thereon, and that he might more keenly realize them, he made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. There he was seized with such a passionate longing to be a martyr, that he preached Christ crucified even to the Turks. He went four times to Rome to the thresholds of the Apostles, on foot, and laden with a wallet, partly to do honour to the Apostolic See, for which he had a great reverence, and partly (to use his own expression) that he might clear off the pains of his own purgatory by use of the Pardons for sin which are there daily offered. In one of these journeys he was set upon by highway robbers, who plundered him, and having asked him if he had any more, whereto he answered, Nay, left him and fled. Then he remembered that he had some gold pieces sewn up in his clothes. So he ran after the robbers with shouts, and offered them these also, but they were so amazed at the simplicity and charity of the holy man, that they gave him back even that which they had already taken. To hinder scandal-mongering, he wrote up upon the walls, after the ensample of holy Austin, certain texts, to be an unceasing warning to himself and others. He gave his own bread to the hungry, and clothed the naked, not with bought raiment only, but by stripping himself of his own garments and shoes, himself meanwhile letting down his own cloak to trail upon the ground, lest any should see that he returned home barefoot.

---

[1] The translation of the first five verses is by the late Rev. E. Caswall; that of the last five is adapted from the same author's version for First Vespers.

Sixth Lesson.

HE slept very little, and that upon the ground; his clothing was enough only to clothe his nakedness, and his food to keep him alive. He kept his virgin purity guarded like a lily among thorns by rough hair-cloth, scourging, and fasting. For about thirty-five years before his death he never tasted flesh-meat. At length, when he was full of days and good works, he felt that death was near, and made himself ready to meet it by a long and careful preparation, and to be the freer, he gave to the poor everything that was left in his house. Strengthened by the Sacraments of the Church, and "having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ," he took flight to heaven upon the 24th day of December, [in the year of our Lord 1473.] He was famous for miracles both before and after his death. His body was carried into the University Church of St Anne, hard by his dwelling, and there honourably buried. The popular reverence and the crowds around his sepulchre grew greater day by day, till he hath come to be held in honour as one of the chiefest holy defenders of Poland and Lithuania. At the glory of more wonders, Pope Clement XIII., upon the 16th day of July, in the year 1767, with solemn pomp, enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.)

LAUDS.

Hymn.[1]

SAINT of sweetest majesty!
What a potent voice is thine!
At thy prayer diseases fly,
Fading health revives again.

Oft with wasting fever wan,
Lingering at their latest breath,
Dying men by thee are drawn
From the very jaws of death.

Oft the stores of golden grain,
Hurried down the swollen flood,
At thy prayer return again,
Guided by the hand of God!

Such, O happy Saint in light,
Such thy help in hour of need,
Oh, then from the heavenly height
Hearken now and intercede.

Everlasting Three in One!
Everlasting One in Three!
Grant us through Thy Saint the boon
Of a blest eternity. Amen.

Prayer throughout the Office.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we may so follow after the ensample of Thy blessed Confessor John in learning ever more and more the knowledge which maketh Thy Saints, and in showing mercy to our neighbour, that Thou for the same Thy servant's sake mayest forgive us our trespasses. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the solemn feast of Our Most Holy Redeemer, whose venerable image was taken by barbarians and carried off into Africa, where it was treated with mocking and insults, and then was cast away into a lion's den. It was bought back for money by the bare-footed Friars of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity, and brought to Spain, where it is distinguished everywhere for signs and wonders, and is worshipped[2] and honoured with great earnestness by the people under the Most Holy Name of Jesus of Nazareth.

Upon the same 23rd day of October, were born into the better life—

At Ossuna, near Cadiz, in Spain, the holy martyrs Servandus and Germanus. Under the Imperial Vicar Viator, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, they suffered stripes, a foul imprisonment, hunger and thirst, and a long and toilsome journey, which they were forced to make loaded with irons, and in the end finished the course of their martyrdom by being beheaded. Germanus is buried at Merida and Servandus at Seville.

At Antioch, in Syria, the holy Priest Theodore. In the persecution under the Emperor Julian, the impious apostate, he was arrested and racked, and after many and terrible sufferings, wherein he was partly burnt by the putting of lamps to his sides, he was beheaded, and so finished his martyrdom, still steadfast in the confession of Christ.

At Granada, in Spain, is commemorated the blessed martyr Peter Paschal, Bishop of Jaen, of the Order of the Blessed Mary of Ransom for the Redemption of Captives, who suffered upon the 6th day of December, [in the year 1300.]

Upon the same 23rd day of October, were also born into the better life—

At Constantinople, [in the year 878,] the holy Archbishop Ignatius, who suffered much at the hands of the Cæsar Bardas, because he rebuked him for having put away his wife, and was sent into exile, but was restored by Nicholas I., Pope of Rome, and in the end fell asleep in peace.

At Bordeaux, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Severinus, Bishop of Cologne, [and afterward of Bordeaux.]

---

[1] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

[2] Adoratur. The Roman Martyrology contains nothing whatever regarding this image, and the above is accordingly extracted from the Trinitarian Martyrology. Athough this feast, as indicated, is unknown to the Roman Service Books properly so called, the Office is found in the appendix to some editions of the Missal and Breviary, and the diœcese of Rome is one of those places where it has been inserted in the local kalendar. It was introduced into England in 1843, but the translator has failed to ascertain what is the local connection, nor has he succeeded in finding any account of this image in any book which he has been able to consult.

At Rouen, [in the seventh century,] holy Romanus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Salerno, [in the fifth century,] holy Verus, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Amiens, [in the eighth century,] the holy Priest Domitius.

At Poitiers, the holy Confessor Benedict.

At Willach, in Pannonia, the holy Confessor John of Capistrano, of the Order of Friars Minor, illustrious for the holiness of his life and for his zeal for the propagation of the Catholic faith, who by his prayers and miracles procured the defeat of a vast army of Turks, and delivered the fortress of Belgrade from beleaguerment. We keep his feast upon the 28th day of March.

Vespers are of the following.

OCTOBER 23.

Feast of our Most Holy Redeemer.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

First Antiphon. The LORD shall send the rod of His strength out of Zion, and He shall reign for ever and ever.

Ps. cix. The LORD said, &c., (p. 100.)

Second Antiphon. The LORD sent redemption unto His people; He hath commanded His covenant for ever.

Ps. cx. I will praise Thee, &c., (p. 100.)

Third Antiphon. [1] The LORD is my goodness, and my fortress, my strength, and my Deliverer.

Ps. cxv. I believed, &c., (p. 105.)

Fourth Antiphon. With the LORD there is mercy, and with Him is plenteous redemption.

Ps. cxxix. Out of the depths, &c., (p. 108.)

Fifth Antiphon. In whatsoever day I call upon Thee, answer me: Thou wilt strengthen my soul exceedingly.

Ps. cxxxvii. I will praise Thee, &c., (p. 111.)

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[2]

CREATOR of the starry pole,
Saviour of all who live,
And light of every faithful soul,
JESU, these prayers receive.

Who sooner than our foe malign
Should triumph, from above
Didst come, to be the medicine
Of a sick world, in love;

And the deep wounds to cleanse and cure
Of a whole race, didst go,
Pure Victim, from a Virgin pure,
The bitter Cross unto.

Who hast a Name, and hast a Power,
The height and depth to sway,
And Angels bow, and devils cower,
In transport or dismay;

Thou too shalt be our Judge at length;
Lord, in Thy grace bestow
Thy weapons of celestial strength,
And snatch us from the foe.

Honour and glory, power and praise,
To Father, and to Son,
And Holy Ghost, be paid always,
The Eternal Three in one. Amen.

Verse. [3] Lord, Thou hast redeemed us by Thy Blood.

Answer. And hast made us unto our God a kingdom.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [4] But My salvation shall be for ever, and My righteousness from generation to generation. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of St John of Kenty.

At Compline, Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Where in heaven JESUS reigns, Angels bow before Him. * Come ye also, sons of earth, come ye and adore Him.

Hymn.[5]

WHO madest all and dost control,
Lord, with Thy touch divine,
Cast out the slumbers of the soul,
The rest that is not Thine.

Our hearts and hands by night, O Lord,
We lift them in our need;
As holy Psalmists give the word,
And holy Paul the deed.

Look down, Eternal Holiness,
And wash the sins away
Of those, who, rising to confess,
Outstrip the lingering day.

JESU, the Virgin-born, to Thee
Eternal praise be given,
With Father, Spirit, One and Three
Here as it is in heaven. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and He heard me out of His holy hill.

Ps. iii. LORD, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Second Antiphon. O LORD our Ruler, how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth!

Ps. viii. beginning with the words, "For Thy glory is exalted, &c.," (p. 4.)

Third Antiphon. The LORD is in His holy temple: the LORD'S throne is in heaven.

Ps. x. In the LORD, &c., (p. 5.)

Verse. [6] Redeem me, O Lord, and be merciful unto me.

Answer. In the congregations will I bless Thee, O LORD.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (li. 1.)

HEARKEN to Me, ye that follow after righteousness, and seek the LORD! Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare you; for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him. Therefore the Lord shall comfort Zion; He also will comfort all her waste places: and He will make her wilderness a place of delights, and her desert like the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of praise. Hearken unto Me, My people, and give ear unto Me, O My nation; for a law shall proceed from Me, and I will make My judgment to rest for a light of the people. My Righteous One is near, My Saviour is gone forth, and Mine arms shall judge the people: the isles shall wait upon Me, and on Mine arm shall they trust.

[1] Ps. cxliii. 2.

[2] Translation by Cardinal Newman.

[3] Apoc. v. 9, 10.

[4] Isa. li. 6, 8.

[5] Translation by Cardinal Newman.

[6] Ps. xxv. 11, 12.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord sitting, &c., (p. 538.)

Second Lesson.

LIFT up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath; for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall perish in like manner: but My salvation shall be for ever, and My righteousness shall not pass away. Hearken unto Me, ye that know righteousness, My people in whose heart is My law: fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings. For the worm shall eat them up like a garment, and the moth shall eat them like wool; but My salvation shall be for ever, and My righteousness from generation to generation.

Second Responsory.

Look down, O Lord, &c., (p. 538.)

Third Lesson.

AWAKE, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord! Awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not it that hath cut the Insolent one, that hath wounded the dragon? Art thou not it which hath dried the sea, the waters of the great deep? that hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over? And now the redeemed of the Lord shall return, and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head; they shall obtain gladness and joy; sorrow and mourning shall flee away. I, even I, am He That comforteth you. Who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall wither as grass? And forgettest the Lord thy Maker, That hath stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth; and hast feared continually every day before the face of the fury of the oppressor, who made himself as though he were ready to destroy? Where is now the fury of the oppressor? He shall quickly come that shall open, and he shall not kill unto utter destruction, neither shall his bread fail. But I am the Lord thy God.

Third Responsory.

[1] O God, Which satest in the throne judging right, be Thou a refuge for the poor, a refuge in times of trouble. For Thou alone beholdest mischief and spite.

Verse. The poor leaveth himself unto Thee; Thou wilt be the helper of the fatherless.

Answer. For Thou alone beholdest mischief and spite.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For Thou alone beholdest mischief and spite.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [2] We have drunk in Thy loving-kindness, O God, in the midst of Thy temple.

Ps. xix. The Lord hear thee, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. [3] Thou art Thyself my King, Who commandest deliverances for Jacob.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the Lord's, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. [4] Offer unto God the sacrifice of praise, and pay thy vows unto the Most High.

Ps. xlv. God is our Refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Verse. [5] Remember us, O Lord, with the favour that Thou showest unto Thy people.

Answer. O visit us with Thy salvation.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Leo [the Great,] (1st on the December Fast, and almsgiving.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, if we study attentively the history of the creation of our race, we shall find that man was made in the image of God, that his ways also might be an imitation of the ways of his Maker. This is the natural, real, and highest dignity to which we are capable of attaining, that the goodness of the Divine nature should have a reflection in us, as in a glass. As a mean of reaching this dignity, we are daily offered the grace of our Saviour, for as in the first Adam all men are fallen, so in the Second Adam can all men be raised up again. Our restoration from the consequences of Adam's fall is sheer mercy of God, and nothing else; we should not have loved Him unless He had first loved us, (1 John iv. 19,) and scattered the darkness of our ignorance by the light of His truth.

Fourth Responsory.

The Lord is at my right hand, I shall never be moved. Therefore my heart is glad, and my tongue rejoiceth.

Verse. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup.

Answer. Therefore my heart is glad, and my tongue rejoiceth.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR His great love then wherewith He hath loved us, (Eph. ii. 4,) God reneweth His likeness in us. And, moreover, in order that He may find in us the reflection of His goodness, He giveth us that whereby to work along with Himself, (Who worketh all in all,) lighting, as it were, candles in our dark minds, and kindling in us the fire of His love, to make us love not Himself only, but likewise, in Him, whatsoever He loveth. For if among men that friendship is well founded which is founded upon like ways of living, and like ways of living do produce some love one toward another even among the reprobate, how much should we yearn and strive not to do anything that is out of harmony with God's ways? The Prophet saith (Ps. xxix. 6), "For there is terror in His anger, and in His favour is life." And it is only by copying His will that we can attain to be made partakers of His nature. (2 Pet. i. 4.)

[1] Ps. ix. 5; x. 14.
[2] Ps. xlvii. 10.
[3] Ps. xliii. 5.
[4] Ps. xlix. 14.
[5] Ps. cv. 4.

Fifth Responsory.

[1] With the Lord there is mercy, and with Him is plenteous redemption.

Verse. He saveth such as be of a contrite spirit.

Answer. And with Him is plenteous redemption.

Sixth Lesson.

When the Lord saith (Luke x. 27): "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbour as thyself"—let the faithful soul learn from her Maker and Master His own unfailing love, and unite her will entirely with the will of Him in Whose dealings there is never any the least departure either from the uprightness of justice or from the tenderness of mercy. However great be a man's toils, or however many his troubles, he hath always a good reason for bearing them patiently, if he understand that his trials are sent to him either to correct or to prove him.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] They remembered that God is their strength, and the High God is their Redeemer.

Verse. And He fed them according to the integrity of His heart.

Answer. And the High God is their Redeemer.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And there was very great gladness among the people.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [3] But as for me, I have called upon God, and the LORD shall save me.

Ps. lx. Hear my cry, &c., (p. 64.)

Second Antiphon. He only is my God and my Saviour; my salvation, and my refuge for ever.

Ps. lxxiv. Unto Thee, O God, &c., (p. 73.)

Third Antiphon. Behold, O God our shield! and look upon the face of Thine Anointed.

Ps. lxxxiii. How lovely are Thy tabernacles, &c., (p. 81.)

Verse. [4] Thou hast declared Thy strength among the people.

Answer. Thou hast with Thine arm redeemed Thy people.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (iii 13.)

At that time: JESUS said unto Nicodemus: No man hath ascended up to heaven, but He That came down from heaven, even the Son of Man, Which is in heaven. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract on John iii.)

No man hath ascended up to heaven, but He That came down from heaven. For He came down; and died; and, by His death, delivered us from death. Death slew Him, and He slew death. And ye know, my brethren, how that it was through the devil's envy that death entered into the world. "For God made not death," saith the Scripture, "neither hath He pleasure in the destruction of the living, for He created all things that they might have their being." (Wisd. i. 13, 14.) But what is there said? "Nevertheless through envy of the devil came death into the world." (ii. 24.) Man was not driven to come to the death which the devil offered, for the devil had no power to drive him; but he had great skill in cajoling him. If thou hadst not assented, the devil could have done nothing to thee; it was thine own consent, O man, which brought thee to death. Of dying creatures are born dying creatures, and of them that once could not die are made beings that must die. From Adam all men are born to die; but JESUS, the Son of God, the Word of God, by Whom all things were made, the Only-begotten Son, co-equal to the Father, was made so that He could die, for "the Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us." If then He accepted death, and crucified death upon His cross, dying creatures are freed from death. The which thing also, the Lord hath us to wit, was in a figure wrought among them of old time.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed is the people, &c., (p. 539.)

Eighth Lesson.

"And," saith He, "as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." What was figured by that serpent which was lifted up? The death of the Lord upon the cross. For as by the serpent came death, by the image of the serpent was represented death. Death-giving is the bite of the serpent, life-giving the death of the Lord.[5] The serpent is looked upon that the serpent may be vanquished. What signifieth this? A death is looked upon that death may be vanquished. But whose death is it that is looked upon? Life's death. For is not Christ the Life? And yet Christ died.

Eighth Responsory.

One Seraph cried, &c., (p. 417.)

---

[1] Ps. cxxix. 7.

[2] Ps. lxxvii. 35.

[3] Ps. liv. 17.

[4] Ps. lxxvi. 15, 16.

[5] There is an untranslatable pun upon morsus (a bite) and mors (death).

Ninth Lesson.

AND now, brethren, if we would be healed of sin, let us look upon Christ crucified: for He saith, that, "as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." Even as they who looked upon the serpent which Moses lifted up in the wilderness were healed of the bite of the serpent, even so they who by faith look unto Christ crucified are healed of the bite of sin. But they of old time were delivered from death to receive life temporal, whereas here He saith that they have eternal life. This is the difference between the shadow and the substance; the shadow gave temporal life, the substance giveth eternal life.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [1] Sing unto the LORD, * for He hath done excellent things; make this known in all the earth.

Second Antiphon. Behold, God is my salvation, I will not be afraid, * for He is become my salvation. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of the Saviour, * and ye shall say: Praise the LORD, and call upon His Name.

Fourth Antiphon. [2] Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ.

Fifth Antiphon. Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion, * for great is the Holy One of Israël in the midst of thee.

Chapter. (Tob. iii. 13.)

BLESSED be Thy Name, O God of our fathers, for although Thou hast been angry, yet wilt Thou show mercy, and in the time of tribulation Thou forgivest the sins of such as call upon Thee.

Hymn.[3]

O THOU pure light of souls that love!
True joy of every human breast!
Sower of life's immortal seed!
Our Maker, and Redeemer blest!

What wondrous pity Thee o'ercame
To make our guilty load Thine own,
And, sinless, suffer death and shame,
For our transgressions to atone!

O still may pity Thee compel
To heal the wounds of which we die;
And take us in Thy light to dwell
Who for Thy blissful Presence sigh.

Be Thou our Guide, be Thou our goal,
Be Thou our pathway to the skies,
Our joy when sorrow fills the soul,
In death our everlasting prize.

Verse. [4] LORD, Thou hast been our refuge—

Answer. In all generations.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [5] Lo, this is our God; * we have waited for Him, and He will save us; we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in His salvation. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast appointed Thine Only-begotten Son Redeemer of the world, and through His overcoming of death hast mercifully renewed us unto life, grant that we, being mindful of such benefits, may cleave unto Thee with an everlasting love, and worthily partake of the fruits of Thy redemption. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

In the Short Responsory is said,

Verse. Thou That hast redeemed the world.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow, we keep the feast of the holy Archangel Raphael.

Upon the same 24th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Venosa, in Apulia, the holy martyrs Felix, Bishop [of Tubzoca or Thibira,] in Africa; the Priests Audactus and Januarius; and the Readers Fortunatus and Septimus. In the time of the Emperor Diocletian they long suffered bonds and imprisonment in Africa and Sicily under the Procurator Magdellian, and, forasmuch as Felix refused to give up the holy books as commanded by the edict of the Emperor, they were at last slain with the sword.

In the city of Nagran, in Yemen, [in the sixth century,] under the Jewish tyrant Dunaan, in the time of the Emperor Justin, the holy martyrs Aretas and his three hundred and forty Companions.

After them was burnt a Christian woman; and her son, aged five years, could neither be cajoled nor threatened into ceasing to confess Christ, but cast himself into the fire wherein his mother was being burnt.

At Cologne, [in the fifth century,] the holy martyr Evergistus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Constantinople, [in the year 447,] the holy Archbishop Proclus.

In Brittany, [in the year 575,] holy Magloire, Bishop [of Dol,] whose body lieth at Paris.

In the monastery of Vertou, [in the year 601,] the holy Abbat Martin.

In Campania, holy Mark the Hermit, whose illustrious works are recorded by holy Gregory.

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. iv. 11, v. 9.)

THOU art worthy, O Lord our God, to receive glory and honour and power, for Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us a kingdom unto our God.

OCTOBER 24.

St Raphael, the Archangel.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxvi. O praise the LORD, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

THEE, O Christ, the Father's splendour,
Life and virtue of the heart,
In the presence of the angels,
Sing we now with tuneful art:
Meetly in alternate chorus
Bearing our responsive part.

Thus we praise with veneration
All the armies of the sky;
Chiefly him, the blest Physician,
Sent with healing from on high:
Raphael, who in princely virtue
Bade the haunting demon fly.

By whose watchful care, repelling,
King of everlasting grace!
Every ghostly adversary,
All things evil, all things base,
Grant us of Thine only goodness
In Thy paradise a place.

Laud and honour to the Father;
Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
Ever Three, and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple.
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. I am the Angel Raphael, who stand before the Lord; but bless ye God, and tell of all His wondrous works.

The following Commemoration is made of the preceding.

Antiphon. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and Thy dominion endureth through all generations.
Verse. Thou, O Lord, hast redeemed us by Thy blood.
Answer. And hast made us a kingdom unto our God.

Prayer from the preceding Office.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Archangels, * O come, let us worship Him.

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When Tobias went in, he found a young man with his loins girded, and as it were ready to set forth, and knowing not that it was an Angel, he saluted him.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. The Angel Raphael hid himself, and said: I am Azarias, the son of Ananias the Great.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. I will bring thy son safely into the land of the Medes, and bring him back safely unto thee again. Alleluia.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Verse. There was given unto the Angel much incense.
Answer. That he should offer it upon the golden altar, which is before the presence of the Lord.

[1] The original is an adaptation of the original form ("Tibi Christe splendor Patris") of the Hymn for Michaelmas Day, "Te splendor et virtus Patris," and the translation is accordingly an adaptation of the translation of that Hymn by the late Dr Neale.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Tobias (xii. 1,) as on p. 509.

First Responsory.

At that time the prayers of them twain were heard in the presence of the glory of the Most High God, and holy Raphael, the Angel of the Lord, was sent to heal the twain of them, whose prayers had been uttered at one time in the presence of the Lord.

Verse. Tobias and Sara were in tribulation, and began to pray with tears.

Answer. And holy Raphael, the Angel of the Lord, was sent to heal the twain of them, whose prayers had been uttered at one time in the presence of the Lord.

Second Lesson.

So the father and the son, p. 509, down to "temptation should try thee," in the Third Lesson.

Second Responsory.

When Tobias went forth he found a very well-favoured young man standing with his loins girded, and as it were ready to set forth, and he saluted him and said: Whence art thou, O good young man?

Verse. And he knew not that it was an Angel of the Lord, and saluted him, and said:

Answer. Whence art thou, O good young man?

Third Lesson.

AND now the Lord sent me to heal thee, and to deliver Sara, thy son's wife, from a devil; for I am the Angel Raphael, one of the seven, which stand before the Lord. And when they heard it, they were troubled, and quaked, and fell upon their faces on the ground. And the Angel said unto them: Peace be unto you, fear not. In that I was with you, I was with you by the will of God, bless Him and praise Him. Unto you indeed I seem to eat and drink, but my meat is a meat which is not seen, and my drink a drink which man cannot behold. It is time therefore for me to return unto Him that sent me, but bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works. And when he had so said, he was taken away from their sight, and they beheld him no more. Then they cast themselves down upon their faces, by the space of three hours, and blessed God; and they arose, and told of all His marvellous works.

Third Responsory.

The Angel went in unto Tobias and saluted him and said: Joy be ever with thee, be of good courage, for it is at hand that God should heal thee.

Verse. And Tobias answered and said: What joy shall I have while I sit in darkness, and see not the light of heaven?

Answer. Be of good courage, for it is at hand that God should heal thee.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Be of good courage, for it is at hand that God should heal thee.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. And the Angel said, Take the fish by the gill, and draw him out of the water.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. Tell me, I pray thee, brother Azarias, to what use is that which thou hast bidden me keep of the fish.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. The gall is a healing to the eyes, but the virtue of the heart and the liver putteth the power of the devil to flight.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Verse. And the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord—

Answer. Out of the Angel's hand.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Serm. i. in Dom. 15, B. Tob. 226*th for the Season.*)

BLESSED Tobit,[1] who knew how to break his bread to the hungry, maketh ready a swift recompense for him, who toiled for him for hire. We have listened patiently to the reading, which is just over, and we have marvelled at the discourse of the father and son, and now they are admonished by the Angel, whom they had deemed a dweller of earth; but whose service was the service of the Divine Glory. For it was to this end that he was suffered to fall into the affliction of blindness, even that he might have an Angel to his physician, who was kindled with the very light of God, and uttered the words, "Prayer is good with fasting and almsgiving." The prayer of the just is the key of heaven; the supplication goeth up, and the mercy of God cometh down. Though the earth be deep, and the heavens high, yet God heareth the voice of him who hath a good conscience. If it be a groan only, it is articulate enough for Him; a tear is sufficient for His eyes; He heareth weeping sooner than words. The prayer of the presumptuous He is wont to reject. The father and the son were of one mind; albeit twain, they had but one thought. "My son," saith he, "let us send away that man with an addition to his wages such as he pleaseth, for he hath done us great good by his work." And they began to ask him if he would take payment of his wages. "Brother," saith he, "take that is thine, and go thy way safely; take thy wages, for thou hast shown much kindness unto me, and unto my son. Take, as I said, half of the substance that thou and my son have brought unto me, for the thanks that we owe thee cannot be measured."

Fourth Responsory.

Tobias asked the Angel: Of what house, or of what tribe, art thou? And he answered and said: I am Azarias, the son of Ananias the Great.

---

[1] "Tobis."

Verse. Dost thou seek for a tribe or family, or an hired man to go with thy son? But be not careful overmuch.

Answer. I am Azarias, the son of Ananias the Great.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Angel, who had been sent to work mercy for nothing, rejoiceth at the thought of wages. "Tobit, or Tobias," saith he, "why take needless thought to pay me? Keep what your heavenly Father hath given you. He is the fountain of health, and I am His minister to heal. Ye know not who is the hireling whose services ye have earned. Ye feared not to bury the dead of the captivity. O Tobit, thy works are gone up before the Lord, inasmuch as thou didst leave thy dinner to give burial to the dead. It was I who offered up before the Lord as a fat sacrifice thy care for their honourable burial; and it is I that have been sent forth to do the commands of the Heavenly Judge. Thou didst bury the dead, without fear for the sting of death; the very voiceless dead, whom thou didst bury, cried aloud for thee. The blindness of thine eyes was a trial, whereby thy patience should earn a brighter crown from the heavenly places. I am Raphael, one of the seven Angels, who stand in the presence of the glory of God; I have no need of wages from man; I am rich enough, in that I am near to the Majesty on high. He That hath sent me is rich. What He hath granted freely, He hath commanded me to grant freely. Neither do ye owe me any thanks, for ye have received nothing from me of my own strength. Bless God, and give praise to Him, and glorify Him, for He hath shown good upon you."

Fifth Responsory.

Tobias went out to wash his feet, and behold a great fish went out, and would have devoured him; and he was sore afraid, and cried out with a loud voice, and said: O sir, he assaileth me. And the Angel said unto him: Take him by his gill, and draw him unto thee; open this fish, and take his heart, and his liver, and his gall, and put them up safely by thee, for they are useful and needful for drugs.

Verse. And Tobias drew the fish unto the dry ground, and it began to gasp at his feet, and the Angel said unto him—

Answer. Open this fish, and take his heart, and his liver, and his gall, and put them safely by thee, for they are useful and needful for drugs.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN the glory of the heavenly mystery was made known by the voice of the Archangel Raphael, Tobit and Tobias were thunderstruck, and fell upon the ground, their weak voices utterly silenced at the hearing of that strange voice. Why are ye afraid, O father Tobit, and son Tobias? is it because ye have taken one of the dwellers of heaven into your pay, and hired him as though he were one of the labourers of earth? The Angel hid his name from you; he said not, I am the Angel Raphael, but, I am Azarias, the son of Ananias the Great. In the first name that he gave thee he hid his high estate, lest he should scare him that hired him. For if he had said, I am an Angel, he would not have become the paid servant of Tobias. He kept back his noble name that the greatness of his nobility might shine out at the last. Behold, dearly beloved brethren, how great is the merit of almsgiving. Almsgiving hath earned an Angel for a servant, until he accomplished, as a hireling, his day. Ye behold of how great profit it is to bury the dead, even an oblation which the Angel Raphael maketh to ascend up before the heavenly Majesty. Ye behold how that alms deliver from death, and purge away sins, and open the eyes, and force from thee the darkness of sin. Tobias is led on his journey, and Sara, sorrowfully bereaved of so many husbands, is joined in wedlock by an Angel.

Sixth Responsory.

The Angel Raphael said unto Tobias: When thou enterest into thine house, straightway worship the Lord thy God; and when thou hast given thanks unto Him, draw near unto thy father and kiss him, and forthwith smear upon his eyes some of the gall of the fish which thou carriest with thee; for know that his eyes will straightway be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall behold thee, and be glad.

Verse. Take with thee some of the gall of the fish, for it will be needful.

Answer. And forthwith smear upon his eyes some of the gall of the fish which thou carriest with thee; for know that his eyes will straightway be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall behold thee, and be glad.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And forthwith smear upon his eyes some of the gall of the fish which thou carriest with thee; for know that his eyes will straightway be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall behold thee, and be glad.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Here is Sara the daughter of Raguel, who shall be given unto thee to wife, and all her substance with her.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. She hath had seven husbands, who were all strangled by an evil spirit; I am afraid lest the like should befall me.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Spend three days in prayer with thy wife, that thou mayest obtain the blessing of sons, in the seed of Abraham.

Ps. cii. Bless the LORD, O my soul, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. The Angel Raphael took hold on the evil spirit.

Answer. And drove him away into the desert of Upper Egypt.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (v. 1.)

AT that time: There was a feast of the Jews, and JESUS went up to Jerusalem. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Tract 17 on John v.)

It is no wonder that God should work wonders, the wonder would be if men worked them. We should rather rejoice, than wonder, that our Lord and Saviour JESUS Christ was made Man; and that being God among men, He wrought the things of God, for it availeth more to our salvation that He was made Man, than that He did such and such things as Man; and it profiteth more that He healed sick souls, than that He healed the diseases of bodies, which were to die after all.

Seventh Responsory.

The Angel Raphael said: Bless ye the God of heaven, and confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Verse. Bless Him, and praise Him, and tell of all His marvellous works,—

Answer. For He hath had mercy upon you.

Eighth Blessing.

He whose feast-day, &c.

Eighth Lesson.

THE impotent man's soul knew not Him Who was to heal her, but although he had as yet no eyes in his heart wherewith to recognize the hidden God, he had bodily eyes in his flesh, which could see bodily things, and therefore he did that which could be seen that he might be healed by that Power, which he saw not. He betook him to that place where "lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, [waiting for the moving of the water. For an Angel went down at a certain season into the pool and troubled the water: whosoever then first after the troubling of the water stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had."]

Eighth Responsory.

It is time for me to return unto Him That sent me, saith the Angel Raphael, but bless ye the Lord, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Verse. Confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Answer. Bless ye the Lord, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Bless ye the Lord, and tell of all His marvellous works.

Ninth Lesson.

THE Lord was the physician both of souls and of bodies; He it was Who was come to heal the soul of every one whosoever believeth on Him; but, out of all those sick folk, He chose to heal but one, for the signification of unity. If we look at it with our little minds, and with only human comprehension and thought, He doth not appear to have done much, considering what He was able to do; and as a display of mercy, but little. There were so many lying sick there, and he healed but one, although it required but a single word from Him to make them all arise.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God," &c., is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. The Angel Raphael was sent * unto Tobias and Sara to heal them.

Second Antiphon. The Angel went in * unto Tobias, and said: Joy be ever with thee.

Third Antiphon. Be of good courage, Tobias, * for it is nigh at hand that God shall heal thee.

Fourth Antiphon. Bless ye the God of Heaven, and confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Fifth Antiphon. Peace be unto you, * fear not, bless ye God, and give praise to Him,

Chapter. (Tobit xii. 12.)

WHEN thou didst pray with tears, and didst bury the dead, and didst leave thy dinner, and didst hide the dead in thine house through the day, and bury them in the night, I offered up thy prayer before the Lord.

Hymn.[1]

CHRIST! of the holy Angels light and gladness,
Maker and Saviour of the human race,
O may we reach the world unknown to sadness,
The blessed mansions where they see Thy face!

Angel of health, may Raphael lighten o'er us,
To every sick bed speed his healing flight,
In times of doubt direct the way before us,
And through life's mazes guide our steps aright.

The Virgin harbinger of peace supernal,
Mother of Light, with all the Angelic train,
Heaven's glittering host, court of the King Eternal,
All saints be with us, till that bliss we gain.

Be this by Thy thrice holy Godhead granted,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest,
Whose glory by the Angel host is chanted,
Whose Name by all the universe confest.
Amen.

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God.

Answer. I will worship toward Thy holy temple, and praise Thy Name.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. I am the Angel Raphael, who stand before the Lord; but bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst give Thy blessed Archangel Raphael unto Thy servant Tobias to be his fellow wayfarer, grant unto us, Thy servants, that the same may ever keep and shield us, help and defend us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of holy John of Beverley, Archbishop of York, in England, illustrious for his life and miracles, of whom mention is made upon the 7th day of May.

---

[1] Translation by the Rev. W. J. Copeland.

Upon the same 25th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyrs Chrysanthus and Daria his wife, who, after bearing many sufferings under the Prefect Celerinus on account of their confession of Christ, were commanded by the Emperor Numerian to be cast into the sand-pit upon the Salarian Way, and there buried alive under earth and stones.

Likewise at Rome, forty-six holy martyrs, who were all baptized together by Pope Denys, and presently beheaded by order of the Emperor Claudius, and buried on the Salarian Way, where also are laid one hundred, twenty, and one other martyrs, among whom are the four soldiers of Christ—Theodosius, Lucius, Mark, and Peter.

At Soissons, in Gaul, the holy martyrs Crispin and Crispinian. These were noble Romans who, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, after being put to hideous torments under the President Rictiovarus, were slain with the sword, and so gained the crown of martyrdom. Their bodies were afterwards brought to Rome, and honourably buried in the Church of St Lawrence, Bread-and-Ham.[1]

At Florence, the holy soldier Minias, who contended nobly for Christ's faith in the persecution under the Emperor Decius, and was crowned with a glorious crown of martyrdom.

At Torres, in Sardinia, the holy martyrs Protus a Priest, and Januarius a Deacon, who were sent into that island, in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, by holy Pope Caius, and were put to death by the President Barbarus.

At Constantinople, the holy martyrs Martyrius the Sub-Deacon and Martian the Singer, who were slain by the heretics under the Emperor Constantius.

At Rome, the holy Confessor Pope Boniface I.

At Perigueux, in Gaul, holy Fronto, who was ordained Bishop by the Blessed Apostle Peter, and in company with the Priest George turned a great multitude of that people to Christ, and fell asleep in peace, famous for miracles.

At Brescia, [in the fifth century,] holy Gaudentius, Bishop [of that city,] eminent for his learning and holiness.

At Mende, [in the sixth century,] holy Hilary, Bishop.

Chapter at the end. (Tob. xii. 6.)

IT is time for me to return unto Him That sent me: but bless ye God, and tell of all His marvellous works.

OCTOBER 25.

St John of Beverley, Archbishop [of York,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede's History, v. 2, 6, and Harpsfield's History, Eighth Century.)

WHEN John was still a lad, he displayed a wonderful quickness for godliness and good learning, and was sent to be brought up under Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, by whose instructions he so profited that he went a long way ahead of all his fellows. Then he himself also had famous hearers, whom he taught in manifold knowledge, and pressed them to godliness by his words, but also more fixed them to imitate him by the noble example of his own life.

Fifth Lesson.

AFTER the death of Bishop Eata, John took the rule of the church of Hexham, in which office he worked for the salvation of others without neglecting his own. On the other side of the river Tyne over against his church, there was a quiet house surrounded with a wood and a valley, and there the man of God was often wont to abide when the occasion offered, and more especially in Lent, that he might give himself to prayer and reading in company with a few of his disciples, and might refresh his spirit by resting a little while from the troubling of others.

---

[1] So the text of the Roman Martyrology; the church is San Lorenzo in Panisperna.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Bosa was dead, John was called to the church of York, the duties of which office he discharged with great praise and wonder of all men. He held the See for three and thirty years. When he became too old for his ministry he betook himself to his Minster at Beverley, and there afterwards died, and was buried in St Peter's porch, in the year of our salvation 721. For the sake of this holy man's memory so much honour was paid to the church of Beverley, that there was hardly any place in England whither the people more resorted, or which was more favoured by the grants of princes.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.) The last Lesson is omitted, or read along with the Eighth, to leave room for the following.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs Chrysanthus and Daria.)

CHRYSANTHUS and Daria were an husband and wife, of noble birth, but glorious rather for their faith, which the wife learnt from the husband. They brought to Christ a great number of persons at Rome, she women, and he men. Therefore the Præfect Celerinus caused them to be taken, and gave them over to Claudius the Tribune, who bade Chrysanthus to be tormented by the soldiers, all bound as he was, but all his bonds brake, and so likewise the shackles wherein his feet were afterwards fastened. Then was Chrysanthus sewn up in an ox' hide and set in the full heat of the sun, and thereafter chained hand and foot and cast into a dark prison, but the chains dropped off from him, and the place was filled with light. Meanwhile Daria was haled to a brothel, but God kept her from insult, a lion guarding her, and herself always rapt in prayer. Lastly they were both of them led to a sand-pit upon the Salarian Way, where they were thrown alive into an hole, and buried in stones, and so were not divided in winning the victory of Martyrdom.

LAUDS.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the York Missal.)

O GOD, Who hast hallowed this day by the feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop John, grant unto Thy Church the grace to rejoice worthily in his solemnity, that we may be holpen at the throne of Thy mercy by his ensample and for his sake. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of SS. Chrysanthus and Daria, from the Common Office, (p. 608), and the following.

Prayer.

LORD, we beseech Thee, that the prayers of Thy blessed martyrs Chrysanthus and Daria may succour us, and they whom they honour, may make us feel the kindly power of their help. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of October, was born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy martyr, Pope Evaristus, who dyed the Church of God with his blood under the Emperor Hadrian.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Rogatian the Priest and Felicissimus, who were crowned with a glorious martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus. Holy Cyprian writeth of them in his epistle unto the Confessors.

At Nicomedia, [in the persecution under the Emperor Decius,] the holy martyrs Lucian, Florius, and their Companions.

On the same day, holy Quod-Vult-Deus, Bishop of Carthage, whom the Arian king Genseric embarked along with his clergy in unseaworthy ships without oars or sails, but beyond all hope he arrived at Naples and there died in exile as a Confessor.

At Narbonne, the holy Confessor Rusticus, Bishop [of that see,] who enlightened the times of the Emperors Valentinian and Leo.

At Salerno, [in the seventh century,] holy Gaudiosus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Pavia, [in the year 1229,] holy Fulke, Bishop [of that see.]

At Hildesheim, in Saxony, the holy Confessor Bernward, Bishop [of that see,] whose name Celestine III. numbered with those of the Saints.

Also [at Policastro, in the sixth century,] the holy Sub-deacon Quadragesimus, who raised a dead man to life, [as is related by the blessed Pope Gregory.]

At Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following, from the Common Office, (p. 594,) with the Prayer, "Mercifully consider," &c., (p. 599.)

OCTOBER 26.

The Holy Martyr, Pope Evaristus.

Simple.

All from the Simple Office for One Martyr, (p. 601), except the following. Prayer throughout, "Mercifully consider, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

First and Second Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Third Lesson.

EVARISTUS was by birth a Greek Jew, and held the Popedom in the reign of the Emperor Trajan. He it was who divided among the Priests the titles of the Churches in the city of Rome, and commanded that seven Deacons should attend the Bishop when he was executing his office of Gospel preaching. He it was who commanded, in accordance with the tradition of the Apostles, that marriages should be celebrated openly, and that a Priest should be asked to invoke a blessing thereon. He ruled the Church for nine years and three months. He held four Ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained seventeen Priests, two Deacons, and fifteen Bishops. Having finished his testimony, he was buried upon the Vatican, hard by the grave of the Prince of the Apostles, upon the 26th day of October, [in the year of our Lord 112.]

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the eve of the holy Apostles Simon and Jude.

Upon the same 27th day of October, were born into the better life—

At Avila, in Spain, the holy martyrs Vincent, Sabina, and Christeta, who were first racked until all their joints were loosened, then stones were put upon their heads which were beaten with heavy logs of wood, until their brains were burst, and so they finished their testimony under the [Emperor Diocletian and the] President Dacian.

At Thil-Chateau, [in Burgundy, in the third century,] the holy martyr Florence.

In Cappadocia, the holy martyrs Capitolina and Erotheis her handmaiden, who suffered under the Emperor Diocletian.

In Ethiopia, holy Frumentius, first Bishop of that country, who was first a captive there, then was ordained Bishop by holy Athanasius, and spread the Gospel in that country.

Likewise in Ethiopia, the holy King Elesbaan, who, after he had overcome the enemies of Christ in the time of the Emperor Justin, sent his kingly crown to Jerusalem, and made himself a monk in fulfilment of a vow, and so lived until he passed away hence to be ever with the Lord.

Vespers are of the Week-day.

OCTOBER 27.

Eve of the Feast of the Holy Apostles Simon and Jude.

The Office of the Eve begins with Mattins.

All of the Week-day, except the following.

Lessons from John xv. 1, with the Homily of St Austin, (p. 578.)

At Lauds, Long Preces, kneeling.

Prayer throughout.

O ALMIGHTY God, grant, we beseech Thee, that as we are preventing Thine Apostles Simon and Jude, their glorious birth-day, so the same may prevent Thy Majesty to win Thy good things for us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 28th day of October, were born into the better life—

The blessed Apostles Simon the Canaanite and Thaddeus, who also is called Jude. Simon preached the Gospel in Egypt, and Thaddeus in Mesopotamia, afterward they both came into Persia, and when they had brought into the obedience of Christ a countless multitude of that people, they finished their course by martyrdom.

At Rome, the holy Virgin Cyrilla, daughter of holy Tryphonia. She was killed for Christ's sake, under the Emperor Claudius.

Likewise at Rome, in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, the holy martyrs the Virgin Anastasia the elder and Cyril. Anastasia was thrown into chains under the Prefect Probus, buffeted, and tormented with fire and stripes, and, forasmuch as she remained unshaken in confessing Christ, her breasts were cut off, her nails torn out, her teeth broken, and her hands and feet, and lastly her head, cut off; and gloriously prepared by all these sufferings she passed away as a bride adorned for her husband. As for Cyril, when Anastasia asked for a drink of water, he gave it to her, and for this he was rewarded by suffering death as a martyr.

At Como, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyr Faithful.

At Maintz, the holy martyr Ferrutius.

At Meaux, [toward the end of the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Faro, Bishop [of that see.]

At Naples, holy Gaudiosus, Bishop [of Abitina,] in Africa, who came to Campagna on account of the persecution by the Vandals, and died an holy death in a monastery in the city above named.

At Vercelli, [at the beginning of the fifth century,] holy Honoratus, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers of the Feast.

OCTOBER 28.

The Holy Apostles Simon and Jude.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst use Thine holy Apostles Simon and Jude to make known unto us Thy Name, grant unto us so to profit by their doctrine as to do honour to their everlasting glory, and so to honour that glory as to gain profit to ourselves. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

Here beginneth the Catholic Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Jude (1.)

JUDE, the servant of JESUS Christ, and brother of James, to them that are beloved in God the Father and preserved in JESUS Christ, and called. Mercy unto you, and peace, and love be multiplied. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of your common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and to exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints. For there are certain men crept in unawares, (who were before of old ordained to this condemnation,) ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Sovereign and our Lord JESUS Christ.

Second Lesson.

I WILL therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that JESUS, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not: and the Angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, He hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, in like manner giving themselves over to uncleanness and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Likewise also, these defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

Third Lesson.

YET Michaël the Archangel, when, contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him the judgment of his blasphemy, but said: The Lord rebuke thee. But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Woe unto them, for they have gone the way of Cain, and run greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Korah. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you without fear, feeding themselves; clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees which wither, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

SIMON the Canaanite, called also Zelotes, went through Egypt preaching the Gospel, whileas the like was done in Mesopotamia by Thaddæus, called also in the Gospel Judas the brother of James, and the writer of one of the Catholic Epistles. They met together afterwards in Persia, where they begat countless children in JESUS Christ, spread the faith far and wide in those lands, amid raging heathens, and glorified together by their teaching and miracles, and, in the end, by a glorious martyrdom, the most holy name of JESUS Christ.

Fifth and Sixth Lessons, the Fourth and Fifth of the Common, (pp. 586, 587.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xv. 17.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: These things I command you, that ye love one another. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (87th Tract on John.)

In the reading from the Gospel, the last before this, the Lord had said: "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go, and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My Name, He may give it you." And here He saith: "These things I command you, that ye love one another." And by this it is that we must understand what fruit from us it is, whereof He saith: "I have chosen, . . . that ye should go, and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain," and so the words added—"That whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My Name, He may give it you." He will give unto us when we love one another, since this [mutual love] is itself the gift of Him Who hath chosen us when as yet we were fruitless, since it hath not been we who have chosen Him, [but He Who hath chosen us,] and ordained us, that we should go, and bring forth fruit, that is to say, should love one another.

Eighth Lesson.

LOVE, then, is the fruit which we should bring forth, and the Apostle Paul telleth us (1 Tim. i. 5) that this love is love "out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." This is the love wherewith we love our neighbour, the love wherewith we love God,—for we do not really love our neighbour unless we love God. For if any man love God, he loveth his neighbour as himself, since he that loveth not God loveth not himself. For on these two commandments hangeth all the law and the Prophets. Love, then, is the fruit which we should bring forth. And concerning this fruit, the Lord giveth us this commandment: "These things" (saith He) "I command you, that ye love one another." Hence also the Apostle Paul (Gal. v. 22) when he is about praising up the fruits of the Spirit as opposed to the works of the flesh, saith first of all: "The fruit of the Spirit is love." And from that as the beginning he draweth out a string of other fruits, as thence begotten and thereto bound, namely, "joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, chastity."

Ninth Lesson.

WHO is really joyful that loveth not the cause of his joy? Who can really be at one with another, unless he loveth that other? Who is cheerful under long toil for a good work, unless he loveth the aim? Who is kind, unless he love the object of his tenderness? Who is good, unless by the persuasion of love? Who is truly faithful, unless by the faith which worketh by love? Who is gentle to any use, unless love move him? Who turneth away from baseness unless he love honour? Well, then, doth the Good Master so often command us to love, as though that commandment were all-sufficient, for love is that gift without which all other good things avail nothing, and which cannot be without having every other good gift which maketh a good man good.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow, were born into the better life—

In Lucania, the holy martyrs Hyacinth, Quintus, Felician, and Lucius.

At Sidon, in Phœnicia, the holy Priest Zenobius, who, during the raging of the last of the persecutions, exhorted others unto martyrdom, and was himself found worthy of the same.

Upon the same day, the holy Bishops Maximilian the martyr, and Valentine the Confessor.

At Bergamo, the holy Virgin and martyr Eusebia.

At Jerusalem, the blessed Narcissus, Bishop [of that see,] praiseworthy for his holiness, his long-suffering, and his faith, who at the age of one hundred and sixteen years passed away to be ever with the Lord.

At Autun, the holy Confessor the Bishop John.

At Cassiope, in the island of Corfu, holy Donatus, of whom writeth blessed Pope Gregory.

At Vienne, [in the sixth century,] deceased the blessed Theodore, Abbat [of the monastery founded by him in honour of the Blessed Virgin, but commonly called after himself.]

OCTOBER 29.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 30th day of October, were born into the better life—

In Africa, two hundred and twenty holy martyrs.

At Tangiers, in Morocco, [in the third century,] the holy centurion Marcellus, who accomplished martyrdom by being beheaded under Agricolaus, Vicar to the Prefect of the Pretorium.

At Alexandria, thirteen holy martyrs, who suffered under the Emperor Decius, along with Julian, Eunus, and Macarius.

At Alexandria also, the holy martyr Eutropia, who visited the martyrs, and, being most cruelly tormented along with them, gave up the ghost.

At Cagliari, in Sardinia, the holy martyr Saturninus, who was beheaded under the President Barbarus, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Apamea, in Phrygia, under the same Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyr Maximus.

At Leon, in Spain, the holy martyrs Claudius, Lupercus, and Victorius, sons of the holy centurion Marcellus, who were beheaded under the President Diogenian, in the persecution under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian.

At Ægæa, in Cilicia, under the President Lysias and the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Zenobius, Bishop [of that see,] and Zenobia his sister.

At Altino, the holy martyr Theonestus, Bishop [of Philippi, in Macedonia,] who was slain by the Arians.

At Paris, the holy martyr Lucan.

At Antioch, [in the third century,] holy Serapion, Patriarch [of that see,] eminent for his learning.

At Capua, the holy Confessor Germanus, Bishop [of that see,] a man of great holiness, whose soul, at the hour of his death, holy Benedict saw carried heavenward by Angels.

At Potenza, in Lucania, [in the year 1119,] holy Gerard, Bishop [of that see.]

At Palma, in Majorca, [in the year 1617,] the holy Confessor Alphonsus Rodriguez, temporal coadjutor in the Society of Jesus, eminent for his lowliness and his love of mortification, whose name Leo XII. numbered with those of the Blessed, and Leo XIII. with those of the Saints.

OCTOBER 30.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of All the Saints.

Upon the same 31st day of October, are commemorated—

At Rome, the blessed Deacon Nemesius, and the Virgin Lucilla his daughter; for as much as it was impossible to make them swerve from their faith in Christ, they were beheaded by order of the Emperor Valerian upon the 25th day of August. Their bodies were buried by blessed Pope Stephen; then, upon the 31st day of October, were laid in a more honourable place upon the Appian Way by blessed Xystus. Gregory V. moved them to the Deaconry of St Mary the New, along with those of the holy martyrs Symphronius, the Tribune Olympius, Exuperia his wife, and Theodulus his son, who had all been converted by the said Symphronius, and baptized by the said holy Stephen, and crowned with martyrdom. The bodies of these Saints were found in the church aforesaid in the time of the Supreme Pontiff Gregory XIII., and honourably reburied under the altar there upon the 8th day of December.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

The holy martyrs Ampliatus, Urban, and Narcissus, of whom mention is made by holy Paul, writing unto the Romans, and who were slain by the Jews and Gentiles for Christ's Gospel's sake.

At St-Quentin, in Gaul, holy Quentin, a Roman citizen of senatorial rank, who suffered martyrdom under the Emperor Maximian. His body was shown by the revelation of an Angel after fifty-five years, and was found incorrupt.

At Constantinople, the holy Archbishop Stachys, who was ordained by the blessed Apostle Andrew as the first Bishop of that city.

At Milan, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Antoninus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Ratisbon, [in the tenth century,] holy Wolfgang, Bishop [of that see.]

OCTOBER 31.

Hallow-E'en.

Eve of the Feast of All the Saints.

The Office commences with Mattins.

All of the Week-day except the following.

MATTINS.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.) The Responsories are of the Week-day.

At Lauds, Long Preces, kneeling.

Prayer throughout the Office.

POUR forth abundantly upon us of Thy mercy, O Lord our God, and grant us grace to follow in their joy in their holy testifying all Thy blessed servants the Eve of whose glorious and solemn Commemoration we are keeping. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Feast of All the Saints. This famous feast was instituted to be held every year throughout the whole city of Rome, in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God, and of all the holy martyrs, by Pope Boniface IV., after he had consecrated to Christian worship the temple called the Pantheon or Temple of all the gods. And the same festival was afterwards being kept in divers ways in divers churches, when Gregory IV. decreed that it should be solemnly observed for ever throughout the universal Church upon the first day of November, in honour of all the Saints.

Upon the same 1st day of November, were born into the better life—

At Terracina, in Campania, [in the reign of the Emperor Diocletian,] the holy Deacon Cæsarius, who suffered many days in prison, and was afterwards put into a sack, along with the holy Priest Julian, and cast into the sea.

At Dijon, the holy Priest Benignus, who was sent into Gaul to preach the Gospel by blessed Polycarp, under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. He was put to many most grievous torments by the judge Terence, who commanded at last that his neck should be struck with an iron bar and a lance thrust through his body.

Upon the same day, the holy handmaiden Mary, who was accused of Christianity, under the Emperor Hadrian. She was grievously lashed, racked, and torn with hooks, and so suffered martyrdom.

At Damascus, suffered the holy martyrs Cæsarius, Dacius, and five others.

In Persia, under King Sapor, the holy martyrs John the Bishop and James the Priest.

At Tarsus, under the Emperor Maximian, holy Cyrenia and Juliana.

[At Clermont,] in Auvergne, holy Austremonius, the first Bishop of that see.

At Paris, [in the fifth century,] deceased the holy Marcellus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Bayeux, in the time of Childebert, King of the Franks, holy Vigor, Bishop [of that see.]

At Tivoli, the holy Monk Severinus.

In the Gâtinais, [in the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Maturin.

Vespers are of the Feast.

FEAST DAYS IN NOVEMBER.

November 1.

All-Hallow-mas.

The Feast of All the Saints.

Double of the First Class.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Fifth Psalm. Ps. cxvi. O praise the Lord, &c., (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

LAMB most holy! King most lowly!
Golden chalice at Thy side,
Blood is flowing red and glowing
For the Church Thy Holy Bride.
Church bells ringing, mortals singing,
Hail Thee on Thine altar Throne;
Angels pouring songs adoring
At Thy Feet, and Thine alone!

Mary-Mother, knows no other
Joy but that of loving Thee,
In her sweetness and completeness,
Pearl of light and purity.
Saint of Preachers! Guide of Teachers!
John the Baptist, great and true,
Hear him calling to the falling,
"Jesus Christ hath died for you!"

Prophets kneeling—He revealing
All the things they prophesied—
Kings adoring—He outpouring
Riches more than all their pride!
Listening sages of past ages
Who in ways of darkness trod,
See them thronging—all their longing
Centres in the Lamb of God!

Salt of nations! Twelve Foundations!
Twelve Apostles—see them all!
Trumps of Thunder, and the wonder
Of the Gentiles, Holy Paul—
Loving Peter, and still sweeter,
Friend of Jesus—Blessed John—
Full of gladness—no more sadness
Clouds the face Christ shines upon!

High Procession! Great Confession!
Hear the loud triumphal tones—
Martyrs bleeding—Stephen leading
With his crown of precious stones.
Warriors glorious and victorious,
Tried companions of their Lord,
Fall before Him and adore Him,
He, the Lamb, is their reward!

Virgins holy, matrons lowly,
Gleaning in His fields of wheat—
Widows prayerful—mothers careful,
Children playing near His Feet,—
Doctors, teachers, hermits, preachers,
Pouring out their oil and wine;
Meet before Thee to adore Thee,
Lamb of God, O Christ Divine!

How they love Thee! and above Thee
Cloudless is the sapphire blue,
And below Thee they who know Thee
Sing their anthems loud and true,—
Ever flowing, red and glowing
Is the Blood-stream from Thy side,—
Feeding, laving, cheering, saving,
Holy Church, Thy chosen Bride. Amen.

Verse. Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O ye Angels, ye Archangels, ye Thrones and Dominions, ye Principalities and Powers, ye mighty ones of the heavens, ye Cherubim and Seraphim, *—O ye Patriarchs and Prophets, ye holy Teachers of the Law,—O ye Apostles,—O all ye Martyrs of Christ, ye holy Confessors, ye Virgins of the Lord, ye Hermits,—O all ye holy children of God,—make intercession for us.

---

[1] The translator has failed to find any version of the Placare, Christe, which appears to him to be worthy either of the occasion or of the office, and he has therefore ventured to represent it by the above Hymn in which the ideas of the Placare are reflected from the medium of Van Eyck's "Adoration of the Lamb." It is signed, "Elizabeth Harcourt Mitchell."

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O come, let us worship the Lord, the King of kings, for * He is Himself the Crown of all the Saints.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The LORD knoweth the way of the righteous, * who in His Law do meditate day and night.

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. The LORD hath set apart for Himself them that are holy, * and when they called, He hath heard them.

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Third Antiphon. How excellent is Thy Name, O Lord, Who hast crowned Thy Saints with glory and honour, * and madest them to have dominion over the works of Thy hands.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Verse. Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous.
Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Apocalypse of the Blessed Apostle John (iv. 2.)

AND, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and One sat on the throne. And He That sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone; and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald; and round about the throne were four-and-twenty seats; and upon the seats I saw four-and-twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold. And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and voices and thunderings; and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God. And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal; and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four living creatures full of eyes before and behind. And the first living creature was like a lion, and the second living creature like a calf, and the third living creature had the face as a man, and the fourth living creature was like a flying eagle. And the four living creatures had each of them six wings about him; and they are full of eyes about and within. And they rest not day and night, saying: Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, Which was, and is, and is to come.

First Responsory.

I saw the Lord, &c., (p. 415.)

Second Lesson.

AND I saw, in the Right Hand of Him That sat on the throne, a book, written within and on the back side, sealed with seven seals. And I saw a strong Angel proclaiming with a loud voice: Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon. And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open the book, neither to look thereon. And one of the elders saith unto me: Weep not; behold, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof. And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb, as it had been slain, having seven Horns, and seven Eyes, Which are the seven Spirits of God, sent forth into all the earth. And He came and took the book out of the Right Hand of Him That sat upon the throne. And when He had opened the book, the four living creatures and four-and-twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints.

Second Responsory.

Blessed art thou, O Virgin Mary, Mother of God, that didst believe the Lord. There hath been a performance in thee of those things which were told thee. Lo, thou hast been exalted above the choirs of Angels. Pray for us unto the Lord our God.
Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee.
Answer. Pray for us unto the Lord our God.

Third Lesson.

AND they sung a new song saying: O Lord, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy Blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation: and hast made us unto our God a kingdom and priests; and we shall reign on the earth. And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many Angels round about the throne, and the living creatures, and the elders; and the number of them was thousands of thousands, saying with a loud voice: Worthy is the Lamb That was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them—all of them I heard saying: Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power be unto Him That sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever. And the four living creatures said: Amen. And the four-and-twenty elders fell down and worshipped Him That liveth for ever and ever.

Third Responsory.

Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, and will worship toward Thy holy temple. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Verse. For Thy lovingkindness and for Thy truth; for Thou hast glorified Thine holy Name on us.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. They that work righteousness, * O Lord, even they, shall abide in Thy tabernacle, and dwell in Thy holy Hill.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Second Antiphon. This is the generation of them that seek the Lord, * that seek the face of the God of Jacob.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous, * and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Ps. xxxi. Blessed are they, &c., (p. 43.)

Verse. Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Answer. Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (18*th upon the Saints.*)

DEARLY beloved brethren: This day we keep, with one great cry of joy, a Feast in memory of all God's holy children; His children, whose presence is a gladness to heaven; His children, whose prayers are a blessing to earth; His children, whose victories are the crown of the Holy Church; His chosen, whose testifying is the more glorious in honour, as the agony in which it was given was the sterner in intensity, for as the dreader grew the battle, so the grander grew the fighters, and the triumph of martyrdom waxed the more incisive by the multiplicity of suffering, and the heavier the torment the heavier the prize. And it is our Mother, the Catholic Church, spread far and wide throughout all this planet, it is she that hath learnt, in Christ JESUS her Head, not to fear shame, nor cross, nor death, but hath waxed lealer and lealer, and, not by fighting, but by enduring, hath breathed into all that noble band who have come up to the bitter starting-post the hope of conquest and glory which hath warmed them manfully to accept the race.

Fourth Responsory.

The Forerunner, &c., (p. 902.)

Fifth Lesson.

OF a verity thou art blessed, O my Mother the Church! The blaze of God's mercy beateth full upon thee; thine adornment is the glorious blood of victorious Martyrs, and thy raiment the virgin whiteness of untarnished orthodoxy. Thy garlands lack neither roses nor lilies. And now, dearly beloved brethren, let each one of us strive to gain the goodly crown of one sort or the other, either the glistening whiteness of purity, or the red dye of suffering. In the army in heaven peace and war have both chaplets of their own, to crown Christ's soldiers withal.

Fifth Responsory.

These are they, &c., (p. 588.)

Sixth Lesson.

MOREOVER, to this also hath the unutterable and boundless goodness of God seen, that He spreadeth not the time of working and wrestling, neither maketh it long, nor everlasting, and, as it were, but for a moment, so that in this short and scanty life there is wrestling and working, but the crown and the prize is in a life which is eternal. So the work is soon over, but the wage is paid for ever. And when the night of this world is over, the Saints are to see the clearness of the essential light, and to receive a blessedness outweighing the pangs of any torment, as testifieth the Apostle Paul, where he saith: "The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." (Rom. viii. 18.)

Sixth Responsory.

O ye My Saints, &c., (p. 607.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O fear the LORD, all ye His Saints, * for there is no want to them that fear Him. Behold, the eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous, and His ears are open unto their cry.

Ps. xxxiii. I will bless the LORD, &c., (p. 44.)

Second Antiphon. O Lord, Thou hast been a shelter for Thy Saints, * a strong tower from the enemy. Thou hast given the heritage to those that fear Thy Name, and they shall abide in Thy tabernacle for ever.

Ps. lx. Hear my cry, O God, &c., (p. 64.)

Third Antiphon. Ye that love the LORD, rejoice in the LORD, * and give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness.

Ps. xcvi. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Verse. The righteous live for evermore.

Answer. Their reward also is with the Lord.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS, seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain, and, when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon.)

If it be asked what is signified by the mountain, the said mountain may well be understood to figure the higher and greater commandments of righteousness, since those that have been given to the Jews are the lesser. The one God, in an excellent order of times, gave, by His holy Prophets and servants, His lesser commandments unto the people whom it still behoved to be bound by fear, but by His Son He gave the greater unto the people whom it now beseemed to set free by love. But whether it be the lesser to the lesser, or the greater to the greater, all are alike the gift of Him Who alone knoweth what is in each epoch the seasonable medicine of mankind.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding.

Verse. [2] Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

Answer. And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding.

Eighth Lesson.

NEITHER is it marvel that the greater commandments be given touching the kingdom of heaven, and the lesser touching a commonwealth upon earth, since both are alike the gifts of that one God Who is the Maker alike of heaven and of earth. The higher and greater righteousness, then, is that whereof the Prophet saith: "Thy righteousness is like the mountains of God." (Ps. xxxv. 7.) Thus is that Teacher, Who alone can give such teaching, mystically represented as teaching upon a mountain.

"And when He was set." The attitude of sitting while teaching appertaineth to the majesty of His instruction.

"His disciples came unto Him"—nearer in the body, to hear those precepts, by the fulfilment of which they should be nearer in spirit.

"And He opened His Mouth, and taught them, saying:" These words "And He opened His Mouth," appear redundant to the sense. It may possibly be that this more pompous introduction is adopted on account of the exceptional length of the discourse to follow. But it may also be that these words are not really redundant, but the pointed declaration that He now opened His Own Mouth, Who, under the Old Law, had been used to open the mouths of the Prophets.

Eighth Responsory.

At midnight there was a cry made: Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him!

Verse. Trim your lamps, O ye wise virgins.

Answer. Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet Him!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Behold! the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet Him!

Ninth Lesson.

AND, now, what saith He? "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their's is the kingdom of heaven." We have read where it is written concerning the lusting after temporal things: "The wandering of the desire is vanity and presumption of spirit." (Eccl. vi. 9.) Presumption of spirit signifieth rashness and pride. We are used to say of proud people that they are men of high spirit, and we say well, since "spirit" is only one of the Latin names for wind. (It is so used, for instance, in Ps. cxlviii. 8, "Fire, hail, snow, ice, stormy wind.") Who hath not heard the proud spoken of as "puffed up," as if they were blown out with wind? Hence, alas, the Apostle saith: "Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth." (1 Cor. viii. 1.) By the "poor in spirit," who are here called blessed, are rightly to be understood such as are lowly and fear God, that is, have not got minds puffed up with windy vanity.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, * of all nations, [and kindreds, and people, and tongues,] stood before the throne.

Second Antiphon. And all the Angels stood round about the throne, * [and about the Elders, and the four living creatures,] and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God.

Third Antiphon. Thou, O Lord God, hast redeemed by Thy Blood, * out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us a kingdom unto our God.

Fourth Antiphon. Bless the Lord, all ye His chosen, * keep holiday, and extol Him.

Fifth Antiphon. The praise of all His Saints, * even of the children of Israël, a people near unto Him: this honour have all His Saints.

Chapter. (Apoc. vii. 2.)

BEHOLD, I, John, saw another Angel ascending from the East, having the seal of the living God; and he cried with a loud voice to the four Angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying: Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

Hymn.[3]

SPOUSE of CHRIST, in arms contending
O'er each clime beneath the sun,
Blend with prayers for help ascending
Notes of praise for triumphs won.

As the Church to-day rejoices,
All her saints in one to join,
So from earth let all our voices
Rise in melody divine.

Mary leads the sacred story,
Mary, with her heavenly Child,
Sharer with Him now in glory
Maid and Mother undefiled.

Angels next, in due gradation
Of their nine-fold ministry,
Hymn the FATHER of creation,
Maker of the stars on high.

John, the herald-voice sonorous,
More than prophet owned to be,
Patriarchs and Seers in chorus,
Swell the angelic harmony.

---

[1] Luke xii. 35, 36. [2] Matth. xxiv. 42.

[3] The same difficulty arises with this hymn as with the last, but the Sponsa Christi, of which the above is a translation by Mr W. Palmer, so coincides with it in sense that it may fairly be taken as a paraphrase.

Near to Christ the Apostles seated,
Trampling on the powers of hell,
By the promise now completed
Judge the tribes of Israël.

They who nobly died believing,
Martyrs purpled in their gore,
Crowns of life by death receiving,
Rest in joy for evermore.

Priests and Levites, Gospel preachers,
And Confessors numberless,
Prelates meek and holy teachers,
Bear the palm of righteousness.

Virgin souls by high profession
To the Lamb devoted here,
Strewing flowers in gay procession
At the marriage-feast appear.

All are blest together, praising
God's eternal Majesty,
Thrice repeated anthems raising
To the all-holy Trinity.

So may we, with hearts devoted,
Serve our God in holiness;
So may we, by God promoted,
Share that Heaven which they possess.
Amen.

Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory—

Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. The glorious company of the Apostles praise Thee. * The goodly fellowship of the Prophets praise Thee. The white-robed army of Martyrs praise Thee. All Thy Saints and Elect with one voice do acknowledge Thee, O Blessed Trinity, One God!

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who again allowest us reverently to keep in one Festival the worthy memory of all Thy Saints, be pleased, we beseech Thee, to grant unto that great cloud of bedesmen the outpouring of Thy mercy whereof we are afain. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

PRIME.

Antiphon. I beheld, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is made the Commemoration of all the faithful departed.[1]

Upon the same 2nd day of November, were born into the better life—

Holy Victorinus, Bishop of Poitiers, who, after publishing many writings, as witnesseth holy Jerome, was crowned with martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Triest, blessed Justus, who, in the same persecution, was martyred under the President Manatius.

At Sebaste, under the Emperor Licinius, the holy martyrs Carterius, Styriacus, Tobias, Eudoxius, Agapius, and their Companions.

In Persia, the holy martyrs Acindynus, Pegasius, Aphthonius, Elpidephorus, and Anempodistus, with many others their Companions.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Publius, Victor, Hermes, and Papias.

At Tarsus, in Cilicia, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, the holy Virgin and martyr Eustochium, who, after grievous torments, gave up her soul in prayer to God.

At Laodicea, in Syria, [in the year 334] holy Theodotus, Bishop [of that see,] who excelled not in word only, but in deed and in power.

At Vienne, [in the seventh century,] holy George, Bishop [of that see.]

In the monastery of San Moritz, in Switzerland, [in the sixth century,] the holy Abbat Ambrose.

At Cyrus, in Syria, the holy Confessor Marcian, [fourth century.]

Chapter at the end. (Apoc. vii. 12.)

BLESSING, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God, for ever and ever. Amen.

TERCE.

Antiphon. And all the Angels, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Verse. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Answer. And rejoice, ye righteous.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous.

Verse. Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Answer. Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.

SEXT.

Antiphon. Thou, O Lord God, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Apoc. vii. 9.)

AFTER this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes and palms in their hands.

Short Responsory.

Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Answer. Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Verse. Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.

Answer. Before God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Verse. The righteous live for evermore.

Answer. Their reward also is with the Lord.

NONE.

Antiphon. The praise of all His Saints, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter as at the end of Prime.

Short Responsory.

The righteous live for evermore.

Answer. The righteous live for evermore.

---

[1] This notice is transferred to the next day if November 1 be a Saturday.

Verse. Their reward also is with the Lord.
Answer. For evermore.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. The righteous live for evermore.
Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory—
Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

SECOND VESPERS.

As the First, except the following.

Last Psalm.

Ps. cxv. I believed, &c., (p. 105.)

Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory—
Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O how glorious is that kingdom wherein all the Saints do rejoice with Christ! * They are clothed with white robes, and follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth.

As soon as "Thanks be to God" has been answered to "Bless we the Lord," the Vespers of the Dead begin at once with the words "I will walk before the Lord, &c." The Antiphons are doubled throughout them, the Psalm, "Praise the LORD, O my soul," is omitted, and the only Prayer said is "O God, Who art Thyself at once the Maker and the Redeemer of all Thy faithful ones, &c."

N.B. Should the Feast of All Saints have fallen on a Saturday, All Souls' Day is transferred from the Sunday to the Monday, and consequently the Vespers of the Dead are said on Sunday evening.

NOVEMBER 2.

Second Day within the Octave of All Saints.

All as on the Feast Day, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (18*th on the Saints.*)

O WITH what a passion of welcome doth the land above receive them that are coming home from the battle, and go forth to meet them that bear the spoils of the down-trodden foe! The men who walk in the procession of victory are mingled with women, who have conquered world and weakness together, and there also are damsels and lads who have understood more than the antients, because they have kept the precepts of the Eternal. But besides these there is another great host, who will have entry into the everlasting Palace, even they who have kept pure the unity of the faith in the bond of peace, and the unshaken observance of the commandments given us from heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

COME now, therefore, my brethren, and let us enter upon the way; let us turn our faces homeward and heavenward, toward that land wherein our names are written down and we are citizens elect. We are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God, (Eph. ii. 19,) yea, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. (Rom. viii. 17.) Bravery can open, and lealty keep wide the entry for us into that city. Let us think then for awhile what is the brilliant happiness of that city—that is to say, as well as we can, for what it really is, no words can utter.

Sixth Lesson.

CONCERNING that city it is written in a certain place: "Sorrow and mourning shall flee away."[1] What can be more blessed than that life wherein poverty will not threaten, nor sickness weaken? There, there will be no hurts and no angering. There, there will be no envying; there, will burn no covetousness; no ambition of honour nor seeking of power will give trouble, there. There, the devil will be no more an object of fear; there, no evil spirits lie in wait; the dread of hell will be gone, there. There, there will be no death either for the body or for the soul, but life glorious in the gift of immortality.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS, seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain, and, when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon.)

"Blessed are the poor in spirit." If blessedness is to attain unto the highest wisdom, it must needs be that it begin by the being poor in spirit. "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom," (Ps. cx. 10,) even as, on the other hand, it is written that "pride is the beginning of all sin." (Ecclus. x. 15.) The proud covet and love earthly kingdoms.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The earth which they shall inherit I believe to be that earth whereof it is written in the cxli. Psalm, "Thou art my refuge, and my portion in the land of the living." (6) And the heritage of the meek in this land is an heritage everlastingly sure and fixed, wherein the soul resteth by good will, at home there, as carnal owners rest at home in sure earthly possessions; and on the income from that land they live, as earthly owners from the income of earthly possessions; this is the home and the abiding-place of the Saints. And the meek heirs are they who when they be evil-entreated, suffer it, and are "not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." (Rom. xii. 21.)

Eighth Lesson.

"BLESSED are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." This mourning is sorrow for the things once loved and now lost. By turning to God, they lose things in this world which they once loved. But now their true joy is no longer in those things wherein they joyed aforetime, and by the growing love of the eternal things this their carnal mourning is abundantly comforted. They are comforted by the Holy Ghost Who chiefly for this very reason hath His title of "the Comforter." They lose things temporal, but they gain the enjoyment of things eternal.

---

[1] Aufugiet ibi dolor, et tristitia, et gemitus. Apparently a quotation from memory. Isa. li. 11 and xxxv. 10 are identical with each other, and Apoc. xxi. 4 is somewhat like them.

Ninth Lesson.

"BLESSED are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." They of whom He speaketh here are they who have a love for whatever is good, because it is good. And such as these shall have their hunger satisfied with that meat whereof the Lord Himself said: "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me, and to finish His work," (John iv. 34,) and their thirst slaked with that water which the same Lord Himself shall give them, whereof whosoever drinketh shall never thirst, but the water that He shall have given him, shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. (14.)

"Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." He calleth them blessed which succour the needy, for, with the measure wherewith they have meted, shall it be measured unto them withal, and they shall not be left unsuccoured in their own need.

At the end of Lauds, as soon as "Thanks be to God" has been answered to "Bless we the Lord," the Dirge begins at once with the words "Unto the Eternal King." The Antiphons are doubled throughout, three Nocturns are said, the last Responsory is, "Deliver me, O Lord," the Psalm "Out of the depths" is omitted, and the only Prayer is "O God, Who art Thyself at once the Maker, &c."

Should November 2 be a Sunday, the Dirge is said on Monday.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of the holy Virgin and martyr Winefrid.

Upon the same 3rd day of November, were also born into the better life—

Holy Quartus, the disciple of the Apostles.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyrs Germanus, Theophilus, Cæsarius, and Vitalis, who bore a noble testimony in the persecution under the Emperor Decius.

At Saragossa, countless holy martyrs, who wondrously laid down their lives for Christ's sake under Dacian, President of Spain, [in the year 304.]

At Viterbo, the holy martyrs Valentine the Priest and Hilary the Deacon, who, in the persecution under the Emperor Maximian, were for Christ's faith's sake cast into the Tiber weighted with stones, but by the will of God were thence delivered by an Angel, and received the crown of martyrdom by being beheaded.

At the monastery of Clairvaux, [in the year 1148,] holy Maleachlan, Archbishop of Armagh, in Ireland, who in his time shone with many graces, and whose life hath been written by the holy Abbat Bernard.

On the same day, [in the year 727,] holy Hubert, Bishop of Tongres.

At Vienne, [in the sixth century,] holy Domnus, Bishop [of that see.]

Likewise [in the year 755,] holy Pirmin, Bishop of Meaux.

At Urgel, in Spain, holy Hermengaudus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome, holy Sylvia, the mother of holy Pope Gregory.

Vespers are of the following.

NOVEMBER 3.

St Winefrid, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office. (From her ancient Office.)

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who hast given unto blessed Winefrid the reward of her virginity, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, with the help of her prayers, to make little of the enticements of this world, and to attain as she hath, unto a mansion of glory that fadeth not away. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration of the Octave of All Saints is made at both Vespers and Lauds.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Robert of Shrewsbury.)

THE maiden Winefrid was born in the west parts of Greater Britain, and with the approval of her parents consecrated her virginity to God. Caradoc, son of King Alan, was ready to die of love for her, and at last suddenly assaulted her, with a view to gratifying his lust. As she strove to escape he seized her, and, in consequence of her struggles, at length murdered her. This holy virgin and martyr suffered about the year of salvation 660.

The Fifth and Sixth Lessons will be the Fourth and Fifth respectively from the Common (p. 643.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 4th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Milan, [in the year 1584,] holy Charles Borromeo, Cardinal Archbishop of that city, eminent for holiness and famous for miracles, whose name Paul V. enrolled among those of the Saints.

At Bologna, the holy martyrs Vitalis and Agricola. Vitalis was a slave belonging to Agricola, to whom, in suffering martyrdom, [in the year 304,] he became an equal and a companion. Upon Vitalis the persecutors exercised every kind of torment, until there was no place in his body without some wound. He bore all steadfastly, and gave up his soul in prayer to God. While they were nailing Agricola with many nails to a cross they thereby killed him. Holy Ambrose was present at the translation of their bodies, and saith that he gathered together the nails of this martyr, his victorious blood, and the wood of his cross, and buried them under the holy altar.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Philologus and Patrobas, disciples of the holy Apostle Paul. [According to the Greek tradition Patrobas was Bishop of Puzzuoli and then of Naples, and Philologus of Sinope, in Paphlagonia.]

At Autun, the holy martyr Proculus.

In the Vexin, the holy martyr Clarus, a Priest.

At Ephesus, under the Emperor Aurelian, the holy martyr Porphyry.

At Myra, in Lycia, under the President Libanius, the holy martyrs Nicander, Bishop [of that see,] and Hermas, a Priest.

Upon the same day, the holy Pierius, a Priest of Alexandria, profoundly learned in the Scriptures of God, unblemished in life, and for Christian philosophy's sake stripped nearly of all things, and unattached. He taught the people of Alexandria admirably while Theonas ruled that Church in the time of the Princes Carus and Diocletian, and published divers treatises. After the persecution was over he spent the rest of his life at Rome, and there fell asleep in peace, [at the beginning of fourth century.]

At Rodez, in Gaul, [in the year 440,] the blessed Amantius, Bishop [of that see,] whose life remains glorious on account of his holiness and miracles.

In Bithynia, [in the year 846,] the holy Abbat Joannicius.

At Albe-Royale, in Hungary, [in the year 1031,] the blessed Confessor Emeric, son of holy Stephen, King of Hungary.

In the monastery of Cerfroi, in the country of Meaux, [in the year 1212,] holy Felix de Valois, Founder of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity for the Redemption of Captives, whose feast is kept by decree of Innocent XI. upon the 20th day of this same month of November, but by us upon the 26th day of the same.

At Treves, [in the year 780,] the holy Virgin Modesta.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 4.

St Charles, [Cardinal] Archbishop [of Milan,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Charles, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

LORD, give unto Thy Church for an unsleeping warder Thine holy Confessor Bishop Charles; upon earth his carefulness did make him glorious as a shepherd, there where he is may his prayerfulness make him effectual as a bedesman, pleading with Thee to make us to love Thee more. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the preceding, from the Common Office, with the Prayer from her own Office.

Then of the Octave of All Saints.

Then of the Holy Martyrs Vitalis and Agricola. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office, (p. 602.)

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who keep the solemn memorial of Thy blessed Martyrs Vitalis and Agricola, may find succour with Thee in their prayers on our behalf. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CHARLES, of the noble family of Borromeo, was born [on the 2nd day of October, in the year of our Lord 1538,] at [the Castle of Arona, fourteen miles from] Milan. In foretoken of his holy life, God caused a bright light to shine by night over the chamber where his mother lay in travail. As soon as his age would allow him, he received the tonsure. When he was twelve years old, he was made Abbat [of the rich Benedictine Abbey of St Gratinian and St Felin,] but reminded his father that the revenues thereof were not to be used as mere family property. His father, to whom the administration of these revenues fell during his son's non-age, still gave them forthwith over to him, and whatever was left over, he gave to the poor. While he was young he studied letters at Pavia. He kept his purity thoroughly, so that he scared away the unclean women, of whom many were set upon him, to overthrow his self-control. In the twenty-third year of his age, his uncle Pius IV. made him a Cardinal, in which dignity he was a burning and shining light of godliness and all graces before the whole of the Sacred College. About forty days afterwards the same Pope created him Archbishop of Milan. As such it was his great desire to order the Church committed to his charge in accordance with the requirements of the most holy Council of Trent, which was in great part by his labours brought to a conclusion. To raise up the degraded lives of the people, he oftentimes held Synods, but himself set an example of deep godliness. He worked earnestly to purge the parts about the Alps and borders of Switzerland of heresy, and brought many of the heretics to the Christian faith.

Fifth Lesson.

CHARITY was the brightest mark of his life. His principality of Oria, [in the kingdom of Naples,] he sold for forty thousand crowns, and gave the whole sum to the poor in one day. Twenty thousand crowns being left him as a legacy [by Virginia, widow of Count Frederick Borromeo,] he gave the whole to the poor. The incomes of the benefices wherewith he had been loaded by his uncle, he spent upon the needs of the poor, except what he used for himself. When the plague grievously raged in Milan, he gave up to the sick poor the furniture of his own house, even to his own bedding, and thenceforward slept upon the boards. He constantly visited the sick, cheered them by his fatherly kindness, and wonderfully comforted them, ministering to them with his own hands the Sacraments of the Church. At the same time he drew near to plead for them with God in lowly entreaty, and ordered a public Procession wherein he walked himself carrying a Cross, with a rope halter round his neck, and his bare feet bleeding from the stones, and fain to turn away the Divine anger by offering himself as a scapegoat for the sins of his people. He was a stout defender of the freedom of the Church. But in the Church he was an earnest reformer of discipline, and once, when he was engaged in prayer, [the paid agent of] some conspirators took a shot at him with a blunderbuss, but, though the ball struck him, the power of God kept him unharmed.[1]

Sixth Lesson.

He was remarkable for his abstinence. He very often fasted upon nothing but bread and water, and sometimes nothing but lupines. He tamed his body by depriving himself of sleep, by very rough haircloth, and by constant scourging. He was an earnest practiser of lowliness and meekness. However much he was taken up with business, he never gave himself relaxation from prayer and from preaching the word of God. He built many Churches, convents, and schools. He wrote much matter, useful more especially for the good of Bishops. The publication of the "Parish Priests' Catechism" was due to his care. In October, 1584, he withdrew himself, for the purpose of making a retreat, to [what is called] the "Sacro Monte" of Varallo, an hill whereon [many sacred subjects and especially] the incidents of the Lord's sufferings are represented in life-size groups of coloured figures.[2] [On Oct. 24] he was taken ill of a [tertian] ague, [but concealed it,] and lived there for some days a life of torture by voluntary suffering, but of sweetness by thoughts of Christ's woes. After his return to Milan, [which he reached in a litter upon All Souls' Day,] his sickness became hopeless, and early in the night between the [3rd and] 4th days of November, in the 47th year of his own age, and in that of our Lord 1584, covered with ashes and sackcloth, and with his eyes fixed upon the image of Christ crucified, he exchanged earth for heaven. He was famous for miracles, and Pope Paul V. numbered him among the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, to leave room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

Vitalis was a slave, and Agricola his owner. They were arrested at Bologna in the persecution under Diocletian and Maximian, for preaching Jesus Christ. Vitalis, the more he was implored and threatened to change his mind so much the more proclaimed himself a worshipper and servant of Christ, and after bravely bearing a course of divers tortures, gave up his soul in prayer to God. The execution of Agricola had been put off, in the hope that the agonies of his servant might scare him into denying Christ; but the sight only hardened him. He was therefore crucified, and so became sharer and fellow with his slave Vitalis in the glory of testification. Their bodies were laid in the Jews' burying-place, where they were found by St Ambrose, who removed them to an hallowed and honourable sepulchre.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Octave.
Then of the Holy Martyrs.

Antiphon. The very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows.

Verse. Let the righteous rejoice before God.

Answer. Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.

Prayer as at the Commemoration at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 5th day of November are commemorated the holy Zacharias, Priest and Prophet, father of the blessed Baptist John, and holy Elizabeth, mother of the same most holy Forerunner.

Upon the same day, were born into the better life—

At Terracina, in Campania, the holy martyrs Felix, a Priest, and Eusebius, a Monk. This Eusebius buried the holy martyrs Julian and Cæsarius, and turned many to believe in Christ who were baptised by the holy Priest Felix. He and Felix were therefore tried together and both led before the seat of the judge, where neither was overcome, but were committed to prison together, and the same night, since they refused to sacrifice, they were beheaded.

At Emesa, in Phœnicia, the holy martyrs Galation, and Epistemis, his wife. In the persecution under Decius they were heavily flogged, and their hands, feet, and tongues mutilated, whereafter they were beheaded, and so finished their testimony.

---

[1] The Latinity of this passage is very quaint. "A seditiosis, dum orationi insisteret, tormenti bellici laxatâ rotâ, igneo globulo percussus, Divinâ virtute, &c." The ball struck upon his rochet, near the middle vertebræ of the back, and, leaving a mark upon the rochet, fell down to his feet. Some small shot pierced his clothes, but stopped at his skin, and his cassock was pierced with small shot in several places. When the part that was struck was examined, a light bruise was discovered, with a small swelling on the skin, which mark continued even after his death. The would-be murderer was a Priest, named La Farina. St Charles would take no measures against his enemies, but they ultimately fell into the hands of public justice. La Farina and another were hung, two beheaded, and one condemned to the galleys. For this last the Saint procured mitigation and ultimate pardon, and made every effort to save the lives of the others, for whose relations he provided. The religious Order (the Humiliati) from which the attempt proceeded, and of which three of the executed felons were Provosts, was abolished by the Pope St Pius V. (Alban Butler.)

[2] It is very curious and is much visited from curiosity as well as devotion. The chapels in which St Charles prayed most in his last retreat are those of the Agony in the Garden and of our Lord in the Sepulchre.

Also under the Emperor Maximin, the holy martyrs Domninus, Theotimus, Philotheus, Silvanus, and their Companions.

At Milan, the holy Confessor Magnus, Bishop [of that see, in the year 529.]

At Brescia, holy Dominator, Bishop [of that see.]

At Treves, [about the year 500,] holy Fibitius, who from being Abbat was made Bishop of that city.

At Orleans, in Gaul, the holy Confessor Laetus, a Priest, [in the year 534.]

At Second Vespers, a Commemoration of the Octave.

NOVEMBER 5.

Fifth Day within the Octave of All Saints.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (18th on the Saints.)

THEREFORE, may it be our delight to go on unto this prize of good living. Freely and cheerfully let us strive in the race, running under the eyes of God and of Christ. We have already taken a station above floating and earthly things, and let us allow no love for things fleeting to hamper our running. If the last day shall find us lithe and speedful in the race of good living, we shall never have to complain that our Master is a scanty rewarder of our works.

Fifth Lesson.

HE That giveth a red crown for suffering under persecution, the same giveth a white crown to them that under peace, prevail in battles of righteousness. Neither Abraham, nor Isaac, nor Jacob, were slain, and nevertheless in honour for faith and righteousness, they have gained the first place among the Patriarchs, and it is to sit down with them in the kingdom of God that are gathered the faithful, the righteous, and the praiseworthy. We must remember that it is God's will, and not our own will, that we must do, for he that doeth His will abideth for ever, even as He abideth for ever.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEREFORE, dearly beloved brethren, with mind clear, faith firm, courage true, love thorough, let us be ready to do whatever God willeth, keeping stoutly all the commandments of the Lord, having innocency in simplicity, peaceableness in love, modesty in lowliness, in ministering diligence, in helping them that toil watchfulness, in succouring the poor mercifulness, in standing up for the truth firmness, in keeping of discipline sternness, lest we be found wanting in any good work. These are the steps which the Saints who have already gone home have left marked for us, that we may be able to keep in their footprints, and so to follow them into their joy.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: Seeing the multitudes, JESUS went up into a mountain; and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon, Ch. 3 and 4.)

[First, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." Secondly, "Blessed are the meek." Thirdly, "Blessed are they that mourn."] They that are blessed under this third head, having knowledge, do mourn that they possess not yet the Highest Good, which possession belongeth unto the end of their course. But in the fourth place, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness." Here there is that earnest striving, wherewith the mind doth struggle to tear herself away from those things whose deathful sweetness would make her fain to cling unto them. Here is hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and there is sore need of firmness, for what it is a joy to have, it must be a grief to lose. But the fifth head is the declaration that "Blessed are the merciful," and in these words a door of comfort and reward is opened unto the toiling. Entangled in such straits a man can be of no use to himself, unless One That is stronger than he help him; and if he be helped of the Stronger, it is but just that he in turn should help such as is weaker than himself. And so, "Blessed are the merciful, for," in their turn, "they shall obtain mercy" from God.

Eighth Lesson.

"BLESSED are the pure in heart." This sixth benediction is pronounced upon those hearts which by pure, clear consciousness of good works are able to look to that Highest Good, Which only the clear, calm mind can perceive. Lastly cometh in the seventh place that "Blessed are the peacemakers,"—that is to say, blessed are they who cultivate wisdom, which is the contemplation of the True, since it is the fruit of this contemplation of the True to produce profound and utter internal peace in man, and to catch the reflection of the Divine,—this being the idea which is expressed in the words: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." The eighth phrase is a return to the first, since it showeth lowliness of spirit in its aspect of completion and crowning; and thence the kingdom of heaven is the reward mentioned in both places. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their's is the kingdom of heaven." "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for their's is the kingdom of heaven."

Ninth Lesson.

[PAUL] saith: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" There are therefore seven things which bring to perfection, for the eighth is the glorification and manifestation of that which is perfected, that from this head others again may begin, and be finished. It seemeth to me also that these heads and sayings have some connection with the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost whereof Isaiah speaketh. But there is a difference of order, for there the highest is taken first, but here the lowest; there the wisdom of God, but here the fear of God, but the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 6th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Thinissa, in Africa, [in the fourth century,] the holy martyr Felix, who had made his confession and was reserved for the torture, when on the next day he was found dead in prison, as is told by holy Augustine in his exposition of Ps. cxxvii. made to the people upon his festival.

At Antioch, ten holy martyrs who are recorded to have suffered at the hands of the Saracens.

At Barcelona, the holy martyr Severus, Bishop [of that see,] who for the Catholic faith's sake had a nail driven into his head, and so received the crown of martyrdom.

In Phrygia, holy Atticus.

At Berg, [before the middle of the eighth century,] holy Winock, Abbat [of Wormhoult,] famous for graces and miracles, who ministered for a long time to the brethren subject unto him.

At Fondi, in Latium, [in the sixth century,] the holy Monk Felix.

At Limoges, in Aquitaine, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Leonard, a disciple of blessed Bishop Remy. He was noble by birth, but chose the life of an hermit, and is famous for his holiness and miracles, but his power hath been most chiefly shown in the freeing of prisoners.

NOVEMBER 6.

Sixth Day within the Octave of All Saints.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux,] (2nd for All Saints' Day.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, since we keep on this day the memory of all the Saints, that memory so joyous and so worthy of all our thoughts, it seemeth to me worth the while, the Holy Ghost helping me, to address to your kind indulgence some remarks upon that happiness which they are all enjoying in blessed restfulness, and that final consummation they are awaiting. It is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that if we thus solemnly honour them, we should follow the ensample of their conversation; if we proclaim them so blessed, we should strive our best to reach the same blessedness; if we are well pleased to hear them praised, we should be bettered by their prayers.

Fifth Lesson.

WHAT is it to the Saints that we should praise them? What to them that we should glorify them? What is this our Feast to them? What are honours on earth to them whom, according as the Son hath faithfully promised, His Father is honouring? What are our eulogies to them? They are full. Verily, dearly beloved brethren, of our goods the Saints have no need, and our devotion toward them doth nothing for them. Our honouring their memory hath to do with ourselves and not with them. Would ye know what it hath to do with us? In me I confess that at their remembrance I feel kindled a vehement longing, yea, a three-fold longing.

Sixth Lesson.

IT is a common saying that, "Out of sight, out of mind."[1] The memory is a kind of sight, and to think of the Saints, is to call them up before the mind's eye. Such is our portion in the land of the living, but it is not a little portion, if love, (as it ought to do,) be joined with remembrance; it is in such sense that we must say that "our conversation is in heaven." (Phil. iii. 20.) Very differently to what is theirs. For they are there actually, where we are only in desire; they in very presence, we only in thought.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: Seeing the multitudes, JESUS went up into a mountain, and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon. Ch. 4.)

Wherefore, if we reckon up the Beatitudes as ascending steps, the first is the fear of God; the second, godliness; the third, knowledge; the fourth, firmness; the fifth, counsel; the sixth, understanding; the seventh, wisdom. The fear of God pertaineth unto the lowly, as it is said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their's is the kingdom of heaven,"—that is, it is for them that are not puffed up, for them that are not proud, as also saith the Apostle: "Be not highminded, but fear," (Rom. xi. 20,)—that is, "Be not puffed up." Godliness pertaineth unto the meek; for he that seeketh after a godly sort, honoureth the Holy Scripture, and when he findeth therein that which he doth not yet understand, he blameth not the Scripture, nor gainstandeth. And this is to be meek. Therefore is it said here: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

Eighth Lesson.

KNOWLEDGE pertaineth unto them that mourn, who have already learnt from the Scriptures amid what ills they are entangled, even in those things which once in their ignorance they affected as being good and useful. Of such is it said: "Blessed are ye that weep now." (Luke vi. 21.) Firmness pertaineth unto such as hunger and thirst after righteousness. These are they who toil bravely, animated by the longing for that joy which is caused by real blessedness, and striving therefore to wean their love away from so-called joys whose origin is merely earthly and fleshly. Of them is it said: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness." Counsel pertaineth unto the merciful, for our only way of escape from the horrors of our own guilt's punishment is that we should forgive even as we hope to be ourselves forgiven, and should help others as much as we can, even as we would fain be holpen in that wherein we can ourselves do nothing. And of such as so do, it is said: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy" from God.

---

[1] Quod non videt oculus, cor non dolet.

Ninth Lesson.

UNDERSTANDING pertaineth unto the pure in heart, for these are they whose clear eye can see that which the fleshly eye hath not seen, neither the ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive; and therefore of them it is said: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Wisdom pertaineth unto the peacemakers, even unto them in whom all things are well ordered, and passion no longer maketh insurrection against reason, but all things are subject unto human common sense, even as the same again is made subject unto God. And of such is it said: "Blessed are the peacemakers." But for all these forms of blessedness there is one and the same reward, although diversely named, and that reward is the kingdom of heaven.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 7th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Padua, holy Prosdocimus, the first Bishop of that see, who was ordained Bishop by the blessed Apostle Peter, and sent to preach the Word of God in that city, where he shone with many graces and wonders, and died a blessed death.

At Perugia, [in the year 547,] the holy martyr Herculanus, Bishop [of that see.]

On the same day the holy martyr Amaranth, who was buried in the city of Albi when the course of his faithful contending was over, but he is alive for evermore in glory.

At Melitina, in Armenia, the holy martyrs Hiero, Nicander, Hesychius, and thirty others, who were crowned under the President Lysias, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Amphipolis, in Macedonia, the holy martyrs Auctus, Taurion, and Thessalonica.

At Ancyra, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, the holy martyrs Melasippus, Anthony, and Carina.

At Cologne, [in the year 1225,] holy Engelbert, Bishop [of that see], who was contented to suffer martyrdom in defence of the freedom of the Church and of the obedience due to the Church of Rome.

At Alexandria, [about the year 313,] blessed Achillas, Bishop [of that see,] eminent for his learning, faith, conversation, and life.

In Friesland, [in the year 738,] holy Willebrord, [first] Bishop of Utrecht, who was ordained Bishop by blessed Pope Sergius, and preached the Gospel in Friesland and Denmark, whose feast we keep upon the 29th day of this present month.

At Metz, [about the year 400,] the holy Confessor Rufus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Strasburg, [about the year 693,] holy Florence, Bishop [of that see, and Founder and Abbat of Haslach and of St Thomas.]

NOVEMBER 7.

Seventh Day within the Octave of All Saints.

All as on the Feast, except that the Antiphons are not doubled, and the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (On the Martyrs.)

HE that wondereth with reverential love at the mighty deeds of the holy, he that hath oftentimes on his tongue praises for the glory of the righteous, let such an one copy their holy lives and their righteousness; for if any take pleasure in the work of a Saint, he ought to take pleasure in serving God as that Saint served Him. If he praiseth the Saint, he ought to imitate him, and if he is not ready to imitate him, he ought not to praise him. Let him that praiseth another make himself worthy of a like praise, and if he be in admiration of the Saints, let his own admirable life reflect the holiness of theirs. If we love the good and leal because they are good and leal, let us not forget that we can be what they are, by doing as they did.

Fifth Lesson.

IT ought not to be hard for us to copy others, when we see what they of old time did without any ensamples before them, so that in them who copied not others, but set ensample for others to copy, and in us who copy them, and in them which take ensample by us, Christ may be glorified in His holy Church. Thus from the very beginning of the world there have been the harmless Abel who was slain, Enoch who walked with God, and was seen no more, for God took him, Noah who was found righteous, Abraham who was tried and found faithful, Moses who was the meekest of men, Joshua who was chaste, David who was gentle, Elijah who was accepted, Daniel who was holy, and the three Children who were victorious.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Apostles, the disciples of Christ, are held the teachers of believers. Confessors taught of them fight right manfully, the noble martyrs triumph, and the Christian army armed with the armour of God, ever prevaileth in warfare against the devil. All these have been men of like lealty, divers warfarings, and glorious victories. And thou, O Christian, art but a carpet-knight, if thou thinkest to conquer without a fight, to triumph without a struggle. Nerve thyself, strive manfully, hit hard in the press. Consider thine engagement, look to thy state, know thine arm, even the engagement which thou hast taken, the state wherein thou art come, and the arm wherewith thou hast enrolled thyself a soldier.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: Seeing the multitudes, JESUS went up into a mountain, and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i., on the Lord's Sermon.)

At the first step in blessedness is set forth, as was behoven, the kingdom of heaven, the realisation of the perfect and highest wisdom of the reasonable soul. Thus is it said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their's is the kingdom of heaven,"—as though it were said: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Then unto the meek is given an inheritance, as the legacy of a father to dutiful children. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Thirdly, there is comfort for such as mourn, knowing what they have lost, and what encompasseth them. "Blessed are they that mourn [now],[1] for they shall be comforted." Fourthly, the hungry and thirsty are promised that they shall be filled, a refreshment for the strugglers for life, and for the weary. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

Eighth Lesson.

MERCY is proclaimed unto the merciful, as unto them who have taken the true and best counsel how to obtain from Him That is Mightier than they what they that are weaker than they obtain from them. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy" from God. Unto the pure in heart it pertaineth to see God, for their eye is clear to take in the things eternal. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." To the peacemakers it is given to be in the likeness and image of God, for these are the perfectly wise, created anew in the image of God, by the regeneration of the new man. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." The foregoing are forms of blessedness which we believe can be thoroughly attained in this life. The Apostles, for instance, did, we believe, attain them. As for that entire change into the likeness of Angels, which is promised us when this life is done,—no words can set it forth.

Ninth Lesson.

"BLESSED are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for their's is the kingdom of heaven." In this eighth word, which returneth back again to the fountainhead and setteth forth the perfect crown of human blessedness, is contained perchance a [mystic] connection with the fact that it was upon the eighth day that the old Law commanded that circumcision should be performed, and that it was upon the day next after the Sabbath (being the seventh day) that the Lord rose again, the day whereon He so rose being thus the eighth day, [had a week contained more than seven days,] and the first day [as a matter of fact.] There is perchance also a connection with the fact that we observe eight days [being from the Lord's Day whereon He rose to the Lord's Day in White both inclusive,] in honour of the creation of the new man. And yet again there is perchance a connection with the number contained in [the name of] the Feast of Pentecost, [which is, being interpreted, "the Feast of the Fiftieth-Day."] For this number of fifty days is reckoned [from that of the offering of the Sheaf of the Passover] by counting [seven weeks, that is to say,] seven multiplied by seven, which is forty-nine, and thereto adding one, which joined with seven maketh eight, and so making full fifty. And thus borne backward to our fountainhead, the day whereon the Holy Ghost was sent down, we are borne unto the kingdom of heaven, and inherit the earth, and are comforted, and are filled, and obtain mercy, and are made pure, and are set at peace. And when we have thus been perfected within, we bear for truth's and righteousness' sake any troubles that may come upon us from without.

MARTYROLOGY.

To-morrow is the Octave of All Saints.

Upon the same 8th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Lavican Way, upon the third milestone from the city, the holy martyrs Claudius, Nicostratus, Symphorian, Castorius, and Simplicius, they were first cast into prison, then heavily lashed with loaded scourges, and as their faith in Christ could not be shaken the Emperor Diocletian commanded that they should be cast into the river.

Likewise at Rome, upon the Lavican Way, the holy martyrs called the "Crowned" brethren, Severus, Severian, Carpophorus, and Victorinus, who under the aforesaid Emperor Diocletian were flogged to death with scourges loaded with lead. Their names were afterwards revealed by the Lord after divers years, but as they were unknown at the time it was ordained that on the anniversary of their deaths they should be commemorated, along with the five above mentioned, under the title of the Four that were Crowned, and the said custom hath still gone on in the Church ever since their names have been known.

At Rome, [in the year 618,] the holy Pope Deusdedit, whose grace was such that by his kiss he made a leper clean.

At Bremen, [about the year 789,] holy Willehad, first Bishop of that see. He spread the Gospel in Friesland and Saxony along with holy Boniface, whose disciple he was.

---

[1] The introduction of this word "now," not in St Matthew, shows a confusion with Luke vi. 21.

At Soissons, in Gaul, [in the year 1118,] holy Godfrey, Bishop of Amiens, a man of great holiness.

At Verdun, the holy Confessor Maurus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Tours, [in the fourth century,] the holy priest Clarus, whose epitaph was written by holy Paulinus,

Vespers are double, and exactly the same as the First Vespers of the Feast, with the following Commemoration of the holy "Crowned" Martyrs.

Antiphon. For their's is the kingdom, &c., (p. 603.)

Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory.

Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who know Thy glorious witnesses to have been in their testifying leal toward Thee, may feel, now that they are with Thee, that they are in their prayers pitiful towards us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

NOVEMBER 8.

Octave of the Feast of All the Saints.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "upon Death," written by the holy Martyr Cyprian, Bishop [of Carthage.]

DEARLY beloved brethren, we should keep well in our mind and thoughts that we are living here meanwhile as strangers and pilgrims. Let us hail that day which will see us each at home in one of the many mansions, which will see us delivered hence, and disentangled from the nets and snares of things temporal, and put us back into the Garden of Eden, and into the kingdom of heaven. Is there any in a far country but is quick to make his way to his Fatherland? Was ever any in haste to make his voyage homeward, but longed for a fair wind, that he might the sooner embrace his loved ones?

Fifth Lesson.

WE reckon Paradise to be our home; already we begin to have the Patriarchs for our kinsmen. Why should we not make haste and run, to see our home, and to greet our kinsfolk? There are a great many of those we love waiting for us there — father, and mother, and brothers, and children, there in great company they await us, they who are sure now never to die any more, but not yet sure of us. O, when we come to see them and to embrace them, what gladness will it be both for us and for them! O, what will be the brightness of life in that heavenly kingdom where there is no more fear of death, but the certainty of living everlastingly! O, what consummated, O, what enduring happiness?

Sixth Lesson.

THERE is the glorious company of the Apostles, there is the jubilant fellowship of the Prophets, there is the countless army of Martyrs crowned for victory in strife and in suffering. There triumph the virgins who by noble self-control have tamed the desires of the flesh and of the body. There are repaid with mercy the merciful, who by feeding and gifting the needy, have wrought righteousness, have kept the commandments of the Lord, and have exchanged heritages upon earth for treasures in heaven. Thitherward, dearly beloved brethren, let us eagerly run, with such as these soon to be, unto Christ soon to come, let us be fain.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: Seeing the multitudes, JESUS went up into a mountain, and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Bk. i. on the Lord's Sermon.)

"Blessed are ye," saith the Lord, "when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven." If any be seeking under the name of a Christian the pleasures of this world and the possession of temporal goods, let him bethink him that our blessedness is inward, even as the mouth of the Prophet saith concerning the soul of the Church: "The King's daughter is all glorious within." (Ps. xliv. 15.) Without, she is reviled, and persecution and evil report are her promised portion. And yet for these very things, great is her reward in heaven, as indeed is felt in the hearts of the sufferers, at least of such as are able already to say: "But we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, Which is given unto us." (Rom. v. 3-5.)

Eighth Lesson.

TO suffer such things is not in itself fruitful; what is fruitful, is to bear them for Christ's Name's sake not calmly only but gladly. There are a great many heretics who mislead souls under the name of Christians, and they suffer such things plentifully, but they are cut out from the reward, for it is not said only "Blessed are they which are persecuted," but "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake." Where there is not sound faith there cannot be righteousness, for "the just shall live by faith." (Heb. x. 38.) Neither let schismatics promise themselves any of that reward, for as righteousness cannot exist where there is no faith, so neither can it exist where there is no love. And schismatics have no love, for "love worketh no ill to his neighbour," (Rom. xiii. 10,) and if they had it, they would not tear the Body of Christ, which is the Church.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyrs.)

IN the persecution under Diocletian four brothers named Severus, Severian, Carpophorus, and Victorinus, boldly refused to worship the gods, and were lashed with whips loaded with lead until they gave up their lives for Christ's Name's sake under the strokes. Their bodies were thrown out to be eaten by the dogs, but as they remained untouched after a long while, the Christians took them away, and buried them in a sand-pit upon the Lavican Way at the third milestone from the City, hard by the grave of the holy martyrs Claudius, Nicostratus, Symphorian, Castorius, and Simplicius, who had suffered under the same Emperor, because being excellent sculptors they could nowise be brought to make figures of idols, and when they were brought to the image of the Sun to do reverence to it, they had said they would never worship the works of men's hands. For this reason they were thrown into prison, and when after many days they were still found of the same mind, they were first lashed with scourges armed with hooks, and then soldered up alive in leaden coffins and thrown into the river. There is in the City of Rome a Church called that of the Four Holy Crowned. Their actual names were long unknown, but afterwards made manifest by God. In this Church are honourably buried the bodies of these four, and also those of the other five; and a Festival is held in their honour upon the 8th day of November.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs.

Antiphon. Even the very hairs, &c., (p. 608.)

Verse. Be glad in the LORD and rejoice, ye righteous.

Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow is kept the feast of the Dedication of the Cathedral Church of the Saviour at Rome, [in the year 324.]

Upon the same 9th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Amasea, in Pontus, the holy soldier Theodore. In the time of the Emperor Maximian he was heavily flogged and cast into prison for his profession of the Christian faith, in prison the Lord appeared unto him, and bade him be steadfast and do manfully, then he was taken out and stretched upon the rack and torn with hooks until his inner parts were seen, and lastly he was thrown into the fire. Holy Gregory of Nyssa hath told his praises in a noble discourse.

At Tyana, in Cappadocia, under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyr Orestes.

At Thessalonica, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyr Alexander.

At Bourges, the holy Confessor Ursinus, who was ordained at Rome by the successors of the Apostles, and sent to that city as the first Bishop thereof.

At Naples, in Campania, holy Agrippinus, Bishop [of that see,] famous for miracles.

At Constantinople, the holy Virgins Eustolia of Rome, and Sopatra, daughter of the Emperor Maurice.

At Beyrout, in Syria, is made commemoration of an image of the Saviour which was crucified by the Jews, [about the year 765,] and so much Blood flowed therefrom, that the Churches both of the East and West have plentifully received thereof.

Vespers are of the following.

NOVEMBER 9.

Dedication of the Cathedral Church of the Most Holy Saviour, at Rome.[1]

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for the Dedication of a Church, (p. 654,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of the Octave of All Saints, from the Second Vespers of the Feast.

Then of the Holy Martyr Theodore. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who encompassest and shieldest us by the glorious confession of Thy blessed Martyr Theodore, grant unto us to profit by his ensample and to be holpen by his prayers. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Apocalypse of the Blessed Apostle John (xxi. 9.)

AND there came unto me one of the seven Angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying: Come hither, I will show thee the Bride, the Lamb's Wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal.

---

[1] Commonly called St John Lateran (San Giovanni Laterano.) It is the Cathedral of Rome, and therefore "Mother and Mistress of every Church in the City and in the world."

Second Lesson.

AND had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates: and at the gates twelve Angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israël. On the East three gates; on the North three gates; on the South three gates; and on the West three gates. And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb. And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

Third Lesson.

AND the city lieth four-square, and the length is as large as the breadth; and he measured the city with the golden reed, twelve thousand furlongs: the length, and the height, and the breadth of it are equal. And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the Angel. And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Rites whereof the Church of Rome maketh use for the hallowing of Churches and Altars were first instituted by the blessed Pope Sylvester. From the very time of the Apostles there had been places set apart for God, where assemblies took place upon the first day of every week, and where the Christians were used to pray, to hear the word of God, and to receive the Eucharist, which places were by some called Oratories and by others Churches. But these places were not dedicated with so solemn a form, nor did they set up therein an Altar for a pillar, and pour chrism thereon, (Gen. xxviii. 18,) for a figure of our Lord JESUS Christ, Who is Himself our Altar, our Victim, and our Priest.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT when the Emperor Constantine had by the Sacrament of Baptism received health both of body and soul, then first in a law by him published was it allowed to the Christians throughout the whole world to build Churches, to the which holy building he exhorted them by his example as well as by his decree. He dedicated in his own Lateran Palace a Church to the Saviour, and built hard by it a Cathedral in the name of St John the Baptist, upon the place where he had been baptized by holy Silvester and cleansed from his leprosy. This Cathedral was hallowed by the said Pope upon the 9th day of November. It is this consecration, the memory whereof is still celebrated upon this day, the first whereon the public consecration of a Church ever took place in Rome, and the image of the Saviour was seen by the Roman people painted upon the wall.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Blessed Silvester afterwards decreed, when he was consecrating the Altar of the Prince of the Apostles, that Altars were thenceforward to be made of stone only, but notwithstanding this the Lateran Cathedral hath the altar made of wood. This is not surprising. From St Peter to Silvester the Popes had not been able, by reason of persecutions, to abide fixedly in one place, and they celebrated the Holy Liturgy in cellars, in burying-places, in the houses of godly persons, or wherever need drave them, upon a wooden altar made like an empty box. When peace was given to the Church, holy Silvester took this box, and to do honour to the Prince of the Apostles, who is said to have offered sacrifice thereon, and to the other Popes who thereon had been used to execute the mystery even unto that time, set it in the first Church, even the Lateran, and ordained that no one but the Bishop of Rome should celebrate the Liturgy thereon for all time coming. The original Lateran Cathedral, cast down and destroyed by fires, pillage, and earthquakes, and renewed by the constant care of the Popes, was at last rebuilt afresh, and solemnly consecrated by Pope Benedict XIII., a Friar Preacher, upon the 28th day of April, in the year 1726, the memory of which Festival he ordained to be kept upon this day. In the year 1884 Leo XIII. took in hand a work which had received the sanction of his predecessor Pius IX. The great sanctuary, the walls of which were giving way with age, was lengthened and widened, a task of immense labour. The ancient mosaic had been renewed previously in several places; it was now restored according to the original design, and transferred to the new apse, the embellishment of which was carried out with great magnificence. The transept was redecorated, and its ceiling and woodwork repaired. A sacristy, a residence for the canons, and a portico connecting with the baptistery of Constantine, were added to the existing buildings.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xix. 1, with the Homily of St Ambrose, (p. 656.) The last is omitted or read as one with the Eighth, to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Theodore.)

THIS Theodore was a Christian soldier, who was arrested in the reign of the Emperor Maximian for having set fire to a temple of idols. The Commander of the Legion offered him pardon if he would profess repentance and curse the Christian faith, but, as he refused to swerve as regarding the confession of his belief, he was cast into prison. There he was tormented with iron claws. As they were tearing the flesh off his ribs, he sang joyfully [the 33rd Psalm]: "I will bless the LORD at all times." Thereafter he was thrown upon an heap of burning wood, and there, still praying and praising God, he gave up his soul to Christ, upon the 9th day of November, [in the year of salvation 304.] The Lady Eusebia wrapped his body in a winding-sheet, and buried it on her own farm.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyr. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office. Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 10th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Naples, in Campania, [in the year 1608,] holy Andrew Avellino, Clerk Regular, very eminent for his holiness and his zeal for setting forward the salvation of his neighbours. He was famous for miracles, and Clement XI. enrolled his name among those of the saints.

The holy martyrs Tryphon, Respicius, and the Virgin Nympha.

In the country of Agde, the holy martyrs Tiberius, Modestus, and Florence, who, in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, underwent divers torments, and were crowned with martyrdom.

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Demetrius, Bishop [of that see,] the Deacon Anian, Eustosius, and twenty Others.

At Ravenna, [in the year 142,] holy Probus, Bishop [of that see,] famous for miracles.

At Orleans, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Monitor, Bishop [of that see.]

In England, holy Justus, Bishop [of Rochester, afterwards translated to Canterbury,] who was sent into that island by the blessed Pope Gregory, along with Augustine, Mellitus, and others to preach the gospel, and there slept in the Lord, famous for holiness, [in the year 627.]

At Melun is commemorated the holy Confessor Leo.

At Iconium, in Lycaonia, the holy Women Tryphenna and Tryphosa, who advanced much in Christian training by the preaching of blessed Paul and the example of Thecla.

In the island of Paros, the holy Virgin Theoctistis.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from his Lauds.

Then of the Holy Martyrs Tryphon, Respicius, and Nympha. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for Many Martyrs.

Prayer.

GRANT us earnestness, O Lord, in keeping the feast of Thine holy witnesses Tryphon, Respicius, and Nympha, and make us to feel that their prayers gain us the gift of Thy protection. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Then of St Justus, Bishop and Confessor, from the Common Office, (p. 612,) and the following.

Prayer.

GRACIOUSLY hear, O Lord, we beseech Thee, the prayers which we offer Thee in the solemn commemoration of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Justus, and for the sake of him who so nobly served Thee, forgive us all our trespasses. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

NOVEMBER 10.

St Andrew Avellino, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LANCELOT AVELLINO, who afterwards took the name of Andrew, was born at Castro Nuovo, a small town in Lucania, [in the kingdom of Naples, in the year of our Lord 1520.] From his earliest childhood he gave no dark signs of the holiness of his after life. When as a lad he was away from home at school, he so passed the slippery paths of that age, as ever keeping before his eyes, amid the pursuit of earthly knowledge the true beginning of wisdom, which is the fear of the Lord. (Prov. ix. 10.) He was exceedingly comely, but withal careful in purity, and thereby escaped oftentimes the shameless proposals of women, and somewhiles even resisted open violence. He had already become a clerk when he went to Naples to study law. There he was ordained Priest, and also took his degree in Jurisprudence. He undertook cases only in the Church Courts, and for certain private persons, according to the rules of the Sacred Canons. [1] Once in pleading a cause, in a matter indeed which was of no weight, a lie escaped him. Almost forthwith thereafter, in reading the Holy Scriptures, he came upon the words: "The mouth that lieth killeth the soul" (Wisd. i. 11)—and so great was the grief and remorse which he felt for his sin that he made up his mind to leave that way of life. He therefore gave up his law business, and set himself altogether to mind the worship of God and the execution of his holy ministry. The eminent pattern which he gave of all the graces proper to a Churchman moved the Archbishop of Naples to commit to him the care of a certain nunnery in that city. The holy man's zeal [for removing all obstacles to the recollection of these spouses of Christ, in which consisteth the very essence of their state and virtue,] stirred up the malice and rage of certain wicked men in the city, [whom he had forbid being admitted to the grate to speak to any of the nuns.] He once narrowly escaped death, with which they threatened him; and another time received three wounds in his face from a bully. These injuries he bore with thorough meekness. Out of an earnest desire of more readily attaining to a perfect disengagement of his heart from all earthly things, he humbly sought and [in 1556] obtained to be admitted into the Order of Regular Clerks, [called Theatins,] and on this occasion, out of the love he bore to the Cross, he entreated that his name might be changed from Lancelot to Andrew.

Fifth Lesson.

HE entered manfully and cheerily upon the harder life, set to work to better himself therein, and to that end made two very grim vows, the first, perpetually to fight against his own will, the second, always to advance to the utmost of his power in Christian perfection. Of the discipline of his Order he was a stern defender, and when he was set over others the observance thereof was his great care. Whatever time the duties of his work and his institute left him, he gave to prayer and the salvation of souls. His godliness and wisdom in hearing of confessions were beautiful. He went many times through the farthest lanes and suburbs of Naples, bringing Gospel ministry with great gain of souls. The greatness of his love toward his neighbour God was pleased to crown even by signs and wonders. One stormy night he was coming home from hearing a sick man's confession, when the rain and wind put out the light which was carried before him, but he and they that were with him not only came dry through the thickest of the rain, but there came also a strange light out of his body and showed them the way in the deepest of the darkness. He was a wonderful instance of self-control, long-suffering, lowliness, and hatred of self. He bore with stillness the murder of his nephew, held in the passion of his kinsfolk to take revenge, and even asked pity for the assassins from the judges.

---

[1] The rest of this Lesson is almost word for word the same as Alban Butler.

Sixth Lesson.

HE spread in many places the Institute of Regular Clerks, and founded their houses at Milan and Piacenza. The holy Cardinal Charles Borromeo, and the Cardinal Paul of Arezzo, being himself a Regular Clerk, men by both of whom he was well liked, used his help in their care for souls. Toward the Virgin Mother of God he was constant in an extraordinary love and reverence. He won the conversation of Angels, whom he said he used to hear singing when he was praising God. He set an ensample of the highest graces, even to the gift of prophecy, whereby he saw into men's hearts and knew things afar off or even yet to come. Full of years and worn out with work, he was beginning the Liturgy, when, having repeated thrice the words, "I will go unto the Altar of God," he was felled by a stroke of apoplexy, and, duly fortified by the Sacraments, in the arms of his friends, most peacefully gave up his soul to God, [upon the 10th day of November, in the year 1608.] The crowds which flock to his grave in the Church of St Paul at Naples are still as great as they were when his body was first laid there. He was famous for signs and wonders both during his life and after his death, and Pope Clement XI. solemnly enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lesson from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) The last Lesson is omitted or read as one with the Eighth to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the holy Martyrs Tryphon, Respicius, and Nympha.)

IN the reign of the Emperor Decius one Tryphon strove by preaching the faith of JESUS Christ to bring all men to worship Him. For this cause he was taken by the servants of Decius. He was first tormented upon the rack, and flesh stripped from him with iron claws; then red-hot nails were driven into his insteps, he was beaten with cudgels and scarified with lighted torches. The sight of the courage wherewith he bore all, brought the Præfect Respicius to believe in the Lord Christ, and he forthwith declared himself a Christian. He also was divers ways tormented, and then led along with Tryphon before the statue of Jupiter. When Tryphon prayed, the statue fell down. Then were both Tryphon and Respicius savagely lashed with whips loaded with lead, until they grasped the crown of a most glorious testimony, upon the 10th day of November. Upon the same day a certain maiden named Nympha, having openly confessed that JESUS Christ is very God, added the palm of martyrdom to the crown of virginity.

LAUDS.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who didst make Thy blessed Confessor Andrew to settle in his heart to go up wondrously toward Thee by a stern vow daily to advance to the utmost of his power in godliness, grant unto us for the same Thy servant's sake and at his prayers the like grace, so that we, seeking ever that which is more perfect, may happily attain the crown of Thine everlasting glory. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyrs. Prayer as at Vespers.

Then of St Justus, from the Common Office, (p. 617,) with Prayer as at Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 11th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Tours, in Gaul, [in the year 397,] the blessed Confessor Martin, Bishop of that see. His life was remarkable for extraordinary miracles; he raised three persons from the dead.

At Cotyæus, in Phrygia, the glorious passion of the holy Egyptian soldier Mennas. During the persecution under Diocletian he cast away his military belt, and served the King of Heaven in secret in the desert; then he went forth, and freely declared himself to be a Christian. He was first examined with horrid tortures, then as he was kneeling in prayer, giving thanks to our Lord JESUS Christ, he was beheaded, [in the year 305.] After his death he was famous for many miracles.

At Ravenna, the holy martyrs Valentine, Felician, and Victorine, who were crowned in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

In Mesopotamia, in the persecution under the same Diocletian and Eleusius the President, the holy martyr Athenodorus. He was tormented with fire and other torments, and then condemned to be beheaded; but the executioner fell to the earth, and no other dared to smite him with the sword, and as he prayed he fell asleep in the Lord.

At Lyons, the holy Bishop Veran, whose life was illustrious for his faith and other graces.

In the monastery of Grotta-Ferrata, near Frascati, [in the year 1054,] the holy Abbat [of Grotta-Ferrata,] Bartholomew, a companion of blessed Nilus, and the writer of his life.

In the province of Samnium, the blessed hermit, Mennas, whose graces and miracles are recorded by holy Pope Gregory.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 11.

Martinmas Day.

St Martin, Bishop [of Tours,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These as regards St Martin begin from the Chapter. Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin, and Prayer from Lauds. Where the Vespers are all of St Martin, the Antiphons are taken from Lauds.

A Commemoration is made of St Andrew Avellino. Prayer from his Office.

Then of the Holy Martyr Mennas. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

Invitatory. For the testimony of blessed Martin, * let us praise our God.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. While Martin is yet a Catechumen, he hath clad Me in this garment.

Second Antiphon. Martin confessed the faith of the Holy Trinity, and received the grace of baptism.

Third Antiphon. Not in the shelter of a buckler, nor of an helmet, but with the sign of the Cross will I pierce the hosts of the enemy.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612.)

First Responsory.

This is that Martin whom God chose to be an High Priest unto Himself, he upon whom the Lord was pleased to bestow favour like as upon His Apostles, so that he prevailed gloriously in the power of the Divine Trinity three times to raise the dead to life.

Verse. Martin confessed the faith of the Holy Trinity.

Answer. So that he prevailed gloriously in the power of the Divine Trinity three times to raise the dead to life.

Second Responsory.

Lord, if I be still needful to Thy people, I refuse not to work for them. Thy will be done.

Verse. With eyes and hands lifted up to heaven, he never let his mighty spirit slacken in prayer.

Answer. Thy will be done.

Third Responsory.

Oh how blessed a man was Bishop Martin; he neither feared to die, nor refused to live.

Verse. Lord, if I be still needful to Thy people, I refuse not to work for them. Thy will be done.

Answer. He neither feared to die, nor refused to live.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He neither feared to die, nor refused to live.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. I trust in the Lord that at thy prayers my daughter shall be healed.

Second Antiphon. When Tetradius knew the power of God, he attained unto the grace of baptism.

Third Antiphon. Not to be told is this man's glory, by whom so many wonderful works have been set forth before us.

Fourth Lesson.

MARTIN was born at Sabaria in Pannonia. When he was ten years old he went to the Church, in the spite of his [heathen] father and mother, and by his own will was numbered among the Catechumens. At fifteen years of age he joined the army, and served as a soldier first under Constantius and then under Julian. Once at the gate of Amiens a poor man asked him for an alms for Christ's name's sake, and since he had nothing to his hand but his arms and his clothes, he gave him half of his cloak. In the night following Christ appeared to him clad in the half of his cloak, and saying [to the angels who bare Him company:] "While Martin is yet a Catechumen, he hath clad Me in this garment."

Fourth Responsory.

With eyes and hands lifted up to heaven, he never let his mighty spirit slacken in prayer.

Verse. While as blessed Martin was offering up the mysteries, a ball of fire appeared above his head.

Answer. He never let his mighty spirit slacken in prayer.

Fifth Lesson.

AT eighteen years of age he was baptized. He gave up thereupon the life of a soldier, and betook himself to Hilary, Bishop of Poictiers, by whom he was placed in the order of Acolytes. Being afterwards made Bishop of Tours, he built a monastery wherein he lived in holiness for a while in company of four-score monks. At the last he fell sick of a grievous fever at Cande, a village in his diœcese, and besought God in constant prayer to set him free from the prison of this dying body. His disciples heard him and said: "Father, why wilt thou go away from us? unto whom wilt thou bequeath us in our sorrow?" Their words moved Martin, and he said: "Lord, if I be still needful to Thy people, I refuse not to work."

Fifth Responsory.

Blessed Martin knew of his own death of a long time before it came to pass, and he said unto the brethren that the dissolution of his body was nigh at hand, for he deemed himself to be already breaking up.

Verse. His bodily strength gave way all of a sudden, and he called his disciples together, and said unto them—

Answer. That the dissolution of his body was nigh at hand, for he deemed himself to be already breaking up.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN his disciples saw him, in the height of the fever, lying upon his back and praying, they entreated him to turn over and take a little rest upon his side while the violence of his sickness would allow him. But Martin answered them: "Suffer me to look heavenward rather than earthward, that my spirit may see the way whereby it is so soon going to the Lord." At the moment of death he saw the enemy of mankind, and cried out: "What are you come here for, you bloody brute? You murderer, you'll find nothing in me." With these words on his lips, he gave up his soul to God, being aged eighty years.[1] He was received by a company of Angels, who were heard praising God by many persons, especially by holy Severinus, Bishop of Cologne.

Sixth Responsory.

His disciples said unto blessed Martin: Father, why wilt thou go away from us, and with whom wilt thou leave us orphans? For ravening wolves will break in upon thy flock.

Verse. We know that thou wouldest fain be with Christ, but, sooner or later, thy reward is sure. Rather, then, have pity upon us, whom thou art leaving.

Answer. For ravening wolves will break in upon thy flock.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For ravening wolves will break in upon thy flock.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Lord JESUS Christ said not that He would come clothed in purple or adorned with a crown.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Second Antiphon. O Martin, thou Priest of God, the heavens are open unto thee, yea, and the kingdom of My Father!

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Third Antiphon. O Martin, thou Priest of God, thou worthy shepherd, pray God on our behalf.

Ps. xx. The king shall joy, &c., (p. 10.)

Verse. Thou art a Priest for ever—

Answer. After the order of Melchisedek.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 33.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. vii. Comment. on Luke xi.)

In that which goeth before, Christ hath set the Church before the synagogue, and He exhorteth us rather to trust in the Church. The candle is faith, even as it is written: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Ps. cxviii. 105.) Our faith is the word of God. The word of God is light. Faith is the candle. It is written concerning the Word of God, that "That was the true Light, Which lighteth every man that cometh into this world." (John i. 9.) But a candle cannot shine, unless it be lighted from some other fire.

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed indeed was this man, at the time of whose passing the Saints sang in company, a band of Angels shouted aloud for joy, and an army of all the Powers of heaven came out to meet him, singing praises.

Verse. His strength is a stay to the Church, his manifestation a glory to the Priests of God; Michael and his Angels took him away.

Answer. And an army of all the Powers of heaven came out to meet him, singing praises.

Eighth Lesson.

ALSO it is written: "What woman, having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?" (Luke xv. 8.) And here the candle lighted to find the lost piece is the strength in our understandings and affections. Let no man therefore seek faith under the law. For the law is by measure, but grace without measure; the law overshadoweth, but grace enlighteneth. And therefore let no man shut up his faith within the measure of the law, but give it unto the Church, the Church, wherein shineth the sevenfold grace of the Spirit, and whereon the Divine glory of the Great High Priest doth strike from heaven, lest the shadow of the law should rest any more at all upon her. Under the old law there was the sevenfold lamp which the Priest of the Jews lighted every morning and every evening, and this was as it were a candle put under a bushel. That Jerusalem which is upon earth, that Jerusalem which killed the Prophets, lieth hid, as it were, in a dark place in the valley of tears. But that Jerusalem which is in heaven, whereof by faith we are soldiers, is a city set upon the highest of all mountains, even upon Christ. Her the darkness and tempests of earth cannot hide, but she blazeth with the glory of the Eternal Sun, and maketh to fall upon us the light of spiritual grace.

Eighth Responsory.

Martin was carried joyfully into Abraham's bosom. Martin, who was poor here and of small estimation, entereth rich into heaven, and the songs of heaven are raised in his honour.

Verse. Bishop Martin, that jewel of Priests, goeth away from time, liveth in Christ.

Answer. Entereth rich into heaven, and the songs of heaven are raised in his honour.

---

[1] A.D. 397? 400?

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Entereth rich into heaven, and the songs of heaven are raised in his honour.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Mennas.)

MENNAS was a Christian Egyptian soldier who had withdrawn himself into a desert place to do penance, but one day, during the persecution under the Emperors Diocletian and Maximian, upon the said Emperors' birthday, when the people were gathered together at a great show, stood forth in the theatre, and reviled with a loud voice the idolatries of the Gentiles. Thereupon he was arrested, and being bound at Cotyæus, the chief city of Phrygia, under the authority of the President Pyrrhus, was first savagely lashed with thongs, then racked, then scarified with fire applied to his naked body, then had his wounds lacerated by rubbing with hair-cloth, then dragged through thorns and iron spikes with hands and feet tied, then lashed again with whips loaded with lead, and lastly slain with the sword, and thrown into a fire. The Christians saved his body thence and buried it, and it hath in after times been carried to Constantinople.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. His disciples said * unto Blessed Martin: Father, why wilt thou go away from us? or with whom wilt thou leave us orphans? For ravening wolves will break in upon thy flock.

Second Antiphon. Lord, if I be still needful to Thy people, I refuse not * to work. Thy will be done.

Third Antiphon. Not to be told is this man's glory; * whom work did not and death could not conquer; who neither feared to die, nor refused to live.

Fourth Antiphon. With eyes and hands lifted up to heaven, * he never let his mighty spirit slacken in prayer. Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. Martin is called joyfully into Abraham's bosom. * Martin, who was poor here and of small estimation, entereth rich into heaven, and the songs of heaven are raised in his honour.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. O how blessed a man is he! His soul hath entered into possession in Paradise. * There the Angels cry aloud for joy, there the Archangels make glad, there the whole company of the Saints do shout, there the army of the Virgins do call others to follow, [saying:] Make thine everlasting abode with us.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Which seest that we stand by no strength of our own, mercifully grant that the pleading of Thy blessed Confessor Bishop Martin may avail us for a succour against all things that rise up to harm us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Mennas.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 12th day of November, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr, Pope Martin. He got together a synod at Rome, wherein he condemned the heretics Sergius, Paul, and Pyrrhus. Wherefore the heretic Emperor Constans caused him to be kidnapped and brought to Constantinople, whence he was banished into the Crimea, where he died, [in the year 655,] worn out by his sufferings for the Catholic faith's sake. He was famous for miracles. His body was afterward brought to Rome and buried in the Church of SS. Sylvester and Martin.

In Asia, the holy martyrs and Bishops Aurelius and Publius.

In the country of Sens, [in the year 726,] the holy martyr Paternus.

At Ghent, the holy martyr Livin, Bishop [in Ireland, Apostle of West Flanders, martyred at Esche, in Belgium, in the seventh century.]

In Poland, the holy martyred Hermits Benedict, John, Matthew, Isaac, and Christinus.

At Vitepsk, in Poland, the holy martyr Jehoshaphat, Archbishop of Polotsk, Monk of the Order of St Basil, who was cruelly murdered by schismatics, [in the year 1623,] out of their hatred for Catholic unity and truth, and whose name Pope Pius IX. enrolled among those of the holy martyrs. We keep his feast upon the 28th day of this present month of November.

At Avignon, holy Rufus, the first Bishop of that see.

At Cologne, [in the year 663,] holy Cunibert, Bishop [of that see.]

At Tarragona, in Spain, the blessed Priest Æmilian, who was famous for countless miracles, and whose wonderful life hath been written by Braulio, the holy Bishop of Zaragoza.

At Constantinople, the holy Abbat Nilus, who had been Prefect of the city, but became a Monk, and was famous for teaching and holiness in the time of the Emperor Theodosius the younger.

Likewise at Constantinople, holy Theodore, of the monastery which is called the Studium; who contended mightily for the Catholic faith against the Iconoclasts, and became famous throughout the whole Catholic Church, [A.D. 759-826.]

At Alcala, in Spain, [in the year 1463,] the holy Confessor Diego, of the Order of Friars Minor, eminent for his lowliness, whose name Sixtus V. enrolled among those of the Saints, and whose feast is kept upon the morrow after.

At Second Vespers, Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O how blessed a Bishop was he! * All his bowels yearned on the King Christ, and he had no dread for the power of the Empire! O how holy a soul was his, which passed not away by the sword of the persecutor, and yet lost not the palm of martyrdom.

A Commemoration is made of the following. All from the Common. Prayer, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

NOVEMBER 12.

The Holy Martyr Pope Martin.

All from the Common Office for a Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following. Prayer throughout the Office, "O God, Who year by year, &c.," (p. 599.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MARTIN was born at Todi in Tuscany. At the beginning of his Popedom, [in the year 649,] he was careful to send an embassage with letters to Paul, Patriarch of Constantinople, to call upon him to return to the truth of the Catholic faith from the blasphemous heresy [of the Monothelites.] But Paul, being backed up by the heretic Emperor Constans, had become so rabid, that he sent away the messengers of the Apostolic See into divers places in the islands. This crime moved the Pope to gather together at Rome a council of one-hundred-and-five Bishops, by whom Paul was condemned.

Fifth Lesson.

THEREUPON Constans sent Olympius into Italy as Exarch, straitly commanding him either to slay Pope Martin, or else to bring him into his Imperial presence. Olympius therefore came to Rome and bade a lictor to kill the Pope while as he was celebrating the Liturgy solemnly in the Cathedral Church of St Mary-at-the-Manger. But when the lictor went thither, he was struck with blindness.

Sixth Lesson.

FROM that time forth many evils befell the Emperor Constans; but he repented not. He sent the Exarch Theodore Calliopas to Rome, with command to lay hands on the Pope. By him Martin was treacherously taken [on the 17th day of June, 653,] and [forthwith carried to the island of Naxos. On the 17th of September in 655 he was] brought to Constantinople, [where he was kept in prison] till he was sent to the Crimea [on the 15th of May, 645.] There his sufferings for the Catholic faith utterly broke him down, and he left this life for a better, upon the 12th day of November,[1] [in the same year 655.] He was famous for miracles. His body was afterwards brought back to Rome and buried in the Church dedicated under the names of St Silvester and St Martin [of Tours.] He ruled the Church for six years, one month, and twenty-six days. He held two ordinations in the month of December, wherein he made eleven Priests, five Deacons, and thirty-three Bishops for divers places.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xiv. 26, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 597.)

Eighth Responsory.

O Lord, Thou hast prevented him, &c.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Confessor Diego, of the Order of Friars Minor, who was born into the better life upon this present day.

Upon the same 13th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Ravenna, the holy martyrs Valentine, Solutor, and Victor, who suffered in the persecution under Diocletian.

At Aix, in Provence, [in the year 304,] that illustrious martyr the blessed Mitrius.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, [in the year 308,] in the persecution under the Emperor Galerius Maximian, the holy martyrs Antonine, Zebinas, German, and the Virgin Ennatha. Ennatha was flogged and then burnt, and the men were beheaded because they openly rebuked the President Firmilian for his wickedness in offering sacrifice to the gods.

In Africa, [in the year 437,] the holy martyrs Arcadius, Paschasius, Probus, and Eutychian. These were all Spaniards who, during the persecution under the Vandals, could no wise be brought to turn aside unto the Arian misbelief. For this cause the Arian king Genseric first proscribed them, then banished them, afterwards tormented them with terrible sufferings, and lastly put them to death in divers ways. Then also became glorious the faithfulness of the little lad, Paulillus, the brother of holy Paschasius and Eutychian, and as he would not give up the Catholic faith, he was cudgelled for a long time and condemned to the lowest bondage.

At Rome, holy Pope Nicholas the Great, eminent for his Apostolic vigour. [He reigned from April 28, 858 to November 13, 867. He was the 107th Pope.]

At Tours, [in the year 444,] holy Brice, Bishop of that see, a disciple of the blessed Bishop Martin.

At Toledo, [in the year 658,] holy Eugene, Bishop [of that see.]

In Auvergne, [in the year 527,] holy Quintian, Bishop [of Rodez and of Clermont.]

At Cremona, [in the year 1197,] the holy Confessor Homobuono, who was famous for miracles, and whose name Innocent III. enrolled among those of the Saints.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 13.

St Diego,[2] Confessor.

Semi-double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who in Thy wonderful ordinance dost choose the weak things of the world to bring to nought the things that are strong, mercifully grant unto us Thine unworthy servants, at the kindly prayers of Thy blessed Confessor Diego, worthily to attain unto everlasting glory in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

[1] He died on Sept. 16. Nov. 12 is the day of the translation of his reliques to Rome. (Alban Butler.)

[2] Alban Butler says the name is a Spanish form of James, but it is Latinised Didacus.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Diego, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Martin.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

DIEGO was a Spaniard, and was born at the little town of San-Nicola-del-Porto, in the diœcese of Seville. From his childhood he learnt the more holy life under a godly Priest, [who lived hermit] in a lonely Church, and so served his apprenticeship. Afterwards, being fain to be more utterly God's only, he professed himself as a lay brother under the Rule of St Francis in the convent of the Friars Minor, called Observant, of Arrizafa. There he cheerfully bore the yoke of the lowliest obedience and the strictest observance. He was much given to contemplation, and a wonderful light from God shone in him, so that, though he was untaught, he could speak touching heavenly things strangely and as it were supernaturally.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the Canary Islands, where he was warden of the brethren of his Order, he underwent much, earnestly willing to be a martyr, and by his word and ensample brought many unbelievers to Christ. He came to Rome in the year of the Jubilee, [being that of our Lord 1450,] in the reign of Pope Nicolas V., and there was set to tend the sick in the Convent of Ara Cœli, which work he did with such love, that although the city was plagued with a famine, the sufferers (whose sores he would sometimes cleanse even with his tongue) scarcely lacked anything needful. He was a burning and shining light of faith, and had the gift of healing, taking the oil from the lamp which burned before the image of the most blessed Mother of God, to whom he was earnestly devoted, and anointing the sick therewith, whereupon many were marvellously cured.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was at Alcala when he understood that the end of his life was at hand. Clothed in a ragged cast-away habit, he fixed his eyes upon the Cross, and said with extraordinary earnestness:

"'Sweet the nails, and sweet the iron,
Sweet the Weight That hung on thee,' thou that wast chosen to up-bear the Lord, the King of heaven," and so he gave up his soul to God, upon the 12th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1463. To satisfy the godly wishes of the multitude, his body was kept unburied for not a few months, and lay in a right sweet savour, as though the corruptible had already put on incorruption. He was famous for many and great miracles, and Pope Sixtus V. enrolled him in the number of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 32, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 628.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep in England the feast of holy Erconwald, Bishop of London, who was famous for many miracles, and of whom mention is made upon the last day of April.

Upon the same 14th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Heraclea, in Thrace, the holy martyrs Clementine, Theodotus, and Philomenus.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Serapion, whom the persecutors under the Emperor Decius most cruelly tormented until they dislocated all his joints, and then cast him down headlong from the top of his own house, and so made him a martyr for Christ.

At Troyes, in Gaul, under the Emperor Aurelian, the holy martyr Venerandus.

Likewise in Gaul, the holy Virgin Veneranda, who received the crown of martyrdom under the Emperor Antonine and Asclepiades the President.

At Gangra, in Paphlagonia, the holy martyr Hypatius, Bishop [of that see,] who was stoned to death by the Novatian heretics on his way back from the great Council of Nice.

At Algiers, in Africa, [in the year 1240,] the blessed Serapion, the first martyr of the Order of Blessed Mary of Ransom for the Redemption of the Captive Faithful and the Preaching of the Christian Faith. He won his crown by being fastened to a cross and cut limb from limb.

At Emesa, many holy Women, who, for Christ's faith's sake, were most cruelly tortured and murdered under the savage Arab chief Mady.

At Bologna, the holy Confessor Jucundus, Bishop [of that see.]

In Ireland, [in the year 1181,] holy Lorcan Ua Tuathail, Archbishop of Dublin.

Vespers of the following.

NOVEMBER 14.

Translation of St Erconwald, Bishop [of London,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who dost this day make us glad on the feast of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Erconwald, we humbly beseech Thy mercy that as we do honour his memory by a solemn office, his fatherly prayers may help us to the attaining of eternal life. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration of St Diego.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Bede, Hist. iv. 6. Malm. de Pont. xi.)

ERCONWALD was born of Offa, King of the East Angles, and he shed light upon the nobility of his birth by the profession of the Christian faith, and by the noble example of his graces. About the thirtieth year after the coming of Augustine, this saintly man, besides other holy works, founded two monasteries out of his own heritage, which was very abundant, and established in them an excellent way of life.

Fifth Lesson.

ONE of these monasteries he kept for himself and other men given to the contemplation of the things of God. It stood by the river Thames, in the place called the isle of Chertsey, and religion flourished there until the coming of the Danes, who destroyed the whole place, and burnt the church, the monks, and the Abbat. The other monastery Erconwald gave to his sister Ædilberga; it was at Barking; therein she dwelt, a devoted mother and nurse in God unto her nuns. She was worthy of her brother, both as regarded her own life and her rule of those that were under her.

Sixth Lesson.

IN after years, when the fame of his graces was spread about on all sides, Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, appointed Erconwald to the vacant See of London, in which ministry he left undone nothing which appertaineth to the praise of a perfect shepherd of souls. He was buried in London, in St Paul's Cathedral, and his bones were moved into a more honourable sepulchre upon the 14th day of November, in the year of salvation 1140.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the feast of the holy Virgin Gertrude, of whom mention is made upon the 17th day of this present month of November.

Upon the same 15th day of November, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Eugene, Archbishop of Toledo, a Disciple of blessed Denys, the Areopagite. He finished his testimony in the country of Paris, and received from the Lord a blessed crown of suffering, [in the year 95.] His body was afterwards brought to Toledo.

At Nola, in Campania, the holy martyr Felix, Bishop [of that see,] who was famous for miracles from the fifteenth year of his age upward; and gained the battle of martyrdom under the President Marcian, along with thirty others.

At Edessa, in Syria, under the Emperor Diocletian and Antonine the President, the holy martyrs Gurias and Samonas.

There likewise, under the Emperor Licinius and the President Lysanias, the holy Deacon Abibus, who was torn with hooks and cast into the fire.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Secundus, Fidentian, and Varicus.

In Brittany, [in the sixth century,] holy Machutus, [St Maclou or St Malo, first] Bishop [of the ancient See of Aleth, in Brittany,] who was marked by miracles even from his youth upward.

At Verona, [about the year 800,] the holy Confessor Luperius, Bishop [of that see.]

In Austria, [in the year 1136,] holy Leopold, [Margrave of Austria,] Marquess of that country, whose name Innocent VIII. enrolled with those of the Saints.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 15.

St Gertrude, Virgin.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin not a Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Gertrude, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst make unto Thyself a pleasant dwelling-place in the heart of Thy blessed hand-maiden Gertrude, be Thou entreated for the same Thy servant's sake, and by her prayers, to purge away in Thy mercy all defilement from our hearts, and to grant us one day to rejoice with her in Thy presence. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Erconwald from the Common Office, (p. 618,) with the Prayer from his own Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GERTRUDE was born of a noble family at Eisleben, in Saxony, [about the year of our Lord 1264.] At five years of age she offered her virginity and herself to JESUS Christ, in the Benedictine nunnery at Rodalsdorf. From that time forth she was utterly estranged from earthly things, ever striving for things higher, and began to lead a kind of heavenly life. To learning in human letters she added knowledge of the things of God. In the thought thereof she earnestly desired, and soon reached, the perfection of a Christian soul. Of Christ, and of the things in His life, she spoke oftentimes with movings of spirit. The glory of God was the one end of all her thoughts, and to that her every longing and her every act were given. Though God had crowned her with so many and so noble gifts both of nature and of grace, her belief regarding herself was so humble that she was used to number as among the greatest of the wonders of His goodness that He had always in His mercy borne with one who was so utterly unworthy.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the thirtieth year of her age she was elected Abbess of Rodalsdorf, where she had professed herself in the religious life, and afterwards of Heldelfs. This office she bore for forty years in love, wisdom, and zeal for strict observance, so that the house seemed like an ideal ensample of a sisterhood of perfect nuns. To each one she was a mother and a teacher, and yet would be as the least of all, being in sooth in all lowliness among them as she that served. That she might be more utterly God's only, she tormented her body with sleeplessness, hunger, and other afflictions, but withal ever true to herself, stood forth a pattern of innocency, gentleness, and long-suffering. The salvation of her neighbours was her constant earnest endeavour, and her godly toil bore abundant fruit. The love of God oftentimes threw her into trances, and she was given the grace of the deepest contemplation, even to union of spirit with God.

Sixth Lesson.

CHRIST Himself, to show what such a bride was to Him, revealed that He had in the heart of Gertrude a pleasant dwelling-place. The Virgin Mother of God she ever sought with deep reverence as a mother and warden whom she had received from JESUS Himself, and from her she had many benefits. Toward the most Divine Sacrament of the Eucharist, and the sufferings of the Lord, her soul was moved with love and gratitude, so that she sometimes wept abundantly. She helped with daily gifts and prayers the souls of the just condemned to the purifying fire. She wrote much for the fostering of godliness. She was glorified also by revelations from God, and by the gift of prophecy. Her last illness was rather the wasting of a home-sickness to be with God than a decay of the flesh, and she left this life [to live the undying life in Him, upon the 17th day of November,] in the year of our Lord 1292.[1] God made her bright with miracles both during her life and after her death.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matthew xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 16th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Canterbury, in England, the holy Confessor Edmund Rich, Archbishop of that see, who was driven into exile [at Pontigny] for his defence of the rights of his Church, and died a holy death near Provins, [in Champagne, in the year 1242,] and whose name Innocent IV. enrolled among those of the Saints.

In Africa, the holy martyrs Rufinus, Mark, Valerius, and their Companions.

On the same day, the holy martyrs Elpidius, Marcellus, Eustochius, and their Companions. Elpidius was of the Senatorial Order, and steadfastly confessed the Christian faith in the presence of the Emperor Julian the Apostate. He and his Companions were first tied to unbroken horses, and so dragged about, but afterwards cast into the fire, and so achieved a glorious martyrdom, [in the fourth century.]

At Lyons, the holy Confessor Eucherius, Bishop of that see, a man of wonderful faith and teaching. He was of the noblest of the Senatorial Order, and adopted the life and dress of a monk. For a long while he shut himself up in a cave, where he served Christ in fastings and prayers. He was called through the revelation of an angel to occupy the See of Lyons, and was therein solemnly placed. [He died about the year 450.]

At Padua, holy Fidentius, Bishop [of that see, in the year 168.]

On the same day, [in the year 759,] the holy Othmar, Abbat [of St Gall, in Switzerland.]

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 16.

St Edmund Rich, Archbishop [of Canterbury,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Edmund, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who in the abundance of Thy goodness towards Thy Church hast made her bright by the illustrious life of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Edmund, and gladdened her by his glorious and wondrous works, mercifully grant unto Thy servants, that they may be bettered in following after his ensample, and shielded by his protection against all things that may rise up against us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Gertrude from the Common Office, with Prayer from her Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Harpsfield's History, Thirteenth Cent.)

EDMUND Rich was born at Abingdon, and sent to the University of Oxford, where he excelled his fellows both in grace and learning. Thence he went to Paris, where he completed his studies, and became Doctor of Divinity with great distinction. He returned home and taught at Oxford, working meanwhile as a missionary in the country round about, and at last was forced by the common wish of all men, and against his own wishes and protests, to take the supreme dignity of Archbishop of Canterbury.

Fifth Lesson.

HE slept very little, and that, not in a bed, but either sitting or reclining, and for thirty-six years, only when overpowered by the weakness of nature; with such watching he joined extreme scantiness of food, and spent all the rest of his time in prayer, reading, and good works. He would neither touch money nor look at it, unless it were perchance what his hands were putting into those of the poor. He was very diligent in hearing confessions, and preached very often, neither was it his eloquence only but his holy character which moved his hearers.

---

[1] The Petits Bollandistes give 1334.

Sixth Lesson.

THE lines of Edmund fell in a time when the troubles of State and Church were alike great, and hardly to be believed. When he had exhausted his persuasion in vain upon the king, and found that his presence rather embittered than softened the evil state of things, he went to France that he might live at Pontigny alone with God. There he fell grievously sick, and when he had earnestly received the Sacraments of the Church to prepare himself for death, he happily fell asleep in the Lord at Soissons in the year 1242. Four years afterwards Pope Innocent IV. enrolled his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

The Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 17th day of November, were born into the better life—

In England, holy Hew, Bishop of Lincoln. He was a Charter House Monk, who was called to rule the Church of Lincoln, was famous for many miracles, and died an holy death, [in the year 1200.]

At Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, [about the year 270,] holy Gregory, Archbishop of that see, who was famous for teaching and holiness, and who came to be called the Wonder-worker, on account of the great signs and wonders which he worked to the great glory of the churches, whose feast we keep upon the 27th day of this present month of November.

In Palestine, the holy martyrs Alphæus and Zacchæus, who were put to death after suffering many torments, in the first year of the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Cordova, the holy brother and sister Acisclus and Victoria, both martyrs, who in the same persecution by Diocletian aforesaid, were most cruelly tortured by command of the President Dion, and earned crowns of glory from the hand of the Lord.

At Alexandria, holy Denys, Bishop [of that see,] a man of great learning, and glorious on account of his many confessions and his divers sufferings and torments, who at length fell asleep in the Lord, full of days but still a Confessor, in the time of the Emperors Valerian and Gallienus, [in the year 265.]

At Orleans, [in the year 453,] holy Anian, Bishop [of that see,] the preciousness of whose death, in the sight of the Lord, is attested by many miracles.

At Tours, [in the year 595,] holy Gregory, Bishop [of that see.]

At Florence, the holy Confessor Eugene, a Deacon of blessed Zenobius, Bishop of that see.

In Germany, [in the year 1334,] the holy Virgin Gertrude, of the Order of St Benedict, eminent for her gift of revelations, whose feast we have kept upon the 15th day of this present month.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 17.

St Hew, Bishop [of Lincoln,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Hew, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD, Who didst excellently ennoble Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Hew with eminent good works, and famous signs and wonders, mercifully grant that his ensample may quicken us, and his graces enlighten us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Edmund Rich from the Common Office, with Prayer from his own Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Adam.)

HEW was born at Burgundy, where he first became a regular monk, and then changed into the Order of the Charter House, where he excelled his fellows in godliness and obedience. Henry II., King of England, moved by the fame of his holiness, prevailed upon him to come into England, and afterwards, with the consent of the Canons, made him Bishop of Lincoln. But the man of God recoiled from such an election, and would not take the See until he had been elected again, and that time freely.

Fifth Lesson.

HIS first care after taking possession of his See was to call around him men of knowledge and wisdom, with whose counsel he manfully discharged the duties of a shepherd of souls. He would not have any to take charge of any of the flock, however they might be distinguished for industry or culture, unless they had the ornament of a quiet and modest spirit. He opposed by church censures the king's officers who practised cruelties upon the people, in regard to the forest laws.

Sixth Lesson.

RIGHT often had he to contend with King Richard, who strove to scrape money together from all quarters, and calmly disregarded his threats. He caused the body of Rosamond, leman of Henry II., to be taken out of the grave and buried outside the church, in an unhallowed place. He toiled much, and not without success, to re-establish peace between the Kings of England and France, and was returned from that work into England, when he fell sick in London, and having received the Sacraments of the Church, died a holy death in the Lord, in the year 1200. All the noblemen of England attended his funeral at Lincoln, and the Kings of England and Scotland.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 18th day of November is kept the feast of the Dedication of the two Cathedral Churches of St Peter and of St Paul at Rome. The Church of St Peter, after being rebuilt on a larger scale, was solemnly consecrated by Urban VIII. upon the 18th day of November [in the year 1626.] The Church of St Paul had been almost entirely destroyed by a lamentable fire, and was rebuilt in a more splendid manner, and consecrated anew by Pius IX. upon the 10th day of December; but he transferred the yearly feast of the Dedication thereof to the same day as that of the Church of St Peter.

Upon the same 18th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy martyr Romanus. In the time of the Emperor Galerius, when the Prefect Asclepiades was assailing the Church and seeking utterly to overthrow it, Romanus exhorted the other Christians to gainsay him. For this cause he was put to horrid torments, and his tongue was cut out; but thereafter he still uttered the praise of God. Then he was strangled in prison, and so was crowned by a famous martyrdom. Before him there suffered also the little lad Barula, who was asked by Romanus whether it were better to worship one God or many gods, and answered that we ought to believe in the one God whom the Christians worship; for the saying of the which thing he was first flogged and then beheaded.

Likewise at Antioch, [about the year 304,] the holy martyr Hesychius. He was a soldier, but when he heard the command that whosoever would not sacrifice to idols should cast away his military belt, he straightway took off his belt, for which cause a large stone was tied to his right hand, and he was thrown into the river.

On the same day, [in the fifth century,] the holy martyrs Oriculus and his Companions, who suffered for the Catholic faith in the persecution under the Vandals.

At Maintz, holy Maximus, Bishop of that see, who suffered many things from the Arians in the time of the Emperor Constantius, and died a Confessor.

At Tours, [in the year 942,] blessed Odo, Abbat of Cluny.

At Antioch, [about the year 782,] the holy monk Thomas, in whose honour the Antiochenes keep a solemn feast-day every year on account of a plague which was stayed by his prayers.

At Lucca, in Tuscany, is commemorated the finding, [in the year 800,] of the body of the holy Confessor Finnan, Bishop [of that see, a son of Ultach, King of Ulster.]

Vespers are of the following.

NOVEMBER 18.

Dedication of the Cathedral Churches of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, [at Rome.]

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for the Dedication of a Church, (p. 654,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

A Commemoration is made of St Hew of Lincoln. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Apocalypse of the Blessed Apostle John (xxi. 18.)

AND the building of the wall of it was of jasper; and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

Second Lesson.

AND the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl, and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the Temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

Third Lesson.

AND the nations shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it. There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie, but they which are written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

AMONG the hallowed places which have from of old time been held in honour among Christians, the most famous and sought after were those where the bodies of the Saints were buried, or where there was some trace or token of the Martyrs. Among these spots so hallowed hath been ever among the most noteworthy that place on the Vatican Hill which is called the Confession[1] of St Peter. Thither Christians do come from all parts of the earth as unto the rock[2] of faith and the foundation-stone of the Church, and surround with godly reverence and love the spot hallowed by the grave of the Prince of the Apostles.

---

[1] I.e., where his grave still seems silently to remind men of who he was and what he taught. So in Welsh, Merthyr Dyfan, &c.

[2] Petra—the usual play on "Kephas."

Fifth Lesson.

THITHER came the Emperor Constantine the Great upon the eighth day after his Baptism, and, taking off his crown, cast himself down upon the ground, and wept abundantly. Then presently he took a spade and pick-axe, and began to break up the earth, whereof he carried away twelve baskets-full in honour of the twelve Apostles, and built a Church upon that spot, appointed for the Cathedral Church of the Prince of the Apostles. This Church was hallowed by holy Pope Silvester upon the 18th day of November, in like manner as he had hallowed the Church of the Lateran upon the 9th day of the same month. In this Church did the Pope set up an altar of stone, and pour ointment thereon, and ordain that from thenceforth no altars should be set up, save of stone. The same Emperor Constantine likewise built a very stately Church upon the road to Ostia, in honour of the holy Apostle Paul, which Church also was hallowed by the blessed Silvester. These Churches the Emperor enriched by grants of much land, and adorned with exceedingly rich gifts.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Church of St Peter upon the Vatican fell in course of time to ruins, and having been rebuilt from the foundations, enlarged and garnished, by the zeal of many Popes, was solemnly consecrated anew by Urban VIII., upon the same day, in the year 1628. The Church of St Paul upon the road to Ostia was almost entirely consumed by fire in the year 1823, but was rebuilt in a more splendid form, and, as it were, raised from the dead, by the unwearied zeal of four successive Popes. In the year 1854 Pius IX. seized the happy occasion when the doctrine concerning the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary, which he had just set forth, had drawn together to Rome a great multitude of Cardinals and Bishops from all quarters of the Catholic world, solemnly to dedicate this new Church in their presence upon the 10th day of December in the year aforesaid; but he decreed that the yearly Feast in honour of that dedication should be kept upon this day, being the same as that of the Dedication of the Church of St Peter.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xix. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 660.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 19th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Marburg, in Germany, [in the year 1231,] the holy Widow Elizabeth, [Landgravine of Hesse and Thuringia,] of the third Order of St Francis, daughter of Andrew II., King of Hungary, busied without ceasing in works of mercy and famous for miracles.

On the same day, the holy martyr, Pope Pontian, who was exiled to Sardinia along with the Priest Hippolytus, under the Emperor Alexander, and was there cudgelled to death. His body was brought to Rome by blessed Pope Fabian, and buried in the cemetery of Kallistus.

At Samaria, the holy Prophet Obadiah.

At Rome, upon the Appian Way, the holy martyr Maximus, a Priest, who suffered in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, and was buried hard by holy Pope Xystus.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyr Barlaam. He was an unlettered peasant, but filled with the wisdom of Christ, and by the steadfastness of his faith conquered the tyrant [Diocletian] and his fire. Holy Basil the Great preached a famous sermon upon his feast-day.

In the city of Ecija, blessed Crispin, Bishop [of that see,] who was beheaded, and so won the glory of martyrdom.

At Vienne, in Gaul, [in the second century,] the holy martyrs Severinus, Exuperius, and Felician; after many years had passed they themselves revealed where their bodies were lying; the which, being so found, were honourably taken up by the Bishop, clergy, and people of that city, and buried again with due reverence.

Upon the same day, holy Faustus, a Deacon of Alexandria, who was first sent into exile along with holy Denys in the persecution under the Emperor Valerian, and afterwards in his old age was beheaded in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

In Isauria, under the Emperor Diocletian and the Tribune Aquilinus, the holy martyrs Azas and a hundred and fifty Companions, all soldiers.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Prayer from her Office. Then of the Holy Martyr Pope Pontian. Prayer, "Mercifully consider," &c., (p. 599.)

NOVEMBER 19.

St Elizabeth, [Landgravine of Hesse and Thuringia,] Widow.

Double.

All from the Common Office for an Holy Woman neither Martyr nor Virgin, (p. 649,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

ENLIGHTEN, O God of mercy, the hearts of Thy faithful people, and by the glorious prayers of Thy blessed handmaid Elizabeth, make us to set little store by the good things of this world, and to rejoice ever in Thy heavenly comfort. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ELIZABETH, daughter of Andrew II., King of Hungary, [was born in the year 1207.] She began to fear God even from a little child, and grew in grace as she grew in years.

[In her fourteenth year] she was married to Lewis, Landgrave of Hesse and Thuringia, and thenceforth gave herself up to the things of her husband, with as much zeal as to the things of God. She rose in the night to make long prayers. She consecrated herself to works of mercy. She waited continually on widows and orphans, the sick and the needy. When a sore famine came [in the year 1225,] she provided corn bountifully from her own house. She founded an house of refuge for lepers, and would even kiss their hands and feet. She built also a great hospital for the suffering and starving poor.

Fifth Lesson.

HER husband died [on his way to the Holy War, on the 11th day of September, 1227.] Then Elizabeth, more utterly to be God's only, laid aside all the garments of earthly state, clad herself in mean raiment, and entered the Third Order of St Francis, wherein she was a burning and shining light of long-suffering and lowliness. [Her brother-in-law] stripped her [and her three little children] of all their goods, and turned them out of their own house. She was deserted by all, and assailed with insults, gibes, and calumnies, but she bore it all with patience, yea, even rejoicing that she suffered such things for God's sake. She gave herself to the meanest services toward the poor and sick, and sought for them the needfuls of life, while she lived herself only on potherbs and vegetables.

Sixth Lesson.

IN these and many other holy works she prayerfully passed the rest of her life, till [in the twenty-fourth year of her age,] the end of her earthly pilgrimage came, as she had already foretold to her servants. With her eyes fixed on heaven, absorbed in the thought of God, by Him wondrously comforted, and strengthened by the Sacraments, she fell asleep in the Lord, [upon the 19th day of November, in the year of salvation 1231.] Forthwith many miracles were wrought at her grave, which being known and duly proved, Gregory IX. numbered her name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.) The last is omitted, or joined with the Eighth, to leave room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Pope Pontian.)

PONTIAN was a Roman, who ruled the Church in the reign of the Emperor Alexander. This Emperor banished him into the Island of Sardinia, along with the Priest Hippolytus, on account of their profession of the Christian faith. There he endured many hardships because of his belief in Christ, and departed this life upon the 19th day of November, [in the year of our Lord 235.] His body was brought to Rome by Pope Fabian and his clergy, and buried in the cemetery of Kallistus, upon the Appian Way. He sat in the seat of Peter four years, four months, and twenty-five days. He held two Ordinations in the month of December, wherein he made six Priests, five Deacons, and six Bishops for divers places.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the holy Martyr.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 20th day of November, were born into the better life—

In England, the holy martyr Edmund, King of the East Angles.

At Messina, in Sicily, the holy martyrs Ampelus and Caius.

At Turin, the holy martyrs Octavius, Solutor, and Adventor, soldiers of the Theban legion, who contended gloriously under the Emperor Maximian, and were crowned with martyrdom.

At Cæsarea, in Palestine, the holy martyr Agapius, who was condemned to the wild beasts under the Emperor Galerius Maximian; but as they did not hurt him, he was sunk in the sea with stones tied to his feet.

In Persia, the holy martyrs the Bishop Nerses and his Companions.

At Dorostorum, in Mysia, holy Dasius, Bishop [of that see,] who was beheaded under the President Bassus, because he would not join in the uncleanliness of the Feast of Saturn.

At Nice, in Bithynia, in the persecution under Maximinus, the holy martyrs Eustace, Thespesius, and Anatolius.

At Heraclea, in Thrace, the holy martyrs Bassus, Denys, Agapitus, and forty others.

At Constantinople, holy Gregory of Decapolis, who suffered many things for honouring the holy images.

At Milan, [in the fifth century,] holy Benignus, Bishop [of that see,] who, in the midst of all the troubles caused by the incoming of the barbarians, ministered in all steadfastness and godliness unto the Church committed to his care.

At Chalons, [in the sixth century,] holy Sylvester, Bishop [of that see,] who passed away to be ever with the Lord, full of days and graces, in the forty-second year of his priesthood.

At Verona, [likewise in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Simplicius, Bishop [of that see.]

Vespers of the following.

NOVEMBER 20.

St Edmund, King of the East Angles, Martyr.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout. (Taken from the Salisbury Missal.)

O GOD of unspeakable mercy, Who didst give power unto the most blessed King Edmund to prevail over the enemy by dying for Thy name's sake, mercifully grant unto this Thy family, with the help of his prayers, worthily to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Elizabeth. Prayer from her Office.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603,) with Responsories from the Common of One Martyr.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Asserius' Annals.)

EDMUND was born of the noble race of the old Saxons; he was a Christian worshipper from his early youth, and was chosen King of the East Angles by the voice of all his fellow-countrymen. It is not in us to say how good he was toward his subjects, and how stern toward evil doers. He went straight along the King's highway, neither turning aside to the right hand by puffing himself up with his own good deeds, nor to the left hand by yielding to the weakness of man's frailty.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Hinguar, Duke of the heathens of the north, came into East Anglia, and the country-folk could not withstand the spoilers, he took King Edmund out of his kingly town of Hoxton, and when he had set him before him, he commanded him to forswear the Christian faith. When he would not, they bound him to a certain tree and most direfully hided him with many stripes, but neither the keenness of the torture nor the threats of the tormentors could change his will.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN the savages saw it, they became as it were mad, and pierced the King's whole body with arrows, making breach upon breach. He was still alive when they haled him away from the bloody stock, and a headsman struck off his head at one blow. Holy Edmund offered himself up to God as a burnt offering of a sweet savour upon the 20th day of November, and crowned with martyrdom the dying of the Lord JESUS, which he had so eminently borne in his body.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples, Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. on Matth. x.)

He had said above (27,) "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light, and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops." And now He telleth what will follow such preaching. The faith of Christ set the whole world at variance, the believers and the unbelievers dwelt in one house, but it was a good thing that war should be made to break a bad peace. This is as we read in Genesis that evil men journeyed from the East and were fain to build a tower whose top should reach unto heaven, and God came down and divided their tongues.

Eighth Lesson.

"FOR I am come to set a man at variance against his father." This place is almost the same as that in Micah (vii. 5, 6,) and we should take notice, whenever a place is brought forward out of the Old Testament, whether it be the sense only or the words that be the same.

"He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me." He had said before, "I came not to send peace, but a sword, for I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law." And having thus warned any against setting natural affection before religious belief, He saith now, "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me." In the Song of Songs, it is written: "He established His love upon me," (ii. 4,) and this order is in all things needful, love God, and after Him, father, and mother, and children.

Ninth Lesson.

IT is a very noble order. He sendeth them forth to preach; He teacheth them not to fear dangers, but to place their feelings below their faith; before He had cut off gold from them, He had forbidden them to carry even brass in their purses (9.) The state of the Apostles was hard, whence were they to live or eat? But the sternness of His commandments is softened by the hope of His promises, "He that receiveth you, receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me, receiveth Him that sent Me." So that every believer, when he receiveth an Apostle, may feel that he is receiving Christ.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Feast of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God, in the Temple at Jerusalem.

Upon the same 21st day of November, were born into the better life—

Holy Rufus, touching whom the holy Apostle Paul writeth unto the Romans.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Celsus and Clement.

At Ostia, the holy martyrs Demetrius and Honorius.

At Rheims, [in the year 1192,] the holy martyr Albert, Bishop of Liege, who was slain for defending the freedom of the Church.

In Spain, the holy martyrs Honorius, Eutychius, and Stephen.

In Pamphylia, under the President Aetius, in the persecution under the Emperor Aurelian, the holy martyr Heliodorus, by whom his very torturers were converted to the faith: for the which cause they were drowned in the sea.

At Rome, holy Pope Gelasius, famous for his teaching and holiness.

At Verona, the holy Confessor Maurus, Bishop [of that see.]

At the monastery of Bobbio, deceased the holy Abbat Columbanus, the founder of many monasteries, and the Father of many monks, who fell asleep in a good old age, bright with many graces.

At Second Vespers a Commemoration is made of the following. Antiphons, &c., and Prayer as below.

NOVEMBER 21.

Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Blessed Mary, Mother of God, Virgin for ever, temple of the Lord, sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, thou, without any ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased that the blessed Mary always a Virgin, being herself the dwelling-place of the Holy Ghost, should, as on this day, be presented in Thine earthly Temple, grant, we beseech Thee, that by her prayers we may worthily be presented in the heavenly Temple of Thy glory. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Prov. viii. 12, as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "Upon the Orthodox Faith," written by St John of Damascus. (Bk. iv. chap. 15.)

JOACHIM took to wife that most eminent and praiseworthy woman, Anne. And even as the antient Hannah, being stricken with barrenness, by prayer and promise became the mother of Samuel, so likewise this woman also through prayer and promise received from God the Mother of God, that in fruitfulness she might not be behind any of the famous matrons. And thus "grace" (for such is the signification of the name of Anne) is mother of the "Lady" (for such is the signification of the name of Mary.[1]) And indeed she became the Lady of every creature, since she hath been mother of the Creator. She first saw the light in Joachim's house, hard by the Pool of Bethesda, at Jerusalem, and was carried to the Temple. There planted in the Lord, the dew of His Spirit made her to flourish in the courts of her God, and like a green olive she became a tree, so that all the doves of grace came and lodged in her branches. And so she raised her mind utterly above the lust of life and the lust of the flesh, and kept her soul virgin in her virgin body, as became her that was to receive God into her womb.

Fifth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book "Upon Virgins," written by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (ii.)

SUCH was Mary that her single life offereth an ensample to all. If then the doer displease us not, let us applaud the deed; if any other woman seek like reward, let her follow after like works. In the one Virgin how many glorious examples do shine forth. Her's was the hidden treasure of modesty, her's the high standard of faith, her's the self-sacrifice of earnestness, her's to be the pattern of maidenhood at home, of kinswomanhood in ministry, of motherhood in the Temple. O to how many virgins hath she been helpful, how many hath she taken in her arms and presented unto the Lord, saying: Here is one who, [like me,] hath kept stainlessly clean the wedding-chamber, the marriage-bed of my Son!

Sixth Lesson.

WHY should I go on to speak of the scantiness of her eating, or of the multiplicity of her work? how her labour seemed above human capacity, and her refreshment insufficient for human strength, her toil never missing a moment, her fasting taking two days together. And when she was fain to eat, she took not dainties, but whatsoever food came first to hand that would keep body and soul together. She would not sleep till need was, and even then, while her body rested, her soul watched, for she often talked in her sleep, either repeating things that she had read, or going on with what she was doing before sleep interrupted her, or rehearsing things executed, or talking of things projected.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xi. 27, with the Homily of the Venerable Bede, (p. 638.)

In the Verse of the Seventh Responsory is said, "Keeping this Feast of thine holy Presentation."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 22nd day of November, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Virgin and martyr Cecily. She brought her husband Valerian and his brother Tiburtius to believe in Christ, and nerved them to suffer martyrdom. After their martyrdom, Almachius, Prefect of the city under the Emperor Marcus Aurelius Severus Alexander, caused her to be arrested, and, after she had overcome fire, gloriously to finish her sufferings with the sword.

At Colossæ, in Phrygia, the holy martyrs Philemon and Apphia, the disciples of the holy Apostle Paul, [unto whom he addressed an Epistle.] During the reign of the Emperor Nero, the Gentiles broke into the Church upon the feast day of Diana. The rest of the faithful escaped, but these were taken, and by command of the President Artocles they were flogged, buried up to the middle, and stoned to death.

Likewise, at Rome, the holy martyr Maurus, who came from Africa to visit the graves of the Apostles, and suffered under the Emperor Numerian, and the Prefect of the city, Celerinus.

At Antioch, in Pisidia, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian, the holy martyrs Mark and Stephen.

At Autun, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Pragmatius, Bishop [of that see.]

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as at First Vespers.

A Commemoration is made of the following.

Antiphon. Valerian! there is a secret which I wish to tell thee. I have an Angel of God for a lover, and he is very jealous to keep my body.

Prayer from Lauds.

---

[1] This is opposed to other passages in the Breviary. See Sunday after Sept. 8.

NOVEMBER 22.

St Cecily, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Maiden Cecily overcame Almachius, and called Tiburtius and Valerian to crowns.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Ruler, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. She spread forth her hands and prayed unto the Lord, that He would deliver her from her enemies.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. Cecily brought under her body with haircloth, and besought God with loud crying.

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Lessons from I Cor. vii. 25, as in the Common.

First Responsory.

The musicians played, and the maiden Cecily sang in her heart unto the Lord alone, saying: Lord, let my heart and my body be undefiled, that I be not ashamed.
Verse. She fasted and prayed for two days and three days together, committing the cause of her fear unto the Lord.
Answer. Lord, let my heart and my body be undefiled, that I be not ashamed.

Second Responsory.

O Blessed Cecily, thou didst convert the two brethren, but thou didst overcome Almachius the judge; thou didst point out Urban the Bishop, by this, that his face was as the face of an Angel.
Verse. Busy like a bee, thou didst serve the Lord.
Answer. Thou didst point out Urban the Bishop, by this, that his face was as the face of an Angel.

Third Responsory.

The glorious maiden carried the Gospel of Christ always in her breast, and meditated therein day and night, talking with God and praying.
Verse. She spread forth her hands and prayed unto the Lord, and her heart was enkindled with fire from heaven.
Answer. Talking with God and praying.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Talking with God and praying.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O Lord JESUS Christ, Who hast said of abstaining from marriage, "He that is able to receive it, let him receive it," accept now the fruits from this seed, which Thou didst sow in the heart of Cecily.

Ps. xliv. My heart is overflowing, &c., (p. 54.)

Second Antiphon. Blessed Cecily said unto Tiburtius: To-day I call thee my brother, for the love of God hath made thee to cast away idols.

Ps. xlv. God is our refuge, &c., (p. 55.)

Third Antiphon. Lord, let my heart and my body be undefiled, that I be not ashamed.

Ps. xlvii. Great is the LORD, &c., (p. 55.)

Fourth Lesson.

CECILY was a Roman maiden of noble birth, trained up from her earliest years in the teaching of the Christian faith, and who by vow consecrated her virginity to God. She was afterwards given in marriage, against her will, to Valerian. On the first night she said to him: Valerian! I am under the wardship of an Angel, who keepeth me always a maiden. Therefore do nothing unto me, lest the anger of God should be aroused against thee. Valerian was moved at her words, and dared not to touch her. Also he added even this, that he would believe in Christ, if he could see the Angel. Cecily answered him that that could not be unless he were first baptized, and for the sake of seeing the Angel he was willing. So she bade him go unto Pope Urban, who was hiding in the sepulchre of the Martyrs on the Appian Way on account of the persecution. And he went unto him and was baptized.

Fourth Responsory.

Cecily brought her body under with haircloth, and besought God with loud crying, and called Tiburtius and Valerian to crowns.
Verse. This is one of the wise virgins, one chosen out of the number of the prudent.
Answer. And called Tiburtius and Valerian to crowns.

Fifth Lesson.

THENCE he came back to Cecily, and found her praying, and the Angel with her, shining from the glory of God. As soon as he had recovered from the shock of wonder and fear, he brought his brother Tiburtius, and Cecily taught him Christ, and he was baptized by the same Pope Urban, and he also was vouchsafed to see the Angel whom his brother had seen. A little while after, both of them bravely suffered martyrdom under the Præfect Almachius, who then caused Cecily to be taken, and asked of her, first of all, where was the property of Tiburtius and Valerian?

Fifth Responsory.

He found Cecily praying in her chamber, and standing by her the Angel of the Lord. And when Valerian saw him, he feared with a great fear.
Verse. The Angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and a light shone in all the house.
Answer. And when Valerian saw him, he feared with a great fear.

Sixth Lesson.

TO him the Virgin answered that all their goods had been given to the poor. Thereupon he was filled with fury, and commanded her to be taken home, and burnt in the bath. She was in that place a day and a night, but the fire had not harmed her. Then was sent the executioner, who gave her three strokes of the axe, and, as he could not cut off her head, left her half-dead. Three days thereafter, upon the 22nd day of November, in the reign of the Emperor Alexander Severus, she winged her flight for heaven, glorified with the two palms of virginity and martyrdom. Her body was buried in the cemetery of Kallistus by the aforenamed Pope Urban, who also consecrated a Church in her name in her own house. Her reliques were brought into the city by Pope Paschal I., along with those of Tiburtius, Valerian, and Maximus, and all laid together in the said Church of St Cecily.

Sixth Responsory.

O Lord Jesus Christ, the Good Shepherd, Who hast said of abstaining from marriage, "He that is able to receive it, let him receive it," accept now the fruits from this seed, which Thou didst sow in the heart of Cecily. Busy like a bee, Thine handmaiden Cecily served Thee.

Verse. For her husband, who was like a raging lion when she took him, she sent unto Thee meek as the meekest of lambs.

Answer. Busy like a bee, Thine handmaiden Cecily served Thee.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Busy like a bee, Thine handmaiden Cecily served Thee.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Christ, the Son of God, Who hath chosen unto Himself such an handmaiden, Him we believe to be the true God.

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the Lord, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. We that have known His Holy Name can by no means deny Him.

Ps. xcvi. The Lord reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Then Valerian went his way, and found the holy Urban, by the sign which had been given him.

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the Lord, &c., (p. 89.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 1.)

AT that time: Jesus spake unto His disciples this parable: The kingdom of heaven shall be likened unto ten virgins, who took their lamps and went forth to meet the Bridegroom and the Bride. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Hom. 79 on Matth.)

Wherefore doth the Lord set forth this parable under the figure of virgins, and not make it of acceptation for all men? He had spoken great things touching virginity, saying: "There be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." (Matth. xix. 12.) He knew also that virginity is a thing which is held in great honour among men, being indeed a thing higher than nature, as is plain from this, that under the Old Testament even the Patriarchs and Saints did not practise it, and that under the New Testament it is not enjoined by any commandment of necessity; for the Lord did not make it binding, but left it open to the free choice of the faithful. Whence also Paul saith: "Concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord; yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful. I suppose therefore that this is good for the present distress, that it is good for a man so to be. But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned, and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned." (1 Cor. vii. 25, 26, 28.)

Seventh Responsory.

Blessed Cecily said unto Tiburtius: To-day I call thee my brother, for the love of God hath made thee to cast away idols.

Verse. For even as the love of God hath made thy brother to be my husband, so the same hath made thee to be my brother, [and]

Answer. To cast away idols.

Eighth Lesson.

VIRGINITY then, being a thing in itself so great and so much esteemed among many, lest any man having attained unto it, and kept it undefiled, should think that he hath done all, and so leave the rest undone, the Lord putteth forth this parable, in order to show that if virginity, though it have all else, lack mercy, its owner will but have his portion without among the fornicators, among whom Christ doth justly place the heartless and pitiless celibate. The fornicator is entangled in lust after bodies, the other in lust after money. The lust for bodies and the lust for money are two very different things, whereof the fleshly is by far the keener and the stubborner appetite. They that strive with the weaker enemy are therefore much less excusable if they fall. Wherefore the Lord hath called such virgins "foolish," for having first won the stern battle, and then been destroyed in the light one.

Eighth Responsory.

Cecily hath sent me unto you, that ye may show me the holy Bishop, for unto him I have a secret message to deliver.

Verse. Then Valerian went his way, and found the holy Urban by the sign which had been given him.

Answer. For unto him I have a secret message to deliver.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For unto him I have a secret message to deliver.

Ninth Lesson.

BY the "lamps" spoken of in this parable, the Lord signifieth the actual gift of virginity and holy continency, and by the "oil" gentleness, almsgiving, and helpfulness toward the needy.

"While the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept."

His disciples hoped that His kingdom was to come forthwith. To call them away from this hope, to lead them away from this thought, He showeth them the time of waiting for the Bridegroom to be no very short one.

"They all slumbered and slept."

He calleth death a sleep.

"And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet Him."

This "at midnight" is either a continuation of the parable [and so signifieth the awaking of the dead,] or else meaneth that the again-rising to come will actually take place in the night. Of the "cry" Paul also maketh mention, where he saith: "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God." (1 Thess. iv. 16.)

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. The musicians played, and Cecily sang unto the Lord, * saying: Let my heart be undefiled, that I be not ashamed.

Second Antiphon. Valerian found Cecily praying in her chamber, * and with her the Angel.

Third Antiphon. Busy like a bee, * O Lord, did Thine handmaiden Cecily serve Thee.

Fourth Antiphon. I bless Thee, O Father of my Lord JESUS Christ, * that through Thy Son the fire is gone out round about me.

Fifth Antiphon. I have asked the Lord for three days, * that I may consecrate my house as a Church.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. As dawn was fading into day, Cecily cried and said: Arise, O soldiers of Christ, cast away the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who year by year dost gladden Thy people by the solemn feast of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Cecily, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, not only devoutly to observe the same, but also to follow after the pattern of her godly conversation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, the Antiphons are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds, respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 23rd day of November, were born into the better life—

The holy Pope Clement, he was the third, after the blessed Apostle Peter, who held the Papacy. In the persecution under the Emperor Trajan he was sent to the Crimea, where he was sunk in the sea with an anchor tied to his neck, and so received the crown of martyrdom. In the time of Pope Nicholas I. his body was brought to Rome and honourably buried in the church which had already been built in his name.

Likewise, at Rome, the holy martyr Felicity,[1] mother of seven sons, who were all likewise martyrs. After they had suffered, the Emperor Mark Antonine commanded her also to be beheaded for Christ's sake.

At Merida, in Spain, the holy Virgin and martyr Lucretia, who suffered martyrdom under the President Dacian, in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian.

At Cyzicus, on the Hellespont, the holy martyr Sisinius, who was slain with the sword, after suffering many torments, during the same persecution.

At Iconium, in Lycaonia, holy Amphilochius, Bishop [of that see,] the fellow of holy Basil and Gregory of Nazianzus, in the desert and in the Episcopate. He went through many contendings for the Catholic faith's sake, but fell asleep at length in peace, famous for holiness and teaching.

At Girgenti, in Sicily, [at the end of the sixth century,] deceased holy Gregory, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Hesbaye, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Trudo, the Priest.

At Mantua, blessed John Boni, of the Order of Hermits of Saint Austin, whose illustrious life hath been written by holy Antonine.

VESPERS.

The Office is of St Cecily till the Chapter, with Antiphons from Lauds; from the Chapter, inclusive, of the following.

NOVEMBER 23.

St Clement, Pope and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St Clement, these usually begin with the Chapter, but if from the beginning, the Antiphons are taken from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Let us all pray our Lord JESUS Christ to open a spring for those that own His Name.

Prayer throughout the Office. "O God, Who year by year, &c." (p. 599,) but ending, "may copy that manly strength which he showed under his sufferings. Through our Lord, &c."

A Commemoration is made of St Cecily.

Antiphon. The glorious maiden carried the Gospel of Christ always in her breast, and rested neither day nor night from talking with God and praying.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Prayer from her Office.

Then of the Holy Martyr Felicity.

Antiphon. The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearls, who, when he had found one pearl of great price, gave all that he had and bought it.

Verse. In thy comeliness and thy beauty.

Answer. Go forward, fare prosperously, and reign.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that in calling to mind the awful victory of Thy blessed Martyr Felicity, we may find shelter both for her sake and in her prayers.

[1] See July 10.

Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Acts xx. 17, (p. 594.)

First Responsory.

While Holy Clement was at prayer, there appeared unto him the Lamb of God, with the river of the water of life proceeding from under His Feet, even that river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God.

Verse. And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount—

Answer. With the river of the water of life proceeding from under His Feet, even that river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God.

Second Responsory.

They all said with one voice: Holy Clement, pray for us, that we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Verse. For no worthiness of mine own hath the Lord sent me unto you, to become a partaker in your crowns.

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Third Responsory.

Lord, Thou hast given unto Thy Martyr Clement a tabernacle in the sea, after the fashion of a temple of marble, builded by the hands of Angels. And Thou givest a way thither unto the people on the land, that they may tell of Thy marvellous works.

Verse. Lord, Thou didst give unto Thy Saints a way in the sea, and a path through the mighty waters.

Answer. And Thou gavest a way thither unto the people on the land, that they may tell of Thy marvellous works.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And Thou gavest a way thither unto the people on the land, that they may tell of Thy marvellous works.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CLEMENT, the son of Faustinus, was a Roman, from the quarter of the Cœlian Mount. He was a disciple of the blessed Peter, and is the same concerning whom Paul saith, writing to the Philippians: "And I entreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the Gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, whose names are written in the book of life." (iv. 3.) [He succeeded Cletus as Bishop of Rome.] He it was who divided the seven quarters of the city among seven scribes, one to each, whose duty it was to search out most carefully, and record in writing the sufferings and acts of the Martyrs. He himself also wrote much, and that most orthodox and healthy, whereby he clearly explained the Christian Religion.

Fifth Lesson.

HIS teaching and the holiness of his life brought many to believe in Christ, and he was therefore exiled by the Emperor Trajan to Kherson, in the Crimea, where he found two thousand Christians, who had been condemned by the same Trajan. There they all worked in the marble quarries. During their labour they suffered for want of water, and Clement prayed, and then went up an hill hard by, on the top whereof he saw a Lamb standing, touching with its right foot a flowing spring of sweet waters. Therewith they all quenched their thirst, and by this miracle many unbelievers were brought to believe in Christ, and began to honour the holiness of Clement.

Sixth Lesson.

THESE things moved Trajan to send a messenger to the Crimea, who tied an anchor about Clement's neck, and cast him into the deep of the sea. After it had been done, while the Christians were praying on the shore, the sea went back three miles, and when they followed it, they found a grotto of marble, in form like a temple, and therein a stone coffin wherein was laid the body of the Martyr, and, hard by, the anchor wherewith he had been sunk. Then were the country people moved to receive the faith of Christ. The body of Clement was afterwards brought to Rome, in the time of Pope Nicholas I., and buried in his own Church. A Church was also built in the Crimea, in the place where God had made the water to break forth. Clement lived as Pope nine years, six months, and six days. He held two Ordinations in the month of December, wherein he made ten Priests, two Deacons, and fifteen Bishops for divers places.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.) The last is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, in order to make room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Felicity.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (3rd Hom. on the Gospels.)

THAT blessed woman Felicity, whose Birth-feast we are keeping to-day, had as much dread of leaving her seven sons living after her in the flesh, as have carnal-minded mothers of seeing them go dead before them. When she was taken in the strong pains of persecution, she braced up the hearts of her children by bidding them cleave to the Fatherland above, and became their mother for the spiritual, as she had aforetime been for the fleshly life, bringing them forth for God by her exhortation, as she had brought them forth for the world by her body. And shall I not call this woman a Martyr? Nay, more than Martyr. The seven whom she trusted to God were seven children sent before her to death. She suffered first and triumphed last.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. While holy Clement was at prayer, * there appeared unto him the Lamb of God.

Second Antiphon. For no worthiness of mine own hath the Lord sent me unto you, * to become a partaker in your crowns.

Third Antiphon. And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount, * with the river of the water of life proceeding from under His Feet.

Fourth Antiphon. With the river of the water of life proceeding from under His Feet, * even that river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God.

Fifth Antiphon. All the Gentiles that were round about believed * in the Lord Christ.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. As he began to move toward the sea, the people cried out with a loud voice: O Lord JESUS Christ, deliver him! And Clement wept, and said: Father, receive my spirit!

A Commemoration is made of St Felicity.

Antiphon. Give her of the fruit of her hands, and let her own works praise her in the gates.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Prayer as at First Vespers.

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth from Lauds respectively.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the holy Confessor John of the Cross, of whom mention is made upon the 14th day of December.

Upon the same 24th day of November, were born into the better life—

The holy martyr Chrysogonus, who long endured bonds and imprisonment for his steadfast confession of Christ, but was at length brought to Aquileia by command of Diocletian, and was there beheaded, whereafter his body was cast into the sea, and so he finished his testimony.

At Rome, the holy martyr Crescentian, of whom record is made in the history of the last sufferings of the blessed Pope Marcellus.

At Amelia, in Umbria, the holy Virgin and martyr Firmina; in the persecution under the Emperor Diocletian she was put to divers torments, but was at length hung up and burnt with lamps, until she gave up the ghost.

At Corinth, under the Emperor Julian the Apostate and the President Sallust, the holy martyr Alexander, who fought for Christ's faith even unto death.

At Cordova, the holy Virgins and martyrs Flora and Mary, who were long imprisoned, and then slain with the sword, in the persecution under the Arabs.

At Perugia, the holy martyr Felicissimus.

At Milan, holy Protasius, Bishop [of that see,] who defended the cause of Athanasius before the Emperor Constans in the Council of Sardica, and passed away to be ever with the Lord, worn out by many toils for the sake of religion and of the Church committed to his care.

At Blaye, [in the fourth century,] the holy Priest Romanus, the praise of whose holiness is proclaimed by the glory of his miracles.

In Auvergne, [in the sixth century,] holy Portian, Abbat [of Mirande,] who was famous for miracles, under King Theodoric.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons from Lauds.

At the Chapter begins the Office of St John of the Cross.

NOVEMBER 24.

St John of the Cross, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

As regards St John, these begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst work in Thine holy Confessor John that he utterly denied himself, and in great love took up his Cross and excellently followed Thee, grant that we may so take ensample by him as finally to attain as he hath, unto Thine everlasting glory. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Clement.

Antiphon. Lord, Thou hast given unto Thy Martyr Clement a tabernacle in the sea, after the fashion of a temple of marble, builded by the hands of Angels. And Thou givest a way thither unto the people on the land, that they may tell of Thy marvellous works.

Verse. The righteous shall flourish like a palm-tree.

Answer. He shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

Prayer from his Office.

Then of the holy Martyr Chrysogonus. Antiphon and Verse and Answer from the Common Office for One Martyr.

Prayer.

GIVE ear, O Lord, unto our prayers, and grant that we who acknowledge ourselves guilty through our own iniquity, may be delivered at the petition of Thy blessed Martyr Chrysogonus. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN of the Cross was born of godly parents at Fontibere, [near Avila,] in Spain, [in the year of our Lord 1542.] It began soon to appear that he was foreordained to be an acceptable servant unto the Virgin Mother of God. At five years of age he fell into a well, but the hand of the Mother of God took him up, and saved him from all hurt. So burning was his desire to suffer that when he was nine years old he gave up any softer bed, and used to lie on potsherds. In his youth he devoted himself as a servant in the hospital for the sick poor at Medina del Campo, and embraced with eager charity the meanest offices there, his readiness likewise exciting others to imitate him. [In 1563] he obeyed the call to higher things, and entered the Order of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel, wherein, by command of his Superiors, he received Priest's Orders. By their leave and his own strong desire for the sternest discipline and the strictest life, he adopted the primitive Rule. Full of the memory of what our Lord suffered, he declared war against himself as his own worst enemy, and carried it on by depriving himself of sleep and food, by iron chains, by whips, and by every kind of self-torture. And in a little while he had crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts thereof. He was indeed worthy that holy Theresa should say of him that he was one of the purest and holiest souls by whom God was then enlightening His Church.

Fifth Lesson.

THE strange hardness of his life, and the might of his graces, joined to the unceasing concentration of his mind on God, had the effect of oftentimes subjecting him to daily and extraordinary trances. So burning was his love of God that the fire sometimes could not be kept bound within, and brake forth, so that his face shone. The salvation of his neighbours was one of his dearest longings, and he was unwearied in preaching the Word of God, and in administering the Sacraments. As strong in so many good works, and glowing with zeal to make discipline harder, he was given by God to be an helpmeet to holy Theresa, and he aided her to set up again the primitive observance among the brethren of the Order of Mount Carmel, as she had already done among the sisters. In doing God's work, he and God's handmaid together went through toils that cannot be numbered. No discomforts or dangers held him back from going throughout all Spain to visit all and each of the convents which the care of that holy Virgin had founded, and in them, and in very many others erected by her means for spreading the renewed observance, he strengthened it by his word and ensample. He is indeed worthy to be reckoned second only to the holy Theresa as a professor and founder of the Order of bare-footed Carmelites.

Sixth Lesson.

HE remained throughout all his life a clean maid, and when some shameless women tried to beguile his modesty, he not only foiled them, but gained them for Christ. In the judgment of the Apostolic See he was as much taught of God as was holy Theresa, for explaining God's hidden mysteries, and he wrote books of mystical theology filled with heavenly wisdom. Christ once asked him what reward he would have for so much work; whereto he answered: "Lord, that I may suffer, and be disesteemed for Thy sake." He was very famous for his power over devils, whom he oftentimes scared out of men's bodies, for discerning of spirits, for the gift of prophecy, and for eminent miracles. He was extraordinarily lowly, and oftentimes entreated of the Lord that he might die in some place where he was unknown. In accordance with his prayer, [he was sent] to Ubeda, [where for three months the Prior imprisoned and cruelly ill-used him during his last sickness.] To crown his love of suffering, he bore uncomplainingly five open sores in his leg, running with water. [At last, upon the 14th day of December,] in the year 1591, being the day, and at the hour foretold by himself, after having in godly and holy wise received the Sacraments of the Church, hugging [the image of] that crucified Saviour of Whom his heart and his mouth had been used to be full, he uttered the words: "Into Thy hands I commend my spirit," and fell asleep in the Lord. As his soul passed away it was received into a glorious cloud of fire. His body yielded a right sweet savour, and is still uncorrupt where it lieth, held in great honour, at Segovia. He was famous for very many miracles both before and since his death, and Pope Benedict XIII. numbered his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xii. 35, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 625.) The last is omitted or read as one with the Eighth, to leave room for the

Ninth Lesson. (For the Holy Martyr Chrysogonus.)

CHRYSOGONUS was imprisoned at Rome in the reign of the Emperor Diocletian. There he lived for the space of two years upon the alms of the holy Anastasia. She was suffering much persecution from her husband Publius for Christ's Name's sake, and was used to write to Chrysogonus to ask for the help of his prayers, and he in return comforted her by his epistles. Presently the Emperor wrote to Rome commanding the rest of the Christians who were in prison there to be put to death, and Chrysogonus to be sent to himself at Aquileia. When he was brought thither, he said unto him: I have sent for thee, O Chrysogonus, that I may increase thine honours, if only thou wilt bring thy mind to worship the gods. Thereto Chrysogonus answered: With my mind and with my prayers I worship Him Who is God indeed, but such gods as are nothing but images of devils, them I hate and curse. Then was the Emperor kindled to fury at this answer, and commanded Chrysogonus to be beheaded at Aquæ Gradatæ upon the 24th day of November. His body was cast into the sea, but found a little while afterwards washed up upon the shore, and the Priest Zoïlus took it and buried it in his own house.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made of the Holy Martyr. Prayer as before.

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 25th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Alexandria, the holy Virgin and martyr Katharine. On account of her confession of the Christian faith, she was cast into prison under the Emperor

Maximinus. She was long flogged with loaded scourges, and at length beheaded. Her body was in wondrous wise carried by angels[1] to Mount Sinai, where it is devoutly honoured by the pilgrimages of multitudes of Christians.

At Rome, the holy martyr Moses, a Priest, who was among those whom holy Cyprian oftentimes comforted by his letters while they were kept in prison. He contended manfully not only against the Gentiles, but also against the schismatics and Novatian heretics. At length, as is attested by holy Pope Cornelius, he was crowned with an eminent martyrdom in the persecution under the Emperor Decius.

At Antioch, the holy martyr Erasmus.

At Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, the holy martyr Mercury. He was a soldier, who, by the help of his Guardian Angel, overcame the barbarians and the cruelty of the Emperor Decius, and passed away to heaven crowned with a martyrdom adorned by victory over many torments.

In the province of Æmilia, the holy Virgin Jucunda.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 25.

St Katharine, Virgin and Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who didst give the Law unto Moses upon the top of Mount Sinai, and there didst cause the body of Thy blessed Virgin and Martyr Katharine to be marvellously laid by Thine holy Angels, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, for her sake and at her prayers, that we may finally attain unto that mountain which is Christ. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Katharine was a noble maiden of Alexandria, who from her earliest years joined the study of the liberal arts with fervent faith, and in a short while came to such an height of holiness and learning, that when she was eighteen years of age she prevailed over the chiefest wits. When she saw many diversely tormented and haled to death by command of Maximin, because they professed the Christian religion, she went boldly unto him and rebuked him for his savage cruelty, bringing forward likewise most sage reasons why the faith of Christ should be needful for salvation.

Fifth Lesson.

MAXIMIN marvelled at her wisdom, and bade keep her, while he gathered together the most learned men from all quarters and offered them great rewards if they would confute Katharine and bring her from believing in Christ to worship idols. But the event fell contrariwise, for many of the philosophers who had come to dispute with her were overcome by the force and skill of her reasoning, so that the love of Christ JESUS was kindled in them, and they were content even to die for His sake. Then did Maximin strive to beguile Katharine with fair words and promises, and when he found it was lost pains, he caused her to be hided, and bruised with lead-laden whips, and so cast into prison, and neither meat nor drink given to her for the space of eleven days.

Sixth Lesson.

AT that time Maximin's wife and Porphyry the Captain of his host, went to the prison to see the damsel, and at her preaching believed in JESUS Christ, and were afterwards crowned with martyrdom. Then was Katharine brought out of ward, and a wheel was set, wherein were fastened many and sharp blades, so that her virgin body might thereby be most direfully cut and torn in pieces, but in a little while, as Katharine prayed, this machine was broken in pieces, at the which marvel many believed in Christ. But Maximin was hardened in his godlessness and cruelty, and commanded to behead Katharine. She bravely offered her neck to the stroke and passed away hence to receive the twain crowns of maidenhood and martyrdom, upon the 25th day of November. Her body was marvellously laid by Angels upon Mount Sinai in Arabia.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 1, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 644.)

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 26th day of November were born into the better life—

At Fabriano, in the March of Ancona, the blessed Abbat Silvester, founder of the Congregation of Monks of the Order of St Benedict, who are called Silvestrians.

At Alexandria, the holy martyr Peter, Pope of that city, a man enriched with all graces, who was beheaded by order of the Emperor Galerius Maximian.

Likewise at Alexandria, in the same persecution, the holy martyrs Faustus a Priest, Didius, and Ammonius, along with whom are commemorated the Egyptian Bishops Phileas, Hesychius, Pachomius, and Theodore, and six hundred and sixty Others, who were raised to heaven by the sword of the persecutor.

At Nicomedia, the holy Priest Marcellus, who in the time of the Emperor Constantius was thrown over a cliff by the Arians, and so died a martyr.

At Padua, [in the year 1149,] the holy martyr Bellinus, Bishop [of that see.]

At Rome, [at the end of the fourth century,] the holy Confessor Pope Siricius, very famous for his teaching, godliness, and zeal for the faith. He condemned divers heretics and restored the discipline of the Church by healthy enactments.

---

[1] Alban Butler says that by this are to be understood monks, as wearers of the "angelic" habit.

At Autun, [in the third century,] holy Amator, Bishop [of that see.]

At Constance, [in the tenth century,] holy Conrad, Bishop [of that see.]

In the country of Rheims, [in the seventh century,] the holy Confessor Basolus.

At Adrianople, in Paphlagonia, the holy hermit Stylian, who was famous for miracles.

In Armenia, [in the tenth century,] the holy monk Nicon.

At Rome, [in the year 1751,] the holy Confessor Leonard of Porto Maurizio, of the Order of Friars Minor of the stricter observance, who was famous for his zeal for the salvation of souls and his holy journeys throughout Italy, and whose name the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. enrolled among those of the Saints.

Vespers of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 26.

St Silvester, Abbat.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 621,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Silvester, begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD of Mercies, Who wast pleased to call the blessed Abbat Silvester into the desert as he bethought him of this world's vanity at the mouth of an open grave, and to honour him by a life shining with worthy acts, we humbly beseech Thee that we, after his ensample, may lightly esteem things earthly, and may at length attain unto everlasting joy in Thy presence. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Katharine. Prayer from her Office. Then of the Holy Martyr Peter, Pope of Alexandria, from the Common Office, (p. 594,) with the Prayer, "Mercifully consider, &c.," (p. 599.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Silvester was born of a noble family at Ossimo, in Picenum, and in his childhood was a wonderful example both in regard to letters and good living. When he grew older his father sent him to Bologna to study the law, but God warned him to give himself to divinity, and he thereby incurred the wrath of his father, which he bore with complacency for ten full years. On account of his eminent graces he was elected an honorary canon of the Cathedral of Ossimo, in the which dignity he ministered to the people by his prayers, his example, and his sermons.

Fifth Lesson.

AT the funeral of a certain nobleman he perceived in an open grave the disfigured corpse of a kinsman of his own who had been very comely in his lifetime, and he said to himself, "I am what he was, and what he is I shall be." Straightway after the funeral he read the words of the Lord, "If any man will come after Me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me" (Matth. xvi. 24.) Thereupon he withdrew into the desert to seek after greater perfection, and then gave himself up to watching, praying, and fasting, very often taking no food but uncooked herbs. In order, however, to cut himself off the more from men, he moved from one place to another, and at length came to Mount Fano, which is hard by Fabriano, but was itself then absolutely uninhabited. Then he built a church in honour of the holy Father Benedict, and founded the congregation of Silvestrians, with a rule and dress which were revealed to him in a vision by the holy Patriarch himself.

Sixth Lesson.

SATAN envied him, strove to trouble his monks by divers terrors, and made an hostile attack by night upon the gates of his monastery, but the man of God so overcame the assault of the enemy that his monks were the more confirmed in their Institute and recognised the holiness of their father. He shone with the spirit of prophecy and other gifts. These things he always preserved by the deepest lowliness, whereby he so stirred up against him the ill-will of the devil that that evil spirit cast him headlong down the stairs of his oratory, and went near to slay him, but he was restored to soundness by the helpful gift of the Virgin. This help he remembered with an unceasing and singular love toward her until the last breath of his life, the which breath he resigned to God, famous for holiness and miracles, aged almost ninety years, upon the 26th day of November, in the year of salvation 1267. The Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. extended his Office and Mass to the whole Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.) The last is omitted to make room for the Ninth Lesson (for St Peter.)

THIS Peter succeeded that eminent Saint, Theonas, as Pope of Alexandria, [in the year of our Lord 300,] and the glory of his holiness and teaching hath enlightened not Egypt only, but the whole Church of God. The wondrous patience wherewith he bore the roughness of the times in the persecution under Maximian Galerius caused many greatly to increase in Christian graces. He was the first who cut off Arius, then a Deacon of Alexandria, from the Communion of the faithful, on account of his leaning to the Meletian schism. He was condemned to death by Maximian, and was in prison when there came to him the two Priests Achilles and Alexander to plead for Arius, but Peter told them that Jesus had appeared to him in the night clad in a rent garment, and when he asked what was thereby signified, had said unto him: "Arius hath torn My vesture, which is the Church." Also, he foretold to them that they should be Popes of Alexandria after him, and strictly commanded them never to receive Arius into Communion, because he knew him to be dead in the sight of God. That this was a true prophecy the event did shortly prove. At length, in the twelfth year of his Popedom, upon the 26th day of November, [in the year of salvation 311,] his head was cut off, and he went hence to receive the crown of his testimony.

At Lauds is made a Commemoration of St Peter. Prayer as at First Vespers.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the holy Confessor Gregory, Archbishop of Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, who was famous for teaching and holiness, and who came to be called the Wonder-worker, on account of the great signs and wonders which he worked to the great glory of the churches. Mention hath been made of him upon the 17th day of this present month of November.

Upon the same 27th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Antioch, the holy martyrs Basileus, Patriarch [of that see,] Auxilius, and Saturninus.

In Persia, the holy martyr James, styled the Dismembered, a famous martyr. In the time of the Emperor Theodosius the younger, to please King Isdegerd, he denied Christ, wherefore his mother and his wife held aloof from him. Then he bethought himself, and went to the King and confessed Christ, and the King in wrath commanded him to be cut limb from limb, and his head to be cut off. At that time countless other martyrs suffered there also.

At Sebaste, in Armenia, the holy martyrs Hirenarchus, the Priest Acacius, and seven women; it was the constancy of these women which moved Hirenarchus to turn to Christ, and he was beheaded along with Acacius, under Diocletian the Emperor and Maximus the President.

At the river Cea, in Galicia, the holy martyrs Facundus and Primitivus, who suffered under the President Atticus.

At Aquileia, [in the fourth century,] holy Valerian, Bishop [of that see.]

At Riez, in Gaul, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Maximus, Bishop of that see, famous for signs and wonders. From his childhood he was endued with every grace, and was father of the monastery of Lerins, and afterward Bishop of the church of Riez.

At Salzburg, [in the eighth century,] the holy Confessor Farrell, an Irishman, Bishop [of that see,] and Apostle of Carinthia, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Gregory IX. enrolled among those of the Saints.

In India, toward the borders of Persia, holy Barlaam and Josaphat, whose wonderful acts were written by holy John of Damascus.

At Paris, [in the sixth century,] deceased the holy Monk and Solitary Severinus.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 27.

St Gregory "the Wonder-worker,"[1] Archbishop [of Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

FIRST VESPERS.

These, as regards St Gregory, begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Silvester. Prayer from his Office.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

GREGORY, Archbishop of Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, is famous indeed for his holiness and doctrine, but much more so on account of the signs and wonders which he wrought, the number and character of which were so extraordinary that they have gotten him the name of "Thaumatourgos," [which is, being interpreted from the Greek, "the Wonder-worker."] Holy Basil compareth him with Moses, with the Prophets, and with the Apostles, and testifieth that by his prayers he moved a mountain that stood in the way of the building of a Church. Moreover, he dried up a marsh, which was a cause of strife between brothers. Also, when the River Lycus overflowed and wasted the fields, he set his walking-stick on the bank, (which stick forthwith grew into a green tree,) and confined the stream within its bed, so that it never more passed that place again.

Fifth Lesson.

HE oftentimes cast out devils either from heathen idols or from the bodies of men, and did many other marvellous things, whereby he drew countless numbers to believe in Jesus Christ. Also he had the spirit of prophecy, and foretold things to come. When he was at the point of death, he asked how many unbelievers were left in the city of Neo-Cæsarea? and when they answered "Seventeen," he gave God thanks, and said: "Just so many were the faithful when I took the Bishoprick." He wrote a great deal, whereby, as well as by his wonders, he hath enlightened the Church of God.

Sixth Lesson from the Sermons of St Maximus, (p. 614.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xi. 22.)

---

[1] The Latin preserves the Greek word Thaumatourgos, which, however, by the Greeks themselves, is not restricted to this Saint. The date of his death is uncertain, but probably about A.D. 270.

AT that time: JESUS answered His disciples and said unto them: Have faith in God. Amen I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that these things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (Bk. iii. Comment. on Mark. xi.)

The heathen, who have written blasphemies against the Church, are used to cast in our teeth that we have not full faith in God, since we have never been able to move mountains. Such should be answered that we do not possess records of everything that hath come to pass in the Church, any more than, the Scripture being witness, we possess records of all the doings of our Lord Christ Himself. (John xx. 30; xxi. 25.) Mountains may have been removed and cast into the sea, in case of need; a like case, indeed, as we read, was that which came to pass at the prayers of the Blessed Father Gregory, Archbishop of Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, that right worthy and mighty man, when a mountain was moved from one place on land to another place on land, as the dwellers in the city had need.

Eighth Lesson.

GREGORY was wishful to build a Church in a meet place, but the site was too narrow, being wedged in between a mountain on the one side and a precipice going down into the sea on the other. He came therefore by night to the place, kneeling down, and reminding the Lord of His promise, and calling upon Him to remove the mountain. And in the morning, when he came thither again, he found that the mountain had been removed back, and as much room left for the builders of the Church as they needed. This man therefore would have been able, and any other man of like grace would have been able, if need were, to obtain of the Lord, by the force of his faith, that even a mountain should be removed, and be cast into the sea.

Ninth Lesson.

MYSTICALLY however by a mountain is sometimes signified the devil, on account of the pride whereby he lifteth himself up against God, and would fain be like unto the Most High. And when holy teachers, strong in faith, do preach the Word, this mountain is removed, and cast into the sea, that is to say, the unclean spirit is removed out of the hearts of such as are foreordained unto eternal life, and sent free to exercise the wild rage of his tyranny in the riotous and embittered minds of the unfaithful.

MARTYROLOGY.

On the morrow we keep the Feast of the holy martyr Jehoshaphat, Archbishop of Polotsk, Monk of the Order of St Basil, who was cruelly murdered by schismatics at Vitebsk in Poland, out of their hatred for Catholic unity and truth, whose name Pope Pius IX. enrolled among those of the holy martyrs, and of whom mention hath been made upon the 12th day of this present month of November.

Upon the same 28th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Rome, the holy Rufus, with all his house, whom Diocletian made martyrs unto Christ.

At Corinth, holy Sosthenes, the disciple of the blessed Apostle Paul, of whom the same Apostle doth make mention in writing unto the Corinthians. He was the chief man of the synagogue when he turned to Christ, and eminently hallowed the first-fruits of his faith by being sharply beaten in the presence of Gallio the Proconsul.

In Africa, the holy martyrs the Bishops Papinian and Mansuetus. On account of their defence of the Catholic faith, during the Vandal persecution under the Arian King Genseric, their whole bodies were seared with white hot iron plates, and so they finished their glorious contending.

At the same time, the other holy Bishops Valerian, Urban, Crescens, Eustace, Cresconius, Crescentian, Felix, Hortulanus, and Florentian were condemned to exile, and there finished their earthly days.

At Constantinople, the holy martyrs Stephen the younger, Basil, Peter, Andrew, and their Companions, even three hundred and thirty-nine monks, who for the honouring of holy images under the Emperor Constantine Copronymus were put to divers cruel torments, and sealed their confession of the Catholic truth by the outpouring of their blood.

At Rome, the blessed Pope Gregory III., who passed to heaven famous for his holiness and worthy deeds.

At Naples, [in the year 1476,] the holy Confessor James of Picenum, of the Order of Friars Minor, famous for the sharp self-denial of his life, for his Apostolic preaching, and for the embassages which he undertook for Christendom's sake, whose name the Supreme Pontiff Benedict XIII. enrolled among those of the saints.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 28.

St Jehoshaphat Kuncewicz, Archbishop of Polotsk, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

STIR up in Thy Church, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that spirit wherewith Thy blessed martyr and Bishop Jehoshaphat was filled when he laid down his life for the sheep, that, with the help of his prayers, we also may be so moved and strengthened by the same spirit, that we be not afraid even to lay down our lives for the brethren. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers as regards St Jehoshaphat begin with the Chapter.

A Commemoration is made of St Gregory the Wonder-worker. Prayer, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

If this Feast or the next is kept in Advent, there is a Commemoration of the Week-day at Vespers and Lauds.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JEHOSHAPHAT KUNCEWICZ was born of noble and Catholic parents, at Włodzimierz, in Wołyn. While he was still a little child, he heard his mother speak of the sufferings of Christ, and a dart came from the side of the image of JESUS Crucified and wounded his heart. He was enkindled with the love of God, and so gave himself up to prayer and other good works that he was a wonder to the lads who were more advanced than himself. When he was twenty years of age, he entered the monastery of the [most Holy Trinity served by the] Order of St Basil, [at Wilno,] and under the profession of that Rule went wonderfully forward in perfection, according to the counsels of the Gospel. He went barefoot even in the greatest cold of winter. He never touched meat, and wine only through obedience, and he troubled his body with the roughest haircloth until the end of his life. He kept absolutely unsullied the flower of his virginity, which even from his youth he had hallowed by vow to the Virgin Mother of God. The fame of his graces and teaching soon became so spread abroad that, although he was among the younger, he was set over the monastery of Byten or Zyrowice. He was soon afterward made Archimandrite of Wilno, and at last, contrary to his own will but through the insistence of the Catholics, was appointed Archbishop of Polotsk.

Fifth Lesson.

AS Archbishop he laid aside nothing of his former way of living, except to lay to heart the interests of divine worship, and of the salvation of the sheep committed to his care. He was the steadfast champion of Catholic unity and truth, and toiled with all his strength to bring the schismatics and heretics into communion with the see of Blessed Peter. He never ceased, by his preaching and by writings filled with godliness and teaching, to defend the Supreme Pontiff, and the fullness of his power, against the shameless calumnies and the errors of wicked men. He saved the episcopal jurisdiction and the goods of the Church, which had been usurped by laymen. It is hardly to be believed how many heretics he recalled into the bosom of our Holy Mother the Church. The declarations of the Papacy itself attest at large that Jehoshaphat was one of the most famous of those who have worked for the union of the Greek Church with the Latin. To these things, to the restoring of the splendour of the house of God, to building dwellings for holy virgins, and to the helping of other godly works, he gave the whole of his own income. His generosity to the poor was such that once when he found nothing else to hand to relieve the wants of a certain poor widow he ordered his Episcopal Pallium or Omophorion to be put in pawn.

Sixth Lesson.

THE increase thus gained for the Catholic faith so stirred up the anger of wicked men, that they made a conspiracy to seek after Christ's servant and put him to death. He himself, in preaching to the people, said that he knew that his death was at hand. When he was at Vitebsk for a pastoral visitation, his enemies broke into the Archiepiscopal Palace, and smote and slew them that they met. Then this man, full of meekness, came forth of his own accord to meet them that sought him, and said unto them, as a friend unto friends: "My little children, why do ye slay them of my household? If ye have aught against me, behold, I am here." Then they ran upon him, struck him, pierced him with weapons, killed him with an axe, and threw his body into the river. It was the 12th day of November, in the year of salvation 1623, and of his own age the forty-third. His body gave forth a marvellous light, and was raised up out of the bed of the river. The first to profit by the blood of the martyr were his own murderers, nearly all of whom, when they were condemned to death, abjured their schism, and died repentant of their sin. This great Prelate shone with many miracles after his death. The Supreme Pontiff Urban VIII. decreed to him the honours given to the Blessed. Pius IX., upon the 29th day of June, in the year 1867, when the solemn Feast of the Princes of the Apostles was being kept, at the end of eighteen centuries, in the Vatican Basilica, in the presence of the College of Cardinals, and of nearly five hundred Patriarchs, Metropolitans, and Bishops of all rites, who were come together from all parts of the earth, solemnly enrolled the name of this champion of the unity of the Church, the first among the orientals, among those of the saints. The Supreme Pontiff Leo XIII. extended his Office and Mass to the universal Church.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (x. 11.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the Pharisees: I am the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (59th on John.)

Dearly beloved brethren, the Bishops of the Church hold a great office, an office that needeth much that wisdom and strength whereof Christ hath given us an example. We must learn of Him to lay down our lives for the sheep and never to leave them; and to fight bravely against the wolf. This is the difference between the true shepherd and the hireling. The one leaveth the sheep and seeketh his own safety, but the other recketh not of his own safety, so as he may watch over the sheep. Christ then having given us the duty of a good shepherd, warneth us against two enemies; first, the thief that cometh not but to kill and to steal, and, secondly, the hireling that standeth by, and defendeth not them that are committed to his charge.

Eighth Lesson.

EZECHIEL hath said of old time, (xxxiv. 2): "Woe be to the shepherds of Israël! do they not feed themselves? Should not the shepherds feed the flocks?" But they did the contrary, a great wickedness and the root of many evils. "Therefore," he saith, "they brought not back that which was gone astray: neither did they search for that which was lost: neither did they bind up that which was broken, nor strengthen that which was sick; for they fed themselves, and not the flock." And Paul hath the same in other words, where he saith, (Phil. ii. 21): "All seek their own, not the things which are JESUS Christ's."

Ninth Lesson.

CHRIST showeth Himself very different from either the thief or the hireling; whereas the thief cometh to destroy, He came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. The hireling fleeth, but He layeth down His life for the sheep, that the sheep perish not. When then the Jews went about to kill Him, He ceased not to teach: He gave not up them that believed in Him, but stood steadfast and died. Wherefore He hath good title often to say, "I am the Good Shepherd." It was but a little while and He showed us how He could lay down His life for the sheep. And if it appeareth not as yet how they have life, and have it more abundantly, (but it shall appear, in the world which is to come,) we may well be persuaded of the truth of the second promise, who have seen the fulfilment of the first.

MARTYROLOGY.

The morrow is the Eve of the holy Apostle Andrew.

On the same day we keep the Feast of the holy Confessor Willibrord, Archbishop of Utrecht, in Friesland, who was ordained Bishop by blessed Pope Sergius, and preached the Gospel in Friesland and Denmark. Mention is made of him upon the 7th day of this present month of November.

Upon the same 29th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Rome, upon the Salarian Way, under the Emperor Maximian, the holy martyrs Saturninus the Elder, and Sisinius the Deacon. They suffered long in prison, and the Prefect of the city then commanded them to be stretched upon the rack, and drawn with thongs, to be flogged with cudgels and loaded scourges, then tormented with fire, and at last to be taken down from the rack and beheaded.

At Toulouse, the holy martyr Saturninus, Bishop [of that see,] who, in the time of the Emperor Decius, was tried by the pagans in the capitol of the same city, and cast down the steps from the summit thereof, so that his head was broken, and his brain scattered, and his whole body mangled, and he gave up his worthy soul to Christ.

Likewise, under Decius the Emperor and Aquilinus the President, the holy martyrs Paramon and three hundred and seventy-five others, his Companions.

At Ancyra, the holy martyr Philomen, who, under the President Felix, in the persecution under the Emperor Aurelian, was tried with fire, and then had nails driven into his hands and feet, and at last into his head, and so finished his testimony.

At Veroli, the holy martyrs Blaise and Demetrius.

At Todi, [in the fourth century,] the holy Virgin Illuminata.

Vespers are of the following, from the Chapter inclusive.

NOVEMBER 29.

Eve of St Andrew. St Willibrord, Archbishop of Utrecht, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

These as regards St Willibrord begin with the Chapter.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to send forth Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Willibrord to preach among the Gentiles the glory of Thy Name, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, for his sake and at his prayers, that we may by Thy mercy be able to fulfil whatsoever Thou commandest us to do. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of St Jehoshaphat. Prayer from his Office. Then of the Holy Martyr Saturninus, from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) and the following.

Prayer.

O GOD, by Whose mercy we keep the birth-day of Thy blessed martyr Saturninus, grant us also succour for his sake. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WILLIBRORD was born in Northumberland, being the son of a godly Englishman named Wilgis. Before he was seven years of age he was taken to the monastery of Ripon, and given in charge to blessed Wilfrid, the Founder and Ruler thereof, to be kept and trained up in learning and holy letters. There, in a short while, he wonderfully stepped forward, not in knowledge only, but also in graces, and led the life of a monk until the twentieth year of his age. Then he had a desire for a harder life, and, with the leave of his Abbat and brethren, went into Ireland to the holy men Egbert and Wigbert, who both had withdrawn thither for the love of our Fatherland which is in heaven. In their holy companionship and conversation, and amid the most excellent teachers of godliness and sacred learning, did this future teacher of many nations pass twelve years, and himself gain learning and character.

Fifth Lesson.

IN the thirty-third year of his age he was ordained Priest, and was sent by Egbert to convert the pagans of Friesland, along with eleven companions of his own country folk eminent for learning and holiness of life, among whom are named holy Swigbert, Adelbert, and Werenfrid. He landed at Utrecht, and was welcomed, along with his companions, by Pepin Heristal, who had brought Southern Friesland under his power, and who mightily helped the preaching of the Gospel, so that in a short while many were turned from the worshipping of idols unto the Christian faith. That he might with the more profit sow the seed of the Word of God, Willibrord, at the desire of all his colleagues, was sent by Pepin to Rome to receive the Order of Bishop from Pope Sergius. Sergius received him with honour, made him an Archbishop, changed his name to Clement, and clad him in the Pallium.

Sixth Lesson.

WILLIBRORD, thus raised and confirmed by anointing and blessing, returned to Friesland as soon as he could, and established his see at Utrecht. He proclaimed the Word of God with much fruit in Friesland, Holland, Zealand, and Flanders, and even unto the uttermost tribes of those countries, brake their idols, destroyed their temples and shrines, dedicated many temples to Christ, and established Bishops, Priests, and other ministers of the Church, eminent for knowledge and grace. He founded also several monasteries, among which the principal is that for monks at Echternach, in Luxembourg, the government whereof he himself took, and held until his death. He established another for Virgins at Susteren on the Meuse, in the Duchy of Juliers. At length, full of days and works, he passed away, to be ever with Christ, upon the 7th day of November, in the year of salvation 738, and of his own age the eighty-first. He is mentioned in the Roman Martyrology upon the day of his death. He was buried in the monastery of Echternach. He was famous for miracles, both during his life and after his death; and his Apostolic labours were taken up by many other Englishmen, among whom were eminent holy Willihad, Marcellinus, and Lebwin, who are commemorated in the Roman Martyrology.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616.)

In Advent no notice is taken of the Eve, but out of Advent the Last Lesson from St Gregory is omitted or read along with the Eighth, to leave room for the Ninth Blessing.

May the Gospel's glorious word
Cleansing to our souls afford.

Ninth Lesson. (For the Eve of St Andrew.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (i. 35.)

AT that time: John stood, and two of his disciples; and looking on JESUS as He walked, he saith: Behold the Lamb of God! And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (7th Tract on John.)

Since John was the friend of the Bridegroom, (iii. 29,) he sought not his own glory, but bare witness to the truth. Would he that his disciples should remain with him rather than that they should follow the Lord? Nay, he showed his disciples Whom they should follow. They thought that he himself was the Lamb; but he saith: "Why wait ye on me? I am not the Lamb. Behold the Lamb of God!" This was He of Whom he had already said above (29): "Behold the Lamb of God!" And what use to us is the Lamb of God? "Behold the Lamb of God," saith John, "Which taketh away the sin of the world."

"And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed JESUS." Let us see what followed. "John stood, and two of his disciples; and looking on JESUS as He walked, he saith: Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed JESUS." They followed Him, not yet to cleave unto Him, for it is manifest that they clave unto Him only after that He had called them out of the ship. (Matth. iv. 18.) "One of the two which heard John speak, and followed Him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother." And we know how it is written in the Gospel of Matthew: "JESUS walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea, for they were fishers. And He saith unto them: Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets and followed Him." From that time, therefore, was it that they clave unto Him continuously. "Then JESUS turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them: What seek ye? They said unto Him: Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest Thou?" So they follow Him now, not as to cleave unto Him for ever, but as to know where He dwelt, and to obey that which is written: "If thou see a man of understanding, go to him early in the morning, and let thy foot wear the steps of his doors." (Ecclus. vi. 36.)

"He saith unto them: Come and see. They came and saw where He dwelt, and abode with Him that day." O what a blessed day! O what a blessed night! "for it was about the tenth hour." Who shall tell what they heard from the Lord? O let us also build an house in our hearts, where He may come, and teach us, and talk with us!

At Lauds, if before Advent, a Commemoration is made of the Eve. Antiphon and Verse and Answer of the Week-day, and the following.

Prayer.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that Thy blessed Apostle Andrew, on the Eve of whose Feast we now are, may entreat for us the healthful succour of Thy mercy, that we, being delivered from all guiltiness, may likewise be delivered from all dangers.

Then, in any case, of St Saturninus. Prayer as before.

Note that if the Feast of St Andrew falls on Monday, the Eve is kept upon the Saturday, in which case it is commemorated in the Office of St Jehoshaphat in the same way as here given in that of St Willibrord, and its Prayer has the usual termination, "Through our Lord, &c."

MARTYROLOGY.

Upon the 30th day of November, were born into the better life—

At Patrae, in the Peloponnesus, the holy Apostle Andrew. He preached the Gospel of Christ in Thrace and Scythia. He was arrested by the Proconsul Ægeas, and first imprisoned, then heavily flogged, and, lastly, crucified. He remained alive upon the cross through the second day, and taught the people. He besought the Lord not to suffer him to be taken down from the cross, and then a great light from heaven shone round about him, and when it faded away he gave up the ghost.

At Rome, the holy martyrs Castulus and Euprepis.

At Constantinople, the holy Virgin and martyr Maura.

Likewise, the holy Virgin and martyr Justina.

At Saintes, [in the sixth century,] holy Trojan, Bishop [of that see,] a man of great holiness, who, albeit he be buried in the earth, yet showeth by many works of power that he is alive in heaven.

At Rome, [in the fifth century,] the holy Confessor Constantius, who manfully withstood the Pelagians, and bore much at their hands, the which contendings have gained him a place among the holy Confessors.

In Palestine, [in the sixth century,] the holy Confessor Zosimus, who was eminent for holiness and miracles in the time of the Emperor Justin.

Vespers are of the following.

The Office of St Andrew is the first in the Proper of Saints for the year, (p. 666.)

The Additional Services.

NOTE.—None of these Services are ever binding upon persons bound to recite the Office, except that for the Dead on All Souls' Day, and the Litany (without the Penitential Psalms) on St Mark's Day, and the three Rogation Days.[1]

The Little Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

This Office is added to the Church Office every day, except (1) those on which Nine Lessons are read, (2) those in the Holy Week, (3) those within the Octaves of Easter and Pentecost, and (4) Saturdays upon which her Office is said as a Simple; upon all which days it is omitted from the First Vespers inclusive. Upon Christmas Eve it is omitted from Mattins inclusive. When it is said in Choir, Mattins and Lauds are said before the Mattins and Lauds of the Day, and the Vespers before Vespers. Prime is said just before the Martyrology is read. Terce, Sext, None, and Compline are said after the Terce, Sext, None, and Compline of the day, respectively. Out of Choir it is said whenever the reciter chooses.

If it is said apart from the Church Office, the Angelic Salutation is said inaudibly before each Office, except Lauds. None of the Antiphons are ever doubled.

The Office varies according as it be (1) Ordinary, (2) In Advent, (3) Between Christmas and Candlemas, and (4) In Paschal-time.

I. ORDINARY.

VESPERS.

Make haste, &c., as usual, continuing the same as on a Semi-double Feast of the Blessed Virgin, till the end of the Hymn.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips.
Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Blessed Mother and inviolate Maiden! * glorious Queen of the world! Plead for us with the Lord!

Then:

Kyrie eleison.
Answer. Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.
Verse. O Lord, hear my prayer.
Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

Grant, we beseech Thee, &c., (as in the full Office, p. 640, with the short ending, Through Christ our Lord.)

Then the following Commemoration of the Saints.

Antiphon. O all ye holy children of God, be pleased to pray for our salvation and the salvation of all men.

Verse. Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous.
Answer. And shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

Let us pray.

BE Thou, O Lord, the Shield of Thy people, and cover with Thine everlasting Arm those who trust in the help of Thine Apostles Peter and Paul, and the others Thine Apostles.

We pray Thee, O Lord, that all Thine holy children may in all places succour us, and that as we call to mind their worthy acts, so we may feel the comfort of their friendship.

Grant Thou also peace in our days, and keep Thy Church ever clean purged of all iniquity.

Order Thou also our footsteps, our deeds, and our wills, and the footsteps, the deeds, and the wills of all Thy servants, in the straight path that leadeth unto salvation in Thee.

Reward with eternal life all them who do us good.

And grant eternal rest unto all the faithful departed.

Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

COMPLINE.

Turn us, &c., as in the Church Office, but the Psalms, (which are said without any Antiphon,) are

Psalm CXXVIII.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

MANY a time have they warred against me from my youth—* may Israël now say:—

Many a time have they warred against me from my youth: * yet they have not prevailed against me.

---

[1] Nevertheless, in some Churches the custom exists, and in some there are foundations for saying the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, or the Office of the Dead every day or on certain days, irrespective of what the Church Office may be, and such has also been the practice of some Saints.

[1] The ploughers ploughed upon my back: * they made long their furrows.

The LORD is righteous, He hath broken the necks of the wicked. * Let them all be confounded and turned back that hate Zion.

Let them be as the grass upon the house-tops, * which withereth before it is plucked up:

Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand, * nor he that bindeth sheaves his bosom.

Neither do they that go by say: The blessing of the LORD be upon you! * we bless you in the name of the LORD!

Psalm CXXIX.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees." The meaning of this title is not certain. The Psalms so called may perhaps, like the "Graduals" of the Roman Liturgy, be "step-songs," intended to be sung during processions, Liturgical or of pilgrims.]

OUT of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O LORD! * Lord, hear my voice.

Let Thine ears be attentive * to the voice of my supplication.

If Thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, * O LORD, who shall stand?

But there is forgiveness with Thee: * because of Thy law, I wait for Thee, O LORD!

My soul waiteth on His word: * my soul hopeth in the Lord.

From the morning watch even until night * let Israël hope in the LORD:

For with the LORD there is mercy, * and with Him is plenteous redemption.

And He shall redeem Israël, * from all his iniquities.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Psalm CXXX.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees," to which the Hebrew and the Vulgate, but not the Targum or the LXX., add "of David."]

LORD, mine heart is not haughty, * nor mine eyes lofty:

Neither do I exercise myself in great matters, * or in wonderful things that are above me.

If I have not thought lowly of myself— * (but lifted up my soul)—

Even as a child that is weaned from his mother: * so be my soul rewarded.

Let Israël hope in the LORD, * from henceforth and for ever.

Hymn.[2]

REMEMBER, O Creator Lord,
That in the Virgin's sacred womb
Thou wast conceived, and of her flesh
Didst our mortality assume.

Mother of grace, O Mary blest
To thee, sweet fount of love, we fly;
Shield us through life, and take us hence
To thy dear bosom when we die.

O JESU, born of Virgin bright,
Immortal glory be to Thee;
Praise to the Father infinite,
And Holy Ghost eternally. Amen.

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 24.)

I AM the mother of fair love, and fear, and knowledge, and holy hope.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Verse. Pray for us, O holy Mother of God.

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ.

Antiphon. We take refuge under Thy protection.

Song of Simeon. Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant, &c., (p. 118.)

Antiphon. We take refuge under Thy protection, O holy Mother of God! Despise not our supplications in our need, but deliver us alway from all dangers, O Virgin, glorious and blessed!

Kyrie eleison.

Answer. Christe eleison.

Kyrie eleison.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

LORD, we pray Thee, that the glorious intercession of Mary, blessed, and glorious, and everlastingly Virgin, may shield us and bring us on toward eternal life. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

O LORD, open Thou my lips, &c., as in the full Office, only with this

Invitatory. Hail, Mary, full of grace. * The Lord is with Thee!

Only one Nocturn is said. On Mondays and Thursdays, it is the First from the full Office; on Tuesdays and Fridays, the Second; and, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, the Third. Then:

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Our Father, &c. And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Absolution.

By the prayers of the Blessed Mary, always a Virgin, and by the prayers of all His Saints, and for her sake and for their sakes, may the Lord lead us unto the kingdom of heaven.

Answer. Amen.

First Blessing.

Bless us, Mary, Maiden mild,
Bless us, JESUS, Mary's Child.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xxiv. 11.)

WITH all these I sought rest, but I shall abide in the inheritance of the Lord. So the Creator of all things gave me a commandment, and said unto me, even He that made me rested in my tabernacle, and said unto me, Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thine inheritance in Israël, and strike thou thy roots amid My chosen people.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

First Responsory.

O how holy and how spotless is thy virginity! I am too dull to praise thee; for thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

---

[1] I.e., "They furrowed my back with stripes as the ground is furrowed with the plough." Gesenius.

[2] Translation by the late Rev. E. Caswall.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For thou hast borne in thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

Second Blessing.

With the Lord Who sprang of thee,
Maid of maidens, plead for me.

Second Lesson.

AND so was I established in Zion, and likewise in the Holy City was I given to rest, and in Jerusalem was my power. And I took root among the honourable people, even in the portion of my God, as His own inheritance, and mine abiding was in the full assembly of the Saints.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Second Responsory.

Blessed art thou, O Virgin Mary, who hast carried the Lord, the Maker of the world. Thou hast borne Him Who created thee, and thou abidest a virgin for ever.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. The Lord is with thee.

Answer. Thou hast borne Him Who created thee, and thou abidest a virgin for ever.

Third Blessing.

He to Whom His mother prays,
Grant us blessing all our days.

Third Lesson.

I WAS exalted like a cedar in Lebanon, and as a cypress-tree upon Mount Zion. I was exalted like a palm-tree in Kadesh, and as a rose-plant in Jericho, as a fair olive-tree in the plains, and grew up as a plane-tree beside the water in the broad ways. I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm; I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Third Responsory.

O holy Virgin Mary, happy indeed art thou, and right worthy of all praise, for out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God. Let all that are making this holy memorial of thee feel the might of thine assistance.

Answer. For out of thee rose the Sun of righteousness, even Christ our God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Even Christ our God.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Mary hath been taken to heaven; * the Angels rejoice; they praise and bless the Lord.

Second Antiphon. The Virgin Mary hath been taken into the chamber on high, * where the King of kings sitteth on a throne amid the stars.

Third Antiphon. We run after thee, on the scent of thy perfumes—* the virgins love thee heartily.

Fourth Antiphon. Blessed of the Lord art thou, O daughter, * for by thee we have been given to eat of the fruit [of the tree] of Life.

Fifth Antiphon. Fair and comely art thou, O daughter of Jerusalem, * terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Chapter. (Cant. vi. 8.)

THE daughters of Zion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Hymn. O glorious Virgin, &c., (p. 640.)

Verse. Blessed art thou among women.

Answer. And blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias, except between Christmas and Candlemas, and in Paschal-time. O Blessed Mary, * Mother of God, Virgin for ever, temple of the Lord, sanctuary of the Holy Ghost, thou, without any ensample before thee, didst make thyself well-pleasing in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ—pray for the people, plead for the clergy, make intercession for all women vowed to God.

Then:

Kyrie eleison.

Answer. Christe eleison.

Kyrie eleison.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Who didst will that Thy Word should, by the message of an Angel, take flesh in the womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, that all we who do believe her to be in very deed the Mother of God, may be holpen by her prayers in Thy sight. Through the same Christ our Lord.

Then the Commemoration of the Saints, as at Vespers.

PRIME.

Make haste, &c., as in the Church Office.

Hymn as at Compline.

Antiphon. Mary is taken, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

Psalm LIII.

[The superscription of this Psalm, after some words which are probably a musical direction, proceeds "[A Psalm] of David, when the Ziphim came and said to Saul, Doth not David hide himself with us?" This was during the same period of his life in the South in which he composed Ps. lxii. The Ziphim, or peasantry of the neighbourhood of Ziph, betrayed him twice to Saul, and both times, especially the first, he was in imminent peril. 1 Kings (Sam.) xxiii. 19-29, xxvi.]

SAVE me, O God, in Thy Name, * and judge me in Thy power.

Hear my prayer, O God: * give ear to the words of my mouth.

For strangers are risen up against me, and oppressors seek after my soul: * and have not set God before them.[1]

Behold God is mine Helper: * and the Lord upholdeth my soul.

Reward Thou evil unto mine enemies: * and cut them off in Thy truth.

I will freely sacrifice unto Thee:

---

[1] SLH.

* and praise Thy Name, O LORD, for it is good.

For Thou hast delivered me out of all trouble: * and mine eye hath seen [his desire upon] mine enemies.

Psalm LXXXIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of the sons of Korah," with the usual (now uncertain) superscription.]

LORD, Thou hast been favourable unto Thy land: * Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob.

Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of Thy people: * Thou hast covered all their sins.[1]

Thou hast taken away all Thy wrath: * Thou hast turned Thyself from the fierceness of Thine anger.

Turn us, O God of our salvation, * and cause Thine anger towards us to cease.

Wilt Thou be angry with us for ever? * wilt Thou draw out Thine anger to all generations?

O God, Thou shalt again quicken us: * and Thy people shall rejoice in Thee.

Show us Thy mercy, O LORD! * and grant us Thy salvation.

I will hear what the LORD God will speak in me: * for He will speak peace unto His people,

And to His saints, * and unto them that are changed in heart.

Surely His salvation is nigh them that fear Him, * that glory may dwell in our land.

Mercy and truth have met together: * righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Truth hath sprung out of the earth: * and righteousness hath looked down from heaven.

Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good: * and our land shall yield her increase.

Righteousness shall go before Him: * and shall set His footsteps in the way.

Psalm CXVI.

O PRAISE the LORD, all ye nations: * praise Him, all ye people.

For His merciful kindness is great toward us: * and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever.

[Here the Hebrew appends "Alleluia," which the Vulgate and the LXX. prefix to the next Psalm.]

After the repetition of the Antiphon the Office proceeds thus:

Chapter. (Cant. vi. 9.)

WHO is she that cometh forth like the rising dawn, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array?

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Verse. Holy Virgin, my praise by thee accepted be.

Answer. Give me strength against thine enemies.

Kyrie eleison.

And so on, as at Compline, but with the

Prayer.

O GOD, Who wast pleased to choose for Thy dwelling-place the maiden palace of Blessed Mary, grant, we beseech Thee, that her protection may shield us, and make us glad in her commemoration. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

TERCE.

Make haste, &c., as in the Church Office.

Hymn as at Compline.

Antiphon. The Virgin Mary, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Psalm CXIX.

[This is the first of the "Songs of Degrees," or "Gradual Psalms." See note to Ps. cxxix., p. 51.]

IN my distress I cried unto the LORD, * and He heard me.

Deliver my soul, O LORD, from lying lips, * and from a deceitful tongue.

What shall be given unto thee, or what shall be done unto thee, * thou false tongue?

Sharp arrows of the mighty, * with hot burning coals.

Woe is me! that my sojourn is long: I dwell with the dwellers of Kedar.[2] * My soul hath long dwelt as an exile

With them that hate peace. I was peaceable: * when I spoke unto them, they fought against me without a cause.

Psalm CXX.

[Also a Song of Degrees.]

I WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, * from whence cometh mine help.

Mine help cometh from the LORD, * Who made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy feet to be moved: * He That keepeth thee will not slumber.

Behold, He That keepeth Israël shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade * upon thy right hand.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, * nor the moon by night.

The LORD shall keep thee from all evil: * the Lord shall keep thy soul.

The LORD shall keep thy coming in and thy going out, * from this time forth and for evermore.

Psalm CXXI.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees, of David."]

I WAS glad when they said unto me: * Let us go into the house of the LORD.

Our feet have been wont to stand * within thy gates, O Jerusalem!

Jerusalem is builded as a city * that is compact together:

Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, * the testimony of Israël, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.

For there are set thrones for judgment, * the thrones for the house of David.

Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: * they shall prosper that love thee.

Peace be within thy walls, * and prosperity within thy palaces.

For my brethren and companions' sakes, * I will now say—Peace be within thee!

Because of the house of the LORD our God, * I will seek thy good.

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 15.)

AND so I was established in Zion, and likewise in the holy city was I given to rest, and in Jerusalem was my power.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

---

[1] SLH.

[2] Properly "Black-skin." This was the name of a son of Ishmaël, and of an Arabian tribe sprung from him.

Verse. Grace is poured into thy lips.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Kyrie eleison.

And so on.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who, by the fruitful virginity of the Blessed Mary, hast given unto mankind the rewards of everlasting life; grant, we beseech Thee, that we may continually feel the might of her intercession through whom we have worthily received the Author of our life, our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SEXT.

Make haste, &c., as in the Church Office.

Hymn as at Compline.

Antiphon. We run after thee, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Psalm CXXII.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

UNTO Thee lift I up mine eyes, * O Thou That dwellest in the heavens!

Behold, as the eyes of servants * look unto the hand of their masters,

As the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress: * so our eyes look unto the LORD our God, until that He have mercy on us.

Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us: * for we are exceedingly filled with contempt.

Our soul is exceedingly filled * with the scorning of those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud.

Psalm CXXIII.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees," to which the Hebrew and the Targum add "of David," but this ascription of authorship does not occur in the Vulgate or the LXX.]

IF it had not been the LORD Who was on our side—now may Israël say— * if it had not been the LORD Who was on our side,

When men rose up against us: * then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us: * then the waters had overwhelmed us,

The stream had gone over our soul: * then the overwhelming waters had gone over our soul.

Blessed be the LORD, * Who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth.

Our soul is escaped as a bird * out of the snare of the fowlers:

The snare is broken, * and we are escaped.

Our help is in the name of the LORD, * Who made heaven and earth.

Psalm CXXIV.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

THEY that trust in the LORD shall be as Mount Zion: * he that dwelleth in Jerusalem shall never be moved.

The mountains are round about Jerusalem, * and the LORD is round about His people, from henceforth, and for ever.

For the Lord will not suffer the rod of the wicked to rest upon the lot of the righteous: * lest the righteous put forth their hands into iniquity.

Do good, O LORD, to the good, * and to them that are upright in their hearts.

As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways, the LORD shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity: * peace be upon Israël!

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 16.)

AND I took root among the honourable people, even in the portion of my God, as His own inheritance, and mine abiding was in the full assembly of the Saints.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women.

Answer. And blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Kyrie eleison.

And so on as at the other Hours.

Prayer.

MOST merciful God, grant, we beseech Thee, a succour unto the frailty of our nature, that as we keep ever alive the memory of the holy Mother of God, so by the help of her intercession we may be raised up from the bondage of our sins. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

NONE.

Make haste, &c., as in the Church Office.

Hymn as at Compline.

Antiphon. Fair and comely, &c., (Fifth Antiphon at Lauds.)

Psalm CXXV.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

WHEN the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, * we were like them that come again from sickness.

Then was our mouth filled with laughter, * and our tongue with singing.

Then said they among the heathen: * The LORD hath done great things for them.

The LORD hath done great things for us: * whereof we are glad.

Turn again our captivity, O LORD, * as the streams in the south.

They that sow in tears * shall reap in joy.

They go forth weeping, * sowing their seed;

They shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, * bringing their sheaves with them.

Psalm CXXVI.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees, of Solomon." The LXX. omits the ascription to Solomon.]

EXCEPT the LORD build the house, * they labour in vain that build it:

Except the LORD keep the city, * the watchman waketh but in vain.

It is vain for you to rise up early, * rise up when ye are rested, ye that eat the bread of sorrow:

For He giveth His beloved sleep. Lo, children are an heritage of the LORD, * the fruit of the womb is His reward.

As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man, * so are the children of the out-cast.

Happy is the man that hath his desire satisfied with them: * he shall not be ashamed when he speaketh with his enemies in the gate.

Psalm CXXVII.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees."]

BLESSED is every one that feareth the LORD, * that walketh in His ways.

For thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands: * happy shalt thou be and it shall be well with thee.

Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine * on the sides of thine house:

Thy children like olive plants * round about thy table.

Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed * that feareth the LORD.

The LORD bless thee out of Zion: * and mayest thou see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

Yea, mayest thou see thy children's children, * and peace upon Israël.

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 19.)

IN the broad ways I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm; I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Verse. After thy delivery thou still remainest a Virgin undefiled.

Answer. Mother of God, pray for us.

Kyrie eleison.

And so on as at the other Hours.

Prayer.

O LORD, we beseech Thee, forgive the transgressions of Thy servants, and, forasmuch as by our own deeds we cannot please Thee, may we find safety through the prayers of the Mother of Thy Son and our Lord. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

2. IN ADVENT.

The Office is the same as the Ordinary one, except the following.

The Prayer at every Hour is, "O God, Who didst will, &c.," (as at Lauds in the Ordinary Office, and save at Vespers, with the longer ending.)

At Vespers the Antiphons and Chapter are taken from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin as at that of Zacharias.

Commemoration of the Saints as at Lauds.

At Compline:

Chapter. (Isa. vii. 14.)

BEHOLD, the Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and His Name shall be called Emmanuel. Butter and honey shall He eat, that He may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good.

Verse. The Angel of the Lord announced unto Mary.

Answer. And she conceived of the Holy Ghost.

Antiphon at the Song of Simeon as at that of Zacharias.

At Mattins note the difference in the Third Antiphon on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

First Lesson. (Luke i. 26.)

THE Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And the Angel came in unto her, and said: Hail, thou that art full of grace: the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

First Responsory.

The Angel Gabriel was sent, &c., (p. 122,) omitting the last Verse and Answer.

Second Lesson.

AND when she heard it, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. And the Angel said unto her: Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found grace with God: behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shalt call His Name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Second Responsory.

Hail, Mary, full of grace, &c., (p. 122.)

Third Lesson.

THEN said Mary unto the Angel: How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the Angel answered and said unto her: The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that Holy Thing Which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. And, behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age, and this is the sixth month with her who was called barren; for with God nothing shall be impossible. And Mary said: Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word.

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Third Responsory.

Receive, O Virgin Mary, &c., (p. 124,) with this addition:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And thou shalt be called blessed among all women.

At Lauds the Antiphons are the same as on Lady Day, (p. 791,) with the Alleluia at the end of the Second and Third. These same Antiphons are likewise used at Vespers, and the First, Second, Third, and Fifth, at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, respectively.

Chapter. (Isa. xi. 1.)

THERE shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Flower shall grow out of his roots. And the Spirit of the LORD shall rest upon Him.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias (used also at those of the Blessed Virgin and of Simeon.) The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, O Mary, * fear not; thou shalt bear in thy womb the Son of God. Alleluia.

Commemoration of the Saints.

Antiphon. Behold, the Lord shall come, and all His Saints with Him; and it shall come to pass in that day that the light shall be great. Alleluia.
Verse. Behold, the Lord shall appear upon a white cloud.
Answer. And ten thousand of His Saints with Him.

Let us pray.

PURIFY our minds, O Lord, we beseech Thee, by the grace of Thy visitation, that when Thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ shall come with all His Saints with Him, He may find in us a people made ready that He may dwell amongst us. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Prime, Chapter from Compline.

At Terce, Chapter from Lauds.

At Sext:

Chapter. (Luke i. 32.)

THE Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

At None, Chapter from Compline.

Verse. The Angel of the Lord announced unto Mary.
Answer. And she conceived of the Holy Ghost.

3. BETWEEN CHRISTMAS AND CANDLEMAS.

The Office is the same as the Ordinary one, except the following.

The Prayer at every Hour is, "O God, Who by the fruitful virginity, &c.," (p. 177,) save at Vespers with the longer ending.

The Antiphons at Vespers and Lauds are as on New Year's Day (p. 177,) and the First, Second, Third, and Fifth, are used at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None, respectively.

Antiphon at the Songs of the Blessed Virgin and of Simeon. "Herein is a great mystery, &c.," (p. 177.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. "This day is set forth, &c.," (p. 177.)

4. IN PASCHAL-TIME.

The Office is the same as the Ordinary one, except that the Antiphon, at the Songs of the Blessed Virgin, of Simeon, and of Zacharias, is "Rejoice, rejoice, &c.," (p. 19.) And take notice particularly that the word Alleluia is not added elsewhere, as it is in the Church Office.

The Office for the Dead.

Except in Holy Week and Paschal-time, this Office is said upon the first day of the Month upon which Nine Lessons are not read, and, in Advent and Lent, upon the first week-day of every Week not so occupied. When it is said in Choir, Vespers are said after the Vespers of the day, and the Dirge after Lauds the next morning, unless the custom of the particular Church be otherwise. Out of Choir it is said whenever the reciter chooses.

VESPERS.

The Antiphons are doubled if three Nocturns are to be said in the Dirge.
The Service begins absolutely with the First Antiphon, as follows.

First Antiphon. I will walk before the Lord * in the land of the living.

Psalm CXIV.

[The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia."]

I AM well pleased, because the Lord hath heard * the voice of my supplication:

Because He hath inclined His ear unto me, * therefore will I call upon Him all my days.
The sorrows of death compassed me: * and the straits of hell found me:
Sorrow and trouble did I find. * Then called I upon the name of the Lord:
O Lord, deliver my soul. * Gracious is the Lord, and righteous: yea, our God is merciful.
The Lord preserveth the simple: * I was brought low and He helped me.
Return unto thy rest, O my soul: * for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee.
For He hath delivered my soul from death, * mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling.
I will walk before the Lord * in the land of the living.

At the end of this and all the other Psalms and Canticles throughout the whole Office of the Dead, "Glory be to the Father, &c.," is not said, but instead,

O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them!

Second Antiphon. Woe is me! O Lord, * that my sojourn is long.

Psalm CXIX.

[This is the first of the "Songs of Degrees," or "Gradual Psalms." See note to Ps. cxxix., p. 51.]

IN my distress I cried unto the Lord, * and He heard me.
Deliver my soul, O Lord, from lying lips, * and from a deceitful tongue.
What shall be given unto thee, or what shall be done unto thee, * thou false tongue?
Sharp arrows of the mighty, * with hot burning coals.
Woe is me! that my sojourn is long: I dwell with the dwellers of Kedar. * My soul hath long dwelt as an exile

With them that hate peace. I was peaceable: * when I spoke unto them, they fought against me without a cause.

Third Antiphon. The LORD shall keep thee from all evil, * the Lord shall keep thy soul.

Psalm CXX.

[Also a Song of Degrees.]

I WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, * from whence cometh mine help.

Mine help cometh from the LORD, * Who made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy feet to be moved: * He That keepeth thee will not slumber.

Behold, He That keepeth Israël shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade * upon thy right hand.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, * nor the moon by night.

The LORD shall keep thee from all evil: * the Lord shall keep thy soul.

The LORD shall keep thy coming in and thy going out, * from this time forth and for evermore.

Fourth Antiphon. If Thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, * O Lord, who shall stand!

Psalm CXXIX.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees." The meaning of this title is not certain. The Psalms so called may perhaps, like the "Graduals" of the Roman Liturgy, be "step-songs," intended to be sung during processions, Liturgical or of pilgrims.]

OUT of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O LORD! * Lord, hear my voice.

Let Thine ears be attentive * to the voice of my supplication.

If Thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, * O Lord, who shall stand?

But there is forgiveness with Thee: * because of Thy Law, I wait for Thee, O LORD!

My soul waiteth on His word: * my soul hopeth in the Lord.

From the morning watch even until night * let Israël hope in the LORD:

For with the LORD there is mercy. * and with Him is plenteous redemption.

And He shall redeem Israël, * from all his iniquities.

Fifth Antiphon. O Lord, forsake not * the works of Thine own hands.

Psalm CXXXVII.

[Intituled "Of David," to which the LXX. adds "of Haggai and Zechariah," the meaning apparently being that it was his composition, but that they made some special regulation as to its use.]

I WILL praise Thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: * because Thou hast heard the words of my mouth.

Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee. * I will worship toward Thine holy temple, and praise Thy Name.

For Thy loving-kindness, and for Thy truth: * for Thou hast magnified Thine holy Name above every name.

In whatsoever day I call upon Thee, answer me: * Thou wilt strengthen my soul exceedingly.

Let all the kings of the earth praise Thee, O LORD, * for they have heard all the words of Thy mouth.

Yea, let them sing of the ways of the LORD: * that great is the glory of the LORD.

For the LORD is high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly: * but the proud He knoweth from afar.

Though I walk in the midst of trouble Thou wilt revive me: * Thou shalt stretch forth Thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and Thy right hand shall save me.

The LORD will give recompense on my behalf: * Thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: forsake not the works of Thine own hands.

After the Fifth Antiphon, the Service proceeds directly, thus:—

Verse. [1] I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me:

Answer. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

Antiphon. All that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me; * and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out.[2]

The Song of the Blessed Virgin.

After the Antiphon, all kneel down, and the Lord's Prayer is said silently, except the words "Our Father," and the termination,

And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Then is said, except on All Souls' Day, and the day of death or burial of the person or persons for whom the Office is being said,

Psalm CXLV.

[To this Psalm is prefixed "Alleluia." The Vulgate and the LXX. connect it with the names of Haggai and Zechariah.]

PRAISE the LORD, O my soul; while I live will I praise the LORD: * I will sing praises unto my God while I have being.

Put not your trust in princes, * in the son of man, in whom is no help.

His breath goeth forth, and he returneth to his earth: * in that very day their thoughts perish.

Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, his hope is in the LORD his God: * Who made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that therein is:

Who keepeth truth for ever. Who executeth judgment for the oppressed: * Who giveth food to the hungry.

The LORD looseth the prisoners: * the LORD openeth the eyes of the blind:

The LORD raiseth them that are bowed down: * the LORD loveth the righteous:

The LORD preserveth the strangers; He defendeth the fatherless and widow: * but the way of the wicked He will turn aside.

The LORD shall reign for ever! even thy God, O Zion, * unto all generations!

At the end is said, O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them!

Verse. From the gates of the grave.

Answer. Deliver their souls, O Lord!

Verse. May they rest in peace.

Answer. Amen.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

---

[1] Apoc. xiv. 13.

[2] John vi. 37.

Let us pray.

Then follow one or more of the Prayers hereafter given, and then:

Verse. O Lord, grant them eternal rest.
Answer. And let the everlasting light shine upon them.
Verse. May they rest in peace.
Answer. Amen.

Thus absolutely ends the Office.

DIFFERENT PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD.

1. On All Souls' Day, for all the Faithful Departed.

O GOD, Who art Thyself at once the Maker and the Redeemer of all Thy faithful ones, grant unto the souls of Thy servants and handmaids remission of all their sins, making of our entreaties unto our Great Father[1] a mean whereby they may have that forgiveness which they have ever hoped for. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

2. For all the Faithful Departed, at other times than All Souls' Day.

O GOD, Who in the ranks of the Apostolic Priesthood hast caused some of Thy servants to stand in high places, some as Bishops, and some as Priests, grant, we beseech Thee, that they may be joined unto such company in everlasting blessedness.

O GOD, Who forgivest iniquity, and wouldest that all men should be saved, we beseech Thee to grant in the tenderness of Thy mercy that all the members of our congregation, all our kinsfolk, and all who have done us good, who have departed from this world, and for whom the Blessed Mary and all Thine holy ones do plead with Thee, may be joined unto the company of the same in everlasting blessedness.

O GOD, Who art Thyself at once the Maker and the Redeemer of all Thy faithful ones, grant unto the souls of Thy servants and handmaids remission of all their sins, making of our entreaties unto our Great Father a mean whereby they may have that forgiveness which they have ever hoped for. Who livest and reignest for ever and ever. Amen.

3. On the Day of Burial.

LORD, we pray Thee to absolve the soul of Thy servant (or, Thine handmaid) N. (here express the name) who hath died unto the world, that he (or, she) may live unto Thee. And whereinsoever while he (or, she) walked among men he (or, she) hath transgressed through the weakness of the flesh, do Thou in the exceeding tenderness of Thy mercy forgive and put away. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

4. At the Year's-Mind.

O LORD God, Who art the Great Pardoner, grant rest and refreshment, peace and blessing, light and glory, unto the souls of Thy men-servants and Thy maid-servants, (or, the soul of Thy servant, or, of Thine handmaid,) whose Year's-Mind we are keeping. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

5. For a deceased Pope.

O GOD, by Whose inscrutable appointment Thy servant N. (here express his name) was called to a place in the line of the Chief Bishops; O God, Who didst thereby lay upon him the duty of being Lieutenant on earth for Thine Only-begotten Son; O God, grant unto him now, we beseech Thee, a place among Thine holy Bishops, who are entered into everlasting blessedness. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

6. For a deceased Priest or Bishop.

O GOD, Who in the ranks of the Apostolic Priesthood hast caused Thy servant N. (here express his name) to stand before Thee in the high place of a Bishop (or Priest), grant, we beseech Thee, that he may be joined unto the company of such in everlasting blessedness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

If the deceased were a Cardinal, his dignity is expressed in the Prayer, thus: "the high place of a Cardinal Bishop," or "of a Cardinal Priest."

7. For deceased Parents.

O GOD, Who hast commanded us to honour our father and mother, look in the pitifulness of Thy mercy upon the souls of my father and mother, (or, the soul of my father, or, the soul of my mother,) and forgive them their trespasses, (or, him his trespasses, or, her her trespasses,) and grant unto me the joy of seeing them (or, him, or, her,) again in the glorious light of everlasting life. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

The above Prayer is altered to suit circumstances, as where several children join in prayer for a parent, or a company of persons for the parents of all, "our" and "us," instead of "my" and "me."

8. For deceased Brethren, Comrades, Friends, Kinsfolk, or Benefactors, is said the Prayer, "O God, Who forgivest iniquity, &c.," (under 2,) with the necessary alterations.

9. For a Man.

O LORD, incline Thine ear unto the prayers whereby we humbly call upon Thee to show mercy unto the soul of Thy servant N. (here express the name) which it hath pleased Thee to call out of this world, that it may please Thee also to set him in a place of peace and light, and give him a part with Thy Saints. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

If the deceased were a Cardinal Deacon, is said "Thy servant the Cardinal Deacon N."

---

[1] Piis.

10. For a Woman.

LORD, we beseech Thee in the tenderness of Thy great mercy, to have pity upon the soul of Thine handmaid N. (here express her name), purge her from all defilements whereby in this dying body she hath been befouled, and give her inheritance in everlasting salvation. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

THE DIRGE.

When three Nocturns are said (as is always the case on All Souls' Day) the Antiphons throughout the Office are doubled, and the Office commences with Ps. xciv., and an Invitatory. Otherwise it begins with the First Antiphon. If one Nocturn be said, the First is said on Mondays and Thursdays, the Second on Tuesdays and Fridays, and the Third on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Invitatory. Unto the [Eternal] King all live.[1] * O come, let us worship Him!

O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them!

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Make my way straight before Thy face, * O Lord my God.

Psalm V.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with a musical (?) superscription.]

GIVE ear unto my words, O LORD, * consider my supplication.

Hearken unto the voice of my cry, * my King and my God!

For unto Thee will I pray. * O LORD, in the morning Thou shalt hear my voice:

In the morning will I stand before Thee and look up. * For Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness:

Neither shall the evil dwell with Thee, * nor the unrighteous stand in Thy sight:

Thou hatest all workers of iniquity. * Thou shalt destroy all them that speak leasing:

The LORD abhorreth the bloody and deceitful man. * But as for me, in the multitude of Thy mercy

I will come into Thine house: * I will worship toward Thine holy temple in Thy fear.

Lead me, O LORD, in Thy righteousness, * because of mine enemies; make my way straight before Thy face.

For there is no faithfulness in their mouth: * their inward part is very wickedness.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue. * Judge Thou them, O God!

Let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions, * for they have rebelled against Thee, O Lord!

And let all those that put their trust in Thee, rejoice: * let them ever shout for joy, because Thou dwellest in them:

Let them also that love Thy Name be joyful in Thee. * For Thou wilt bless the righteous.

O LORD, Thou hast compassed us * with Thy favour as with a shield.

Second Antiphon. Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: * O save me for Thy mercy's sake!

Psalm VI.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David." The title also contains directions, probably musical, the meaning of which is now uncertain.]

O LORD, rebuke me not in Thine anger: * neither chasten me in Thine hot displeasure.

Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am weak: * O LORD, heal me, for my bones are shaken.

My soul also is sore vexed: * but Thou, O LORD, how long?

Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: * O save me for Thy mercy's sake.

For in death there is no one that remembereth Thee: * and in the grave who shall give Thee thanks?

I am weary with my groaning, every night I wash my bed: * I water my couch with my tears.

Mine eye is grown dim because of grief: * I am waxen old because of all mine enemies.

Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity: * for the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping.

The LORD hath heard my supplication: * the LORD hath received my prayer.

Let all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed: * let them return and be ashamed suddenly.

Third Antiphon. Lest he tear my soul like a lion, * while there is none to deliver, or to save.

Psalm VII.

[Intituled "An Hymn of David, which he sang unto the LORD concerning the words of Cush the Benjamite." This Cush is supposed to be the same as Shimei, whose cursing of David is narrated in 2 Kings (Sam.) xvi. 7, 8, or else a nickname for Saul.]

O LORD my God, in Thee do I take refuge: * save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me.

Lest he tear my soul like a lion, * while there is none to deliver, or to save.

O LORD my God, if I have done this, * if there be iniquity in mine hands;

If I have requited with evil them that requited me [with good], * may I then flee empty before mine enemies.

Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it, yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth, * and lay mine honour in the dust.[2]

Arise, O LORD, in Thine anger: * and lift up Thyself against the borders of mine enemies.

And awake for me, O Lord my God, according to the decree that Thou hast made: * so shall the congregation of the people compass Thee about.

For their sakes, therefore, return Thou on high: * the LORD judgeth the peoples.

Judge me, O LORD, according to my righteousness, * and according to mine integrity that is in me.

O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end, and establish the just; * God trieth the hearts and reins.

Mine help is righteous, coming from the Lord, * Who saveth the upright in heart.

---

[1] Luke xx. 38.

[2] SLH.

God is a righteous judge, strong and patient: * is He not provoked every day?

If ye turn not, He will whet His sword: * He hath bent His bow and made it ready.

And hath fitted thereon the instruments of death, * He hath ordained His arrows against the persecutors.

Behold, he travaileth with iniquity: * he hath conceived mischief, and brought forth falsehood.

He made a pit and digged it: * and is fallen into the ditch which he made.

His mischief shall return upon his own head: * and his iniquity shall come down upon his own pate.

I will praise the LORD according to His righteousness: * and will sing praise to the name of the LORD Most High.

Verse. From the gates of the grave
Answer. Deliver their souls, O Lord.

The Lord's Prayer is then said silently, and then is begun immediately the

First Lesson.[1]

LORD! let me alone; for my days are vanity. What is man, that Thou shouldest magnify him? or that Thou shouldest set Thine heart upon him? Thou visitest him very early, and triest him suddenly. How long wilt Thou not depart from me, nor let me alone, till I swallow down my spittle? I have sinned; what shall I do unto Thee, O Thou Preserver of men? Why hast Thou set me as a mark against Thee, so that I am a burden to myself? Why dost Thou not pardon my transgression, and take away mine iniquity? Behold! now shall I sleep in the dust, and if Thou shalt seek me in the morning, I shall not be.

The Responsory is begun directly.

First Responsory.

I believe that my Redeemer liveth, and that I shall stand up from the earth at the latter day, and in my flesh shall I see God my Saviour.
Verse. Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another.
Answer. And in my flesh shall I see God my Saviour.

Second Lesson.[2]

MY soul is weary of my life; I will leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul. I will say unto God: Do not condemn me; show me wherefore Thou judgest me thus. Doth it seem good unto Thee that Thou shouldest maltreat me, that Thou shouldest oppress the work of Thine hands, and help the counsel of the wicked? Hast Thou eyes of flesh? or seest Thou as man seeth? Are Thy days as the days of man? Are Thy years as the times of men, that Thou inquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin? Yet Thou knowest that I have done no wrong, but that there is none that can deliver out of Thine hand.

Second Responsory.

Thou Who didst call up Lazarus from the grave after that he had begun to stink!—do Thou, O Lord, grant them rest and a place of forgiveness.
Verse. Thou Who shalt come to judge the quick and dead, and the world by fire—
Answer. Do Thou, O Lord, grant them rest and a place of forgiveness.

Third Lesson.

THINE hands have made me and fashioned me together round about; and dost Thou so suddenly destroy me? Remember, I beseech Thee, that Thou hast made me as the clay, and that Thou wilt bring me into the dust again. Hast Thou not poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese? Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh; and hast fenced me with bones and sinews. Thou hast granted me life and favour, and Thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

Third Responsory.

Lord, when Thou comest to judge the earth, where shall I hide myself from the face of Thy wrath? For I have sinned greatly in my life.

Verse. I dread my sins, I blush before Thee—
I see the Great Tribunal set!
In fear and terror I implore Thee,
Forgive when soul and Judge are met!

Answer. For I have sinned greatly in my life.
Verse. O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them.
Answer. For I have sinned greatly in my life.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. He maketh me to lie down * in green pastures.

Psalm XXII.

[Intituled a "Psalm of David."]

THE LORD is my Shepherd, I shall not want. * He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:

He leadeth me beside the still waters. * He restoreth my soul:

He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness, * for His Name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: * for Thou art with me:

Thy rod and Thy staff * they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me, * in the presence of mine enemies:

Thou anointest mine head with oil: * and mine overflowing cup, O how goodly is it!

Surely Thy mercy shall follow me * all the days of my life:

And I will dwell in the house of the LORD * for ever.

Second Antiphon. Lord, remember not the sins of my youth, * nor my transgressions.

Psalm XXIV.

[Intituled "Of David." This Psalm is A B C Darian.]

UNTO Thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul: * O my God, I trust in Thee, let me not be ashamed.

Neither let mine enemies triumph over me: * for none that wait on Thee shall be ashamed:

---

[1] Job vii. 16.

[2] Job. x. 1.

Let them be ashamed that transgress * without cause.

Show me Thy ways, O LORD, * and teach me Thy paths.

Lead me in Thy truth and teach me; * for Thou art the God of my salvation: and on Thee do I wait all the day.

Remember, O LORD, Thy tender mercies, * and Thy loving-kindnesses, which have been ever of old.

Remember not the sins of my youth, * nor my transgressions:

According to Thy mercy remember Thou me, * for Thy goodness' sake, O LORD.

Good and upright is the LORD; * therefore will He teach sinners in the way.

The meek will He guide in judgment: * the meek will He teach His way.

All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth, * unto such as keep His covenant and His testimonies.

For Thy Name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; * for it is great.

What man is he that feareth the LORD? * him shall He teach in the way that He shall choose.

His soul shall dwell at ease: * and his seed shall inherit the earth.

The LORD is a strong rock unto them that fear Him: * and His covenant shall be made known to them.

Mine eyes are ever toward the LORD: * for He shall pluck my feet out of the net.

Turn Thee unto me, and have mercy upon me, * for I am desolate and afflicted.

The troubles of mine heart are enlarged: * O bring me out of my distresses.

Look upon mine affliction and my pain: * and forgive all my sins.

Consider mine enemies, for they are many: * and they hate me with cruel hatred.

O keep my soul, and deliver me: * let me not be ashamed, for I put my trust in Thee.

The undefiled and the upright cleave to me: * for I wait on Thee.

Redeem Israël, O God, * out of all his troubles!

Third Antiphon. I believe that I shall yet see the goodness of the LORD * in the land of the living.

Psalm XXVI.

[Intituled "Of David." The Vulgate and the LXX. add "before his anointing." See 2 Kings (Sam.) ii. 4. Monday, fifth week after Pentecost.]

THE LORD is my light and my salvation: * whom shall I fear?

The LORD is the defence of my life: * of whom shall I be afraid?

When the evil-doers come upon me, * to eat up my flesh,

Mine enemies that trouble me, * they stumble and fall.

Though an host should encamp against me, * mine heart shall not fear.

Though war should rise against me, * in this will I be confident.

One thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after, * that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life,

To behold the beauty of the LORD, * and to visit His temple.

For He hath hidden me in His pavilion: * in the secret of His tabernacle hath He hidden me in the day of trouble.

He hath set me up upon a rock: * and now hath He lifted up mine head above mine enemies.

I will offer in His tabernacle the sacrifice of joy: * I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.

Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice: * have mercy on me and answer me.

My heart said unto Thee, My face hath sought Thee: * Thy face, LORD, will I seek.

Hide not Thy face far from me: * turn not away in anger from Thy servant.

Be Thou mine Helper, * neither leave me, nor forsake me, O God of my salvation.

When my father and my mother forsake me, * then the LORD taketh me up.

Teach me Thy way, O LORD: * and lead me in a plain path, because of mine enemies.

Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: * for false witnesses are risen up against me, and iniquity hath belied itself.

I believe that I shall yet see the goodness of the LORD * in the land of the living.

Wait on the LORD, be of good courage: * and thine heart shall be strengthened, wait, I say, on the LORD.

Verse. May the LORD set them with princes.

Answer. Even with the princes of His people.

Fourth Lesson.[1]

ANSWER Thou me: how many are mine iniquities and sins? Make me to know my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hidest Thou Thy face, and holdest me for Thine enemy? Dost Thou show forth Thy power against a leaf driven to and fro by the wind? And wilt Thou pursue the dry stubble? For Thou writest bitter things against me, and art fain to consume me with the iniquities of my youth. Thou puttest my feet in the stocks, and lookest narrowly unto all my paths, and observest my footsteps, and as a rotten thing I am to be consumed, and as a garment that is moth-eaten.

Fourth Responsory.

Remember, O God, that my life is wind. The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more.

Verse. Out of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O LORD! Lord, hear my voice.

Answer. The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more.

Fifth Lesson.[2]

MAN that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not. And dost Thou think it worthy to open Thine eyes upon such an one, and to bring him into judgment with Thee? Who can bring a clean thing out of unclean seed? Is it not Thou Who alone art? The days of man are short, the number of his months is with Thee: Thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass. Turn from him for a little while, that he may rest, till he shall accomplish, as an hireling, his day.

---

[1] Job xiii. 22.

[2] Job xiv. 1.

Fifth Responsory.

Woe is me, O Lord! for I have sinned greatly in my life. I am smitten: what shall I do? Whither shall I flee but unto Thee, O my God? Have mercy upon me, when Thou comest at the latter day.

Verse. My soul is sore vexed, but Thou, O LORD, help me.

Answer. Have mercy upon me, when Thou comest at the latter day.

Sixth Lesson.

O THAT Thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that Thou wouldest keep me secret, until Thy wrath be past; that Thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me. If a man die, shall he live again? All the days wherein I now toil, I am waiting till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer Thee. Thou wilt stretch forth Thy right hand unto the work of Thine hands. Thou dost indeed number my steps, but be Thou merciful unto my sins.

Sixth Responsory.

Hold not my sins in remembrance, O Lord, when Thou comest to judge the world by fire.

Verse. Make my way straight before Thy face, O Lord my God.

Answer. When Thou comest to judge the world by fire.

Verse. O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them.

Answer. When Thou comest to judge the world by fire.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: * O LORD, look upon me to help me.

Psalm XXXIX.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David" and with the same (now) uncertain superscription as Ps. xii.]

I WAITED patiently for the LORD, * and He inclined unto me,

And heard my cry: * He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, and out of the miry clay.

And set my feet upon a rock; * and ordered my goings.

And He hath put a new song in my mouth, * even praise unto our God.

Many shall see it, and fear, * and shall trust in the LORD.

Blessed is that man whose trust is the Name of the LORD: * and who respecteth not pride and lying vanities.

Many, O LORD my God, are Thy wonderful works which Thou hast done: * and in Thy thoughts there is none like unto Thee.

If I would declare and speak of them, * they are more than can be numbered.

Sacrifice and offering Thou hast not desired; * but mine ears hast Thou opened.

Burnt-offering and sin-offering hast Thou not required: * then said I: Lo, I come.

In the beginning of the book it is written of me that I should fulfil Thy will: * O my God, I delight to do it, yea, Thy law is within mine heart.

I have preached Thy righteousness in the great congregation: * lo, I have not refrained my lips: O LORD, Thou knowest.

I have not hidden Thy righteousness within my heart: * I have declared Thy faithfulness and Thy salvation.

I have not concealed Thy loving-kindness, and Thy truth * from the great congregation.

Withhold not Thou Thy tender mercies from me, O LORD: * let Thy loving-kindness and Thy truth continually preserve me.

For countless evils have compassed me about: * mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, and I am not able to look up.

They are more in number than the hairs of mine head: * and mine heart faileth me.

Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: * O LORD, look upon me to help me.

Let them be ashamed and confounded together that seek after my soul, * to destroy it.

Let them be driven backward, and put to shame, * that wish me evil.

Let them quickly bear their shame, * that say unto me: Aha, Aha.

Let all those that seek Thee rejoice and be glad in Thee: * and let such as love Thy salvation say continually: The LORD be magnified.

But I am poor and needy: * the Lord thinketh upon me.

Thou art my help and my deliverer: * make no tarrying, O God.

Second Antiphon. LORD, heal my soul; * for I have sinned against Thee.

Psalm XL.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David," with some other words, of meaning now uncertain, as in some other Psalms.]

BLESSED is he that considereth the poor and needy: * the LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.

The LORD preserve him, and quicken him, and make him to be blessed upon the earth: * and deliver him not unto the will of his enemies!

The LORD strengthen him upon his bed of suffering! * Thou hast made all his bed in his sickness.

As for me, I said: LORD, be merciful unto me: * heal my soul, for I have sinned against Thee.

Mine enemies speak evil of me: * When shall he die, and his name perish?

If he came to see me he spake vanity: * his heart gathereth iniquity to itself.

He went out, * and told it.

All they that hate me whispered together against me: * against me did they devise mine hurt.

They plotted together to do me evil: * Now that he lieth, surely he will rise up no more.

Yea, mine own familiar friend in whom I trusted, * who did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me.[1]

But Thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me, and raise me up: * and I will requite them.

By this I know that Thou delightest in me: * because mine enemy cannot triumph over me.

But as for me, Thou upholdest me, because of mine innocence: * and settest me before Thy face for ever.

Blessed be the LORD God of Israël from everlasting, and to everlasting. * Amen, Amen.

Third Antiphon. My soul thirsteth for the living God; * when shall I come and appear before God?

---

[1] Quoted by our Lord. John xiii. 18.

Psalm XLI.

[This Psalm has a superscription, the meaning of which is not now certain, but which seems in part to imply that it was a didactic poem written to be sung by the choir of the Korahites, a family of Levites and singers in the time of David.]

As the hart panteth after the water-brooks: * so panteth my soul after Thee, O God!

My soul is athirst for God, for the mighty God, for the living God: * when shall I come and appear before God?

My tears have been my meat day and night, * while they daily say unto me: Where is thy God?

When I remember these things, I pour out my soul in me: * for I will go unto the place of the wondrous Tabernacle, even unto the house of God.

With the voice of joy and praise, * the noise of a multitude that keep holiday.

Why art thou cast down, O my soul, * and why art thou disquieted in me?

Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him, * the Health of my countenance and my God.

My soul is cast down within me: * therefore will I remember Thee from the land of Jordan, and from the mountains of Hermon,[1] from the Little Hill.[2]

Deep calleth unto deep, * at the noise of Thy waterspouts.

All Thy waves and Thy billows * are gone over me.

The Lord hath commanded [the praise of] His loving-kindness in the day-time, * and in the night His song.

Mine shall it be to pray unto the God of my life. * I will say unto God: Thou art my refuge.

Why hast Thou forgotten me? * and why go I mourning, while the enemy oppresseth me?

While my bones are broken, * they that trouble me, even mine enemies, reproach me;

While they say daily unto me: Where is thy God? * Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me?

Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him: * the health of my countenance and my God.

Verse. O deliver not unto beasts the souls of them that praise Thee!

Answer. And forget not the souls of Thy poor for ever.

Seventh Lesson.[3]

My breath will wax feebler, and my days fewer, and there is nothing before me but the grave. I have not sinned; yet my mind remaineth in affliction. Deliver me, O Lord, and set me beside Thee; and let any man's hand fight against me. My days are past, my purposes are broken off, and are but vexation to my spirit. They change the night into day, and again, after the darkness I hope for light. If I wait, the grave is mine house; I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption: Thou art my father—to the worm: Thou art my mother, and my sister. Where therefore is now my hope? As for my patience, who shall consider it?

Seventh Responsory.

Forasmuch as I sin daily, and repent not, the fear of death troubleth me. O God, have mercy upon me, and save me, for in hell there is no redemption.

Verse. Save me, O God, by Thy Name, and judge me in Thy strength.

Answer. O God, have mercy upon me, and save me, for in hell there is no redemption.

Eighth Lesson.[4]

My flesh is consumed, my bone cleaveth unto my skin, and there remaineth not round my teeth save the skin of my lips. Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, at least ye that are my friends, for the hand of the Lord hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God, and glut yourselves upon my flesh? O that my words were now written! O that they were inscribed in a book with an iron pen, or cut in lead, or graven with a chisel upon the flinty rock! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that I shall stand up from the earth at the latter day, and in my flesh shall I see God; Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another. This is mine hope that is laid up in my bosom.

Eighth Responsory.

O Lord, judge me not according to my works; for I have done nothing that can be counted in respect of Thee. I beseech Thy Majesty therefore, that Thou wouldest blot out my transgressions, O God.

Verse. Lord, wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity and cleanse me from my sin.

Answer. Blot out my transgressions, O God.

Ninth Lesson.[5]

WHEREFORE hast Thou brought me forth out of the womb? O that I had perished, and no eye had seen me! I should have been as though I had not been—I should have been carried from the womb to the grave. Are not my days few? Let me alone then, that I may comfort myself a little in my sorrow, before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death, a land of cheerlessness and darkness, where the night of death dwelleth, without any order, but shapelessness and dreadfulness of darkness for ever.

Ninth Responsory when three Nocturns have been said.

Deliver me, O Lord, from eternal death in that awful day when the heavens and the earth shall be shaken,[6] and Thou shalt come to judge the world by fire.

Verse. Quaking and dread take hold upon me, when I look for the coming of the trial and the wrath to come.

Answer. When the heavens and the earth shall be shaken.

Verse. That day is a day of wrath, of wasteness and desolation, a great day and exceeding bitter.[7]

[1] A chain of mountains in the north-east of Palestine, stretching down on the eastern side of Jordan.

[2] Or rather, the hill Mizar (viz. the Little), proper name of a mountain on the eastern ridge of Lebanon. May it not be that the Korahites were among the Levitical families which had cities in the north and north-east districts?

[3] Job xvii. 1.

[4] Job xix. 20.

[5] Job x. 18.

[6] Haggai ii. 6.

[7] Zeph. i. 15.

Answer. When Thou shalt come to judge the world by fire.

Verse. O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them!

Answer. Deliver me, O Lord, from eternal death in that awful day, when the heavens and the earth shall be shaken, and Thou shalt come to judge the world by fire.

Ninth Responsory when only one Nocturn has been said.

Deliver me from the ways of hell, O Lord, Who didst break the gates of brass in sunder, and didst descend into hell, and give them light, that they that sat in affliction and darkness might behold Thee.

Verse. Crying and saying, Thou hast come, O our Redeemer—

Answer. That they that sat in affliction and darkness might behold Thee.

Verse. O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them!

Answer. That they that sat in affliction and darkness might behold Thee.

Lauds begin at once with the

First Antiphon. The bones which Thou hast broken * may rejoice.

Psalm L.

[This Psalm has a musical (?) superscription, and the title then proceeds, "A Psalm of David, when Nathan the Prophet came unto him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba." The whole history is in 2 Kings (Sam.) xi. xii. (Saturday, 5th week after Pentecost, and 6th Sunday.)]

HAVE mercy upon me, O God, * after Thy great mercy:

And according to the multitude of Thy tender mercies * blot out my transgressions.

Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity: * and cleanse me from my sin.

For I acknowledge my transgression: * and my sin is ever before me.

Against Thee, Thee only, have I sinned, and done evil in Thy sight: * that Thou mightest be justified when Thou speakest, and be clear when Thou art judged.

For behold, I was shapen in iniquity: * and in sin did my mother conceive me.

For behold Thou desirest truth: * the hidden secrets of Thy wisdom Thou hast made manifest unto me.

Sprinkle me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: * wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Make me to hear joy and gladness: * that the bones which Thou hast broken may rejoice.

Hide Thy face from my sins: * and blot out all mine iniquities.

Create in me a clean heart, O God: * and renew a right spirit within me.

Cast me not away from Thy presence: * and take not Thine holy Spirit from me.

Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation: * and uphold me with Thy free spirit.

Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways: * and sinners shall be converted unto Thee.

Deliver me from blood-guiltiness, O God, Thou God of my salvation: * and my tongue shall sing aloud[1] of Thy righteousness.

O LORD open Thou my lips, * and my mouth shall show forth Thy praise.

For Thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it: * Thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

The sacrifice of God is a broken spirit: * a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise.

Do good in Thy good pleasure unto Zion: * to build the walls of Jerusalem.

Then shalt Thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt-offering and whole burnt-offering: * then shall they offer bullocks upon Thine altar.

Second Antiphon. Lord, hear * my prayer; unto Thee shall all flesh come.

Psalm LXIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm. A Song of David," with a musical (?) superscription. The Vulgate adds that its use was prescribed by Jeremiah and Ezekiel to the exiles when they began to return from the Captivity.]

PRAISE becometh Thee, O God, in Zion: * and unto Thee shall the vow be performed in Jerusalem.

Hear my prayer: * unto Thee shall all flesh come.

Iniquities prevail against us: * but as for our transgressions, Thou shalt purge them away.

Blessed is the man whom Thou choosest, and causest to come near unto Thee: * he shall dwell in Thy courts:

We shall be satisfied with the goodness of Thine house: * Thy temple is holy, terrible in righteousness.

Answer us, O God of our salvation: * Thou that art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of the uttermost parts of the sea!

Thou that by Thy strength settest fast the mountains, being girded with power: * Thou that stirrest up the depth of the sea, and the noise of his waves!

The heathen shall be troubled. They that dwell in the uttermost parts shall be afraid at Thy tokens: * Thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.

Thou visitest the earth and waterest it: * Thou greatly enrichest it:

The river of God is full of water: Thou makest ready their corn, * for Thou hast so prepared it.

Drench her furrows, increase the fruits thereof: * the springing thereof shall rejoice at her showers.

Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness: * and Thy fields teem with fruitfulness.

The green places of the wilderness wax fruitful: * and the little hills are girded with joy.

The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also overflow with corn: * they shout for joy, yea, they sing.

Third Antiphon. Thy right hand * upholdeth me.

Psalm LXII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah." This was one of the most perilous periods of David's life, when he was flying from the pursuit of Saul, and hiding in different forests and wildernesses in the south of Palestine. He was betrayed again and again, and had the most hairbreadth escapes. The history will be found in 1 Kings (Sam.) xxii. and xxiii.]

O GOD, Thou art my God, * early will I seek Thee:

My soul thirsteth for Thee, * my flesh longeth for Thee,

In a dry and desert land, without water. * So have I appeared before Thee in the Sanctuary, to see Thy power and Thy glory.

Because Thy loving-kindness is better than life, * my lips shall praise Thee.

Thus will I bless Thee while I live: * and will lift up mine hands in Thy name.

My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; * and my mouth shall praise Thee with joyful lips.

When I remember Thee upon my bed, I meditate upon Thee in the night watches: * because Thou hast been mine help:

And in the shadow of Thy wings will I rejoice. My soul followeth hard after Thee: * Thy right hand upholdeth me.

But those that seek my soul to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth: * they shall fall by the sword, they shall be a portion for foxes.

But the King shall rejoice in God: every one that sweareth by him shall glory: * for the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

Psalm LXVI.

[Besides a musical superscription, the Hebrew and the Targum give no title, except "A Psalm, a Psalm." But the Vulgate and the LXX. ascribe the authorship to David.]

GOD be merciful unto us, and bless us: * cause His face to shine upon us, and be merciful unto us.[1]

That Thy way may be known upon earth: * Thy saving health among all nations.

Let the people praise Thee, O God: * let all the people praise Thee.

O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: * for Thou judgest the people righteously, and governest the nations upon earth.[2]

Let the people praise Thee, O God, let all the people praise Thee. * The earth hath yielded her increase;

Let God, even our own God, bless us; let God bless us: * and let all the ends of the earth fear Him.

Fourth Antiphon. From the gates of the grave * deliver my soul, O Lord.

THE SONG OF HEZEKIAH, KING OF JUDAH. (Isa. xxxviii. 10.)

[Intituled "The writing of Hezekiah, King of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness." The history will be found in 4 (2) Kings xx. (11th Sunday after Pentecost.)]

I SAID, In the midst of my days, * I shall go to the gates of the grave:

I looked for the rest of my years. * I said, I shall not see the Lord my God[3] in the land of the living:

I shall behold man no more, * with the dwellers in the land of rest.

Mine age is departed, and is rolled up from me, * as a shepherd's tent:

My life is cut off as by a weaver: my web was scarce begun when He cut me off: * from day even to night wilt Thou make an end of me.

I thought I might live till morning: * as a lion, so doth He break all my bones:

From day even to night wilt Thou make an end of me. * Like a swallow's fledgling so did I twitter, I did coo as a dove:

Mine eyes fail, * with looking upward.

O Lord, I am seized, undertake for me. * What shall I say, or what will He answer me, seeing that He Himself hath done it?

I will call to remembrance before Thee all my years * in the bitterness of my soul.

O Lord, if by these things men live, and in such things is the life of my spirit, so mayest Thou chasten me, and make me to live. * Behold, mine anguish is [turned] into peace:

But Thou hast delivered my soul from destruction: * Thou hast cast all my sins behind Thy back.

For the grave cannot praise Thee, death cannot celebrate Thee: * they that go down into the pit cannot hope for Thy truth.

The living, the living, he shall praise Thee, as I do this day: * the father to the children shall make known Thy truth.

O Lord, save me: * and we will sing our songs all the days of our life in the house of the Lord.

Fifth Antiphon. Let everything that hath breath * praise the Lord.

Psalm CXLVIII.

[To this Psalm is prefixed "Alleluia." The LXX. connects it with the Prophets Haggai and Zechariah. See Thursday and Friday in the fifth week of November.]

PRAISE ye the Lord from the heavens: * praise Him in the heights.

Praise ye Him, all His Angels: * praise ye Him, all His hosts.

Praise ye Him, sun and moon: * praise Him, all ye stars and light.

Praise Him, ye heavens of heavens: * and all the waters that be above the heavens. Let them praise the Name of the Lord!

For He spake, and they were made[4]: * He commanded and they were created.

He hath established them for ever and ever: * He hath made a decree which shall not pass.

Praise the Lord from the earth, * ye dragons, and all deeps:—

Fire, hail, snow, ice, stormy wind, * fulfilling His word:—

Mountains, and all hills, * fruitful trees, and all cedars:—

Beasts, and all cattle, * creeping things, and flying fowl:—

Kings of the earth, and all people; * princes, and all judges of the earth:—

Young men, and maidens, old men, and children: let them praise the Name of the Lord—* for His Name alone is exalted!

His glory is above heaven and earth. * He also exalteth the horn of His people,

The praise of all His Saints, * even of the children of Israël, a people near unto Him.

Psalm CXLIX.

SING unto the Lord a new song: * His praise in the congregation of Saints.

Let Israël rejoice in Him That made him: * and let the children of Zion be joyful in their King.

Let them praise His Name in the dance: * let them sing praises unto Him with the timbrel and harp.

For the Lord taketh pleasure in His people: * He also will exalt the meek unto salvation.

---

[1] SLH. The repetition of the words "be merciful unto us," is peculiar to the Latin.

[2] SLH.

[3] "My God" is not in the Hebrew, but the Divine Name is repeated.

[4] Taken from Ps. xxxii. 9.

Let the Saints be joyful in glory: * let them sing aloud upon their beds:

Let the high praises of God be in their mouth; * and a two-edged sword in their hands;

To execute vengeance upon the heathen, * and punishments upon the people;

To bind their kings with chains, * and their nobles with fetters of iron;

To execute upon them the judgment written: * this honour have all His Saints.

Psalm CL.

PRAISE the Lord in His sanctuary! * praise Him in the firmament of His power!

Praise Him in His mighty acts! * praise Him according to His excellent greatness!

Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet! * praise Him with the psaltery and harp!

Praise Him with the timbrel and dance! * praise Him with stringed instruments and organs!

Praise Him upon the loud cymbals, praise Him upon the high-sounding cymbals! * Let everything that hath breath praise the LORD!

After the Fifth Antiphon the service proceeds directly thus:

Answer. I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me:

Verse. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

Antiphon. [1] I am the resurrection and the life: * he that believeth in Me though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die.

The Song of Zacharias.

After the repetition of the Antiphon, all kneel down, and the service ends as at Vespers, except that, if Ps. cxlv. have been said at Vespers, now is said instead,

Psalm CXXIX.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees." The meaning of this title is not certain. The Psalms so called may perhaps, like the "Graduals" of the Roman Liturgy, be "step-songs," intended to be sung during processions, Liturgical or of pilgrims.]

OUT of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O LORD! * Lord, hear my voice.

Let Thine ears be attentive * to the voice of my supplication.

If Thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, * O Lord, who shall stand?

But there is forgiveness with Thee: * because of Thy law, I wait for Thee, O LORD!

My soul waiteth on His word: * my soul hopeth in the Lord.

From the morning watch even until night * let Israël hope in the LORD:

For with the LORD there is mercy, * and with Him is plenteous redemption.

And He shall redeem Israël, * from all his iniquities.

The Gradual Psalms.

The Gradual Psalms are said every Wednesday in Lent, unless a Feast of Nine Lessons is being kept. They are not said in Holy Week. In Choir they are said before the Mattins of the day; out of Choir, whenever convenient.

No Antiphon is said with these Psalms.

At the end of the first five, the Hymn "Glory be to the Father, &c.," is not said.

Ps. cxix. In my distress, &c., (p. 105.)

Ps. cxx. I will lift up mine eyes, &c., (p. 105.)

Ps. cxxi. I was glad, &c., (p. 106.)

Ps. cxxii. Unto Thee lift I up, &c., (p. 107.)

Ps. cxxiii. If it had not been the LORD, &c., (p. 107.)

O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them.

Then all kneel, and the Lord's Prayer is said inaudibly, except the words "Our Father" and the termination—

And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Verse. From the gates of the grave.

Answer. Deliver their souls, O Lord!

Verse. May they rest in peace.

Answer. Amen.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

LORD, we beseech Thee to loosen the souls of Thy men-servants and of Thy maid-servants, even the souls of all Thy faithful children from all bonds soever wherewith their transgressions have bound them, and grant unto them to live and breathe again among all Thy Saints and elect, in a glorious resurrection. Through Christ our Lord.

Answer. Amen.

Then are said the next five, and at the end of each the Hymn, "Glory be to the Father, &c."

Ps. cxxiv. They that trust in the LORD, &c., (p. 107.)

Ps. cxxv. When the LORD turned, &c., (p. 107.)

Ps. cxxvi. Except the LORD build, &c., (p. 108.)

Ps. cxxvii. Blessed is every one, &c., (p. 108.)

Ps. cxxviii. Many a time, &c., (p. 108.)

Then all kneel.

Kyrie eleison.
Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.

Our Father (the Lord's Prayer is continued inaudibly till the termination) And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

---

[1] John xi. 25, 26.

Verse. Remember Thy congregation.

Answer. Which Thou hast purchased of old.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Whose property is ever to have mercy and to forgive, receive our humble petitions, and grant that we and all Thy servants who are bound by the chain of sin, may, by the tenderness of Thy pity, mercifully be absolved. Through Christ our Lord.

Answer. Amen.

Then are said the next five, and at the end of each the Hymn, "Glory be to the Father, &c."

Ps. cxxix. Out of the depths, &c., (p. 51.)

Ps. cxxx. LORD, my heart is not haughty, &c., (p. 108.)

Ps. cxxxi. LORD, remember David, &c., (p. 109.)

Ps. cxxxii. Behold, how good, &c., (p. 109.)

Ps. cxxxiii. Behold, now, bless ye, &c., (p. 117.)

Then all kneel.

Kyrie eleison.
Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.

Our Father (the Lord's Prayer is continued inaudibly till the termination) And lead us not into tempation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Verse. O Thou my God, save Thy servants.

Answer. That trust in Thee.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

STRETCH forth, O Lord, over all Thy men-servants and Thy maid-servants the right arm of Thy help from heaven, that they may seek Thee with all their heart, and what they ask worthily may obtain effectually. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Seven Penitential Psalms and the Litany.

These are said kneeling every Friday in Lent when the Office is of the Week-day, except Good Friday, and the Litany alone (without the Seven Psalms) on St Mark's Day, April 25—and on the three Rogation Days. In Lent they are said in Choir after Lauds (immediately after V. Bless we the Lord. R. Thanks be to God.) Out of Choir, when convenient.

Glory be to the Father, &c., is said after each Psalm.

Antiphon. Remember not.

Ps. vi. O LORD, rebuke me not, &c., (p. 3.)

Ps. xxxi. Blessed are they, &c., (p. 43.)

Ps. xxxvii. O LORD, rebuke me not, &c., (p. 46.)

Ps. l. Have mercy upon me, &c., (p. 49.)

Ps. ci. Hear my prayer, &c., (p. 90.)

Ps. cxxix. Out of the depths, &c., (p. 51.)

Ps. cxlii. Hear my prayer, &c. (p. 87.)

Antiphon. [1] Remember not, Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers; neither take Thou vengeance of our sins.

That it may please Thee to give peace and true concord unto all Christian Kings and Princes,
That it may please Thee to give peace and unity to all Christian nations,
That it may please Thee to strengthen and preserve us in Thy holy Service,
That Thou wouldest raise up our minds to heavenly desires,
That Thou wouldest reward with eternal good all them who do good to us,
That Thou wouldest deliver our souls, and the souls of our brethren, kinsfolk, and benefactors, from eternal damnation,
That it may please Thee to give and preserve to our use the fruits of the earth,
That it may please Thee to grant eternal rest unto all the faithful departed,
That it may please Thee graciously to hear us,
We beseech Thee to hear us.

Son of God,
O Lamb of God, That takest away the sins of the world.
Spare us, O Lord.
O Lamb of God, That takest away the sins of the world,
Graciously hear us, O Lord.
O Lamb of God, That takest away the sins of the world,
Have mercy upon us.
O Christ, hear us,
Graciously hear us, O Christ.

Kyrie eleison.
Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.

Our Father, (the Lord's Prayer is continued inaudibly till the termination.)

And lead us not into temptation.
But deliver us from evil.

Psalm LXIX.

MAKE haste, O God, to deliver me: * make haste to help me, O LORD.

Let them be ashamed and confounded, * that seek after my soul.

Let them be turned backward and put to confusion, * that desire my hurt.

Let them be turned back with shame, * that say unto me: Aha, aha.

Let all those that seek Thee be joyful and glad in Thee, * and let such as love Thy salvation say continually: Let the Lord be magnified.

But I am poor and needy: * help me, O God.

Thou art my help and deliverer: * O LORD, make no tarrying.

Glory be to the Father, &c.
As it was in the beginning, &c.

Verse. [1] O Thou, my God, save Thy servants,
Answer. That trust in Thee.
Verse. [2] Lord, be Thou unto us a strong tower
Answer. From the enemy.
Verse. [3] Let the enemy prevail nothing against us.
Answer. Nor the son of wickedness afflict us.
Verse. [4] Deal not Thou with us after our sins.
Answer. Nor reward us according to our iniquities.
Verse. Let us pray for our Bishop. (Here the name of the reigning Pope is inserted.) [5]
Answer. [6] The Lord preserve him, and quicken him, and make him to be blessed upon the earth, and deliver him not unto the will of his enemies.
Verse. Let us pray for them who have done good to us.
Answer. May it please Thee, O Lord, to reward with eternal life all them who do good to us for Thy Name's sake. Amen.
Verse. Let us pray for the faithful departed.
Answer. O Lord, grant them eternal rest, and let the everlasting light shine upon them.
Verse. May they rest in peace.
Answer. Amen.

Verse. Let us pray for our absent brethren.

Answer. O Thou my God, save Thy servants that trust in Thee.

Verse. [1] O Lord, send them help from the sanctuary.

Answer. And strengthen them out of Zion.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O Lord.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Whose property is ever to have mercy and to forgive, receive our humble petitions, and grant that we and all Thy servants who are bound by the chain of sin may, by the tenderness of Thy pity, mercifully be absolved.

O LORD, we beseech Thee graciously to hear our humble petitions, and spare all those who confess their sins unto Thee, granting us in Thy goodness pardon and peace.

BE graciously pleased, O Lord, to show forth upon us Thine unspeakable mercy, ridding us from all sin, and therewithal delivering us from all pains which for the same we do justly deserve.

O GOD, Whom sin doth justly move to anger, and repentance turn again mercifully to forgive the same, look down now graciously upon the supplications of Thy people praying before Thee, and turn away the scourges of Thy wrath, which for our sins we do most rightfully deserve.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, have pity upon Thy servant our Bishop N., (here name the Pope,) and order his goings according to Thy mercy in the paths of eternal salvation, that by the gift of Thy grace he may ever seek such things as please Thee, and with all his strength fulfil the same.

O GOD, from Whom all holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works do proceed; give unto Thy servants that peace which the world cannot give, that both our hearts may be set to obey Thy commandments, and also that by Thee we being defended from the fear of our enemies, may pass our time in rest and quietness.

LORD, burn our reins and our hearts with the fire of Thy Holy Spirit, that we may serve Thee with chaste bodies and pure minds.

O GOD, Who art Thyself at once the Maker and the Redeemer of all Thy faithful ones, grant unto the souls of Thy servants and handmaids remission of all their sins, making of our entreaties unto our Great Father a mean whereby they may have that forgiveness which they have ever longed for.

PREVENT us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, in all our doings, with Thy gracious inspiration, and further us with Thy continual help, that every prayer and work of ours may begin from Thee, and by Thee be duly ended.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who art Lord both of the living and of the dead, and hast mercy upon all whom Thou foreknowest shall by faith and work be Thine, we most humbly beseech on behalf of all for whom we have a mind to pray, whether they be yet entangled in the flesh in this present world, or whether they be already rid of the body, and entered into that world which for us is still to come, that all Thy holy children may pray for them, and that the pitifulness of Thy mercy may grant unto them the forgiveness of all their trespasses. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end.

Answer. Amen.

Verse. May the almighty and merciful Lord graciously hear us.

Answer. Amen.

Verse. And may the souls of the faithful, through the mercy of God, rest in peace.

Answer. Amen.

Grace before and after Meat.

Before dinner, he who blesses the meal says:

Verse. Bless ye—

Answer. Bless ye.

Then he says:

[2] The eyes of all—

And the rest continue:

Wait upon Thee, O Lord, and Thou givest them their meat in due season. Thou openest Thine hand, and fillest all things living with plenteousness.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, &c.

Answer. As it was, &c.

Kyrie eleison.

Christe eleison.

Kyrie eleison.

Our Father, (inaudibly till the last words,)

And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Let us pray.

BLESS us, O Lord, and these Thy gifts, which we are about to receive from Thy bounty. Through Christ our Lord.

Answer. Amen.

Reader. Sir, be pleased to give the blessing.

The Blessing.

May the King of eternal glory make us to be partakers at His table in heaven.

Answer. Amen.

At the end of dinner, the Reader concludes, saying:

But Thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

Answer. Thanks be to God.

Verse. [3] May all Thy works praise Thee, O LORD!

Answer. And let Thy Saints bless Thee!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, &c.

Answer. As it was, &c.

We give Thee thanks, O Almighty God, for all Thy mercies. Who livest and reignest for ever and ever.

Answer. Amen.

[1] Ps. xix. 3.

[2] Ps. cxliv. 15, 16.

[3] Ps. cxliv. 10.

Then is said alternately either Ps. l., "Have mercy upon me, &c.," (p. 49,) or Ps. cxvi. "O praise the LORD, &c.," (p. 105.) Then:

Verse. Glory be to the Father, &c.
Answer. As it was, &c.

Kyrie eleison.
Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.
Our Father, (inaudibly till the last words,)
And lead us not into temptation.
Answer. But deliver us from evil.
Verse. [1] He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor—
Answer. His righteousness endureth for ever.
Verse. [2] I will bless the LORD at all times—
Answer. His praise shall continually be in my mouth.
Verse. My soul shall make her boast in the LORD—
Answer. The humble shall hear thereof and be glad.
Verse. O magnify the LORD with me—
Answer. And let us exalt His Name together.
Verse. [3] Blessed be the Name of the LORD!—
Answer. From this time forth and for evermore!
May it please Thee, O Lord, to reward with eternal life all them who do good to us for Thy Name's sake.
Answer. Amen.
Verse. Bless we the Lord.
Answer. Thanks be to God.
Verse. May the souls of the faithful, through the mercy of God, rest in peace.
Answer. Amen.

The Lord's Prayer is again said, inaudibly throughout, and then:

God grant us His peace.
Answer. Amen.

At supper the form is the same, except the following:

Text at the beginning (Ps. xxi. 27.)

The poor shall eat—
And be satisfied, and they shall praise the LORD that seek Him: their heart shall live for ever.

Blessing.

May the King of eternal glory bring us to sup with Him in eternal life.

At the end:

Verse. [4] He hath made a memorial of His wonderful works.
Answer. The LORD is gracious and full of compassion: He hath given meat unto them that fear Him.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, &c.
Answer. As it was, &c.
[5] God is blessed in all His gifts, and holy in all His works.
Answer. Amen.

And Ps. cxvi. is always said.

On some days the form is special, as follows:

Note 1. These special passages are used both at dinner and supper.
Note 2. On a Fast-Day, the single meal allowed is supper.
Note 3. It is always allowed to substitute Psalm cxvi. for the special Psalm appointed, except on Maundy Thursday and Good Friday.

1. On Christmas Day to dinner on Jan. 5, and inclusive.

Text at the beginning (John i. 14.)

The Word was made Flesh, Alleluia,—
And dwelt among us. Alleluia.

At the end:

Verse. The LORD hath made known, Alleluia,—
Answer. His salvation. Alleluia.

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

2. On the Epiphany and throughout the Octave.

Text at the beginning (Ps. lxxi. 10.)

The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents. Alleluia—
The kings of Arabia and Saba shall offer gifts. Alleluia.

At the end:

Verse. [6] All they from Saba shall come. Alleluia—
Answer. They shall bring gold and incense. Alleluia.

Ps. lxxi. Give the King, &c., (p. 72.)

3. At supper on Maundy Thursday, nothing is said except the following:

At the beginning (without any "Bless ye, &c.")

Christ, for our sakes, became obedient unto death.

Then the Lord's Prayer is said inaudibly throughout, and afterwards the sign of the Cross is made silently.
If there be reading, nothing is said by the Reader before or after, and no blessing, &c.

At the end:

Christ for our sakes, &c.

Then Ps. l. (p. 49,) without "Glory, &c."
Then the Lord's Prayer is said inaudibly throughout.
Then the Prayer, "Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 335,) the last clause, "Who liveth, &c.," being said inaudibly.
Then the Lord's Prayer again inaudibly throughout.

4. At supper on Good Friday, the same, except that the words "even the death of the Cross" are added to the "Christ, for our sakes, &c."

5. Supper on Holy Saturday is as usual, with the following:

Text at the beginning (Matth. xxviii. 1.)

But in the end of the Sabbath,
As it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, Alleluia—Came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre. Alleluia.

At the end, the same is repeated as V. and R.

6. From dinner on Easter Day to dinner on the next Saturday, both inclusive.

Text at the beginning (Ps. cxvii. 24.)

This is the day which the LORD hath made, Alleluia—
Let us rejoice and be glad in it. Alleluia.

At the end, the same is repeated as V. and R.

Ps. cxvii. O give thanks, &c., (p. 21.)

[6] Isa. lx. 6.

7. On Ascension Day and thereafter to the supper on Friday before Whitsun Day, both inclusive.

Text at the beginning (Ps. xlvi. 6.)

God is gone up with a shout, Alleluia,—
And the LORD with the sound of a trumpet. Alleluia.

At the end:

Verse. [1] When Christ ascended up on high—Alleluia.
Answer. He led captivity captive —Alleluia.

Ps. xlvi. O clap your hands, &c., (p. 55.)

8. From supper on Whitsun Eve to supper on the Friday following, both inclusive.

Text at the beginning (Wisd. i. 7.)

The Spirit of the Lord filleth the world, Alleluia—
And That Which containeth all things hath knowledge of the voice. Alleluia.

At the end:

Verse. [2] They were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Alleluia.
Answer. And began to speak. Alleluia.

Verse. [3] O Thou my God, save Thy servants,
Answer. That trust in Thee.
Verse. [4] O Lord, send us help from the sanctuary.
Answer. And strengthen us out of Zion.
Verse. [5] Lord, be Thou unto us a strong tower,
Answer. From the enemy.
Verse. [6] Let the enemy prevail nothing against us,
Answer. Nor the son of wickedness afflict us.
Verse. [7] Blessed be the Lord daily.
Answer. The God of our salvation maketh our way prosperous.
Verse. [8] Show us Thy ways, O LORD.
Answer. And teach us Thy paths.
Verse. [9] O that our ways were directed,
Answer. To keep Thy statutes.
Verse. [10] The crooked shall be made straight.
Answer. And the rough places plain.
Verse. [11] God hath given His Angels charge over thee.
Answer. To keep thee in all thy ways.
Verse. Hear my prayer, O LORD.
Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Who madest the children of Israël to walk with dry feet through the midst of the sea, and Who didst open unto the three wise men, by the guiding of a star, the way that led unto Thee, grant us good speed, and quietness, that Thine holy Angel may be with us, and that we may happily come thither whither we would, now, and, in the end, unto the haven of eternal salvation.

O GOD, Who didst call Thy servant Abraham out of Ur of the Chaldees, and didst keep him from evil through all the ways of his pilgrimage, we beseech Thee, that it may please Thee to keep us Thy servants. Be Thou unto us, O Lord, an help when we go forward, a comfort by the way, a shadow from the heat, a covering from the rain and the cold, a chariot in weariness, a refuge in trouble, a staff in slippery paths, an haven in shipwreck. Do Thou lead us, that we may happily come thither where we would be, and thereafter come again safe unto our own home.

GRACIOUSLY hear our supplications, O Lord, we beseech Thee, and order the goings of Thy servants in the safe path that leadeth unto salvation in Thee, that amidst all the manifold changes of this life's pilgrimage, Thy shield may never cease from us.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that Thy family may fare onward in the path of salvation, and by giving heed to the preaching of the blessed Fore-runner John, may safely attain unto Him Whom John preached, even our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Verse. Let us go on in peace.
Answer. In the name of the Lord. Amen.

Psalm LXXXIII.

[Intituled "A Psalm of the sons of Korah." It has the same superscription as Ps. lxx., referring possibly to the vintage. It reads as if it were a pilgrim-song referring to the going up of all the males of Israël to Jerusalem to observe the Feast of Tabernacles, when harvest and vintage were over.]

HOW lovely are Thy tabernacles, O LORD of Hosts! * my soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the LORD:

Mine heart and my flesh * rejoice for the living God.

Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, * and the dove a nest for herself, where she may lay her young,

Even Thine altars, O LORD of hosts, * my King and my God!

Blessed are they that dwell in Thine house, O Lord; * they will be ever praising Thee.[1]

Blessed is the man whose strength is from Thee; * who hath settled in his heart to go up [to Thy sanctuary,] through the vale of tears,[2] to the place which he hath appointed.

He That hath given the Law will give His blessing; they shall go from strength to strength: * they appear before the God of gods in Zion.

O LORD God of hosts, hear my prayer: * give ear, O God of Jacob![1]

Behold, O God, our shield: * and look upon the face of Thine Anointed.

For a day in Thy courts is better * than a thousand.

I had rather be a menial in the house of my God, * than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

For God loveth mercy and truth: * the LORD will give grace and glory.

No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly. * O LORD of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in Thee!

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Psalm LXXXIV.

[Intituled "A Psalm of the sons of Korah," with the usual (now uncertain) superscription.]

LORD, Thou hast been favourable unto Thy land: * Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob.

Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of Thy people: * Thou hast covered all their sins.[3]

Thou hast taken away all Thy wrath: * Thou hast turned Thyself from the fierceness of Thine anger.

Turn us, O God of our salvation, * and cause Thine anger towards us to cease.

Wilt Thou be angry with us for ever? * wilt Thou draw out Thine anger to all generations?

O God, Thou shalt again quicken us: * and Thy people shall rejoice in Thee.

Show us Thy mercy, O Lord! * and grant us Thy salvation.

I will hear what the LORD God will speak in me: * for He will speak peace unto His people,

And to His saints, * and unto them that are changed in heart.

Surely His salvation is nigh them that fear Him, * that glory may dwell in our land.

Mercy and truth have met together: * righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Truth hath sprung out of the earth: * and righteousness hath looked down from heaven.

Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good: * and our land shall yield her increase.

Righteousness shall go before Him: * and shall set His footsteps in the way.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Psalm LXXXV.

[Intituled "A Prayer of David."]

BOW down Thine ear, O LORD, and hear me: * for I am poor and needy.

Preserve my soul, for I am holy: * O Thou my God, save Thy servant that trusteth in Thee.

Be merciful unto me, O Lord, for I cry unto Thee all the day long: * rejoice the soul of Thy servant, for unto Thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.

For Thou, Lord, art good and ready to forgive, * and plenteous in mercy to all them that call upon Thee.

Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer: * and attend to the voice of my supplication.

In the day of my trouble I called upon Thee, * for Thou hast heard me.

Among the gods there is none like unto Thee, O Lord: * neither are there any works like unto Thy works.

All nations whom Thou hast made shall come and worship before Thee, O Lord: * and shall glorify Thy name.

For Thou art great and doest wondrous things: * Thou art God alone.

Teach me Thy way, O LORD, and I will walk in Thy truth: * let mine heart be glad, that it may fear Thy name.

I will praise Thee, O Lord my God, with all mine heart, * and I will glorify Thy name for evermore.

For great is Thy mercy toward me: * and Thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell.

O God, the wicked are risen against me, and the assemblies of violent men have sought after my soul, * and have not set Thee before them.

But Thou, O Lord, art a God full of compassion and gracious, * longsuffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth.

O look upon me, and have mercy upon me: * give Thy strength unto Thy servant, and save the son of Thine handmaid!

Show me a token for good, that they which hate me may see it and be ashamed: * because Thou, O LORD, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Psalm CXV.

[In the Hebrew this Psalm is a continuation of the last. The Vulgate and the LXX. prefix "Alleluia."]

I BELIEVED, therefore have I spoken: * but I was greatly afflicted.

I said in my haste: * All men are liars.

What shall I render unto the LORD * for all His benefits toward me?

I will take the cup of salvation, * and call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD in the presence of all His people. * Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of His Saints.

O LORD, truly I am Thy servant: * I am Thy servant, and the son of Thine handmaid:

Thou hast loosed my bonds. * I will offer to Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

I will pay my vows unto the LORD, in the presence of all His people: * in the courts of the LORD'S house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem!

[Here the Hebrew appends "Alleluia," which the Vulgate and the LXX. prefix to the next Psalm.]

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Psalm CXXIX.

[Intituled "A Song of Degrees." The meaning of this title is not certain. The Psalms so called may perhaps, like the "Graduals" of the Roman Liturgy, be "step-songs," intended to be sung during processions, Liturgical or of pilgrims.]

OUT of the depths have I cried unto Thee, O LORD! * Lord, hear my voice.

Let Thine ears be attentive * to the voice of my supplication.

If Thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, * O Lord, who shall stand?

But there is forgiveness with Thee: * because of Thy law, I wait for Thee, O LORD!

My soul waiteth on His word: * my soul hopeth in the Lord.

From the morning watch even until night * let Israël hope in the LORD:

For with the LORD there is mercy, * and with Him is plenteous redemption.

And He shall redeem Israël, * from all his iniquities.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Antiphon. Remember not, Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers, neither take Thou vengeance of our sins. [P. T. Alleluia.]

Our Father (the Lord's Prayer is continued inaudibly till the termination.)

Verse. And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Verse. As for me, I said: Lord, be merciful unto me.

Answer. Heal my soul, for I have sinned against Thee.

Verse. Turn again, O Lord, for a little,

Answer. And be entreated for Thy servant's sake.

Verse. O Lord, let Thy mercy lighten upon us.

Answer. As our trust is in Thee.

Verse. Let Thy priests be clothed with righteousness.

Answer. And let Thy Saints shout for joy.

Verse. Lord, cleanse Thou me from secret faults.

Answer. Keep back Thy servant also from the sins of others.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O Lord.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

BOW down Thy Fatherly ears unto our supplications, O most merciful God, and enlighten our hearts by the grace of Thine Holy Spirit, that we may worthily take part in Thy service, and may love Thee with an everlasting love.

O God, unto Whom all hearts lie open, all desires known, and from Whom no secrets are hid, cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of Thine Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love Thee, and worthily magnify Thine Holy Name.

Lord, burn our reins and our hearts with the fire of Thine Holy Spirit, that we may serve Thee with chaste bodies and pure minds.

Lord, we beseech Thee, that the Comforter which proceedeth from Thee may enlighten our minds, and lead us into all truth, even as Thy Son hath promised unto us.

Lord, we beseech Thee, that Thine Holy Spirit may dwell in us in much power, mercifully cleansing our hearts and shielding us from all things hurtful.

O God, Who didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people by sending to them the light of Thine Holy Spirit, grant unto us by the same Spirit to have a right judgment in all things, and evermore to rejoice in His holy comfort.

Lord, we beseech Thee to cleanse our consciences by the power of Thine holy visitation, that when our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, cometh, He may find in us a dwelling-place made ready unto Himself. Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Prayer.[1]

O GREAT High Priest and true Bishop, JESUS Christ, Who didst offer Thyself up to God the Father upon the Altar of the Cross as a pure and spotless Victim for us sinful wretches, Who hast given us Thy Flesh to eat and Thy Blood to drink, and hast set this mystery in the power of the Holy Ghost, saying, "Do this as oft as ye do it, in remembrance of Me." I entreat Thee by the same Thy Blood the great price of our salvation, I entreat Thee by that wondrous and unspeakable love wherewith it hath pleased Thee so to love us unworthy wretches as to wash us from our sins in Thine Own Blood, teach me, Thine unworthy servant, whom for no deserts of mine, but by the mere goodness of Thy mercy, Thou hast been pleased among other gifts even to call unto Thine Altar, teach me, I beseech Thee, by Thine Holy Spirit how to deal with this mystery, with the reverence, honour, earnestness, and fear which are behoven and meet. Make me by Thy grace always to believe, understand, feel, hold, say, and think concerning this mystery that which is pleasing unto Thee and expedient for mine own soul. Let Thy good Spirit enter into mine heart to sound there without noise, and to speak all truth without words. These things are very deep, and they are covered with an holy veil. For Thy great mercy's sake, grant that I may take part at Mass with a clean heart and a pure mind. Free my heart from unclean, shameful, vain, and harmful thoughts. Defend me with the kindly and faithful keeping of Thy blessed Angels and their mighty watch, that the enemies of all good may be confounded and go away. By the power of this great mystery, and by the hand of Thine holy Angel, take away from me and from all Thy servants the hard spirit of pride and vain-glory, envy and blasphemy, fornication and uncleanness, doubt and suspicion. Confounded be they that assail us, and may they that would fain destroy us perish.

---

[1] In the original this prayer is divided according to the days of the week; as there are some passages in it which are suitable only for Priests, and which have therefore been here necessarily omitted, it is not here so divided, but the intention clearly is that it should not all be used at one time.

O King of virgins, lover of chastity and purity, by the heavenly dew of Thy blessing quench in my body the fire of unlawful lusts, that my body and soul may remain pure. Kill in my members all unlawful prickings of the flesh and uprisings of lust, and grant unto me, along with Thine other gifts which truly please Thee, true and everlasting chastity according to my state, that I may be able to offer up unto Thee the sacrifice of praise with a pure body and a clean heart. O, what searching of heart, what shedding of tears, what reverence, and what awe, what purity of body and soul are called for by God's heavenly sacrifice when Thy Flesh is eaten indeed and Thy Blood is drunk indeed, where the things of the highest are brought down to the things of the lowest, and the things of God to the things of earth, where the holy Angels are present, where Thou Thyself art wondrously and unspeakably set forth, Thyself at once the sacrifice and the Priest.

Who can worthily deal with this, unless Thou, O God Almighty, should Thyself make him worthy. Lord, I know, I know indeed, and I confess it before Thy Fatherly goodness, that on account of my great sins and my countless failings I am not worthy to draw near to this great mystery, but I also know, I believe indeed with all my heart, and I confess with my mouth, that Thou Who alone art able to bring a clean thing out of an unclean, and to make sinners righteous and holy, art able to make me worthy. O, my God, I entreat Thee by this Thine Almighty power to grant unto me, a sinner, that I may receive this Sacrament with fear and trembling, with purity of heart and with weeping, with spiritual gladness and heavenly joy. Let my soul feel the sweetness of Thy blessed presence, and that Thine Holy Angels keep guard round me.

For I, O Lord, sinner though I be, am going to draw near unto Thine Altar in memory of Thy worshipful passion, to receive there the Sacrament which Thou hast instituted in remembrance of Thyself for our salvation. O God, most high, do Thou receive that remembrance on behalf of Thine holy Church, and on behalf of Thy people Whom Thou hast bought with Thine own Blood. Be pleased, O Lord, to have regard unto the sorrows of peoples, the straits of nations, the cries of prisoners, the woes of orphans, the needs of wanderers, the helplessness of the weak, the hopelessness of the sick, the failure of the old, the hopes of young men, the desires of young women, the grief of widows.

For Thou, O Lord, hast mercy upon all, and hatest nothing that Thou hast made—remember of what we are made. Thou art our Father, Thou art our God, be not wrathful exceedingly, neither shut up the multitude of Thy tender mercies from us. It is not with any hope in any righteousness of our own that we lay our prayers before Thee, but with hope in the multitude of Thy tender mercies. Take away our iniquities from us, and in Thy mercy kindle in us the fire of Thine Holy Spirit, take away the stony heart out of our flesh, and give an heart afresh, an heart to love Thee, to seek Thee, to rejoice in Thee, to follow Thee, and to enjoy Thee. We beseech Thy mercy, O Lord, to be pleased to look in favour upon Thy people when they do service unto Thine Holy Name, and in order that no one may ask in vain, and no request be refused, do Thou Thyself inspire us with such prayers as it may please Thee to hear and to grant.

Holy Lord and Father, we entreat Thee also for the spirits of the faithful departed; unto them may this great mystery of godliness be health, wholeness, gladness, and rest. O Lord, my God, may they have this day a great and full banquet of Thee the Living Bread, Who didst come down from heaven, and givest life unto the world, of Thine Holy and Blessed Flesh, the Flesh of Thee, the Lamb without spot, Who takest away the sins of the world, which Thou didst take from the holy and glorious womb of the blessed Virgin Mary, and which was conceived by the Holy Ghost, and of that river of mercy which the soldier's spear drew out of Thy Sacred Side, that they may be thereby strengthened, filled, rested, and comforted, and may sing unto Thy praise and glory. I beseech Thy mercy, O Lord, that the fulness of Thy blessing, and the sanctification of Thy Godhead, may come down upon the bread which is to be offered unto Thee.

Let there also come down thereon the invisible and incomprehensible Majesty of Thine Holy Spirit, as of old time He came down upon the offerings of the fathers, and let Him turn our offerings into Thy Flesh and Blood, and teach me, unworthy communicant that I am, to deal with this great mystery with purity of heart, with earnestness even to tears, with reverence, and with awe.

I beseech Thee also, O Lord, by this very mystery itself, this holy mystery of Thy Body and Thy Blood, wherein Thy Church is every day given to eat and to drink, is purified and sanctified, and is made partaker of the one Divine Nature of the Most High, give me Thine Own Holy might, and endue me therewith, that I may be able to draw near Thine Altar with a good conscience, and so this heavenly Sacrament may be salvation and life for me. For Thou hast said with Thine Own Holy and Blessed mouth, "The bread which I will give is My Flesh for the life of the world"; "I am the Living Bread, which came down from heaven"; "If any man eat of this Bread he shall live for ever." O Bread of Sweetness, cure my heart's palate that I may be able to taste how sweet Thy love is. Cure it of every disease that I may not feel anything sweet like Thy sweetness. O White Bread, that art able to content every man's delight and to yield every taste; Thou that always feedest us and yet never art consumed, let my heart feed on Thee, and let the taste of Thy sweetness fill the innermost depths of my soul. The Angels feed on Thee to fulness; let him that is a stranger and pilgrim here feed on Thee to the best of his little power, that that provision for his journey may strengthen him, and so he faint not by the way. O Thou Holy Bread, Thou Living Bread, Thou Pure Bread, Who comest down from Heaven and givest life unto the world, come into my heart and purify me from every defilement, whether of flesh or of spirit; enter into my soul, heal me and cleanse me, within and without; be Thou the constant shield and safety both of my soul and of my body. Drive all my enemies away from me, let them fade away far from the presence of Thy power. So mayest Thou enable me, under Thy protection, both without and within, to go straight forward until I come to Thy kingdom, where we shall not see Thee any more in mysteries as we see Thee now, but face to face, when Thou shalt have given up the kingdom unto God, even the Father, and shalt be God all in all. For then wilt Thou fill me with Thyself, with such a wondrous fulness, that I shall never hunger nor thirst again for ever. Who, with the same God the Father and Holy Ghost, livest and reignest for ever and ever. Amen.

Thanksgiving after Communion.

Antiphon. Let us sing the song of the three holy children, * the song which the three children sang when they blessed the Lord in the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

P. T. Alleluia.

THE SONG OF THE THREE HOLY CHILDREN. (Daniel iii. 57.)

O ALL ye works of the Lord, bless ye the Lord: * praise Him, and exalt Him above all for ever.

O ye Angels of the Lord, bless ye the Lord: * O ye heavens, bless ye the Lord.

O all ye waters that be above the heavens, bless ye the Lord: * O all ye powers of the Lord, bless ye the Lord.

O ye Sun and Moon, bless ye the Lord: * O ye stars of heaven, bless ye the Lord.

O ye showers and dew, bless ye the Lord: * O ye winds of God, bless ye the Lord.

O ye fire and heat, bless ye the Lord: * O ye winter and summer, bless ye the Lord.

O ye dews and rime, bless ye the Lord: * O ye frost and cold, bless ye the Lord.

O ye ice and snow, bless ye the Lord: * O ye nights and days, bless ye the Lord.

O ye light and darkness, bless ye the Lord: * O ye lightnings and clouds, bless ye the Lord.

O let the earth bless the Lord: * let her praise and exalt Him above all for ever!

O ye mountains and hills, bless ye the Lord: * O all ye green things upon the earth, bless ye the Lord.

O ye wells, bless ye the Lord: * O ye seas and floods, bless ye the Lord.

O ye whales, and all that move in the waters, bless ye the Lord: * O all ye fowls of the air, bless ye the Lord.

O all ye beasts and cattle, bless ye the Lord: * O ye children of men, bless ye the Lord.

O let Israël bless the Lord: * let him praise and exalt Him above all for ever!

O ye Priests of the Lord, bless ye the Lord: * O ye servants of the Lord, bless ye the Lord.

O ye spirits and souls of the righteous, bless ye the Lord: * O ye holy and humble men of heart, bless ye the Lord.

O Ananias, Azarias, and Misaël, bless ye the Lord: * praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

[1] Bless we the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost: * let us praise and exalt Him above all for ever.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord, in the firmament of heaven: * and to be praised, and glorified, and exalted above all for ever.

Psalm CL.

PRAISE the Lord in His sanctuary! * praise Him in the firmament of His power!

Praise Him in His mighty acts! * praise Him according to His excellent greatness!

Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet! * praise Him with the psaltery and harp!

Praise Him with the timbrel and dance! * praise Him with stringed instruments and organs!

Praise Him upon the loud cymbals, praise Him upon the high-sounding cymbals! * Let everything that hath breath praise the LORD!

---

[1] This verse is, of course, a later addition; more than two verses are omitted, and the last given is one of those omitted at the beginning.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Antiphon. Let us sing the song of the three holy children, the song which the three children sang when they blessed the Lord in the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

P. T. Alleluia.

Kyrie eleison.
Christe eleison.
Kyrie eleison.

Our Father, (inaudibly) Who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.

Verse. And lead us not into temptation.

Answer. But deliver us from evil.

Verse. May all Thy works praise Thee, O Lord.

Answer. And let Thy Saints bless Thee.

Verse. Let the Saints be joyful in glory.

Answer. Let them sing aloud upon their beds.

Verse. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us.

Answer. But unto Thy Name give glory.

Verse. Hear my prayer, O Lord.

Answer. And let my cry come unto Thee.

Let us pray.

O GOD, Who didst lessen the flames of fire for the three children, mercifully grant that we Thy children may not be touched by any flames of sin.

Grant, O Lord, we beseech Thee, that Thy grace may forward us in all our actions by Thine inspiration, and follow it by Thine help, that this and every prayer and work of ours may begin from Thee, and by Thee be duly ended.

Grant, O Lord, that we may have the strength to extinguish the flames of sin, Thou Who didst grant the blessed Lawrence to be more than conqueror amid his fiery torments. Through Christ our Lord.

Answer. Amen.

Devotions after Communion.

FROM ST THOMAS AQUINAS.[1]

I GIVE Thee thanks, O holy Lord, Father almighty, eternal God, that Thou hast vouchsafed, for no merit of mine own, but of the mere condescension of Thy mercy, to satisfy me a sinner and Thine unworthy servant with the precious Body and Blood of Thy Son our Lord JESUS Christ. I implore Thee, let not this holy communion be to me an increase of guilt unto my punishment, but an availing plea unto pardon and forgiveness. Let it be to me the armour of faith and the shield of good will. Grant that it may work the extinction of my vices, the rooting out of concupiscence and lust, and the increase within me of charity and patience, of humility and obedience. Let it be my strong defence against the snares of all mine enemies, visible and invisible; the stilling and the calm of all mine impulses, carnal and spiritual; mine indissoluble union with Thee the one and true God, and a blessed consummation at my last end. And I beseech Thee that Thou wouldst vouchsafe to bring me, sinner as I am, to that ineffable banquet where Thou, with the Son and the Holy Ghost, art to Thy Saints true and unfailing Light, fulness of content, joy for evermore, gladness without alloy, consummate and everlasting bliss. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FROM ST BONAVENTURA.[1]

O SWEETEST Lord JESUS Christ, pierce, I beseech Thee, the inmost marrow of my soul with the tender and life-giving wound of Thy love, with true, and calm, and holy apostolical charity, so that my whole soul may ever languish and faint for love of Thee, and for desire of Thee alone. May it long for Thee and pine for Thee in the courts of Thine house; may it desire to be dissolved and to be with Thee. Grant that my soul may hunger for Thee, Thou Bread of angels, Thou refreshment of holy souls, our daily supersubstantial Bread, having all manner of sweetness and savour, and all most thrilling delights. May mine heart ever hunger for Thee and feed on Thee, on whom angels long to look; and may mine inmost soul be filled with the sweetness of the taste of Thee. May it ever thirst for Thee, Thou Well of life, Thou Fountain of wisdom and knowledge, Thou Source of everlasting light, Thou torrent of pleasures, Thou fatness and abundance of the house of God; may it ever yearn towards Thee, seek Thee, find Thee, tend towards Thee, attain to Thee, meditate ever on Thee, speak of Thee, and work all things to the praise and glory of Thy Name, with humility and discretion, with love and delight, with ready care and glad affection, with perseverance even unto the end; and do Thou be alone and evermore mine hope, my whole trust, my riches, my delight, my gladness and my joy, my rest and my calm repose, my peace and my sweet content, my fragrance and my sweetness, my food and my refreshment, my refuge and mine help, my wisdom, my portion, mine own possession and my treasure, in whom my mind and mine heart are fixed and rooted firmly and immovably for evermore. Amen.

[1] Translation by Rev. T. A. Pope, adopted by Lord Bute in A Form of Prayers, 1896.

RHYME OF ST THOMAS AQUINAS.[1]

O GODHEAD hid, devoutly I adore Thee,
Who truly art within the forms before me;
To Thee my heart I bow with bended knee,
As failing quite in contemplating Thee.

Sight, touch, and taste in Thee are each deceived;
The ear alone most safely is believed:
I believe all the Son of God has spoken,
Than Truth's own word there is no truer token.

God only on the Cross lay hid from view;
But here lies hid at once the manhood too:
And I, in both professing my belief,
Make the same prayer as the repentant thief.

Thy wounds as Thomas saw, I do not see;
Yet Thee confess my Lord and God to be:
Make me believe Thee ever more and more;
In Thee my hope in Thee my love to store.

O Thou Memorial of our Lord's own dying!
O Bread that Living art and vivifying!
Make ever Thou my soul on Thee to live;
Ever a taste of heavenly sweetness give.

O loving Pelican! O JESU, Lord!
Unclean I am, but cleanse me in Thy blood;
Of which a single drop for sinners spilt,
Is ransom for a world's entire guilt.

JESU! Whom for the present veil'd I see,
What I so thirst for, oh, vouchsafe to me:
That I may see Thy countenance unfolding,
And may be blest Thy glory in beholding.

O Shepherd of the Faithful, O JESU, gracious be,
Increase the faith of all who put their faith in Thee.

A PRAYER TO BE RECITED BEFORE AN IMAGE OR REPRESENTATION OF CHRIST CRUCIFIED.

BEHOLD, O kind and most sweet JESUS, I cast myself on my knees in Thy sight, and with the most fervent desire of my soul, I pray and beseech Thee that Thou wouldst impress upon my heart lively sentiments of faith, hope, and charity, with true repentance for my sins, and a firm desire of amendment, while with deep affection and grief of soul I ponder within myself and mentally contemplate Thy five most precious wounds; having before my eyes that which David spake in prophecy: "They pierced My hands and My feet; they have numbered all My bones."

[1] Translation by Rev. Edward Caswall.

The Votive Offices.

Pope Leo XIII. permits that upon all days whatsoever upon which the Psalms of the Week-day are to be said at Mattins, either by reason of the Week-day itself or of a Simple Office, with certain exceptions, there may be substituted for the Office of the day one of the following Votive Offices. The excepted days are Ash Wednesday, Passion-tide, and the 17th to the 24th of December, both inclusive. Easter and Whitsun weeks are also excepted, because the Office is already Semi-double, and of the Octave of the Feast of the preceding Sunday.

The Office itself is Semi-double, and its relations to the Office of a Week-day, or of a Simple Feast, or a Semi-double or Double Office on the preceding or succeeding day, are arranged in the same way as if it were a Semi-double Festival; thus, a Simple Office would be commemorated at First Vespers and Lauds, and have the Ninth Lesson, if it had a Lesson or Lessons of its own; and a Greater Week-day would be commemorated at Lauds, and the Ninth Lesson would be of its Homily, while in Advent and Lent the Week-day would be commemorated at both Vespers and Lauds, and have its Homily for the Ninth Lesson. Preces are said at Compline and Prime and the Common Commemorations at Vespers and Lauds, except the Commemoration of that which may be the subject of the Votive Office. That is to say, the Commemoration of the Blessed Virgin is omitted if the Office be of the Immaculate Conception, that of St Joseph if the Office be of him, and that of SS. Peter and Paul if the Office be of the Apostles.

In England the use of two of these Offices—namely, that of the Most Holy Sacrament for Thursdays and that of the Immaculate Conception for Saturdays, is obligatory upon all persons bound to the recitation of the Divine Office, upon all days permitted by the Pope, except (1) those in Advent and Lent; (2) Eves; (3) Ember Saturday; and (4) days to which the Sunday Office may be transferred according to the Pie, iv. 5.[1] On those days on which the use of the Votive Office is permitted by the Pope, but is not made obligatory in England, its use is optional, as is that of the other Votive Offices on other days.

After Septuagesima Sunday to Easter, exclusive, the word "Alleluia" is omitted wherever it is here given in square brackets, thus [ ], and in Paschal-time it is inserted wherever given thus, (P. T. Alleluia.)

Office in honour of All Holy Angels, for Mondays.

Semi-double.

All as on Sundays except the following.

At Vespers on Sunday evening is inserted the following Commemoration.

Antiphon. [2] Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [3] Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. I will worship toward Thine holy Temple, and praise Thy Name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Prayer from Lauds.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord, He is the King of the Angels. * O come, let us worship Him. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Hymn.[4]

THEE, O Christ, the Father's Splendour,
Life and virtue of the heart,
In the presence of the Angels
Sing we now with tuneful art:
Meetly in alternate chorus
Bearing our responsive part.

Thus we praise with veneration
All the armies of the sky:
Chiefly him, the warrior Primate
Of celestial chivalry:
Michael, who in princely virtue
Cast Abaddon from on high.

By whose watchful care, repelling,
King of everlasting grace!
Every ghostly adversary,
All things evil, all things base;
Grant us of Thine only goodness
In Thy paradise a place.

Laud and honour to the Father;
Laud and honour to the Son;
Laud and honour to the Spirit;
Ever Three, and ever One:
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all the three Psalms following are said under one Antiphon—viz., the First.

First Antiphon. Great things are spoken of Michael * the Archangel, who waxed valiant in fight, and won the victory. (P. T. Alleluia.)

---

[1] When these two Votive Offices were introduced by the late Pope Pius IX., and when they seem to have been made obligatory in England, these days were excepted from the Papal permission. The edition of the English Offices now before the writer (Tournay, 1896) excepts only Advent and Lent, but the Catholic Directory shows that Eves also are excepted, and the exceptions would therefore seem to have remained the same as before. Owing to the multiplication of Festal Offices it is very improbable that the contingencies (3) (4) would ever occur.

[2] Heb. i. 14.

[3] Ps. cxxxvii. 2.

[4] Hymn by St Rabanus Maurus altered almost beyond recognition; translated by Dr Neale.

Ps. viii. O LORD, our Lord, &c., (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. The Angel Gabriel spake unto Mary, * and said: Behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a Son, and shall call His Name JESUS.

Ps. x. In the LORD put I my trust, &c., (p. 5.)

Third Antiphon. [1] The Angel Raphael said: Bless ye the God of Heaven, * and confess Him before all living, for He hath had mercy upon you.

Ps. xiv. LORD, who shall abide, &c., (p. 6.)

Verse. [2] An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Answer. Having a golden censer in his hand. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season, but in Lent and on Rogation Monday the following are used.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Exodus (xxiii. 20.)

BEHOLD, I send Mine Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice, and think not lightly of him. For he will not pardon your transgressions; and My Name is in him. But if thou wilt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak, then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries, and Mine Angel shall go before thee.

First Responsory.

A multitude of Angels came with the Archangel Michael, into whose wardship God hath permitted the souls of the Saints, that he may lead them into the garden of gladness. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. Lord, do Thou send forth Thine Holy Spirit from heaven, the Spirit of wisdom and understanding.
Answer. That he may lead them into the garden of gladness. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Zechariah (i. 7.)

THE Word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo, the Prophet, saying: I saw by night, and, behold, a man riding upon a red horse; and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom. And behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white. Then said I: O my lord, what are these? And the angel that spake in me said unto me: I will show thee what these be. And the man that stood among the myrtle-trees answered, and said: These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth. And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle-trees, and said: We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth is inhabited, and is at rest.

Second Responsory.

[3] Then the Angel of the Lord answered and said: O Lord of Hosts, how long wilt Thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Juda, against which Thou hast had indignation— (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. These three score and ten years?
Answer. How long wilt Thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Juda, against which Thou hast had indignation? (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Lesson. (ii.)

I LIFTED up mine eyes again, and looked. And, behold, a man with a measuring line in his hand. Then said I: Whither goest thou? And he said unto me: To measure Jerusalem, and see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof. And, behold, the angel that talked in me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him: Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as a town without walls, for the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be in glory in the midst of her.

Third Responsory.

[4] When ye see the Gentiles, be not afraid of them, but in your hearts worship and fear the Lord; for His Angel is with you. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand.
Answer. For His Angel is with you. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. For His Angel is with you. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under one Antiphon—namely, the Second.

First Antiphon. The smoke of the incense ascended up * before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand.

Ps. xviii. The heavens declare, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. [5] The Angel of the Lord * encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. xxiii. The earth is the LORD'S, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. Let us praise the Lord, * Whom the Angels do praise, unto Whom Cherubim and Seraphim do cry, "Holy, Holy, Holy."
Verse. The smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Answer. Out of the Angel's hand. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory the Great. (34*th on the Gospels.*)

SINCE we have run over and interpreted the names of the different Orders of Angels, it remaineth that we should shortly take up the indication of their different offices. The term Power is given to those spirits through whom most often signs and wonders are worked. The term Might is applied to those spirits unto whose order more might hath been granted than unto the others, so that it is to their jurisdiction that the powers of the enemy are brought into subjection, and by their might that they are so chained up that they cannot tempt men's hearts so much as they fain would.

---

[1] Tob. xii. 6.

[2] Apoc. viii. 3.

[3] This Responsory is the continuation of the preceding Lesson.

[4] Cf. Baruch, vi. 3-6.

[5] Ps. xxxiii. 8.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] All the Angels stood round about the Throne, and about the Elders, and the four living creatures, and fell before the Throne on their faces and worshipped God. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. [2] Worship the Lord, all ye His Angels!
Answer. And fell before the Throne on their faces and worshipped God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Lesson.

"THE Principalities are so called because they are appointed as princes over the other good Angels, command their troops whenever there is anything to be done, and direct them how to perform their ministry for God. The Dominions bear this name because they are highly exalted, even above the power of the principalities. To be a prince is to be exalted among equals, but to dominate is to rule over subjects as a Lord. The Thrones are those hosts over whom the Almighty God presideth to exercise judgment, whence the Psalmist saith, (ix. 5,) "Thou satest on the throne judging right."

Fifth Responsory.

[3] An Angel stood at the Altar of the Temple, having a golden censer in his hand; and there was given unto him much incense, and the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the angel's hand. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee; I will worship toward Thine holy Temple, and praise Thy Name, O Lord.
Answer. And the smoke of the incense ascended up before the Lord, out of the Angel's hand. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Sixth Lesson.

THE Cherubim are said to represent the fulness of knowledge, and it is for this reason that these sublime hosts are so called, because the nearer they gaze upon the glory of God so much the more perfect is the knowledge with which they are filled.[4]
The word Seraphim is the title given to those hosts of holy spirits, who, on account of their peculiar nearness to their Maker, burn with a love beyond all compare. Their name signifieth burners or kindlers. Their fire is their love, and the more penetrating is their view of the glory of the Divine Being so much more intense is their love thereof wherewith they glow.

Sixth Responsory.

Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, and will worship before Thine holy Temple, and will praise Thy Name, O Lord. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. For Thy loving-kindness, and for Thy truth; for Thou hast glorified Thine holy Name in us.
Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. And I will praise Thy Name, O Lord. (P. T. Alleluia.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time all three Psalms are said under one Antiphon, namely the First.

First Antiphon. [5] The Lord sent His Angel, * which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the King of Assyria. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. xcv. O sing unto the Lord, &c., (p. 85.)

Second Antiphon. Worship the Lord, * all ye His Angels! Zion heard, and was glad.

Ps. xcvi. The Lord reigneth, &c., (p. 85.)

Third Antiphon. Bless the Lord, * all ye His Angels, that excel in strength, that do His commandments, to hearken unto the voice of His word.

Ps. cii. Bless the Lord, &c., (p. 91.)

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Answer. I will worship toward Thine holy Temple, and praise Thy Name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (i. 47.)

AT that time: Jesus saw Nathanael coming to Him, and saith of him: Behold an Israëlite indeed, in whom is no guile. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (11*th on Ps.* xc.)

What are the goings of the holy Angels? Surely those goings whereof the Only-Begotten Son hath told us when He saith: "Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the Angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man." Their goings, therefore, are by way of ascent and descent: they ascend for their own sakes, and they descend, or to speak more truly, they condescend for our sakes. Thus do these blessed spirits ascend upward by gazing upon God, and they descend downward by pity for thee, that they may keep thee in all thy ways. They ascend upward to the vision of Him, and they descend downward at the intimation of His will; for "He hath given His Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways": but when they so descend downward they do not thereby lose the beatific vision of His glory, for we know that in heaven the Angels do always behold the face of the Father. (Matth. xviii. 10.)

---

[1] Apoc. vii. 11. [2] Ps. xcvi. 7.
[3] Cf. Apoc. viii. 3, 4.

[4] St Gregory seems to have accepted the opinion that Chrwb is a variant of spelling for Qrwb, and therefore means one who draws near. The derivation of the word is now considered very uncertain, but the traditional belief certainly is that the Cherubim are the representatives of contemplation, of knowledge as distinguished from love,—that is, of the intellectual as opposed to the emotional, or the understanding as opposed to the heart, represented by the Seraphim, whose name is undeniably derived from saraph, to burn.

[5] 2 Par. Chron. xxxii. 21.

Seventh Responsory.

The Angel of the Lord came down into the furnace, together with Azariah and his fellows, and smote the flame of the fire out of the furnace, so that the fire touched them not at all, neither hurt them. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Blessed be their God, Who sent His Angel and delivered His servants that trusted in Him.

Answer. So that the fire touched them not at all, neither hurt them. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Eighth Lesson.

WHEN they ascend upward to gaze they search into that truth wherewith they are sated by longing, and by satiety are made to long the more; when they descend downward they work mercy upon us by keeping us in all our ways. For "are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" (Heb. i. 14.) Surely they are not our lords but our ministers, and herein they are even as the Son of Man, who came not to be ministered unto but to minister, (Matth. xx. 28,) and Who was among His disciples as he that serveth. (Luke xxii. 27.) The fruit of the goings of the holy Angels is, as toucheth themselves, their own blessedness and the conforming obedience inspired by their love; but as toucheth us, we receive through them the keeping of all our ways under the care of God's grace, for He hath given His Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy needs.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] Lord, Thou didst send Thine Angel in the time of Hezekiah, King of Juda, and didst slay in the host of Sennacherib an hundred fourscore and five thousand; wherefore now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us, for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. That those be stricken with terror that come with blasphemy against Thine holy people.

Answer. Wherefore now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us, for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Wherefore now also, O Lord of heaven, send Thy good Angel before us for a fear and dread of the might of Thine arm. (P. T. Alleluia.)

If the Ninth Lesson is not of the Homily of a Week-day or that of a Simple, it is as follows.

IN the meantime God hath given His Angels charge over thee, not to take thee out of thy ways, but to keep thee in thy ways, and so by their ways to make thy ways His ways; for, if thou wouldst know how, He would have thee also descend and condescend, thine own needs compelling and admonishing thee to that which the Angel doth from the purer motive of love, to condescend by showing pity toward thy neighbour, and again to ascend along with the Angels by lifting up thy desires and striving with all thine heart's longing after the supreme and eternal truth. Thus are we exhorted to lift up hearts and hands together; thus do we hear it said every day, "Lift up your hearts"; thus are we rebuked for our slothfulness; and thus is it said unto us: "O ye sons of men, how long will ye be dull of heart? why will ye love vanity and seek after leasing?" (Ps. iv. 3.) For when the heart is unburdened and light, it is easier for it to rise to seek and love the truth.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. O ye Angels of the Lord, * bless ye the Lord alway. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. God hath given His Angels charge over thee, * to keep thee in all thy ways. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Antiphon. In heaven their Angels do alway behold the face of My Father * which is in heaven. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Antiphon. Praise ye God * all His Angels,—praise ye Him all His hosts! (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Antiphon. O ye Angels and Archangels, * O ye Thrones and Dominions, O ye Principalities and Powers, O ye Mighty Ones of heaven, praise ye the Lord from the heavens! (P. T. Alleluia.)

Chapter. (Exod. xxiii. 20.)

BEHOLD I send Mine Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him, and obey his voice.

Hymn.[2]

CHRIST! of the holy Angels light and gladness,
Maker and Saviour of the human race,
O may we reach the world unknown to sadness,
The blessed mansions where they see Thy Face!

Angel of peace, may Michael to our dwelling
Down from high Heaven in mighty calmness come,
Breathing serenest peace, wild war dispelling
With all her sorrows to the infernal gloom.

Angel of might, may Gabriel swift descending,
Far from our gates our ancient foes repel,
And his own triumphs o'er the world defending,
In temples dear to Heaven return and dwell.

Angel of health, may Raphael lighten o'er us,
To every sick-bed speed his healing flight,
In times of doubt direct the way before us,
And through life's mazes guide our steps aright.

The Virgin, harbinger of peace supernal,
Mother of Light, with all the Angelic train,
Heaven's glittering host, court of the King Eternal,
All Saints be with us, till that bliss we gain.

Be this by Thy thrice holy Godhead granted,
Father, and Son, and Spirit ever blest;
Whose glory by the Angel host is chanted,
Whose Name by all the universe confest.
Amen.

Verse. Before the Angels will I sing praise unto Thee, O my God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. I will worship toward Thine holy Temple, and praise Thy Name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Office in Honour of all the Holy Apostles, for Tuesdays.

Semi-double.

The Office is the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except in Paschal-time, when it is as in the Common Office for that season (p. 576,), with the following differences.

The Common Commemoration of SS. Peter and Paul is omitted.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst will that Thy blessed Apostles should be the means whereby Thou hast brought us to know Thy Name, grant unto us the grace to celebrate unto our profit their everlasting glory. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Scripture according to the Season, but if the day have no Scripture Lessons, then they are from 1 Cor. iv. 1, as in the Common Office, (p. 585.)

---

[1] Zac. iv. 1.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (43*rd on the Saints.*)

THEY are the light of the world, because they were the means whereby the Lord was first pleased to give unto this world the light of faith and true knowledge, and to deliver the nations and peoples from the darkness of ignorance and sin. They are the salt of the earth, for they were the means whereby they that dwell upon the earth have tasted the savour of life eternal, that they might be preserved from the looseness of the flesh and the corruption of sin and weakness. They are they of whom John saith in his revelation (xxi. 14, 19) that the wall of the heavenly city had twelve foundations, garnished with all manner of precious stones, and in them the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb, for their preaching was the mean whereby God was pleased to lay the foundations of the Church, whence also Paul saith (Eph. ii. 19): "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, JESUS Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone."

Fifth Lesson.

DEARLY beloved brethren, when we call these things to mind, let us strive to put in practice what these great leaders have taught and commanded us. Let us learn by their example to esteem lightly the riches of the world, to love not the pleasures of this life, to desire the kingdom of heaven, to put Christ before all things, and to obey His commandments in all things, to love the poverty of things present, to pile up riches by grace, to choose the treasure of wisdom, to seek the gladness of the spirit, to envy no man, but to love all men, even our friends in God, and our enemies for God, for this only is love in truth.

Sixth Lesson.

THEY therefore are our princes, princes made most perfect in love for God, and filled with love for their neighbour. Whence they were able to overcome the onset of the world and to conquer that bloody age, because they loved nothing in any thing except the will of God. Even so, brethren, let us love to do the will of God in all things, to love our Maker in Himself, and the things which He has made for their Maker's sake, and so shall our love be well ordered. "For God is love" (1 John iv. 8,) and he that loveth with this love loveth God; and if we thus love, God Himself loveth us, and the Holy Apostles that are to judge us love us, and pray for us, that at Christ's general judgment we may be crowned along with them for ever.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto JESUS: Behold, we have forsaken all and followed Thee; what shall we have, therefore? And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.] (Comment. on Matth. xx.)

It is written that Peter answered and said unto the Lord, "Behold, we have forsaken all and followed Thee; what shall we have, therefore? and JESUS said unto them: Amen, I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israël. And everyone that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or land for My Name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life; but many that are first shall be last, and the last shall be first." There are many reasons which forbid us to place upon these words of the Gospel a literal interpretation.

Eighth Lesson.

WE are admonished by the introduction of some things which, according to human sense, are self-contradictory, to seek for an heavenly sense. The Apostles say that they have forsaken all things, and yet that, so far from forsaking Christ, they have actually followed Him. Christ had said (i. iv.): "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God," and "When his disciples heard it they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?" Why should they be exceedingly amazed? saying, "Who then can be saved," seeing that they themselves had forsaken all things; and what they had done, others could do. It is written also, "But JESUS beheld them, and said unto them: With men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible." How can it be said that with men this is impossible, when it was the very thing which the Apostles themselves boasted of having done, and which the Lord Himself acknowledged that they had done?

Ninth Lesson.

ALL this discourse is to be interpreted spiritually. What is more possible with God than to save by faith, to regenerate by water, to conquer by the cross, to make children of adoption by the Gospel, to quicken the dead by resurrection? When the Apostles heard these things they believed them forthwith, and they profess that they have left all things, and this their obedience the Lord doth forthwith reward, while He solveth all the difficulty of the question above by saying, "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." This is that regeneration which the Apostles have obtained, which the law could not give, and which, by seating them upon twelve thrones to judge the twelve tribes of Israel, has made them sharers in the glory of the twelve patriarchs.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[1]

JOSEPH! to thee by hosts on high And choirs of Christians, laud be paid!—
Saintly of life,—by purest tie
Joined unto her, the glorious Maid.

When thou didst doubt thy wife's repute,
And mark her great with Sacred Load,
The angel taught thee that her Fruit
Came from the Holy Ghost of God.

To clasp the Son, thy Lord, was thine,—
To share His flight to Egypt's shore,—
With tears, to seek in Salem's Shrine
Him lost,—with joy, to find once more.

Death brings to other saints their rest;
Through toil they win the victor's place;—
Thou happier, like the angels blest,
Alive, hast seen God Face to face.

Spare us, O Trinity Most High!
Grant that, with Joseph, we may gain
Thy starry realm, and ceaselessly
There raise to Thee our thankful strain.
Amen.

Verse. [2] He made him lord of His house. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. And ruler of all His substance. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [3] When as Mary, the Mother of JESUS, was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. (P. T. Alleluia.)

The Common Commemoration of St Joseph is omitted.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. In worshipful remembrance of our blessed Defender Joseph, * let us praise our God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Joseph went up from Galilee, * out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, to be enrolled with Mary.

Second Antiphon. The shepherds came with haste, * and found Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger.

Third Antiphon. Behold, the Angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph * in a dream, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His Mother, and flee into Egypt.

Verse. [4] I will give praise unto Thy Name— (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. For Thou hast been mine Helper and Defender. (P. T. Alleluia.)

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season; but if the day have none such, then the following are read.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Genesis (xxxix. 1.)

SO Joseph was brought down to Egypt, and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites, which had brought him down thither. And the LORD was with him, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master; and [his master] knew well that the LORD was with him, and made all that he did to prosper in his hand. And Joseph found grace in his master's sight, and he served him; and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand. And the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake, and made all his substance to increase, in the house, and in the field, [and he left all that he had in Joseph's hand,] and he knew not aught he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph was a goodly person, and well-favoured.

First Responsory.

[5] The people cried to Pharaoh [6] for bread: and he answered them: Go unto Joseph. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [7] The saving of our lives is in thy hand; only let us find grace in thy sight, and we will gladly be Pharaoh's servants.

Answer. And he answered them: Go unto Joseph. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Lesson. (xli. 37.)

THE thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants, and he said unto them: Can we find such an one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is? Unto Joseph therefore he said: Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this which thou hast spoken, how shall I find any man more discreet and wise than thou art? Thou shalt be over my house, and according to thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou. And Pharaoh said moreover unto Joseph: See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt. And he took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon his hand; and arrayed him in a vesture of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck, and he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had, and an herald cried out that all men should bow the knee before him, and should know that he had been made ruler over all the land of Egypt.

Second Responsory.

[8] God hath made me as a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house. He hath made me great, to save much people alive. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [9] Come unto me, and I will give you all the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land.

Answer. He hath made me great, to save much people alive. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Lesson.

AND Pharaoh said moreover unto Joseph: I am Pharaoh: without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt. And he changed his name, and called him in the Egyptian tongue, "Saviour-of-the-world." [1] And he gave him to wife Asenath daughter of Potiphar, Priest of Heliopolis. So Joseph went out into the land of Egypt, (he was thirty years old when he stood before King Pharaoh) and went throughout all the land of Egypt. And the plenteousness of the seven years came to pass, and the corn was gathered by handfuls, and laid up in the granaries of Egypt. The fruit of the field which was round about every city was laid up in the same. And so plentiful was the wheat that it was like unto the sand of the sea, and exceeded all reckoning.

Third Responsory.

[2] Now shall I die happy, since I have seen thy face, and do leave thee behind me. I am not disappointed of seeing thee. The Lord hath showed me also thy seed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [3] He That hath fed me from my youth up, bless the lads, and let my name be named on them.

Answer. The Lord hath showed me also thy seed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The Lord hath showed me also thy seed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Joseph arose, and took the young Child and His Mother by night, and departed into Egypt; and was there until the death of Herod.

Second Antiphon. When Herod was dead, an Angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His Mother, and go into the land of Israël: for they are dead which sought the young Child's life.

Third Antiphon. Joseph took the young Child and His Mother, and came into the land of Israël.

Verse. [4] Look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine—(P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. And protect that [Thy right hand hath planted.] (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd upon Luke i. 26.)

MARY was espoused to Joseph, or, as it would be better to express it in the very words of the Evangelist, to a man whose name was Joseph. He calleth him a man not because he was a husband, but by a title of excellency; or rather because, as another Evangelist hath it, he was not simply a man, but was rightly called her husband, as he was necessarily supposed so to be. He was thus called her husband because he must needs have been so supposed to be, as also he was deemed meet not in deed to be, but to be called, the father of the Saviour, since he was supposed so to be, as saith this same Evangelist: "And JESUS Himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph."

Fourth Responsory.

[5] Thou hast given me the shield of Thy salvation, and Thy right hand hath holden me up. My buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my refuge. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [6] I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward.

Answer. My buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my refuge. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Lesson.

WE cannot doubt but that a good and faithful man was Joseph, unto whom was espoused the Mother of the Saviour. He was a faithful and wise servant whom the Lord set up for the comfort of His own Mother, the fosterage of His own flesh, and then a faithful helper Whom His own great counsel formed upon earth. In addition thereto it is said that he was of the house of David. He was indeed of the house of David. This man Joseph was indeed of kingly race, noble by birth, but nobler in heart, he was indeed a son of David, and no unworthy descendant of David his father. He was indeed a son of David, not in the flesh only, but by loyalty and holiness and earnestness. One of whom the Lord might have given testimony, and said, "I have found David the son of Jesse a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all My will" (Acts xiii. 22.) A man who could say, like David, "The hidden secrets of Thy wisdom Thou hast made manifest unto me" (Ps. l. 7.) A man who was made "a minister according to the dispensation of God . . . to fulfil the word of God, even the mystery which hath been hid for ages and for generations, but now is made manifest to His saints" (Col. i. 26.)

Fifth Responsory.

[7] He shall set his children under her [8] shelter, and shall lodge under her branches: by her shall he be covered from heat, and in her glory shall he dwell. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [9] Trust in Him,[10] ye congregation of the people, pour out your heart before Him.

Answer. And in her glory shall he dwell. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Sixth Lesson.

UNTO Joseph it was given not only to see and to hear that which many prophets and kings had desired to see and had not seen, and to hear and had not heard, (Luke x. 24,) but even to carry this, to lead it, to embrace it, to kiss it, to feed it, and to keep it. We must, however, believe that Mary as well as Joseph was of the house and lineage of David, since if she had not so been she would not have been espoused to one who was so. Both, therefore, were of the house of David, but in her was fulfilled that which the Lord had sworn in truth unto David, (Ps. cxxxi. 11,) saying, "Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon My throne," while Joseph stood by the conscious witness of the fulfilment of the promise.

[1] Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear. Though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [2] My praise shall be continually of Thee, for Thou art my strong refuge.

Answer. Though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. (P. T. Alleluia.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When Joseph heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither.

Second Antiphon. Joseph being warned of God in a dream turned aside into the parts of Galilee, and he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets: He shall be called a Nazarene.

Third Antiphon. The Father and Mother of JESUS marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him, and Simeon blessed them.

Verse. [3] I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord— (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. That He would not leave me in the days of my trouble. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Augustine, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Against Faustus, xxiii. 7, 8.)

From heaven, over the Jordan, "The Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon Him, and a voice came from heaven which said, Thou art My beloved Son, in Thee I am well pleased." Thus also upon the high mountain, "Behold a bright cloud overshadowed Him, and behold a voice out of the cloud which said, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him" (Matth. xvii. 5.) And He over Whom these voices sounded from heaven was the Son of God before ever they were uttered, for He was He "Who albeit in the womb of the Virgin He took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men," was the same "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God" (Phil. ii. 7, 6.) Whence also the same Apostle Paul saith plainly in another place, (Gal. iv. 4, 5,) that, "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." He is the Son of God who is the Lord of David, as touching His Godhead, and is yet as touching His flesh the Son of David begotten of David's seed.

Seventh Responsory.

[4] Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for That Which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost: and she shall bring forth a Son; and thou shalt call His Name JESUS. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. For He shall save His people from their sins.

Answer. And thou shalt call His Name JESUS. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Eighth Lesson.

HAD it been useless for us to believe this, the aforenamed Apostle would not have been so careful to remind Timothy to (2 Tim. ii. 8) "remember that JESUS Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel." The question now ariseth before the reader of the Holy Gospel, wherefore since he doth us to wit that Christ was born of the Virgin without any coition with Joseph, this Christ is, nevertheless, called the Son of David, although the pedigree for David given by the Evangelist Matthew is not that of Mary but that of Joseph. The first reason is that in order of sex the husband is named before the wife, and that he is not the less called husband because he knew her not, since this same Matthew when he saith (i. 20) that That Which was conceived in her was of the Holy Ghost, expressly giveth to Joseph (19) the title of "her husband."

Eighth Responsory.

[5] Arise, and take the young Child, and His Mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophets, saying: Out of Egypt have I called my Son.

Answer. And be thou there until I bring thee word. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And be thou there until I bring thee word. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ninth Lesson.

THIS one and the same Matthew therefore saith that Joseph was the husband of Mary, that the Mother of Christ was a virgin, that Christ was of the seed of David, and that Joseph was in the pedigree of Christ from David. The only conclusion is that Mary herself was of the lineage of David, and that she was called the wife of Joseph in order of enumeration of sex, and on account of their union of soul, and that Joseph is included in the pedigree as her husband, lest it might otherwise seem as if he were parted from a wife to whom he was bound by oneness of heart.

Answer. And Thy right hand hath holden me up. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [9] Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for That Which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who in Thine unspeakable foreknowledge didst choose Thy blessed servant Joseph to be the husband of Thine Own most holy Mother; mercifully grant that now that he is in heaven with Thee, we who on earth do reverence him for our defender, may worthily be holpen by the succour of his prayers to Thee on our behalf; Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Common Commemoration of St Joseph is omitted.

PRIME.

Antiphon. And Jacob, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter at the end. (Gen. xlix. 22.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Chapter and Prayer from Lauds.

First Antiphon. [4] Christ the Lord, being made an High Priest for ever * after the order of Melchisedec, hath offered bread and wine. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. He hath made His wonderful works to be remembered; * the LORD is [gracious and] full of compassion. He hath given meat unto them that fear Him. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Antiphon. I will take the cup of salvation, * and offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxv. I believed, therefore have I spoken, &c., (p. 105.)

Fourth Antiphon. Let the children of the Church be like olive-plants * round about the table of the Lord. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxxvii. Blessed is every one, &c., (p. 108.)

Fifth Antiphon. The Lord, That maketh peace in the borders of the Church, * filleth her with the finest of the wheat. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxlvii. Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem, &c., (p. 114.)

Hymn.[5]

OF the glorious Body telling,
O my tongue, Its mystery sing;
And the Blood, all price excelling,
Which for this world's ransoming
In a noble womb once dwelling
He shed forth, the Gentiles' King.

Given for us, for us descending
Of a Virgin to proceed,
Man with man in converse blending
Scattered He the Gospel seed:
Till His sojourn drew to ending
Which He closed in wondrous deed.

At the Last Great Supper seated,
Circled by His brethren's band,
All the Law required, completed,
In the Feast its statutes planned,
To the twelve Himself He meted
For their Food, with His own Hand.

Word made Flesh, by word He maketh
Very bread His Flesh to be;
Man for wine Christ's Blood partaketh;
And if senses fail to see,
Faith alone the true heart waketh
To behold the Mystery.

Therefore, we, before It bending,
This great Sacrament adore:
Types and shadows have their ending
In the new rite evermore:
Faith, our outward sense amending,
Maketh good defects before.

Honour, laud, and praise addressing
To the Father and the Son,
Might ascribe we, virtue, blessing,
And eternal benison:
Holy Ghost, from Both progressing,
Equal laud to Thee be done. Amen.

Verse. [6] Thou didst send them from heaven— (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. Bread able to content every man's delight. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [7] O Lord, how kindly is Thy Spirit! * even Thine, Whose sustenance declared Thy sweetness unto Thy children when Thou didst send them from heaven bread tempering itself to every man's liking, O Thou, Who hast filled the hungry with good things, and the rich, that are proud in the imagination of their hearts, Thou hast sent empty away. (P. T. Alleluia.)

At Compline and every other Office the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation, excepting only the three Hymns proper to the Feast.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O come, and let us worship Christ,
Of all the nations Lord, *
Who doth, to them that feed on Him,
The Bread of Life afford.
(P. T. Alleluia.)

Hymn.[8]

LET old things pass away;
Let all be fresh and bright;
And welcome we with hearts renewed
This Feast of new delight.

Upon this hallowed eve,
Christ with His brethren ate,
Obedient to the olden Law,
The Pasch before Him set.

Which done,—Himself entire,
The True Incarnate God,
Alike on each, alike on all,
His sacred Hands bestowed.

He gave His Flesh; He gave
His Precious Blood; and said:
"Receive and drink ye all of This
For your salvation shed."

Thus did the Lord appoint
This Sacrifice sublime,
And made His Priests the ministers
Through all the bounds of time.

Farewell to types! henceforth
We feed on Angels' Food;
The slave—O, wonder!—eats the Flesh
Of his Incarnate God!

O Blessed Three in One!
Visit our hearts, we pray,
And lead us on through Thine own paths
To Thy eternal day. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time only one Antiphon, namely the First, is said at each Nocturn.

First Antiphon. The Lord brought forth His fruit in the season of His death, * even that fruit whereof if any man eat, he shall live for ever.[1] (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. i. Blessed is the man, &c., (p. 2.)

Second Antiphon. His faithful ones which are increased by the fruit of His corn and His wine * do lay them down in peace and sleep in Christ.

Ps. iv. When I called, &c., (p. 116.)

Third Antiphon. [2] Us, being many, hath the Lord made one body, * for we are all partakers of that one cup, which is not the communion of the blood of bulls, but of God Himself.

Ps. xv. Preserve me, O Lord, &c., (p. 7.)

Verse. [3] He gave them of the bread of heaven— (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. Man did eat Angels' bread. (P. T. Alleluia.)

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season, but when there are none such the following are used.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the First Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Corinthians (xi. 20.)

WHEN ye come together, therefore, into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's Supper. For every one taketh before his own supper to eat, and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What! have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the Church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? Do I praise you? In this I praise you not.

First Responsory.

[4] The whole assembly of the children of Israël shall kill the lamb toward the evening of the Passover. And they shall eat the flesh, and unleavened bread. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [5] Even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

Answer. And they shall eat the flesh, and unleavened bread. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Lesson.

FOR I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord JESUS, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said: Take, eat: This is My Body, Which shall be given for you; this do in remembrance of Me. After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, saying: This Cup is the New Testament in My Blood. This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me. For as often as ye eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come.

Second Responsory.

[6] Ye shall eat flesh, and shall be filled with bread. * This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [7] Moses gave you not that Bread from heaven, but My Father giveth you the true Bread from heaven.

Answer. This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Lesson.

WHEREFORE, whosoever shall eat this Bread, or drink the Cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's Body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

Third Responsory.

[8] Elijah looked, and, behold, there was a cake baken on the coals at his head, and he arose, and did eat and drink; and went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [9] If any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever.

Answer. And went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And went in the strength of that meat [forty days and forty nights] unto the mount of God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The Lord remember our offering, * and accept our burnt-sacrifice. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. xix. The LORD hear thee, &c., (p. 10.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord prepareth His Table before us * in the presence of our enemies.

Ps. xxii. The LORD is my Shepherd, &c., (p. 26.)

Third Antiphon. Let them that keep holiday around the table of the Lord * make the voice of joy and praise to be heard [in the house of God.]

Fourth Lesson.

(In January and February.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (61st Homily to the people of Antioch.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, it behoveth us to learn the miracle of the Mysteries—what the Gift is, and why It was given, and what is the use thereof. "We, being many, are one body," saith [the Apostle Paul, (1 Cor. x. 17,) and again]—"We are members of His Body, of His Flesh, and of His Bones." (Eph. v. 30.) Only the initiated[2] will now understand what I say. That this union may take place, not by love only, but verily and indeed, we ought to mingle our own with His Flesh. And this is done by eating that Food Which He hath given unto us, being fain to manifest that exceeding great love which He beareth to us-ward. To this end He hath mingled Himself with us, and infused His Body into our bodies, that we may be one together, like as the limbs of a man and his head are all of one body. Such union do they long for that love much.

(In March and April.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (60th Homily to the people of Antioch.)

THE Word saith: "This is My Body." This we confess, and believe, and, with spiritual eyes, do see. Christ hath not left unto us Himself in such form as that we can see, hear, touch, smell, or taste Him; and yet hath He left Himself unto us in things which we can see, hear, touch, smell, and taste, and which all men may understand. Thus also is it in baptism; by mean of water, which men perceive outwardly, is given unto them a gift which they can grasp only inwardly, that is, a new birth. If we had no bodies, then would these things be given us without any outward and visible signs, but since we are here made up of souls and bodies, there are given unto our souls gifts which they can grasp, in outward signs which our bodies may perceive. How many there be which say: I would that I could see His comely presence, His Face, His garments, even His shoes! Behold, thou dost see and touch Him, yea, thou dost feed upon Him. And wouldest thou behold His raiment? Lo, He hath given unto thee not only to behold it, but to feed upon it, and handle it, and take it into thyself.

(In May and June.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (Continuation of the 60th Homily.)

IN this mysterious Sacrament Christ doth mingle Himself with all and each of His faithful ones. They are His children, and He nurseth them Himself, and giveth them not over unto another, herein again assuring us that the Flesh He hath taken unto Himself is ours. We, then, who have been deemed meet to be treated with such love and such honour, let us be wakeful! See ye not how eagerly the sucklings seize on the breasts, how readily they fix their mouths on the paps? Let us, with like eagerness, draw nigh to that Table, and suck at that spiritual Cup. Yea, let us prize that gracious Food as the suckling doth its mother's breast, and hold it the great woe of life to be cut off from that Banquet. Here there are set before us no works of man's power; He That worked at that Last Supper, the Same worketh the same here still. As for us Priests, we hold the place of His ministers, but He Which halloweth and changeth is He. Hither let there draw nigh no Judas, nor covetous one—this is no Table for him. But he which is Christ's disciple, let him come; for the Lord saith: "I will keep the Passover with My disciples," (Matth. xxvi. 18.) This is that Passover Table, and it is all Christ's—what is wrought there is not some of it Christ's work, and some of it man's work, but it is all His work and not another's.

(In July and August.)

The Lesson is taken from the Letter written to Cæcilius by the Holy Martyr Cyprian, Bishop [of Carthage.] (Bk. ii. Ep. 3.)

IN the deed of the Priest Melchisedek we see a type of the Sacrament of the Lord's Sacrifice. For thus it is written in the writings of God:—"And Melchisedek King of Salem brought forth bread and wine: for he was the Priest of the Most High God: and he blessed" Abraham. (Gen. xiv. 18.) That Melchisedek was a type of Christ, the Holy Ghost Himself doth testify in the Psalms, where the First Person of the Holy Trinity, even the Father, is set before us as saying unto the Second Person, that is, the Son:—"Before the day-star have I begotten Thee. . . . Thou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedek." (cix. 3, 4.) And verily that sameness of order cometh of this sacrifice, and proceedeth from this, that Melchisedek was the Priest of the Most High God; that he offered bread and wine; and that he blessed Abraham.

(In September and October.)

The Lesson is taken from the Book upon the Sacraments, written by St Ambrose,[3] Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. iv. ch. 4.)

WHO invented the Sacraments but the Lord JESUS? The Sacraments came down from heaven, for all counsel is from heaven. Nevertheless, it was a great and wonderful work of God when He rained down manna upon His people, and the people laboured not, and yet were fed.

---

[1] Ps. lxxx. 17.

[2] I.e., the baptized, the Church's doctrine on the Eucharist being concealed from the catechumens.

[3] Pseudo-Ambrose.

Perchance, thou sayest: Here, it is my bread which is used. But that bread is bread only till the Sacramental words are spoken; at the Consecration, instead of bread, there cometh to be the Body of Christ. This therefore let us establish. How cometh it that that which was bread becometh the Body of Christ? Through the Consecration. And in what words, and in Whose language doth the Consecration take place? In those of the Lord JESUS. All the other things which are said [in the Liturgy], the ascription of praise to God [in the Preface], the prayer for the people, for kings, and for others which formeth the first part [of the Canon, these are put in the mouth of the Priest.] But when that point is reached when this worshipful Sacrament is to be consecrated, then the Priest useth no more his own words, but Christ's.

(In November and December.)

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Blessed Patriarch of Jerusalem, Cyril.[1] (Catechetical Lectures, 4.)

THE teaching of the blessed Paul seemeth of itself enough instruction for you concerning those Divine Mysteries, whereof, if ye be made worthy, ye become therein, so to speak, of one Body and of one Blood with Christ. Paul saith that our Lord JESUS Christ, "the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it unto His disciples, saying: Take, eat; this is My Body. . . . After the same manner also He took the cup," and gave thanks, "and said:"—Take this and drink it; this is My Blood. Since therefore it is He Who hath definitely stated and said, touching that Bread: "This is My Body"—who will dare any longer to doubt that It is so? And since it is He again that hath absolutely affirmed and said, touching that cup: "This is My Blood"—who is he that will doubt any longer, or say that It is not His Blood.

Fourth Responsory.

[2] As they were eating, JESUS took bread, and blest it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said: Take, eat; this is My Body. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [3] The men of my tabernacle said: O that we had of his flesh! we cannot be satisfied.

Answer. Take, eat; this is My Body. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Lesson.

(In January and February.)

[The 61st Homily of St John Chrysostom—continued.]

WHEN we come back from that Table we ought to be like so many lions breathing fire, dreadful to the devil. Our thoughts ought to be concentrated on our Great Head and the love which He showeth us. Many fathers and mothers there are who give their children to others to nurse, but I, saith the Lord to His children, I am not so, but I feed you with Mine Own Flesh, and join Myself to you, fain that ye all should be sons of noble blood now, and giving you a noble hope of that which ye shall be hereafter. I was content to become your Brother, I for your sakes have taken unto Me Flesh and Blood, and that Flesh and Blood wherein I am become your Brother, the Same give I in turn unto you.

(In March and April.)

TO this table of the Lord let none dare to draw near with squeamishness or carelessness. Let all be fiery, all hot, all roused. To the Jews it was commanded touching the Paschal lamb, (Exod. xii. 11): "And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste; it is the LORD'S Passover." But thou needest to be more watchful than they. They were just about to travel from Egypt to Palestine, and therefore they bore the guise of travellers; but the journey that lieth before thee is from earth to heaven. And therefore it behoveth thee in all things to be on thy guard, for the punishment of him that eateth or drinketh unworthily is no light one. (1 Cor. xi. 27.) Bethink thee how thou art indignant against him which betrayed, and them that crucified the Lord; and look to it well that thou also be not "Guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord." As for them, they slew His Most Holy Body; but thou, after all that He hath done for thee, dost thrust Him into thy polluted soul. For His love, it was not enough to be made Man, to be buffeted, and to be crucified; He hath also mingled Himself with us, by making us His Body, and that not by faith only, but verily and indeed.

(In May and June.)

HITHER let there draw nigh none brutal, none cruel, none merciless; in good sooth, none unclean. I speak to all that take that Holy Communion, and to you also, O ye that do administer the same! To you now I turn my speech, to warn you with how great care that Gift is to be given. No slight vengeance is that which awaiteth you if ye admit for a partaker at the Lord's Table the sinner whose guiltiness ye know. At your hands will his blood be required. If a man be a General, a Governor, a crowned Monarch, yet if he come there unworthily, forbid him; thou hast greater power than he. To this end hath God exalted you to the honour ye hold, that ye may judge in such matters. This office is your dignity, this is your strength, this is all your crown, this, and not the going about in white robes and glittering vestments. And thou, O layman! when thou seest the Priest making the oblation, think not that He Which is then the real Worker is such a Priest as thou seest, but know of a surety that it is Christ's Hand Which is stretched out, albeit unseen by thee.

(In July and August.)

[The Letter of the Holy Martyr Cyprian—continued.]

WHAT Priest of the Most High God is there, more so than is our Lord JESUS Christ?—He Who hath made an offering unto God the Father, and the same offering that Melchisedek made, bread and wine, that is to say, His Own Flesh and His Own Blood. And, as touching Abraham, that ancient blessing was spoken likewise by fore-knowledge upon us. For if Abraham believed God and it was accounted to him for righteousness, verily, whosoever believeth God and liveth by faith, the same is found righteous, and is shown unto us that he is already blessed in faithful Abraham, and justified—as the Apostle Paul proveth, where he saith:—"Abraham believed God and it was accounted unto him for righteousness. Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. And the Scripture, fore-seeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the Gospel unto Abraham, saying: In thee shall all nations be blessed." (Gal. iii. 6-8.)

[1] Elected A.D. 350. Suffered much persecution from the Arians, and died March 18, 386.

[2] Matth. xxvi. 26.

[3] Job. xxxi. 31.

(In September and October.)

[The Book upon the Sacraments, by St Ambrose—continued.]

IT is the word of Christ, therefore, which doth the needful work in this Sacrament. And what is the word of Christ? It is the word of Him at Whose bidding all things were made. The Lord commanded, and the heavens were created; the Lord commanded, and the earth was formed; the Lord commanded, and the seas were made; the Lord commanded, and all creatures sprang into being. Thou seest, then, how mightily-working a word is the word of Christ. If then the word of Christ hath such power that it can make that to be which hath never been, wherein doth it appear greater that it maketh one thing to be changed into Another? There was once no heaven; there was once no sea; there was once no earth. But hear him who saith:—"He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." (Ps. xxxii. 9.) If, then, I am to answer thee, I tell thee that before the Consecration it is not the Body of Christ, but after the Consecration it is the Body of Christ, for Himself "hath spoken, and it is done; He hath commanded, and it standeth fast."

(In November and December.)

AT the beginning of His ministry, at Cana in Galilee, the Lord turned water into wine, a thing which hath some qualities in common with blood; and shall we deem Him less worthy that we should believe Him, when He turneth wine into Blood? When He was bidden to that marriage wherein twain were made one flesh, He did the beginning of His miracles to the amazement of all men; and shall we less surely hold that He hath given us His Body and Blood to be our meat and drink, or take them with weaker faith that they are indeed His Body and His Blood? Under the appearance of bread He giveth unto us His Body, and, under the appearance of wine, His Blood: and when thou shalt come to receive, it is on the Body and Blood of Christ that thou wilt feed, being made a partaker of His Body and of His Blood. Thus indeed it is that we become Christ-bearers,[1] namely, by carrying about Christ in our bodies, when we receive His Body and Blood into our own frames. Thus, as the blessed Peter hath it, we are "partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Pet. i. 4.)

Fifth Responsory.

[2] JESUS took the cup, after supper, saying: This cup is the New Testament in My Blood. This do in remembrance of Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. My soul hath them [3] still in remembrance, and is humbled in me.

Answer. This do in remembrance of Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Sixth Lesson.

(In January and February.)

LET us then, dearly beloved brethren, take good heed to ourselves, as unto the holders of so great mercies, and when any foul word springeth to our lips, or we feel anger taking possession of us, or the sting of any other sinful passion, let us call to mind of What we have been counted worthy, and let that remembrance still the unruly motion. As often as we take that Body, as often as we taste that Blood, let us think how that we feed on Him Who is sitting on high, adored of Angels, at the right hand of the Eternal Power. Ah me, how many a way is open to us whereby we may be saved! He hath made us His—He hath given His Body to us—and we still are not turned away from evil.

(In March and April.)

CAN anything be purer than that man ought to be, who eateth of this great Sacrifice? Can sun-beam be clearer than that hand ought to be which breaketh this Flesh?—that mouth, which is filled with that spiritual fire?—that tongue, which is reddened by that Blood, awful exceedingly? That whereon the Angels quail to look, neither dare to gaze steadfastly upon It, because of the blinding glory that shineth therefrom, upon This we feed, with This we become one, and are made one body of Christ, and one flesh. "Who can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can show forth all His praise?" (Ps. cv. 2.) Where is the shepherd which feedeth his flock with his own blood? Nay, why should I say, shepherd? Many mothers there be, who after all the pains of travail, give their own little ones to strangers to nurse. But so would not He, but feedeth us with His Own Blood, and maketh us to grow up in His Own substance.

LET us hear, all of us, both Priests and laymen, let us hear What Food it is whereof we are made worthy—let us hear, I say, and let us quake. The Lord satisfieth us with His Own holy Flesh, setting Himself slain before us. What excuse therefore shall we have, if, being so fed as we are, we sin as we do? If, eating of the Lamb, we are still wolves? If, pastured as the sheep of the flock, we raven like lions? This mysterious Sacrament forbiddeth unto us not outrage only, but any the least enmity; it is the Mystery of peace. Upon the Jews God laid it to make year by year by solemn festivals a yearly commemoration of His mercies unto them, but upon thee to do this in remembrance of His love to thee, day by day. To this Table then let there draw nigh no Judus Iscariot, no Simon Magus. These men fell through covetousness; let us fly that bottomless pit.

[The Letter of the Holy Martyr. Cyprian—continued.]

IN Genesis, therefore, in order that the Priest Melchisedek might in due order pronounce the blessing upon Abraham, there was first offered a typical sacrifice, consisting of bread and wine. This was the offering which our Lord JESUS Christ completed and fulfilled, when He offered up bread and a cup of wine mingled [with water]. This fulfilment by Him Who came to fulfil (Matth. v. 17,) utterly satisfied the truth of the image which had gone before. The Holy Ghost doth by Solomon also clearly foreshadow, as it were in a parable, the Lord's Sacrifice, pointing to the victim slain, and the bread and the wine, and the Altar likewise, and the Apostles; as it is written:—"Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars; she hath killed her beasts, she hath mingled her wine, she hath also furnished her table. She hath sent forth her servants, she crieth upon the highest places of the city, saying: Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither unto me. As for them that want understanding, she saith to them: Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled for you." (Prov. ix. 1-5.)

[The Book upon the Sacraments, by St Ambrose—continued.]

AND now I come back to my text. It is indeed a great and worshipful fact that manna was rained down upon the Jews; but, think thou, which was the more great and worshipful, the manna from heaven, or the Body of Christ—the Body of that Same Christ by Whom the heavens were made? And, again; the fathers "did eat manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this Bread," (John vi. 58,) It is unto him "the remission of sins," (Matth. xxvi. 28,) and "he shall never die." (John xi. 26.) [1] Therefore it is not idly that, when thou art a-receiving, thou sayest:—"Amen"—testifying in thine heart that That Which thou art taking is the Body of Christ. The Priest saith unto thee:—"The Body of Christ!"—and thou answerest:—"Amen"—that is to say:—"It is true." What then thy tongue confesseth, let thine heart hold to.

CHRIST once said, in conversing with the Jews: "Except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His Blood, ye have no life in you." (John vi. 53.) But they took not spiritually that which He said, and "from that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him." (66.) They thought that He had bidden them to eat flesh. The Old Testament also had Shewbread, but this Old Testament bread was now to have an end. The bread of the New Testament is "the Bread Which cometh down from heaven" (50), the cup of the New Testament, the Cup of Salvation, that Bread and that Cup Which hallow both souls and bodies. Wherefore I will have thee to understand that the Bread and Wine whereunto thou art to come, are not mere common bread or mere common wine; for they are the Body and the Blood of Christ. Even if thy senses do indeed deny this fact, yet let faith make thee right sure of it. Judge not the Thing by the taste thereof, but let faith assure thee beyond all doubt thou art partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] I am that Bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Verse. I am the living Bread Which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever.

Answer. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. This is the Bread Which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

We have heard from the Gospel the words of the Lord which follow [those that formed the subject of my] earlier discourse. To your ears and understandings we owe a discourse on these also, and to-day it becometh very well, for it is upon that Body of the Lord, Which He professeth Himself that He "will give for the life of the world," "that a man may eat thereof and not die." He hath made manifest how He giveth, and What is His Gift, where He saith: "He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me and I in him." The sign to show whether a man hath or hath not eaten that Flesh and drunk that Blood, is whether or not he dwelleth in Christ and Christ in him, whether or not he is a guest of Christ and Christ of his, whether or not he so cleaveth unto Christ, that Christ be not parted from him.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (27*th Tract on John.*)

I have said, my brethren, that what the Lord hath set before us, in eating of His Flesh and drinking of His Blood, is that we should dwell in Him, and He in us. We dwell in Him when we are His members, and He dwelleth in us when we are His temple. But the bond whereby we are made His members is oneness; and what is the cause of oneness but love? And love of God, whence is it? Ask the Apostle. "The love of God," saith he, "is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, Which is given unto us." (Rom. v. 5.)

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (26*th Tract on John.*)

"This is the bread which cometh down from heaven," (v. 50.) By "this bread" the Lord here signifieth both the manna, and That Which we receive at the Altar of God. Both these are, as it were, Sacramental signs, differing indeed somewhat in their outward and visible part, but pointing to the Same Thing signified. Hear what the Apostle saith: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and did all eat the same spiritual meat." (1 Cor. x. 1-3.) This meat was the same spiritually but not really; they ate manna — we eat Something else. Spiritually they ate What we eat; but our fathers—not their fathers; unto whom we are like —not unto whom they are like. And it is added: "And did all drink the same Spiritual drink." They drank one thing, and we drink Another, the difference being in the outer show, the sameness in that the Same Thing is pointed to by both. And what was that Same Drink? "They drank of the spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." Him did bread and rock alike signify. The Rock was a figure, but by the Word and in the Flesh there is the very Christ Himself. And how came they to drink of that rock? "Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice, and the water came out abundantly." (Num. xx. 11.) These two strokes of the rod upon the rock are a figure of the two beams whereof the Cross was made.

"Not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead." Wherefore did they eat and die? Because they believed only that which they saw; and that which they saw not, they understood not. Therefore were they your fathers, because ye are like unto them. Doth this death, my brethren, mean that death which is outward and bodily? And do not we also die, who eat of that Bread Which cometh down from heaven? That death died they, and so shall we also, as far, as I have said, as is meant that death which is outward and bodily.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.][1] (Bk. viii. on the Trinity.)

When we speak concerning the things of God, we must not speak after the manner of men, nor after the manner of the world. Let us read those things which are written, and understand those things which we read; and then let us act as having a perfect faith. We shall speak but folly and godlessness if we speak concerning the natural truth of Christ in us, and have not learnt at Christ's School how we should speak. He Himself saith:—"My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed. He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." There is here no room left for doubt as to What is His Flesh and what is His Blood.[2]

[2] De veritate carnis et sanguinis non relictus est ambigendi locus.

Homily by St Cyril, Pope [of Alexandria.] (Book iv. on John, ch. 17.)

"He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood," saith the Lord, "dwelleth in Me, and I in him." If a man take two pieces of wax and melt them, and pour the one into the other, they necessarily mingle; so also, he that receiveth the Body and Blood of the Lord doth become so joined with the Lord that he is to be found in Christ and Christ in him. Another comparison thou wilt find in Matthew. The Lord there saith: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, [till the whole was leavened,]" (xiii. 33,) because, as Paul saith, "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." (Gal. v. 9.) So also doth a little of this Blessing draw the whole man unto Itself, and fill him with Its grace: and thus doth Christ dwell in us, and we in Christ.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [2] What nation is there so great, who hath gods so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is to us?

Answer. Dwelleth in Me, and I in him. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Eighth Lesson.

(In January and February.)

[The 17th Tract on John, by St Austin—continued.]

THIS hath He taught, and warned us, by words of deep meaning, to be in His Body as members whose Head is He, eating His Flesh, and cleaving alway to His Oneness. "Many of His disciples when they had heard this . . . went back, and walked no more with Him"—for they understood not by "Flesh" any flesh other than such as they themselves were made of. The Apostle saith, (and very true it is): "To be carnally minded is death." (Rom. viii. 6.) The Lord giveth us His Flesh to eat, and to understand it carnally is death. Where He saith: "Whoso eateth My Flesh . . . hath eternal life"—we must not understand this His Flesh carnally, as did they of whom it is written: "Many of His disciples"—(not His enemies)—"when they heard this, said: This is an hard saying—who can hear it?"

(In March and April.)

SO "it is the spirit that quickeneth." It is the spirit that maketh lively the limbs, nor is the quickening power of the spirit shed through any limbs but such as remain in union with the body whose the spirit is. The spirit that thou hast in thee, O man, and whereby thou art a man, doth that spirit shed life through any limb cut off from thy flesh? By "spirit," I mean soul. The soul quickeneth no limb but such as remain attached to the body. Cut one off, and the soul quickeneth it no more, for it is separate from the oneness of thy body.

(In May and June.)

CHRIST'S faithful ones discern the Lord's Body while they remain watchful members of His Body. They remain members of His Body as long as they will to live according to His Spirit. The Spirit of Christ giveth life to nothing but the body of Christ. Now, my brethren, understand what I am going to say. Thou art a man, and hast a body and a spirit. By spirit I mean the soul, which causeth thee to be a man at all. Thou art a man, made up of soul and body. Thy spirit is unseen, thy body seen. Tell me, which of them is it which giveth animation to the other? Doth thy spirit derive animation from thy body, or thy body from thy spirit? Every one who liveth will answer—for if any one cannot answer this, I know not if he be alive. What will whosoever hath life answer? "Verily, it is my spirit which doth animate my body." Wilt thou then live by the Spirit of Christ? Be of the Body of Christ.

(In July and August.)

BUT the death whereof the Lord doth sound the alarm, the death that their fathers died, is another death than that which is outward and bodily. Moses ate manna, Aaron ate manna, Phinehas ate manna, many ate manna in whom the Lord was well pleased—and these are not dead. Wherefore? Because they understood spiritually that outward bread, spiritually hungered thereafter, spiritually tasted thereof, and spiritually were satisfied therewith. So also do we this day feed on a visible food, but the Sacrament is one thing, and the grace of the Sacrament is another.

(In September and October.)

FOR now we know by the declaration of the Lord Himself and by [the teaching of] our Faith, the reality of His Flesh and Blood. And when we eat the One and drink the Other, They work effectually in us to make us dwell in Him and He in us. Is not this a reality? Surely it befalleth not them to find it true, who deny that Christ JESUS is Very God. He is in us by means of His Flesh, and we are in Him when that which we are is with Him in God. That we dwell in Him through that Sacrament wherein His Flesh and Blood are given unto us, He Himself doth testify, where He saith:—"Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more; but ye see Me; because I live ye shall live also. [At that day ye shall know that] I am in My Father, and ye in Me, and I in you." (John xiv. 19, 20.)

(In November and December.)

AS for ourselves, if we would win life everlasting; if we would that the Giver of immortality should dwell in us, let us run freely to receive this Blessing, and let us beware that the devil succeed not in laying a stumbling-block in our way, in the shape of a mistaken reverence. Thou rightly sayest, and we know well, how that it is written: "Whosoever shall eat this Bread and drink this Cup of the Lord unworthily . . . eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." (1 Cor. xi. 27, 29.) I therefore examine myself and find myself unworthy. And I ask thee, who citest these words to me, who shall ever be found worthy? When wilt thou be such an one as may be worthy to be offered to Christ? If by sin thou art unworthy, and thou ceasest not to sin, (for, as the Psalmist hath it,—"Who can understand his errors?"—Ps. xviii. 13,) then shalt thou for ever lack this means of life and sanctification.

[2] Deut. iv. 7.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [2] With the bread of life and understanding hath the Lord fed him.

Answer. So he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. So he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ninth Lesson.

(In January and February.)

IF His disciples took His words for an hard saying, how did His enemies take them? And, nevertheless, thus it behoved to speak them if all men were not to understand them. A Divine mystery ought to make us thoughtful, not to repel us; and yet, when the Lord JESUS Christ spoke thus in mystery, many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him. They believed not that He was speaking of some great thing, and darkly announcing in these words a bounty. They understood but as they pleased, even after the manner of men, that JESUS was able, or that JESUS meant, to give that Flesh wherewith the Word is clothed on, as it were, in slices, to them that believe on Him. And they said: "This is an hard saying—who can hear it?"

(In March and April.)

THESE things I say, that we may love oneness and dread division. In sooth, there is nothing which a Christian ought so much to dread, as to be cut off from the Body of Christ. If he be cut off from the Body of Christ, he is no longer a member of Christ, and the Spirit of Christ no longer quickeneth him. "Now, if any man," saith the Apostle, "have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Rom. viii. 9.)

"It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

"Spirit and life"—what meaneth this? It is to be taken spiritually. Hast thou taken it spiritually? Then the words the Lord spake, unto thee they are spirit and they are life. Hast thou taken it carnally? Then the words of the Lord are still indeed spirit and life—but not for thee.

(In May and June.)

IS it not my spirit which doth animate my body? My spirit doth animate my body, and thy spirit doth animate thy body. The Body of Christ liveth not save by the Spirit of Christ. Hence it is that the Apostle Paul saith, touching this Bread: "We, being many, are one bread, and one body, for we are all partakers of that one Bread." (1 Cor. x. 17.) O what a Sacrament of love! O what a seal of union! O what a bond of charity! He that willeth to live hath here where to live, and whence to live. Let him come near, let him believe, let him enter into that Body, that he may be quickened. Let him not sever himself from the fit joining-together of all the members; let him not be as a mortifying limb, that must needs be cut off, nor a misshapen limb, a cause to blush. Let him be goodly, and useful, and healthy. Let him cleave unto the body; let him live by God to God; let him labour now on earth, that he may reign hereafter in heaven.

(In July and August.)

O HOW many there be which receive at the Altar, and die, yea die even in the very receiving! Whence the Apostle saith:—"[He that eateth and drinketh unworthily] eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." (1 Cor. xi. 29.) Is it not written:—"When JESUS had dipped the sop, He gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon, and after the sop Satan entered into him?" (John xiii. 26, 27.) And yet he took it. And when he had eaten it, the enemy entered in and possessed him. Not because what he ate was evil, but because he, being evil, dared to eat that which was good. Look to it well, then, brethren, that ye take spiritually the Bread Which cometh down from heaven. Bring innocency with you to the Altar. Though your sins be daily, let them not be deadly. Before ye draw near to the Altar, think well what it is that ye say:—"Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us." "For, if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you" (Matth. vi. 14)—and ye may draw near boldly, for unto you It is Bread, and not poison.

(In September and October.)

BUT that this union in us is a real one, He testifieth thus:—"He that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." For no one dwelleth in Him in whom He doth not dwell, since he which receiveth [the Body of Christ] hath but received that Flesh of [the same nature as] his own, which Christ hath taken into Himself. The mystery of this perfect union He had taught before, when He said:—"As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so, he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me." He therefore liveth by the Father, and, as He liveth by the Father, so shall we live by Him.

WHEREFORE, I counsel thee to betake thee to godly thoughts, and to live carefully and holily, and so to receive that Blessing—a Blessing which, believe me, doth banish, not death only, but all diseases likewise. For when Christ dwelleth in us, He stilleth the law of death in our members, which warreth against the law of our mind, (Rom. vii. 23,) He giveth strength to godliness, He turneth to calm the turbulent surging of our mind, He cureth them which are sick, He raiseth up them which are fallen, and, like the Good Shepherd, Which giveth His life for the sheep, He prevaileth that the sheep perish not.

Chapter. (1 Cor. xi. 23.)

BRETHREN, I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord JESUS, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread, and, when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said: Take, eat; this is My Body, Which shall be given for you: this do in remembrance of Me.

Hymn.[6]

THE Word of God proceeding forth,
  Yet leaving not the Father's side,
And going to His work on earth,
  Had reached at length life's eventide.

By a disciple to be given
  To rivals for His Blood athirst;
Himself, the very Bread of heaven,
  He gave to His disciples first.

He gave Himself in either kind;
  His Precious Flesh; His Precious Blood;
Of flesh and blood is man combined,
  And He of man would be the Food.

In Birth, man's Fellow-man was He;
  His Meat, while sitting at the Board;
He died, his Ransomer to be;
  He reigns, to be his Great Reward.

O Saving Victim, slain to bless!
  Who openest heaven's bright gates to all
The attacks of many a foe oppress;
  Give strength in strife, and help in fall.

To God, the Three in One, ascend
  All thanks and praise for evermore;
He grant the life that shall not end,
  Upon the heavenly country's shore.
Amen.

Verse. He maketh peace in thy borders. (P. T. Alleluia.)
Answer. And filleth thee with the finest of the wheat. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Holy exceedingly is the Supper of the Lord, * wherein we do feed on Christ, do show His death till He come,[1] do get grace abundantly to our souls, and do take pledge of the glory which shall hereafter be revealed in us.[2] (P. T. Alleluia.)

Office in Honour of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, for Fridays.

Semi-double.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

First Antiphon. I will take the cup of salvation, * and call upon the Name of the LORD. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxv. I believed, &c., (p. 105.)

Second Antiphon. With them that hate peace * I was peaceable. When I spoke unto them they fought against me without a cause. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxix. In my distress, &c., (p. 105.)

Third Antiphon. O LORD, preserve me * from the evil man. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxxxix. Deliver me, &c., (p. 112.)

Fourth Antiphon. Keep me from the snare * which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxl. LORD, I cry unto Thee, &c., (p. 112.)

Fifth Antiphon. I looked * on my right hand and beheld, but there was no man that would know me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. cxli. I cried unto the LORD, &c., (p. 113.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Hymn.[3]

BLOOD is the price of heaven
All sin that price exceeds;
O come to be forgiven,
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

Under the olive boughs,
Falling like ruby beads,
The Blood drops from His Brows,
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

While the fierce scourges fall,
The Precious Blood still pleads;
In front of Pilate's hall
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

Beneath the thorny crown
The crimson fountain speeds;
See how it trickles down,
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

Bearing the fatal wood
His band of Saints He leads,
Marking the way with Blood,
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

On Calvary His shame
With Blood still intercedes;
His open Wounds proclaim—
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

He hangs upon the tree,
Hangs there for my misdeeds;
He sheds His Blood for me;
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

Ah me! His Soul is fled;
Yet still for my great needs
He bleeds when He is dead;
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

[3] The two beautiful and popular Hymns by the late Dr Faber which are here inserted at Vespers and Mattins are not translations of the Hymns Mærentes oculi and Aspice infami, but, whether the ideas were suggested by the Latin or whether it be an accidental coincidence, they agree with the sense of the Latin so closely, that they might fairly be called Paraphrases or imitations, and this consideration induces the Translator to insert them. Absolute translations have been executed by the late Rev. E. Caswall and the Rev. Dr Wallace. See Appendix.

His Blood is flowing still;
My thirsty soul It feeds;
He lets me drink my fill;
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

O sweet! O precious Blood!
What love, what love it breeds!
Ransom, Reward, and Food,
He bleeds,
My Saviour bleeds!
Bleeds!

Verse. [1] He was offered up because He willed it. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. And with His stripes we are healed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] O all ye that pass by! behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Prayer as at Lauds.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is said thus:

Lord Jesu, slain for us, to Thee
Eternal praise be given,
With Father, Spirit, One and Three,
Here as it is in heaven.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ our King Who was crucified, * Him—O come!—let us worship. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Hymn.[3]

O COME and mourn with me awhile!
See, Mary calls us to her side;
O come, and let us mourn with her;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

Have we no tears to shed for Him,
While soldiers scoff and Jews deride?
Ah! look how patiently He hangs;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

How fast His Hands, His Feet are nailed;
His blessed Tongue with thirst is tied;
His failing Eyes are dim with Blood;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

His Mother cannot reach His Face;
She stands in helplessness beside;
Her heart is martyred with her Son's;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

Seven times He spoke, seven words of love,
And all three hours His silence cried
For mercy on the souls of men:
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

Death came, and Jesus meekly bowed;
His failing Eyes He strove to guide
With mindful love to Mary's face;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

O break, O break, hard heart of mine!
Thy weak self-love and guilty pride
His Pilate and His Judas were;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

Come, take thy stand beneath the Cross,
And let the Blood from out that Side
Fall gently on thee, drop by drop:
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

A broken heart, a fount of tears,
Ask, and it will not be denied;
A broken heart love's cradle is;
Jesus, our Love, is crucified!

O love of God! O sin of man!
In this dread act your strength is tried;
And victory remains with love;
For He, our Love, is crucified!

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. The kings of the earth set themselves, * and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against His Anointed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. ii. Why do the heathen, &c., (p. 3.)

Second Antiphon. They be increased * that trouble me; many are they that rise up against me.

Ps. iii. Lord, how are they increased, &c., (p. 3.)

Third Antiphon. They part * my garments among them; and cast lots upon my vesture.

Ps. xxi. My God, my God, &c., (p. 27.)

Verse. He was offered up because He willed it. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. And with His stripes we are healed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

The Lessons are taken from Scripture according to the Season; but if there should be none such, the following are used.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Romans (v. 8.)

GOD commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by His Blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, shall we be saved by His life. And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by Whom we have now received the atonement. (17.) For if by one man's offence, death reigned by one, much more they which receive abundance of grace, and bounty, and righteousness, shall reign in life through Jesus Christ.

First Responsory.

[4] I had planted thee a noble vine, saith the Lord, and thou hast brought forth unto Me grapes exceeding bitter, for thou hast made ready a Cross for thy Saviour. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [5] O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. For thou hast made ready a Cross for thy Saviour. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Lesson.

THEREFORE, as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so, by the righteousness of One, [the gift] came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous. Then, the law entered that the offence might abound; but where sin abounded grace did much more abound, that, as sin hath reigned unto death even so might grace reign, through righteousness, unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Second Responsory.

I brought thee forth out of Egypt; behind thee I caused Pharaoh to drown in the Red Sea, and before thee I went in the pillar of the cloud. And thou didst betray Me unto the chief Priests, and lead Me unto the judgment-hall of Pilate. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. O My people, what have

---

[1] Isa. liii. 7, 5. [2] Lam. i. 12.

[3] By Dr Faber as before; two verses are omitted.

[4] Cf. Jer. ii. 21. [5] Micah vi. 3.

I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee. Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst betray Me unto the chief Priests, and lead Me unto the judgment-hall of Pilate. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Lesson. (vi.)

WHAT shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid; how shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into JESUS Christ were baptized into His death? For we are buried with Him by baptism into death, that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also may walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection; knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin. Now, if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him.

Third Responsory.

I scourged Egypt in her first-born for thy sake, and thou when thou hadst scourged Me, didst deliver Me [to be crucified,] Me Who as a lamb before his shearer was dumb, and opened not My Mouth.[1] (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou, when thou hadst scourged Me, didst deliver Me [to be crucified]. Me Who as a lamb before his shearer was dumb, and opened not My mouth. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Me Who as a lamb before his shearer was dumb, and opened not My Mouth. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Mine enemies * speak evil of me: When shall he die, and his name perish? (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. xl. Blessed is he that considereth, &c., (p. 53.)

Second Antiphon. Strangers are risen up * against me, and oppressors seek after my soul.

Ps. liii. Save me, O God, by Thy Name, &c., (p. 20.)

Third Antiphon. Mine enemies tread me down * all the day long; all their thoughts are against me for evil.

Ps. lv. Be merciful unto me, &c., (p. 62.)

Verse. [2] God spared not His Own Son. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. But delivered Him up for us all. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (For Wednesday in Holy Week, on the Passion of the Lord.)

BRETHREN, it is well to contemplate these things, in especial in the Passion of the Lord, namely, what He did? how He did it? and why He did it? In what He did we see a model of patience, in the way in which He did it, a model of lowliness, and in the reason why He did it, a model of love. His patience was singular. The ploughers ploughed upon His back; they made long their furrows. (Ps. cxxviii. 3.) He was stretched upon the Cross in such wise that one might have told all His Bones. (Ps. xxi. 18.) That tower of strength which keepeth Israël was broken through upon every side, for they pierced His Hands and His Feet. He was brought as a sheep to the slaughter. But as a lamb before his shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth. (Is. liii. 7.) He uttered no murmur against the Father, who had sent Him, against mankind for whom He was paying what He had never taken, nor even against His own people who were repaying Him so much evil for so much good.

Fourth Responsory.

I smote the kings of Canaan for thy sake, and gave thee a kingly sceptre, and thou didst put on My Head a crown of thorns, and smite Me upon the Head with a reed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst put on My Head a crown of thorns, and smite Me upon the Head with a reed. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Lesson.

AND if thou wilt look well how He did it, thou wilt see how that He is not only meek but even lowly of heart. "In His humiliation His judgment was taken away." (Acts viii. 33.) And He answered never a word to all the blasphemies, and to all the false witness that was brought against Him. "He hath no form nor comeliness, and when we shall see Him there is no beauty that we should desire Him. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; and He hid as it were His face from us; He was despised and we esteemed Him not. Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows, yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted." (Isa. liii. 3, 4.) O the depth and the height, O the lowliness and the loftiness, despised and rejected of men, but the glory of Angels, than Him there is none loftier and none lowlier. He was smeared with spitting, sodden with reproaches, condemned to a death of shame, numbered with the transgressors. And hath this very lowliness carried to such a measure, yea beyond all measure, no merit in itself? As His patience was singular so was His lowliness wonderful. There is nothing like either of them.

Fifth Responsory.

I led thee through the wilderness for forty years, and gave thee manna to eat, and thou didst buffet Me and scourge Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

---

[1] Isa. liii. 7.

[2] Rom. viii. 32.

Verse. O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst buffet Me and scourge Me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Sixth Lesson.

BUT what He did, and how He did it, are alike gloriously set forth by the reason why He did it, namely, His love. God for His great love wherewith He loved us (Eph. ii. 4) spared not His Own Son (Rom. viii. 32.) Neither did the Son spare Himself, great indeed was that love, passing all comprehension and all measure, and rising above all things. "Greater love," saith He, (John xv. 13,) "hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." But Thou Thyself, O Lord, Thou Thyself hadst greater love than this, for Thou didst lay down Thy life for Thine enemies. When we were enemies we were reconciled by Thy death to the Father and to Thee. (Rom. v. 10.) What other love then hath there ever been or can there ever be to be likened unto this love? "Scarcely for a righteous man will one die." But Thou didst suffer the just for the unjust. Thou didst die for our sins. O Thou Who didst come to justify sinners freely to make slaves into brethren, bondsmen into co-heirs, and exiles into kings.

Sixth Responsory.

I lifted thee up with a strong hand, and thou didst lift Me up upon the gibbet of the Cross, and thereon I stretched forth My hands unto an unbelieving and gainsaying people.[1] (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst lift Me up upon the gibbet of the Cross, and thereon I stretched forth My hands unto an unbelieving and gainsaying people. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And thereon I stretched forth My hands unto an unbelieving and gainsaying people. (P. T. Alleluia.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. As for the sons of men, * their teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ps. lvi. Be merciful unto me, &c., (p. 62.)

Second Antiphon. They bend their bow, * even bitter words, that they may shoot in secret at the perfect.

Ps. lxiii. Hear my voice, O God, &c., (p. 64.)

Third Antiphon. I am as a man that hath no strength, * lying nerveless among the dead.

Ps. lxxxvii. O LORD God of my salvation, &c., (p. 82.)

Verse. He became obedient unto death. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. Even the death of the Cross. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 28.)

AT that time: JESUS, knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, saith: I thirst. And so on.

Homily by St Cyril, Pope of Alexandria. (Bk. xii. Comment. on John.)

The brutality of the Jews had already outraged Christ to the full; cruelty had nothing left to desire; and now at the last moment the Most Holy Flesh of Christ suffereth a pain springing naturally from Itself. That Flesh, fevered by many and divers tortures, felt thirst. Great pain hath the property of producing strong thirst, since by some natural law which I cannot explain, it drieth up as by heat the liquids of the body and as it were setteth on fire the inward parts. As therefore Christ had willed to undergo other sufferings, so was he pleased to undergo this. He asked therefore to drink, but they were so utterly destitute of humanity that instead of giving Him a drink which should be refreshing and pleasant they brought Him one which was harmful and bitter, and so turned into wickedness what was a seeming act of kindness; to give to Him that asked of them was a seeming act of kindness, but the Scriptures cannot lie wherein (Ps. lxviii. 22) Christ is made to say, "They gave me also gall for my meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink."

Seventh Responsory.

I gave thee to drink out of the rock the waters of salvation, and thou didst give Me gall and vinegar to drink. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. O My people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst give Me gall and vinegar to drink. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Eighth Lesson (xxxvi.)

"WHEN JESUS therefore had received the vinegar, He said: It is finished. And He bowed His Head and gave up the ghost."

"It is finished." Jewish outrage against God was finished; the power to inflict torture was finished. What had the Jews left unattempted, or cruelty left undone? Did any pain or insult remain uninflicted? Rightly did He say: "It is finished." But He was come to be the Lord of the dead as well as of the quick, and the hour was now calling Him to go and preach to the imprisoned spirits in the netherworld. He accepted even death for our sakes and bore in His Own Flesh that suffering common to all our nature, albeit that as God He is naturally life in Himself, in order that He might plunder hell, and being become as the Scripture (1 Cor. xv. 20) hath it (Apoc. i. 5), "The first fruits of them that slept, and the first begotten of the dead," might gift our nature with return to life.

Eighth Responsory.

I opened the Red Sea before thee, and thou didst open with a spear the Side of thy Saviour, Who redeemed the world by His Blood. (P. T. Alleluia.)

---

[1] Rom. x. 21.

Verse. O My people! what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? Testify against Me.

Answer. And thou didst open with a spear the Side of thy Saviour, Who redeemed the World by His Blood. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Who redeemed the world by His Blood. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ninth Lesson.

“HE bowed His Head.” When the strength of the body is gone and the soul which keepeth the body together is also gone, the heads of the dying fall, and it is to describe this that the Evangelist useth these words; so also the words gave up the ghost are an expression which we often use of them that depart and die; nevertheless to me it seemeth that the Evangelist useth these words He gave up the ghost in something more than their ordinary sense of mere death, because the Lord gave up His soul into the Hands of God the Father with a commendation, saying, “Father, into Thine hands I commend my Spirit,” the which is the foundation and spring of our main hope.

The Hymn, “We praise Thee, O God, &c.,” is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [1] All the day long have I been plagued, * and chastened every morning. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. [2] I gat me to the mountain of myrrh, * and to the hill of frankincense; I was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and I was dumb, and opened not my mouth. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Antiphon. [3] They pierced my hands and my feet; * they have told all my bones. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Antiphon. [4] I looked for comforters and I found none; * they gave me also gall for meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Antiphon. When JESUS had received the vinegar, * He said: It is finished—and He bowed His Head, and gave up the ghost. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Chapter. (Phil. ii. 5.)

BRETHREN, let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ JESUS, Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but emptied Himself, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was found in the likeness of men. He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross.

Hymn.[5]

O'ERWHELMED in depth of woe,
Upon the tree of scorn
Hangs the Redeemer of mankind
With racking anguish torn.

See how the nails those Hands
And Feet so tender rend;
See down His Face, and Neck, and Breast
His Sacred Blood descend!

Hark! with what awful cry
His Spirit takes Its flight.
That cry, it pierced His Mother's heart
And whelmed her soul in night.

Earth hears, and to its base
Rocks wildly to and fro;
Tombs burst; seas, rivers, mountains quake;
The vail is rent in two.

The sun withdraws his light;
The midday heavens grow pale;
The moon, the stars, the universe
Their Maker's death bewail.

Shall man alone be mute?
Come, youth and hoary hairs,
Come, rich and poor, come, all mankind,
And bathe those Feet in tears.

Come, fall before His Cross,
Who shed for us His Blood!
Who died, the Victim of pure love,
To make us sons of God.

JESU, all praise to Thee,
Our joy and endless rest:
Be Thou our Guide while pilgrims here,
Our Crown amid the blest. Amen.

Verse. He was wounded for our transgressions. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. He was bruised for our iniquities. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. But when they came to JESUS, and saw that He was dead already, they brake not His Legs, but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced His Side, and forthwith came thereout Blood and Water. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Prayer throughout the Office.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, Who didst send our Saviour to take upon Him our flesh, and to endure the Cross, that all mankind should follow the example of His great humility, mercifully grant that we who worship in memory of His Sufferings, may worthily both follow the example of His Patience and also be made partakers of His resurrection. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

COMPLINE.

The last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Let us tell of the stainless Conception of the Virgin Mary: * let us worship Christ, her Son, and her Lord and ours. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Hymn.[2]

BLEST Guardian of all virgin souls!
  Portal of bliss to man forgiven!
Pure Mother of Almighty God!
  Thou hope of earth, and joy of Heaven!

Fair Lily, found among the thorns!
  Most beauteous Dove with wings of gold!
Rod from whose tender root upsprang
  That healing Flower long since foretold!

Thou Tower, against the dragon proof!
  Thou Star, to storm-toss'd voyagers dear!
Our course lies o'er a treacherous deep;
  Thine be the light by which we steer.

Scatter the mists that round us hang,
  Keep far the fatal shoals away;
And while through darkling waves we sweep,
  Open a path to life and day.

O JESU, born of Virgin bright!
  Immortal glory be to Thee;
Praise to the Father infinite,
  And Holy Ghost eternally. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

In Paschal-time only one Antiphon, namely the First, is said at each Nocturn.

First Antiphon. O Lord, how excellent is Thy Name * in all the earth, Who hast made Thee a worthy tabernacle in the Virgin Mary. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord hath set * His tabernacle in the sun.

Third Antiphon. Even in her Conception * did Mary receive a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from the God of her salvation.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season; but if there are none such, the following are read.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Genesis (iii. 1.)

THE serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Why hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman: Ye shall not surely die. For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened: and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

First Responsory.

[1] By one man sin entered into the world, in whom all have sinned. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [2] The Lord hath delivered thy soul from death, yea, the Lord was thy stay.

Answer. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Lesson.

AND the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired: and she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened; and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves aprons. And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day; and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God, amidst the trees of the garden.

Second Responsory.

[3] Come unto me, all ye that be desirous of me, and I will declare what God hath done for my soul. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [4] As the Lord liveth, by me He hath fulfilled His mercy.

Answer. And I will declare what God hath done for my soul. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Third Lesson.

AND the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him: Where art thou? And he said: I heard Thy voice in the garden: and I was afraid, because I was naked, and I hid myself. And He said: Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? And Adam said: The woman whom Thou gavest me to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. And the Lord God said unto the woman: Wherefore hast thou done this? And she said: The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. And the Lord God said unto the serpent: Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: she shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise her heel.

Third Responsory.

[5] My beloved is white like snow in Lebanon, her lips drop as the honeycomb. Honey and milk are under her tongue. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Come from Lebanon, My Spouse, thou shalt be crowned with a crown of grace.

Answer. Honey and milk are under her tongue. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Honey and milk are under her tongue. (P. T. Alleluia.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Grace is poured into her Conception, * and she is fairer than the daughters of men. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. God hath holpen her right early, * the Most High hath hallowed His tabernacle.

Third Antiphon. Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God; * the Lord hath laid thy foundation in the holy mountains.

Verse. [6] By this I know that Thou favourest me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. Because mine enemy cannot triumph over me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fourth Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

GOD is unspeakable. His ways are mercy and truth; His Will is Almighty Power; and His Wisdom reacheth mightily from one end to another, and sweetly ordereth all things. (Wisd. viii. 1.) He from all eternity foresaw the sorrowful fall of man by the transgression of Adam, and, in His mysterious purpose, He decreed, before the worlds were, that the Word should be made flesh, to the end that man, who had been seduced by the fraud of the devil, might not perish, but that as in the first Adam all die, in Christ all might be made alive. (1 Cor. xv. 22.) And to this end, the Eternal Creator from the beginning, and before all ages, chose and ordained a woman to be the Mother of His Only-begotten Son, of whom He should take flesh and be born, in the blessed fulness of time. (Gal. iv. 4.) And this woman He loved with so great a love that He allowed His Will to be freely wrought in her. (1 Thess. iv. 3.)

(From the First Sunday in Lent till Trinity Sunday.)

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

BOTH in her Offices and in the most holy Liturgy the Church hath been accustomed to apply to the creation of Mary the language in which the Holy Scriptures set forth the Eternal Generation of the Uncreated Wisdom, and that, because Mary was predestined in the decree of the Incarnation of the same Wisdom. This practice hath been received by the faithful in all quarters, and plainly showeth what hath been the mind of the Church of Rome, which is the mother and mistress of all Churches, on the subject of the sinless conception of the Virgin. Nevertheless, it is fitting to set forth in greater detail the celebrated acts of this Church, on account of that pre-eminent rank and power which all other Churches are bound to yield her, because she is the centre of Catholic truth and unity, wherein alone Doctrine is always preserved pure, and from whom all the other Churches must needs receive the tradition of the Faith.

THE language used in public worship is the necessary offspring of the teaching which it expresseth, and the former can have no safety unless the latter be settled. Wherefore Our Predecessors the Roman Pontiffs, while encouraging the pious love of the faithful for the Conception of the Blessed Virgin, have taken care ceaselessly to inculcate the sinlessness of the same. They have always particularly insisted that the Feast should be observed not in honour of Mary's sanctification, a false opinion, most foreign to the mind of the Church (but which hath nevertheless been maintained by some,) but in honour of her Conception itself.

(From the First Sunday of September till Advent.)

The Lesson is taken from the Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX.

IT is known to all men, with what care this doctrine of the sinlessness of the conception of the Mother of God hath been handed down, set forth, and defended by the most distinguished Religious Orders, Theologians, Universities, and Doctors skilled in the things of God. All men know likewise how carefully Christian Bishops, even in their public teaching, have professed the doctrine that through the merits of Christ our Lord and Saviour, foreknown by God, the Holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, was delivered from ever being the victim of original sin, but, on the contrary, had the fruits of redemption applied to her at the very moment of her Conception, and was therefore redeemed in a nobler way than others. But the weightiest fact of all is that the most holy Council of Trent, when, in accordance with the Holy Scriptures, as interpreted by the holy Fathers and the approved Councils, it decreed that all men are conceived in sin, expressly added that it did not mean thereby to say that the blessed and stainless Mary, Mother of God, did not form an exception to the rule. From this declaration of the Fathers of Trent it can clearly be drawn that there is nothing in the Bible, nothing in tradition, and nothing in the Fathers which can rightly be adduced against this prerogative of the most Blessed Virgin, nay, as far as circumstances demanded, they as much as declared her free from the original stain.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] I came out of the mouth of the Most High, the first-begotten before every creature. I made the unfading light to arise in the heavens. When there were no depths I was conceived. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. For the Lord hath created me in righteousness, and hath held mine hand, and hath kept me.

Answer. When there were no depths I was conceived. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Fifth Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

WHEREFORE, He bestowed upon her, out of the treasure of the Divinity, such a wealth of gifts of grace as He hath bestowed upon none of the Angels and none of the Saints. He made her always free from any the slightest pollution of sin, so fair and so upright that no other of His works are like to her, and only Himself can we understand to excel her. Verily, this was most fitting, that this most worshipful Mother should be made bright with the brightness of uncontaminated holiness, and should conquer the old serpent by escaping altogether the stain of original sin, for she was that Mother to whom the Eternal Father was willing to give the Co-Eternal and Co-Equal Only-begotten Son of His love, to be her Son also.

(From the First Sunday in Lent till Trinity Sunday.)

THUS it hath always been one of the most striking features of the Roman Church that she hath most powerfully asserted, guarded, promoted, and vindicated the doctrine that the Virgin was conceived without sin. It hath been the boast of Our Predecessors that by their authority they instituted in the Roman Church the Feast of the Conception of Mary, and caused it to be observed with an Office and a Mass wherein her privilege of immunity from original sin was openly asserted. Our said Predecessors have done everything in their power to increase the love of the faithful for this doctrine: by granting Indulgences in its honour; by giving permission to cities, provinces, and kingdoms to choose for their Patroness the Mother of God, under her title "Conceived without sin;" by approving of Guilds, Congregations, and Associations of persons under vows, all instituted in honour of the sinless Conception; by praising the piety of those who have founded Convents, Hospitals, Altars, and Churches named from this belief; and lastly, by encouraging those who have taken an oath to defend this opinion to the utmost of their power.

(From Trinity Sunday till the First Sunday of September.)

THE same Our Predecessors have likewise resisted the dreams of those who have imagined that in the sinless Conception there were Two Instants, and that the Church celebrateth the Second and not the First. Indeed, Our said Predecessors have considered the sinlessness of the First Instant to be as much a truth for their assertion, protection, and promulgation, as the sinlessness of the Conception at all. Hence came those words in which Our Predecessor Alexander VII. in a decree declareth the mind of the Church, and saith, "Christ's faithful people, drawn by love to His most blessed Mother, the Virgin Mary, have of a long time believed that God, at the very First Instant in which He made her soul and joined it to her body, by a special grace and privilege granted to her, through the merits of His dear Son, Christ JESUS, the Saviour of the world, Whose precious death He foreknew, cleansed her from all sin, original as well as actual; and it is in this belief, and no other, that the said faithful of Christ have always kept with devotion and joy the Feast of the said Conception."

(From the First Sunday of September till Advent.)

IN truth, this doctrine upon the Conception of the most Blessed Virgin is day by day more earnestly set forth by the graver thought of the Church, by her teaching, by her care, by her learning, and by her wisdom. It is explained, taught, confirmed, and wonderfully spread among all peoples and nations of the Catholic world. The Church hath received it from the Fathers, as a part of the original faith, attested strongly by the most ancient and venerable monuments of both the Eastern and Western Churches. Indeed, the Fathers and Ecclesiastical writers, learned in Holy Scripture, are marked by no more earnest feature than that in all their books and Scriptural Commentaries, written for the confirmation of doctrine, and the edification of the faithful, they do all in divers ways preach and teach the excelling holiness of this Virgin, her dignity, her freedom from any stain of sin, and the glory of her victory over the dark enemy of our race.

Fifth Responsory.

[1] No defiled thing can fall into her; she is the brightness of the everlasting light, and the unspotted mirror of the power of God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. For she is more beautiful than the sun, and being compared with the light, she is found before it.

Answer. She is the brightness of the everlasting light, and the unspotted mirror of the power of God. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Sixth Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

[The Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX. —continued.]

THE Catholic Church, which, through the perpetual teaching of the Holy Ghost, is the pillar and ground of the truth, (1 Tim. iii. 15,) hath always held the original innocence of this most exalted Virgin to be bound up with her wonderful holiness, and her mighty dignity of Mother of God. This doctrine she hath felt herself to hold by the gift of God, and as part of that faith once delivered from heaven unto the Saints, (Jude 3,) and as time hath gone on, she hath continually explained, put forth, and upheld it. This belief is found strong in the earliest times, and rooted as it were in the hearts of Christ's faithful people; by the care and study of holy Bishops it hath been taught in all parts of the Catholic world; and the Church herself pointed to it when she allowed the Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary to be held as a feast, for exciting the piety and devotion of her children. In the case of the Saints the Church celebrateth only the day of their being made perfect at death, [but of her Divine Lord, of His Blessed Mother, and of St John the Baptist she venerated the birth also, as of those sanctified in the womb.] When [therefore] she [goeth further and] maketh the case of the Blessed Virgin an exception to all others besides that of Christ, keeping holiday in honour of her conception [as well as of her birth,] it is manifest that she regardeth that Conception as altogether singular, wonderful, and different to all other conceptions, except only Christ's, namely, as holy.

(From the First Sunday in Lent till Trinity Sunday.)

MOREOVER, Our said Predecessors with great joy ordained that the Feast of the said Conception should be observed as of the same rank as that of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, and appointed that it should be kept with an Octave throughout the whole Church. They added this Feast to those which are commanded to be kept with solemnity, and ordered that the ceremony called a "Papal Chapel" should take place every year on this Feast in our Patriarchal Basilica of our Lady of the Snows. And above all did they rejoice in the hope of strengthening this belief in the minds of the faithful, and stirring them up to love and venerate the Virgin conceived without sin, when they granted permission to add to the Litany of Loreto the invocation, "Queen conceived without original sin," and to insert the word "stainless" into the Preface of the Mass on this Feast, that so the law of prayer might become the law of belief.

(From Trinity Sunday till the First Sunday of September.)

IT hath always been one of the most weighty cares of Our said Predecessors the Roman Pontiffs to protect the doctrine of the sinlessness of Mary's Conception from any sort of attack or corruption. Not only have they suffered no one to condemn and traduce it, but they have gone much further, and in public and repeated declarations have averred: That that doctrine which holdeth that the Virgin was conceived without sin is a doctrine, the arguments in support of which are strong enough to enable the profession thereof to be made at the time of public worship, which is antient, which is almost universal, which is one of those which the Church of Rome encourageth and protecteth, and which is worthy even to be expressed in the Holy Liturgy itself, and in the most solemn prayers of the Church. Our said Predecessors did not stop even here, but in order to preserve the doctrine of the Virgin's sinless Conception from any injury, they strictly forbade that the opposite opinion should be maintained either in public or in private, to the end that it might at length die out under their disapprobation.

[1] Wisd. vii. 25, 26, 29.

(From the First Sunday of September till Advent.)

[The Dogmatic Bull of Pope Pius IX. —continued.]

ALL Commentators on the Book of Genesis remark that passage where God at the very time of the Fall speaketh of the Atonement, to the confusion of the lying serpent, and the comfortable hope of man, and saith, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed," and all the ancients teach that by this passage is meant the most merciful Saviour of mankind, namely, our Lord Jesus Christ, the Only-begotten Son of God, and His most blessed Mother the Virgin Mary, as if the enmity which both He and she felt against the devil was, in a sense, of a kind common to them Both. Christ took our nature upon Him, and is become the Mediator between God and man, (1 Tim. ii. 5,) blotting out the handwriting that was against us, nailing it to His Cross, (Col. ii. 14,) and the most holy Virgin, by that subtle, close, and abiding tie which bindeth mother to Child, feeleth along with Him His truceless enmity to the serpent, and He, through His merits, hath granted to her that moment of victory wherein her stainless foot bruised the serpent's head.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] There appeared a great wonder in heaven: a Woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. [2] The Lord hath clothed her with the garments of salvation, and hath covered her with the robe of righteousness, yea, as a bride He hath adorned her with jewels.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And upon her head a crown of twelve stars. (P. T. Alleluia.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Holiness and beauty are in her Conception: * declare her glory among all people. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Second Antiphon. Rejoice ye all in the Lord: * and give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness.

Third Antiphon. The Lord hath made known His salvation: * the glory of His Mother hath He openly showed in the sight of the heathen.

Verse. [3] I will extol Thee, O Lord, for Thou hast lifted me up. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Answer. And hast not made my foes to rejoice over me. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Seventh Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Sophronius, Patriarch [of Jerusalem.][4] (On the Annunciation.)

When this blessed Angel was sent to the most pure virgin what did he say? In what words did he break the happy news of Redemption? "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee." [5][Now this word "Hail" is in the original "Chairé," which being interpreted signifieth "Rejoice."] The messenger of joy in his first word biddeth her rejoice. He knew well that his message was a message of good tidings of great joy to men, (Luke ii. 10,) yea, to all creatures,—a message of healing to all sicknesses. He knew well that his message was a message of God's light to a dark world. He knew well that it proclaimed the end of error. He knew well that it blunted the sting of death. He knew well that it broke the power of corruption. He knew well that it brought victory over hell. He knew well that it told of salvation to all the fallen children of Adam, groaning under that yoke of malediction which fell on them when they were thrust out of Eden, and banished from that happy home. Therefore, when he began to speak, he spoke in tones of rejoicing, and opened his message with sounds of gladness. Therefore made he the name of joy to herald the tidings of good, which were to be for a joy unto all people, whosoever should believe.

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on this text.)

Rejoice, father Adam, and yet more thou mother Eve, ye that are the source of all, and the ruin of all, and the unhappy cause of their ruin before ye gave them birth. Be comforted both in your daughter, and such a daughter; but chiefly thou, O woman, of whom the first evil came, and who hast cast thy slur upon all women. The time is come for the slur to be taken away, and for the man to have nothing to say against the woman. At the first, when he unwisely began to make excuse, he scrupled not to throw the blame upon her, saying, "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." Wherefore, O Eve, betake thyself to Mary: Mother, betake thyself to thy daughter: let the daughter answer for the mother: let her take away her mother's reproach: let her make up to her father for her mother's fault: for if man be fallen by means of woman, it is by means of woman that he is raised up again.

Homily by St Tarasius, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (On the Presentation of the Mother of God.)

O Mary, where shall I find words to praise thee? Maiden undefiled, virgin unstained, exaltation of women, glory of daughters! Holy Maiden Mother, blessed art thou among women, thy glory is in thy guilelessness, and thy name is a name of purity. In thee the curse of Adam is done away, and the debt of Eve paid. Thou art the clean offering of Abel, chosen out of the firstlings of the flock, a pure sacrifice. Thou art the hope of Enoch, that firm hope that he had in God, and was not ashamed. Thou art the grace that was in Enoch in this life, and his transit to a better. Thou art the Ark of Noah, and the band of reconciliation with God in a new regeneration. Thou art the exceeding glory of the kingdom and Priesthood of Melchisedech. Thou art the unshaken trust of Abraham, and his faith in the promise of children that were to be. Thou art the renewed oblation and the reasonable burnt-offering of Isaac. Thou art the ladder that Jacob saw going up to heaven, and the most noble of all his children throughout the twelve tribes of Israël. According to the flesh thou art the daughter of Judah. Thou art the modesty of Joseph, and the overthrow of the old Egypt, yea, and of the Synagogue of the Jews. O purest! Thou art the book of Moses the Lawgiver, whereon a new covenant is written with the finger of God, for the new Israël, fleeing from the spiritual Egypt, even as the old law was written upon Sinai, for the old Israël, that Israël which was fed in the wilderness upon manna and water from the rock, whereof both were types of Christ, which was yet to come from thy womb, as a bridegroom from his chamber. Thou art Aaron's rod that budded. Thou art David's daughter, all glorious within, clothed in a vesture of gold, wrought about with divers colours.

Homily by St Sophronius, Patriarch [of Jerusalem.] (On the Annunciation.)

Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou hast turned the curse of Eve into a blessing; thou hast even brought a blessing upon Adam, when he lay smitten by the first sentence of death. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou art the mean whereby the Father's blessing hath come upon man, and delivered him from the old curse. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for by thee thy fathers have found salvation; the salutation of the Angel telleth thee that thou art about to bear them a Deliverer. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou, not knowing a man, conceivest a Son through Whom the whole earth shall be blessed, and bring forth thorns and thistles no more. Blessed indeed art thou among women, for thou remainest thyself no more than a woman, and yet art made Mother of God. If That holy Thing Which shall be born of thee be truly God made Man, then art thou truly Mother of God, for God is made thine Offspring.

Seventh Responsory.

[1] A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse, a garden enclosed, a fountain sealed. O Mary, thy perfumes are a garden of delights. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled.

Answer. O Mary, thy perfumes are a garden of delights. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Eighth Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

[The Homily by St Sophronius, on the Annunciation—continued.]

AND, of a truth, it was fitting that God's proclamation of joy should open with the accents of gladness. And this is the reason why the angel nameth joy first, because he knew the coming fruits of his message, and that his converse with the Virgin was to bring joy to the whole world. Can we find any joy or any brightness like the joy and the brightness of that salutation addressed to the Blessed Mother of gladness? Rejoice, O mother of joy more than heavenly! Rejoice, O thou that nourishest joy in the highest! Rejoice, O Lady, full of the joy of salvation! Rejoice, O thou that bringest a joy that passeth not away! Rejoice, O mysterious treasury dispensing unspeakable joy! Rejoice, O most blessed fountain overflowing with unfailing joy! Rejoice, O storehouse of God, filled with the everlasting joy of eternity! Rejoice, O fair tree, bearing fruit of life-giving joy! Rejoice, O Maiden Mother of

[The Second Homily by St Bernard, on Luke i. 26—continued.]

WHAT didst thou say, O Adam? "The woman whom Thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." These are wrathful words, by the which thou dost rather magnify than diminish thine offence. Nevertheless, Wisdom hath defeated thy malice. God asked thee that He might find in thee an occasion of pardon, but, in that He found it not, He hath sought and found it in the Treasure of His Own mercy. One woman answereth for another; the wise for the foolish; the lowly for the proud; for her that gave thee of the tree of death, another that giveth thee to taste of the tree of life; for her that brought thee the bitter food of sin, another that giveth thee of the sweet fruits of righteousness. Wherefore accuse the woman no more, but speak in thanksgiving, and say, "Lord, the woman whom Thou hast given me, she hath given me of the tree of life, and I have eaten; and it is in my mouth sweeter than honey, for thereby hast Thou quickened me." (Ps. cxviii. 103, 93.) Behold, it was for this that the angel Gabriel was sent to the Virgin, to the most worshipful of women, a woman more wonderful than all women, the restorer of them that went before, and the quickener of them that come after her.

(From Trinity Sunday till the First Sunday of September.)

[The Homily by St Tarasius, on the Presentation of the Mother of God—continued.]

THOU art the vision of the Prophets, and the fulfilment of those things which they foretold. Thou art the gate whereof Ezekiel spake, when he prophesied, and said, "This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the LORD, the God of Israël, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut" (xliv. 2.) Thou art the Rod of Jesse, whereof Isaiah spake, (xi. 1,) even that Rod whose Flower is Christ, and whose offshoots shall choke out all the seedlings of sin, and fill the earth with plants of grace. Thou art the Covenant foretold by Jeremiah when he said, (xxxi. 31), "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israël, and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers"—thereby signifying the coming of thy Son, and calling upon all nations to worship Him for their God, even to the uttermost parts of the earth. Thou art the great mountain spoken of by Daniel, the man greatly beloved, wherefrom is cut without man's hands the corner-stone, that is, Christ, which hath smitten in pieces the parti-coloured image of the old serpent. I honour thee as the unpolluted fountain, I proclaim that thou art full of grace, I praise thee as the clean and undefiled tabernacle of God. Verily, where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. As by a woman death entered into the world, by a woman came the power to rise again. The serpent gave us to eat deadly fruit, but that fall hath ended in the life-giving Bread of Immortality. Eve, our first mother, brought forth Cain the first murderer; thou, O Mary, hast brought forth Christ, the first-fruits of life and of the resurrection. Ear hath not heard the like. It hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive this new thing. Blessed be the unspeakable depths of the Wisdom of God.

(From the First Sunday of September till Advent.)

"FEAR not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God"—abiding grace. Thou hast found grace with God—exceeding grace. Thou hast found grace with God—all desirable grace. Thou hast found grace with God—greater grace than any other. Thou hast found grace with God—unfailing grace. Thou hast found grace with God—saving grace. Thou hast found grace with God—immoveable grace. Thou hast found grace with God—invincible grace. Thou hast found grace with God—everlasting grace. Before thee there have been others, many others, made wonderful in holiness, but to none hath it been given, as to thee, to be full of grace; to none hath it been given, as to thee, to attain to such divine riches; to none, as to thee, to be prevented by purifying grace; to none, as to thee, to shine from the day-spring with light from heaven; to none, as to thee, to be exalted above all things before created.

Eighth Responsory.

My soul doth magnify the Lord; for He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

Answer. For He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For He That is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name. (P. T. Alleluia.)

Ninth Lesson.

(From Advent Sunday till the First Sunday in Lent.)

[The Homily by St Sophronius, on the Annunciation—continued.]

WHO shall worthily set forth thy glory? Who shall make bold to say what thou art? Who will hold himself able to tell of all thy splendour? Thou art the exaltation of humanity; thou art made much higher than the Angels; thy brightness hath thrown the brightness of the Archangels into shadow; thou lookest down upon the lofty seats of the Thrones; thou makest the height of the Lordships to seem low; thy rank taketh precedence before the rank of the Principalities; compared with thee the Powers are weakness; thou art a Mighty one mightier than all the Mighty; thine earthly eyes see further than the contemplation of the Cherubim can reach; the Seraphim have six wings, but thy flight is nobler than their's; in a word, thou hast far excelled every other work of God; thou wast far purer than any other creature; and thou hast conceived the Creator of all creatures, carried Him in thy womb, and brought Him forth; thou hast been chosen, out of all that He has made, to be His mother.

[The Second Homily by St Bernard, on Luke i. 26—continued.]

WAS it not of this thy daughter, O Adam, that God spake when He said unto the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman?" And if thou wilt still doubt that He speaketh of Mary, hear what followeth: "She shall bruise thy head." Who won this conquest but Mary? She brought to nought the whole wiles of Satan, whether for the pollution of her body or the injury of her soul. Was it not of her that Solomon spake, where he saith, "Who shall find a virtuous woman?" (Prov. xxxi. 10.) The wise man knew the weaknesses of women, how frail they are in body, and how changeable in mind. But he had read that God had promised that the enemy, who had prevailed by means of a woman, was by a woman to be overthrown, and he believed. But he wondered greatly, and said, "Who shall find a virtuous woman?" that is to say: If our salvation, and the bringing back of that which is lost, and the final triumph over the enemy, is in the hand of a woman, it must needs be that a virtuous woman be found, meet to work in that matter.

[The Homily by St Tarasius, on the Presentation of the Mother of God —continued.]

AND now we, the people of God, a holy generation, an acceptable congregation, the nestlings of the dove of peace, children of grace, do with purified minds and unpolluted lips, praise God in the tongues of all nations in this joyful solemnity of the Virgin. This is a noble Feast wherein the Angels keep holiday and men do most fitly offer praise, even a feast wherein we echo with reverence and joy that salutation first spoken by Gabriel. Hail Mary! Hail, thou Paradise of God the Father, whence the knowledge of Him floweth in broad rivers to the ends of the earth! Hail, Dwelling-place of God the Son, whence He came forth clothed in flesh! Hail, mysterious Tabernacle of God the Holy Ghost! Hail, thou that art holier than the Cherubim! Hail, thou that art more glorious than the Seraphim! Hail, thou that art nobler than the heavens! Hail, thou that art brighter than the sun! Hail, thou that art fairer than the moon! Hail, manifold splendour of the stars! Hail, light cloud, dropping the dew of heaven! Hail, holy breeze, clearing the air of the vapours of sin! Hail, royal theme of the Prophets! Hail, sound of the Apostles gone out into all the earth! Hail, most excellent confession of the Martyrs! Hail, just hope of the Patriarchs! Hail, peculiar honour of all the Saints! Hail, source of health to dying creatures! Hail, O Queen, ambassadress of peace! Hail, stainless crown of motherhood! Hail, advocate of all under heaven! Hail, restoration of the whole world! Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee, even the Lord that is before thee, and from thee, and that is with us. To Him, with the Father, and the most holy and Life-giving Spirit, be ascribed all praise, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

AND justly; for none hath ever drawn so near to God as thou hast; none hath ever been gifted by God with good gifts as thou hast; none hath ever received of God's grace as thou hast. Thou art mightier than all things which are called mighty among men; thou hast received more than the goodness of God hath conferred on any other. It is indeed because God made His home in thee that thou thus aboundest. There hath never been any save thee that hath comprehended the Incomprehensible; none save thee that hath enjoyed His presence so much; none that He hath made so ready therefor; none on whom the uncreated light hath shone so clearly; and therefore none who hath, like thee, sheltered the Lord God, the Maker and Lord of all, conceived Him in thy womb, and brought Him into the world, to redeem men lying under the Father's sentence, and to offer to them everlasting salvation. Wherefore, O Lady, I have already cried unto thee with the Angel, and I will still cry—"Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee! Blessed art thou among women!"

The Blessed Edmund Campion, and the Priests, his Companions, Martyrs of the Society of Jesus.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who hast honoured Thy blessed servants Edmund, and Thy Priests, his Companions, with a likeness to Thine own sufferings by betrayal and a death of shame, grant unto us for their sakes, and at their prayers, the grace steadfastly to bear Thy Cross, and to attain unto a crown of everlasting glory. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

EDMUND CAMPION was born in London, studied arts at the University of Oxford, and afterwards divinity at the English College at Doway, and lastly joined the Society of Jesus at Rome. He was sent back to his native country by command of the Supreme Pontiff Gregory XIII., along with Robert Persons, of the same Society, and there, by the example of his life, the power of his teaching, and the skill of his acts, turned all men's minds on him: those of the Catholics, that they might hear him and preserve him, and those of his enemies, that they might destroy him. He fought the Catholic fight not by his voice only, but by his writings also; and while his famous pamphlet, entitled Ten Reasons, was being printed at Stonor, he preached the Word of God in the country round about. After he had laboured for one year in the Lord's vineyard in England, he was taken, along with the blessed Thomas Ford and many others, in the house of a Catholic named Edward Yates, at Lyford, in the present diocese of Portsmouth; they having all been betrayed by a most wicked wretch who had that day been present when the blessed Edmund said Mass and preached. On his way to London he passed a night at Abingdon, the birthplace of Holy Edmund Rich, once Archbishop of Canterbury, and many came from the University of Oxford, not many miles distant, and treated him with great reverence, all chained and guarded as he was.

Fifth Lesson.

THOMAS FORD was a native of Devonshire, and the companion of the blessed Edmund Campion, both at the University of Oxford and at the English college at Doway. He had finished more than five years' ministry, with no small profit to souls in England, during the very height of the persecution, when he was arrested at Lyford, along with the same blessed father, and taken to London. While they lay together concealed in the hiding-hole of the house at Lyford, before they were revealed by the traitor, they confessed to one another, and each laid upon the other the same penance, that is to say, to call thrice upon St John the Baptist, and to repeat thrice the words of the Lord, Thy will be done. During their journey, the blessed William Filby, who had come to see them, was united to them at Henley for chains and death. To make a mark of them, their feet were fastened together under their horses' bellies, and their hands tied behind their backs. Upon Edmund's head was fastened a placard as upon the head of a traitor, the which insult he bore patiently, after the example of the Lord. Thus were they brought, amidst the insults of the people, to the Tower of London, where they were most grievously entreated.

Sixth Lesson.

INTO the same prison there were cast also other priests, so that after they had passed some months under punishment, while they were interrogated concerning the authority of the Roman Pontiff, the places where they had said Mass, and the persons whom they had reconciled to the Church, the blessed martyrs were placed at the bar to the number of ten, and were unjustly condemned to death for treason, ostensibly for having conspired against the Queen, but in reality because they were Catholic priests. These ten were all condemned to death together in the month of November 1581, but they did not all suffer together. Edmund Campion and two of his companions received the crown of a glorious death upon the 1st day of December, and Thomas Ford and two others upon the 28th day of the month of May following, and the remaining four upon the 30th day of the same month. They were drawn to the place of execution upon an hurdle, and after they had hung for a little while, the rope was cut, and they were cast down in full life and feeling upon the ground, where their hearts and other inner parts were torn out, and their heads and limbs cut off, to be afterwards set up above the gates of the city. Nor was even this all, since they were wronged even in their fame by the false accusation of treason, whereas these most innocent martyrs had done nothing but refused to deny their faith in the Vicar of Christ upon earth. Gregory XIII. first sanctioned the honours paid to them, and Leo XIII. hath confirmed the same.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn. Hail, thou Star of Ocean, (p. 633.)

Verse. This is the house of God stoutly builded.

Answer. Well founded upon a sure rock.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [1] The Most High hath hallowed His tabernacle; for this is the house of God, whereon His Name shall be called, whereof it is written: My Name shall be there, saith the Lord.

A Commemoration is made of the Week-day and of St Melchiades, (p. 684,) but not of the Immaculate Conception.

At Compline the last verse of the Hymn is altered in honour of the Incarnation.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Saviour of the world was conceived by the Holy Ghost in the house of the Virgin. * O come let us worship Him.

Hymn. Blessed City, Heavenly Salem, (p. 654.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Thou hast set Thy glory above the heavens.[2]

Second Antiphon. In the sun hath He set His tabernacle, and He Himself is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber.[3]

Third Antiphon. Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in His holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart.[4]

Verse. [5] This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Answer. And it shall be called the court of the Lord.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the 3rd Book of Kings (viii. 22.)

AND Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israël, and spread forth his hand towards heaven, and he said: But will God indeed dwell on the earth? for if the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee, how much less this house that I have builded! Yet have Thou respect unto the prayer of Thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God! Hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which Thy servant prayeth before Thee to-day, that Thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the house of which Thou hast said, My Name shall be there; that Thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which Thy servant maketh unto Thee in this place; that Thou mayest hearken to the supplication of Thy servant and of Thy people Israël whensoever they shall pray in this place. Then hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling-place, and when Thou hearest, forgive.

First Responsory.

I saw her when, fair like a dove, she winged her flight above the rivers of waters. The priceless savour of her perfumes hung heavy in her garments. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.[6]

Verse. Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness like a pillar of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense?[7]

Answer. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Second Lesson.

WHEN Thy people Israël shall flee before their enemies because they have sinned against Thee, and shall repent and confess Thy Name, and come and pray and make supplication unto Thee in this house; then hear Thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of Thy people Israël, and bring them again unto the land which Thou gavest unto their fathers. If heaven be shut up, and there be no rain because they have sinned against Thee, if they pray in this place, and repent and confess Thy Name, and turn from their sins because of their affliction; then hear Thou in heaven, and forgive the sins of Thy servants, and of Thy people Israël, and teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon Thy land which Thou hast given to Thy people for an inheritance.

Second Responsory.

Who is this that cometh up like the rising dawn, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array?

Verse. All beautiful and lovely art thou, O daughter of Sion, fair as the moon, clear as the sun.

Answer. Terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array.

Third Lesson.

IF a man shall know the plague of his own heart, and shall spread forth his hands in this house, then hear Thou in heaven Thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, as Thou seest his heart, (for Thou, even Thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men,) that they may fear Thee all the days that they live in the land which Thou gavest unto our fathers. Moreover, concerning a stranger that is of Thy people Israël, but cometh out of a far country for Thy Name's sake, (for they shall hear everywhere of Thy great Name, and of Thy strong hand, and of Thy stretched-out arm,) when he therefore shall come and shall pray in this place, hear Thou in heaven the place of Thy dwelling, and do according to all for the which the stranger calleth to Thee, that all people of the earth may learn to fear Thy Name as do Thy people Israël, and that they may know that this house is called by Thy Name.

Third Responsory.

Who is this that cometh up like the sun, this comely as Jerusalem? The daughters of Sion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. And about her it was as the flower of roses in the spring of the year, and lilies of the valleys.

Answer. The daughters of Sion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The daughters of Sion saw her, and called her blessed; the queens also, and they praised her.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever: yea, for ever and ever.

Second Antiphon. The Most High hath hallowed His tabernacle.

Third Antiphon. That man was born in her, and the Highest Himself hath established her.

Verse. Lord, I have loved the beauty of Thine house.

Answer. And the place where Thine honour dwelleth.[1]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (Sermons on divers subjects, lii.)

WHEN That Wisdom which was of God, and which was God, came unto us from the bosom of the Father, He builded Himself an house, even His mother the Virgin Mary, and therein He hewed out seven pillars.[2] And what is signified by His hewing out in her seven pillars, but that He made her ready to be by faith and works a meet dwelling-place for Himself? Of the component elements of the number seven, the number three relateth to faith, because it is the number of the Holy Trinity, and the number four to good works, because it is the number of the cardinal virtues. In the blessed Mary, God the Son alone was present by the taking of manhood unto God, but that the Holy Trinity was present in her, was present, I say, by His Majesty, is attested by the messenger from heaven, who, when he revealed the hidden mystery unto her, said: "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee"; and anon, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee." Behold, here thou hast the Lord, thou hast the power of the Highest, thou hast the Holy Ghost. Thou hast God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost.

Fourth Responsory.

How dreadful is this place! Surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Verse. This is the house of God stoutly builded, well founded upon a sure rock.

Answer. Surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Fifth Lesson.

IT is right, then, to see whether she possessed also the four cardinal virtues as the four remaining pillars. Let us then first see whether she possessed fortitude; but how could this virtue be lacking to one who cast away the pomps of the world, and despised the pleasures of the flesh with the resolution to live in virginity for God alone? Unless I am widely mistaken, this virgin was the woman of whom Solomon said (Prov. xxxi. 10): Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above the rarest merchandise. That she was temperate and just is clearer than light from the communing of the angel with her, and her answers unto him, for when the angel so reverently saluted her, saying, "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee," she was not lifted up like one who should be blessed for so singular a privilege of grace, but was silent and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be; and in this was she not temperate? And when the angel gave her further to wit of the mysteries from heaven, she diligently asked of him how she should conceive and bring forth, seeing that she knew not a man; and herein she was undoubtedly prudent.

Fifth Responsory.

The Lord's house is established in the top of the mountains, and exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it, and shall say: Glory be to Thee, O Lord.

Verse. They shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them.

Answer. And all nations shall flow unto it, and shall say: Glory be to Thee, O Lord.

---

[1] Ps. xxv. 8.

[2] Cf. Prov. ix. 1.

Sixth Lesson.

OF justice she gave an eminent proof when she confessed herself to be the handmaid of the Lord. And what the confession of the just is, is attested by him who said, "Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto Thy Name" (Ps. cxxxix. 14.) The blessed Virgin Mary then showed fortitude in her intention, temperance in her silence, prudence in her questioning, and justice in her confession. These, then, were the four pillars of works which, when added to the three pillars of faith whereof we have spoken, formed the seven pillars which the heavenly Wisdom hewed out in her when He builded her as His house, even that heavenly wisdom which so filled her mind, that from the fullness of her mind her body became fruitful. (Thus far St Bernard.) [1] The very home of the Virgin, hallowed by the mysteries of God, was carried by the ministry of angels, in the time of holy Celestine V., out of the dominions of the unbelievers, first into Dalmatia, and then into the country of Loreto, in the province of Picenum; and that it is the very same house wherein the Word was made Flesh and dwelt among us, is attested, not only by Papal documents, and by the famous veneration of the whole world, but also by an unceasing number of wondrous works of power, and by the grant of gifts from heaven. By these things Innocent XII. was moved in order to stir up the memory of the faithful to a more fervent honouring of the most loving of mothers, to command that the translation of her holy house, held by an annual festival throughout all the province of Picenum, should be kept with a special Mass and office.

Sixth Responsory.

Mine house shall be called the house of prayer, saith the Lord. Therein he that asketh receiveth, he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

Verse. Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find.

Answer. And to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Bring sacrifices and come into His courts; O worship the Lord in His holy temple.

Second Antiphon. All the people saw His glory.

Third Antiphon. O sing unto the Lord a new song, for the Lord hath done marvellous things. Alleluia.

Verse. Holiness becometh Thine house.

Answer. For ever, O Lord.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (1*st on Luke* i. 26.)

Who is this virgin, so worshipful as to be saluted by an angel, and so lowly as to be espoused to a carpenter? Lovely is this mingling of virginity and lowliness, neither doth that so little please God, wherein the lowliness exalteth the virginity, and the virginity adorneth the lowliness. But of what worship is she worthy, whose lowliness is ennobled by motherhood, and whose motherhood halloweth her virginity? Dost thou hear that she is a virgin? dost thou hear that she is lowly? Virginity is praiseworthy, but lowliness is more needful. Virginity is advised, lowliness is commanded.

Seventh Responsory.

Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Verse. Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia out of the ivory palaces, whereby kings' daughters among thine honourable women have made thee glad.

Answer. Therefore God hath blessed thee for ever.

Eighth Lesson. (2*nd on the same.*)

"THE Angel Gabriel was sent from God . . . to a virgin"—a virgin in body, a virgin in mind, a virgin in profession, a virgin such as she of whom the Apostle saith (1 Cor. vii. 34) that she "careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit." A virgin not found newly nor perchance, but chosen from everlasting, foreknown by the Most High, and made ready for Himself, guarded by angels, prefigured by patriarchs, foretold by prophets, or to say it in short, she whom God Himself would seem to have foretold (Gen. iii. 15) when He said unto the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman"; and if thou yet doubtest whether He spake of Mary, hearken to what followeth, "She shall bruise thy head." For whom was this victory reserved but for Mary?

Eighth Responsory.

O Virgin Mary, Mother of God, blessed art thou that didst believe the Lord, for there hath been a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord. Behold thou art exalted over choirs of angels, plead for us with the Lord our God.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee.

Answer. Plead for us with the Lord our God.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Plead for us with the Lord our God.

Ninth Lesson. (3*rd on the same.*)

"AND the Angel came in unto her, and said: Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee." Whither came he in unto her? I conjecture that he came into the sanctuary of her modest bedchamber, where perchance she, when she had shut her door, was praying to her Father Who is in secret. (Matth. vi. 6.) It is the use of angels to stand beside them that pray, and to delight in them whom they see lifting up pure hands in prayer: they rejoice to offer up unto God for a sweet savour the burnt-offering of holy earnestness, and how well-pleasing in the sight of the Most High were the prayers of Mary is shown by the action of the Angel who came in unto her and so reverently saluted her.

[1] Natalis domus; but this must be understood of a place of family residence, since a plenary indulgence is granted to the Church of St Anne at Jerusalem, on the special ground that it stands on the site of the house of Joachim, where the blessed Virgin was conceived and born.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Holiness becometh Thine house, O Lord, for ever.

Second Antiphon. Thine house shall be called the house of prayer; therein he that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

Third Antiphon. Because of the house of the Lord our God I will seek Thy good.

Fourth Antiphon. O Lord God, Thou hast lifted up my dwelling from the earth.[1]

Fifth Antiphon. I will glorify the house of my glory, and I will make the place of my feet glorious.[2]

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 11.)

IN all these I sought rest, and I will abide in the inheritance of the Lord. So the Creator of all things gave me a commandment, and said, (and He that made me rested in my tabernacle), [and He said, Dwell thou in Jacob, and inherit in Israël, and strike thy roots amid my chosen people.]

Hymn. Christ is made the sure foundation, &c., (p. 657.)

Verse. We will go into His tabernacle.

Answer. We will worship in His footprints.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. [3] Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people; and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God.

Prayer.

O GOD, Who in Thy mercy didst hallow the house of the Blessed Virgin Mary by the incarnation of Thy Word, and hast wondrously given unto the same a resting-place in the midst of Thy Church, grant us the grace to be cut off from the tents of wickedness, and made worthy to dwell in Thine holy house. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Commemorations are made of the Week-day and of St Melchiades, but not of the Immaculate Conception, because this Office is reckoned as being of the Blessed Virgin.

PRIME.

Antiphon. Holiness becometh Thine house, &c., (First Antiphon at Lauds.)

In the Short Responsory. Thou that wast born of the Virgin Mary.

Chapter at the end. (Ecclus. xxiv. 19.)

IN the broad ways I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon and aromatic balm; I yielded a pleasant odour like the best myrrh.

TERCE.

Antiphon. Thine house shall be called the house of prayer, &c., (Second Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter from Lauds.

Short Responsory.

This is the house of God and the gate of heaven.

Answer. This is the house of God and the gate of heaven.

Verse. And it shall be called the court of the Lord.

Answer. And the gate of heaven.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. This is the house of God and the gate of heaven.

Verse. Lord, I have loved the beauty of Thine house.

Answer. And the place where Thine honour dwelleth.

SEXT.

Antiphon. Because of the house of the Lord, &c., (Third Antiphon at Lauds.)

Chapter. (Ecclus. xxiv. 15.)

AND so was I established in Sion, and likewise in the holy city was I given to rest; and in Jerusalem was my power, and I took root among the honourable people, even in the portion of my God as His own inheritance; and mine abiding was in the full assembly of the saints.

Short Responsory.

Lord, I have loved the beauty of Thine house.

Answer. Lord, I have loved the beauty of Thine house.

Verse. And the place where Thine honour dwelleth.

Answer. The beauty of Thine house.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Lord, I have loved the beauty of Thine house.

SECOND VESPERS.

As the First, except the following.

Verse. This is the Lord's house stoutly builded.
Answer. Well founded upon a sure rock.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. How dreadful is this place: surely this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Commemorations are made of St Damasus and of the Week-day, but not of the Immaculate Conception.

DECEMBER 13.

In the Diocese of Liverpool.

Octave of St Nicholas of Myra.

All from the Common Office, with Lessons of the First Nocturn from Scripture according to the Season.

Sunday within the Octave of the Epiphany.

The Finding of the Child Jesus in the Temple.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Last Psalm, cxvi., "O praise the Lord, &c.," (p. 105.)

Hymn.[1]

O JESUS, Teacher of all hearts,
Thou fillest all with sweetest light
Who truly seek Thee, and who then
Find Thee with gladness and delight.

Bethink Thee of that joy supreme,
Which to Thy Virgin Mother's heart,
And to the heart of her dear Spouse,
Thou didst so lovingly impart.

No tongue of ours can ever tell,
Our minds to know are all too weak,
What grief doth pierce their loving hearts,
The while their only Son they seek.

O Son, by Thy dear parents lost,
How dost Thou make their joys abound,
When, sitting in the Temple, Thou
Art with the Doctors teaching found.

If, to us wanderers on earth,
Error hath caused calamity,
Make us to seek Thee as we ought,
And to rejoice in finding Thee.

Who art revealed to anxious ones,
O JESUS, glory be to Thee,
With Father and with Holy Ghost,
Ever throughout Eternity. Amen.

The Hymns at all the Hours end in this manner.

Verse. [2] Behold I have given Him for a witness to the peoples.
Answer. A leader and commander to the nations.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem, and His parents knew not of it, supposing Him to have been in the company, and they sought Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

Commemoration of the Sunday.

Antiphon. Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing. How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business.

Verse. The Kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents.
Answer. The Kings of Arabia and Saba shall offer gifts.

Prayer.

LORD, we beseech Thee, mercifully to receive the prayers of Thy people which call upon Thee: and grant that they may both perceive and know what things they ought to do, and also may have grace and power faithfully to fulfil the same.

Then is made a Commemoration of the Epiphany. The Antiphon is that proper to that particular day within the Octave.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Child JESUS sat in the temple in the midst of the doctors. * O come let us worship Him.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. O God, Thou hast set Thy glory above the heavens, Who out of the mouth of Thy Son hast ordained praise.

Psalm viii. "O Lord our Ruler, &c.," (p. 4.)

Second Antiphon. The words of the Lord are righteous altogether, sweeter also than honey, and the honeycomb.

Psalm xviii. "The heavens declare, &c.," (p. 10.)

Third Antiphon. [3] Grace is poured into the lips of the Child JESUS, therefore all they that heard Him were astonished and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth.

Psalm xxiii. "The earth is the Lord's, &c., (p. 26.)

Verse. Behold I have given Him for a witness to the people.
Answer. A leader and a commander to the nations.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the book of Exodus (xxiii. 14.)

THE Lord spake unto Moses, saying: Three times shall ye keep a Feast unto Me in the year. Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread. Thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month of the green ears,[4] when thou camest out from Egypt: thou shalt not appear before me empty. And the feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labours whatsoever thou hast sown in the field. And the feast of the outgoing of the year, when thou hast gathered in all thy fruits out of the field. Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord Thy God.

First Responsory.

JESUS' parents went every year at the Feast of the Passover, to fulfil the commandment which the Lord had commanded in the law of Moses.

---

[1] Translation by Archbishop Bagshawe (Breviary Hymns, No. 54).

[2] Is. lv. 4.

[3] A compound of Ps. xliv. 3, Luke ii. 47, and iv. 22.

[4] Novorum, a translation of the Hebrew Abib, the name given to the month, because the corn is just formed in the ear.

Verse. [1] Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord Thy God, in the place which He shall choose.
Answer. To fulfil the commandment which the Lord had commanded in the law of Moses.

Second Lesson. (xxxiv. 18.)

THE feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month of green ears, for in the month of the spring-time thou camest out from Egypt, (22,) and thou shalt observe the feast of weeks of the first-fruits of wheat harvest, and the feast when the time of year cometh round for the in-gathering of all things. Thrice in the year shall all your men-children appear before the Lord Almighty, the God of Israël.

Second Responsory.

The Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem, and His parents knew not of it, but they, supposing Him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

Verse. I will rise now, and go about the city; in the streets and in the broad ways I will seek Him whom my soul loveth.
Answer. And they sought Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.[2]

Third Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Deuteronomy (xvi. 16.)

AT the same time the Lord spake unto Moses [saying]: Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God in the place which He shall choose: In the feast of unleavened bread, in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles. They shall not appear before the Lord empty; but every man shall give as he is able according to the blessing of the Lord his God which He hath given him.

Third Responsory.

And when JESUS' parents found Him not, they returned back again to Jerusalem seeking Him.

Verse. [3] Whither is my beloved gone, that we may seek Him with thee?
Answer. They turned back to Jerusalem seeking Him.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Seeking Him.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. They saw, and so they marvelled at the understanding and answers of the Child JESUS.

Ps. xlvii. Great is the LORD, &c., (p. 55.)

Second Antiphon. The God of gods, even the LORD, hath spoken, and all they that heard Him were astonished at His answers.

Ps. xlix. The God of gods, &c., (p. 56.)

Third Antiphon. Blessed for ever be the Name of the LORD unto whom God His Father hath given judgment and righteousness.

Ps. lxxi. Give the king, &c., (p. 72.)

Verse. And all they that heard Him were astonished.
Answer. At His understanding and answers.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St "Buona-ventura," [Cardinal] Bishop [of Albano.] (First on the Sunday within the Octave of the Epiphany.)

WHAT is greatly loved is not lost without great grief; when therefore the Blessed Virgin lost the bodily presence of that tenderly loved and only Son, whom she loved above all things, a manifold grief struck her to the heart. Scarcely did she give sleep to her eyes or rest unto her feet until she found Him in the temple at Jerusalem, sitting in the midst of the doctors. When she saw His gracious countenance, she rejoiced with great joy and gladness unspeakable, and albeit she spake little, as becometh a virgin, yet did she utter modestly a word of great prudence and of great wisdom, saying: "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us." Then doth she set forth the bitterness of the great trouble that had been in her heart, and the carefulness of that wise search which they had made, when she saith further: "Behold Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing." Herein doth the Blessed Virgin, albeit most wise, claim to have given a thought to the Heart of God Himself, speech to His mouth, and action to His Body. In her first words we note the sweetness of her kindly address to Him, where she calleth Him Son. Right was it that the good Son JESUS should be gently addressed. For even as every good Son is the joy and gladness of his mother, so was JESUS the joy and gladness of His virgin mother.

Fourth Responsory.

After three days JESUS' parents found Him in the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors.

Verse. [4] I found Him whom my soul loveth; I held Him and would not let Him go.
Answer. In the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors.

Fifth Lesson.

"THY father and I have sought Thee sorrowing." Here do we note the bitterness of the deep trouble that had been at her heart. Surely, O Glorious Virgin, I marvel not that thine heart was troubled, that thou didst feel bitterness and grief. I should indeed have marvelled if thou hadst not sorrowed when thou hadst lost the bodily presence of that, thy well-beloved Son, that presence which filled thy soul with so many comforts. Her Son was to the Glorious Virgin in this world the cause of many sorrows, many trials, and many afflictions. We may now say that her sorrow was threefold. She sorrowed first for the loss of the presence of her Son. She suffered again when she beheld the sufferings of the Lord. She suffered once more in sharing His grief over the blindness of the Jews.

---

[1] Deut. xvi. 16.

[2] Cant. iii. 2.

[3] Cant. vi. 1.

[4] Cant. iii. 4.

Fifth Responsory.

They found JESUS in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

Verse. [1] When the ear heard him, then it blest him; and when the eye saw him, it gave witness to him.

Answer. Both hearing them, and asking them questions.

Sixth Lesson.

THY father and I have sought Thee. Thus doth she set forth the carefulness of her wise search, for although the Blessed Virgin had not lost Him through carelessness, she was careful in seeking Him. According to the commentators it was the custom of the Jews in processions, and upon journeys, when they went up to the Temple, and while they were there, that men and women should be separated; children were not subject to this rule, but sometimes went with their fathers and sometimes with their mothers. Hence the mother Mary thought that the Child JESUS was with Joseph along with the men, and Joseph thought that He was with Mary along with the women. For this custom had been introduced for respectability's sake, and for a safeguard of chastity. Hence it is manifest that she was not to blame for losing Him from carelessness, but she was very careful and diligent in seeking Him from the uprightness of her conscience, from the broadness of her love, and from the surety of her confidence.

Sixth Responsory.

All they that heard Him were astonished at His understanding and answers, and when they saw Him they were amazed.

Verse. [2] The voice of the Lord is powerful; the voice of the Lord is full of majesty.

Answer. And when they saw Him they were amazed.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And when they saw Him they were amazed.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When the doctors in the Temple heard the wisdom that came forth out of the mouth of JESUS they were confounded; they knew not, neither did they understand, and they walked on in darkness.

Ps. lxxxi. God standeth, &c., (p. 80.)

Second Antiphon. The Lord hath made known His salvation; His righteousness hath He openly shown in the sight of the heathen, by means of His Son.

Ps. xcvii. O sing unto the LORD, &c., (p. 89.)

Third Antiphon. The Lord reigneth in the midst of His Temple. Let the people praise His great and terrible Name, for it is holy.

Ps. xcviii. The LORD reigneth, &c., (p. 89.)

Verse. JESUS increased in wisdom and stature.

Answer. And in favour with God and man.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ii. 42.)

WHEN JESUS was twelve years old they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the Feast, and when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. ii. on Luke ii.)

We read that when He was twelve years old the Lord began to dispute. The number of His years was the same as the number of the Apostles whom He afterwards sent forth to preach the Faith. He Who, as touching His Manhood, was filled with wisdom and grace from God, was not careless of the parents of the same Manhood, and, after three days, was pleased to be found in the Temple: thereby foreshadowing that, after the three days of His victorious Passion, He That had been reckoned with the dead, would present Himself, living, to our faith, in His heavenly Kingship and Divine Majesty.

Seventh Responsory.

His mother said unto JESUS, Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Verse. [3] O my Son, the Light of our eyes, the Comfort of our life.

Answer. Behold Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Eighth Lesson.

"HOW is it that ye sought Me?" Christ hath two Generations; one from His Father, another from His mother. That from His Father is His Eternal Generation as God and Son; that from His mother is that whereby He came to work for us and minister to us. Those acts, therefore, of His, which are above nature, beyond His age, and different to His custom, proceedeth not from the strength of His Manhood, but from the power of His Godhead. On another occasion His mother moveth Him to work a miracle; here He answereth her, because she treateth that which was of the Godhead, as though it had been of the Manhood.

Eighth Responsory.

JESUS said unto His parents: How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Verse. [4] Serve the Lord in truth, and seek to do that which pleaseth Him.

Answer. Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Ninth Lesson.[5]

ON this occasion it is said that He was twelve years old, but on the other He had already disciples.

---

[1] Job xxix. 11.

[2] Ps. xxviii. 4.

[3] Tobit x. 4.

[4] Tobit xiv. 10.

[5] Observe that the Ninth Lesson is not of the Sunday but of the Feast, because the Gospel of the Feast and of the Sunday are the same.

His mother had seen His wonders on the earlier occasion, and had learnt from her Son to call on the mightier nature for a work of power.[1] "And He came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them." No wonder that the great Teacher should practise. And shall we marvel how He Who was subject to His mother, was about His Father's business? His subjection to His mother proceeded, not from weakness, but from dutiful affection.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God, &c.," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. JESUS' parents went to Jerusalem every year at the Feast of the Passover.

Second Antiphon. And as they returned, the Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem; and His parents knew not of it.

Third Antiphon. And when they found not JESUS, they returned back again to Jerusalem, seeking Him. And after three days they found Him in the Temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

Fourth Antiphon. And His mother saith unto Him, Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Fifth Antiphon. And JESUS went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Chapter. (Is. lv. 1.)

HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money, make haste, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without purse.

Hymn.[2]

JESUS, of wisdom the rich Fount,
  By which Thou guidest hearts aright,
And dost the proud disciple judge,
  And teachest with celestial light.

We sing a hymn of praise, that Thou,
  Coming Thy Father's work to do,
Midst Doctors sittest as a Child,
  Yet teachest in the Temple too.

O admirable kind of school!
  While JESUS doth the Doctors teach,
Hearing and humbly questioning,
  They wonder at His prudent speech.

O Master, mercifully grant,
  That no weak man to teach may dare,
Unless from Heaven Thou dost first
  With wondrous light his heart prepare.

Then doth all error flee away,
  Then shall the Spouse, with footsteps sure,
And all her servants, follow Thee,
  Along the royal road secure.

Then, from the true believers' land,
  All treacherous teachers shall they drive,
And, on the true and only Faith,
  In health our souls shall live and thrive.

Who art revealed to anxious ones,
  O JESUS, glory be to Thee,
With Father and with Holy Ghost,
  Ever throughout Eternity. Amen.

Verse. [3] Ye children of Zion rejoice in the Lord your God.

Answer. For He hath given you a teacher of righteousness.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing. How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who wast pleased that the lowly childhood of Thy Son should be glorified by wisdom from heaven, grant unto us to be so filled with the spirit of wisdom that we may walk before Thee in lowliness unfeigned. Through the Same our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

The following Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

Antiphon. The Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem, and His parents knew not of it, supposing Him to have been in the company, and they sought Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

Verse. Worship God. Alleluia.

Answer. All ye His Angels. Alleluia.

Prayer as at First Vespers, then of the Octave of the Epiphany.

Antiphon. This day is the Church joined unto the Heavenly Bridegroom, since Christ hath washed away her sins in Jordan; the wise men hasten with gifts to the marriage supper of the King; and they that sit at meat together make merry with water turned into wine. Alleluia.

Verse. All they from Saba shall come. Alleluia.

Answer. They shall bring gold and incense. Alleluia.

PRIME.

Answer. For he hath given you a teacher of righteousness. Alleluia.

SECOND VESPERS.

All as the First, except the following:

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. The Child JESUS increased in wisdom and stature before God and man.

A Commemoration of the Sunday is made; then of the Octave.

Antiphon. This day we keep as holiday in honour of Three Wonders. This day a star led the three wise men to the manger; this day at the marriage, water was made wine; this day was Christ, for our salvation, pleased to be baptised of John in Jordan. Alleluia.
Verse. All they from Saba shall come. Alleluia.
Answer. They shall bring gold and incense. Alleluia.

Third Sunday after the Epiphany.

The Holy Home. Jesus, Mary, and Joseph.

Greater Double.

FIRST VESPERS.

Psalms as in the Feasts of the Blessed Virgin.

First Antiphon. And Jacob[1] begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born JESUS, Who is called the Christ.
Second Antiphon. The Angel[2] of the Lord appeared to Joseph in sleep, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for That Which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.
Third Antiphon. And the shepherds came with haste; and they found Mary, and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger.[3]
Fourth Antiphon. When the wise men were come into the house, they found the young Child, with Mary His mother.[4]
Fifth Antiphon. His father and mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him.[5]

Chapter. (Luke ii. 51.)

AND JESUS went down with Mary and Joseph, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Hymn.

O HIGHEST Hope of mortals,
Blest Light of saints above,
O JESUS, on Whose boyhood
Home smiled with kindly love;

O thou whose bosom nursed Him,
O Mary, highly graced,
Whose breast gave milk to JESUS,
Whose arms thy God embraced;

And thou of all men chosen
To guard the Virgin's fame,
To whom God's Son refused not
A father's gracious name;

Born for the nation's healing,
Of Jesse's lineage high,
Behold the suppliants kneeling,
O hear the sinner's cry.

The sun, returned to evening,
Dusks all the twilight air;
We, lingering here before you,
Pour out our heartfelt prayer.

Your home was as a garden,
Made glad with fairest flowers;
May life thus blossom sweetly
In every home of ours.

JESUS, to Thee be glory,
The Maiden-Mother's Son,
With Father and with Spirit,
While endless ages run.

Verse. The Word was made Flesh. Alleluia.
Answer. And dwelt among us. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Blessed are they that dwell in Thine house, O Lord; they shall be ever praising Thee.[6]

Prayer.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who, when Thou wast subject to Mary and to Joseph, didst sanctify the life of home with virtues which cannot be uttered, grant that we, by the assistance of both, may be instructed by the example of this Holy Home, and admitted to a share in its everlasting blessedness. A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

Antiphon. God hath holpen His servant Israël, as He spake unto Abraham, and to his seed, to exalt them of low degree for ever and ever.

Verse. Let the evening prayer ascend unto Thee, O Lord.
Answer. And let there descend upon us Thy mercy.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, mercifully look upon our infirmities, and in all our dangers and necessities stretch forth the right hand of Thy Majesty, to help and defend us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Compline and other Hours, at the end of the Hymn, is said:

JESUS, to Thee be glory,
The Maiden-Mother's Son, &c.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Christ the Son of God, obedient to Mary and Joseph, * O come, let us worship.

Ps. xciv., (p. 2.)

Hymn.

BRIGHTLY gleam the sacred temples,
Where a thousand torches shine,
Garlanded about the altars,
Lo! the fairest blossoms twine.
Smoking censers send their perfume
To the throne of Love Divine.

Shall we praise the Sole-Begotten's
Royal ancestry with song?
Shall we tell His glory, chanting
All the honoured names that throng
David's line, and their achievements
All the storied ages long?

Rather let us now be mindful
Of the lowly village cot,
Of the Galilean hillside
Where He chose the poor man's lot.
Rather let our hymns remember
How He lived, by men forgot.
Home, from Nile's far distant margin,
Lo! He travels, angel-led,
Hastening, a little pilgrim,
Many pains gone o'er His Head,
And delivered out of danger,
Shares His foster-father's bread.

Joseph trains Him, Joseph teaches
All his lore of humble skill;
JESUS grows from boy to manhood—
Hidden years, secluded, still—
Helping Joseph in his labour,
Prenticed by His eager will.

"Let the sweat of toil bedew Me,"
Thus He saith, "against the day
When a sweat of blood shall trickle,
Dyeing earth with ruddy spray:
Thus for humankind's transgressions
Fullest penalty to pay."

Near her gracious Boy the Mother
Sits and looks with loving eye;
Sits the wife beside her husband,
Glad to know that he is nigh,
Happy if she may console them
As the hours of work go by.

JESUS, Mary, Joseph, help us,
Ye who bore our toilsome days;
Ye who bore with pain and hardship,
Hear the wretchedness that prays;
Aid us whom our need drives forward,
Struggling on by thorny ways;

Take from us the pride of living,
If the light of fortune shine,
Teach us in whatever chances
Not to vaunt and not repine.
While we beg for your protection,
Look on us with eyes benign.

Thine be glory, thine be power,
JESUS, while the ages run,
Thou Whose life is our instruction,
Till the tasks of earth are done,
Reigning with the Sovran Father,
And the Spirit, Three in One.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When His parents brought in the Child JESUS, then Simeon took Him up in his arms, and blessed God.[1]

Second Antiphon. When they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.[2]

Third Antiphon. And the Child grew, and waxed strong [in spirit,] filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon Him.[3]

Verse. Though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor.
Answer. That we through His poverty might become rich.[4]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Colossians (iii. 12-16.)

PUT on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercy, kindness, humbleness, meekness, long-suffering: forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as the Lord hath forgiven you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness; and let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

First Responsory.

Afterwards did He show Himself upon earth and conversed with men.[5]
Verse. He hath found out all the way of knowledge, and hath given it unto Jacob His servant.[6]
Answer. And conversed with men.

Second Lesson.[7]

WHATSOEVER ye do in word or deed, do all in the Name of the Lord JESUS Christ, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him. Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord. Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

Second Responsory.

Blessed are they that dwell in Thine house, O Lord.[8]

[1] Luke ii. 27, 28.
[2] Luke ii. 39.
[3] Luke ii. 40.
[4] 2 Cor. viii. 9.
[5] Baruch iii. 38.
[6] Baruch iii. 37.
[7] Col. iii. 17-21.
[8] Ps. lxxxiii. 5.

Verse. They will be ever praising Thee.

Answer. In Thine house, O Lord.

Third Lesson.[1]

SERVANTS, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not with eye-service, as men-pleasers, but in singleness of heart, fearing God. Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men, knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. Serve the Lord Christ. For he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons with God. (iv. 1.) Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal, knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven. Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving.

Third Responsory.

In all things it behoved Him to be made like unto His brethren, that He might be merciful.[2]

Verse. Though He was the Son of God, yet learned He obedience by the things which He suffered.[3]

Answer. That He might be merciful.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. That He might be merciful.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When Joseph arose, he took the young Child and His mother by night, and departed into Egypt.[4]

Second Antiphon. The Angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in Egypt, in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and go into the land of Israel.[5]

Third Antiphon. And he came and dwelt at Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.[6]

Verse. The Lord will teach us His ways.

Answer. And we will walk in His paths.[7]

Fourth Lesson.

Sermon by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (An Exposition of Psalms xxxvi. and xli.)

BE ye subject unto the Lord and entreat Him. Christ, by doing the will of the Father, fulfilled the law; and therefore He is the fulfilment of the law, and the fulness of mercy. For, seeing that He loved the Father, He gave all His affection to the fulfilling of His will. And then He was subject to His parents Joseph and Mary on account of His duty to them, not of His necessity. Therefore He took upon Him to suffer along with us. For, in that He made all things subject unto Him, He did that which belonged unto Himself; but, in that He was subject, He did that which belongeth unto us. The soul, He saith, is subject, not the divinity; the soul is subject, not the power of God. In His soul, therefore, He was obedient, in His soul lowly; these things, then, He took upon Him, not to the laying aside of His power, but to teach us His doctrine.

Fourth Responsory.

But I am poor and needy. The Lord thinketh upon me.[8]

Verse. [9] For thou shalt eat of the labour of thine hands. Happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee.

Answer. The Lord thinketh upon me.

Fifth Lesson.

AS a man, therefore, He learned obedience by the things which He suffered, that He might be made perfect in the flesh; and that by bequeathing to us His obedience, He might become the Author of eternal salvation to us, to whom the first Adam by the legacy of his disobedience had before been the source of death. His subjection is a lesson in human virtue, not a diminution of the Divine power. For will those who declare that the Son is less than the Father, and unequal to Him because He is subject to Him as God, declare also that He is less than His mother, because He was subject to His mother? For we read of Joseph and Mary: And He was subject to them. The truth is that such dutifulness[10] brings no loss to any one of us, but rather gain; for through it the Lord JESUS has poured faith and grace into us all, that He may make us also, in the spirit of faith, subject to God the Father.

Fifth Responsory.

[11] The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head.

Verse. I am poor, and in toil from my youth up.[12]

Answer. But the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head.

Sixth Lesson. (Ps. lxv.)

LASTLY, if we consider the matter, humility had been lost in the Garden of Eden, and therefore came from heaven. In the Garden of Eden arose disobedience. Obedience came down on that account with the Saviour. The flesh was puffed up so that the subjection of meekness could not be found on earth. The Lord JESUS came and first emptied Himself, though He thought it not robbery to be equal with God, and taking upon Himself the form of a servant, was found in the likeness of a man, and humbled Himself, becoming obedient unto death. Let Him, therefore, say: I am a youth and despised; because Christ as a poor man and despised redeemed the world; because Christ by His humility overthrew the devil.

Sixth Responsory.

[13] Who, being in the form of God, emptied Himself, and took the form of a servant.

[10] Pietas.

[11] Matth. viii. 20.

[12] Ps. lxxxvii. 16.

[13] Phil. ii. 6, 7.

Verse. [1] He humbled Himself, and became obedient even unto death.

Answer. And took the form of a servant.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And took the form of a servant.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [2] The parents of JESUS went up every year to Jerusalem to the feast of the Passover.

Second Antiphon. [3] As they returned, the Child JESUS tarried behind at Jerusalem; and His parents knew not of it.

Third Antiphon. [4] And when they found not JESUS, they returned into Jerusalem, seeking Him.

Verse. [5] I am poor, and in toil from my youth up.

Answer. And when I was lifted up, then was I brought down and troubled.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ii. 42, 43.)

AND when JESUS was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast. And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the Child JESUS tarried behind in Jerusalem; and His parents knew not of it. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (From the 1st Homily on the words, "The Angel was sent.")

And He was subject to them. Who was subject? and to whom? God to men; God, I repeat, to Whom the angels are subject, Whom principalities and powers obey, was subject to Mary; and not only to Mary, but to Joseph also for Mary's sake. Marvel, therefore, both at God and man, and choose that which gives greater wonder, whether it be the most loving condescension of the Son, or the exceeding great dignity of His parents. Both amaze us, both are marvellous. That God should obey man is lowliness without parallel, that man should rule over God, an elevation beyond comparison. In praise of virgins it is sung of them alone, that they follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. Of what praise do you judge that man worthy who goeth before Him?

Seventh Responsory.

[6] Verily Thou art a King that hidest Thyself, O God of Israel, the Saviour.

Verse. Thou teachest man knowledge.

Answer. God of Israel, the Saviour.

Benediction.

God's most mighty strength alway
Be His people's staff and stay.

Answer. Amen.

Eighth Lesson.

LEARN, O man, to obey; learn, O earth, to be subject; learn, O dust, to submit. The Evangelist, speaking of thy Creator, says: "And He was subject to them." Doubtless to Mary and Joseph. Shame on you, the proud ashes! God abaseth Himself, and dost thou exalt thyself? God subjects Himself to men, and dost thou, eager to lord it over men, set thyself over thy Creator? For as often soever as I desire pre-eminency over men, so often do I strive to excel God. For of Him it was said: And He was subject to them. If thou disdainest, O man, to follow the example of man, at least thou canst follow thy Creator without dishonour. If thou canst not, perchance, follow Him whithersoever He goeth, deign at least to follow Him in that to which He hath lowered Himself for the sake of thee.

Eighth Responsory.

As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.[7]

Verse. He came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Answer. So by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. So by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

If the Feast be transferred, the following is read:

Ninth Lesson.

IF thou canst not enter upon the lofty path of virginity, at least follow God by the most safe road of humility. If any turn aside from this straight way, though they be virgins, they do not follow the Lamb, if the truth be told, whithersoever He goeth. The humble man, though stained with sin, followeth the Lamb; the virgin, though proud, followeth; but neither followeth whithersoever He goeth. The former cannot attain to the purity of the Lamb, for He is without spot; the latter deigns not to descend to His meekness, Who was dumb, not before the shearer, but before the murderer. Yet the sinner who followeth in humility hath chosen a more saving way than the proud man who followeth in virginity, for the humble man maketh satisfaction, and is cleansed of his impurity, but the proud man's chastity is stained by his pride.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, &c.," (p. 12,) is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [8] After three days they found JESUS in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions.

Second Antiphon. [9] And the mother of JESUS said unto Him, Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing.

Third Antiphon. [10] JESUS went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Fourth Antiphon. [11] And JESUS increased in wisdom and age, and in favour with God and man.

Fifth Antiphon. [12] And they said, Whence hath this Man this wisdom, and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's Son?

Chapter. (Luke ii. 51.)

AND JESUS came down with Mary and Joseph, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Hymn.

O HAPPY guest of alien race,
O Nazareth's august abode,
The infant Church's dwelling-place
Before she sought the world's highroad.

The sun, who with his golden light
Travels the lands that lie below,
Has never seen a fairer sight,
Nor holier home has earth to show.

Hither the angels oft resort
To honour virtue's sacred fane,
Glad nuncios of the heavenly court,
Again returning and again.

With what glad hand and eager heart
The Child performs the father's will;
How blithely Mary plays her part,
A mother's duty to fulfil.

Joseph is there with love no less
To halve the burdens of his wife,
And grace that gives all holiness,
With thousand links binds life to life.

Like streams that join, their love outflows
To gulf itself in JESUS' sea,
And JESUS on the twain bestows
The guerdon of their charity.

So may we fare; may love unite
Our hearts in one throughout the years,
To soothe our homes with calm delight,
And mingle sweetness in life's tears.

JESUS, for ever unto Thee,
The Maiden-Mother's loving Son,
With Father and with Spirit, be
All glory while the ages run.

Verse. [1] I will cause all thy children to be taught of the Lord.
Answer. And great shall be the peace of thy children.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Let the example of Thine household shine upon us, O Lord, and do Thou guide our feet into the way of peace.

Prayer as at First Vespers.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

Antiphon. When JESUS was come down from the mountain, behold, there came a leper, and worshipped Him, saying, Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean. And JESUS put forth His hand, and touched him, saying: I will; be thou clean.

Verse. The Lord reigneth. He is clothed with majesty.
Answer. The Lord is clothed with strength, and hath girded Himself with power.

Prayer as at First Vespers.

PRIME.

In the Short Responsory, instead of the Verse, "Thou That sittest, &c.," is said:

Verse. Thou That wast born of the Virgin Mary.

TERCE.

Chapter.

AND JESUS went down with Mary and Joseph, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.

Short Responsory.

For our sakes He became poor, though He was rich.
Answer. For our sakes He became poor, though He was rich.
Verse. That through His poverty we might become rich.
Answer. Though He was rich.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. For our sakes He became poor, though He was rich.
Verse. [2] The Lord will teach us His ways.
Answer. And we will walk in His paths.

SEXT.

Chapter. (Romans v. 19.)

AS by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

Short Responsory.

The Lord will teach us His ways.
Answer. The Lord will teach us His ways.
Verse. And we will walk in His paths.
Answer. His ways.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. The Lord will teach us His ways.
Verse. I am poor and in toil from my youth up.
Answer. And when I was lifted up, then was I brought down and troubled.

NONE.

Chapter. (Philip. ii. 7.)

HE emptied Himself, and took the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man, and found in fashion of a man.

Short Responsory.

I am poor, and in toil from my youth up.
Answer. I am poor, and in toil from my youth up.
Verse. And when I was lifted up, there was I brought down and troubled.
Answer. From my youth up.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. I am poor, and in toil from my youth up.
Verse. I will cause all thy children to be taught of the Lord.
Answer. And great shall be the peace of thy children.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon as at Lauds.
Psalms as at Feasts of the Blessed Virgin.
Chapter and Hymn as at First Vespers.
Verse and Answer as at Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. But Mary kept all those sayings in her heart.

Then is made a Commemoration of the Sunday.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean. And JESUS said, I will; be thou clean.
Verse. [3] Let my prayer, O Lord, be set forth
Answer. As incense before Thee.

Prayer as before.

Friday after Sexagesima Sunday.

Office in Memory of the Sufferings of our Lord JESUS Christ.

(See ante pp. 245 and 1214, foot-notes.)

Translation by the Rev. E. Caswall of the hymn Mœrentes oculi, &c., (Hymns and Poems, p. 35):—

NOW let us sit and weep,
And fill our hearts with woe;
Pondering the shame, and torments deep,
Which God from wicked men did undergo.

See! how the multitude,
With swords and staves, draw nigh;
See! how they smite with buffets rude
That Head divine of awful majesty:

How, bound with cruel cord,
Christ to the scourge is given;
And ruffians lift their hands, unaw'd
Against the King of kings and Lord of Heaven.

Hear it! ye people, hear!
Our good and gracious God,
Silent beneath the lash severe,
Stands with His sacred Shoulders drench'd in Blood.

O scene for tears! but now
The sinful race contrive
A torment new; deep in His Brow,
With all their force the jagged thorns they drive.

Then roughly dragged to death,
Christ on the Cross is slain;
And, as He dies, with parting Breath,
Into His Father's Hands gives back His Soul again.

To Him who so much bore,
To gain for sinners grace,
Be praise and glory evermore
From the whole universal race.

Translation by the Rev. E. Caswall of the hymn Aspice, infami, &c., (Hymns and Poems, p. 36):—

SEE! where in shame the God of glory hangs,
All bathed in His own Blood:
See! how the nails pierce with a thousand pangs
Those Hands so good.

Th' All Holy, as a minister of ill,
Betwixt two thieves they place;
Oh, deed unjust! yet such the cruel will
Of Israel's race.

Pale grows His Face, and fixed His languid Eye;
His wearied Head He bends;
And rich in merits, forth with one loud cry
His Spirit sends.

Oh heart more hard than iron! not to weep
At this; thy sin it was
That wrought His death; of all these torments deep
Thou art the cause.

Praise, honour, glory be through endless time
To th' everlasting God;
Who washed away our deadly sins of crime
In His own Blood.

FEBRUARY 9.

The Twenty-Six Holy Martyrs who suffered in Japan.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O LORD JESUS Christ, Who didst dedicate the first-fruits of the faith among the people of Japan in the blood of Thine holy martyrs Peter Baptist, Paul, and their companions, so that they were conformed to Thy likeness through the death of the cross, grant that we, who this day keep their festival, may be stirred up by their ensample. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

First Vespers are of St John de la Mata till the Chapter exclusive, then of the Martyrs, with Commemorations, first of the Second Vespers of St John de la Mata, and then of St Apollonia. Antiphon, Verse and Answer from the Common Office for a Virgin and Martyr, and Prayer, "O God, Who amidst the wondrous, &c.," (p. 645.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. In Lent from Rom. viii., (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE empire of Japan, on the easternmost side of Asia, had lain for long in darkness and in the shadow of death, when upon it the light of Catholic truth shone in the sixteenth century of man's redemption. Holy Francis Xavier, the great apostle of the Indies, there preached Christ crucified, and founded so illustrious a church that the times of the first Apostles seemed there again to have appeared upon earth. Neither did this same church lack martyrs to dedicate in their blood the first-fruits of its faith. Towards the close of the aforesaid century, Taicosama, Emperor of Japan, several times threatened to invade the Philippine Islands, and His Most Catholic Majesty the King of Spain deemed well to send some religious men of his own nation into Japan to treat of peace with Taicosama on his royal behalf. For this purpose he made choice of the Friar Peter Baptist, a Priest of the Barefooted Order of Friars Minor of St Francis of the Stricter Observance, and a man eminent for his holiness and teaching, and with him he sent some companions of the same Order. These men were authorised by the Apostolic See to spread the Catholic faith in the Indies and in China, and they undertook their mission from the King of Spain with the intention of making it an occasion to preach the Gospel among those people. They came to Japan, and when they had happily performed the mission wherewith they were charged, they called other companions to their aid, and set themselves to work for the increase of religion.

Fifth Lesson.

FOR three years they toiled by preaching, fasting, watching, and praying. They founded many Christian hospitals, convents, and churches in divers places. They relieved the sufferings of the poor and sick with wondrous love, confirmed many of the faithful in the path of salvation, and led countless numbers to the faith. These things stirred up the priests of the false gods, and they betook themselves to the Emperor, and persuaded him that the safety of his empire demanded that he should expel from its coasts the Christian religion, which was springing up on all sides. The Emperor was stricken with this groundless fear, and forthwith commanded the Friars to be arrested, and sentenced them to the cross. Besides Peter Baptist and his five companions, there were arrested Paul Miki and two other Japanese members of the Society of Jesus, and fifteen Japanese members of the Third Order of St Francis, of whom some ministered in catechising and others in holy offices. To whom were added two more that ministered to them in their chains, so that there were twenty-six in all.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER long suffering, the extreme point of the left ears of these brave soldiers of Christ was cut off in a public square at Meaco. After this they were carried in carts with their hands tied behind their backs, first through the streets of that capital city, and then through those of other cities, in order that their shame might be spread abroad as widely as possible to the terror of others. They were thus borne at mid-winter over some six hundred miles, with a crier going before them, and bearing the sentence of their condemnation to the cross for having preached the law of Christ which the Emperor had forbidden. It is meet to be recorded that during their journey the parents of the young Japanese Anthony, one of the members of the Third Order, met him and strove by tenderness and tears to get him to break his truth with Christ. Them he constantly withstood, and declared that he despised all earthly and transitory things, and would cleave only to Christ, Who had promised him things heavenly and eternal, and he gave to them his garment wherewith he was clothed. At length they came to Nangasaki, where crosses had been made ready at a hill as though upon another Calvary. To these they were fastened and then lifted up. They ceased not to proclaim the faith of Christ, and like the chiefest of them was Paul Miki, who from the glorious pulpit of the cross preached the Christian religion to the multitude that stood around, and openly bade himself rejoice that he was dying upon the cross even as the Lord Christ died at the same age as he. At last two lances were thrust through the body of each of them from beneath the ribs on the one side to the shoulder upon the other side, and thus they gave up their triumphant spirits to heaven. It pleased God to glorify the victory of his champions by signs and wonders, and when these had been duly proved, the Congregation of Sacred Rites decreed that it might at any time proceed with their canonisation. Meanwhile the Supreme Pontiff Urban VIII., on receiving this decree, gave leave to say and celebrate every year an office and mass of these martyrs as among the blessed. At length the Providence of God brought it to pass that the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX. carried out the matter, and upon the holy day of Pentecost, in the year 1862, when he was surrounded by a great and illustrious mass of Cardinals and Bishops, who had come together from all parts of the Catholic world to protect the rights of the Church and of the Apostolic See, he enrolled the names of these martyrs among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke vi. 17, with the homily of St Ambrose, (p. 609.) The last is omitted to make room for the Ninth Lesson, which is that for St Apollonia, (p. 746.) She is also commemorated at Lauds.

Vespers are of St Scholastica from the Chapter inclusive, but with a Commemoration of the Holy Martyrs.

FEBRUARY 13.

St Kentigern, Bishop [of Glasgow,] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst use Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Kentigern as a mean whereby to make the light of the true faith to shine before barbarous nations, grant, we beseech Thee, that we by faithfully following that which he preached and taught may in the end obtain unto that light of eternal glory where he now liveth.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xliv. 1, (p. 620.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

KENTIGERN, whom the Scots on account of the innocency of his life and the sweetness of his ways called Munghum,[1] which is being interpreted dearly beloved, was sprung of the royal stock of the Picts in North Britain. While he was still a lad, he was given over to the monastery of Culross, under the teaching of the holy Bishop and Abbat Serf, and made wondrous headway in the study not only of letters, but also of the things of God and the science of the saints.[2] Hence he withdrew into a solitary place at Glasgow in Scotland,[3] where he led an hard life in constant prayer, and meditation upon the things of heaven, until the faithful of those parts, moved by the fame of his holiness, duly chose him for their bishop.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he had been raised to the dignity of shepherd, he forthwith shed around the bright rays of apostolic grace, like a candle set upon a candlestick. By his words and his example he so shaped the flock committed unto him that many of them were so kindled with the love of Jesus Christ as to keep nothing of their own, but to serve God with one heart and one mind like the first disciples of the Apostles. Kentigern himself relaxed nothing of his first way of life. It was his use every day, besides other works of godliness and penance, to repeat the whole psalter; and every year, after the example of Christ, he passed in the desert the whole time of the fast of forty days, cut off altogether from the conversation of men.

---

[1] It is difficult to guess who can have compiled these Lessons. The quaint word Munghum is evidently meant to represent Mynghu, popularly corrupted into Mungo, and which signifies "my dear": the ngh being the c of the Welsh cu undergoing the nasal mutation after my, in modern Welsh vy. He was not a Pict, but a Briton.

[2] The boat containing Kentigern and his mother was washed ashore at Culross very soon after his birth. The Serf in question was not an Abbat, and it is very improbable that he was a Bishop. The monastery was not founded for hundreds of years afterwards.

[3] It is difficult to understand what is meant by the solitary place, since he seems to have been attracted to Glasgow by the fact that there was there already a burying-ground which had been consecrated by Ninian. The word Scotland at that time would have meant Ireland, and it was not until a good many centuries later that it would have been held to include Strathclyde.

Sixth Lesson.

GOD confirmed his preaching with many and great miracles, and thus this holy bishop, mighty in word and in work, preserved his flock unhurt from the Pelagian heresy which crept all round about. And in his vast diocese, wherethrough he travelled many times on foot, he almost abolished the worship of false gods, and brought a countless multitude of heathen into the Church of Christ.[1] With this, nevertheless, he was not content, but sent meet churchmen to preach the gospel in the northern parts of Scotland, in the Orkneys, in Norway, and in Iceland. He lacked not the merit of suffering hardship for Christ's sake. He was driven into exile by a wicked tyrant, and betook himself to Wales, where he dwelt for a while with holy Bishop David, and then founded at the confluence of the Elwy and the Clwyd a famous monastery, where he trained up holy Asaph as his disciple. There was a story that once upon a time, when holy Colum, the Abbat of Iona, saw Kentigern, he said unto his monk, I see a pillar of fire coming down upon this holy bishop like a golden crown, and the light of the glory of heaven shining upon him. He went to our fatherland, which is in heaven, full of days and beloved of God and men, at the beginning of the seventh century. His body was buried in the Cathedral church of Glasgow, where it was held in great honour until the times when the fury of the Calvinistic heresy exterminated Catholic belief from Scotland.[2]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A man, travelling into a far country, called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. iv. on Matth. xxv.)

By this man travelling into a far country and first calling his servants and delivering unto them his goods, we can hardly doubt but that Christ is signified, who, after that He was risen again from the dead, ascended hence in triumph to the Father; but before doing so, called together His Apostles, and committed to them the preaching of the Gospel, more to one and less to another, not arbitrarily, but to every man "according to his several ability," even as saith the Apostle (1 Cor. iii. 2): "I had fed you with milk and not with meat; for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able." And hence we find that at the end he that had received five talents, and had therewith gained five talents more; and he that had received two talents, and had gained two other talents beside them, each received the same reward, because consideration was had not to the amount of their gain, but to the amount of their earnest effort.

Eighth Lesson.

BY the five talents, the two talents, and the one talent, we may understand the different graces which are given to each: or, by the five talents, we may understand the five senses in full; by the two, understanding and work; and by the one, the gift of reason whereby men are separated from beasts. "Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents." By the use of his bodily senses he obtained a knowledge of heavenly things, by argument from creation he recognised the existence of a Creator, by bodily things he rose to the appreciation of things which are not bodily, by things seen to things unseen, by things fleeting to things eternal. "And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two." That which he had been taught in the law he made double through the Gospel, and understood that that intelligence and that work which have to deal with this present life are but shadows beforehand leading toward that blessed life which is to come.

Ninth Lesson.

THE time is very long between the Ascension of our Saviour and His coming again, but if the Apostles will be called upon to give an account of their stewardship, and will rise again with the fear of the judge before Him, what are we behoven to do? And be it remarked that whatsoever we have now, howsoever great, and however much it may seem to us, is nevertheless little and scanty in comparison with those things which are to come. "Enter thou, saith He, into the joy of Thy Lord," and receive those things which "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man [the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him]" (1 Cor. ii. 9.) For what more can be given unto the faithful servant than to be with his Lord, and to behold his Lord's joy?

In Lent the Ninth Lesson is of the Homily. In this case also a Commemoration is made of the Week-Day at Lauds, and at Second Vespers, and in any case at Vespers is made a Commemoration of St Valentine.

[1] This last sentence would appear to be an effort of pure imagination.

[2] No one would conclude from the above that the body of Kentigern remains absolutely undisturbed in Glasgow Cathedral to the present day, which is the case. The last amazing statement needs no remark.

FEBRUARY 14.

The Blessed Thomas Plumtree and his Companions, Martyrs.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O God, Who year by year, &c., (p. 608.)

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made in Lent of the Week-Day, and in any case of St Valentine.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Romans viii. 12, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THOMAS Plumtree was a Priest honourable for his life and teaching, who, during the short restoration of the Catholic religion in the city of Durham, often publicly offered up the holy Sacrifice of the Mass and preached to the people. When he was arrested by the Queen's officers he steadfastly refused to conform himself to the rites of the heretics, and as a warning to others he was hanged at Durham, and so gained the crown of a glorious martyrdom upon the 4th day of February in the year 1570. Twelve years later there suffered in London for the same Catholic faith, Luke Kirby, who is said to have been born within the Bishopric of Durham, and have been ordained Priest at the English College at Doway. After he was in the cart about to be hanged he was offered his life if he would renounce the Roman Pontiff and acknowledge the Queen to be the head of the English Church. Certainly, said he, I will not deny the authority of the Pope in order to save my life, for I should surely thereby gain the loss of my soul. The cart therefore was taken away from under him, and he resigned his holy soul into the hands of his Creator upon the 30th day of May.

Fifth Lesson.

UPON the 22nd day of August, in the same year, there suffered at York, Richard Kirkman. When he was asked by the judge if he had ever said Mass in England, he answered that he had done so in Northumberland, when sentence of death was pronounced upon him for being a Priest from the Seminary of Rheims and for having induced subjects of the Queen to embrace the Catholic religion. This lowly servant of Christ deemed himself unworthy of so lofty a call, and prayed the judge to reconsider the matter, since such a death was worthy of an holy martyr. Then he could no longer restrain the outbursts of the joy of his soul, and said with a loud and gladsome voice, "We Praise Thee, O God, we acknowledge Thee to be the Lord." He was taken to execution along with the blessed William Lacy, cheerfully mounted the ladder, and gave up his blessed spirit with his eyes raised heavenwards.

Sixth Lesson.

RICHARD Thirkill was born at Coniscliffe, in the county of Durham, and was already of ripe years when he was ordained Priest at Rheims. From often thinking how extraordinary a gift it was, that he should offer up unto God every day for his own salvation, and for the salvation of all the people, the Precious Blood of Christ, he early conceived the desire to offer his own blood for Christ in return. After four years he was arrested at York, and with great boldness he professed himself to be a Priest, and while he lay in prison he laboured to prepare for a godly death his fellow-prisoners who were under capital sentence for their crimes, and to exhort the Catholics to steadfastness. When he himself received the sentence of death he knelt down and cried out with great joy, "This is the day which the Lord hath made, let us rejoice and be glad in it." He suffered upon the 29th day of May in the year 1583. Pope Leo XIII. approved that the honours due to the blessed should be paid to these illustrious martyrs.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Luke xxi. 9, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 606.)

In Lent the Ninth Lesson is omitted, or read as one with the Eighth, and the Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-Day.

At Lauds a Commemoration is made in Lent of the Week-Day, and in any case of St Valentine; and at Second Vespers in Lent of the Week-Day, and in any case of SS. Faustinus and Jovita.

FEBRUARY 17.

The Flight of Our Lord Jesus Christ into Egypt.

Greater Double.

All as on Sundays, except the following.

Psalms are the same as in the Office of the Blessed Virgin. The last verse of the Hymns at all the little hours is altered in honour of the Incarnation, and the same alteration is made at the Short Responsory at Prime as in her Office.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn.[1]

THE mighty King of glory dread,
Promised from Abraham's line to spring,
The kings bear witness now has come;
That He is born, they tell the king.

The tyrant dooms the Child to death,
Tossed in his soul by passion's waves;
But, warned by Heaven, from the sword
Her Child the Virgin Mother saves.

To distant lands in Egypt's realms
She bears away her Child in haste,
Nor does she rest until she sees
Her Infant Son in safety placed.

Ah Mother! bravest of the brave,
Wounded at heart by love most pure,
Lightly all troubles thou dost bear,
And flight's discomforts dost endure.

---

[1] Translation by Archbishop Bagshawe (Breviary Hymns, No. 50).

To Thy poor servants gracious be,
And make their troubles Thy concern,
And those, whom sin has exiles made,
To their true country make return.

JESUS, to Thee be glory given,
Whom erst the Virgin Mother bore,
With Father and with Holy Ghost,
Through endless ages evermore. Amen.

Verse. Joseph arose and took the young Child and His mother by night.
Answer. And departed into Egypt.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Behold the Angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young Child to destroy Him.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. The Lord our Saviour JESUS Christ fled into Egypt. * O come let us worship Him.

Hymn as at First Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Joseph took the young Child and His mother by night, and departed into Egypt.
Second Antiphon. And was there until the death of Herod; [that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called My Son.]
Third Antiphon. The Lord was with Joseph in Egypt.

Verse. [1] Out of Egypt,
Answer. Have I called My Son.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Hosea (xi. 1.)

AS the morning passeth away, so hath the King of Israël passed away. For Israël was a child, and I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt. As they called them, so they went from them; they sacrificed unto Baalim, and burned incense unto graven images; and I was as a foster father unto Ephraim, I carried them in my arms, and they knew not that I healed them. I will draw them with cords of Adam, with bands of love, and I will be unto them as one that taketh off the yoke on their jaws; and I turned aside unto him that he might eat. He shall not return unto the land of Egypt, and the Assyrian shall be his king, because they refused to return. The sword hath begun on his cities, and shall consume his chosen ones, and devour the heads thereof, and my people shall linger until I return, and the yoke shall be laid upon them together, and shall not be lifted.

First Responsory. (Gen. xlvi. 3, 4.)

Thus saith the Lord: Go down into Egypt; I will go down thither with thee, and I will also bring thee up again.
Verse. Joseph arose and took the young Child and His mother by night.
Answer. And I will also bring thee up again.

Second Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet (Isaiah xix. 1.)

BEHOLD the Lord shall ride upon a swift cloud and shall come into Egypt; and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it, and I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians, and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour, city against city, kingdom against kingdom, and the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof, and I will destroy the council thereof, and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards, and Egypt will I give over into the hand of cruel lords, and the fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord God of Hosts.

Second Responsory.

Christ our King cometh,[2] and John hath testified of Him, that He is the Lamb that shall come.
Verse. [3] The kings shall shut their mouths at him, all nations shall serve him.
Answer. And John hath testified of Him, that He is the Lamb that shall come.

Third Lesson. (Isaiah xix. 19.)

IN that day there shall be an Altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof, to the Lord for a sign, and for a witness unto the Lord of Hosts in the land of Egypt. For they shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppressor, and He shall send them a Saviour, and a Great One, and He shall deliver them. And the Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day, and they shall do sacrifice and oblation; and they shall vow vows unto the Lord and perform them. And the Lord shall smite Egypt; He shall smite and heal it, and they shall return even to the Lord, and He shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them. In that day there shall be an highway out of Egypt to Assyria. And the Assyrians shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptians into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve Assyria. In that day shall Israël be the third with the Egyptians, and with the Assyrians, even a blessing in the midst of the land, whom the Lord of Hosts hath blest, saying, Blessed be Egypt, My people.

Third Responsory.

[4] Behold, I come from the south, even I the Lord your God to visit you in peace.
Verse. [5] I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, you shall be multiplied and I will establish My covenant with you.
Answer. To visit you in peace.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. To visit you in peace.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Herod when He saw that He was mocked by the wise men was very wroth.

---

[1] Exodus xxxix. 2.

[2] John i. 29.

[3] Is. lii. 5.

[4] Cf. Hab. iii. 3.

[5] Lev. xxvi. 9.

Second Antiphon. Herod sent forth and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof.

Third Antiphon. From two years old and under, many children did Herod slay for the Lord's sake.

Verse. In Rama was there a voice heard.

Answer. Lamentation and great mourning.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, Archbishop [of Constantinople.] (Eighth on Matthew.)

WHEREFORE was the young Child sent into Egypt. The Evangelist giveth the first reason: "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying: Out of Egypt have I called My Son." But it was also so done in order to proclaim to the whole world a message of good hope. The two places wherein glowed the fire of wickedness, more than in all the rest of the world, were Babylon and Egypt, and the Lord from His very birth declareth that He will heal these two countries and bring them to better things. And so showeth that there is no part of the world that may not look to Him for good. From the one He bringeth wise men to worship Him, and to the other He Himself goeth with His mother. From the wise men we learn well to give ourselves also to study, and from His flight into Egypt we learn that trials and dangers are to be looked for from the very beginning,—they befell Him even from His birth. No sooner was He born than the tyrant broke forth in fury, whence came flight and exile, and the harmless mother was fain to betake herself to the land of heathens.

Fourth Responsory.

Weep not, O Egypt, for thy King cometh unto thee, and the depths shall be moved at His presence, to set free His people out of the hand of the mighty.

Verse. Behold the Lord of Hosts, even thy God, cometh with great power.

Answer. To set free His people out of the hand of the mighty.

Fifth Lesson.

FROM this example thou mayest learn to bear cheerfully the constant trials which are one of the main things which befall spiritual-minded men. Bethink thee that trials befell not the mother of the Child only, but the wise men also. They were fain to depart into their own country another way. She who had never left her home was constrained to undertake a long and toilsome journey on account of her wondrous Child, and His mystic birth. Consider another marvel. In Palestine plots are made against Him, but in Egypt He is welcomed and held in safety from those plots. Types and figures were set forth not only in the sons of the Patriarch, but also in the Lord Himself. Those things which He did foreshadowed many things which were afterward to come, as was the case also in regard to the ass and her colt. The Angel which appeared spake not unto Mary, but unto Joseph, and what said he? "Arise and take the young Child and His mother"—he said not "Thy wife," but His mother, the birth having taken place. The trouble of Joseph was removed and his faith satisfied, and the Angel speaketh unto him not of his son, or of his wife, but of the young Child and of His mother, bidding him flee with them into Egypt, and he saith moreover why they should flee, "For Herod will seek the young Child to destroy Him."

Fifth Responsory.

The Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day.

Verse. They shall cry unto the Lord from the face of the oppressor, and He will send unto them a Saviour.

Answer. And the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day.

Sixth Lesson.

BY this is the Virgin herself set forth in no little glory and honour, for she could thus obtain what was held as a glory by all her people. They thought it a great thing and a proud thing that they had returned out of Egypt, whereat the Prophet doth point when he saith: Did I not bring strangers out of Cappadocia and Assyrians out of a pit? and thus is manifested the glory of the Virgin. Moreover, when the people and the Patriarch went down into Egypt and came up again, their action was a type of His return, for they went down thither to escape from the death which was threatening them through famine, and He went to escape the death which threatened Him from plots. They went and were delivered from the famine. He went that He might sanctify all that land by His presence. I would have thee bethink Thyself, how amid things lowly are manifested the things which pertain unto God. When the Angel said, "Flee into Egypt," he said not that he would be with them either in their going down or in their coming up, giving them to wit that He Who was with them, albeit a young Child, was that Great One at whose appearing all things should be changed.

Sixth Responsory.

Hail Mary, how holy and how spotless is thy virginity. I am too dull to praise thee! for thou hast borne into Egypt upon thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

Verse. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

Answer. For thou hast borne into Egypt upon thy breast Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For thou hast borne into Egypt Him Whom the heavens cannot contain.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. But when Herod was dead, behold an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt.

Second Antiphon. Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and go into the land of Israël.

Third Antiphon. They are dead which sought the young Child's life.

Verse. Joseph arose and took the young Child and His mother.

Answer. And came into the land of Israël.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (ii. 13.)

AT that time: The Angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word. And so on.

Homily by St Peter Chrysologus, Archbishop [of Ravenna.] (On the Flight of Christ into Egypt.)

What is this day read hath moved our hearts, made our bowels to tremble, and confounded our hearing. Behold the Angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, "Arise, and take the young Child with His mother and flee into Egypt." Virginity offereth no obstacle to His birth, reason resisteth Him not, nature gainsayeth Him not. What might then, what power, what danger should prevail to make Him flee? "Take the young Child and His mother and flee into Egypt." It had been more reverent if he had said, "Go into Egypt," so that it might have been a journey and not a flight. An act of free-will and not of compulsion; an act of wisdom and not of fear; an act at least of man if not of God; but now is there a command to flee—a command from heaven, a command brought by an Angel, so that it were as if heaven and not earth had been the first to fear.

Seventh Responsory.

The Virgin Mother that knew not a man, bore but travailed not, from the fountain of her breast the Virgin fed the Saviour blest, when He the Eternal King of Angels was driven into exile.

Verse. Soon riseth in that modest shrine the temple of the Lord divine; the stainless and unwedded one within her womb conceived the Son.
Answer. From the fountain of her breast the Virgin fed the Saviour blest, when He the Eternal King of Angels was driven into exile.

Eighth Lesson.

"TAKE the young Child and His mother and flee into Egypt." Flee into Egypt, flee from thine own home to the land of strangers, flee from the holy places into the midst of the wicked, flee from thy temple unto the shrines of devils, flee from the fatherland of the Saints into the country of idols. Judea is not wide enough, the Lord of the world is straightened for room, the Holy of Holies will not contain the Lord of the temple, neither can He find a place amid the multitude of his priests, nor a refuge among all the kinsfolk of Mary and of Joseph, but profane Egypt must be called in to afford God a hiding-place. Thus doth necessity press, and the Virgin may not consider her modesty, the mother her toil, the woman her shyness, Joseph his fears; they must not consider the weariness of the long journey and the break-up of their home.

Eighth Responsory.

[1] And now what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt? Turn again, O Virgin of Israel, turn again unto thine own cities.

Verse. How long wilt thou go about sorrowing?
Answer. Turn again, O Virgin of Israel, turn again unto thine own cities.
Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.
Answer. Turn again, O Virgin of Israel, turn again unto thine own cities.

In Lent the following Ninth Lesson is either omitted or read as one with the Eighth, in order to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day.

Ninth Lesson.

BRETHREN, the flight of Christ was not the effect of fear; it was a mystery; it was a declaration of the freedom of the Creator, not a confession that He was in danger. It was not the act of His weakness as man, but of His power as God. He fled in order to save the life of the world, not to save from death Him Who had made the world. He had come to die, and why then should He have fled from death? If Christ had allowed Himself to be slain as a little child, He would have slain the whole scheme of our salvation. Christ had come to instruct by His teaching, and to strengthen by His example; to do Himself those things which He commanded to be done, and to prove to the eyes the possibility of things which to the hearing seemed impossible. He had come to make it known to man that He was God, and to leave man in ignorance no longer; and all these things would have been lost to us had Christ not fled while yet He was in swaddling bands.

The Hymn, "We praise Thee, O God," is said.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Behold the Angel of the Lord * appeareth to Joseph in a dream.
Second Antiphon. Arise, and take the young Child * and His mother, and flee into Egypt.
Third Antiphon. Be thou there * until I bring thee word.
Fourth Antiphon. For Herod will seek the young Child * to destroy Him.
Fifth Antiphon. Joseph arose and took the young Child and His mother by night and departed into Egypt.

Chapter. (Is. xix. 1.)

BEHOLD the Lord shall ride upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt; and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at His presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

Hymn.[2]

TO the true Thunderer's Only Son,
Escaping from the treacherous sword,
Leaving the worship of thy gods,
Haste, Egypt, safety to afford.

Him Herod's cruelty compels,
An exile from His home to go,
But the hard flight of Christ avails
To us the Heavenward way to show.

O sweetest Virgin Mother, who
Didst through a thousand risks defend
Thy sweet Son JESUS, and didst reach
Successfully thy journey's end,

Verse. Cry out and shout, O Egypt.
Answer. [1] For great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of them.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. When Herod was dead, behold an Angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying: Arise, and take the young Child and His mother, and go into the land of Israel; for they are dead which sought the young Child's life.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, the Protector of all them which trust in Thee, Who by a flight into Egypt wast pleased to deliver from the sword of Herod Thine only-begotten Son our Redeemer, grant unto us Thy servants at the prayers of the most blessed Mary always a Virgin, and yet mother of the same Thy Son, that we may be delivered from all dangers whether of mind or of body, and may be made meet to be called home from this our exile unto our very fatherland which is in heaven. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season. (In Lent from Proverbs xxxi. 10, p. 649.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Margaret who, from the place where she fell asleep, is called Margaret of Cortona, was born at Alviano, in Tuscany. In her younger years she was led astray by the pleasures of the world, and led a vain and wanton life at Monte Pulciano, till she was led by a dog to discover the body of her paramour who had been foully murdered and buried in a hole under a pile of wood. Thenceforth the hand of the Lord was upon her, and being touched with great sorrow for her sins she went out and wept bitterly. She returned to Alviano, put off her hair, and left her head untired, clad herself in a grey garment, and bade farewell to her own misguided ways and to the enticements of the world. She lay upon the ground in the churches with an halter round her neck, and begged the pardon of all whom she had beforetime shocked by her life. Soon after this she went to Cortona, where she sought in sackcloth and ashes to please the majesty of God Whom she had offended. After a trial of three years she obtained from the Friars Minor, who were the directors of her spiritual life, an habit of the Third Order of St Francis. Henceforth she was oftentimes in an abundance of tears, and such groanings from the depths of her soul that for a long time she did not speak. She made her bed upon the bare ground and used a stock or stone for her pillow; thus she was accustomed to pass nights without sleep thinking of the things of heaven. She never again felt any evil desire, and a good spirit strengthened her weak flesh for toil.

---

[1] Cf. Is. xii. 6.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS valiant woman, when the devil assailed her by crafty and dangerous advances, once and again unmasked the enemy through his own words and remained unconquered. In order to escape the temptation to vain-glory wherewith the evil spirit assailed her, she continued to assure herself of her past life with a loud voice in the streets and broad ways, and to declare herself worthy of any punishment. It was only through the persuasion of her Confessor that she was prevented from marring the comeliness of her face which had once been the source of unclean love, and she took it to heart that the long hardships which she inflicted upon her flesh left her bodily beauty unchanged. By these and other great works of repentance she purged away the stain of her guilt, and so conquered herself as to keep all her senses untouched by the allurements of the world. Thus was she made worthy oftentimes to have converse with the Lord. Sometimes all her senses left her, and while she appeared as though she were actually dead, she realised her burning prayer to be with Christ and with the Virgin, the Mother of Sorrows. It came to pass that many resorted to her, even from distant places, as to a teacher of perfection, and she by that heavenly light which shone in her saw the secrets of hearts and the consciences of men, and perceived with woe and tears the sins of those who were offending God even in far-off places. From the intensity of her love for God and for her neighbour she was of great profit to souls. She obtained health for the sick who betook themselves to her, and deliverance for those that were possessed by evil spirits. Touched by a mother's grief she raised her dead son to life; by her constant prayers she averted the threatening tempests of war; and by works of far-stretching mercy she earned well both of the living and of the dead.

Sixth Lesson.

WHILE she was busied with so many holy works she laid aside none of the hardness wherewith she treated her body, neither did she suffer herself to relax her gaze upon things heavenly. In both kinds of life she was so wonderful that she seemed to be at once both a Mary and a Martha. At length she besought the Lord for herself that He would be pleased to call her home out of this vale of tears into our Fatherland above which is in heaven, and her prayer was heard, and it was revealed to her on what day and at what hour she should fall asleep. She was then full of good works and labours and heavenly gifts. Her bodily strength began to give way; for seventeen days she took no food, and strengthened herself only by talking with God. Then she duly received the holy sacraments of the church, and with gladsome face and eyes lifted up to heaven she happily passed away hence to be forever with the Bridegroom upon the 22nd day of February in the year of man's salvation 1297, of her own age the 50th, and of her conversion the 23rd. Her body remaineth until this day lifelike, incorrupt, uninjured, and diffusing sweet savour. It is preserved in deep reverence in the church of the Friars Minor which is called after her name. She hath constantly flourished by miracles which have moved the Bishop of Rome to grant many indulgences for the increase of her honour, and Pope Benedict XIII. held a solemn religious ceremony of her canonisation upon the feast of Pentecost, being the 16th day of May in the year 1728.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xiii. 44, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 651.)

In Lent the Ninth Lesson is of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARCH 22.

St Edward, King of England, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, the eternal King, look down in mercy upon Thy family who keep the memorial of Thy blessed martyr King Edward, and grant for his sake, and at his prayers, that we who rejoice at his victory may also gain a share in his reward.

Vespers are of St Benedict, with only a Commemoration of St Edward before that of the Week-day.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

The Lessons are taken from Rom. viii. 12, (p. 603,) with Responsories from the Common Office for One Martyr.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

WHEN Edward was raised to the throne, the Lord the King of kings guided him in the paths of righteousness and of truth, and with His help he excelled more and more from day to day in greatness of mind and perfect lowliness. By the excellence of his graces he raised again to all its first glory the honour which he had newly received. He was careful to turn his mind to follow the healthy counsels of Dunstan, Archbishop of Canterbury, rather than to act upon the advice of men younger and less wise; and he conformed his judgments in all things to the advice of that primate and of other devout and honourable men. Then was there in England the calm of peace, and great riches in all things.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT the devil, the enemy of all goodness, stirred up his stepmother, whose name was Alfrith, to hate the king, and in the glow of her evil passion she dared to think within herself how she should destroy the man of God out of the kingdom, that she might make her own son Etheldred to be king in his stead. This plan, therefore, she revealed to some of her counsellors, praying and adjuring them to consent with her and to help her; and they consented with her, and bethought them how they should bring about the murder of the gentle king.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN this worshipful king had reigned for three years and eight months he went to hunt one day at Warham Wood, which then was a great wood; and he was fain to see his brother, and went with few only to the house of his stepmother, which was hard by. And while they went thither they that were with him left him to follow their pastime, and the king came alone, suspecting no evil, to the house of his stepmother. When it was told to the wicked queen that King Edward was coming thither alone, she rejoiced that she had gotten a fit time to carry out her evil desire, and she went out to meet him, and bade him lovingly to come in. But he would not, but said that he was fain to see his brother. Then the wicked queen bade bring him drink, that while he was drinking she might do her will. Then one of them who was more wicked than the rest gave him a kiss of peace, that he might make him feel all the more safe and might the more easily slay him; and he did so, for when the king took his drinking vessel from the hand of the cup-bearer and put it to his mouth, he that had given him the kiss leapt forward upon him and struck a knife into his inward parts. And so the friend of God fell from his horse and gave up the ghost [upon the 18th day of March in the year 978.]

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matt. xvi. 24, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 600.) The last Lesson is read along with the Eighth, to leave room for the Homily of the Week-day, of which a Commemoration is also made at Lauds. Where this Feast is observed, the Feast of St Cyril of Jerusalem is kept upon the next day, and Vespers are therefore of him from the Chapter inclusive, but with a Commemoration of St Edward and of the Week-day.

MARCH 23.

Fourth Day within the Octave of St Cuthbert.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Timothy iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (29. On Rom. 15.)

HE that loveth Christ, loveth his flock. He first set Moses over the Jewish people when his kindliness had been proved. David also was exalted to the head of the kingdom after it had been made manifest how he loved the people. While he was yet a lad he was sorrowful and anxious because of his people, and he put his own life in jeopardy that he might slay Goliath, in that he said, "What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the reproach from Israel?" (1 Kings (Sam.) xvii. 26.) He said it not because he sought for a reward, but that men might believe him and let him go forth to battle, for after that he had gained the victory, and Abner took him and brought him before Saul with the head of the Philistine in his hand, he said nothing of payment.

Fifth Lesson.

MOREOVER, as for Samuel also, he was kindly and a lover of his people, whence also he said, "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you," (1 Kings (Sam.) xii. 23.) And Paul loved them over whom he was set, not as the others had loved them, but much more than them all, and thereby he stirred up such love among them in return that he saith, "I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes and have given them to me," (Gal. iv. 15.) And Christ Himself has revealed the love of Himself, the chief Shepherd of all, in the words, "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep," (John x. 11.) The souls of saints are so tender and humane that their love extendeth not toward them of their households only, but to strangers also, and even unto brute beasts likewise. Whence the Wise Man saith, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast; but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel," (Prov. xii. 10.) And if they so have regard unto the life of their beasts, much more unto the life of men.

Sixth Lesson.

AND as we are now speaking of beasts, let us consider the hardships which the shepherds in Cappadocia undergo for the sake of their flocks. They often pass three days at a time under the snow. It is said also that the hardships of those in Lybia are just as great, who for a whole month at a time will go about in that rugged desert filled with evil beasts. If, then, the shepherds of beasts bestow upon them such care, what excuse, I should like to know, shall we have unto whose care reasonable souls have been committed? and who yet sleep the deep sleep which we sleep. Knowest thou not the dignity of thy flock? or that it was for the sake of that flock that thy Lord hath created works without number? that it was for that flock that He ended by shedding His own blood? And dost thou ask for rest? What can be worse than shepherds such as these?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 42.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (78. On Matthew.)

For this reason doth the Lord bid His disciples to watch and be ready, for that in such an hour as they think not He cometh. Thus doth He make them careful and anxious lest even they should fall away. In like manner it is said: If men knew beforehand when they were to die, they would bestow much care upon that hour, and therefore that they may be careful not at that time only but at all times, and be always looking out upon the watch, He foretelleth unto them no hour either in general or in particular, just as He hath hidden from every man the hour of his death.

Eighth Lesson.

AND then with such clearness that nothing can be clearer He calleth Himself our Lord. It seemeth unto me that these things are said to make us ashamed of our sloth. The good man upon the watch for the thief hath more care to keep his goods than ye have to save your souls; for he watcheth lest his house be robbed, but ye, albeit ye know for a surety that your Lord will come, persevere not nor so watch that ye cannot leave this life unprepared. And, therefore, that day will come charged with evil to them whom it shall find sleeping.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

MARCH 24.

In the Diocese of Hexham and Newcastle.

Fifth Day within the Octave of St Cuthbert.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Timothy iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (As yesterday.)

THEY that rule nations, when they have to take counsel over events, are not content with the day, but sit up by night also to consult. We, whose business it is to strive for heaven, go to sleep not in the night only but in the day also. Who, may I inquire, is to save us from the punishment which will be visited upon the rulers of things earthly? If it was a question of exposing our bodies to death, if there were many deaths to bear, ought we not to run to this as men run to a fair? It is not the shepherds alone whom I wish to hear this. I wish the sheep to hear it too, that they may wake their shepherds up, while at the same time they yield them nothing but all obedience and a teachable spirit.

Fifth Lesson.

PAUL saith, "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves; for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account," (Heb. xiii. 17.) The words, "they watch for your souls," include toils, cares, and dangers without number. He that is a good shepherd, and such as Christ would have him, he is likened to martyrs without number. The martyr dieth once for Christ's sake, but the good shepherd, if he is such as he ought to be, dieth a thousand times, for such a shepherd can die for his flock every day. Wherefore do ye, when ye know our labour, help us by your prayers, and your care, and the readiness of your souls, and your love, that ye may be our glory, and that we may be yours.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Christ laid the command to feed His flock upon him who was the leader of the Apostles, and who loved Him more than the rest, He asked him first of all whether he loved Him. Learn thou from this that before all other things the thing necessary is love for Christ. Here there is need for a stout heart. I am not saying these things about myself or about them that are like unto me, but about the best shepherds, such as was Paul or Peter or [Cuthbert]; but whether we be governors or governed, let us imitate them, and even they that are governed have that wherein they also in turn do play the shepherd, such as their household, their friends, their servants, their wives, and their children.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 42.)

At that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (As before.)

Are these, I ask, the words of one of them that know not? It is written, (Mark xiii. 22,) "Of that day and that hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father," and if the Son Himself know not, what wilt thou say when He asketh, as though in doubt, "Who, then, is a faithful and wise servant?" Dost thou deem that this also He knoweth not? Nay, for this were foolishness. We can say wherefore He knoweth not that day nor that hour, but not wherefore He should not know who be the faithful and wise servants. When He asked, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" (John xvi. 15, 16, 17,) or "Where have ye laid him?" (xi. 34,) did He not know?

Eighth Lesson.

I find that even the Father Himself somewhiles so speaketh, as where He calleth unto Adam, "Where art thou?" (Gen. iii. 9,) or where it is written, "And the Lord said, Because the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous, I will go down now and see whether they have done according to the cry of it which is come unto Me; and if not, I will know," (xviii. 20, 21,) or again, in another place, "It may be that the house of Juda will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin,"[1] (Gen. xxxvi. 3,) and again, in the Gospel, (Luke xx. 13,) "What shall I do? I will send My beloved Son; it may be they will reverence Him when they see Him." All these passages are written as though they expressed ignorance, but they are not written to express ignorance, but because it pleased Him in His good providence so to speak.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day, of which also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Maximus of Turin, "Our blessed Father Cuthbert," &c., (p. 619.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 42.)

At that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (As before.)

Who, then, is a faithful and wise servant whom his lord hath made ruler over his household to give them meat in due season. If either faithfulness or wisdom be lacking the other profiteth little; if a servant be faithful, in the sense that he doth not steal, but is a waster instead of a thrifty spender, it is no small fault in him; on the other hand, if he be a wise steward, but enricheth himself, this is a great fault in him. And let us who are wealthy take good heed to it.

Eighth Lesson.

For the Lord hath appointed as His stewards, not preachers only, but the rich also. Unto both these classes hath the Lord given riches in charge, that in due season they may give meat unto His household. Unto preachers, indeed, He hath committed the stewardship of the greater riches, but unto the wealthy He hath given the stewardship of riches which are no small ones. If, therefore, preachers scatter abroad the better riches, and ye show no bountifulness in scattering abroad the lesser riches, what excuse have ye? But why, indeed, should I say bountifulness and not gratitude, for ye give away that which is not your own but others.

Hymn.

JESUS! Eternal Truth Sublime,
Through endless years the same!
Thou Crown of those who through all time
Confess Thy holy name.

Thy suppliant people, through the prayer
Of Thy blest saint, forgive;
For his dear sake Thy wrath forbear,
And bid our spirits live.

Again returns the sacred day,
With heavenly glory bright,
That saw him go upon his way
Into the realms of light.

Then for his sake Thy wrath lay by,
And hear us while we pray;
And pardon us, O Thou Most High!
On this his festal day.

All glory to the Father be
And sole Incarnate Son;
Praise, Holy Paraclete, to Thee,
While endless ages run. Amen.

Verse. [1] The Lord loved him and beautified him.

Answer. He clothed him with a robe of glory.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. [2] One thief said unto the other: We, indeed, receive the due reward of our deeds, but what hath this man done? Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. While Christ our King hung from the Cross, He gave Paradise to the thief that was crucified with Him. * O come let us worship Him.

Hymn as at Vespers.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Blessed and holy is he that putteth his trust in the Lord. And He heard him out of His holy hill.

Second Antiphon. Ask of Me and I shall give thee thine inheritance.

Third Antiphon. I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and He heard me out of His holy hill.

Verse. The Lord loved him and beautified him.

Answer. And clothed him with a robe of glory.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah (lv. 1.)

HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat, yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labour for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto Me and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear and come unto Me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold, I have given Him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the nations. Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knewest not; and nations that knew not Thee shall run unto Thee because of the Lord Thy God and for the Holy One of Israel, for He hath glorified thee. Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is near.

First Responsory.

[3] I have laid help upon one that is mighty, for my hand shall help him, mine arm also shall strengthen him.

Verse. The enemy shall prevail nothing against him, nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

Answer. For my hand shall help him, mine arm also shall strengthen him.

Second Lesson.

LET the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon. For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts. And as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither but watereth the earth and quickeneth it, and maketh it to bring forth, and giveth seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall My word be that shall go forth out of My mouth; it shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in that whereto I sent it.

Second Responsory.

This is he which knew righteousness, and saw great wonders, and made his prayer unto the Most High. May he pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them!

Verse. He is numbered among the saints.

Answer. May he pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them.

Third Lesson. (lix. 1.)

BEHOLD, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear. But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His Face from you, that He may not hear. For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, and your tongue uttereth perverseness. None calleth for justice, nor any judgeth truly, but they trust in vanity and speak foolishness; they conceive mischief and bring forth iniquity.

Third Responsory.

The Lord loved him, and beautified him; He clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him at the gates of Paradise.

Verse. The Lord hath put on him the breastplate of faith and hath adorned him.

Answer. And crowned him at the gates of Paradise.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And crowned him at the gates of Paradise.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. When His holy one called the Lord heard him, yea the Lord heard him and gave him peace.

---

[1] Ecclus. xlv. 9.

[2] Luke xxiii. 40-42.

[3] Ps. lxxxviii. 20, 22, 23.

Second Antiphon. Hearken unto the voice of my cry, O Lord, my King and my God!

Third Antiphon. Thou hast set Thy glory above the heavens.

Verse. The Lord hath put on him the breastplate of faith and hath adorned him.

Answer. And crowned him at the gates of Paradise.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (2nd on the Cross and the Thief.)

I KNOW that others have treated the subject of the penitent thief before me, but the Word of God hath divers interpretations. This thief purchased salvation from the Cross and made the kingdom of heaven his booty. He did violence to the Divine Majesty and prevailed, not by his own power, but by faith. The Lord Himself hath said, (Matth. xi. 12): "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent taketh it by force." The two crucified thieves are images of Jewry and heathendom, and the thief who repented was an image of the ingathering from heathendom who erst had walked in darkness but are afterward come to the knowledge of the truth. The thief who repented not is an image of the Jewry who remain still unbelieving. They trod together the path of sin until they came to the Cross, but the Cross parted them asunder.

Fourth Responsory.

[1] The veil of the temple was rent in twain, [from the top to the bottom,] and all the earth did quake; [2] the thief on the Cross cried, saying: Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom!

Verse. The rocks rent and the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints, which slept, arose.

Answer. And all the earth did quake; the thief on the Cross cried, saying: Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY were parted asunder, for he that believed not entered upon the path of darkness and destruction, and he that believed gained the path of salvation. The thief upon the Cross learnt the dividing of the ways, "for the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish," (Ps. i. 6.) And behold the just judgment of God that thou mayest say with the prophet, "righteous art Thou, O Lord, and upright are Thy judgments," (Ps. cxviii. 37.) For one sin was Adam condemned, and at one cry of faith was the thief saved. One sin cast Adam out of Paradise, one holy act brought in the thief to dwell therein. Behold a marvel! even unto Abraham was made no promise of Paradise; because he believed God he hath indeed inherited it, but it was never promised unto any until it was promised unto the good thief.

Fifth Responsory.

Paradise was never promised unto any until it was promised unto the thief—unto whom the Lord said upon the Cross: To-day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise.

Verse. Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

Answer. To-day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise.

Sixth Lesson.

HE did not see the Saviour seated on a kingly throne. He did not see Him worshipped in a temple, speaking from heaven, or directing the ministry of angels, but numbered in punishment with the transgressors. He saw Him suffering, and addressed Him as though He were in glory. He saw Him on the Cross, and besought Him as though He were enthroned in the heavens. He saw Him condemned, and called upon Him as his king, saying: "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom." He seeth Christ crucified and proclaimeth Him his king. He beheld Him hanging upon the Tree, and thought of the kingdom of heaven. Wondrous is the conversion of the penitent thief.

Sixth Responsory.

Wondrous is the conversion of the penitent thief. He saw Christ crucified, and proclaimed Him his king.

Verse. He beheld Him hanging upon the Tree, and thought of the kingdom of heaven.

Answer. He saw Christ crucified, and proclaimed Him his king.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. He saw Christ crucified and proclaimed Him his king.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Lord, this Thy Saint shall abide in Thy tabernacle. He shall dwell upon Thine holy hill.

Second Antiphon. He asked life of Thee, and Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever.

Third Antiphon. He shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, and stand in His holy place.

Verse. He shall receive a blessing from the Lord.

Answer. And mercy from the God of his salvation.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xxiii. 39.)

AT that time: One of the thieves that was crucified with JESUS blasphemed Him, saying: If Thou be the Christ, save Thyself and us. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (49th. On the Thief.)

The portion of the Gospel which is read this day maketh mention of the penitent thief. Let us then see who this thief was who, when the Lord was lifted up upon the Cross, obtained from Him not only the forgiveness of his sins, but also the gift of the joy of Paradise. He had been justly condemned to death as the due reward of his deeds, but through his faith he was translated unto glory, and the Cross was to him the occasion of salvation rather than the instrument of execution. Crucified himself, he believed in the [2] Luke xxiii. 42.

Lord Christ crucified. And, therefore, because he made use of the companionship with Him in which he found himself upon the Cross, he was gifted with companionship with Him in Paradise. That blessed robber, while he is actually suffering execution, gaineth the kingdom of heaven. He is called a criminal like one the hour of whose condemnation had come, but he would not have attained unto glory if he had not been cast for punishment. Let us then see, I say, wherefore one who had been guilty of so many crimes had Paradise so quickly promised unto him by his Saviour, where others hardly obtain the pardon of their sins through long weeping, and oftentimes fasting.

Seventh Responsory.

This is that blessed robber who, being himself crucified, believed in the Lord Christ crucified, and while he was actually suffering execution gained the kingdom of heaven.

Verse. Him Whom Judas Iscariot betrayed in a garden, Him did the thief upon the Cross confess, and unto him was promised the garden of Eden.

Answer. And while he was actually suffering execution gained the kingdom of heaven.

Eighth Lesson.

THE reason, my brethren, was great and manifold. Firstly, because that robber was so suddenly changed, through the earnestness of his faith, that he recked little of the punishment he was then enduring, and asked for the remission of the punishment which was yet to come. He deemed it better for himself to ask for pardon as regarded the eternal rather than the temporal judgment; when he called to mind with contrition the greatness of his crimes, his hopes of the hereafter outweighed in his mind the sufferings of the present. As a believer in Christ he might have besought Him to deliver him from his present torment, had it not been that his thoughts were fixed rather upon the things which are to come; moreover, it was the greater grace in him that he believed in Christ while Christ was actually hanging upon the Cross, and those sufferings which were a cause of stumbling unto so many were unto him an occasion of faith. The sufferings of the Cross have indeed been a stumbling-block unto many, as said the Apostle, (1 Cor. i. 23,) "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness." Well, then, doth he deserve Paradise who seeth in the Cross of Christ not a stumbling-block but a power. As saith further the Apostle, "but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God."

Eighth Responsory.

He saw in the Cross of Christ not a stumbling-block but a power, and therefore he deserved Paradise. May he pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them.

Verse. Judas betrayed the Lord with a kiss, but the thief honoured Him even while he suffered upon the Cross.

Answer. May he pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven them.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. May he pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven them.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Week-day.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. The thief saw Christ * nailed to the Cross, and called upon Him as his King, saying: Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

Second Antiphon. [1] Whosoever shall confess Me * before men, him will I confess also before My Father.

Third Antiphon. Lord, when my soul is troubled, * Thou wilt remember mercy.

Fourth Antiphon. Christ my Redeemer hath saved me, * Who hath said unto me, To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Fifth Antiphon. Behold what he was * through grace when he left the Cross, who had come to the Cross through sin.

Chapter. (Isaiah lix. 1.)

BEHOLD, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear.

Hymn.

JESU, the world's Redeemer, hear,
Thy servant's fadeless crown draw near,
Accept with gentler love to-day
The prayers and praises that we pay.

This day, when we in prayerful state
Thy blest confessor celebrate,
Who in Thy saving power believed,
And Paradise from Thee received,

Grant us, like him, ere life shall close,
To turn where mercy's fountain flows,
And washed from every stain of sin,
The heaven which he hath won, to win.

To Thee, O Christ, our loving King,
All glory, praise, and thanks we bring,
All glory as is ever meet,
The Father, and the Paraclete. Amen.

Verse. He asked life of Thee, and Thou, Lord, gavest it him.

Answer. [2] Honour and great majesty hast Thou laid upon him.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. One thief said unto the other: We receive the due reward of our deeds. What hath this man done? Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O ALMIGHTY and merciful God, Who justifies the ungodly,[3] we humbly beseech Thee to stir up in us the spirit of due repentance by that same look of mercy which Thine only-begotten Son turned upon the blessed thief, and in the end to grant unto us that same everlasting glory which He promised unto him. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Octave of St Cuthbert.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (Part 2, Pastoral i., 2, 10.)

THE life of a Bishop ought to be so much higher than the life of his people as is that of a shepherd than that of his sheep. It behoveth him carefully to consider how high are the calls upon him in comparison of whom the people are called sheep. It behoveth him, therefore, to be pure in thought, eminent in works, wise in silence, useful in word, by sympathy every man's neighbour, in contemplation more rapt than any, by lowliness the fellow-worker of such as do well, by zeal for righteousness the opponent of evil in such as do ill, not suffering the care of those things that be outward to take away from the care of those things that be inward, nor neglecting to see to those that be outward because he hath care for those that be inward.

Fifth Lesson.

WE must consider also that when he that is chosen a Bishop taketh on him the care of the people, he cometh unto them as a physician unto a sick man. If therefore his own works be still disordered, with what face shall he go to heal the suffering while his own unhealed wounds are manifest? He ought in all his ways to set an example of good living, showing himself one who hath died to all fleshly passions and liveth in the spirit, who setteth little store by it that things should go well with him in this world, and is not afraid that they should go ill, whose only eagerness is for the things that be inward; one whose body and spirit are under the control of his will, the weakness of the one hindering him in nothing, the pride of the other resisting him but little; one who is not drawn to desire other men's goods, but freely disperseth his own.

Sixth Lesson.

WHENCE the very office of a Bishop is called a good work where it is said: "If a man desire the office of a Bishop he desireth a good work," (1 Tim. iii. 1.) He therefore is a witness against himself, that he desireth not the office of a Bishop, who desireth to be a Bishop, not that he may be a minister of good works, but for the sake of honour and dignity. A man indeed doth not only not desire the sacred office of a Bishop at all, but doth not even know what it is, if what he gaspeth for is the position of power, if the subjection of others unto him be a secret banquet to his inmost thoughts, if it is his delight to hear himself praised, if his heart swell at the idea of his rank and if he revelleth in wealth and comfort. What he seeketh is gain in this world, and that under the mask of the very dignity whereby all gain in this world ought to have been put away.

[1] Ez. xxxiii. 12.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xxiv. 42.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (On Faith, v. 8.)

We asked wherefore it was that the Lord was not pleased to indicate the actual moment, and when we ask we find that this reticence on His part was the outcome not of ignorance but of wisdom. It is better for us that we should not know the moment, although we know that a moment there will surely be, in order that we may be always on the watch, and may not let ourselves fall into habits of sin, lest the day of the Lord shall come suddenly upon us, and so find us.

Eighth Lesson.

WHAT is good is not to know the future, but to fear it. For it is written, (Rom. xi. 20): "Be not highminded, but fear." If He had named the day He would have seemed to lay the duty of strict preparation for it upon that one generation upon whom it was to come, and during the rest of time the righteous would have been laxer, and the sinner securer. The adulterer, unless he have upon him the fear of daily punishment, cannot give up the desire of committing adultery.

The Ninth Lesson is the Lesson of the Week-day.

APRIL 26.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Good Counsel.

Greater Double.

All as on the Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn. Hail, Thou Star of Ocean, (p. 633.)

Verse. Pray for us, O Mother of Good Counsel. Alleluia.

Answer. That we may be made worthy of the promises of Christ. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Magnificat. [1] She is the brightness of the everlasting light, the unspotted mirror, the majesty of God, and the image of His goodness, and therefore can no defiled thing fall into her. Alleluia.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. O Holy Mary, Virgin Mother of God, Mother of Good Counsel, * pray for us. Alleluia.

Hymn.[2]

SING high your hymns of praise, all ye who dwell
  In Genazzano, where the sacred fane
  The image of God's Mother doth contain.
No mortal hand could limn that face so well!
The mighty works wrought through it who shall tell,
  When first it dawned upon their wondering sight?
  The sick are healed, and all the ills that light
On body and on mind it did dispel.
The woes which threatened Latium to invade
  Were banished far. O Virgin! still thy power
  Is manifest by many wondrous signs.
To weary mortals lend thy powerful aid,
And hear the vows which we, thy servants, pour.
  To Him, Whose glory in the heaven shines,
The Triune God Who rules the Universe,
May every creature ceaseless praise rehearse.
Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Antiphon. [3] Receive my advice, and refuse not my counsel. Alleluia.

Verse. All good things together came to me with her. Alleluia.

Answer. And innumerable riches by her hands. Alleluia.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Proverbs (ii. 10-15.)

WHEN wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee: to deliver thee from the evil way, and from the man that speaketh froward things; who leave the paths of uprightness, and walk in the ways of darkness; who rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked; whose ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths.

First Responsory.

[4] If thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding, then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God. Alleluia.

Verse. [5] For the LORD giveth wisdom, and out of His mouth come knowledge and understanding.

Answer. [6] Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God. Alleluia.

Second Lesson. (iii. 21-23.)

MY son, let them not depart from thine eyes: keep sound wisdom and discretion, and they shall be life unto thy soul, and grace unto thy neck. Then shalt thou walk in thy way faithfully, and thy feet shall not stumble. When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid: thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet. Be not afraid of sudden fear, neither of the wicked, when they fall upon thee. For the Lord shall be by thy side, and shall keep thy foot from being taken.

[5] Prov. ii. 6.

[6] Prov. ii. 5.

Second Responsory.

When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee. Alleluia.

Verse. To deliver thee from the evil way, and from the man that speaketh froward things.

Answer. Discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee.

Third Lesson. (viii. 12.)

I, WISDOM, dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the LORD is to hate evil: pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the double mouth, do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom; understanding is mine; mine is strength. By me kings reign, and princes decree justice: by me princes rule, and nobles command righteousness. I love them that love me, and those that seek me early shall find me.

Third Responsory.

[1] Blessed is the man that findeth wisdom, and who getteth understanding: the first and purest are her gifts. Alleluia.

Verse. [2] She is more precious than all gifts, and all things which can be desired are not to be compared with her.

Answer. The first and purest are her gifts. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The first and purest are her gifts. Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Antiphon. All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing froward or perverse in them. Alleluia.

Verse. I have taught thee in the way of wisdom. Alleluia.

Answer. I have led thee in right paths. Alleluia.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermon of St Augustine, Bishop [of Hippo.] (The Birthday of St John Baptist.)

ELIZABETH and Mary both conceived men; but Elizabeth a man only, and Mary both man and God. The marvel is how the creature could conceive her Creator. What, then, my brethren, are we to understand, except that He who created the first male without either father or mother created flesh for Himself out of a mother only? Our first fall was when that woman through whom we die conceived in her heart the venom of the serpent. The serpent solicited her to sin, and she assimilated his evil suggestion. If, then, the fact of the woman conceiving in her heart the venom of the serpent was the cause of our first fall, it is little marvel that the cause of our salvation should be the fact of the woman conceiving in her womb the flesh of the Almighty. Both the sexes fail, and therefore both were to be restored. Through a woman had come our destruction, and through a woman had come our salvation.

Fourth Responsory.

O son, keep sound wisdom and discretion; and they shall be life unto thy soul, and grace unto thy neck. Alleluia.

Verse. Then shalt thou walk in thy way faithfully, and thy foot shall not stumble.

Answer. And they shall be life unto thy soul, and grace unto thy neck. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons by St Fulgentius, Bishop [of Ruspa.] (On the Praise of Mary at having given Birth to the Saviour.)

THE devil spoke unto Eve through a serpent, and so through Eve's ears brought death into the world. God spoke unto Mary through an angel, and so brought in everlasting life. The angel spake, and the Virgin conceived the Christ. This is the glory wherewith the Son of God is begotten, and this is the purity wherewith He is born. The Healer from heaven passed through the Virgin, but He left her unbroken after His passage. He by His touch could restore again in whole the parts of broken bodies, and could He not avoid breaking by His birth that which He found unbroken inside His own mother? His birth rather established than impaired her physical integrity, and her virginity was fortified rather than broken up.

Fifth Responsory.

[3] Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings, that the years of thy life shall be many. Alleluia.

Verse. [4] I will show thee the way of wisdom; and lead thee in right paths.

Answer. That the years of thy life shall be many. Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

HERE are the three excellent gifts whereby Mary was exalted: she was saluted by an angel, she was blest of God, and she was filled with grace. For thus is it written: "And the angel came in unto her, and said: Hail! thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women!" (So far St Fulgentius.)

That nothing that concerns this most holy Virgin, whom an angel hailed as full of grace, might remain unexalted, it had come to pass under the providence of God that even her images should be highly honoured, and should be famed for marvels and wonders. Among such images a chief place has for three centuries been held by that, which is attested by Papal documents and from like records, to have appeared upon the wall of the church of the hermits of the Order of St Augustine, in the town of Genazzano, in the diocese of Palestrina, during the pontificate of Pope Paul II. Pope Pius VI. was hereby induced to permit the aforesaid hermits to say a special office upon the 25th day of April, which is that upon which the said image appeared, and then to allow the whole of their Order to say the same office as a Feast of the Greater Double rite upon the day following; and Pope Leo XIII., with a view to increase the honour paid to the most Blessed Virgin, styled the Mother of Good Counsel, hath approved this new office.

Sixth Responsory.

[1] Attend to my words, and incline thine ear unto my sayings: let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. Alleluia.

Verse. [2] For they are life unto those that find them, and health to all their flesh.

Answer. Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. Alleluia.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. [3] The way of a fool is right in his own eyes; but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise. Alleluia.

Verse. [4] The fear of the Lord is a crown of wisdom. Alleluia.

Answer. Making peace and perfect health to flourish. Alleluia.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Evangel according to Luke (i. 26, 27.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a Virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the Virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

The Lesson is taken from the Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on Luke i. 26.)

IT is said: "And the virgin's name was Mary." Let us speak a few words upon this name, which signifieth, being interpreted, "Star of the Sea,"[5] and suiteth very well the Maiden Mother, who may very meetly be likened unto a star. A star giveth forth her rays without any harm to herself, and the Virgin brought forth her Son without any hurt to her virginity. The light of a star taketh nothing away from the star itself, and the birth of her offspring took nothing away from the Virginity of Mary. She is that noble star which was to come out of Jacob, (Num. xxiv. 17,) whose brightness still sheddeth lustre upon all the earth, whose rays are most brilliant in heaven, and shine even unto hell, lighting up earth midway, and warming souls rather than bodies, fostering good and scaring away evil. She, I say, is a clear and shining star, twinkling with excellencies, and resplendent with example, needfully set to look down upon the surface of this great and wide sea. O thou, whosoever thou art, that knowest thyself to be here not so much walking upon firm ground, as battered to and fro by the gales and storms of this life's ocean, if thou wouldest not be overwhelmed by the tempest, keep thine eyes fixed upon this star's clear shining. If the hurricanes of temptation rise against thee, or thou art running upon the rocks of trouble, look to the star, call on Mary. If the waves of pride, or ambition, or slander, or envy toss thee, look to the star, call on Mary. If the billows of anger or avarice, or the enticements of the flesh beat against thy soul's bark, look to Mary. If the enormity of thy sins trouble thee, if the foulness of thy conscience confound thee, if the dread of judgment appal thee, if thou begin to slip into the deep of despondency, into the pit of despair, think of Mary. In danger, in difficulty, or in doubt, think on Mary, call on Mary. Let her not be away from thy mouth or from thine heart, and that thou mayest not lack the succour of her prayers, turn not aside from the example of her conversation. If thou follow her, thou wilt never go astray. If thou pray to her, thou wilt never have need to despair. If thou keep her in mind, thou wilt never wander. If she hold thee, thou wilt never fall. If she lead thee, thou wilt never be weary. If she help thee, thou wilt reach home safe at the last—and so thou wilt prove in thyself how meetly it is said: "And the virgin's name was Mary."

Seventh Responsory.

[6] Hearken unto me, O ye children: blessed are they that keep my ways. Alleluia.

Verse. [7] Hear instruction, and be wise; and refuse it not.

Answer. Blessed are they that keep my ways. Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

CONSIDER, O man, the counsel of God; recognise its wisdom and its goodness. He Who was about to water the whole floor with dew from heaven, began by drenching the fleece. He Who was about to redeem all mankind, poured the price of redemption upon Mary. Consider deeper with what feelings He hath willed that we should honour Mary, He Who hath given unto her a fulness of all good; so that if we have any hope, any grace, any salvation, we know that it runneth over from her abundance "who goeth up, overflowing with delights." (Cant. viii. 5.) With all our hearts, then, with all our deepest affections and longings, let us honour Mary, since this is the will of Him Who hath been pleased that it should be through Mary that we should have all things. I say that such is His will—for our sakes. [God] doth in all things anticipate our needs, cheer our terrors, rouse our faith, nerve our hope, put away our fears, strengthen our cowardice.

---

[1] Prov. iv. 20, 21.
[2] Prov. iv. 22.
[3] Prov. xii. 15.
[4] Ecclus. i. 22.

[5] The signification of the word MRYM, or Mary, has been the subject of many theories, of which the Breviary gives two, viz., "Lady" and "Star-of-the-Sea"—Stella Maris. The latter was probably taken by St Bernard from what seems to have been then and is now the text of St Jerome. But it may be remarked that if the word MRYM be Hebrew (which is itself uncertain), the meaning lying upon the surface would be (not Stella but) Stilla Maris, "Drop-of-the-Sea" or "Wild-sea-spray," a very elegant name for a virgin, as implying the idea of sparkling freshness and incorruptibility. And that St Jerome really wrote Stilla instead of Stella seems the more probable, because he expressly rejects the meaning Illuminatrix Maris, "Light-of-the-Sea." See this very blunder of copyists as early as the time of St Gregory, p. 631, footnote.

[6] Prov. viii. 32.
[7] Prov. viii. 33.

Eighth Responsory.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of holy things is understanding. Alleluia.

Verse. For by me thy days shall be multiplied, and the years of thy life shall be increased.

Answer. And the knowledge of holy things is understanding. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And the knowledge of holy things is understanding. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson.

THOU art awe-struck even by hearing the voice of the Father, thou art ashamed to approach Him, and wouldst fain hide thyself among the trees of the garden. Lo! He hath given thee JESUS for a Mediator, a Mediator Who will be heard on account of His reverent submission, (Heb. v. 7,) for the Father loveth the Son. (John iii. 35.) But perchance thou shrinkest before the Divine Majesty in Him also, since albeit He be made Man, He remaineth still God. Wouldst thou have an advocate with Him likewise? Have recourse to Mary. There is nothing in Mary but pure humanity—pure, not only in the sense of being free from any kind of contamination, but in that of being pure and simple human nature and nothing more. And I have no hesitation in saying that she also will be heard on account of her reverent submission. The Son will indeed hear the mother, and the Father will hear the Son. My little children, this is the sinners' ladder to heaven, this is my chiefest trust, this is the whole reason of the hope that is in me.[1] For why? Can her Son thrust her away, or endure that she should be thrust away? Can He either not hear, or not Himself be heard? Plainly He cannot. The Angel giveth her this joyful assurance: "Thou hast found grace with God." She will always find grace with God, and grace is all that we need, since by grace are we saved. (Eph. ii. 8.) What else do we want, my brethren? Let us seek grace, and let us seek it through Mary, for he that seeketh, findeth, and cannot be disappointed of his hope. Let us seek grace, but let it be grace with God, for among men "favour is deceitful." (Prov. xxxi. 30.) Let others seek for merits, but let us seek to find grace. For why? Is it not the work of grace that we are here? Of a truth, "it is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed." (Lam. iii. 22.)

Third Sunday after Easter. Patronage of St Joseph.

(See p. 368.)

In some dioceses this Feast has an Octave. The Office is then on every day the same as on Sunday, except those things which belong to the Sunday itself, aad the fact that the Office is Semi-double. Moreover, several of these days are always occupied by Festivals, upon which the Octave is only commemorated. Hence, Offices are here given for the five days within the Octave, which may be otherwise unoccupied, and on which the Office may therefore be of the Octave.

First Free Day within the Octave of the Patronage of St Joseph.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernardine [of Sienna.] (1st on St Joseph.)

THE marriage which, by the inspiration of God, was contracted between Mary and Joseph was a thoroughly true marriage. In marriage "they twain shall be one flesh, wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh," (Matth. xix. 5, 6.) It is impossible seriously to think that the Holy Ghost would thus have united with the Virgin any soul, save one which grace had made like unto her. Hence I believe that this holy man Joseph was a man of the purest virginity, of the deepest lowliness, of the warmest love of God, and of the highest contemplation. The Holy Ghost Himself said unto him, (Matth. i. 20, 21, 24, 25), "Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for That Which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost: and she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call His name JESUS, for He shall save His people from their sins." "Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the Angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife, and knew her not." Thus sharing her love and care for God's own divine Son. I believe that Joseph loved with all his heart "that Holy Thing Which was born of her" (Luke i. 35.)

Fifth Lesson.

JOSEPH, then, loved Christ dearly, and I ask, who will deny that, as he held Christ in his arms, or as he talked with Him, Christ, whether as an infant or as He increased in age, impressed upon him feelings and joys which we cannot describe, but which were the work of the grace of Christ flowing forth from Him, united with the seeing, the hearing, and the touching Him, as though He had been his Son. How sweet were the kisses which he received from Him. With what love did he hear the little Child as He learnt to speak, learnt to call him father; and with what love did he feel Him, embrace Him; with what tenderness did he see the little JESUS grow weary in the journeys which they made as the Child increased in stature, and take Him up to rest in his own arms, for he bore toward Him all the fulness of adoptive love, as toward a dear Son Whom the Holy Ghost had given unto him along with the Virgin his wife.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE it was that that wise mother, who knew the love of Joseph toward her Son JESUS, said unto Him, when she found Him again in the temple: "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing," (Luke ii. 48.) In order to understand these words, we must understand that Christ hath Himself two savours—the savours of sweetness and of sorrow,—and that the holy Joseph did wondrously partake of both, so that the blessed Virgin doth here give him the singular title of father of Christ. In this place alone is it written that the Virgin termed Joseph the father of Jesus, because that sorrow which he had felt at the loss of JESUS showed that he had toward JESUS the love of a father. According to the laws of men, approved by God, a stranger may adopt a stranger for his son, and much more may the Son of God be called, and even be supposed (Luke iii. 23) to be the Son of Joseph, unto whom He had been given with his most holy bride, in the wondrous mystery of their maidenly wedlock, that well-beloved Jesus, over Whom he felt a father's love and sorrow.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Book ii. on the Concord of the Gospels.)

Joseph might have adopted any child who was not the child of his wife, and with regard to him he would have been called father; much more can he not be refused the title of father of Christ, for the mere reason that he had not begotten Him. Christ was indeed supposed to be the Son of Joseph in another sense—namely, in that of having been actually begotten by him. But this was the supposition of those who knew not the virginity of Mary. Luke saith: "And JESUS Himself began to be about thirty years of age, being, as was supposed, the Son of Joseph." This same Luke hath no hesitation in giving the title of parent of JESUS to both Mary and Joseph, and not to Mary only. As he saith (ii. 40): "And the Child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was in Him. Now His parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the Passover."

Eighth Lesson.

THAT this expression, His parents, cannot be understood of Mary herself and her kinsfolk, is evident from the words previously (33) used by this same Luke, where he saith: "And His father and His mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him." Now it is this same Luke who testifieth that Christ was born of the Virgin Mary without coition with Joseph, and we must therefore understand that he calleth Joseph the father of Christ, because Joseph was His mother's husband by the marriage tie, but without fleshly union; and that on account of his thus being, as it were, the step-father of Christ, he is called the father of Christ in a stronger sense than if Christ had been a strange Child simply adopted by him. Hence also, if any were able to show that Mary was in no wise sprung from the lineage of David, Christ might still be accepted as the Son of David for the same reason for which Joseph is called Christ's father.

Ninth Lesson.

LUKE giveth the pedigree of Christ, not at the beginning of his Gospel, but after narrating the baptism of Christ. And he giveth the pedigree itself, not in descent but in ascent, as though he would set Him forth as the High Priest making atonement for sin, at that point where "the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon Him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art My beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased." At the which time also "John seeth JESUS coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. . . . And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon Him. . . . And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God," (John i. 29, 32, 34.) And as Luke ascendeth in this pedigree he passeth beyond Abraham, with whom Matthew beginneth, and cometh even unto God, unto Whom we are reconciled when we are cleansed and sanctified. Well doth Luke begin His pedigree by an adoptive Sonship, because we also are adopted sons of God, as it is written, "Whosoever believeth that JESUS is the Christ is born of God," (1 John v. 1.) He hath well shown that when he saith Joseph was of Heli, he meaneth not that he was begotten of him, but that he was adopted of him, since he also saith that Adam was of God, by whom Adam was not begotten but created, and placed as a son in that Paradise which he afterward lost by sin.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (4th on Matthew.)

IT was the general use of the Antients that espoused wives did dwell in their husband's houses. Thus did Mary dwell with Joseph, and wherefore was it that she conceived not until they dwelt together? To the end that the mystery might lie, as it were, buried in shadow, and that the Virgin might be protected against any evil reputation. Her husband was he by whom it was most natural that offence should be taken, and not only did he not put away his espoused wife nor brand her with shame, but even took her unto him and ministered unto her being great with child, whence it is evident that he knew clearly that That Which was conceived in her was of the Holy Ghost, else would he neither have kept her with him nor ministered unto her in all things whereof she had need.

Fifth Lesson.

"THEN Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily." The Evangelist had already stated that "she was found with child of the Holy Ghost," and not through carnal connection, and now he confirmeth his statement. For lest any might say, how can this thing be proved? who hath seen such a thing? who hath ever heard of such a thing having befallen? or lest we should think that this was a case of a disciple devising a fiction in order to please his Master, he bringeth forward as a witness Joseph, who could confirm all things from his own experience, so that the Evangelist here plainly seemeth to say, if thou believe me not and hold my witness for doubtful, at any rate believe the husband.

Sixth Lesson.

"THEN Joseph her husband, being a just man." The Evangelist would have us regard this just man as perfect in all things. Being then a just man, that is to say a worthy and good man, he was minded to put her away privily. The Evangelist hath told us what befel this just man before the angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream, that thou mayest not doubt concerning those things which came to pass after the truth had been known unto him. Certainly if Mary had been what jealousy would have represented her as being, not only ought she to have been made a public example, but she ought to have been punished by the authority of the law. But Joseph not only did not condemn her, but was not even willing to make the matter public. Thou seest a man practising the highest philosophy and free from the tyranny of the passion of jealousy. And indeed could it have been called jealousy when the swelling of her belly seemed to be actually attesting the fact? but so free was this man from anything in the shape of jealousy as to be minded that the Virgin should not be afflicted even in the least—living under the law he was more philosophical than the law. For indeed, in as much as grace was soon coming there was due a display of a loftier discipline.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Augustine, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Against Faustus, xxiii. 7, 8.)

From heaven, over the Jordan, "the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon Him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art My beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased." Thus also upon the high mountain, "behold, a bright cloud overshadowed Him, and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him" (Matth. xvii. 5.) And He over Whom these voices sounded from heaven was the Son of God before even they were uttered, for He was He "Who albeit in the womb of the Virgin He took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man," was the same "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God," (Phil. ii. 7, 6.) Whence also the same Apostle Paul saith plainly in another place (Gal. iv. 4, 5) that "when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." He is the Son of God Who is the Lord of David as touching His Godhead, and is yet, as touching His flesh, the Son of David begotten of David's seed.

Eighth Lesson.

HAD it been useless for us to believe this, the aforenamed Apostle would not have been so careful to remind Timothy to (2 Tim. ii. 8) "remember that JESUS Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my Gospel." The question now ariseth before the reader of the Holy Gospel, wherefore, since he doth us to wit that Christ was born of the Virgin without any coition with Joseph, this Christ is nevertheless called the Son of David, although the pedigree from David given by the Evangelist Matthew is not that of Mary but that of Joseph. The first reason is that in order of sex the husband is named before the wife, and that he is not the less called husband because he knew her not, since this same Matthew when he saith (i. 20) that That Which was conceived in her was of the Holy Ghost, expressly giveth to Joseph (19) the title of "her husband."

Ninth Lesson.

THIS one and the same Matthew therefore saith that Joseph was the husband of Mary, that the mother of Christ was a virgin, that Christ was of the seed of David, and that Joseph was in the pedigree of Christ from David. The only conclusion is that Mary herself was of the lineage of David, and that she was called the wife of Joseph in order of enumeration of sex, and on account of their union of soul, and that Joseph is included in the pedigree as her husband, lest it might otherwise seem as if he were parted from a wife to whom he was bound by oneness of heart.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Archbishop of Constantinople.] (4th on Matthew.)

"JOSEPH, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife." What is here to be understood by the words take unto thee? surely to keep her in his own home. As far as his mind went he had already put her away, but the Angel biddeth him to keep in his own home her whom in his own mind he had put away; her who was joined to him by God and not by their kinsfolk, joined to him not by the solemn covenant of wife and husband but in a common home, and that through the voice of an angel. Even as Christ did afterward commit her unto the disciple whom He loved, so now doth the Angel commit her unto her husband, to have his solace, but not to be bound to him by the tie of wedlock. Then doth he set forth more nobly and more worthily the reason of her motherhood so as to quench all jealousy. He declareth that not only hath she been defiled by no unlawful embrace, but that she is fruitful from a cause above nature and above usage. He biddeth him therefore not to sorrow over the joyful motherhood of his bride, but rather to rejoice the more, “for That Which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.”

Fifth Lesson.

“AND she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call His name JESUS.” That That Which was conceived in her was of the Holy Ghost was not to deprive him of that great office, albeit he had no part in producing this conception, since he knew her not. Nevertheless there is granted unto him that office which is the right of a father, and which yet can throw no shadow upon the glory of the Virgin, the office that is of naming the child. “Thou shalt call His name JESUS.” Albeit the Child that was conceived was not his own son, he nevertheless was to show toward it the care and tenderness of a father, and therefore he is charged with the duty of giving it a name; but lest it might hence have been surmised that he was indeed its father, the Angel saith not she shall bear thee a son, but, quite generally and indefinitely, she shall bear a son. Mary brought forth a JESUS not for Joseph only but for all mankind.

Sixth Lesson.

FOR this reason also doth the Evangelist give us to know that the name of the Child was revealed by an angel from heaven, to show us again how marvellous was this birth, wherein the name of the Child was taught to Joseph by an angel sent from God. Neither is this name, which surely containeth a thousand treasures of good, mentioned idly here. For the Angel himself doth interpret it that he may fill with hope such as mourn over lost good, and thus doth he bid him to believe what he saith. We easily obey the call to that which is pleasant unto us, and easily believe good news. For He shall save His people from their sins. Herein is set forth how new indeed are these good news. He is not to save them in any war with enemies which can be seen, nor from the sword of savages, but He is to save His people from something much worse than these, namely, from sin, and this is the salvation which no mere man can accomplish.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Comment. on Luke, Bk. iii.)

None need trouble himself on account of the words here written, “being [as was supposed] the Son of Joseph.” It is justly said that He was only supposed to be the Son of Joseph, since He was not the Son of Joseph by nature. He was supposed to be the Son of Joseph because He was the Son of Mary, who was the wife of Joseph. Thus dost thou find in Matthew xiii. 55, [1]“Is not this Joseph the carpenter's Son?” We have discussed above why the Lord of Salvation should have been pleased to have been born of a virgin, why He should have been pleased in especial to have been born of an espoused virgin, and why He should have been pleased to have been born of her at the special moment of the enrolment of the people, and it is now akin to discuss why we should have had a carpenter for His supposed father. By this image He setteth forth that His real Father was that Worker by Whom the world was made. We may not indeed compare the things of man with the things of God; but the type remaineth true that the very Father of Christ is One Who worketh by fire, and by the Holy Ghost. One Who as a good carpenter of the soul planeth away our faults, Who layeth His axe unto the root of these trees that bring not forth fruit, Who hath skill to cut away the scampy scionure to save those trees which point heavenward, to soften our hard hearts by the fire of the Spirit, and to turn all mankind into implements for divers uses.

Eighth Lesson.

WE might have wondered why the pedigree given us should be that of Joseph and not that of Mary, since it was Mary who conceived the Lord Christ by the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost, and Joseph is entirely apart from this generation. But in this we are enlightened by the custom of the Scriptures, which use to give pedigrees in the male line only. The personality taken is that of the male, through whom the rank of his family is handed down in parliament and in the other courts of the commonwealth. It would therefore have been an incongruity to have departed from the male line and resorted to the female, as though Christ had had no father who could be avowed to the world. The pedigrees of families are everywhere drawn up in the male line; no wonder, therefore, that the descent given should be that of Joseph. He who was born according to the flesh had needs follow the usage of the flesh, and He who was born into the world had needs be enrolled according to the custom of the world; and this all the more when the pedigree of Joseph and the pedigree of Mary are the same.

Ninth Lesson.

MATTHEW beginneth the pedigree of Christ with Abraham, but Luke traceth this same pedigree in the ascending line from Christ unto God. Luke deemeth that this pedigree should be traced up to God because God is the real progenitor of Christ, His Father by true generation, or the author of the mystic gift through the new birth in the washing of regeneration; and therefore he giveth not His descent from His first ancestor, but forthwith, after that he hath set forth His baptism, that he may show forth that God is by baptism the Author of all, he hath set forth that Christ is descended from God by line of pedigree, thereby weaving together the several truths that Christ is the Son of God according to nature, according to grace, and according to the flesh. No plainer declaration of this Divine Sonship can be given than that which this Evangelist hath given, when upon the very point of praising the earthly pedigree he hath recorded how "a voice came from heaven which said, Thou art My beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased."

[1] The quotation does not quite agree with the present Vulgate, which merely reads, Is not this the carpenter's Son? without naming Joseph.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd upon Luke i. 26.)

MARY was espoused to Joseph, or, as it would be better to express it in the very words of the Evangelist, to a man whose name was Joseph. He calleth him a man not because he was a husband, but by a title of excellency; or rather because, as another Evangelist hath it, he was not simply a man, but was rightly called her husband, as he was necessarily supposed so to be. He was thus called her husband because he must needs have been so supposed to be, as also he was deemed meet not in deed to be, but to be called, the father of the Saviour, since he was supposed so to be, as saith this same Evangelist: "And JESUS Himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the Son of Joseph."

Fifth Lesson.

WE cannot doubt but that a good and faithful man was Joseph, unto whom was espoused the mother of the Saviour. He was a faithful and wise servant whom the Lord set up for the comfort of His own mother, the fosterage of His own flesh, and then a faithful helper Whom His own great counsel formed upon earth. In addition thereto it is said that he was of the house of David. He was indeed of the house of David. This man Joseph was indeed of kingly race, noble by birth, but nobler in heart, he was indeed a son of David, and no unworthy descendant of David his father. He was indeed a son of David, not in the flesh only, but by loyalty and holiness and earnestness. One of whom the Lord might have given testimony, and said, "I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after Mine own heart, which shall fulfil all My will," (Acts xiii. 22.) A man who could say, like David, "The hidden secrets of Thy wisdom Thou hast made manifest unto me," (Ps. l. 7.) A man who was made "a minister, according to the dispensation of God . . . to fulfil the word of God; even the mystery which hath been hid for ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to His saints," (Col. i. 26.)

Sixth Lesson.

UNTO Joseph it was given not only to see and to hear that which many prophets and kings had desired to see and had not seen, and to hear and had not heard, (Luke x. 24,) but even to carry this, to lead it, to embrace it, to kiss it, to feed it, and to keep it. We must, however, believe that Mary as well as Joseph was of the house and lineage of David, since if she had not so been she would not have been espoused to one who was so. Both, therefore, were of the house of David, but in her was fulfilled that which the Lord had sworn in truth unto David, (Ps. cxxxi. 11,) saying, "Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon My throne," while Joseph stood by, the conscious witness of the fulfilment of the promise.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Commentary on Luke, Bk. iii. c. 3.)

That Matthew traceth the descent of the Lord through Solomon, and Luke through Nathan, seemeth to show that the one giveth the kingly descent of Christ and the other the priestly. We must not suppose that the one pedigree is truer than the other; they are equally true. He was, according to the flesh, of a family at once kingly and priestly. A king from kings and a priest from priests, and that was true of Him as touching things earthly which had been revealed of Him touching things heavenly, "The king shall joy in Thy strength, O Lord, . . . give the king Thy judgments, O Lord," (Pss. xxi. 1, and lxxii. 1,) and again, "Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedec," (cix. 4.)

Eighth Lesson.

BOTH spake the truth: Matthew attesteth the origin of Christ through kings, and Luke setteth forth the holier side of His origin, by tracing His pedigree through priests from God. This is a part of that fitness whereby (among the figures of the four living creatures which are taken to set forth the Evangelists) the figure of a calf is the figure which is appropriated to Luke, because he doth everywhere cleave unto the mystery of the priesthood, (and the calf is a beast offered in sacrifice by priests.) Neither shouldest thou marvel if the generations between Abraham and Christ be more according to Luke and fewer according to Matthew, since they do not trace the descent through the same persons, and some may have lived long lives and others short, as indeed we see many old men who are alive at the same time as their own grandchildren, whereas we see others who die soon after they have become fathers.

Ninth Lesson.

WE also remark that Matthew saith that Jacob, who was the father of Joseph, was the son of Matthan, and Luke saith that Joseph, the husband of Mary, was the son of Heli, and that Heli was the son of Malchi. How can the same man have had two fathers?—that is to say, both Heli and Jacob. He is said to have been the son of both, because he was the son of the one according to procreation, and the son of the other according to the law. [It is written in the law, (Deut. xxv. 5, 6,) "If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her. And it shall be, that the first-born which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israel."] The Jewish people did not understand that by this commandment of the law there was promised unto us a future continuance of the seed of the dead,[1] but accepted the passage according to the letter, and thus spoiled the grace of the revelation. For that other brother who raised up seed unto his dead brethren was not their brother according to the flesh but according to grace, and perchance, therefore, is it written, "brother redeemeth not, man redeemeth,"[2] for He by whom the grace of the resurrection of the dead hath been proclaimed is not a brother according to the flesh, but the "One Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim. ii. 5.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on Luke.)

IT is written, (Matth. i. 19), "Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily." Being a just man, he was not willing to make her a public example, because, as no one would be a just man who condoned the guilt which he knew, so would no one be a just man who condemned her whom he knew to be innocent. Being, therefore, a just man, and unwilling to make her a public example, he was minded to put her away privily. Wherefore was he minded to put her away? Take the opinion, which is not mine, but that of the fathers. Joseph was minded to put her away for the same reason for which Peter would have put away the Lord when "he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord," (Luke v. 8,) and for which the centurion would have had Him not to enter his house, saying, "I am not worthy that Thou shouldest enter under my roof," (vii. 6.)

Fifth Lesson.

THUS also did Joseph, looking upon himself as an unworthy sinner, say within himself that he was not worthy to dwell with one by whose marvellous exaltation above himself he was awestruck. He beheld her, and quailed before the evident manifestation of the Divine presence, and for as much as he could not understand the mystery he was minded to put her away. Thus is it written of Peter that "he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of fishes which they had taken," and thus also is it written that the centurion said, "Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto Thee," and thus did Joseph in his human lowliness quail before this new and wondrous thing. Neither needest thou wonder that Joseph deemed himself unworthy of the fellowship of the Virgin while she was great with child, since thou hearest that unto holy Elizabeth her presence was the cause of awe and reverence, and she cried out, "Whence is this to me that the mother of my Lord should come to me," (Luke i. 4.)

Sixth Lesson.

FOR this reason, therefore, was Joseph minded to put her away privily; but wherefore privily and not openly? That the cause of the divorce might not be inquired into and a reason demanded. What, indeed, could that just man have answered to that stiff-necked people, to that unbelieving and gainsaying people? If he had told them what he felt and what he knew concerning her purity, would not the unbelieving and cruel Jews have mocked at him and stoned her? In aftertimes they despised Christ even while He cried in the temple, how then would they have believed in Him while He lay silent in the womb? In aftertimes they laid wicked hands upon Him even while He was shining with miracles, what then would they have done unto Him while He was not yet seen? It is clear, therefore, wherefore this just man, since he would neither lie nor be forced to impute guilt to the innocent, was minded to put her away privately.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

AT that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that JESUS also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St John of Damascus. (3rd on the Birth of the Blessed Virgin.)

Matthew, for the opening of his work, saith: "The book of the generation of JESUS Christ, the Son of

---

[1] By the dead St Ambrose seems here mystically to understand the Jews themselves, but the meaning is very obscure.

[2] A peculiar adaptation of the Latin text of Ps. lxviii. 7.

David, the Son of Abraham;" neither doth he stop here, for he giveth the genealogy even unto the husband of the Virgin. Luke, after recording the manifestation of the Saviour on the occasion of His baptism, maketh somewhat of a parenthesis, and writeth thus: "And Jesus Himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the Son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli, which was the son of Matthat," and so on upward even unto "Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." Since the pedigree of Joseph is thus set forth, the pedigree of Mary, herself the virgin mother of God, is surely set forth as being the same as his. Since it is written in the law of Moses (Num. xxxvi. 8): "Every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers." And "even as the LORD commanded Moses, so . . . the daughters of Zelophehad . . . were married unto their father's brothers' sons; . . . and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father," (10-12.)

Eighth Lesson.

IT was not without reason that the conception of Christ by the Holy Ghost was not spoken of among the people, and that Joseph was adopted into the place of His father, and was consequently supposed to be so. Had this not been so, the Child would have been supposed to have been fatherless, because He had no recorded pedigree upon the father's side. For this reason the honoured Evangelists necessarily recorded the pedigree of Joseph. Had they not done so, but had recorded His pedigree upon His mother's side, they would have done that which would have been not only unseemly but also opposed to the usage of God's Scriptures. It was therefore convenient that they should give the pedigree of Joseph from David, and for the reason which we have already given of the kinship between her and her husband. They thereby attest that the Virgin Mary also was of the lineage of David.

Ninth Lesson.

IT is evident that Joseph was a just man, and conformed his life to the law; hence, according to the precept of the law, he took unto him a wife of his own tribe. If, therefore, Joseph were of the tribe of Judah and of the inheritance and family of David, doth it not follow that Mary was of the same race also? Hence it is that it is the lineage of the husband that is given. The Apostle Paul saith (Ephes. v. 23): "The husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church: and He is the saviour of the body." When, therefore, the pedigree of the head is given, doth it not follow that the pedigree of the body is given also? I judge it to be plain, therefore, that the giving of the pedigree of Joseph by the Evangelists is not useless, since it is evident that by this pedigree is set forth also the descent of the Virgin from David; and with her descent, that of Him Who by an exceeding wonder was born of her, even Christ the eternal Son of God.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Of Marriage and Concupiscence, Bk. I. c. 11.)

THE Angel spake not falsely unto Joseph when he said unto him: "Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife." He had not known her according to the flesh, neither was he ever so to know her. But she is called his wife in virtue of the truth which they had plighted together when they were espoused; and the absence of any fleshly union, either in the past or in the present, had not destroyed nor rendered untrue the wifely title. She was a virgin, and therefore she was pleasant unto her husband—in a way more holy and more wonderful, because she conceived without man's intervention; and, albeit his comrade in faith, as exalted above him as a parent. Because of this faithful espousal, the pair are rightly called together the parents of Christ; and not only is she when alone called His mother, but Joseph when alone is also called His father, albeit he was so in affection and not according to the flesh. But whether Joseph were His father by affection only, and Mary His mother in the flesh also, they were both the parents of His lowliness and not of His exaltation, of His weakness and not of His divinity.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Gospel lieth not where it is written (Luke ii. 33): "And His father and His mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of Him"; or again (41): "Now His parents went to Jerusalem every year at the Feast of the Passover"; and again a little after (48): "And His mother said unto Him, Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing. And He said unto them, How is it that ye sought Me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business." This was to show that besides them He had a Father Who had begotten Him without a mother; but to show that by so speaking He meant not to deny that they were His parents, the Evangelist addeth forthwith: "And they understood not the saying which He spake unto them. And He went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them." Unto whom was He subject but unto His parents? and who was subject unto them but Christ JESUS, Who being in the form of God thought it not robbery to be equal with God?

Sixth Lesson.

He Who was in the form of God was subject unto them because He had emptied Himself, and had taken upon Him the form of a servant, of the which form of a servant they were the parents; and yet both of them would not have been the parents even of this form of a servant unless they had been espoused to one another, albeit without fleshly connection. Hence it is that when the pedigree of Christ is to be traced, it is traced to Joseph; and thus no slight is cast upon the precedence of the male sex, while at the same time there is no dallying with truth, since Mary as well as Joseph was of that house and lineage of David wherefrom in accordance with prophecy the Messiah was born. In the marriage between these parents of Christ all the good things of marriage were present: offspring, troth, mystery. As for the offspring, we know it to have been the Lord Jesus Himself. The kept troth was there because neither of them committed adultery, and the mystery was preserved in that they were not divorced.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (iii. 21.)

At that time: When all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (36*th on the Baptism of Christ.*)

This day is in a sense a second birthday for the Saviour. We know that He was born with the same signs and the same wonders, but we know that he was now baptized with greater glory, for now doth God Himself proclaim: "Thou art My beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased." This is the second birth, [even that of water and the Holy Ghost,] truly more glorious than the first, [which was of the flesh.] In the first birth, [which was of the flesh,] the Christ came into the world unwitnessed and in silence. In the second birth, [which was of water and the Holy Ghost,] the Lord was baptized with the proclamation of His Godhead. On the occasion of the first birth Joseph, who was supposed to be His father, stood aside; but the record of the second is made the occasion to bring him forward. At the first birth His mother lay under suspicion because there was no avowed father, but at this second birth she is proclaimed honourable by the attestation of the Godhead of her Son. I say that the second birth was more honourable than the first. At the first Joseph the carpenter was reckoned as His father, at the second that title is claimed by the God of glory; and albeit it was of the Holy Ghost that the Lord was both born and baptized, nevertheless the Father that thundereth from heaven is greater than the father that toileth upon earth.

Eighth Lesson.

Joseph the carpenter was supposed upon earth to be the father of the Lord our Saviour; but his was a work from which is not excluded the true Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, even God, for God also is a Workman. God is a Workman Who by His power, not wondrous only, but by us unspeakable, hath made the world. He is the Architect Who by His wisdom hath hung above the heavens on high, Who hath laid the foundations of the earth, and Who hath girdled the seas with the pebbles of the shore. He is the Workman by Whose measurement the pinnacles of pride are laid low and the foundations of lowliness are built up. He is the Workman Who planeth away such things in us as are needless and keepeth those things which are worthy. He is that Workman of Whose art John the Baptist said (Matth. iii. 10): "Now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

First Sunday in May. The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled the Mother of the Lord our Shepherd.

Greater Double.

Whatever is not specially given here is from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633.)

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. He shall feed His flock like a shepherd: He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom. Alleluia.[1]

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Holy Mary, Mother of the Lord our Shepherd, * pray for us. Alleluia.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Antiphon. Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us see if the vine flourish, whether the tender grapes open: there will I give thee my breasts. Alleluia.[2]

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon (viii. 12.)

I, Wisdom, dwell with prudence, and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil: pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the double mouth, do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: understanding is mine; mine is strength. By me kings reign, and princes decree justice. By me princes rule, and nobles command righteousness. I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honour are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold and precious stones, and my revenue than choice silver. I walk in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and that I may fill their treasures.

[1] Isa. xl. 11.

[2] Cant. vii. 12.

First Responsory.

[1] Like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to thrown down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, to build, and to plant. Alleluia.

Verse. [2] My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill.

Answer. So will I watch over them, to build, and to plant. Alleluia.

Second Lesson.

THE Lord possessed me in the beginning of His ways, before His works of old. I was set up from everlasting, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was already conceived; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled in their strength, before the hills, was I brought forth: while as yet He had not made the earth, nor the rivers, nor the poles of the globe. When He prepared the heavens, I was there: when by a certain law He enclosed the depths in a circle: when He established the space above, and weighed the fountains of waters: when He gave to the sea his bounds, and laid a law upon the waters that they should not pass their borders: when He appointed the foundations of the earth: then I was by Him, ordering all things, and took my delight every day, rejoicing always before Him, rejoicing in the globe of the earth; and my delights were to be with the sons of men. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children: for blessed are they that keep my ways. Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

Second Responsory.

[3] My soul hath desired Thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek Thee early. Alleluia.

Verse. [4] I sleep, but my heart waketh: it is the voice of my beloved that knocketh.

Answer. Yea, with my spirit within me will I seek Thee early. Alleluia.

Third Lesson, as in the Common Office.

Third Responsory.

[5] As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered. Alleluia.

Verse. So will I seek out My sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day.

Answer. The day that he is among his sheep that are scattered. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. The day that he is among his sheep that are scattered. Alleluia.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Antiphon. [6] I will save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey. Alleluia.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.]

MY brethren, let us come and hold Mary by the feet, let us lie at those blessed feet and most earnestly entreat her. Let us hold her, and not let her go, except she bless us.[7] She is able to bless us; as the fleece between the dew and the floor,[8] as the woman between the sun and the moon,[9] so is Mary set between Christ and the Church. Perchance thou marvellest less that the dew be on the fleece only, and that it be dry upon all the earth beside, than that the woman be clothed with the sun. That the dew should drench the fleece is a marvel, but the greater marvel is it that the woman should be clothed with the sun. How can her weak nature stand unconsumed amid the intensity of his heat? Well didst thou wonder, O holy Moses,[10] when the Angel of the Lord appeared unto thee in a flame of fire out of the midst of the bush, and the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed, and thou didst say: I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt; but put off thy shoes from off thy feet, and lay aside the perplexities of human thought, if thou art fain to draw nigh thither.

Fourth Responsory.

[11] My flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them. Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. Alleluia.

Verse. He hath kept them safe from their enemies, and from deceivers defended them.

Answer. Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. Alleluia.

Fifth Lesson. (On the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.)

O MOTHER of mercy, the moon under thy feet—that is to say, the Church—calleth upon thee by the kindliness of thine heart, to plead for her with the sun—the Sun of Righteousness, — wherewithal thou art clothed, that in thy light she may see light, and by thy prayers may obtain the grace of that Sun Which, because He loved thee more than all, hath adorned thee by clothing thee with His robe of glory, and hath set upon thine head the crown of twelve stars. Thou art full of grace, thou art the fleece drenched with the dew, thou art overflowing with delight, leaning upon thy beloved. Lady! feed thy poor wretches this day, let even the dogs also eat of the crumbs that fall from thy table. [12] From the overflow of thy pitcher give thou drink, not unto the servant of Abraham only, but unto the camels also.

Fifth Responsory.

[13] [The Lord our God, He it is that] preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed. Alleluia.

Verse. [1] They made me keeper of the vineyards.

Answer. And among all the people through whom we passed. Alleluia.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.) (28th on the Saints.)

O BLESSED Mary, receive thou our thanks, meagre though they be, and unworthy of thee, and when thou receivest our prayers, by thy prayers obtain toleration for our faults. Let our entreaties come up into that sanctuary wherein thou hearest and grantest, and send us an answer of healing; let that which we bring through thee, through thee be forgiven. What we ask faithfully do thou obtain effectively; receive thou that which we offer, give us that which we entreat; save us from that which we fear, for thou art the sinner's only hope. Through thee we hope for the forgiveness of our sins, and in thee we look forward to a blessed reward. Receive the homage of thy servants who dwell in this land, [and who, because they have in so many and great dangers been holpen of thee, have, for a proof of their thankfulness to thee and of the good things which thou hast conferred upon them by defending them and shielding them, obtained from the Supreme Pontiff Pius VIII. this feast in thine honour, under the style of Mother of the Lord their shepherd,] that all the faithful may know thee for their watchful keeper who feedest them with food from heaven, may call upon thee, and may serve thee.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] I sat under his shadow in whom I delighted, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. Alleluia.

Verse. What wilt thou see in the Shulamite, but companies of armies.

Answer. And his fruit was sweet to my taste. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And his fruit was sweet to my taste. Alleluia.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Antiphon. [3] Thy lips drop as the honeycomb, honey and milk are under thy tongue. Alleluia.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 25.)

AT that time: There stood by the Cross of JESUS His mother, and His mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. And so on.

Homily by the blessed Peter Damian. (1st on the Birth of the Blessed Virgin Mary.)

O Virgin Mother of God! O Lady! at whose beauty the sun and the moon do wonder, help them whose cries are rising to thee: "Return, return, O Shulamite: return, return, that we may look upon thee," (Cant. vi. 13.) O thou that art blessed, and blessed exceedingly, return through thy nature; because thou hast been so drawn to God hast thou therefore forgotten our manhood? Nay, O Lady! thou knowest in what straits thou hast left us, where thy servants are lying, and how they fail. Ill would it become such mercy to forget such misery, for though glory may call thee away, nature still calleth thee back. Thou dost not in such sense make mention of God's righteousness, even of His only, that thou hast no mercy, nor because thou thyself canst not suffer canst thou not feel for the suffering. The nature which thou hast is ours and not another, and it is right that the dew of such goodness should fall abundantly upon us.

Seventh Responsory.

[4] My beloved is mine, and I am his: that feedeth among the lilies. Until the day break, and the shadows flee away. Alleluia.

Verse. I am my beloved's, and his desire is toward me.

Answer. Until the day break, and the shadows flee away. Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

RETURN through thy power: He that is mighty hath done unto thee great things, and all power is given unto thee in heaven and in earth: nothing is impossible with thee, with whom it is possible to raise up the hopeless unto the hope of blessedness. For how could that power withstand thy power, whose flesh sprang of thy flesh. Thou drawest nigh unto the golden altar of man's atonement, not praying only, but bidding, not as a handmaid, but as a lady. Be moved by thy nature, be moved by thy power. The mightier thou art, so much more oughtest thou to be merciful. It is a glory to power to abstain from revenge. Return through love, Lady! I know that thou art most kind, and that thou lovest with an unconquered love us whom thy Son and thy God loved with the highest love, in thee and through thee. Who knoweth how often thou dost cool the anger of the Judge when the might of justice is going forth from before God?

Eighth Responsory.

I will gather My sheep from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. Alleluia.

Verse. [5] I will feed My sheep, and I will cause them to lie down.

Answer. And I will feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. By the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. Alleluia.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday, but if the Feast be transferred, then the following:

RETURN through this that thou art alone, for in thine hands are the treasures of the mercies of the Lord, and thou alone art chosen to have grace given unto thee. God forbid that thine hand should be shortened, since thou seekest occasion to save the miserable and to pour forth mercy. It is not a diminution but an increase to thy glory when sinners who have been justified by pardon are taken up into glory. Return, therefore: return, O Shulamite—that is, thou despised one. Thou through whose soul the sword pierced, thou that art called the wife of the carpenter. And why shouldest thou return? "That we may look upon thee." Next to seeing God, the highest glory is to see thee, to cling unto thee, and to dwell in the stronghold of thy protection. O hear us! for thy Son honoureth thee by denying thee nothing—Thy Son, Who is God blessed for ever.

[3] Cant. iv. 11.

[4] Cant. ii. 16, 17, 7, 10.

[5] Ezek. xxxiv. 13, 15.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. [1] Let thy voice sound in mine ears, for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely. Alleluia.

Second Antiphon. [2] My beloved is gone down into his garden, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies. Alleluia.

Third Antiphon. [3] Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages. Alleluia.

Fourth Antiphon. [4] A fountain of gardens, a well of living waters, a stream from Lebanon. Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. [5] At our gates are all manner of fruits, new and old, which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved. Alleluia.

Verse. Fair and comely art thou, O daughter of Jerusalem. Alleluia.

Answer. Terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest thy flock, where thou layest thee down at noon, lest I begin to turn aside after the flocks of thy companions. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who, by Thine unspeakable Providence, art the Shepherd and Governor of the whole world, grant that the prayers of blessed Mary, always a virgin, who doth ever watch over us, may defend us from all enemies, until we are satisfied with the sweetness of Thy fruit, and may safely come home to our very fatherland, which is in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

The Antiphons at Prime, Terce, Sext, and None are the First, Second, Third, and Fifth of Lauds respectively.

SECOND VESPERS.

All from the Common Office, except the following.

Antiphons and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. Through thee, O Virgin Mary, may we draw the waters of salvation. Alleluia.

Answer. Out of the wells of the love and suffering of Christ thy Son.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. When JESUS therefore saw His mother, and the disciple standing by, whom He loved, He saith unto His mother, Woman, behold thy Son! Then saith He to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MAY 11.

The Blessed Martyrs John Rochester and James Walworth, Monks of the Charterhouse, and their Companions.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Martyrs in Paschal-time, (p. 576.)

Prayer throughout.

BE Thou magnified, O Lord, by the memorial of the passion of Thy blessed martyrs John and his fellows, wherethrough it hath pleased Thee in Thine unspeakable Providence to grant everlasting glory to them and an help to us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

YORK, which is the capital city of the northern province of England, is famous before all other cities in England, except London, for the shedding of the blood of martyrs in defence of the faith and of the obedience due to the Roman Pontiff. The first among these were two monks from the Charterhouse of London, that monastery of great fervour. They bore steadfastly the persecution of their own house and their own forcible transference to others, and after two years, because they refused to swear a sinful oath to the king, they followed in the footsteps of their Prior, the blessed John Houghton, and were condemned to death, and hanged at York upon the 11th day of May in the year 1537. Their bodies were hung in chains in a public place, until the birds had picked off all the flesh and the bones parted one from another and fell to the ground. These blessed martyrs, John Rochester and James Walworth, being Priests and professed Monks in the Order of the Charterhouse, suffered during the reign of King Henry VIII., who had decreed the punishment of treason against all who would not acknowledge with an oath the rightfulness of the power which he had taken to himself of exercising supreme authority in the Church of God.

Fifth Lesson.

DURING the reign of Elizabeth the persecution flamed out again for the same cause, and upon the 22nd day of August, in the year 1582, there suffered together at York the blessed Priests William Lacy and Richard Kirkman. William Lacy had some time held civil office, but, because he received priests as his guests and would not take part in the profane assemblies of the heretics, he was compelled to resign his office and to fly with his wife and children. He passed the next fourteen years in wanderings hither and thither, and after the death of the most excellent lady, his wife, he betook himself to Rheims and to Rome, to the end that, albeit advanced in years, he might take Holy Orders. After his ordination he came back to England, and toiled hard for two years in the gaining of souls. When at length he was arrested, and questioned, as use was, whether he acknowledged the Queen's primacy in the Church, he was condemned and executed, being glad, as he himself said, to go into the House of the Lord. Richard Kirkman was a Priest from the Seminary at Doway. When he was arrested by the heretics, he wrote it with his own hand that he was a Catholic Priest, wherefore he was forthwith declared to be guilty of death as one that led the Queen's subjects to embrace the Catholic religion. He received his sentence gladly, and cheerfully underwent a cruel death, professing that he was utterly unworthy of so great honour.

[2] Cant. vi. 2.
[3] Cant. vii. 11.
[4] Cant. iv. 15.
[5] Cant. vii. 13.

Sixth Lesson.

THERE were slain by the same kind of death, upon the 28th day of November in the same year, the blessed James Thompson; upon the 15th day of March in the year following, the blessed William Hart; and upon the 29th day of May the blessed Richard Thirkell. These three also were Priests, and the histories of all three were much the same. After a few years' work in England they were arrested, questioned touching their ordination and the spiritual jurisdiction of the Queen, and for this reason condemned to death and executed by hanging and the tearing out of their inward parts. While James Thompson was hanging he lifted up his hands to heaven, smote upon his breast, and signed himself with the sign of the Cross. William Hart died as he commended himself to God with the words, Unto Thee lift I up mine eyes. Richard Thirkell gladly received from the King of the Martyrs the same palm of martyrdom, for the which he had prayed for eight whole years. Gregory XIII. approved the honours paid to all these, and Leo XIII. by solemn decree confirmed the same.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (x. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.]

["For I am come to set a man at variance against his father."] What variance is this? Among the foremost commandments of the law we read, "Honour thy father and thy mother," (Ex. xx. 12); and the Lord Himself also saith, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you," (John xiv. 27); but here it is said, "I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Therefore henceforth public authority will be set before the failure of natural duty,—everywhere hatred, everywhere war, — and the sword of the Lord cutting fiercely between the father and the son, between the mother and the daughter.

Eighth Lesson.

A SWORD is the sharpest of all weapons, it is the symbol of the power of law, of the sternness of judgment, and of the punishment of evil-doers. In the prophets the preaching of the new gospel is oftentimes likened unto the sword. We remember that the Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, (Eph. vi. 17,) and this sword is sent upon earth, that is to say, the preaching of the Word of God entereth into the hearts of men. And there is sore variance in one house, and a man's foes are they of his own household, for through the Word of God he will rejoice in newness of spirit to remain separate from others both within and without, both in soul and in body.

Ninth Lesson.

HE proceedeth then in the same course of commandments and of understanding; for after that He had taught that all the things which are dearest in this world must be left, He said, moreover, "And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of me," for "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts," (Gal. v. 24,) and he is unworthy of Christ who taketh not up his Cross whereon to suffer with Him, to die with Him, to be buried with Him, and to rise again with Him, and so followeth after the Lord, in the mystery of the faith to live in newness of spirit.

MAY 12.

Lowliness of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

Verse. While I was yet a little one I pleased the Most High. Alleluia.
Answer. And I brought forth from my bowels God and Man. Alleluia.
Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour, for He hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden. Alleluia.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who knowest the proud from afar and hast respect unto the lowly, grant unto us Thy servants that we may ever copy with pure thoughts the lowliness of blessed Mary always a Virgin, who by her maidenhood was pleasant in the sight of our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, and in her lowliness did conceive the same, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs (viii. 5.)

[CHORUS.] Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, overflowing with gladness, leaning upon her beloved?

[The Bride.] Under an apple-tree did I rouse thee up. There was thy mother ravished, there was she deflowered that bare thee. Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm; for love is strong as death, jealousy is cruel as the grave. The lamps thereof are lamps of fire and flames.

Responsories from the Common Office.

Second Lesson.

[THE Bride.] Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it. If a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned. We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we will build upon her battlements of silver—if she be a door, we will furnish her forth with boards of cedar.

Third Lesson.

[THE Bride.] I am a wall, and my breasts like towers; whence it was that I found "Peace"[1] in his presence. "Peaceful"[1] hath a vineyard at "The-place-of-a-multitude,"[2] he hath let it out unto keepers; the man bringeth for the fruit thereof a thousand pieces of silver. Mine own vineyard is before me.[3] The thousand pieces be thine, O "Peaceful," and two hundred for them that keep the fruit thereof.

[The Bridegroom.] O thou that dwellest in the gardens! they that love thee are listening—cause me to hear thy voice!

[The Bride.] Flee away, my beloved! and be like to a roe or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On the Twelve Prerogatives.)

THOU readest in the Acts of the Apostles, (i. 12-14,) that "they returned unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, . . . and . . . all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication." Who did this? If, perchance, Mary were one of them, let her be named first, since she is above all, not by her motherhood only, but also by her holiness. But the writer saith that "when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphæus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of JESUS, and with His brethren." Did Mary then seem to be the lowest of women that she should be named the last of all? In good sooth the Apostles were carnal-minded, "for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that JESUS was not yet glorified," (John vii. 39,) "and there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest," (Luke xxii. 24.) Whereas Mary, who was greater than them all, humbleth herself, not only in all but before all. Rightly was the last made first, (Matth. xix. 30,) who being the first of all made herself the last; rightly was she who made herself the handmaid of all made the Lady of all; rightly hath she who in her unspeakable gentleness set herself after widow and penitent, and even after her out of whom had been cast seven devils—rightly indeed hath she been exalted above angels.

Fifth Lesson.

MY little children, I beseech you that if ye love Mary ye would copy this one of her graces. If ye would please her, try to be humble after her example. There is nothing which is so useful to a man as humility, nor anything which better becometh a Christian; and in the Virgin is manifest this grace of lowliness were it only from the fact that in the Acts of the Apostles she gently causeth herself to be named after all the other women. Traits of character are often hereditary, and among them lowliness and meekness, and by these things she has shown to be the natural mother of Him Who said, (Matth. xi. 29,) "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Pride is the mother of frowardness, and gentleness is born of true lowliness; nor is it only in the silence of Mary that we find her noble lowliness. The same is attested in her words also, "The angel answered and said unto her, . . . that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. . . . And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord," (Luke i. 35, 38.)

Sixth Lesson.

SO also when she came to visit her cousin Elizabeth, and her solitary glory was revealed by the Holy Ghost to her said kinswoman, so that that kinswoman marvelled at her coming and saluted her. "And Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost; and she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me. For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. And blessed is she that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord." These were her praises, but her earnest lowliness would suffer her to keep none of them for herself, but at once to refer them to Him of Whose pure goodness she had received everything that she had. "And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. For he hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaid."

[1] The name of the Bridegroom "Sh'lomoh" means "Peaceful."

[2] Baal-hamon, a place near Samaria. Whether it really means "The-place-of-a-multitude" and not rather a shrine of the idol Jupiter Ammon, is at least doubtful.

[3] The meaning seems to be that she afforded in herself a richer feast than any vineyard, and had it always at hand.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph; and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.]

Who is this virgin so worshipful that she should be saluted by an angel, and so lowly that she should be espoused to a carpenter? O how lovely a union of maidenhood and lowliness. That soul pleased God well wherein the maidenhood was graced by lowliness, and the lowliness adorned by maidenhood; but of what honour is she worthy when thou rememberest that in her motherhood ennobled lowliness, and delivery hallowed maidenhood. Thou hearest of this virgin and thou hearest that she is lowly; if thou canst not copy the virginity of the lowly one, copy the lowliness of the virgin. Virginity is praiseworthy, but lowliness is more needful. Virginity is advised, but lowliness is commanded. Thou art invited to virginity, but thou art bound to be lowly. Concerning celibacy, it is said, (Matth. xix. 11,) "All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." But concerning lowliness it is said, (Luke xviii. 17,) "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."

Eighth Lesson.

IN other words, thou canst be saved without being a virgin, but thou canst not be saved without being lowly. I say that lowliness pleaseth God when it bewaileth the loss of virginity, but I dare to say that the virginity of Mary herself would not have pleased God if she had not been lowly. The matter is therefore here plain: That Which was conceived in Mary was of the Holy Ghost, and her own testimony concerning the matter is that what God regarded was not the virginity but the lowliness of His handmaiden. Her virginity may have pleased Him, but it was her lowliness that gained her her motherhood.

Ninth Lesson.

O VIRGIN that art proud, what wilt thou say now? Mary remembereth no more that she is a virgin, but giveth thanks that the Lord hath regarded her lowliness; and thou who art not lowly dost flatter thyself concerning thy virginity. She saith the Lord hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden. These are the words of the holy, the wise, the devoted Virgin. Dost thou think thyself to be more chaste than she? dost thou think thyself to be more devoted than she? or dost thou think that thy virginity is so much higher than the chastity of Mary that thou canst thereby please God without lowliness, whereas she could not? The more excellent thou art by the gift of continency so much the more dost thou harm thyself if by the pollution of pride thou befoul within thee the grace of such a gift.

SECOND VESPERS.

Verse. While I was yet a little one, I pleased the Most High. Alleluia.

Answer. And I brought forth from my bowels God and Man. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed, for God hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden. Alleluia.

St Jean-Baptiste de la Salle, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the following.

MARTYROLOGY.

At Rouen, the holy Confessor Jean-Baptiste de la Salle, a man eminent for his services to religion and society in the education of the young, especially of the poor. He founded the Institute of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who, to school the poor in Christ's law and to solidly establish their children in the way of truth, didst raise up the holy Confessor Jean-Baptiste, and through him didst gather together a new household in the Church, grant of Thy grace, that helped by his prayers and following his example we may seek to serve Thy glory by a fervent love of souls, and be found worthy to share in his heavenly crown. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JEAN-BAPTISTE de la Salle was born of a noble family in Rheims. His character and conduct in boyhood foreshadowed his vocation to the priesthood and his future glory as a saint. He studied literature and philosophy at the University of Rheims, and while there he endeared himself to all by his virtue, his ability, and his sweet disposition, but at the same time he avoided the companionship of his fellow-students, the more easily to commune with God in solitude. At the age of sixteen, when he had already worn the tonsure for some years, he was made a Canon of Rheims. He proceeded to Paris in order to study theology at the Sorbonne, and was admitted into the Seminary of St Sulpice, but losing his parents soon after this, he was compelled to return home and undertake the charge of his brothers. This duty he fulfilled with excellent results, as was seen later, and meanwhile he continued his theological studies.

Fifth Lesson.

RAISED to the priesthood, he retained through life the wonderful spirit of faith and fervent devotion manifested in his first Mass. Inflamed with zeal for the salvation of souls, he spent himself in apostolic labours. He undertook the government of the Sisters of the Infant JESUS,—an association for the education of girls,—and showed the greatest prudence as their Superior; indeed the continued existence of that Institute was due to him. His attention was thus drawn to the need of religious education in the case of boys belonging to the working classes. This was the end for which God raised up His servant—to be the founder of a new congregation of religious men, and thus to make lasting and effectual provision for the education of boys, especially for the children of the poor. He successfully carried out the task put upon him by the Providence of God, in spite of much opposition and suffering, and founded his Congregation of the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

Sixth Lesson.

HIS associates in this severe and arduous work were lodged at first in his own house; later, more suitable premises were found, and under his training his disciples were filled with the spirit of the wise rule and constitutions which were afterwards approved by Benedict XIII. In his humility and love of poverty, he gave up his position as canon, bestowed all his property upon the poor, and, after repeated attempts, succeeded at last in resigning the government of the new Institute. While losing none of his interest in the congregation and the schools which by this time had been opened in many places, he was able to give himself more completely to God. He was merciless to himself in the constant practice of fasting, scourgings, and other austerities, and passed whole nights in prayer. At length, eminent for every virtue, especially for obedience, zeal for the fulfilment of God's will, and loving devotion towards the Apostolic See, he fell asleep in the Lord, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, full of merits and fortified by the Holy Sacraments. He was beatified by Leo XIII., and his glory shining brighter in further miracles, he was canonised in the year of Jubilee, one thousand nine hundred.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: Came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (60th on Matth. xviii.)

"Take heed," saith JESUS, "that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father"—and that for their sake am I come, and this is the will of My Father. Hereby the Lord stirreth us up to guard and save these little ones. Thou seest how mighty are the walls which He raiseth to protect little children, and how great thought and care He hath lest they should be lost, threatening on the one hand the uttermost punishment against whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Him, and promising on the other hand the highest reward to whosoever shall receive one such little child in His Name, and this His teaching He giveth both in His Own and in His Father's Name.

Eighth Lesson.

LET us therefore take ensample by the Lord, and let us leave nothing undone for the good of any of our brethren, even for such as seem to us the least and lowliest, but if there be any need that we should serve any, low and outcast though he be, let us serve him; though the thing look hard to us and calling for a great deal of work, let such things, I pray, be looked on as light and easy if they be required for our neighbour's salvation, for of such price and such care did God count his soul to be worth, that He spared not to purchase it, even His Own Son. (Rom. viii. 32.)

Ninth Lesson.

IF it be not enough for our salvation that we should ourselves live well, but we must also seek the salvation of others, what shall we answer if we neither live well ourselves nor exhort others? What hope that we shall be saved is then left to us? What more important task is there than to train up minds, and teach to the young how to live? He that is skilled to mould well the minds of children I reckon a nobler workman than any painter or sculptor, or such like artist.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled Mother of Grace.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. Alleluia.
Answer. The Lord is with thee. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Blessed Virgin Mary, thou art the channel of pardon,[1] thou art the mother of grace, thou art the hope of the world, graciously hear thy children who cry unto thee.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast granted unto mankind the grace of redemption through the fruitful virginity of the blessed Mary, mercifully grant that we, who upon earth do therefore style her the mother of grace, may enjoy for ever the grace of happy companionship with her in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Proverbs as in the Common Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Thomas. (1st on the Annunciation.)

MY strong desire hath been, as far as my poor powers permit, to praise Mary, the wonderful and most mighty mother of God, but I have hardly been able to find in the Bible anything in her praise which calleth forth directly her glory and her excellency. Many things were spoken concerning her by the Prophets, but such interpretation of these passages is a mystic interpretation, and facts are recorded here and there whence conclusions may be drawn as to the greatness of her power, by the Evangelists and Apostles. She is hardly ever mentioned, and even when she is, their expressions are seldom in her praise. To tell the truth, although she is not passed over by them altogether in silence, the glory of her graces is apparent in these writings only, as it were, by a ray of light visible through a small chink. Whence can we draw conclusion as to her glory, her graces, and the gifts of her soul, better than from the record of her wondrous conversation with the angel? From this conversation we learn that the angel styled her full of grace, and blessed among women, but we also learn from her own acts and words, an whole crop of points in her praise.

Fifth Lesson.

THE angel came in unto her rejoicing, and respectfully saluted her. "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee." Thou that art full of grace, thou that art to be filled with God, thou that art to be overshadowed by the power of the Highest,—thou that art full of grace, thou of whose fulness all do receive, thou from whose overflow the whole world is to be filled,—thou that art truly full, thou whose soul is so filled up with grace that there is no room left in it for sin, and no entrance left open for iniquity. The Lord is with thee, and in what manner is He with thee? Not as He is with me, but as He is nowhere else,—He is with thee in thy body, He is with thee in thy mind, He is with thee in thy soul, He is with thee in thy thoughts, He is with thee in thy womb, He is with thee to help thee, He is with thee to spring in thee, He is with thee to come forth out of thee, He is with thee till the end, and He is with thee without end.

Sixth Lesson. (2nd on the Annunciation.)

WHEN she had received the message of the heavenly ambassador, Mary said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word." This creature, who by a sublime mystery, and by the quickening influx of the Deity from on high, was about to conceive God, recordeth the fact, that she is an handmaid about to bring into the world a Son, Who was to be in the world as He that serveth. (Luke xxii. 27.) "Be it unto me according to thy word,"—and at her word the Word of God forthwith took flesh in her womb. "Be,"—by this word God made the world. "Be,"—by this word the Most High created the heavens and the earth. But no such a "Be" hath ever sounded on this planet as thou hast now uttered, O thou blessed virgin. O what a word of power! What a word of living force! What a word to be honoured for ever above other words! "And it was so." What was so? Who can tell what was so? Nature is staggered, the judgment is arrested, the senses are stupefied, the tongue is arrested, the reason faileth, the understanding understandeth not what followed in Mary when she had uttered those words, "be it done unto me according to thy word."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (i. 26.)

AT that time: The Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin's name was Mary. And so on.

Homily by St Augustine, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Sermon 291. On the birth of St John the Baptist.)

And the same Angel himself said unto the Virgin Mary, "Hail, thou that art full of grace, the Lord is with thee." He that will be in thee is already with thee. Tell me, then, O thou messenger of God, how shall this be. Behold, the angel that knoweth and the virgin that questioneth but distrusteth not. When then he seeth her questioning but not distrusting, he refuseth not to tell her. Give ear how this shall be. It shall be thy virginity, only do thou believe the truth. Keep thy virginity, accept motherhood, but inviolate; as thy faith is unbroken, so also shall thy body be. Give ear, then, how this shall be,—"The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee,"—since by faith thou dost conceive, since by faith thou shalt be with child, and not by coming together. "Therefore also that holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." What art thou? Thou that art hereafter to give birth, whence hast thou earned this, whence hast thou received this, whence is it that

---

[1] Veniæ vena.

He Who made thee is made in thee? Whence, I say, doth this great good happen to thee? Thou art a virgin, thou art holy, thou hast vowed a vow, but great is what thou hast earned, yea verily, great is that which thou hast received.

Seventh Responsory.

O Virgin, most merciful, we fly to thy patronage; receive us, O thou our only hope, and let it please thee that we should praise thee, unworthy though we be. We praise thee, who art worthy of all praise. Alleluia.

Verse. Take away from us our iniquities, that we may be worthy to sing the song of thy glory.

Answer. Unworthy though we be. We praise thee, who art worthy of all praise. Alleluia.

Eighth Lesson.

WHENCE hast thou earned this? He that made thee is made in thee, He by Whom thou hast been thyself made is made in thee; yea verily, the Word of God, by whom the heavens and the earth were made, by whom all things were made, is in thee made flesh, not by conversion of the Godhead into flesh, but by taking of the manhood unto God, the Word is joined unto flesh, the Word is wedded unto flesh, and the bridal chamber for this great marriage is thy womb. I say thy womb is the bridal chamber for the great marriage of the Word and the flesh, whence the Word shall be as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, (Ps. xviii. 5.) At His conception He findeth thee a virgin, and a virgin He leaveth thee at His birth. He giveth thee fruitfulness without taking away thy maidenhood. Whence cometh this unto thee? Impudently do I seem to interrogate the virgin, and rudely to assail with my voice her bashful ears. But I see the virgin, bashful though she be, answering me nevertheless, and admonishing me. Askest thou of me whence this cometh unto me? I am abashed to reply by telling thee my good. Listen to the salutation of the Angel, and acknowledge in me thy salvation. Believe Him Whom I believed. Why askest thou me? Let the Angel answer. Tell me then, O Angel, whence cometh this to Mary: I have told it already when I saluted her, saying, Hail thou that art full of grace.

Eighth Responsory.

O Virgin Mary, mother of the eternal King, thou art the gate of heaven and the star of the sea, do thou make us well pleasing in the sight of thy Son, for all power and beauty and glory shine from thee. Alleluia.

Verse. Thou art the channel of pardon, thou art the mother of grace, thou art the hope of the world, graciously hear us when we cry unto thee.

Answer. For all power and beauty and glory shine from thee. Alleluia.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For all power and beauty and glory shine from thee. Alleluia.

Ninth Lesson. (290*th. On the Saints.*)

WHEN Mary said unto the Angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man, her words were the utterance of inquiry, not of hopelessness. While she asked him, she had no doubt of the truth of his promise. Truly was she full of grace, as indeed the Angel had saluted her, Hail, thou that art full of grace. Such grace who can explain, to such grace who can render worthy thanks? Man is created, and man perisheth through freewill, and He Who made man is Himself made man, that that which He had made might not perish. God the Word, who was in the beginning with God, and by Whom all things were made, is made flesh. "The Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us." The Word is made Flesh, not by conversion of the Godhead into Flesh, but by taking of the manhood unto God. O what grace! How were we worthy that we should have it?

SECOND VESPERS.

Verse. Hail, Mary, full of grace. Alleluia.

Answer. The Lord is with thee. Alleluia.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O Blessed Virgin Mary, thou art the channel of pardon, thou art the mother of grace, thou art the hope of the world, graciously hear thy children who cry unto thee.

Trinity Sunday.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MARGARET, Countess of Salisbury, was one of the descendants of King Edward III., and was born at Farley Castle, in Somersetshire, in the year 1471. From her youth up she suffered adversities, and bore them with such grace that her whole life may be said to have been a preparation for martyrdom. At the age of seven she was deprived of both her parents, her mother dying not without suspicion of poison, and her father, George, Duke of Clarence, being put to death within the Tower of London upon an accusation of treason by his brother, King Edward IV. In like manner, under King Henry VII., she lost her brother, Edward, Earl of Warwick, and by his execution was left the last survivor of the kingly race of the Plantagenets. Henry VII., for his own interest, gave her in marriage to Sir Richard Pole, one of the most distinguished members of his own party. In this wedlock she bore five sons, of whom the fourth was Reginald, afterwards Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury, who was used to say that he set far more store by being the son of a martyr than by being the descendant of kings.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Henry VIII. ascended the throne and took to wife Katharine, daughter of the King of Spain, Margaret, whose husband had died after ten years of married life, was taken into the household of the Queen, whom she faithfully served as far as lay in her power throughout her whole life. She was appointed governess to the Princess Mary, afterwards Queen of England; and when the king iniquitously put away his wife and separated her daughter from her, Margaret took towards the princess the place of her mother, and so brought her up and taught her as that she should ever cleave to that mother's faith and godliness. By command of the king, Margaret and her royal pupil were moved from house to house, and among others they at one time occupied the royal manor called New Hall, in the which place is now a monastery of Canonesses of the Holy Sepulchre of our Lord Jesus Christ, by the whom her memory is held in profound reverence.

Sixth Lesson.

AS the king became more hardened in iniquity, and had abandoned the obedience and communion of the holy apostolic see, the wrath which he conceived but was unable to indulge against the Cardinal Reginald Pole he turned against his mother and his whole kinsfolk, and by a new invention of injustice refused to allow them to be brought to trial or to receive sentence from judges, but by an act of his slavish Parliament deprived them of all legal rights and ordered them to be put to death unheard and defenceless. Thus did he murder Margaret's eldest son, and after he had kept herself for two years in prison this cruel king caused to be beheaded, in her seventieth year, that venerable matron, his own near kinswoman, because she would not agree to his sacrilegious novelties. Her last words before death were, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake." (Matth. v. 10.) Gregory XIII. approved the paying to her of the honours due to a martyr, and the same was confirmed by Leo XIII.

MAY 31.

Octave of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled Help of Christians.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Commentary of the Holy Pope St Gregory on the Books of Kings (I. c. i.)

"NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaïm-zophim, of Mount Ephraïm." The name of Mount Ephraïm may be applied to the most blessed Mother of God, always a Virgin. She was indeed a mountain, the glorious height of whose predestination towered above the predestination of any other creature. Was not Mary a lofty mountain, Mary, who, that she might reach the dignity of conceiving the Eternal Word, lifted up the peaks of her holiness far above all the companies of angels, even unto the footstool of God? Prophesying of this mountain's sublime elevation, Isaiah saith: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills." (ii. 2.) She was indeed a mountain on the top of the mountains, for the height of Mary shone high over that of any of the Saints.

Fifth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Letter of the Holy Pope Leo to the Empress Pulcheria. Ep. xiii.

NO type fully represented the mystery of our Redemption, which had been predestined from everlasting, for the Holy Ghost had not yet come upon a Virgin, nor the power of the Highest overshadowed her, that within her inviolate womb, Wisdom might build herself an house, the Word be made Flesh, and the form of God and the form of a servant be united in one Person,—the Maker of times be born in time, and He by Whom all things were made be brought forth into the midst of all. Unless a new Man, made in the likeness of sinful flesh, had taken our nature upon Him—unless He that is of one Substance with the Father had been pleased to become of one substance with His Mother[1]—unless He, Who alone is without sin, had joined our nature to His Own—mankind would still have remained bound under the yoke of the devil.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Commentary of the Holy Bishop Basil on Isaiah the Prophet.

"AND I went in unto the Prophetess," said Isaiah, "and she conceived and bare a son." (viii. 3.) That Mary was a Prophetess unto whom Isaiah went in very closely by the spirit of fore-knowledge, will be denied by none who remembereth what she said, when she was filled with the spirit of prophecy. For what said she? "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. For He hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." If thou wilt ponder all her words, thou wilt not gainsay that she was a Prophetess, upon whom the Holy Ghost came, and whom the power of the Highest overshadowed.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xi. 27.)

AT that time: As JESUS spake unto the multitude, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto Him, Blessed is the womb that bare Thee. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (20th on John ii.)

Thou hearest that "a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto Him, Blessed is the womb that bare Thee, and the paps which Thou hast sucked. But He said, Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it." Think not that by these words He meant to set lightly by His mother, but rather to show that to be His mother would in itself have been of no use to her if she had not been eminent in goodness and in faith. But if a mother's love would have been of no avail to Mary without virtue, much less can the goodness of a father, a brother, a mother, or a child be of any good unless we bring thereto somewhat of our own.

Eighth Lesson.

FOR a man's only hope, after the grace of God, is in his own good deeds. If kinship according to the flesh had by itself profited Mary, the same thing would have profited the Jews, who were Christ's fellow-countrymen; it would have profited his fellow-townsmen, as the city wherein He was born; it would have profited His brethren. But while His brethren concern themselves with their own affairs, their kinship to Him profiteth them nothing; but they were condemned with the rest of the world. (John vii. 1-8.)

Ninth Lesson.

THEY admired themselves in the glory of their own excellency, but His fatherland derived no profit, and fell, and was burnt up; His fellow-citizens were slain, and perished miserably; His kinsfolk according to the flesh got no salvation, because they had taken no shelter under His power. The Apostles took the chief place, because they betook themselves by true obedience to seek His knowledge and friendship. Hence we understand that we are always in need of faith, and a life enlightened by grace, and that these are the only things which can save us.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

I AM behoven to speak by the joyful and godly festival whereby we celebrate the triumphant suffering of this blessed martyr. The Church no doubt was then sorrowful, not for any loss that had come to him who fell, but because of her own longing after him who left her, being still fain to see present with her the good ruler and teacher; but they who had been anxious during the conflict were comforted by the victor's crown, and now we read over again what things were then done, not only without sadness, but even with great gladness. And this day it is granted unto us not to fear but to rejoice. We do not look forward with dread for Him Who will come with terror, we gladly await His return.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN the death of the body was at hand a shepherd's watchfulness, and the care for the Lord's flock, died not in the shepherd's soul. Until the last day of his life he preserved his thoughtful care, and when the bloody hand of the hangman was at him it could not strike from him the foresight of the faithful steward of the mysteries of God. The knowledge that he was about to be a martyr did not make him forget that he was a bishop; and he was more concerned as to the account which he was to render to the Chief Shepherd of the sheep which had been committed to his charge, than as to the answer which he was to make to the unbelievers concerning his own faith. He loved Him Who had said unto Peter, "Lovest thou Me? Feed My sheep." He fed His sheep, and was making ready after His ensample to shed his blood for them.

Sixth Lesson.

THERE had gone before him many martyrs whom by his burning exhortations he had kindled to overcome the evil one. It was just that, as he had sent them before him by truth speaking, he should fearlessly follow them by suffering. What are we to speak on such a subject? How are we to rejoice at the idea of such joy? How are our heart and our mouth to break forth as we have here before us his shrine, as we have the solemn feast this day, as we have that noble example given to us? Let all our bones say, Thanks be to God.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS, seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain: and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

These beatitudes are eight in number, and after uttering them He seemeth to gather them together, as He saith to them that were present: "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you." What He had said before He had said generally. He had not said blessed are ye poor in spirit, for yours is the kingdom of heaven, but theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Neither had He said blessed are ye meek, for ye shall inherit the earth, but they shall inherit the earth; and so with the rest, even until the eighth beatitude, where He saith: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Eighth Lesson.

AND now He beginneth to speak, as though gathering in one all who were present, since those things which He had spoken above touched them that had been present to hear them, and those things which He spake now, and which seemed particularly addressed to them that were present, touch them also that are absent or that are yet to come. We must therefore consider carefully the number of these beatitudes. His blessings begin upon lowliness—blessed are the poor in spirit; blessed are they that are not puffed up; blessed are they whose souls are brought into subjection under the authority of God; blessed are they who even, if perchance they seem to themselves to be blessed in this life, are afeard lest they go into punishment when this life is over.

Ninth Lesson.

THEN he cometh to the meek, who through godliness so show themselves in the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, who dare not to speak against things which to the unskilled appear to be absurd, and to make themselves rebellious through stubborn reasonings, but who gather hence with what fetters of the world such men are bound through carnal custom and through sin.

JUNE 9.

Fifth Day within the Octave of St Boniface.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(In Paschal-time.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.]

WHEN the tabernacle of this body is dissolved the shadow of death encompasseth us, and yet we still walk in life, and by the power of Christ we go forward without stumbling in the very midst of the conditions of the nether world itself. It was of this that the prophet spoke when he said (Ps. xxii. 4): "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me"; and this is what the Lord Himself hath said even more plainly concerning His faithful ones (John xi. 25)—namely, "He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever believeth in Me shall never die."

Fifth Lesson.

WHEREFORE, O brethren, let us talk with the holy martyrs touching the glory of the Lord's passover. They have a much wider knowledge of all things than we have; but still, let us tell them how He rose upward from the womb of the grave, and let them tell us how He rose upward into the grave from the womb of the nether world. Let them tell us how the cold and breathless body became warm again, how the breath again entered into it, how the blood began to flow, and how the stiff veins began to throb again.

Sixth Lesson.

LET them tell to us how the dead system of nerves and muscles set again into motion the dead tabernacle of the body, and how the breath of life set the organs again into play in their old harmony after they had ceased to work any more. Let Priests proclaim to them that are above us what wonders the Lord wrought after that He was risen again, and let the martyrs tell us what help He brought to the departed even in death itself.

(Out of Paschal-time.)

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

CHRIST was a good shepherd. What was Peter? Was not he a good shepherd also? Did not he also lay down his life for his sheep? What was Paul? What were the other Apostles? What were the blessed Bishops who have suffered martyrdom since then? What was [Boniface?] Were they not all good shepherds? Were they not none of them hirelings such as they of whom it is said (Matth. vi. 1, 2, 5) that they have received their reward? and all these were good shepherds. Not only because they have laid down their lives, but because it was for the sheep that they laid it down. They laid it down not from obstinacy but from love.

Fifth Lesson.

THERE are heretics who have had to smart for their crimes and faults, and these people call themselves martyrs. They are wolves who find it easier to steal when by this lie they disguise themselves in sheep's clothing. How they really ought to be reckoned ye may learn from the Apostle Paul, who was himself a good shepherd. "If," saith he, (1 Cor. xiii. 3,) "I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." The heretics are to be reckoned not as those who lay down their lives for the sheep, but rather as those who laid down their lives in the attempt to destroy the sheep. They may shed their blood, and they may give their bodies to be burned, but it profiteth them nothing because they have not charity. With charity all things profit, but without charity nothing profiteth.

Sixth Lesson.

WHAT good is this charity, O brethren? Is there anything dearer or brighter or firmer or safer or surer? But how can he who loveth not unity, even when he hath been convicted, be said to have even a little charity? And this unity the Lord would commend unto us when He commendeth good shepherds unto good shepherds, and yet would not that the good shepherd should be called more than one. Peter and Paul and the other Apostles, and the holy Bishops who have been after them, such as [Boniface,] were all good shepherds, and yet the Lord commended not unto the good shepherds divers good shepherds, but only one good shepherd. "I," saith He, (John x. 11,) "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain: and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

["Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth."] In this third step wherein there is knowledge, there is grief for the loss of the highest good, for there is still cleaving unto the things which are lowest. ["Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."] In this fourth step there is toil. The soul maketh mighty efforts to wrench itself away from those things which have fixed it to them by their poisonous sweetness; hence there is hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and there is much need of a strong mind, for what is loved is not left without sorrow. ["Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy."] At this fifth step there is given unto them that toil on a counsel of deliverance, for unless any be holpen of a stronger than he, he is unfit to free himself from the snares of misery wherein he is entangled; and it is but just that whosoever would be holpen of him that is stronger than he, should himself help him that is weaker than he, in that wherein he is himself stronger, and thus "blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy" from God.

Eighth Lesson.

["BLESSED are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."] In this sixth step we have that which is the end of the commandment, even charity out of a pure heart and of a good conscience (1 Tim. i. 5,) of good works, a pure heart which is able to gaze upon that highest good that can be seen only by a pure and calm understanding. ["Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."] Lastly, we find in the seventh step wisdom—that is to say, the contemplation of the truth which proclaimeth peace throughout the whole man, and taketh upon itself the very image and likeness of God, for the which reason it is said that "blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." And the eighth beatitude returneth back again unto the head, for it showeth and proveth that which is finished and perfect; for the which reason also it is the kingdom of heaven which is named in the eighth beatitude, even as also it was named in the first—"Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven"—"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Ninth Lesson is of SS. Primus and Felician, the two Lessons being read together as one, and the same Saints are commemorated at Lauds.

JUNE 9.

In the Diocese of Portsmouth.

Translation of St Edmund, Archbishop of Canterbury, Confessor.[1]

Greater Double.

The whole is from the Common Office for a Bishop and Confessor, (p. 612,) except the Prayer, which is as follows.

O GOD, by Whose grace we honour the translation of Thy blessed Confessor Bishop Edmund, grant unto us for his sake and at his prayers, to be so freed from the bondage of sin as to be able to pass hence unto the joy of Thy kingdom in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SS. Primus and Felician are commemorated at Vespers and at Lauds.

At Mattins the Ninth Lesson is omitted or read along with the Eighth to make room for their two Lessons, which are read together as one.

JUNE 11.

In the Diocese of Nottingham, the Feast of St Barnabas, Apostle, Titular of the Cathedral Church, is kept as a Double of the First Class with an Octave.

JUNE 12.

Octave of St Boniface.

Double.

All as on his Feast-day, except the following.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Basilides and his Companions.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St John Chrysostom, [Patriarch of Constantinople.] (On St Ignatius.)

BETHINK ye, my brethren, at what a time it was that blessed [Boniface] attained the dignity of the episcopate. At that time there were not the same means of governing the Church that there now are. It is one thing to follow many other travellers upon a path which they have worn smooth and made ready for us, and another to hew out a path for the first time, where the way is rough and rocky, the place filled with wild beasts, and where no traveller has ever gone before. Whichever way one might turn the eyes, then, one could have seen nothing but precipices and pitfalls, wars, contendings and dangers: emperors and kings and peoples and states and nations and foes from within and from without lay in wait for believers.

Fifth Lesson.

AS then we should admire not that captain who bringeth his passengers safely into port when the sea is calm and the ship is borne onward by a friendly breeze, but him who is able to steer and to save his ship when the ocean is raging and the winds are howling, when the passengers are fighting among themselves, and the crew are agitated by the wildness of the storm. Even so ought we to regard and to admire, much more than those who govern the Church now, those who ruled her then, when there were many fightings within and without. When the plant of the faith was much weaker than it is now, and had much more need of care, and when the people, the new-born offspring of the Church, called for great prudence and wisdom of soul on the part of him who was to be their foster-father.

Sixth Lesson.

BUT we must not take up our whole time in contemplating his work as a shepherd, so as to leave unsaid the things which concern him as a martyr. The devil is very acute and very clever in setting traps, and he deemed that if he could once get rid of the shepherds, he could easily ravage the sheep-folds. But He who taketh the wise in their own craftiness (Job v. 13) suffered it to be so, that He might show that His churches are not governed by men, but that they who believe in Him are alway governed by Him. When the rulers were taken away, His religion was not wiped out, neither the preaching of His truth silenced, but the rather increased, that the martyr himself and they that ministered unto him might all alike be made to understand that the teaching of Christianity doth not depend upon man, but hath its foundations in heaven, and that it is God Himself Who is the Protector of the Churches everywhere.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (v. 1.)

AT that time: JESUS seeing the multitudes, went up into a mountain: and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo,] (on the Lord's Sermon on the Mount, i. 5.)

"Blessed are ye," saith the Lord, "when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake: rejoice, and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." If any man under the name of Christian seek for the enjoyments of this world and the possession of temporal goods, let him call to mind that our blessedness is a blessedness within, even as the mouth of the prophet hath spoken concerning the soul of the Church that "the king's daughter is all glorious within," (Ps. xliv. 14,) without she is reviled, and persecutions and slanders are her promised portion, but great is the reward which she will receive for them in heaven; and this is felt in the hearts of them that suffer them, and who are already able to say "we glory in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us." (Rom. v. 3-5.)

---

[1] The occasion commemorated is that when, according to Alban Butler, "in 1247, his body was taken up and found entire, and the joints flexible. It was translated with great solemnity, in presence of St Lewis, Queen Blanche, and a number of Prelates and Noblemen."

Eighth Lesson.

THE mere suffering of such things is not in itself fruitful. What is fruitful is to suffer them for Christ's Name's sake, not only patiently, but even joyfully. There are many heretics who deceive souls under Christ's Name, and who suffer many things of this sort, but there is no reward for them in heaven, for the Lord said not, Blessed are they which are persecuted, but, Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; and where there is not right faith, there cannot be righteousness, for it is written, "the just shall live by faith," (Heb. ii. 4; Rom. i. 17.) Neither can the schismatics promise themselves any share in that reward, for there cannot be righteousness where there is not love, for it is written, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbour," (Rom. xiii. 10,) and if they had love, they would not rend the body of Christ, which is the Church.

Ninth Lesson of St Basilides and his Companions, of whom also a Commemoration is made at Lauds.

JUNE 18.

Octave of St Barnabas, Apostle.

Double.

All from the Common Office of Apostles, (p. 583,) except the Prayer, which is as upon the Feast-day, and the following.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of SS. Mark and Marcellian.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.[1]

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Eighty-sixth Psalm by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.]

"HER foundation is in the holy mountains: the LORD loveth the gates of Zion." Wherefore hath the city twelve foundations, and in them the names of the Prophets and of the Apostles of the Lamb?[2] Because their authority is the foundation whereon our weakness resteth. Wherefore are they the gates?[3] Because through them we enter in unto the kingdom of God, since they have preached the same unto us, and when we enter in through their preaching, we enter in by Christ, Who is Himself The Door. (John x. 7.) And, whereas it is written that the city hath twelve gates, and, again, that Christ is the one Door, Christ is all the twelve, for He is in all the twelve: and therefore were twelve Apostles chosen. There lieth a great mystery in the signification of this number, Twelve. "Ye shall sit," saith the Lord, "upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israël."

Fifth Lesson.

IF then there be set there twelve thrones of judgment, (Ps. cxxi. 5,) Paul, in that he is the thirteenth Apostle, hath not where to sit, nor wherein to judge. Nevertheless, he hath said of himself that he will judge not men only, but angels. "Know ye not," saith he, "that we shall judge angels?" (1 Cor. vi. 3,)—that is, the fallen angels. Then might they have answered him: "Wherefore boastest thou thyself to be a judge? For where is thy seat? The Lord hath said that for the twelve Apostles there shall be twelve thrones: one of the twelve, even Judas, is indeed fallen, but holy Matthias is chosen into his place; for the twelve thrones there are still twelve to sit thereon: first find whereon thou shalt sit, and afterward give thyself out for a judge." Let us see, then, what is the meaning of these twelve thrones. By them is signified in a mystery the whole world, since the Church shall be through all the earth, whence this building is called to be built up together in Christ.

Sixth Lesson.

THEREFORE is it said that there shall be twelve thrones, because from all quarters shall there come men to be judged; even as it is said that the city hath twelve gates, because from all quarters shall the nations of them which are saved enter into it. So, not the twelve only, and the Apostle Paul, but all, as many as shall judge, have part in these twelve thrones, this signifying, that they shall judge all men; even as all that enter into the city have part in her twelve gates. For there are four quarters of the world, the East, and the West, and the North, and the South: of which four quarters is mention often made in the Scriptures. From the four winds shall the elect be gathered together, as saith the Lord in the Gospel: "And He shall send His Angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Matth. xxiv. 31.) From the four winds, therefore, is the Church called together; and how are they called? Everywhere are they called in the Trinity; for they are called no otherwise than by baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. (Matth. xxvii. 19.) Now four being multiplied by three is twelve.

[1] The English Proprium says nothing about the Lessons of these two Nocturns, but the above are the Lessons given for this Octave in the Octavarium Romanum, published for the use of the whole world, those of the Third Nocturn being special, and those of the Second from the Common Octave Day of all Apostles.

[2] A sort of quotation from or allusion to Apoc. xxi. 14, but there the Prophets are not mentioned.

[3] Apoc. xxi. 12, says that on the gates were written the names of the twelve tribes of Israël.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 16.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (34*th on Matthew.*)

Consider well who they are that undertake so difficult and toilsome an enterprise, — timid men to wit, and uncultivated, illiterate, rough, and of no account, strangers utterly to the teaching of the philosophers, almost strangers even to public life and business, fishermen merely and tax-gatherers beset with difficulties that might well indeed have disheartened them. Their task was one to dismay the lofty and renowned. How could it fail to discourage inexperienced common folk into whose minds the thought of great deeds had never entered? And yet they were not cast down nor troubled. Nor had they reason to be so, some one may say, for they knew well that they had the power to cleanse lepers and to cast out devils.

Eighth Lesson.

For my part, however, I do not hesitate to maintain that this very power of theirs might well itself have confounded them. Since they who would have so great a power as to be able even to raise the dead to life, must needs at the same time undergo such perils, endure such wars waged against them, be dragged bound before judges and in the end reviled with one voice by all the world. What was there amid all this to console them? This only—the might of Him Who sent them. Wherefore He puts this before all, saying, Behold! I send you. Let this suffice for all your consolation, this be your strength to confess Me before men. Do ye see how great is His authority? Do ye clearly understand that His power is exceeding great? Do ye perceive that His might is invincible?

The Ninth Lesson is of SS. Mark and Marcellian, who are also commemorated at Lauds.

Sunday before the Nativity of St John Baptist.

The Blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Perpetual Succour.

Greater Double.[1]

All from the Common Office for Feasts of the Blessed Virgin, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Hymn. Hail, thou star of ocean.

Verse. Lady! thou art a refuge for us.

Answer. [2]A refuge in times of trouble.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O holy Mary, &c.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Holy and stainless Mary, Virgin Mother of God, * cease not to pray for us to thy Son Jesus.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Common Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson as in the Common Office, with the Fifth Lesson down to the word "earth," (p. 637.)

Fifth Lesson. "What thing holier" in the Fifth Lesson in the Common Office to the end, and the whole of the Sixth Lesson, (p. 637.)

Sixth Lesson.

IT is well to recall that in order that no grace might be wanting in Mary, the sweet advocate of man, the providence of God hath brought it to pass that even her images should be held in great honour, and should be famous for signs and wonders. Among such, a distinguished place is taken by that ancient image of the Mother of God, which is styled that of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Perpetual Succour. This is recorded by old chroniclers to have been brought from the island of Crete to Rome towards the end of the fifteenth century, and placed in the Church of the Holy Apostle and Evangelist Matthew, on the Merulan Way, in the time of the Supreme Pontiff Alexander VI., and there it was honoured by Christ's faithful people for three hundred years. In course of time the Church of St Matthew was destroyed, and the famous image was then lost, but by the providence of God it was found again, and brought forth from the obscurity in which it lay. By command of the Supreme Pontiff Pius IX., it was carried in solemn procession, amidst a vast concourse of people, to the neighbouring Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, upon the Esquiline Hill, which church is also dedicated in honour of Holy Alphonsus Mary de Liguori, and there again exposed for public veneration in the year 1866. From that time it has been made so illustrious, both by public fame and by abundance of wondrous works, that in the space of a few years its honour spread throughout the whole Christian world. Moved by these facts, the aforesaid Supreme Pontiff Pius IX., in order to increase devotion toward the stainless Queen of heaven and earth, graciously permitted to the congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer a special Mass and Office in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary styled of Perpetual Succour, and assigned for this festival the Lord's Day before the 24th day of June, which Lord's Day is that whereon this venerable image was solemnly adorned with a golden crown by the chapter of the holy Vatican basilica.

[1] In the Dioceses of Leeds and Middlesborough this Feast is kept as a Double of the First Class with an Octave. The Office is here given as in the Roman Breviary.

[2] Cf. Ps. ix. 10.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (xix. 25.)

AT that time: There stood by the Cross of JESUS His mother, and His mother's sister, Mary of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. And so on.

Homily of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (On the Sufferings of the Lord.)

"When Jesus therefore saw His mother, and the disciple standing by, whom He loved, He saith unto His mother: Woman, behold Thy Son." As though He would have said, Thou art about to lose the bodily presence of this Thy Son, even Myself, and therefore I give unto thee the one whom I have loved above all others, to be a son unto thee, whose presence shall be a comfort unto thee when I am no longer with thee. "Then saith He to the disciple, Behold thy mother." As though he would have said, Thou art about to lose a Father in Me, and therefore I give unto thee for a mother, that mother whom I love so well. Love ye one another, thou, O mother, by holding him as a son and thou, O son, by holding her as a mother. O how rich were Thy wedding presents, my King and my Bridegroom, my good Jesus. Now hast Thou poured forth all that Thou hadst. To them that behold, to them that crucified Thee, Thou hast given Thy prayers; to the thief Paradise, to Thy mother a son, to Thy son a mother, unto the dead life, into the hand of Thy Father Thy spirit, unto the world the manifestation of Thy power. But this somewhat moveth me, that when He had said, Mother, behold Thy Son, then saith He to the disciple, Behold thy mother. Since it is manifest, without His saying this, that if the disciple were given to her for a son, she must needs be a mother to him.

Eighth Lesson.

BUT in this there seemeth to me to be a commendation of love one toward another. Some there are who would fain be loved by all others, but who themselves love none in return, and they will that their own toils and sorrows should be lightened, but when others bear them for them, they themselves will not bear any other's burden. Not so did Christ either teach or do, for He bore thy burdens to teach thee to bear His—that is to say, to copy His sufferings.[1] "Because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example that ye should follow His steps." (1 Peter ii. 21.) This He taught when He commended His mother unto His disciple, and His disciple unto His mother. He would not that love should be cold upon either side. When two sleep together, that is to say, when they rest together in true and pure love, let the one keep the other warm, that is to say, let the one enkindle the other to the works of mutual love.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. O Virgin Mary, blessed art thou of the Most High God, above all the women upon the earth.[2]

Second Antiphon. O Mary, He that is mighty hath done to thee great things, and His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation.

Third Antiphon. [3] Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, thou art the great glory of Israël, thou art the great rejoicing of our nation.

Fourth Antiphon. O stainless Virgin, who didst conceive from heaven and bear to earth a Saviour, through thee hath the life that was lost been given back to us.

Fifth Antiphon. Holy Mother of God, despise not our petitions in our necessities, but deliver us always from all dangers.

Chapter. (Prov. viii. 34.)

BLESSED is the man that heareth Me, watching daily at My gates, waiting at the posts of My doors: whoso findeth Me findeth life, and he shall obtain salvation from the Lord.

Hymn.[4]

O MARY! who to every sigh
  Of prayer thy loving ear dost bend,
Behold us suppliant, hear our cry,
  And thy Perpetual Succour send.

Ah! succour us if hateful chains
  Of guilt our wretched souls should bind;
Break every fetter that retains
  Enslaved to sin our heart or mind.

Ah! succour us if led away
  By love of earth's seductive toys;
Lest from salvation's path we stray,
  Forgetting Heaven's unfading joys.

Ah! succour us if cares oppress,
  Or adverse fortune should impend;
With peace serene life's journey bless,
  Till dawns the day that knows no end.

And when death's battle is at hand,
  Thy children succour in the strife;
That helped by thee we faithful stand
  And win the crown, Eternal Life.

O JESU, Virgin's Son, to Thee
  Be glory and eternal praise,
And to the Father equally
  With Holy Ghost, through endless days.
Amen.

Verse. My praise by thee accepted be, O sacred Virgin.

Answer. Give me strength against mine enemies.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. O blessed Virgin Mary, thou art the mother of grace, that art the hope of the word, succour thy children who cry unto thee. Alleluia.

Prayer.

O ALMIGHTY and merciful God, of Whose gift it cometh that we honour the image of Thy blessed Mother by the special title of Perpetual Succour, mercifully grant that amidst all the changes of this life's pilgrimage we may be so shielded by the constant protection of the same stainless Mary, always a Virgin, that in the end we may worthily attain unto that eternal reward which Thou hast purchased for us. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphons and Chapter as at Lauds.

Verse. Lady, thou art a refuge for us.
Answer. A refuge in times of trouble.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. Unto thee, O Mary, do we fly for refuge. O thou our sweetness and our hope, come succour the fallen. Fallen indeed we are, but fain would rise by thy succour, thou that beyond Nature's course hast borne in time the Eternal. Alleluia.

Where this Feast has an Octave, the Office is the same as upon the Feast, with a Commemoration and Ninth Lesson of the Sunday. The Lessons of the Second Nocturn are

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Books of Kings written by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (On 1 Kings (Sam.) i. 1.)

"NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaïm-zophim, of Mount Ephraïm." The name of Mount Ephraïm may be applied to the most blessed Mother of God, always a Virgin. She was indeed a mountain, the glorious height of whose predestination towered above the predestination of any other creature. Was not Mary a lofty mountain, Mary, who, that she might reach the dignity of conceiving the Eternal Word, lifted up the peaks of her holiness far above all the companies of angels, even unto the footstool of God? Prophesying of this mountain's sublime elevation, Isaiah said: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the LORD'S house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills." (ii. 2.) She was indeed a mountain on the top of the mountains, for the height of Mary shone high over that of any of the Saints.

Fifth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from an Epistle of Pope St Leo [the Great] to the Empress Pulcheria. (Ep. xiii.)

NO type fully represented the mystery of our Redemption, which had been predestined from everlasting, for the Holy Ghost had not yet come upon a Virgin, nor the power of the Highest overshadowed her, that within her inviolate womb, Wisdom might build herself an house, the Word be made Flesh, and the form of God and the form of a servant be united in one Person,—the Maker of times be born in time, and He by Whom all things were made be brought forth into the midst of all. Unless a new Man, made in the likeness of sinful flesh, had taken our nature upon Him—unless He that is of one Substance with the Father had been pleased to become of one substance with His Mother[1]—unless He, Who alone is without sin, had joined our nature to His Own—mankind would still have remained bound under the yoke of the devil.

Sixth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Exposition of the Prophet Isaiah, written by St Basil, Archbishop [of Cæsarea.] (On ch. viii. 3.)

"AND I went in unto the Prophetess," said Isaiah, "and she conceived and bare a son," (viii. 3.) That Mary was a Prophetess unto whom Isaiah went in very closely by the spirit of fore-knowledge, will be denied by none who remembereth what she said, when she was filled with the spirit of prophecy. For what said she? "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. For He hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." If thou wilt ponder all her words, thou wilt not gainsay that she was a Prophetess, upon whom the Holy Ghost came, and whom the power of the Highest overshadowed.

First Free Day after June 22.

The Blessed John Fisher, Cardinal Bishop of Rochester, Martyr.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst grant unto Thy blessed Bishop John the grace, with great boldness, to sacrifice his life for truth and righteousness' sake, grant unto us by his prayers and ensample the grace so to sacrifice our life for Christ's sake in this world, that we may be able to find it again in heaven. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Acts xx. 17, as in the Common Office.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS John Fisher was born at Beverley, and was trained in the University of Cambridge, of the which University he afterward became Chancellor. In the time of King Henry the VIII. his reputation for all graces was so great that he was chosen as her Confessor by Margaret, [Countess of Richmond,] and it was at his advice that she founded at Cambridge two wealthy colleges. Under the same King Henry this man of God was, on account of his power of teaching and the innocency of his life, made Bishop of Rochester, which church he ruled for three and thirty years, and earnestly built up with holy ordinances by his toils, his fastings, and all works worthy of a Bishop. By Henry the VIII. also the Bishop of Rochester was specially beloved, but afterward, when the King was awearied of his wife and was fain to take unto him another woman, the Saint became hateful to him because he strove to dissuade him from his sin, and opposed the title of Supreme Head of the English Church which he had sacrilegiously taken.

Fifth Lesson.

ALONG with Thomas More, Lord High Chancellor of the kingdom, Bishop John refused the test oath framed against the judgment of the Supreme Pontiff concerning the King's marriage, whereupon he was cast into the Tower of London and deprived of his bishopric by Act of Parliament. When the Supreme Pontiff Paul III. heard thereof, he thought that perchance the dignity of the Roman purple might stand in the way of the King to hinder him from putting John to death, and therefore made him Cardinal of the Church of St Vitalis; but the King was thereby stirred up to the greater wrath, and caused this most learned and holy Bishop, now broken in years, to be brought before the judgment-seat, when sentence of death was forthwith pronounced upon him for no other reason than because he had denied to the King the title of Supreme Head of the English Church, and he was presently ordered to execution.

Sixth Lesson.

UPON the 22nd day of June 1535 the blessed John was led up to execution upon Tower Hill. When he saw the scaffold from afar off he cast away his staff, saying, "Now my feet must do their duty, for I have but a little way to go." Whilst the executioner was making ready, John opened the Book of the Gospels, and chanced therein upon these words, (John xviii. 3,) "And this is life eternal, that they should know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent," the which words he deemed to be teaching enough for him during all that remained to him of his life. As he was going up the steps the sun shone brightly upon his face, and he cried out: "Draw near unto Him, and be lightened, and your faces shall not be ashamed." (Ps. xxxiii. 6.) He repeated the hymn, "We praise Thee, O God," and the 30th Psalm, "In Thee, O Lord, do I put my trust," and then offered his neck to the axe and resigned his soul to God. His body was left lying naked for the space of a day, after which it was secretly buried by two soldiers, but at length it was brought inside the Tower along with the body of the blessed Thomas More. His head was set up upon a pole on London Bridge, but was afterwards cast into the river, lest the faithful should make it an object of honour. His character as a martyr was recognised by Gregory XIII., and again affirmed by Leo XIII.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to John (x. 11.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the Pharisees: I am the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep. And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (59*th on John.*)

Dearly beloved brethren, the Bishops of the Church hold a great office, an office that needeth much that wisdom and strength whereof Christ hath given us an example. We must learn of Him to lay down our lives for the sheep and never to leave them; and to fight bravely against the wolf. This is the difference between the true shepherd and the hireling. The one leaveth the sheep and seeketh his own safety, but the other recketh not of his own safety, so as he may watch over the sheep. Christ then having given us the pattern of a good shepherd, warneth us against two enemies: first, the thief that cometh not but to kill and to steal, and, secondly, the hireling that standeth by, and defendeth not them that are committed to his charge.

Eighth Lesson.

EZECHIEL hath said of old time, (xxxiv. 2): "Woe be to the shepherds of Israël! do they not feed themselves? Should not the shepherds feed the flocks?" But they did the contrary, a great wickedness and the root of many evils. "Therefore," he saith, "they brought not back that which was gone astray: neither did they search for that which was lost: neither did they bind up that which was broken, nor strengthen that which was sick; for they fed themselves, and not the flock." And Paul hath the same in other words, where he saith, (Phil. ii. 21): "All seek their own, not the things which are JESUS Christ's."

Ninth Lesson.

CHRIST showeth Himself very different from either the thief or the hireling; whereas the thief cometh to destroy, He came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. The hireling fleeth, but He layeth down His life for the sheep, that the sheep perish not. When then the Jews went about to kill Him, He ceased not to teach: He gave not up them that believed in Him, but stood steadfast and died. Wherefore He hath good title often to say, "I am the Good Shepherd." It was but a little while, and He showed us how He could lay down His life for the sheep. And if it appeareth not as yet how they have life, and have it more abundantly, (but it shall appear, in the world which is to come,) we may well be persuaded of the truth of the second promise, who have seen the fulfilment of the first.

JUNE 29.

Commemoration of all the Holy Apostles.

In some Dioceses a Commemoration is made of all the Apostles in the Office of SS. Peter and Paul.

At the First Vespers.

Antiphon. [1] By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another.

Verse. [2] O God, Thy friends are exceedingly honourable.

Answer. Their power is waxen right strong.

Prayer.

GRACIOUSLY hear us, O God of our salvation, and as Thou hast granted unto us the grace to be faithful to the teaching of all Thine holy Apostles, grant us also the shield of their protection. Who livest and reignest with God the Father, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At Lauds:

Antiphon. [3] Ye which have followed Me [in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also] shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israël.

Verse. [4] Their sound is gone out through all the earth.

Answer. And their words to the ends of the world.

Prayer as before.

AT SECOND VESPERS.

Antiphon. [5] Ye are My friends if ye do whatsoever I command you, saith the Lord.

Verse. [6] The Lord is glorious in holiness, doing wonders.

Answer. He is my God, and I will exalt Him.

Prayer as before.

First Free Day after July 6.

The Blessed Thomas More, sometime Lord High Chancellor of England, Martyr.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst grant unto Thy blessed martyr Thomas the grace to cling cheerfully and bravely to Thy cross, alike amidst the allurements of the world and the woes of imprisonment and of death, grant unto us, we beseech Thee, at his prayers and after his ensample, so boldly to contend for faith and righteousness, that hereafter we may worthily attain unto the reward of Thine eternal joy. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Second Book of Maccabees (vi. 18.)

THEREFORE Eleazar, one of the principal scribes, an aged man and of a well-favoured countenance, was constrained to open his mouth and to eat swine's flesh. But he, choosing rather to die gloriously than to live abominably, came of his own accord to the torment. And when he saw how that it behoved to come, bearing all things patiently, he was resolved not to taste, for the love of life, such things as are unlawful.

Second Lesson.

BUT they that stood by, moved with cruel compassion, for the sake of the old friendship that they had with the man, took him aside and besought him that flesh might be brought such as was lawful for him to use, and to make as if he did eat of the flesh of the sacrifice commanded by the King, that in so doing he might be delivered from death. So because of the old friendship that they had with the man, they did him this kindness. But he began to consider the excellency that became his age and his ancient years, and the honour wherein from his birth he had continued even unto grey hairs, and the honesty of his conversation from a child, and he answered straightway according to the commandments of the holy Law given by God, that he willed rather to be sent to the grave.

Third Lesson.

FOR it becometh not our age, said he, to dissemble, whereby many young persons might think that Eleazar, being fourscore years old and ten, were now gone to a strange religion; and so they, through mine hypocrisy and [desire to live] in this corruptible life a little longer, should be deceived, and I get a stain to mine old age and make it abominable. For though for the present time I should be delivered from the punishment of men, yet should I not escape the hand of the Almighty, neither alive nor dead. Wherefore now, manfully changing this life, I will show myself such an one as mine age requireth; and leave a notable example to such as be young, by willingly and courageously dying a seemly death for the most honourable and holy laws. And when he had said these words, immediately he was haled to death.[7]

[3] Matth. xix. 28.
[4] Ps. xviii. 5.
[5] John xv. 14.
[6] Ex. xv. 11, 2.
[7] He was lashed to death.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Thomas was born in London, and was a son of John More, who afterwards became one of the most eminent judges in England. At the University of Oxford he took an high position for his attainments in Greek and Latin, and afterwards studied law in London. He was very friendly with the monks of the Charterhouse, where as a young man he dwelt as a guest for the space of four years for the purpose of serving God more strictly. There he learnt to chastise his body and bring it into subjection with haircloth and scourging, and during the whole of his life he never ceased thus to bear about in it the dying of the Lord JESUS. He served the State for nearly forty years, discharged honourable embassies, and took with the highest credit the exalted post of Lord High Chancellor of all England. But he never was over careful for his own profit. He had nothing more at heart than to protect religion and justice in the commonwealth, and more especially to baffle and beat off by his writings the heretics who were creeping into England, and poisoning the country with pestilence-bearing books.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Henry VIII., King of England, put away Katharine his wife and went through the form of marriage with Anne, he would have all men declare with an oath that this wicked union was lawful. Thomas refused, along with the Bishop of Rochester, to take this oath, and therefore he was cast into prison. While he lived in the prison he showed no sign of grief, but for as much as he was naturally of a very merry heart and of great steadfastness, he entertained with marvellous kindliness all them that came unto him, being accustomed to say that this whole world is nothing but a prison, whereout some of us are called every day to take our trial. In the fourteenth month of his imprisonment he was brought before the judgment seat, where he answered prudently the questions that were asked of him, lest perchance he might seem to offer himself rashly to death. He was judged a traitor, because he would not declare that the King was the head of the Church, whereupon he put aside all silence regarding his own belief, freely professed that the divine rights of the Bishop of Rome could not be transferred to the King, and appealed to the Catholics of the whole world against his own country, which was giving up all things to be of the King's way.

Sixth Lesson.

AS he returned condemned to death, his daughter Margaret, whom he most dearly loved, ran up to him, kissed him, and asked his last blessing; amid the tears of his sorrowing friends he was brought back into prison and there gave himself up to God, until the day of his execution. Upon the day before his death, having been deprived of the ordinary means of writing, he wrote with coal a letter to his daughter full of his fatherly love for her, wherein he protested to her his eager desire to die and see God on the morrow, which would be the Octave of the Feast of the Prince of the Apostles, and the eve of the translation of the holy Martyr Thomas. Since he was to die for confessing the Primacy of Peter, and under the patronage and after the ensample of the martyred Archbishop of Canterbury, as he had desired, upon the 6th day of July, when he had prayed and had called upon the people to bear him witness that he was dying for the Catholic faith, his head was cut off. The whole Christian world gave a cry and called out that he was indeed a martyr for Christ. Gregory XIII. acknowledged as due to him the honours paid to the blessed, and Leo XIII. by a solemn decree confirmed the same judgment.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.]

["For I am come to set a man at variance against his father."] What variance is this? Among the foremost commandments of the law we read, "Honour thy father and thy mother," (Ex. xx. 12); and the Lord Himself also saith, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you," (John xiv. 27); but here it is said, "I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Therefore henceforth public authority will be set before the failure of natural duty,—everywhere hatred, everywhere war,—and the sword of the Lord cutting fiercely between the father and the son, between the mother and the daughter.

Eighth Lesson.

A SWORD is the sharpest of all weapons, it is the symbol of the power of law, of the sternness of judgment, and of the punishment of evil-doers. In the prophets the preaching of the new gospel is oftentimes likened unto the sword. We remember that the Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, (Eph. vi. 17,) and this sword is sent upon earth, that is to say, the preaching of the Word of God entereth into the hearts of men. And there is sore variance in one house, and a man's foes are they of his own household, for through the Word of God he will rejoice in newness of spirit to remain separate from others both within and without, both in soul and in body.

Ninth Lesson.

HE proceedeth then in the same course of commandments and of understanding; for after that He had taught that all the things which are dearest in this world must be left, He said, moreover, "And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me," for "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts," (Gal. v. 24,) and he is unworthy of Christ who taketh not up his Cross whereon to suffer with Him, to die with Him, to be buried with Him, and to rise again with Him, and so followeth after the Lord, in the mystery of the faith to live in newness of spirit.

JULY 15.

The Division of the Apostles.

Double.

The Office is the Common Office, (p. 583,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who hast been pleased to bring us to know Thy Name by the means of Thy blessed Apostles, grant us the grace to honour their everlasting glory by our own progress and by the same honouring also to progress. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Epistle of the Blessed Apostle Paul to the Romans (x. 4.)

CHRIST is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, that the man which doeth these things shall live thereby.[1] But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise:[2] Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? that is, to bring Christ down from above: or, Who shall descend into the deep? that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead. But what saith the Scripture? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach: that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord JESUS, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

Second Lesson.

FOR with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the Scripture saith: [3] Whosoever believeth on Him shall not be ashamed. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. [4] How then shall they call on Him in Whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of Whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? As it is written: [5] How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

Third Lesson.

BUT they have not all obeyed the Gospel. For Isaias saith: [6] Lord, who hath believed our report? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ. But I say: Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.[7] But I say: Did not Israël know? First Moses saith: [8] I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people: and by a foolish nation I will anger you. But Isaias is very bold, and saith: [9] I was found of them that sought Me not: I was made manifest unto them that asked not after Me. But to Israël He saith: All day long I have stretched forth My hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Gregory the Great, as in the Common.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xvi. 15.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (29th on the Gospels.)

By the words "every creature" we may understand every tribe of the Gentiles. Of aforetime it had been said, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles," (Matth. x. 5,) but now, "Preach the Gospel to every creature," that, since the Jews had proudly rejected the preaching of the Apostles, that might become our gain which was the seal of their condemnation. But when the Eternal Truth sendeth forth His disciples to preach, what doth He but scatter seed over the field of the world? He scattered abroad a few grains for seed, that He may afterward reap an abundant harvest in our faith.

Eighth Lesson.

THE great harvest of faithful souls throughout the whole world would never have sprung up, if the hand of the Lord had not first scattered those chosen grains of preachers over the reasonable soil of men's minds. Then is written, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved: but he that believeth not shall be damned." Now, perchance, thou sayest in thine heart: I believe, and therefore I shall be saved. True, if to thy faith thou dost add works. He only hath a living faith whose life doth not give the lie to his profession. It is of this that Paul speaketh, where he saith of certain vain believers, "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him." (Tit. i. 16.)

Ninth Lesson.

"AND these signs shall follow them that believe: In My name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues, they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."

[6] Isa. liii. 1.
[7] Ps. xviii. 5.
[8] Deut. xxxii. 21.
[9] Isa. lxv. 1, 2.

My brethren, these signs do not follow us. Do we, then, not believe? Nay. The truth is, these things were needful when the Church was young. That she might grow by the increase of the faithful, she needed to be nourished with miracles. So we, when we plant a young tree, continually water and tend it, till we see that it hath taken firm root in the earth: but when once it hath taken firm root, it can grow of itself. Hence Paul saith of tongues: "Tongues are for a sign not to them that believe, but to them that believe not." (1 Cor. xiv. 22.)

Third Sunday in July.

Commemoration of all the Holy Bishops of Rome.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Apostles, (p. 583,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, Hymn, and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. [1] Let them exalt them, in the congregation of the people.
Answer. And praise them in the assembly of the elders.

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. O all ye priests of God, bless ye the Lord. O all ye servants of the Lord, sing praises unto our God. Alleluia.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. [2] Christ Himself is the Chief Shepherd, * O come let us worship Him.

Hymn.

THE Lord's eternal gifts,
The Pontiff's mighty praise,
Their victories and high reward,
Sing we in joyful lays.

The rest as in the Common Office for Apostles.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Book of Ecclesiasticus (xliv. 1.)

LET us now praise famous men, and our fathers that begat us. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them through His great power from the beginning. Such as did bear rule in their kingdoms, men renowned for their power and their understanding, showing forth among the Prophets the dignity of Prophets, and still ruling over the people that now is, and by the strength of wisdom instructing the people in most holy words. Such as by their skill sought out musical tunes, and published canticles of the Scriptures.

Second Lesson.

MEN rich in virtue, studying comeliness, living at peace in their houses. All these were honoured in their generations, and were the glory of their times. They that were born of them have left a name behind them, that their praises might be reported. And some there be which have no memorial; who are perished as though they had never been; who also were born as though they had not been born, and their children after them.

Third Lesson.

BUT these were merciful men, whose righteousness hath not been forgotten: with their seed shall continually remain a good inheritance, their children have an holy heritage: their seed also abideth firm in the covenant, and their children for their sakes remain for ever. Their seed, and their glory, shall not be blotted out. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name liveth for evermore. Let the people tell of their wisdom, and the congregation show forth their praise.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (For the Feast of St Malachi, Archbishop of Armagh.)

BRETHREN, let us wish well as meet is, let us wish well unto our bishops, for it is a kindly act to bewail the dead and it is kindlier still to rejoice with the living; but are they not all living, yea, and living a blessed life? "In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die, but they are at peace," (Wisd. iii. 2.) Now are they become fellow-citizens of the Saints and of the household of God, (Eph. ii. 19,) and they give praise and thanks together and say, "We went through fire and through water, and Thou broughtest us out into a place of refreshment," (Ps. lxv. 12.) Manfully and happily did they pass through fire and through water, for no hardships could break them and no pleasures could snare them.

Fifth Lesson.

LET us rejoice that our Pontiffs are gone up unto their fellow-citizens to discharge as it were the duty of an embassage for the children of the captivity. To win for us the hearts of the blessed, and to tell them what are the wants of the suffering. Let us rejoice, I say, and be glad that in that heavenly court there are some of our own who have a care for us, and for whose sakes a guard is set around us whom they shaped by their examples and confirmed by their wondrous works. These are holy Bishops who in lowliness of spirit have oftentimes offered up peace-offerings to heaven, and have in themselves gone unto the Altar of God, themselves sacrifices as well as priests.

Sixth Lesson.

BLESSED be the Lord God Who hath visited His people by the ministry of such bishops, and Who, now that He hath called them unto His own holy city, yet ceaseth not to cheer our captivity by the remembrance of their sweetness; and let their spirits also rejoice in the Lord Who hath delivered them from the burden of the body, so that they are weighed down no more by filth or foulness, but pass gladly and brightly beyond all creatures, whether bodily or bodyless, and go on wholly into God, and are joined unto Him, so that they are one spirit with Him for ever.[1] Holiness becometh that house wherein the memory of such holiness is oftentimes made.

---

[1] Ps. cvi. 32.
[2] 1 Pet. v. 4.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xvi. 13.)

AT that time: JESUS came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and He asked His disciples, saying: Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am? And so on.

Homily by Pope St Leo [the Great.] (2nd on the anniversary of his own election.)

When the Lord, as we read in the Evangelist, asked His disciples: "Who did men, amid their divers speculations, believe that He, the Son of Man, was; blessed Peter answered and said: Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And JESUS answered and said unto him: Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father, Which is in heaven: and I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it; and I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Thus therefore standeth the ordinance of the Truth, and blessed Peter, abiding still that firm rock which God hath made him, hath never lost that right to rule in the Church which God hath given unto him.

Seventh Responsory.

The Lord loved them and beautified them, He clothed them with a robe of glory, and crowned them at the gates of Paradise.

Verse. The Lord hath put on them the breastplate of faith and hath adorned them.

Answer. And crowned them at the gates of Paradise.

Eighth Lesson.

IN the universal Church it is Peter that doth still say every day, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and every tongue which confesseth that JESUS is Lord is taught that confession by the teaching of Peter. This is the faith that overcometh the devil and looseth the bands of his prisoners. This is the faith which maketh men free of the world and bringeth them to heaven, and the gates of hell are impotent to prevail against it. With such ramparts of salvation hath God fortified this rock, that the contagion of heresy will never be able to infect it, nor idolatry and unbelief to overcome it. This teaching it is, my dearly beloved brethren, which maketh the keeping of this Feast to-day to be our reasonable service, even the teaching which maketh you to know and honour in myself, lowly though I be, that Peter who is still entrusted with the care of all other shepherds and of all the flocks to them committed, and whose authority I have, albeit unworthy to be his heir.

Eighth Responsory.

These are they which wrought great wonders before God, and the whole earth is full of their teaching, may they pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them!

Verse. These are they which loved not their lives in this world, and have attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Answer. May they pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them!

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. May they pray for all people that their sins may be forgiven unto them!

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Thy saints, O Lord, shall grow as the lily; they shall come up before Thee with a pleasant savour like balm.

Second Antiphon. In the heavenly kingdoms, there is the dwelling of the saints, there shall be their rest for ever and ever.

Third Antiphon. The bodies of the saints are buried in peace, and their names shall live for ever.

Fourth Antiphon. O ye spirits and souls of the righteous give praise to our God. Alleluia.

Fifth Antiphon. The righteous shall shine forth as the sun, in the presence of God.

Chapter. (Heb. xiii. 7.)

REMEMBER them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God; whose faith follow considering the end of their conversation, [JESUS Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever.]

Hymn.[2]

O THOU thy bishops' glorious king,
Of confessors the crown and prize,
Who dost to joys celestial bring
Those who the joys of earth despise.

By all the praise Thy saints have won,
By all their pains in days gone by,
By all the deeds which they have done,
Hear Thou Thy suppliant people's cry.

Thou dost amid Thy martyrs fight,
Thy confessors Thou dost forgive;
May we find mercy in Thy sight,
And in Thy sacred Presence live.

To God the Father glory be,
And to His sole begotten Son,
And glory Holy Ghost to Thee,
While everlasting ages run. Amen.

Verse. The Lord guided the just in right paths.

Answer. And showed unto them the kingdom of God.[3]

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. Ye are the light of the world: a city that is set on an hill cannot be hid; neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick that it may give light to all that are in the house.[4]

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who takest thought for Thy people in Thy loving kindness, and rulest them in Thy love, grant for the sake of the Bishops of

JULY 16.

In the Diocese of Salford, the Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Mount Carmel, Patron of the Diocese, is kept as a Double of the First Class with an Octave.

JULY 23.

Octave of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled of Mount Carmel.

Double.

As of the Feast, except that in the First Nocturn the Lessons are from Scripture according to the Season, and in the Second and Third the same as on the Octave Day of the Blessed Virgin Mary, styled Help of Christians.

JULY 26.

In the Diocese of Leeds, the Feast of St Anne, Titular of the Cathedral Church, is a Double of the First Class with an Octave.

JULY 27.

Second Day within the Octave of St Anne.

Semi-double.

As of the Feast, except that the Lessons of the Second Nocturn are from the Common Office, and that the Ninth Lesson is omitted or read along with the Eighth in order to leave room for the Lesson of St Pantaleon.[1]

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Gregory of Nazianzus. (Panegyric on Gorgonia.)

BLESSED [Anne] was admirable for her modesty, and in this she was excellent not only among those of her own age but also among women older than herself to whom this grace is most commonly attributed. Our life falls under two heads, the one of those who are married, and the other of those who are not married. The life of those who are not married is the more excellent and the more divine of the two, but it is the harder and it is the more dangerous. The other is more humble and more lowly, but it is safer. This woman avoided the evils of both states, and chose and united the good of both. She was as excellent as though she had been unmarried; along with the safety of marriage, she was modest without ostentation. She adorned by the excellences of marriage what would have been the excellences of virginity, and showed by her example that neither of these states in itself need unite us either to God or to the world, or on the other hand need necessarily separate us either from Him or from it.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE was not estranged from the spirit because she was joined to the flesh, nor because she had an husband for a head did she ignore Christ the Head of the Church. She so followed the world and nature that while she satisfied the law of the flesh, or rather Him who is the Author of the law of the flesh, she hallowed herself wholly to God. The inspired [1] This direction seems rather singular if the Lessons meant are those by St Ambrose, given on p. 650, since St Anne could hardly be described as a member of the Christian Church; nor does there appear to be any good reason for supposing that St Joachim predeceased her. The Octavarium Romanum gives special Lessons for the second day within the Octave of an Holy Woman, neither Virgin nor Martyr, and orders that the Lessons of the Third Nocturn should be the same as those which it gives for Holy Women, Martyr but not Virgin—to the first of which, since it contains an allusion to martyrdom, it appends alternate Lessons for a Woman not a Martyr; and these Lessons are accordingly given here.

Solomon in the Book of Proverbs praiseth the woman who tarrieth at home and loveth her husband, who is honourably occupied with the matters of her own house, and performeth the duties of a woman with a manful and stalwart heart. Who layeth her hands to the spindle and her hands hold the distaff, and who is an example of all those other things of which the prophet speaketh concerning the honourable and hard-working matron. But if I were to take up points of this sort about this worthy Anne it would be like praising a statue because of its shadow or a lion on account of his claws, and remaining silent concerning their higher and more excellent qualities.

Sixth Lesson.

WAS there ever a woman who was better fitted to hold an high place in public? Was there ever a woman who appeared less, and showed herself less, before the eyes of men, who kept her eyes more under control, to whom laughter was so laughable that a smile seemed to her almost too much, who kept her ears more shut to the world and more open to the word of God? Who kept her tongue more absolutely under the control of her intellect that she might tell the judgments of God, who kept her lips more in order? She was only pleased to have one red upon her face, and that was the blush of modesty, and one white, and that was the pallor which is produced by mortification.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xiii. 44.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (11*th on the Gospels.*)

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearls, who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it." Whosoever hath realised so far as is now possible the sweetness of the life of heaven, will freely part with those things which he hath loved on earth; in comparison therewith all other things grow mean. He leaveth those things which he had, and scattereth those things which he hath gathered. His soul burneth for the things of heaven, and hath no taste left for the things of earth. Earthly forms lose their beauty, for the mind seeth nothing but the luminous brightness of the One Pearl of great price.

Eighth Lesson.

"AGAIN, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind of fishes, which when it was full they drew to shore and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away." The Holy Church is likened unto a net, not only because the care thereof is committed unto fishermen, but also because she is the mean whereby all are drawn out of the troublesome waves of this present world unto the kingdom of heaven, instead of being left in the dark depths of everlasting death. She gathereth together of every kind of fishes, because she calleth the wise and the foolish, the free and the bond, the rich and the poor, the strong and the weak, all alike to come and have their sins forgiven. (Ninth Lesson.) And this net, that is to say, the Church, will be full, and will be drawn to the shore when the end of all men is come. They will draw it to shore and sit down, for as the sea signifieth the world, so doth the shore, which is the term thereof, signify the end of the world. And when that end is come, the good will be gathered into vessels, but the bad cast away, for the elect will be received into everlasting habitations, and the reprobate will lose the light of the kingdom within, and will be cast into outer darkness. ["So shall it be at the end of the world; the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth."]

AUGUST 2.

Octave of St Anne.

Double.

All as on the Feast, with Commemorations of Pope St Stephen at First Vespers and Lauds, and at Second Vespers of the finding of the body of St Stephen the first Martyr, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Common Office.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from the Homily of the Feast.[1] The Ninth Lesson is omitted or read along with the Eighth, in order to leave room for the Lesson of Pope St Stephen.

[From the Octavarium.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Various, xlv. 9.)

"SHE hath made double garments for her husband."[2] Already ye are crying out, I believe, that which ye know not, namely, what be these double garments. These your cries are praises, praises dictated by your faith, praises expressing your profession, praises of thy preaching. But wherefore should these garments be double? Thou praisest Christ, thou praisest Him Who is both God and man; praise Him as double, praise Him as single. Praise Him as double because He is both God and man, praise Him as single that thou mayest be truthful. Praise the God, praise the Man, praise the God in the Man, praise the Man in the God. Here is woven that priceless garment of praise—"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God: the same was in the beginning with God." Here is woven also, because of His daily conversation among men, that other garment—"And the Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us."

---

[1] For the reasons pointed out in the last Office, on July 27, it does not appear perfectly clear what Lessons are meant (whether those given in the ordinary text of the Breviary, p. 650, or those prescribed in the Octavarium Romanum.) The simple translation of the English rubric is therefore given above.

But here follow the Lessons prescribed by the Octavarium Romanum, as the Common Office, for the Octave Day of an Holy Woman neither Virgin nor Martyr.

[2] So the LXX.

Fifth Lesson.

HERE, then, is that toilful woman, watchful and careful, that looketh well to the ways of her household, that riseth also while it is yet night, and her candle goeth not out by night. Strong in trouble, fearful while the promises are not as yet received, that layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff, and that eateth not the bread of idleness; but after all these labours engendered of the poverty and the needs of this world, what signifieth this that it is said that she shall laugh in the latter day? What signifieth this, hear ye, the hope for the which our candle goeth not out by night, hear ye now. "Her children arise up, and are enriched."[1] Now we live in poverty, we watch in poverty, and when we die we fall asleep in poverty. But we shall rise again, and we shall be rich. What are the riches of angels? They have but one garment, but that is a garment of light, a garment that never waxeth old, and that is never soiled. If thou art a son of this woman, look thou when it is promised thee, that thou shalt be rich. "Her children arise up and are enriched," because they are ready to inherit the riches of the Resurrection. Love not riches here, lest thou be not meet to receive riches there.

Sixth Lesson.

HER husband also, and he praised her; "many daughters," saith he, "have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all." These last words are the praises wherewith her husband praiseth her. Who are the daughters with whom she is compared? But she is not compared: "thou excellest them all." Be attentive, I beseech you; we are just at end of the reading. Many daughters have done virtuously, many have spoken with tongues, have understood all mysteries, have wrought mighty works, have cast out devils, have bestowed their goods to feed the poor, have given their bodies to be burnt: but they were puffed up because they had not charity. (1 Cor. xiii. 1-3.) "But thou excellest them all,"—yea, thou more than excellest them all, not in flower only, but in solid fruit. "Give her of the fruit of her hands." Give her what? "Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand, Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world." And what are the fruits of her hands whereof this shall be given her? "I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took Me in: naked, and ye clothed Me: I was sick, and ye visited Me: I was in prison, and ye came unto Me." (Matth. xxv. 34-36.) And how should it be with her when her work is done? "Her husband shall be praised in the gates," and this will be the haven after all our labours, to see God, to praise God.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xiii. 44.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Questions on Matthew, n. 16.)

"Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old." Doth the Lord will by this to show what was the treasure which was hid in a field? We thereby understand to be signified the holy Scriptures, which consists of the Old and New Testaments, just as the like is seen to be expressed by another Evangelist [sic], where he saith: "The Word of God is . . . sharper than any two-edged sword." (Heb. iv. 12.)

Eighth Lesson.

OR is it because He spake the first things in parables? and when He saith unto them, "Hath ye understood all these things? they say unto him, Yea, Lord"; and that thereafter He would show them, by this last similitude of the householder bringing forth out of his treasure things new and old, that such a man is to be esteemed in the Church as learned, who understandeth the older Scriptures to be explained in parables. The rules of interpretation thereof He taketh from the newer Scriptures. For the Lord Christ setteth forth the new revelation in parables, being Himself the end of the old, that is to say, in the sense of their fulfilment. (Ninth Lesson.) If He in whom the Old Testament reached its fulfilment and manifestation still continued to speak in parables until His death should rend the veil, so that there might no more be anything hid which should not be made manifest, much more may we understand that those predictions which had so long before been written concerning Him, in order to commend His great salvation, should be veiled in parables, and by receiving these parables only according to the letter, the Jews are not scribes instructed unto the kingdom of heaven. "But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament, which veil is done away in Christ. But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away." (2 Cor. iii. 14-16.)

SEPTEMBER 4.

Translation of St Cuthbert, Bishop [of Lindisfarne,] and Confessor.

Greater Double in the Diocese of Hexham.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

---

[1] So the LXX.

Prayer throughout.

GRANT, we beseech Thee, O Almighty God, that we who honour the translation-day of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Cuthbert, may ever be holpen by his prayers to gain the blessings of Thy fatherly love. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson. (From Simeon's History of the Church of Durham.)

WHEN our most blessed father Cuthbert was about to pass out of this life, in his fatherly care he said this, among other things, to his disciples: "I would much rather that ye took my bones with you and went hence, and abode wherever God might provide a place for you, than that ye should by any means give in to iniquity and bow your necks under the yoke of the schismatics." And so, when Eardolf, Bishop of Lindisfarne, heard that Halfdene, King of the Danes, had broken into the province of the Northumbrians with his army, and foresaw what a slaughter there would be of his Church, he bethought him to take to flight along with his people. So the incorrupt body of their father Cuthbert was put in a shrine along with reliques of other holy children of God, and seven brethren, told off to that work, carried it about through nearly all Northumberland, with no certain resting-place, and nothing to trust in but the leadership and protection of the Shepherd of their souls.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN they had gone through nearly all the province and were quite worn out, they determined to seek a resting-place in Ireland for the holy body. They brought a ship therefore and embarked the venerable body therein at the mouth of the river Derwent, and when the wind was favourable they hoisted the sails and set forth toward Ireland. However, the wind changed suddenly and blew contrary, the sea rose, and the ship was tossed to and fro among the waves. They turned the helm therefore, and brought the ship again to the shore, where their comrades were still standing, the wind still blowing landward. They fell at the feet of the saint to ask forgiveness for their folly, and afterwards carried the hallowed shrine to the monastery in his own town of Creca. When the Bishop's See had been restored again at Cuneacester, they carried thither the body of the holy father; and there it rested for an hundred and thirteen years.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN Bishop Aldun received a warning from heaven that he should flee with what speed he might from the fury of the pirates, he carried the uncorrupted body of Father Cuthbert from Cuneacester to Hripun. When peace was restored, again the venerable body was being carried back to where it was before, but when they had reached the place called Wrdelaw, hard by Durham, on the east, the cart, in which the coffin was, stuck, and could not be moved forwards. Then the Bishop commanded them to fast, watch and pray for three days, till they should receive some sign from heaven; and it was revealed to a certain monk called Eadmer that a resting-place must be got ready for the holy body in Durham. They all gave thanks to Christ, and forthwith the shrine, which the whole multitude had not been able to move, was carried by a very few to the place which had been pointed out from heaven, and there they made a little church of boughs of trees, wherein they left it for a while. Next it was laid in what is called the White Church till the great church should be builded. Last of all, in the third year from the laying of the foundations, the church was solemnly hallowed by Aldun, and the sacred body of our father Cuthbert was carried with all honour to the place made ready for it, upon the 4th day of September, in the three hundred and ninth year since the holy father passed away.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xxiv. 42, with the Homily of St Hilary, (p. 619.)

SEPTEMBER 29.

In the Dioceses of Menevia and Newport, the Feast of St Michael is kept as a Double of the First Class with an Octave.

OCTOBER 1.

Third Day within the Octave of St Michael and All Angels.

Semi-double.

All as on the Feast except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons as in the Votive Office of All Angels, (p. 1195.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (Various on Matth. xviii.)

"Woe unto the world because of the offences!" By the world here spoken of we are not to understand the world in the sense of heaven and earth, but the earth only—the world, in short, in the same sense in which the Lord said, (John xviii. 36,) "My kingdom is not of this world." And again, (xv. 19,) "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hated you." Woe, therefore, unto the world, that is to say, unto the earth, "because of offences: for it must needs be that offences come," not because offences must needs come in themselves, but because they must needs come in the world.

Eighth Lesson.

LOOK ye, what we say is a delicate point; if it must needs be that offences come, that man by whom the offence cometh is not to be blamed therefore, but we say that the offence cometh not save in this world. Wilt thou, then, that the offence come not by thee? Be not worldly. Therefore I say this world is offensive, and in it it must needs be that offences come. Be thou not therefore worldly but heavenly, and then shalt thou have no offence come by thee. "But woe to that man by whom the offence cometh."

Ninth Lesson, of St Remy, who is also commemorated at Lauds.

OCTOBER 5.

Seventh Day within the Octave of St Michael and All Angels.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermon of Pope St Gregory [the Great.]

IT is said that that ancient and venerable Father Denys, the Areopagite, stated that from the ranks of the lesser angels some are sent forth either visibly or invisibly to minister—that is to say, that either angels or archangels come to succour men. As for the higher ranks, they never leave the holy place, because those things which excel have no usage of an outer ministry, and this opinion may not improperly be conceived to be supported by the words of Daniel (vii. 10,) "Thousand thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him."

Fifth Lesson.

TO minister unto Him is one thing, and to stand before Him is another; those who go forth as messengers to us ministered to God, but they who stand before Him are they who are so interpenetrated with the glad contemplation of Him that they are never sent for to do any outside work. But this we hold to be sure even concerning those ranks who are sent forth, that even while they come to us and fulfil an outward ministry, they nevertheless never cease to contemplate; and in this sense they continue to stand before Him and at the same time are sent forth, for, although an angelic spirit hath limits, the Supreme Spirit, which is God Himself, hath no limits, and thus the angels who are sent forth also at the same time stand before Him, for whenever they come they are still before Him.

Sixth Lesson.

IT must also be known that sometimes the orders of blessed spirits are called by the names of those orders which are nearest to their own; but for this reason they are not to be all designated in the same way, that each particular order ought to be called by the name of that special quality which has been bestowed upon it in special fulness. I have said that by the word seraphim is signified burners, and yet all of them burn together with love for their Maker. I have said that the cherubim enjoy fulness of knowledge, and nevertheless is there anything unknown to any of them who together see God Who is the source of knowledge? The special names, therefore, of the particular ranks indicate a special outpouring in each respective rank of a gift which in general all have received.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on the Feast of St Michael.)

Brethren, ye have heard the thunder of the Gospel rolling in awful warning against whoso shall offend one of these little ones. No one can cajole the truth, no one can wheedle Him, no one can beguile Him. He saith plainly, "Woe to that man by whom the offence cometh." The man that hath not charity must needs perish, even though he shall have given his body to be burned, (1 Cor. xiii. 3,) and this, brethren, I say to the end that ye may be careful to stand fast, and to abound even more and more in that love and oneness of heart and peace one with another wherein now ye stand. "For what is our hope or joy or crown of rejoicing?" (1 Thess. ii. 19.) Are they not even your unity and oneness of heart?

Eighth Lesson.

BY this shall all men, yea, and the holy angels also, know that ye are Christ's disciples, if ye have love one to another, (John xiii. 35.) How shall the angels love us for Christ's sake if by our want of love one toward another they know that we are not His disciples? How shall they love us for our own sakes—that is to say, on account of such resemblance as our spiritual nature hath to theirs—if they find that we ourselves do not love those who are the sharers of our human nature, or how shall the angels love us for their own sakes, because we should one day repeople their heavenly home if (which God forbid) we have not that bond of love by which alone it is possible that we should be united and built up together with them?

Ninth Lesson, of St Placid and his Companions, who are also commemorated at Lauds.

OCTOBER 6.

Octave of St Michael and All Angels.

Double.

All as on the Feast, except the following.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on the Feast of St Michael.)

TO-DAY we make Commemoration of the Angels, and on account of the solemn nature of the Feast, ye will have it as due to you that I preach. It is true that we believe and hold with undoubting faith that these beings are blessed in the presence and sight of God, and rejoice for ever in the good things of the Lord. Nevertheless, although it would be far beyond any powers of ours to tell of the love and glory which the holy angels have, not only in themselves but also in their God, let us speak of the grace and love which they show toward us. And that they should show such grace and love toward us, we may well believe, "even as the Son of man," Who is the Maker and the King of Angels, "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many," (Matth. xx. 28.)

Fifth Lesson.

AND therefore we cannot wonder that for their love of the Great Minister the holy angels should be even glad to minister unto us, for they love us because Christ hath loved us. Thus I speak, brethren, that ye may feel a freer confidence in the blessed angels, and be henceforward more ready to call on them to help you in all your needs; but beyond this that ye may be careful ever to walk more worthily as in their presence, ever more and more to win their favour, to secure their goodwill, and to gain their loving-kindness.

Sixth Lesson.

WE must be careful not to do such things as offend them, and to occupy ourselves chiefly in such things as we know to be well-pleasing unto them. There are a great many things which are well-pleasing unto them and which it is a delight to them to find in us. Among such things are soberness, chastity, voluntary poverty, and groanings and prayers oftentimes raised to heaven, with tears and heart's devotion. But over all these things the angels of peace demand from us unity and peace. Why should they not delight in those things which constitute an earthly shadow of their own heavenly home, and to see therein a new Jerusalem descended out of heaven from God and finding a place upon earth?

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xviii. 1.)

AT that time: came the disciples unto JESUS, saying: Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And so on.

Homily by St John Chrysostom, Patriarch [of Constantinople.] (60th on Matthew.)

"Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones." By little ones we are not here to understand only those who are little in age and stature, but also those who are little in the esteem of many, such as the poor, the unknown, and others of the like sort, whom many despise, but who in truth are not little ones, because they are the friends of Him Who made all, and whom He Himself hath made much more honourable in our sight by telling us "that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father, Which is in heaven."

Eighth Lesson.

HENCE it is clear that all the Saints have angels to minister unto them. Paul saith, (1 Cor. xi. 10,) "For this cause ought the woman to have a veil on her head because of the angels;" and Moses saith that "when the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the angels of God," (Deut. xxxii. 8; LXX.)[1] But this is not spoken of angels in general, but of those angels who are the most excellent and the most exalted, for when He saith that "in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father," He pointeth to that which is their highest trust and their chiefest honour.

Ninth Lesson.

THOU seest by what arguments the Lord calleth upon us to be lowly in our own conceit, and to have a care of our weaker brethren. "JESUS called a little child unto Him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Amen, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven, and whoso shall receive one such little child in My Name receiveth Me. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea. Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh! Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father Which is in heaven."

Vespers of St Bruno from the Chapter inclusive, with Commemorations of Pope St Mark, and of SS. Sergius, &c.

OCTOBER 19.

In the Diocese of Shrewsbury, the Feast of St Peter of Alcantara, Cotitular of the Cathedral, is kept as a Double of the First Class with an Octave.

The Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Ecclus xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

---

[1] The Hebrew and Latin have, according to the number of the children of Israel.

OCTOBER 26.

Octave of St Peter of Alcantara.

Double.

All from the Common Office for a Confessor not a Bishop, (p. 621,) except the Prayer which is as upon the Feast Day and the following.

At First Vespers a Commemoration is made of St Evaristus.

MATTINS.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

Lessons of the Second and Third Nocturn are taken from the Second place in the Common Office,[1] the Ninth Lesson being omitted or read along with the Eighth, in order to make room for the Lesson of St Evaristus who is also commemorated at Lauds.

[From the Octavarium.]

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermon of St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (2nd on St Victor.)

DEARLY beloved brethren, rejoice in the Lord, Who amid the continual gifts of His Fatherly goodness hath granted unto the world a man by following whose example many might find salvation; again I say rejoice. He who stood in the midst of us is now drawn near to God, but many more may be saved at his prayers. He was sent upon earth for our example; raised to heaven for our protection; here he teacheth us how to live, thence he calleth us unto glory. He hath stirred us up to work, and he intercedeth for us that we may gain the kingdom. He prayeth well, for he asketh nothing for himself, but would fain spend upon us all the love wherewith he prayeth and all the fruit of his prayer. How indeed could he seek anything for himself since he no longer hath need of anything.

Fifth Lesson.

THIS is the day of his glorious transmigration, the day of the gladness of his heart. Let us rejoice and be glad in it. He is gone in the strength of the Lord, (Ps. lxx. 15,) and let us rejoice, for he is now stronger to plead for our salvation. On this day did [Peter] lay aside the body and enter nimbly and quickly into the holy place; having been made like unto the saints in glory. This is the day when, looking down upon the world and having trampled down the prince of the world, he ascended up above the world as a conqueror indeed, and received from the hand of the Lord the crown of victory. He went up with vast store of good works, illustrious for his triumphs and glorious for his wondrous works, and now the soldier retired from this army is gently resting in safety, safe as regards himself, but anxious as regards us. O what holiness, which even angels might honour, and which may equally strike both good and bad alike, the good to draw them and the bad to set them to flight. Neither would it be easy to say which of them it is whose emotion would be the higher testimony to his sanctity.

Sixth Lesson.

O VETERAN warrior, thy toils in Christ's army are over, and instead of them thou art gone to rest amid the joy of angels; look down upon thy weak and unwarlike comrades who are praising thee in the midst of hostile swords and spiritual wickedness. O [Peter] in this place of reflection and in the body of this death how gracious, how sweet, how lovely it is to sing of thee, to honour thee, and to pray to thee. Thy name and thy memory are a dropping honeycomb in the mouths of the bondsmen, honey and milk are under the tongues of them who delight to remember thee; ah, then, thou mighty champion, thou sweet patron, thou faithful advocate, arise to help us, that we may rejoice at our deliverance, and that thou mayest boast thee of the fulness of thy victory.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xii. 32.)

AT that time: Jesus said unto His disciples: Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. And so on.

Homily by St Peter Chrysologos, Archbishop [of Ravenna.] (Sermon 29.)

Ye have heard this day how gently the Lord doth comfort the weak and tender firstlings of the Gospel flock. He taketh away the anxiety which had embittered their hope. He removeth the doubts which had clouded their view of the end, and he doth away and cutteth off all fear when thus at the very beginning He maketh promise of the kingdom unto these little children. When a man is sure of the kingdom, is safe to reign, how should he care for what he shall eat or for what he shall put on, or for the things whereafter relations with the world do seek, or for the lowly grass of the field which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven? He who, having once been lifted up to the things which are highest, casteth himself down to the things which are low, and reduceth himself to the beggarly elements, is his own enemy.

Eighth Lesson.

WE must know who and what this Father is, and what kingdom it is which it is His good pleasure to give unto His little flock. Who that Father is thou dost thyself every day profess whensoever thou sayest, "Our Father Who art in heaven." What He is lieth before thee in the sight of the greatness of His works, "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of His hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance," (Is. xl. 12.) And if thou wouldest know what kind of kingdom that is the which He promiseth unto His little flock, He hath Himself told thee where He saith, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God," (Mark x. 14.) To be in heaven is wonderful, and to live there is glory. (Ninth Lesson.) He then that hath heaven, what hath he to do with earth? He that hath entered into the things of God, what hath he to do with the things of man? Nothing, unless his pleasure be to groan, his taste to toil, his desire to be endangered, the horrors of death his delight, and the befalling of evil sweeter than the possession of good. But now let us see (Luke xii. 33) what is the Father's counsel to them that will reign: "Sell that ye have, and give alms." If ye believe that ye shall live, and reign, and be rich in that higher country where ye are to be, whither ye are to go, where ye are to reign, send on thither before you those things which now are yours. Barter perishing goods for mercy, and exchange the things of man for the things of God.

[1] The meaning is not perfectly clear. If the Common Offices of the Breviary as usually printed are referred to, the Second Nocturn would be from St Gregory on Job, p. 628, and those of the Third Nocturn would be the same as upon the Feast; but the Octavarium Romanum, published for universal use, gives other instructions for the Octave of a Confessor not a Bishop when taken from the Common Office, and prescribes the lessons which follow.

Ninth Lesson of St Evaristus who is also commemorated at Lauds.

NOVEMBER 14.

The Blessed Thomas Percy, Earl of Northumberland, Martyr.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office for One Martyr, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

POUR forth upon us, O Lord, we beseech Thee, the spirit of steadfastness and might wherewith Thou didst strengthen Thy blessed martyr Thomas to cleave unto the Catholic faith. Fill us with the same spirit to the end that we who rejoice upon earth at the memory of his contending and victory, may worthily attain unto a partaking of his glory in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Romans viii. 12, as in the Common Office for Many Martyrs, (p. 603.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THOMAS PERCY, 7th Earl[1] of Northumberland, was as illustrious for the great qualities of his mind as for the nobility of his blood. He grieved deeply for the loss of souls when he saw a vaster multitude of men drawn every day into schism and heresy in the reign of Elizabeth, Queen of England, and he was used oftentimes to say that to set up the Catholic faith again he would willingly sacrifice his life. When, therefore, some of the leading Catholics repeatedly called upon him to help them, he was at length with difficulty induced to join them in their ill-informed attempt to restore the Catholic religion. Upon the 14th day of November 1569 he entered the city of Durham amid great popular rejoicings, banished thence the false prophets, cast out of the temple the schismatical offices and the profane tables, and in a short while saw that the altars were rebuilt and the holy mysteries of religion celebrated throughout those parts. Whereupon a great multitude renounced the schism and joyfully returned under obedience to the Roman Pontiff.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN he saw that he could not withstand the host which was coming against him, the blessed Earl took refuge in Scotland, but was there put into the hands of those who favoured the cause of Elizabeth. He was kept in close prison for more than two years, during the which time he strove constantly by watchings and fastings to make himself meet for a crown of glory, and sometimes would pass whole days upon his knees in prayer. At length he was put on board a ship as though set at liberty, but the agents of Elizabeth had already secretly bought him. The ship carried him to England, and he was taken to York. His own life and the favour of the Queen were often promised him if only he would do as the heretics besought him, but he would never consent to such wickedness, and one while when he was lying sick of a fever at Berwick his chief fear was that that sickness should deprive him of the crown of martyrdom.

Sixth Lesson.

HE was at York when the message was brought to him that the next day he was to die; after he heard this sentence he passed the whole night in prayer to God, neither eating nor drinking save that he tasted five or six plums. When the hour of his death was come, he offered himself like a lamb to the executioners who led him to the place of execution. He drew the sign of the Cross upon his own forehead and upon the steps, and ascended the scaffold with a cheerful countenance; there he turned to the people and said, "Know ye that I am in the faith of that Church which is knit and bound together in one throughout the whole Christian world; as for this new English Church I know it not."[2] Then he knelt down and finished his prayers and kissed the sign of the Cross which he had drawn upon the steps, and he had just uttered the words, "Lord receive my soul," when the executioner cut off his head. The people gathered up all the blood of this martyr of Christ with towels. Blessed Thomas suffered upon the [1] He is commonly so called and reckoned, but his earldom was in reality a new creation of May 1, 1557. His uncle, the 6th earl, died without issue in 1537, when all the honours of the family became forfeited—his father, Sir Thomas Percy, having been already attainted and executed for Aske's conspiracy in the same year.

[2] It does not appear clear whether these words are a variant upon those given by Mr De Fonblanque in his 'Annals of the House of Percy,' ii. 119. "'Remember,' he said, when about to lay his head upon the block, 'that I die in the Communion of the Catholic Church, and that I am a Percy in life and in death.'" The frontispiece to this volume is an interesting portrait of the Blessed Thomas, from a full-length picture at Alnwick Castle.

22nd day of August in the year 1572. Gregory XIII. sanctioned towards him the honours given to the blessed, and Pope Leo XIII. by a solemn decree confirmed the same.

THIRD NOCTURN.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (x. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.]

Above (ver. 27) He had said: "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops." And now He doth us to wit what will come of that preaching. The preaching of Christ's faith divided the whole world: in one house there were both believers and unbelievers; but the war which was proclaimed was good, for it broke a peace which was bad. Thus is it written in Genesis (xi. 1-9) that when the whole earth was of one language and of one speech, wicked men as they journeyed from the East would fain have built a tower whose top might reach unto heaven; and the Lord came down and there confounded their language, that they might not understand one another's speech, and so the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth.

Eighth Lesson.

"FOR I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." This is almost the same thing which is written in the Prophet Micah (vii. 6): "For the son dishonoureth the father, the daughter riseth up against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law: a man's enemies are the men of his own house." And we ought to remark the harmony where the Old Testament agreeth with the New, whether the consonance be in sense only or in the actual words. "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me." He had already said: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword; for I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law." And lest any should think that the natural duty of love towards men should come before the natural duty of love towards God, He now saith farther: "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me." Thus is it written in the Song of Songs (ii. 4): "He established His love upon me." Thus doth it behove that all affections be properly established and set in due order: after the love of God, the love of a father; after the love of a mother, the love of children.

Ninth Lesson.

THE divers things are set in a noble order. He sendeth forth to preach, and He teacheth that dangers are not to be feared, and that the feelings are to be brought into subjection unto faith. Above (ver. 9) He had laid down the hard life of the evangelist without gold, nor silver, nor brass in their purses. Whence then are they to meet their charges? whence to get the food which is needful for the body? And here He softeneth by the hope of His promises the hardness of His commands. "He that receiveth you," saith He, "receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me;" and when a believer receiveth an Apostle let him deem that he receiveth Christ.

NOVEMBER 16.

In the Diocese of Portsmouth, St Edmund of Canterbury is a Double of the First Class with an Octave. At both Vespers, and at Lauds:

Verse. O Holy Father Edmund pour out upon us in exile here
Answer. The love of our true country in heaven.

Antiphon at the Songs of the Blessed Virgin and of Zacharias. He loved righteousness and hated iniquity, and therefore he died in exile.

And so also during the Octave and in the Suffrages of the Saints throughout the year.

The Lessons of the First Nocturn are from Timothy iii. 1, &c., (p. 612.)

NOVEMBER 23.

Octave of St Edmund of Canterbury.

Double.

As on the Feast, except the following.

Vespers are of the Octave from the Chapter, with Commemorations of the preceding and of St Felicity.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Lessons from St Gregory, as on the Octave of St Augustine, (p. 873.)

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xxv. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A man travelling into a far country called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (On the Call of the Gentiles, ii. 2.)

Here there is given unto every one without any desert of his own that wherewith he may begin to deserve something. Before any work hath been done, that is given wherewith man may earn some wages by working. That so it is we know by the testimony of the Gospel, where it is said by a parable that the kingdom of heaven "is as a man travelling into a far country who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods; and unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one, to every man according to his several ability"—that is to say, according to what each was capable of doing, not according to what each had done; for to be able to work is not the same thing as working, and to be capable of love is not the same thing as loving.

Eighth Lesson.

SO all things are not restored that are capable of restoration, nor is every man healed that is susceptible of health; to be reparable and curable are the gifts of nature, but restoration and health are the gifts of grace. Thus they unto whom the talents were confided in varying amounts according to their several ability, did not receive therein payment for anything which they had done already, but the means of working for payment.

Ninth Lesson of St Felicity, who is also commemorated at Lauds.

NOVEMBER 29.

The Blessed Cuthbert Maine, Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office for Feasts of One Martyr, (p. 594), except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst choose Thy blessed servant Cuthbert to be the first among all the students of our seminaries to run the path of suffering for the saving of souls, mercifully grant unto us that we may be so enkindled with love of souls even as he was, that like him we may be ready to lay down our lives for others. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

At First Vespers Commemoration of St Saturninus.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

CUTHBERT MAINE was born near Barnstaple in Devonshire. In his youth he was brought up outside the Church, and became a heretical minister. After he had passed several years at St John's College at Oxford, some friends—who had before left Oxford in order to avoid heresy, and among whom was the Blessed Edmund Campion, that afterward was a martyr—persuaded him to yield himself to the Catholic Church and to pass over to the seminary at Doway. There he devoted himself to the study of theology, and took the degree of Bachelor; he was ordained Priest, and in the year 1576 he was sent into England along with the Blessed John Payne, who also was afterward a martyr, by William Allen, of illustrious memory, the President of the College. Each of them prepared himself for the establishing of souls by the health-giving exercises of holy Ignatius.

Fifth Lesson.

HE went into Cornwall to see to the salvation of souls left among the heretics, and took up his abode in the house of a most godly Catholic, named Francis Tregian, whose steward he was supposed by outsiders to be. But he had only worked for one year when he fell into the hands of the heretics. The sheriff came with a body of armed men to the house of Master Tregian and broke into it. Blessed Cuthbert was then in the garden, whence he could easily have escaped, but he came in and himself opened to the sheriff the door of his chamber. The sheriff and his company seized him and opened the breast of his clothes, where they found hung round his neck a waxen image of the Lamb of God; this they seized and called him a traitor and a rebel. He was brought to Launceston, where he was confined in a dark and foul prison, where he was not only most cruelly loaded with fetters, but even chained to his bed, and where no one was allowed to come near him. But when the adversary offered him his choice, either to swear that the Queen was the head of the English Church, or to undergo execution at the hands of the common hangman, he kissed the Holy Bible and said that the Queen never had been, was not, and never would be the head of the English Church.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER about three months Cuthbert was convicted by a jury and condemned to death, ostensibly for having in his possession a Papal Bull, blessed beads, and waxen figures of the Lamb of God, but in reality because he was a Catholic priest. He remained in prison until the arrival of the royal warrant for his execution. Three days before his death a servant warned him to make ready for the end. He thanked him heartily for his information, and thenceforth gave himself up wholly to the consideration of things heavenly. After midnight on the second night his cell became filled with light, so that the prisoners who were near it marvelled. He was drawn on an hurdle to the place of execution; when he arrived at the gallows he knelt down and prayed for the help of God, and thereafter went up the ladder, and when the noose was round his neck was fain to speak to the people, but the justices hindered him. While he was commending his spirit into the hands of the Lord after the example of the Saviour, he was turned off the ladder, and when he had hung a little while the rope was cut, his inner parts were taken out, and he was quartered. Thus did he give up his soul to the Chief Shepherd, being the first martyr among the Papal students. Gregory the XIIIth first permitted the same honours to be paid to him as are given to martyrs, and Leo XIII. confirmed the same.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (x. 34.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. And so on.

Homily by St Hilary, Bishop [of Poitiers.]

["For I am come to set a man at variance against his father."] What variance is this? Among the foremost commandments of the law we read, "Honour thy father and thy mother," (Ex. xx. 12); and the Lord Himself also saith, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you," (John xiv. 27); but here it is said, "I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Therefore henceforth public authority will be set before the failure of natural duty, — everywhere hatred, everywhere war, — and the sword of the Lord cutting fiercely between the father and the son, between the mother and the daughter.

Eighth Lesson.

A SWORD is the sharpest of all weapons, it is the symbol of the power of law, of the sternness of judgment, and of the punishment of evil-doers. In the prophets the preaching of the new gospel is oftentimes likened unto the sword. We remember that the Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, (Eph. vi. 17,) and this sword is sent upon earth, that is to say, the preaching of the Word of God entereth into the hearts of men. And there is sore variance in one house, and a man's foes are they of his own household, for through the Word of God he will rejoice in newness of spirit to remain separate from others both within and without, both in soul and in body.

The Ninth Lesson is sometimes of the Eve of St Andrew, (p. 1163,) in which case the following Lesson is either omitted or read along with the Eighth.

Ninth Lesson.

HE proceedeth then in the same course of commandments and of understanding; for after that He had taught that all the things which are dearest in this world must be left, He said, moreover, "And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me," for "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts," (Gal. v. 24,) and he is unworthy of Christ who taketh not up his Cross whereon to suffer with Him, to die with Him, to be buried with Him, and to rise again with Him, and so followeth after the Lord, in the mystery of the faith to live in newness of spirit.

Out of Advent, a Commemoration is made of the Eve of St Andrew, unless the feast of B. Cuthbert fall on a Sunday, and in any case a Commemoration is made of St Saturninus.

Offices peculiar to Ireland.

The Translator did not live to revise his translation of the following Offices. It differs in some places from the fuller Irish Supplement which is now in use; but in the circumstances it has seemed advisable to insert it as its Author left it, altering only the rubrics indicating the rite of the Office, where the rite has been changed, and making one or perhaps two other adjustments.

NOVEMBER 27.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Proper Offices of the exempt Church and Diocese of Passau.)

Fourth Lesson.

FARRELL was born in Ireland of a noble race, and from a little child, his good dispositions were the wonder of all who knew him. He seemed to care for nothing but to study the Divine Scriptures, and to do works of love and worship. He went into France to move men's hearts with the love of Christ, and stood high in the esteem of King Pepin. But God would have him to be as a candle set on a candlestick, that all men might see his light; and Pope Stephen the Second named him to the Bishoprick of Salzburg. In this Office he set before his flock so bright an ensample of wisdom and pastoral care, that all whom he ruled looked upon him as the best of fathers.

Fifth Lesson.

AT a great expense he built the cathedral of Salzburg from the foundations, and brought thither, with great honour and edification of the people, the reliques of holy Rupert, the first of his predecessors. Concerning the building of this church, we find a miracle mentioned, namely, that the money for the payment of those who were employed was placed in an open vessel for each man to help himself, but that none of them was ever able to take out of it more than was the just due of his labour.

Sixth Lesson.

AT length Farrell was worn out with unceasing toil and old age, and having ruled the Church committed to his care, with great praise of godliness and great profit to souls, and sent into Carinthia that Bishop Modestus, so eminent for holiness, he entered into the heavenly mansions, during the reign of the Emperor Karl the Great. His body is kept honourably in the Church of Salzburg.

[2] Son of King Theodorick, and scholar of St Molua; consecrated at Rome, by Pope John IV., in the year 639.

[3] Called "the Brigid of Munster."

Hymn at both Vespers, and at Mattins.

SING we the Island of Saints, and God's blessed and Royal handmaiden,
Ita, a child of our Kings, and a joy and an help unto Ireland,
She who when first her lips were open, in accents of wisdom
Spake, and filled with awe her glad and wondering elders;
Who, when she lay in sleep, was seen with flames to be girded,—
Sight of terror and dread, till, lo, Christ's angel descending
Spake, and the wonder revealed, how the saintly maiden was glowing,
Not with the fires of earth, but with brightness of heavenly glory,
Like to the bush that burnt and was not consumed upon Horeb.
Choir unto choir throughout all the faithful Churches of Ireland,
Rank unto rank white-robed, respond, with ascriptions of glory,—
Praise unto Him That begat, and to Him the Only-begotten,
Praise unto Him That proceeds, and hallows the Saints of His people. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IN the sixth age of the Church there flourished in the province of Munster in Ireland the holy Virgin Ita, so illustrious for the spirit of prophecy, and for famous miracles. She was born of a kingly race, in the country of the Deasy—a region which is now included in the County of Waterford. Her glorious works at once intensified and emphasised the lustre which she derived from her birth. From the very waters of Baptism, she seemed to be filled with the grace of the Holy Ghost, and all men marvelled to behold such love of God, such guilelessness of life, such lowliness as that which she bore with her everywhere, and such great wonders as those which seemed every day to be wrought at her prayers.

Fifth Lesson.

WHILE she was yet a little maid, she earnestly besought her father that he would allow her to hallow to Christ herself, and all that she had. However, her father had already promised her in marriage to a noble stripling, and declared that he was nowise able to grant her that which she asked. Ita nevertheless, without any hesitation, and filled with the spirit of prophecy, foretold to them that stood by that things would shortly turn out otherwise. "Let my father have time," said she; "he forbiddeth me now to be hallowed to God, but hereafter he will pray me to do this very thing, and my Lord JESUS Christ will command him, and he will allow me to go whithersoever I will, that I may serve God." And so it came to pass, a while after, that it was at the persuasion of her father that this blessed virgin received the hallowed veil of virginity from the churchmen.

Sixth Lesson.

ONCE upon a time the holy Ita, taught by a messenger from heaven, left the land of her fathers, and went to the country of the Hy-Conaill, and there built a monastery, at the foot of mount Luachra. The fame of this monastery passed through the whole island, and drew thither countless virgins, who sought for graces like Ita's, and, with her, hallowed themselves to Christ. Many Bishops and Abbats asked advice of holy Ita, and among them were numbered St Fachnan, St Brandan, St Colman, St Mochaemoc, and St Laserian. At length the blessed Virgin sank from weakness, and when she had given her blessing to the whole sept of the Hy-Conaill, and been strengthened with the Holy Sacraments, she happily passed away hence to be for ever with the Lord, upon the 15th day of January, in the year of salvation 570.

Prayer throughout, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of the Venerable Bede, Priest, [at Jarrow.] (English Church Hist., iii. 19.)

FURSEY had preached the word of God for many years in Ireland,[1] but not being able any longer to endure the riots of the mobs, who broke in upon him, he came into the land of the English, where also he preached the word of God, and built a monastery. After these things he was fain to withdraw himself from all business, and so left his monastery, and the care of souls to his brother Fullan, and the priests Gobban and Dicull, and made arrangements for finishing his life as a hermit.

Fifth Lesson.

HE had another brother called Ultan, who, after a long trial in a monastery, had gone to live as a hermit; to him went Fursey, and dwelt with him a whole year. When he saw the country troubled by an invasion of Gentiles, he took ship for Gaul, and there being honourably welcomed by Hlodvius, King of the Franks, and the noble Ercunvald, he built a monastery at Lagny-sur-Marne. Not long after he fell ill, and died.

Sixth Lesson.

ERCUNVALD took his body, and kept it in the porch of the church, which he was building in his own town of Peronne, until such time as the said church should be dedicated. When this ceremony took place at the end of twenty-seven days, and the body was carried in from the porch to be buried near the altar, it was found to be quite perfect. Again at the end of four years, a little chapel having been built eastward of the altar, for its more honourable reception, it was found, on its translation thither, to be still without any mark of corruption; and it is well known that in that place God hath often been pleased to cause him to work wonders.

FEBRUARY 1.

St Brigid, (Bride,) Virgin. Patroness of Ireland.

Double of the Second Class.

All from the Common Office for Virgins, (p. 641,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who year by year dost cause us to rejoice as upon this day, in the feast of Thy blessed handmaiden Brigid, mercifully grant us help for her sake, the bright ensample of whose chastity doth still shed its light upon us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Cor. vii. 25, as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE holy virgin Brigid was born of noble and Christian parents in the province of Leinster in Ireland, and she was the mother in Christ of many holy maidens. While she was yet a little child, her father saw men clad in white raiment pouring holy oil upon her head, which thing was a foreshadowing of the godliness and holiness of the virgin. As soon as she had attained to the first years of girlhood, she chose Christ her Saviour for her Bridegroom, and clung to Him with so profound a passion of her heart, that she gave away to the poor whatsoever she had. The matchless loveliness of her body brought about her a host of suitors, and lest they should prevail with her to break the intention of virginity, by which she had given herself over to God, she prayed God to make her unsightly. She was soon heard. One eye swelled, and her whole face became so changed, that she was allowed to send back the messenger of the suitors, and by a solemn vow to keep her virginity for Christ.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE took with her three maidens, and went to Bishop Mahew, the disciple of St Patrick. When he beheld a pillar of fire over her head, he clad her in a white tunic and a white mantle, read the sacred prayers, and admitted her to that canonical profession which blessed Patrick had brought into Ireland. At the moment that she bowed down her head to receive the hallowed veil, she chanced to touch the wooden step of the altar with her hand, and the dry wood at once became green, and her eye was healed, and her face became lovely as beforetime. After her example, so great a multitude of maidens embraced the regular life, that in a little while all Ireland was filled with houses of nuns, whereof the chief was that one in which Brigid herself ruled, and from which the others hung, as from their head.

Sixth Lesson.

THE holiness of this virgin is witnessed by the miracles which she openly wrought, not only during her life, but also after her course in this world was ended. Very often did she cleanse lepers, and obtain health by her prayers for them that were sick of divers diseases. She opened the eyes of one that was born blind. A certain shameless woman had an unlawful child, whereof she protested that Bishop Broonus was the father, but Brigid made the sign of the cross upon the mouth of the new-born child, which forthwith told the name of its real father, and so delivered the Bishop from that false accusation. She had the spirit of prophecy, and foretold many things which were yet to come, as though they were present before her. She was bound in a holy friendship to St Patrick the Apostle of the Irish. She foretold when he would pass out of this life, and where would be the place of his sepulchre. She was there when he passed away, and gave the linen which she had made ready beforehand to swathe his body withal. At last she gave up her beautiful soul to her bridegroom Christ, and was laid in the same grave with blessed Patrick.

WE beseech Thee, O Lord, that we may be aided by the prayers of Thy holy Confessor and Bishop Finnan, that, as we do tell of his worthy deeds, we may ever feel his helpful succour. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Breviary of the Canons of the Lateran Basilica.)

Fourth Lesson.

FINNAN was the son of Ultach, King of Ulster, and was taught the Christian faith from a child. He was born again in the laver of salvation without the knowledge of his parents, and was filled with such zeal that he was not afraid even as a lad to make a pilgrimage from that far-away land to Rome. At Rome he was honourably welcomed by Pelagius the First. He was there ordained a clergyman, and given a place among the Canons of the Cathedral of Our Saviour, among whom he dwelt for a while, setting an admirable example of the keeping of their rule. From Rome he came home again, and his heathen parents strove to recall him to the worship of idols, and to persuade him to marry, but by the power of God's grace it fell the other way, for he brought them to leave their wicked idolatry and to believe in Christ, in which faith he marvellously strengthened them by raising his sister from the dead in their presence.

Fifth Lesson.

HE went a little way thence, and built a monastery, wherein he put Canons, to live after the rule which he had received at Rome, and therein he dwelt with them for a while in great holiness. However, the fame of his holiness and miracles became spread far and wide, and that he might escape the praise of men he betook himself again to Italy, and went to Lucca. There the sweet odour of his holy conversation gained him the worship of all the citizens, and at their request he was ordained Bishop of their city. In this office he so spread about the worship of God, that within the space of the twenty-eight years during the which he held the See he built twenty-eight Churches[1] with Baptisteries. The chiefest of these is that which he hallowed in honour of the three holy Deacons, but which is now called St Finnan's. During the building of this Church, a very large boulder, which many men were not able to move, was moved by him without labour; which stone is kept in the said Church, even to this day, for a memorial.

[1] Abbat of Cluain-Ednech, in the diocese of Lethglean, in Leinster, in the sixth century. (Alban Butler.) "He is of the race of Eochaidh Finnfuathairt, of whom was Brigid. He is described as Fintan the generous, chief head of the monks of Ireland, and resembling St Benedict in his manners and life." Bp. Forbes' Kalendars of the Scottish Saints, p. 349.

[2] Called the first-born of the Saints of Ireland; said to have been born in Ossory about the year 352; receiving some imperfect knowledge of Christianity, he went to Rome, and, on his way back, joined company with St Patrick, who was then starting (A.D. 402); founded the See of Ossory at Saigir; he withdrew to Cornwall, and there died at the place called from him St Piran's.

[3] A learned Irish monk, for some time regent of the school of Lismore; made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and afterwards settled at Tarento, where he was elected Bishop towards the end of the seventh century. (Alban Butler.)

[4] Born about the year 448, of kingly race; travelled a good deal, visiting Rome, Tours, and Menevia (St David's); founded several monasteries in Ireland, and died at Kileochaille. Along with St Ita he is the Patron Saint of the Hy-Conaill. By some he is identified with St Mashenoc, and with the Scotch St Kessog.

[5] Said to have been the illegitimate son of an Irish Princess, and baptized Nulluhoc; disciple of the school of St Columba in Britain; became monk, and in the year 664 Abbat, of Melrose; afterwards made Prior of Lindisfarne; then was an hermit in Farne Island; made Bishop of Lindisfarne in 685, and died, 687.

[6] Latinised, Frigidianus.

Sixth Lesson.

HOW God looked upon this holy man is further proved by that famous miracle whereof blessed Gregory maketh mention in his "Dialogues." The river Serchio often flooded the plain of Lucca, and did great damage to the dwellers there, but Finnan prayed, and then drew a hoe over the earth, and the river followed the mark which he made, and so he saved the plain from the flood. After much toil, rich in good works and full of days, he rested happily in the Lord; and his body was buried in the afore-mentioned Church of the three Deacons. In the time of Karl the Great, the body of a certain noble damsel was buried upon the top of him, and as soon as it touched him, she lived again and cried out, "Take me away, for you have put me on the top of blessed Finnan's body." When she had said that, she fell asleep again. In this way it came to pass that the body which had been hidden for nearly two hundred years was miraculously discovered, and held in the utmost honour. The day of the finding thereof is kept by the people of Lucca upon the 18th of November.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxiv. 42.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord will come. And so on.

Homily by St Fulgentius, Bishop [of Ruspa.] (On the Confessors.)

The Apostle Paul saith unto us, touching himself and his fellows:—"Let a man so account of us as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God." (1 Cor. iv. 1.) And when we consider that it is of himself and of his fellows that he speaketh, we can realise what it is that "is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful." Neither may ye think that the Apostles alone were appointed stewards, and so neglect the duty of your spiritual warfare, and go to sleep, like idle, unfaithful, and thoughtless servants, for the same blessed Apostle hath shown us that Bishops as well as Apostles are stewards, when he saith: "A Bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God." (Tit. i. 7.)

Eighth Lesson.

BUT we are the servants of the householder, and the stewards of the Lord. That measure of wheat, which we give unto you, we have ourselves received; and if we ask what that measure of wheat be, the same blessed Apostle Paul showeth us, where he saith: "God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." (Rom. xii. 3.) That which Christ calleth the measure of wheat, is the same measure which Paul calleth the measure of faith, that we may know that the wheat of the spirit is nothing else but the worshipful mystery of the Christian faith.

Ninth Lesson is the Homily for the Week-day, but if another of the Saint be required, it is as follows:

THIS measure of wheat we give unto you, in the name of the Lord, as often as, enlightened by the gift of spiritual grace, we teach you according to the ordinance of the true faith; and ye do receive this same measure of wheat by the hands of the Lord's stewards, when day by day ye hear the word of truth from the servants of God. And now let us speak of this measure of wheat. All are fed thereon, as God divideth the measure unto all; thence we take the bread of life, that we may be able to attain unto eternal life, believing in Him, hoping in Him, loving Him before all, and in all, Who giveth Himself unto us to be our meat, lest we should faint by the way, and Who keepeth a reward for us, that we may have joy when we reach home.

All from the Common, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common, or if kept out of Lent, from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Benedictine Breviary.)

Fourth Lesson.

RUPERT, who was Bishop of Worms, in the reign of Childebert II., King of the Franks, was so gifted with lowliness, meekness, chastity, prudence, and other graces, that he shed a brilliant light of faith and love towards God upon his family, which was a branch of that of the Frank Kings. He was full of the Holy Ghost, and stood before his people as a model of the highest life. Whatever he taught, he showed an ensample of, in himself, whether it were of unwearied constancy in prayer, of wisdom in advising, of righteousness in judging, or of self-restraint by chastening the body with much fasting. So bountiful and kindly was he toward the needy, that he deemed nothing his own but what he had given to the poor.

---

[1] Ecclesias baptismales.

[2] One of the earliest disciples of St Patrick; died in the year 506.

Fifth Lesson.

HOW great was the fruit which his life bore for his neighbours, many people, both near and far, do witness, who were led by his toil into the path of salvation. Theudo, Duke of Bavaria, who had heard the fame of his holiness and miracles, sent unto him an embassage of some of his chief men, beseeching him that he would come and visit his country, and shed upon it, and upon him, the light of the Holy Faith. Rupert was worn out with many persecutions, but he shrank not from the godly and holy burden; and, a little while after, he baptised Theudo, and with him many of his highest lords and a great multitude of the people.

Sixth Lesson.

RUPERT established his episcopal See on the shores of the Waller See, and built a Church in honour of the blessed Peter, Prince of the Apostles, at the place which is now called Salzburg, upon the river Salzach, and furnished it with clergy and all else that was needful. There he turned his mind to teach the sacred religion of Christ to the rest of the Bavarian people. He associated with himself twelve fellow-labourers, and, by the help of God, brought over that nation to the Catholic Faith. And so he won the title of Apostle of the Bavarians. He had founded many Churches in divers places, and gloriously exercised the office of a Bishop for many years, when, having offered up the Sacrifice of the most holy Mass, upon the morning of the Lord's Resurrection, and strengthened the minds of his disciples by a fatherly exhortation, he passed away to live for ever with the Lord in heaven.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xix. 12.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Gospel Questions, Book 2.)

By this nobleman we are to understand our Lord JESUS Christ Himself; and by the far country, that Gentile Church which is spread even unto the ends of the earth. It is said also, that He is to return. For He went away that the fulness of the Gentiles might come in; and He will come again, that all Israel may be saved. The ten pounds signify the Law, being the number of the Commandments, and the ten servants are they unto whom grace was preached under it. And we are to understand that these ten pounds will gain money by trading, when the veil shall be taken away from the hearts of them that hold them, and they shall understand that the Law itself pertaineth unto the Gospel. The citizens who "sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us," are the Jews, who, even after His Resurrection, set persecutors upon the Apostles, and rejected the preaching of the Gospel.

Eighth Lesson.

AND He receiveth the kingdom, and returneth, for He Who appeared before them, meek and lowly, when He said, "My kingdom is not of this world," (John xviii. 36,) will come again with blinding and overwhelming glory. By those servants who gave a good account of that which had been committed unto them, and were praised for having gained by trading, we are to understand those who have well used what hath been given unto them to increase their Lord's riches withal, through them who believe in Him. And they who will not so do, are signified by the man who kept his lord's pound laid up in a napkin.

Ninth Lesson.

THERE are some men who perversely flatter themselves by saying—"Every one is answerable for himself, what is the use of preaching and ministering to others, so as to have to give an account for them also?" With the Lord, not even are they to be pardoned unto whom the Law was not given, and who have fallen asleep without ever hearing of the Gospel. "For by the greatness and beauty of the creatures the Maker of them might have been seen." (Wisd. xiii. 5.) "For the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse." (Rom. i. 20.) And this is what is meant where it is said that the Lord reapeth where He hath not sown, namely, that He holdeth guilty of ungodliness them unto whom hath never been ministered the word either of Law or Gospel. And they who keep their pound wrapped up in a napkin are they who from sloth leave the ministry of the Word unattempted, under the delusion that they are thereby keeping clear of the danger of judgment.

APRIL 6.

St Celestine, Pope and Confessor.

Greater Double.

All from the Common, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THIS Celestine was a Roman, the son of one Priscus, and the immediate predecessor of Holy Boniface in the Bishopric of Rome, being chosen to that place without any division among the people. This venerable Pope, unto whom the Lord was pleased to give very largely of His grace for the defence of the Catholic Church, knowing that they that are once condemned can claim no new trial, but only place for repentance, commanded Celestius, the chief disciple of Pelagius, who asked an audience of him, to be banished from any part of Italy, without entering upon the discussion of his business,—neither was he more remiss in purging Britain of this disease, but banished even from those distant isles of Ocean certain enemies of grace who had taken up their abode in that their native land. For this end he sent thither holy Germanus, Bishop of Auxerre, as his own Legate, and ordained first Palladius, deacon of the Church of Rome, and then holy Patrick, as Bishops for the Irish, and thus, while he strove to keep Catholic the island which belonged to the Romans, he made Christian the one which was still savage.

Fifth Lesson.

WHEN Nestorius, Patriarch of Constantinople, strove to seduce the Church into a new falsehood, by preaching that Christ was born of Mary, man only, and not God also, and that divinity was joined with Him for His merit's sake, Celestine sharply used his authority to combat that blasphemy. He appointed Cyril, the holy Patriarch of Alexandria, to be his Legate, with authority to pronounce sentence upon Nestorius, unless he recanted within the space of ten days. But when Nestorius continued in obstinate refusal, and the disputes and turmoils grew greater, the Third Œcumenical Council was gathered together at Ephesus. In this Council Celestine presided by his Legates, to whom he prescribed that they were to judge of the utterances of the Bishops, without entering into conflict. In this Council Nestorius and the heresy which beareth his name, and a number of Pelagians, who held a kindred falsehood, were condemned.

Sixth Lesson.

CELESTINE rebuked by his letters the superstition of those priests who laid aside the ancient garments, and ministered in the Church dressed in a cloak, with their loins girded. He took order also, that the Sacrament of penance should not be refused to the dying, and that lay persons and criminous clerks should not be appointed Bishops. He also ordained that metropolitans were not to take anything upon themselves out of their provinces, and that in the election of Bishops, strangers were not to be preferred before the Clergy who had already served in the Church then vacant. He ordained that some of the 150 Psalms should be sung before the Most Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. He hallowed the Julian Basilica, decorated his own cemetery with paintings, and offered divers gifts for the adornment of the Church. He held three ordinations in the month of December, wherein he made thirty-two priests, twelve deacons, and forty-six Bishops for divers places. He fell asleep in the Lord in the year of Christ 432, in the reign of the Emperors Theodosius and Valentinian, and was buried in the cemetery of Priscilla, upon the Salarian Way.

MATTINS.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. li. 1, (p. 646.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE Virgin Devnet sprang forth in Ireland like a rose in the midst of thorns; her father was a king, abandoned to idolatry; as she grew up in his house she took no pleasure in dancing, and music, and the pastimes of her age, but was secretly baptised, and vowed herself to Christ. The devil, incensed at her doings, kindled in the king her father an incestuous passion toward her, and this man, forasmuch as she was exceedingly comely, and very like to her mother, formed the desire to take her to wife to himself, in violation of the laws of nature.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE fled from the lust of her father, and in company with Gerebern and some others, left her country, took ship, and came with a favourable wind to a certain place which is called Antwerp, and there landed. Thence she went to the village of Gheele, where she built herself a neat habitation, and in meditating on the things of God, led for three months the life of an Angel.

Sixth Lesson.

THE father followed in pursuit of his daughter, filled with fury, and when he had found her, caused Gerebern to be first beheaded, and then bade behead her likewise; but as the executioner would not do it, the cruel father himself with his own sword wherewith he was girded cut off the sacred head of this illustrious virgin, who was crying for the mercy of God. Thus did that glorious bride of Christ, who is the terror and scourge of devils, wing her flight for heaven, adorned with the crown of maidenhood and martyrdom.

Prayer throughout, "Mercifully consider, &c.," (p. 580, or p. 599.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

ELEUTHERIUS, who was a Greek, and the son of one Abundius, was born at the city of Nicopolis, in Epirus, and became a priest of the Holy Roman Church. In the reign of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, in the year of our Lord 179, after the death of Pope Soter, he was chosen Bishop of Rome by the voice of all the clergy. He discharged the duties of the Popedom excellently and praiseworthily for fifteen years and twenty-three days. He held three ordinations in the month of December, wherein he ordained twelve priests, eight deacons, and fifteen bishops for divers sees.

Fifth Lesson.

THE Church of Lyons consulted him by letter upon certain questions, and he courteously welcomed the learned Irenæus, the bearer of the letter, and opened to him those traditions of the Apostles which the Church of Rome had preserved inviolate. He condemned the superstition of the Montanists about dry meats. He laid down excellent laws for the regulation of procedure in church suits. After Marcion and Valentinus had again and again relapsed, he cast them out of the Church.

[1] Said to have been originally Bishop of Sodor; chosen by St Brigid to be her chief artist, and with her to govern her churches, and to be Bishop in her city; he was devoured by dogs on his way to Rome.

[2] Founder of Raithin as well as Lismore, at which latter he died, in the year 637-638.

[3] Latin, Dympna. It survives in County Louth as "Demmy."

[4] The subject of an immense quantity of legendary matter, especially as to his voyages; founded Clonfert in the year 539, and died May 16, 577, aged ninety-five.

Sixth Lesson.

THIS was a time when the Church of God enjoyed the utmost peace and quietness, and many at Rome were turned to Christ, even of the chiefest. At the beginning of his reign letters of request were brought to Eleutherius from Lleurwg, a British King, praying him to send him ministers of the Word of God. Wherefore Eleutherius sent to him Dyfan and Ffagan, priests of the Church of Rome, by whom the King himself, and all his household, and nearly all his subjects, were given the new birth in the holy laver. When Eleutherius had done all these things, and more, for the worship of God, he came to a blessed end under the Emperor Commodus, and was laid to rest in his grave on the Vatican Hill upon the 28th of May [in the year of our Lord 192.]

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

JOHN Francis Regis was born of a noble family in a little town in the diocese of Narbonne, called Fontouverte, and gave forebodings even from his earliest years of the great holiness of his after life. Already there appeared in him wonderful innocency of life, profound earnestness in prayer, and singular purity and modesty. In the nineteenth year of his age he entered the Society of JESUS, at Toulouse, and became an admirable model of lowliness, obedience, charity, hatred of himself, and of the other graces of the religious life. When he had finished his studies, he gave himself up wholly to working for the saving of souls. He undertook the care of them that dwelt in the Vivarais, Velay, and the mountains of Forrez, and the vast regions thereabouts, rugged with ice and almost perpetual snow, and where the peasants are wild mountaineers, rude and uncultured, and he toiled with such success that he brought back to the Catholic faith and to Christian godliness countless souls which had either been infected with the plague of Calvinism, or corrupted by evil living.

---

[1] Coëmgenus—"like Paul the Hermit in his habits and life,"—studied under St Petroc, and then under St Eugenius of Derry; to avoid being chosen Abbat of Derry, he fled to Gleann-da-locha, where he founded a monastery in the year 549; afterwards retired to a deeper seclusion, and is said to have lived to the age of 120.

[2] A Connaught-man of the family of Cormac; studied under, and was ordained by Benen, Archbishop of Armagh; retired to Cluainfois near Tuam, where he founded a monastery and school; thence taken and consecrated first Bishop of Tuam; died about the year 540.

[3] First Bishop of Dromore; said to have been born in the year 516; was Abbat of Mackmore in Antrim; the date of his death is uncertain.

[4] The illustrious Columba, one of the Three Holy Patrons of Ireland, and the chief apostle of the Picts, was born at Gartan in Tyrconnel in the year 521; ordained Priest, 546; founded Durrough in 550; arrived in Scotland and founded Iona, 565 (?); died 597.

Fifth Lesson.

HE passed the winter in his missions in the country, and in summer returned to Puy, where he made himself all things to all men, if by any means he might help any, in the hospitals, or in the prisons, in private houses, in the streets, and in the churches. He collected alms in all directions for the support of whole flocks of the poor especially in time of famine; and corn was miraculously multiplied under his hands more than once,—hence he is called the father of the poor. It is hardly to be believed what revilings and mockery he underwent in the task of dragging wicked men, and especially abandoned women, out of the slough of sin; but he always kept a bold countenance, steady, and cheerful, although swords were often near his throat, cuffs on his face, and cudgels on his body. When the plague was raging, he visited the sick, and relieved them, with undying charity, but while he was courteous and kindly to others, he was very hard upon himself, using rough hair-cloths, iron chains, and bloody scourging, taking but little sleep, and that always upon the bare boards, or upon the ground—always abstaining from wine, and living upon the meanest food, and of that, so little, that it seemed enough rather to keep off death than to keep up life.

Sixth Lesson.

THE love of God burnt so in him that he seemed to wish to speak, and to think, of nothing but Him. He spent several hours of the night in prayer; the blessedness of heaven poured down upon him, and he was often rapt out of himself. He offered up the holy Liturgy with such profound concentration of mind, and intense expression of countenance, that the sacred fire which glowed all over himself, kindled the bystanders. He was extraordinarily gifted with miracles, and other supernatural favours. At last God called him to receive the reward of his labours. In the midst of a winter of extraordinary severity, he caught a deadly disease during his work, in a village called Lalouvese, in the diocese of Vienne. Then, with light from heaven breaking upon him, he heard the call to be blessed for ever, and resigned his spirit to his Maker upon the 31st day of December, in the year of Salvation 1640, and of his own age, the 44th. The fame of his holiness and miracles, noised about on all sides, has caused enormous multitudes of people to flock together through the wild mountains on all sides, eager to crowd around his grave. Pope Clement XI. was moved by these things to enrol the name of John Francis among those of the Blessed, and Clement XII. solemnly added it to those of the Saints. Benedict XIV. ordered his Festival to be kept on the 16th day of June.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (ix. 35.)

AT that time: JESUS went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Bk. i. Com. on Matth. ix.)

Thou seest how that He went about alike in the hamlets, and in the cities, and in the villages, that is to say, He preached the Gospel in them, whether they were great or little, and considered not whether they were noble and powerful, but only that those that dwelt in them should believe and be saved. He went about the cities, having that work to do, which His Father had given Him, and being an hungered that, by His teaching, He might save unbelievers. He taught the Gospel of the kingdom in the synagogues and in the hamlets, and after that He had preached and instructed, He healed every sickness and every disease, that if His words had not persuaded them, His works might persuade them.

Eighth Lesson.

OF the Lord it is truly said, "Healing every sickness and every disease," for with Him nothing is impossible.

"But when He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion on them, [because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.]" The evil estate of the flock and of the sheep, and of the multitudes, is the fault of their shepherds, and the reproach of their teachers. Whence it followeth, "Then saith He unto His disciples: The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few." That plenteous harvest of the peoples, is the greatness of the multitudes, and the fewness of the labourers, the scanty number of teachers. And the Lord commandeth us, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into His harvest."

Ninth Lesson.

THESE are those labourers, of whom the Psalmist saith: "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy;" "they go forth weeping, sowing their seed; but they shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them." (Ps. cxxv. 6.) To put it plainly, the plenteous harvest is all the multitude of them that believe, and the few labourers that are sent to reap it, are the Apostles, and they that act like them.

St Rumold, Bishop [of Mechlin,] Martyr.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who at the intercession of Thy blessed martyr and Bishop, Rumold, didst by Thy power cause the waves of a running stream to stand still, and didst marvellously deliver one that had been three days under the water from the bonds of death and the depths of the flood, mercifully grant for his sake, and at his prayers, that we may be delivered out of the dangerous waves of this present world, and brought safely into the harbour of everlasting blessedness. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Acts xx. 17, as in the Common, (p. 594.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

RUMOLD, Bishop of Dublin, was born of a kingly race in that part of Scotland which is now called Ireland, but he gave up his home, his kindred, and his inheritance, setting more store by being Christ's servant than by all things vain and perishing. He went to Rome, therefore, eager for perfection, to visit the thresholds of the Apostles, and to pray in the hallowed places: on the way he let slip no occasion for preaching the word of God, and sometimes when it was needful for the conversion of unbelievers, he wrought miracles. When he was at Rome, he was ever at the memorials of the Apostles and Martyrs, and so pictured their struggles to himself that the desire for martyrdom seized him. He was altogether carried away by it.

Fifth Lesson.

HE received a warning from God, that he should come into Gaul, and so obtained the blessing of the Pope, and came to Mechlin. There he was graciously welcomed by Count Ado, to whose wife he not long after foretold, that she would bear a son. This son he baptized by the name of Libertus, and in after days raised to life again, after he had been drowned. This Libertus, when the Scythians and Danes wasted everything with fire and sword, from the coast up to Cologne, fled into Hosbonia, and there was slain a sacrifice to God before the altar of the idol Trudon.

Sixth Lesson.

RUMOLD planted the orthodox faith in Mechlin, and in the places round about, with such care and success, that he is justly called the Apostle of Mechlin. He continued with unwearied zeal spreading the faith, until two cut-throats, one of whom he had rebuked for adultery, smote him grievously on the head, and so he finished his life by martyrdom [upon the 24th day of June, in the year of salvation 775.] The murderers strove to hide their crime by throwing his body into the water, but a light from God shone upon it from above, and Count Ado drew it forth and buried it in the church of St Stephen, whence it was carried to what is now the metropolitan church.

JULY 8.

St Kilian, Bishop [of Wurzburg,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "Mercifully consider, &c.," (p. 599.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Benedictine Breviary.)

Fourth Lesson.

KILIAN was an Irishman, born of noble parents, and trained up from his youth in polished learning. The grace of God called him to turn aside from all the charms of the world, and to become a monk in the monastery of Iona. What were his obedience, self-denial, earnestness in watchings and prayer, is shown by that which brought his life to a close. His brethren compelled him to take orders up to the Priesthood, and also made him ruler of the monastery, but as the fame of his holiness spread far and wide, he fled in fear from the praise of men, resigned the Abbacy, left his native land, and betook himself with some comrades to Wurzburg in the east of Franconia,[1] to preach the Gospel to the unbelievers of that country, and to make himself an occasion of that martyrdom which he so much desired.

Fifth Lesson.

HE would not teach until he had presented himself before the Bishop of Rome, and received from him the sound doctrine of the Christian religion, and permission to preach. He went to Rome, where Pope Conon ordained him Bishop of Wurzburg, whither he returned with Colman, the Priest, and Tothan, the Deacon, and there preached the word of God, until he turned to Christ Gosbert, Duke of that province, theretofore a worshipper of idols, and many others. The Duke profited much by the earnest exhortation of the blessed Bishop; howbeit Gosbert was married to Geilana, who had been his brother's wife, and Kilian was afraid to tell the Duke that this marriage was unlawful, lest he should make him repent of having changed his religion, but at length he told him of the unlawfulness, and exhorted him at the same time to put away Geilana, and altogether serve the God Whom he acknowledged.

Sixth Lesson.

THE Duke at first took it very ill, but was presently softened by the persuasions of Kilian, and promised him to leave her as soon as he should have returned from the war, whither he was setting forth against the enemies of the commonwealth. When Geilana knew of it, her wrath was kindled against the holy Bishop, and his comrades, and she plotted to put them to death; and presently two men were found who undertook the crime for money, and who murdered them while they were wrapped in prayer. When her husband returned from his expedition, Geilana strove in vain to hide what she had done, for the two assassins became possessed of the devil, and revealed the whole matter. Geilana was grievously tormented by the devil, and died crying out that Kilian, whom she had unjustly slain, was haunting her. Holy Burchard, Bishop of Wurzburg, took the bodies of these martyrs out of the earth, and buried them in the cathedral, which he built, having obtained permission, from the Bishop of Rome, that the honour should be paid to them, which is due to the martyred Saints.

The Holy Martyrs, who suffered at Gorcum.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 602,) except the following.

Prayer throughout.

O GOD, Who didst grant unto Thy holy Martyrs, Nicolas and his Companions, to contend gloriously for the faith, which Thou hast revealed, and Who hast crowned them with an everlasting crown, mercifully grant for their sakes that we may strive after their ensample upon earth, and with them worthily be crowned in heaven. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

THE sixteenth century, which was marked by so many wicked outbursts of the Calvinists, showeth a glorious example of Christian firmness, which was exhibited in Belgium. In the year 1572, nineteen martyrs, commonly called the martyrs of Gorcum, were singularly glorified in witnessing, under torment, to the Real Presence of the Body of Christ in the Eucharist, and to the pre-eminence of the Bishop of Rome in the visible Church. They were Nicolas Pick, Guardian, with eight other Priests, and two lay brethren, Friars Minor Recollects; three parish Priests, one secular Priest, a regular canon of St Austin, one Dominican, and two Præmonstratensians. After the citadel of Gorcum was given up, the hereticks in breach of the terms of the capitulation, and filled with rage against the Orthodox faith, reviled and tormented them. The first night they revelled in cruelty against the Guardian. He was hung from the lintel by his rope girdle, and jerked up and down, and when the rope broke and he fell upon the pavement, they brought candles, under pretence of seeing if he was dead, burnt all his face, forced his mouth open, and scorched his tongue and palate; they even forced the lighted candles up his nostrils. And in these and the like ways were the martyrs tortured during the days and nights following.

Fifth Lesson.

THEY were stripped of their clothes, bound two and two, and sent by boat first to Dordrecht and then to Briele, exposed in both places to the ill-usage of an outrageous mob and the rage of maddened soldiers. While jeers, lashes, and blows rained upon them, the old men, (some were over sixty, some over seventy, and one almost ninety years of age,) stood stripped to the breast, with their necks raw and bleeding, and answering every stroke with prayers for their enemies, thanksgivings to God, and entreaties to Him to nerve them for the conflict, while the crowd looked on, and mocked them. In the end they were cast into a very foul prison, where they were tried by hunger and thirst, and other torments, to seduce them from the Catholic faith, and then enticed with cajolery, but neither threats nor blandishments could overcome the unconquered endurance of the martyrs,—wherefore the magistrate, late in the night, condemned them to death, and after they had been subjected to fierce tortures, they were bound two and two, and led outside the gates of the city.

Sixth Lesson.

THEY chanced to find a shed, which was the scene of their last conflict. One was exhorting the other to endurance; the Guardian was taken first; he embraced and kissed his brethren, and ceased not to exhort his companions by words full of Apostolic fire, until the contraction of the halter silenced his voice. The others were hung up to the beam after him. The savage outrages of the hereticks did not end here, for, after making a show for money of the inward parts of the martyrs, they cut off their noses, and ears, and other parts, and carried them about pinned upon their hats. The whole day was spent in gratifying the curiosity of them that came to see, but at length some Catholics obtained permission to bury the bodies in the earth where they were. There they lay for many years, in the midst of the enemies of the Church, until by the care of some godly persons, their sacred bones were carried to the nearest Catholic country, where they soon began to be famous for miracles. Thereby Pope Clement X. was moved to number them among the Blessed martyrs, and Pope Pius IX. upon the 29th day of June, in the year 1867, when the Centenary of the Princes of the Apostles was held, added their names to those of the Saints.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

IRELAND, that Isle of Saints, made fruitful by the power of God, had hardly received the first beams of faith's rising sun, when countless flowers of holiness blossomed on her soil. She was decked in an especial manner with lilies of purity, earning that her Apostle Patrick should utter of her those famous words of praise, "How is the whole island become a people unto the Lord, and her sons and her daughters seem monks and nuns unto Christ, and already they can scarcely be numbered who have borne with cheerful heart the reproaches and persecutions of their kinsfolk, and vowed themselves altogether to religion and to Christ." Among the disciples of Patrick was the holy Attracta, born of a noble race, of Ulster, but who renounced from her earliest years the pomps and riches of the world, and reckoning its vanities to be nothing, if only she might win to be the bride of Christ, joined the chorus of virgins.

Fifth Lesson.

SHE was not yet of full age when she entered upon the noble conflict against Satan and his wiles, and uttered the vow of virginity. That she might be freer to give herself up to the things of God, she left her native land and came to the borders of Connaught, and there busied herself by prayer and fasting to advance in the exercises of godliness and the pursuit of grace. She was eminent for hospitality, and willingly spent herself and her goods in relieving the sufferings of the needy. Poor and sick gathered together unto her from all quarters, and she embraced them in the love of Christ, and not only gave them help in earthly things, but also made them rich with the treasures of the true Faith. Moreover, she turned many from the ways of iniquity unto the law of righteousness, and brought them over from serving of idols to worship our Lord and God, JESUS Christ. The fame of her miracles spread the glory of her holiness far and wide throughout the whole island.

Sixth Lesson.

AMID the countless marvels which holy Attracta is said to have performed, the chiefest miracle is that by which she delivered the country of the Ilooney, in the province of Connaught, from a terrific monster. All that country was laid waste by the ferocity of this beast, and the inhabitants were so smitten with terror, that they took refuge in mountains and caverns from the fearful sight thereof. At length they implored Attracta to be pleased to bring them help and succour in their great affliction. The illustrious virgin made answer: "God is able, Who created the world out of nothing, and formed man after His own image, out of the dust of the earth;—God is able also to deliver this country altogether from such a plague." Then she knelt down, and with all confidence prayed to God, and before her prayers were ended, they were already heard in the presence of the Lord, and the savage monster roared, and rushed wildly upon the saint, and dropped down, smitten dead by the power of God.

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Breviary of Meaux.)

Fourth Lesson.

FIACRE was born of noble parents in Ireland, where he was called Fefrach, and came with some companions to St Faro at Meaux, seeking to live a solitary life. The blessed Bishop heard his prayer, and gave him a place far removed from men and surrounded with woods, called Breuil, upon his own family estate. There Fiacre cleared away the trees and built a monastery in honour of the most holy Virgin, wherein he received pilgrims and strangers, having built himself a little house beside it.

Fifth Lesson.

BUT when the fame of his virtues spread abroad, sick folk were brought to him from all quarters, whom he healed only by laying his hand on them. He forbade any woman to enter his place of prayer. He was illustrious for miracles, and died towards the end of the seventh century. His body remained buried in his place of prayer until the year 1234, when Peter, Bishop of Meaux, took it out of the grave and exposed it for the veneration of the faithful; from thence it was carried to the Cathedral, in the year 1568, lest the Calvinists should wreak their rage upon it after their manner.

Sixth Lesson.

NEVERTHELESS the place which had been hallowed by the footsteps and conversation of this holy hermit hath not been forsaken. Hildegar, Bishop of Meaux, in the ninth century, recordeth the praises of Fiacre in his book upon the life of St Faro, and so doth the poet Falconius, subdeacon of Meaux, in the eleventh century, and they both testify that the province of Meaux is illustrious and ennobled because of the signs and miracles of Fiacre. Indeed, there is hardly any one who now worketh more miracles in Gaul, hardly any other place whither resort more pilgrims, who come thither for vow's sake, that is to say to his place of prayer at Breuil [en Brie,] now called St Fiacre, [two leagues from Meaux.] Many Churches and houses of prayer in all parts of France have been built in honour of St Fiacre. In the year 1695, the Grand Duke of Tuscany obtained a large piece of his body from James Benignus Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, and built a splendid Church in Florence, wherein St Fiacre is piously and reverently honoured.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Mark (xiii. 33.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto His disciples: Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (Epistle 199.)

"And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Who are these "all" whom He biddeth to watch, but His own chosen and loved ones, who belong unto His Body, which is the Church? He commandeth not them only to watch who then heard Him speak, but them also who have been since them and before us, and ourselves, and they that shall be after us, even unto His last coming. For He will not find all in this life when that day cometh, neither can it be said that those words are addressed to the dead, "lest coming suddenly He find you sleeping."

Eighth Lesson.

WHY then saith He, "I say unto all," whereas these words concern them only who shall then be, unless it be that they concern all in some sense? A day will come unto every one, wherein it will behove him to go forth hence, such as he will have to stand to receive judgment at that day, and this is why every Christian must needs watch, lest the Lord should come and find him unprepared.

Ninth Lesson. Of St Felix and the other, but if transferred, the following.

IF the last day of thy life find thee unprepared, the day of the Lord's coming will find thee unprepared. Verily it was plain enough to the Apostles that the Lord was not to come in their times, while yet they were alive in this flesh, and yet we know that they unceasingly watched and kept that saying which He said unto all, lest that day should come suddenly, and find them unprepared.

Prayer throughout, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

(From the Benedictine Breviary.)

Fourth Lesson.

GALL was born of noble parents in Ireland, and even when he was young chose to live a life of poverty in the monastery of Bennchor. He ever followed after lowliness, and obedience, and perfect subjection. There he began to gain a great reputation, not only for his good life, but also for his wit, and for his knowledge of the Holy Scriptures. That he might preach the Gospel, he followed Columbanus the Abbat, first into Britain, and then into Gaul, and at the wish of King Sigebert he dwelt in the wilderness of Luxeuil, where he brought many to believe in Christ, and moved many to become monks. However, the Abbat Columbanus would not rest from rebuking the concubinage of King Theodoric, wherefore they were turned out of Luxeuil at the wish of Queen Brunechild. They received permission from Theodebert, King of the Austrasians, to go into Germany, and settled first on the Lake of Constance, and then in the city of Bregenz, where they reconsecrated the Church of St Aurelia, but Gall raised against himself the hatred of the Gentiles by his unceasing contentions against their crime of idolatry, and his destruction of their temples and images. Columbanus, therefore, found it needful to go hence also, and he himself went into Italy to Agilulf, King of the Lombards, leaving Gall in Germany, sick of a fever, along with the monks, Maynoald and Theodore.

Fifth Lesson.

GALL was now in the eighty-fifth year of his age, but as soon as he was well, he withdrew himself into the wilderness along with his disciples before named, hallowed three days with fasting, prayer, and tears, and founded a monastery. Therein he taught to many heathens the discipline of a monk's life, and the understanding of God's written Word, and made known the faith of JESUS Christ to the people round about. He chastened his body with hunger, cold, hair-cloth, and chains, but so secretly, that, while he lived, his disciples never knew of the brazen chain, and the hair shirt, which he used. He delivered from a cruel devil Fridiburga, daughter of the Duke of Germany, and wife of King Sigebert, but he broke up the rich gifts which the Duke gave him for that cause, and gave all to the poor at Arbon. He refused the Bishopric of Constance, and the abbacy of Luxeuil. He knew by a vision in Germany when Columbanus brought his life to a holy end in Italy.

---

[1] Called "Son of the Carpenter;" a disciple of St Finnan of Cluain-iraird; founder of Clon-mac-nois; "he never looked upon a woman, and never told a lie;" he composed a lay asking God for long life to serve Him in, but died at the age of thirty-three, in the year 548. St Columba is said to have composed a poem in honour of him.

[2] Patron of Munster; he was converted by certain Britons, and had travelled to Rome, before the arrival of St Patrick among the Irish; after his return he joined St Patrick, by whom he was consecrated Bishop, and fixed his See at Emly; he received a gift of the Isle of Arran, and founded a monastery there.

[3] Born in Raphoe in the year 626, being eighth in descent from Niall of the IX. Hostages; became a monk and went to Iona, of which he became Abbat; during an embassy in England in 701, he was converted to the Roman view of the Paschal controversy, but failed to convert his monks, left Iona, and returned to Ireland, where he was more successful in spreading the Roman practice; he went back again to Iona, and died in 705. He is best known by his 'Life of St Columba,' 'Travels in Palestine' (written from descriptions,) and other works. Though the monastic Church of Raphoe, founded by St Columba, became a Cathedral in or about the time of Adamnan, there does not seem much proof that he was the first Bishop of it.

[4] Properly called Lochan; founded a monastery which was the origin of the city and see of Cork, which latter he occupied for seventeen years; flourished in the sixth century.

[5] Born at Ciannaght in Derry, in the year 517; spent a great part of his life in Scotland, where he is generally called Kenneth, and where he is very popular, as a friend and fellow-worker of St Columba; he afterwards returned to Ireland, and there died, October 11, 598.

Sixth Lesson.

HE turned many peoples from the worship of idols. On Michaelmas Day, he preached the Gospel at Arbon, after the Solemn Mass, and then was taken again with fever, and gave up the ghost in that city, in the arms of his disciples, upon the 16th day of October, in the year of our Lord 624, the seventh of Pope Boniface V., and of his own age the ninety-fifth. They could not bury him there, and therefore laid him, with lighted tapers, upon a carriage harnessed to unbroken horses, which drew him into his holy wilderness, and there he was buried in his own place of prayer by the hands of John, Bishop of Constance, his old disciple, and of his brethren, and there became famous for miracles.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Lessons from Matth. xix. 27, with the Homily of St Jerome, (p. 588.)

OCTOBER 22.

St Donatus, Bishop [of Fiesole,][1] Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612.)

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

Lessons of the First Nocturn from Scripture according to the Season; of the Second from St Maximus; and of the Third from Matth. xxv. 14, with the Homily of St Gregory, (p. 616). All as in the Common.

OCTOBER 27.

St Odran, (Oran,) Bishop [of Scattery Island,] Confessor.[2]

Double.

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

Lessons of the Third Nocturn, (p. 616.)

OCTOBER 29.

St Colman, Bishop [of Kilmacduagh,] Confessor.[3]

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612.)

Prayer throughout, "Grant, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 617.)

Lessons of the Third Nocturn from Matth. xxv. 14, (p. 616,) with the Homily of St Gregory.

NOVEMBER 3.

St Maleachlan,[4] Archbishop [of Armagh,] Confessor.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

LORD, we humbly beseech Thy Majesty to help us for the sake of Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Maleachlan, whose ensample instructeth us. Through our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

MALEACHLAN was born in Ireland of parents who were noble by race and by power, and by goodness also. When he was a little boy, being trained up in godliness and good learning, because his lessons hindered him from going to Church as often as he would, he was fain to lift up his pure hands in every place. He had learned as a lad to bear the yoke of Christ, but although he was ordained Deacon very unwillingly, he girded up his loins to every good work, especially the burying of the dead poor. After no long while, he was ordained Priest, and diligently carried out the ministry which the Bishop committed unto him. He unweariedly preached the Word of God, put away the old superstitions, and brought in the rites of the Church. Filled with zeal for the public worship of God, he went to Malchus, Bishop of Lismore, to learn better from him as regarded these rites, and Malchus sent him to learn from the King of Munster, who had abdicated his throne to become a hermit. This king's sister, who was suffering in purgatory, he delivered thence by his prayers.

Fifth Lesson.

HE was called back from Lismore, and finding that the monastery of Bennchor had been destroyed by pirates, he restored it, and ruled it for a while in holiness and righteousness. He was consecrated Bishop, and prevailed so by toil, prayer, and watching that he turned his people from their degraded instincts to live like Christians. Churches were built, clergy were ordained, the Sacraments were solemnly celebrated. When he was ordained Primate of all Ireland he divided his Bishoprick into two parts;

---

[1] An Irishman, who was made Bishop of Fiesole, while on a pilgrimage to Rome in the year 816, and there lived and died.

[2] Disciple and immediate successor of St Senan in Scattery Island; went to Iona with St Columba, and there died and is buried.

[3] Colman Macduagh, a Connaught-man, founder and first Bishop of the See called after him, flourished about the end of the sixth or beginning of the seventh century.

[4] Latinized Malachi; the name signifies "tonsured in honour of Seachnall" (Secundinus)—a disciple of St Patrick.

he left his own proper See and went to Down, where he formed his own disciples into a community of regular Clergy, combining the strictest discipline of a monastery with the ministry of the Church. He went to Rome to ask for the use of the pallium from Pope Innocent II., who kindly welcomed him, but refused his request to be allowed to go and live in the monastery of Clairvaux, and appointed him his Legate for all Ireland.

Sixth Lesson.

AFTER he returned home, he lived as a perfect model to his flock, and he took none of his income either from the Church or from worldly property. He had no house of his own, but wandered unceasingly from Church to Church; he served the Gospel and lived by the Gospel. When he was forced to rest sometimes, he remained in holy places, content to take part in the common table and in the common life. He was famous for every kind of miracle, especially for the spirit of prophecy, whereby he foretold the place and day of his own death. He was on his way to Rome a second time, and had reached Clairvaux, when the fever took him. He was anointed with holy oil, and received the Provision for the last journey. He commended himself to the prayers of the brethren, and the brethren to God, and died in the fifty-fourth year of his age. He was buried in the Church of St Mary, upon the 2nd day of November, in the year of Christ 1148.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A man travelling into a far country called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And so on.

Homily by St Jerome, Priest [at Bethlehem.] (Book iv. on Matth. xxv.)

There can be little doubt that this man travelling into a far country is Christ, Who after His resurrection, being about to ascend as a Conqueror to the Father, called His Apostles and delivered unto them the doctrine of the Gospel, not more to one and less unto another, but as each was able to receive it, even as the Apostle also hath said, that they should be fed on milk who cannot bear strong meat. He also who with five talents had gained five talents more, and he who with two talents had gained two talents more, both entered into the like joy, not in consideration of what sum it was which they had gained, but of what good will they had shown to gain it.

Eighth Lesson.

BY the difference between the five talents, and the two talents, and the one talent, we may either understand divers graces given unto this and that person, or by the five talents the five senses, by the two talents wit and work, and by the one talent understanding, which is the distinction between man and the other animals. "Then he that had received the five talents went"—having received earthly senses, he doubled them by gaining a knowledge of things heavenly; from the creature, he discerned the Creator; from things bodily, things without body; from things which are seen, things which are not seen; and from things temporal, things eternal. And likewise he which had received two by learning what he might in the law, he also joined thereunto other two in the Gospel, having understood that wit and work in this life, are figures of something better in a blessed life which is to come.

Ninth Lesson.

THE time is very long between the Ascension of our Saviour and His second coming. If even the Apostles are to rise again, as they that must give an account, and in dread of the Judge, what ought we to do? And we must note well, that whatever things we have at this present, however great or manifold they may seem, are very small and scanty in comparison with those things which are to come. "'Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord,' and receive that which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive." And what more can be given unto the faithful servant than to be with his Lord, and to see his Lord's joy?

NOVEMBER 12.

St Livin, Bishop [of Dublin,] Martyr.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 594,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Whose Son, by His most precious Blood, hath hallowed the sufferings of Thy blessed martyrs, look in mercy upon them who honour the birthday of Thine happy martyr and Bishop Livin, and grant unto them to live here in quietness and peace, and hereafter to behold Thy face in joy without end. Through the same our Lord JESUS Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LIVIN was born of a noble race in Ireland, and even as a child was famous not for godliness only, but also for miracles. As a lad he had for his teacher Benignus the priest, and after his death he withdrew himself into a solitary place along with three comrades, Foillan, Elias, and Killian, to copy books, that he might gain thereby wherewith to support himself and to relieve the poor. Afterwards he left his wilderness and went to Augustin, who trained him for five years, raised him to the order of the Priesthood, and after a while consecrated him Bishop, and sent him back to his own country.

Fifth Lesson.

HE gained great praise in the office of the Bishoprick, but he left his Archdeacon Sylvanus, a man of great holiness, as his Vicar, and passed over with his comrades to Flanders, to preach the Gospel to the unbelievers. He betook him to the monastery of Ghent, which had lately been founded by blessed Amandus, and was tenderly welcomed by Florence, the Abbat, and his monks. When he found that holy Bavo, who had been dead three years, was famous on account of great miracles, he said Mass at his grave for thirty days running. Thence he went through Flanders and Brabant preaching the Gospel, and led countless numbers to Christ by his word, his example, and the signs which he wrought.

Sixth Lesson.

WICKED men who saw that Livin was making the light of the Gospel to shine before so many, and turning them away from their errors and vices, persecuted him in divers ways. Some hided him with cudgels, and others belaboured him with thongs loaded with lead. One in especial, named Walbert, put a pair of iron pincers into his mouth, wrenched out his tongue, and threw it to the dogs to eat, but it was forthwith restored to him by a miracle. At length he crowned his martyrdom after receiving many wounds, by having his head cut off at Esche in Flanders. There were murdered along with him Craphaild, the hostess of the holy martyr, and her son Brixius, who was even then wearing the white garments of baptism, because they openly said that Livin was unjustly put to death. His disciples took up the bodies of Livin and Brixius and buried them hard by in the same grave, in the village of Hautem, and near to them holy Craphaild.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (xiv. 26.)

AT that time: JESUS said unto the multitudes: If any man come unto Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple. And so on.

Homily by Pope St Gregory [the Great.] (27th on the Gospels.)

We are commanded to hate our neighbours, yea, and even to hate our own selves. It is plain, therefore, that if we are to hate our neighbour as we hate ourselves, we are to hate him in love. Then do we well hate our own soul, when we yield not to the carnal lusts thereof, but check its cravings and contend against its desires. That which is chastened to bring it to better things is, as it were, hated in love. We ought to hate our neighbours with discretion, loving in them what they are, and hating what in them is a barrier between us and God.

Eighth Lesson.

WHEN Paul was going up to Jerusalem, "there came down from Judæa a certain prophet named Agabus, and when he was come . . . he took Paul's girdle and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles." But what did that Apostle, who hated his own soul with a perfect hatred, what did he say? "Then Paul answered, . . . I am ready, not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord JESUS." (Acts xxi. 10, 11, 13.) "Neither count I my life dearer than myself." (Acts xx. 24.) Behold how he hated his soul in love, yea, loved it in hatred, being fain to deliver it up to death, for JESUS' sake, that he might quicken it from the death of sin. Let us take him as a model of that hatred, wherewith we should hate our neighbour.

Ninth Lesson.

IN this world we are bound to love our enemies, but not to love those who stand between us and God, even although they be very near unto us. Whosoever setteth his desire upon the things eternal, ought in that matter to have nothing to do with wife, or children, or kinsfolk, or with his own self, that he may the better know God, Who in his affair hath had nothing to do with any but with him. It is a great danger lest fleshly trials should weaken the steadfastness of the mind and prevail against the sternness thereof. But we suffer from them without their injuring us, if we keep them well under. We ought therefore to love our neighbours, we ought to love all, whether they be near or far, but that love must never turn us from the love of God.

NOVEMBER 13.

St Stanislaus Kostka, Confessor.

Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who amidst the other wondrous gifts of Thy wisdom, dost make Thy saints to be as the ancients, though yet they be striplings, grant us the grace to imitate the ensample of Thy blessed servant Stanislaus, and so to redeem the time by working while it is day, that we may hasten to enter into that rest which is eternal. Through our Lord JESUS Christ, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Scripture according to the Season.

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

STANISLAUS was born of the Senatorial family of Kostka in Poland. The Name of JESUS graven by God on his mother's breast while he was yet in the womb, foreshadowed in what regiment he would enlist him. When he was a child he so loved virginity, that if he heard anything unseemly said at his father's board, he fainted with horror. He was sent to school at Vienna in Austria, and was to his comrades not more an ensample than an object of veneration. Afterwards it behoved him to dwell in the house of a Lutheran, and there his brother Paul urged him, even by ill usage, to live more freely, but he contended with him by the space of two years, protesting that he was born not for temporal but for eternal aims. His one desire was for the things of heaven, he walked unceasingly with God, and in a childlike love for the Mother of God, whom he had tenderly called his own mother.

Fifth Lesson.

HE met the daily annoyance which he received from his brother with repeated fasting, scourging, and torture of his innocent body, until he fell into a serious illness. As this illness grew more dangerous, the devil attacked him under the form of a frightful dog, but he thrice put him to flight with the sign of the Cross, and as he could not obtain the Holy Communion in the house of hereticks, it was given to him by Angels. The Most Blessed Mother gave him the Child JESUS to fondle in his arms, and commanded him to enter the Society; then he suddenly grew well. But since the fear of his father forbade his entering the Society in Germany, he fled on foot in the dress of a pilgrim, begging his bread, and determined not to stop until he gained his wishes. God helped him on his journey in more ways than one, and among the rest, his brother Paul's horses, as he was in pursuit of him, became unable to move. Stanislaus was again refreshed by Angels, with the Bread of Angels, and after a journey of 1200 miles, was at length received into the Society of JESUS at Rome, by the holy General Francis Borgia.

Sixth Lesson.

THE gifts of the young novice shone brightly in the training school of the religious life, especially his love toward God, in Whom his mind altogether lost itself till he became unconscious. His face was always flushed, and sometimes emitted rays of light, his tears were unceasing, and the heat of his chest was so great, that even in the midst of winter he would bathe it with cold water to cool it. It was rather the fever of his love than any other which called him away upon the day hallowed by the taking of the Virgin into heaven, surrounded by her band of holy Virgins, to behold nearer at hand the procession of her glory. He died in the Novitiate on the Quirinal in the eighteenth year of that guileless life, which counted more works than days. He was famous for many miracles after his death, especially in his own land of Poland. He appeared from heaven more than once to assist his countrymen against the Turks, and delivered some cities from the plague, and others from fires. Clement X. placed him among the chief patrons of the whole kingdom of Poland, and Benedict XIII. carried out the decree of Clement XI. by enrolling his name among those of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matth. (xix. 13.)

AT that time: There were brought unto JESUS little children, that He should put His Hands on them. And so on.

Homily by St Austin, Bishop [of Hippo.] (On Psalm cxviii.)

I am small and despised,—who is small without being despised? These are Thy wonderful testimonies, O Lord, which the soul of this little one doth keep, and therefore it is that he is despised and is become small. For who is there that doth Thy commandments as they ought to be done, that is to say, in faith, which worketh by the love of God, unless that same love be shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost? And this the same despised little one doth confess, he saith, I opened my mouth, and panted, for I longed for Thy commandments. For what did he long, but to do the commandments of God? But they were mighty and he was weak, they were great and he was little, so that he had not wherewith to do them. He opened his mouth, confessing that by himself he was not able to do them, and panted for power to do them.

Eighth Lesson.

I AM small and despised, yet do I not forget Thy precepts. He was not like his enemies who have forgotten Thy words. It would seem as though one who is young, yet hath not forgotten the precepts of God, is grieving for his enemies, who are older than he is, but who have forgotten them. For what meaneth this, I am small, yet do I not forget, unless it be, They are old, and have forgotten? But this little one saith that he is despised, and therein is he made as the ancients, because God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, and base things of the world, and things which are despised hath God chosen. Yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things which are. (1 Cor. i. 27, 28.) "So the last shall be first, and the first last." (Matth. xx. 16.)

Ninth Lesson.

BUT this little one did not forget, because he sought not any righteousness of his own, but God's righteousness, whereof he saith, Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and for this cause his elders persecuted him, that he might say what followeth,—Trouble and anguish have taken hold on me, Thy commandments are my delight; let them rage, let them persecute me as long as I leave not the commandments of God. And those commandments will make me love even them that rage against me. "Give me understanding, and I shall live." This little one asketh for understanding, without which he would not have been wiser than the ancients. But he asked for it in trouble and anguish, that he might thereby understand how trivial was all that they could do who vexed and persecuted him, and by whom he saith that he was despised.

NOVEMBER 14.

St Lorcan,[1] Archbishop [of Dublin,] Confessor.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 612,) except the following.

---

[1] Latinised Laurentius.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O GOD, Who hast glorified Thy blessed Confessor and Bishop Lorcan with countless signs and wonders, grant unto us for his sake, and at his prayers, worthily to gain the health both of our bodies and of our souls. Through our Lord JESUS, Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from 1 Tim. iii. 1, as in the Common, (p. 612.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

LORCAN was born in a noble station in Ireland, and trained up in Christian living under Count Leo; in the tenth year of his age he was given as a hostage to the savage king Dermod. By his command he was carried off into a barren and fruitless land, where he suffered much hardship and ill usage with a patience and endurance above his years; being set free after two years, he left his earthly inheritance, and enlisted in the divine warfare in the Church of Glendaloch. After the death of the Bishop, all were agreed that Lorcan would worthily fill the vacant See, but he himself protested that his strength was unequal to the burden, and that his age was insufficient for the office of a shepherd of souls.

Fifth Lesson.

SOME while after, Gregory, Archbishop of Dublin, died, and Lorcan, although very unwilling and striving always to be excused, was chosen into his place, and consecrated by Gillies,[1] Primate of all Ireland. In order that he might form the flock committed to him upon the model of the first Christians, and the clergy upon that of the Rule of St Austin, he sent for some canons, of the congregation of Arouasia [near Arras] to come to Dublin, and shared with them his house and his table. Wonderful were his courtesy and his kindness toward the poor, of whom he fed as many as a thousand, during a famine, which lasted three years. So great was his self-denial that it was not more than thrice in the week that he gave a little bread and water to his body, which he wore out, with haircloth, and scourging. He went to Rome and obtained much there for the freedom of his Church, and was appointed Papal Legate for the whole of Ireland. He was famous for the gift of prophecy, and the power of miracles. He often put devils to flight by his prayers. He restored to health them that were sick of divers diseases, and raised the dead to life.

Sixth Lesson.

HE foresaw his own death. He fell into a fever, while he was on his way to Normandy, to make peace between Henry, King of England, and Roderick, King of Ireland. When he stood upon the brow of the hill of Eu, and saw the Church of St Mary, and heard that it was of the institute of regular Canons, he said, "This is my rest for ever, and here will I dwell, for I have chosen it." As soon as he came to the Church, he went to confession, and then received the sacred Provision for the last journey. He entreated the Abbot Osbert and the Canons to receive him as a brother, whereto they joyfully assented, and he received the last anointing, and presently afterwards his eternal crown. Pope Honorius the Third entered his name in the list of the Saints.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xxv. 14.)

AT that time: JESUS spake unto His disciples this parable: A man travelling into a far country called his servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And so on.

Homily by St Ambrose, Bishop [of Milan.] (Bk. 2 on the Call of the Gentiles, cap. 2.)

Each receiveth without any deserts of his own, that wherewith he may go on unto deserts. Each receiveth, without any labour, that wherewith he may labour and gain wages. That this is so we know by the truthful witness of the Evangelist, where he saith, "But a man travelling into a far country called his servants, and delivered unto them his goods, and unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability, that is to say according to his own natural capacity, not according to his deserts, for to be able to work is one thing, and to work another; and to be able to have charity is one thing, and to have charity is another.

Eighth Lesson.

NOT every one that can be restored is restored, neither every one that can be healed, healed, for to be in a state to be restored, or to be healed, is nature, but restoring and healing are grace. The number of talents was unequally divided according to that limited amount of capacity, which he that delivered unto them his goods saw in them. And they received it not as a payment for anything that they had done, but as matter wherewith to work.

Ninth Lesson.

THE anxious care of two of the servants is honoured not only with glory and praise, but even by an entrance into the everlasting joy of their Lord, but the idle torpor and slovenly misconduct of the third is punished not only by words of blame and shame, but also by taking from him that which he had received at the beginning. He deserved to lose his barren faith, who had not made it work by love.

NOVEMBER 24.

St Columbanus, Abbat.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 621,) except the following.

Prayer throughout, "O Lord, we beseech Thee, &c.," (p. 629.)

FIRST NOCTURN.

Lessons from Ecclus. xxxi. 8, (p. 627.)

---

[1] Latinised Gelasius, a transformation of Giolla-Isu (servant of JESUS.)

SECOND NOCTURN.

Fourth Lesson.

COLUMBANUS was an Irishman by nation; while he was still in his mother's womb she seemed to herself in a vision to be bearing a bright sun, in token of his coming glory, whereof he himself gave tokens, even from his birth. He was excellently skilled in earthly and heavenly learning, and among other monuments of his wit, he published an exposition of the Psalms, while he was still very young. He triumphed over the world, the flesh, and the devil,[1] and entered the monastery of Bennchor, which at that time was in the height of its fame, and therein so advanced in this school of the holier wisdom, that after a few years of being a disciple, he became a teacher, and was called by God to the task of preaching Gospel truth. He took with him twelve monks, out of that monastery, and went over first into Britain, and then into Gaul. Sigebert, King of the Austrasians, very kindly welcomed him, and he built little huts, for himself and his comrades, in the Vosges mountains. They lived there in the utmost sternness of life, and scantiness of all things, and God often marvellously provided them meat. But forasmuch as that wilderness began to be beset by them who came thither to get health from Columbanus, he withdrew himself on the greater feasts to a cave deeper in the desert, and which a bear gave up to him, and there lived upon the fruits of the trees of the wood, and upon water, which like another Moses he drew from the rock, far from the company of men and the trouble of earthly things, exercising his mind upon the things of God.

Fifth Lesson.

THE fame of his holiness shining forth from his hiding-place, brought many from all quarters, seeking to be his disciples, and he founded the monastery of Luxeuil, wherein he taught by his example and precept three hundred monks, who offered up to God the sacrifice of the unceasing prayer. That he might exercise them in obedience, he bade them sometimes to get out of bed when they were ill, and to thresh corn, and when they obeyed him they were restored to health for a reward of their labour. He himself by his prayers multiplied grain, sometimes in the barn, and sometimes in his own hands. Meanwhile, his holiness, teaching, and miracles, were a light to all Gaul. Theodoric, King of Burgundy, whose unclean passion he rebuked, diversely annoyed the man of God, and banished him. When he was thrust out of Luxeuil, the king had him taken to Besançon, where being himself in chains, he broke the chains of the others by a touch, and then returned home in the same freedom which he had given to them.

Sixth Lesson.

UPON this, Theodoric, at the instigation of Queen Brunechild, waxed very wroth, and sent men to thrust him out of his monastery, but Columbanus, like a second Elisha, caused a darkness to come over their eyes and minds, and so escaped them. However, he considered it best to give way to the king's anger, and so took ship for Ireland, after foretelling the destruction of the king and his posterity. A storm drove him back again upon the coast of Gaul, and he betook himself to Theodobert, King of Austrasia, who graciously welcomed him. He settled upon the Lake of Constance, where he destroyed the temples of the idols, and contended on all sides against the false worship. He was expelled by the inhabitants, and went into Italy to Agilulf, King of the Lombards. He built a monastery at Bobbio in the Cottian Alps. By his writings he contended successfully against the Arians. At length he was worn out by the great labours, which during all his long exile he had borne for the glory of God, and went home to our very fatherland, which is in heaven, upon the 21st day of November in the year of Christ 615.

THIRD NOCTURN.

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Matthew (xix. 27.)

AT that time: Peter said unto Jesus: Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee; what shall we have therefore? And so on.

Homily by St Bernard, Abbat [of Clairvaux.] (Expos. of this Gospel.)

I take it that these words are those concerning which the Church crieth, from the ends of the earth unto her undying Bridegroom: "By the words of Thy lips I have kept me to strait paths," (Ps. xvi. 4.) These are the words which throughout all the earth have persuaded men to despise the world, and of their own will to make themselves poor,—these are the words which have filled the cloisters with monks, and the deserts with hermits,—these are the words which have plundered Egypt, and robbed her of her goodliest vessels,—these are the living and effectual words, converting the soul, instinct with the happy desire for holiness, and the truth of the faithful promises.

Eighth Lesson.

THE world passeth away, and the lust thereof, and it is better to pass away from it than to leave it to pass away from us. Behold, we have left all, and have followed Thee. He rejoiced as a strong man to run a race, and neither canst thou follow the runner if thou be weighted. It is not a bad exchange to have left all things for Him Who is above all things, for rather with Him shall things be given unto us—and when thou possessest Him, He alone will be all—in all who for Him have left all. And I say not all possessions but all desires, and them most chiefly Ninth Lesson. Of St Chrysogonus who is also commemorated at Lauds.

Office of the Most Pure Heart of the Blessed Virgin.

Assigned, in the Roman Breviary, for certain places, for the Sunday after the Octave of the Assumption.

Greater Double.

All from the Common Office, (p. 633,) except the following.

FIRST VESPERS.

Antiphons, Chapter, and Prayer from Lauds.

Verse. Rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.

Answer. The King of Israel, even the Lord, is in the midst of Thee.[1]

Antiphon at the Song of the Blessed Virgin. My heart rejoiceth in the Lord, and mine horn is exalted in my God; because I rejoice in Thy salvation.[2]

Commemoration of the Sunday.

MATTINS.

Invitatory. Hail Mary, full of grace, * the Lord is with thee.

FIRST NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the Fruit of thy womb.

Second Antiphon. And Mary said: My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

Third Antiphon. For He hath regarded the lowliness of His handmaiden, for, behold, from henceforth, all generations shall call me blessed.

Verse. [3] My soul failed—

Answer. When the beloved spake.

First Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Song of Songs (iv. 1.)

[THE Bridegroom.] O how beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou! Thine eyes are like doves' eyes, [glancing] out from [the loveliness] that lieth hid [behind thy veil.] (3.) Thy lips are like a fillet of crimson, and thy speech is sweet. Like a piece of pomegranate, so are thy cheeks, [shining red] out from [the loveliness] that lieth hid [behind thy veil.] Thy neck is like the tower of David, which is builded with battlements, and a thousand bucklers hang from it, all shields of valiant men. (9.) Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my heart with one of thine eyes, with one of the hairs on thy neck. (11.) Thy lips, O my spouse, are a rich honeycomb, honey and milk are under thy tongue,—a garden inclosed, a fountain sealed.

First Responsory.[4]

Teach me Thy way, O Lord, and I will walk in Thy truth; let my heart be glad, that it may fear Thy name.

Verse. Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm.

Answer. That it may fear Thy name.

Second Lesson. (v.)

[THE Bridegroom.] I am come into my garden, my sister, my spouse; I have gathered my myrrh with my spice; I have eaten my honeycomb with my honey.

[The Bride.] (2.) It is the voice of my beloved that knocketh.

[The Bridegroom.] Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled, for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night.

[The Bride.] I rose up to open to my beloved; my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers were steeped in the best myrrh. I opened to my beloved; but he had withdrawn himself and was gone. My soul failed when he spoke.

Second Responsory.[5]

I will rejoice in the Lord, and I will joy in the God of my salvation; the Lord God is my strength, and He will lead me forth, to make me to walk upon mine high places.

Verse. His left hand is under mine head, and his right hand doth embrace me.

Answer. And He will lead me forth to make me to walk upon mine high places.

Third Lesson. (v. 9.)

[CHORUS of Damsels.] What is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou fairest among women, what is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

[The Bride.] My beloved is white and ruddy, one among thousands, (16,) yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem!

[Chorus of Damsels.] (vi. 1.) Whither is thy beloved gone, O thou fairest among women? Whither is thy beloved turned aside that we may seek him with thee?

[The Bridegroom.] (4.) Thou art beautiful, O my love, pleasant and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as a fenced camp set in battle array. (8.) My dove, my undefiled, is but one. She is the only one of her mother, the darling of her that bare her. The daughters saw her and cried out that she was most blessed; the queens praised her.

[3] Cant. v. 6.

[4] Ps. lxxxv. 11; Cant. viii. 6.

[5] Habakkuk iii. 18, 19; Cant. ii. 6.

Third Responsory.[1]

I have found grace in thy sight, my Lord; for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken to the heart of thine handmaid.

Verse. With my whole heart have I sought Thee; O let me not wander from Thy commandments.

Answer. For that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken to the heart of thine handmaid.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. For that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken to the heart of thine handmaid.

SECOND NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Blessed art thou that hast believed, for there shall be a performance of those things which were told thee from the Lord.

Second Antiphon. He That is Mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is His name.

Third Antiphon. He hath showed strength with His arm, He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their heart.

Verse. Love is strong as death.[2]

Answer. Jealousy is cruel as the grave.

Fourth Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Sermons of St Bernardine of Sienna. (1st on the Visitation.)

WHAT dying creature, unless indeed he spoke as the oracles of God,[3] would dare with his polluted lips to say anything either great or small concerning her who is the true Mother of God and man, her whom the Father predestinated before all worlds to be worthily a virgin for ever, her whom the Son elected to be His Mother, her whom the Holy Ghost made ready to be the resting-place of all grace? No tongue of man and no tongue of Angels is meet to utter those profound feelings which were generated in her maidenly heart and found expression from her holy mouth. And what can be done by a wretch like me? The Lord hath said: A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good (Luke vi. 45.) And among all mankind can we think of one better than she who earned to become Mother of God, and who gave God Himself an home in her heart and in her womb? And what better treasure could there be than that love for God wherewith the heart of the Virgin was burning.

Fourth Responsory.

I love them that love me, and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honour are with me, yea, durable riches and righteousness.

Verse. That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance, and I will fill their treasures.

Answer. Yea, durable riches and righteousness.

Fifth Lesson.

OUT of the treasure of this heart, as out of a furnace of the love of God, the Blessed Virgin brought forth good words, that is, words of burning tenderness; even as from a vessel full of the best wine, the best wine only can flow forth, or from a furnace that is in a white heat, nothing can be taken that is not aglow, even so out of the heart of the Mother of Christ could come forth no word that was not penetrated with the strongest love of God, and that in the highest degree. We read of seven utterances of Christ's most blessed Mother, seven wonders of wisdom and of power. Unto the Angel she spake twice, (Luke i. 34, 38,) unto Elizabeth twice also (40, 46, 56,) and likewise twice unto her Son, (ii. 48, John ii. 3,) and unto the servants at the marriage she spoke once (5.) These seven utterances are as seven acts of love pronounced in a wondrous degree and order, and are like seven flames kindling from her heart.

Fifth Responsory.

[1] I am the Mother of fair love, and of fear, and of knowledge, and of holy hope. In me is all grace of the way and of the truth. In me is all hope of life and of strength.

Verse. Come unto me, all ye that be desirous of me, and fill yourselves with my fruits.

Answer. In me is all hope of life and of strength.

Sixth Lesson.

WHEN the earnest mind pondereth upon these seven sayings, she is fain to cry out with the Prophet—"how sweet are thy words unto my taste!"—that is, unto all my feelings. (Ps. cxviii. 103.) Now this sweetness which the earnest mind tasteth in the words of the Blessed Virgin, is that fire of earnest love for God [wherewith these words are aglow], and which the soul doth sensibly recognise in them. Let us therefore sort out these seven flames of love in the words of the Blessed Virgin. The first is the flame of isolating love, the second is the flame of transforming love, the third is the flame of communicating love, the fourth is the flame of rejoicing love, the fifth is the flame of quieting love, the sixth is the flame of compassionating love, the seventh is the flame of completing love.

Sixth Responsory.

[2] Blessed is the man that heareth me, that watcheth daily at my gates, and waiteth at the posts of my door. Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain salvation of the LORD.

Verse. But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul. All they that hate me love death.

Answer. Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain salvation of the LORD.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain salvation of the LORD.

[2] Cant. viii. 6.

[3] Rom. iii. 2.

[1] Ecclus. xxiv. 24-26.

[2] Prov. viii. 34-36.

THIRD NOCTURN.

First Antiphon. Whence is this to me that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?

Second Antiphon. His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation.

Third Antiphon. He hath holpen His servant Israël in remembrance of His mercy.

Verse. I am my beloved's.

Answer. And his desire is toward me.[1]

Seventh Lesson.

The Lesson is taken from the Holy Gospel according to Luke (ii. 48.)

At that time: The Mother of Jesus said unto Him: Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing. And so on.

Homily by the Venerable Bede, Priest [at Jarrow.] (For the First Sunday after the Epiphany.)

The Evangelist saith—"His Mother kept all these sayings in her heart." Whatsoever the Maiden Mother knew to have been said either of, or by the Lord, she kept most diligently in her heart, and carefully committed to memory, so that whenever the time should come to preach or write concerning His Incarnation, she might be able sufficiently to unfold how all things happened, to any who might ask of her. O my brethren, let us copy the tender Mother of the Lord, and keep treasured in our hearts all the sayings and doings of our Lord and Saviour.

Seventh Responsory.

Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it.

Verse. If a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned.

Answer. Neither can the floods drown it.

Eighth Lesson.

By pondering day and night on these words and deeds of the Lord, let us keep off the wearisome recurrence of foolish and mischievous thoughts, let us try by often speaking of them to break ourselves and our neighbours of idle story-telling and gossip poisonously seasoned with ill nature, and stir up rather the wish to be oftentimes praising God. (If a Ninth Lesson of the Feast be required, the Eighth is divided here.) Dearly beloved brethren, if we desire in a world of blessedness hereafter to dwell in the house of the Lord, and to praise Him without ceasing, we must be eager to have in this world some foretaste of that world which is to come, by going oftentimes to church, and not singing the praises of the Lord there only, but also in all places of His dominion, showing forth by word and deed whatsoever pertaineth to the praise and glory of our Maker.

Eighth Responsory.

My spirit is sweeter than honey, and mine inheritance than honey and the honeycomb. Whoso give ear to me shall not be put to confusion, and they that work in me shall not sin.

Verse. They that explain me shall have eternal life.

Answer. And they that work in me shall not sin.

Verse. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost.

Answer. And they that work in me shall not sin.

The Ninth Lesson is the Homily of the Sunday.

LAUDS.

First Antiphon. Draw me, * we will run after the odour of thy perfumes.

Second Antiphon. My beloved speaketh * unto me. Arise, make haste, my love.

Third Antiphon. Stay me with flowers, * comfort me with apples, for I am faint with love.

Fourth Antiphon. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, * that ye awake not my love till she please.

Fifth Antiphon. I sleep, * but my heart waketh.

Chapter. (Cant. viii. 6.)

Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm; for love is strong as death! jealousy is cruel as the grave. The lamps thereof are lamps of fire and flames.

Verse. Whoso findeth me findeth life,

Answer. And shall obtain salvation of the Lord.

Antiphon at the Song of Zacharias. A certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto Him: Blessed is the womb that bare Thee, and the paps which Thou hast sucked.

Prayer throughout the Office.

O Almighty and everlasting God, Who hast made a meet dwelling-place for Thine Holy Spirit in the heart of the Blessed Virgin Mary, mercifully grant that all they who earnestly keep the Feast in remembrance of that Heart's utter purity, may be enabled to live lives after Thine own heart. Through our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the same Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

A Commemoration is made of the Sunday.
